Borough resident named by Cahill

Ronald McKean Heymann of 355 Ackerman ave., Mountainside, was nominated by Gov. William T. Cahill last week to serve as director of the State Division of Motor Vehicles. Heymann had been nominated by the local Republicans to run for the Borough Council this past fall, but later withdrew from the race. He is metropolitan sales manager for the N. J. Bell Telephone Co. Heymann was one of the very few Republicans in Union County who campaigned for Cahill before the June primary election.

Regional music students plan Latin American goodwill tour

The Governor Livingston Regional High School vocal music department has formulated a goodwill tour of three South American countries this summer.

The 32-member high school chorale plans to go to cities and villages in Venezuela, Colombia and Ecuador for two weeks and perform, both formally and informally, for the people of these countries, according to Albert Dorhout, chorale director.

"Their desire is to also meet and talk with the people, and to exchange ideas so as to gain a greater respect for each other," Dorhout said.

"It is the intent of these students to establish a deeper understanding between the people of South America and this country, and draw a closer communication of ideas through the universality of the joy of music. The accomplishment of this objective will be a step in the right direction," Dorhout said.

He said the vocal music department in the next five months will sponsor a number of cultural activities, among them, a series of concerts featuring well known artists, a "Gourmet Day," and an art exhibit, to stimulate community support.

The first in the planned activities is a con-

Anti-vivisection is a pretty big word for a ninth grader. Nevertheless, this topic was taken on by a part 15-year-old Mountainsider by the name of Barbara Middlekauff, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R.J. Middlekauff of 355 Rolling Rock rd.

Anti-vivisection, which is a current movement in the United States calling for the prohibition against animals being used in laboratory experiments, was the subject of an essay written by Barbara and declared a cert by the Rutgers University Glee Club on Thursday evening, Feb. 12, at the high school. Tickets may be obtained from students in the vocal music department.

"The benefits of these projects would be rewarding to the community and it is hoped that through the community's support of these activities they will be voicing their support for good will to South America," Dorhout said.

The 32 singers selected for the trip will be chosen from the 250 students in the department and their selection will be based not solely on their ability to sing well, but also on their ability to express the philosophy of the project, he said. The tour has been approved by the board of education.

During the past four years, members of the vocal music department have performed at Newark State College, Trenton State College, Montclair State College, Westminster Choir College and New York University.

They have also performed at the New Jersey Education Association convention, the New Jersey Music Educators Association convention and the Eastern Division Music Education winning paper in the 1969 Abraham Weckstein Humanitarian Scientist Essay Contest.

The contest, which was sponsored by the New Jersey Society for Medical Education and Research, named 11 state winners in grades 6-9, of which Barbara was one, and awarded prizes of $25 each.

Miss Middlekauff's paper was entitled, "The Use of Animals in Medical Research." According to Barbara, "I never really thought about the subject before—but once I started reading, it made me mad to find out the people wanted to stop research work using animals."

With the aid of Alston W. Collins, science teacher at the Deerfield Middle School, Barbara researched the subject through the use of books and pamphlets supplied by the contest sponsor.

"I really learned about the great goals which have been achieved through laboratory research using animals," she explained, "and I also learned of the exceptionally good care these animals get, better than most domestic pets."

Rt. 22 is scene of three accidents; one man injured

A Plainfield man, Michael Marx, 26, was injured in one of three accidents in the borough during the past week, according to the Mountainside Police Department.

Marx, who was taken by the Mountainside Rescue Squad to Overlook Hospital, Summit, where he was treated for a knee injury and later released, was injured on Friday evening when his car struck an object on the shoulder of Rt. 22 west. Police reported that his car then skidded and struck a pole.

The accident report revealed that Marx's car received total front-end damage and was towed away. Also on Friday on Rt. 22, a two-car collision took place when a car driven by Ronald M. Sworem, 21, of Westfield, struck the rear of an automobile operated by John Detore, 47, of Maplewood, police reported.

The authorities disclosed that the collision occurred when the Detore car was stopped in traffic. The Detore car received damages to the rear bumper, while the Sworem car sustained extensive front-end damage.

Rt. 22 was also the scene of an accident on Monday when a vehicle operated by Robert J. Maragni, 24, of Scotch Plains skidded in an attempt to avoid striking a lump of frozen snow on the road near the New Providence road intersection. The car then skidded into a snow bank, police revealed.

The accident report stated that the Maragni car sustained damages to the right front.

Regional board meets Tuesday at Johnson

The Regional District comprises Berkeley Heights, Clark, Garwood, Kenilworth, Mountainside and Springfield.

Dems offer petition to fill vacancy

Council to study matter before reaching decision

Political controversy has again entered into the affairs of the Mountainside Borough Council, as demonstrated at the governing body's monthly meeting Tuesday evening at the Beechwood School.

One of the major topics handled at the meeting, which was conducted by Mayor Thomas Ricciardi, was the proposed appointment of Democrat John H. Palmer Jr. to a vacancy on the Borough Council, caused by the resignation of Councilman Donald Robertson.

The proposal of Palmer for the position was presented by Mrs. Beth Loftus, who was a Democratic candidate with Palmer for the Council during the past November election. Mrs. Loftus presented a petition containing more than 1,000 signatures of Mountainside citizens. It expressed a recommendation in view of the fact that Palmer had received 46 percent of the total votes for the office, the third highest total, he be appointed as "the man we feel is eminently qualified to carry out this job and the best to serve the people of Mountainside."

Mayor Ricciardi received Mrs. Loftus' petition and pointed out that earlier in the week he had been in communication with her regarding council consideration of the appointment.

According to Ricciardi, "It is a fair petition and we will consider it."

In answer to a query from audience member Robert Jaffe, also an active Democrat, concerning the possible alternative of a public election for the selection of the person to replace Donaldson, Ricciardi replied strongly, "No, it is wrong to take away from important things to have an election," with which the subject was officially closed.

THE MAYOR AND COUNCIL also went into detail on the topic of the supposed Mafia headquarters at "The Barn" in Mountainside.

In answer to a question from the audience regarding the knowledge of the local police and governing body on the activities taking place at that location, Police Commissioner Robert Ruggiero commented, "We have checked into the background of the activities at the place called 'the Barn' and the prob-

Teacher complaints highlight of hearing on Regional budget

After less than an hour of generally low key discussion Tuesday night, the Regional High School Board of Education approved its $8,264,344 budget for the next school year. The budget will now go before the voters of the district's six member towns on Feb. 3.

The audience Tuesday at Jonathan Dayton Regional High School in Springfield consisted of perhaps 150 teachers in the Regional schools and some 25 other interested citizens.

Kenneth W. Meeks, president of the Regional Teachers' Association, asked a number of questions, stemming from the deadlock in contract negotiations between the board and teachers.

Meeks concentrated on a suggestion that the board defer its formal vote on the budget until a formal mediation session, which was scheduled to be held last night.

He noted that the meeting was being held right at the budget decision headline because

'Help wanted' notice Squad needs daytime members

By LORRI BOSTWICK
A typical on-call day in the life of a member of the Mountainside Rescue Squad can be quite unusual and is always very important to members of the community needing emergency aid.

The Rescue Squad, which now has a membership consisting of 30 adults and 4 cadets, is on call 24 hours a day, seven days a week, to aid citizens in all sorts of physical emergencies. During the work-week daylight hours, the burden is placed on the shoulders of the women of the volunteer group who do not go out to work.

Mrs. Mary Steiner of 297 Cherry Hill rd., who has been a squad member for the past two of her three years in the borough, explained that for the volunteer on call during the daytime, the 12-hour schedule begins at 7 a.m. and ends at 7 p.m.

Mrs. Steiner is presently on call three days per week, Monday, Thursday and Saturday, and usually serves as dispatcher on her days. Her duty as dispatcher requires Mrs. Steiner to coordinate the movements of the volunteers on duty by calling those available and instructing them as to where to meet the ambulance. She also notifies the Police Department that the call has been heard.

The major problem faced by the Mountainside group is that of a lack of volunteers. According to Mrs. Steiner, individual scheduling for duty is touch-and-go because "we are at such a low ebb for help, we are putting in more time than we ever expected to."

In an effort to interest more persons in joining the effort as members of the rescue squad, Mrs. Steiner recently spoke to the Mountainside Newcomers' Club to find new recruits. "We have five new volunteers," she commented, "and we hope they stick with us."

Local PTA plans Candidates' Night

The Mountainside PTA will present a candidates' night in behalf of the contestants vying for membership on the Mountainside Board of Education. Candidates' night will be held on Wednesday at 8 p.m. in the Beechwood School.

The moderator for the evening will be George Crane and the candidates, in order as they appear on the ballot, are: Thomas Spina, Abe Suckno, Frank Lombard and Marge Bradshaw. Each candidate will give a short speech, and a question and answer period will follow at the end of the program.

negotiations "to deal with the likes of yourselves." Cullen added, "An elected board member no longer has the time to negotiate with teachers for 48 meetings a year."

THE BOARD'S POLICY of providing bus transportation for pupils living between 2-1/2 and two miles from their schools, because of what are considered hazardous walking conditions, was strongly criticized by Mrs. Ruth Weisman of Springfield.

Students living more than 2-1/2 miles away must be bused, and 75 percent of the cost is paid by the state. Shorter rides are optional and are entirely at board expense.

Mrs. Weisman, discovering that the figure for the shorter rides is budgeted for next year at $38,000, declared, "This is a cavalier attitude toward an unnecessary expense. It leads us to question whether the board is properly using taxpayers' money in its budget."

She later made one final attempt to persuade the board to change its mind, "If we must question your judgment on this," Mrs. Weisman said, "we must question your judgment on other matters."

Hagedorn noted that the board had agreed to rescind its policy on the matter right after the Feb. 3 school board elections.

Jack Williams of Springfield asked about the $21,925 item in the budget for improvements to the Meisel avenue athletic field in Springfield.

He, and several other questioners, heard pledges that, with work already done, the funds would be enough to finish all parts of the job. This will include, besides work completed, the regrading of the practice football field and the area adjacent to the baseball field and the resurfacing of both baseball diamonds.

Rescue

aid on a quick and efficient basis. All members carry with them a Plectron radio which receives police emergency calls. The radios are charged with electricity when in their homes and operate on batteries when on the road.

As a housewife, Mrs. Steiner described her routine when on call by saying, "I usually save that day for baking, ironing and general housework, but I hesitate to use the vacuum cleaner because of possible interference with the radio."

She went on to point out, "As far as housework goes, I usually get a lot more done on that day than other days, because I tend to work faster and more efficiently while keeping alert for an emergency call."

The squad also provides ambulance transportation for residents and their house guests who must be taken to nearby hospitals for treatment. When the squad ambulance is on a transportation call which will exceed an hour, the Westfield First Aid Squad is alerted and takes over as a temporary substitute.

Mrs. Steiner, who is recording secretary of the group, pointed out that being on call does not mean that members have to be at squad headquarters to answer calls, but must be within contact by telephone.

IN THE CASE of two or more simultaneous accidents, the local police call for the additional aid of the Westfield groups and upon occasion, those from other neighboring towns. The Mountainside squad's ambulance is equipped to accommodate four persons at one time.

Statistics regarding the efforts of the rescue squad revealed that during 1969, a total of 389 calls were answered, as compared to 317 calls in 1968, an increase of 18 percent. A total of 40,000 manhours were contributed by local volunteers.

Although the number of calls has increased, the number of volunteers has decreased because of people moving away, pregnancies, personal illnesses, and cases of mothers returning to work.

It is really kind of a bad situation right now, because we have no reserves to call on in cases of volunteer illness," Mrs. Steiner commented.

In cases of very large accidents, the neighboring towns activate a mutual aid system in which the various police departments contact several squads for help. In cases of local disasters, local hospitals have specified disaster programs which would be put into effect.

MEMBERS OF the Mountainside Rescue Squad vary in both age and occupation. In addition to working members who serve during the evening hours, the day crew includes housewives, teachers, former nurses, and some women who have part-time jobs.

Mrs. Steiner pointed out the efforts of Tom

Kinterim of 1476 Deer path, who is a harbor pilot on call for both his job and his rescue duties during the day. Among the four cadet members is Ron Romak, 18, of 1365 Longview dr., who is a student at St. Joseph's College in Philadelphia, and serves as a volunteer on weekends and school vacations.

Ron explained that cadets are allowed to work until 11 p.m., and are required to possess a driver's license. As members of the squad, their duties include helping with lifting of patients and giving minor first aid. To qualify as a cadet, a youngster must be 17 years old or, if a parent is a squad member, may join at 16.

At the age of 21, and upon completion of advanced first aid courses, the cadets are voted in as full-fledged members of the squad. The Rescue Squad is fortunate in having as one of its members Mrs. Mary Blunno of 1241 Woodvalley rd., who is a registered nurse, and described her part on the squad by saying, "I enjoy it very much for it keeps me on my toes."

NEW MEMBERS in the squad are put on probation for six months, during which they are instructed in basic and advanced first aid techniques and ride on calls with veteran members. They are also allowed to drive the ambulance and administer first aid under supervision.

At the end of the six-month period, the new members are voted in as qualified members of the squad. As a part of the regular schedule of the group, two drills and a business meeting are held each month.

Mrs. Steiner pointed out that in order to stay in operation the squad must have at least two persons available to answer any given call, one to drive the ambulance and the other to administer to the victim. Many members of the squad are qualified first-aid instructors who teach the new members.

Most of the current volunteers also have their Red Cross cardio-vascular resuscitation cards which enable them to administer to victims of cardiac arrest, drowning, bee sting reaction and electrocution.

A younger viewpoint on working with the squad was presented by Ron Romak, who said, "As far as the work of the cadets goes, the adults of the community are beginning to realize that there is more than one side to a teenager and are learning to respect the younger generation more."

In speaking to possible new recruits, Mrs. Steiner emphasized, "I really think you get more out of being on the squad than you give to the squad, and you learn a lot about handling personal accident situations."

Mrs. Blunno agreed, saying, "Everyone should take first aid training whether he is a member of the squad or not."

Members of the Rescue Squad are urging anyone who feels he is physically capable of working in such a group to speak to the Mountainside Police Department for further information, or to call Squad Captain John Kueler of 61 Locust ave., 232-8490.

Mrs. Steiner concluded by saying, "It is just about the most gratifying thing I've ever done, and the attitude of the people of Mountainside is most rewarding."

Scientist

Barbara pointed out that she had discovered that most of the current knowledge about cancer, transplantations of vital organs, viruses, leukemia and many other diseases would not have been gained without the use of animals.

Barbara also explained that space medicine has utilized animals, to determine the effect of weightlessness, prolonged travel in cramped quarters, living and walking in space, and the psychological pressures and tensions involved in space travel.

Barbara, who is now a freshman at Jonathan Dayton Regional High School in Springfield, commented that after all her research she had come to the conclusion that man's medical progress is so dependent upon animal research that banning this sort of resource is unthinkable and that "the people who are in favor of stopping this research should learn more about the subject."

Currently, Barbara is the owner of a rather large guinea pig, and in the past, has been the proud possessor of hamsters, turtles, and fish. She is no longer able to maintain a menagerie because of an allergy which she has developed toward animal fur.

Because of her allergy, Barbara must give up her goal of being a veterinarian, and is now thinking of a future in nursing. At her high school she is an honor student taking such courses as Latin, journalism, algebra, Earth space science and English.

OUT OF SCHOOL, she is a member of the youth group at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church in Millburn. Her opinion toward school: "It's a pain because it's such a big rush, running from class to class all the time."

"Wistfully, Barbara declared, "I'd like to work in a stable, and I'd like to have a horse." The next best thing to doing this is what Barbara is doing now, taking riding lessons at the Watchung Stables. In last fall's Watchung Horse Show, she placed in equitation and fence jumping.

Last summer, Barbara furthered her interest in horses even more by attending Camp Teala-Wooket in Rocksbury, Vt., where she devoted eight weeks of her vacation to riding.

In talking about her writing prize, Barbara said, "I was so glad for Mr. Collins that he could be proud that one of his students had won a prize in the contest." And along with Mr. Collins, Barbara may certainly be proud that she is beginning her high school career with already one noteworthy chalk mark to her credit.

lem of 'undesirables' who have frequented the area." He went on, "We were aware that the building was under surveillance by the state police and federal officials, and notified the owner of the building of a council recommendation for the tearing down of 'The Barn.'"

"There is an existing mandate to remove the Barn, Ruggiero continued, "but there has arisen the question of the legality of such an action."

Audience member Jaffe requested that the mayor and council make a position statement on the matter of Mafia activity in Mountainside "for the benefit of those of us who travel and whose hometown is known all over the country."

Mayor Ricciardi responded to Jaffe by saying, "I don't think we need a statement. We know what we have."

DURING THE REGULAR business portion of the meeting, Councilman John Hechtel presented the monthly report of the Recreation Commission and noted that two more ski trips were planned for the coming winter months.

He also informed the public that the town-sponsored basketball clinic was well under way, along with the teenage dances. Adult volleyball and basketball activities were announced for Wednesday evenings at Deerfield School.

Hechtel also reported that interviewing was in process for filling the newly created position of recreation director for the community. "Once we accomplish this," according to Hechtel, "We'll have a full-fledged recreation program in the borough."

Hechtel informed the council that the new fire engine on order is almost ready and that the Fire Department is attempting to locate a garage on the north side of Rt. 22 for the housing of the old engine.

Police Commissioner Ruggiero presented the Police Department's report for 1969. He pointed out that there was an increase in both the total of calls for aid since 1968 and in runaway children.

Ruggiero reported a total of 47 break and entries in the borough during the year and 33 stolen cars. He also informed the council that the number of requests to check vacant homes numbered 1,064.

The year 1969 also saw a drop in traffic summonses, according to the police commissioner. In the area of drug crimes, he reported the arrest of six persons for possession of marijuana, one person for possession of other drugs and one person arrested for being under the influence of drugs.

Ruggiero concluded his report by pointing out that James Keating, chairman of the Mayor's Advisory Committee on Youth had presented his resignation from the group because he and his family will be moving from the community.

"He has done an excellent job during the year," stated Ruggiero of Keating, "and I recommend that council commend him for his efforts."

Jersey's jobless higher at year end

From November to December, total unemployment in New Jersey climbed by 7,000, reaching 129,500, according to estimates prepared by the New Jersey Department of Labor and Industry in cooperation with the U.S. Department of Labor. The unemployment rate rose by 0.2 over the month, reaching 4.3 percent of the work force.

Compared with December 1968, there were 800 more persons unemployed, but an increase in the work force caused the rate to drop by 0.1. The seasonally adjusted rate also declined by 0.1 over the year.

Most of the state's 15 labor areas had month-to-month increases in the jobless rate, with the Ocean City-Wildwood-Cape May Area registering the highest rate because of the winter lull in resort activity.

During January and February unemployment will rise as unfavorable weather conditions cause layoffs in construction, service, and trade. By spring, however, the jobless total will begin to wane.

Richard M. Van Horn of Mountainside has been elected as president of Precision Systems Company, Inc. of Branchburg, a major supplier of hybrid microcircuit production equipment.

Van Horn, who had been a consultant for the past year, formerly held executive posts for more than 30 years with ITT World Communications Co., from which he retired in January, 1969.

The new company president is a graduate of the University of Washington at Seattle and during World War II he was with the naval intelligence corps and assigned to Gen. Douglas MacArthur's staff in Manila and later left the service with the rank of commander.

In 1967, Van Horn was awarded the ITT certificate of commendation for development of ship-to-shore telex service. He was also elected to vice-presidencies by All American Cables and Commercial Cable Company.

Letters to the editor must be submitted no later than Monday of the week they are to appear. They should not exceed 250 words in length and should be typed with double spacing (not all in capital letters, please). All letters must be signed. SCHOOL BUDGET

The new procedure on voting for municipal school budgets is significant for two reasons: 1. It means that if the voters turn down a budget, the governing body is to resolve the matter within 30 days.

2. Since arriving at a solution is left to the governing body finally, why vote on it in the first place? From past observations in other communities on budget rejections by the voters, the boards make a token reduction and re-submit for voter approval; now, this can be done without the latter.

So, it will be important for the voters to view solutions to any budget submitted and rejected by the voters to see how the elected officials heed the desires of the electorate. JOSEPH C. CHIEPPA 301 Indian Trail

TOO MANY SCHOOLS

Many schools are inefficiently small and more are financially unable to offer comprehensive educational services. There will be three hearings on this subject on today at 10 a.m. at the State Museum in Trenton; Feb. 4 at 7 p.m. at Paramus High School, and Feb. 9 at 7 p.m. at Glasboro High School.

The matter will be discussed and suggestions considered. County meetings and public hearings will follow later. The suggested plan is to have school districts of a minimum of 3,500 pupils from kindergarten to 12th grade.

The 292 school districts are too many; 306 only elementary; 56 secondary; 207 elementary and secondary; three handicapped and 20 no schools of their own. It is time that two thirds of New Jersey districts become a part of a regional system, or partnership districts.

Letters and statements may be sent to the Commissioner of Education's office or submitted at the hearings. Revised legislation is advisable and necessary. DON MAXWELL 855 Mountain ave.

Highlanders' late surge subdues Clark, 60-50

Gov. Livingston overcame four obstacles, Steve Nasto and Bob Biejo of Clark and the two officials, to nail down its sixth victory of the basketball season against five losses by a score of 60-50 last Friday. In the second half alone, there were 23 fouls called, many of them appearing quite questionable to Highlander fans.

It took a 27-point fourth quarter by Gov. Livingston to pull out the victory. Jeff Burdette tallied seven points and had three assists in the eight-minute period to spark Regional's comeback.

In a low scoring first quarter, beset with turnovers and poor shooting, the Highlanders scored but six points to Clark's nine. Things opened up in the next two quarters and the third period ended with the Crusaders ahead, 34-33. Burdette, who failed to score in the opening period, was switched to the right side, and the Highlander offense, which had shot a horrendous two for 14 in the first quarter, began to put some points on the board.

Coach Frank Petrella's Highlanders scored nearly half of their points in the final period, Rich Weiss and Burdette had 15 of the 27 points. Jeff's two foul shots with 56 seconds remaining gave his team a 12-point lead. Clark tried a full court press but Burdette broke the press and passed to John Brownell and Eric Wichelhaus for easy layups to clinch the game.

The backcourt duo of Weiss and Burdette scored 32 of Gov. Livingston's 60 points. Weiss pumped in 15 while Burdette added 17 and compiled six assists. Their fine play overshadowed a fine game for Clark by Nasto, who put in 18 points, all around the basket. Biejo and Steve Marrin contributed 14 and 10 points, respectively.

For Gov. Livingston to qualify for the state tournament, it must have a 600 winning percentage at the end of January. Regional hosts Union tomorrow and Watchung next Tuesday. Both games are essential to the Highlanders who will be favored over the Watching Warriors but will rate as decided underdogs against Union. Coach Petrella's squad was overconfident against the Warriors in the previous meeting, in which they barely won by four points, and it is doubtful they will be so again.

COACH MICHAEL SORRENTINO'S wrestling squad pulled its record up to 2-2 with victories over Franklin Township, 27-15, and South Plainfield, 34-16. The Highlanders host North Plainfield on Jan. 28, Dana Sommers (98 pounds), Stuart Brown (106) and Brian Saverese (130) all have 4-0 records.

The meet with Franklin Township was tied after four matches. Then Gov. Livingston swept the 130, 136, 141, and 148-pound weight classes to win the meet. Mike Clendenin and Rodger Pitzer both recorded pins for the winners. South Plainfield was a romp as Regional swept the early weight classes and ran away with the match.

Gun, TV, jewelry stolen in break-ins. The Mountainside Police Department reported two cases of break and entry in the borough within two days.

On Saturday, a home on Wychwood road was entered by forcing a cellar window sometime in the afternoon. The owner reported that a gun was taken and a door on the lower floor was broken. Investigating the crime was Officer Stephen Samonick.

On Sunday a Sunnyview road residence was victim to an illegal entry, also through a forced cellar window, during which a portable television, a tape recorder and several items of jewelry were taken. Upon further investigation, Officer Frederick Ahlholm found that the house had also been ransacked.

Summit YW lists classes for adults

Registrations are available for a number of Summit YWCA adult classes which will begin the first week in February. Since all classes are limited in size, registrations should be made as soon as possible.

Babysitting is available for children 18 months and over for all daytime classes. New offerings in the winter-spring program in the art field include china painting, instructed by Mrs. Perry Bahrt; "Enjoying Art," illustrated lectures by Mrs. P. J. Dean, and sculpturing for beginners and stone carving, to be instructed by Mrs. Marie Welsh, president of the Summit Art Center.

For those who want to learn a new skill, classes are available in beaded flowers, with Mrs. Rita Brecher instructing; cake decorating and fancy foods, with Mrs. M. Parke Jr. showing how to perk up menus; "How to Make Slacks" and "Make a Basic Pattern and Design from It" both instructed by Mrs. Phyllis Zlatin.

State mediator seeks end to 'impasse' in teacher pay talks

A state mediator was scheduled to meet last night with representatives of the Regional High School Board of Education and the Regional Teachers' Association in an effort to end the "impasse" which had existed in negotiations for a new contract.

School district plans Saturday TV workshop

Four Saturday TV workshop sessions in the Union County Regional High School District will focus on the development and production of effective educational TV programs in the four high schools, it was announced today.

Audiotape coordinators for each of the schools will be instructed in the operation and utilization of the district's closed-circuit TV equipment, with specific relation to the ongoing curriculum, according to Albert Solomon, instructional media specialist.

He said the workshop participants will actually produce and direct a minimum of two programs of educational value. They will also learn how to write program scripts.

The sessions will be held Jan. 24 and 31, and Feb. 7 and 14, according to Solomon. He will instruct the teachers with the assistance of Edward Brown, music coordinator. Brown has been instrumental in developing the district's existing equipment and its utilization.

The present equipment consists of a TV tape recorder, a special effects console, two cameras, microphones and several monitors. A number of students, already trained in the use of the equipment, will assist Solomon and Brown.

The sessions, which will total 16 hours, will be held at Governor Livingston Regional High School in Berkeley Heights.

Audiotape coordinators taking part are: Russell Clarke, David Brearley Regional High School; George Hilla, Arthur L. Johnson Regional High School; Dorothy Cassak, Jonathan Dayton Regional High School, and Robert Nagel, Governor Livingston Regional High School.

William King, acting executive director of the New Jersey Public Broadcasting Authority, will be at one of the sessions to speak and work with the teachers.

The Feb. 7 workshop will be held at Montclair State College, where the teachers will have the opportunity to see the college's TV equipment and studio. Miss Emma Fair, the college's audio director at the college, will conduct the session.

"It's our intention that the audio visual coordinator in each building will work with the district curriculum coordinators and teachers to produce programs of educational value," Solomon said.

Solomon and Dr. Martin Siegel, director of instruction, will also work with the curriculum coordinators developing programs in specific curriculum areas.

The Regional District comprises Berkeley Heights, Clark, Garwood, Kenilworth, Mountainside and Springfield.

Earlier, Kenneth W. Meeks, Regional Teachers' Association president, had blamed the school board for failure to achieve any agreement. Speaking at a press conference called by the Union County Education Association last Friday at the Holiday Inn, Kenilworth, Meeks declared:

"The Union County Regional High Schools Teachers Association, Inc., has declared an impasse in its negotiations with the Board of Education of the Union County Regional High School District. This action, which resulted in a request to the New Jersey Public Employment Relations Commission to appoint a mediator, was caused by the board's refusal to meet more than three times with the teachers' group to negotiate salaries and insurance benefits for the 1970-1971 school year.

The Association presented its proposals to the Board's representatives on Oct. 16, 1969.

Because the board's negotiator made trips to California and Delaware, another meeting was not held until Nov. 13. At this point, the board had not negotiated, and did not make a counter-proposal until Nov. 20 when the board indicated its "firm and final offer" would be given to the Association at the next meeting.

The final meeting between the Association and the board was held on Dec. 4, 1969. Recalling that he previously had said only three meetings would be required to complete the negotiations, the board's representative made the board's firm and final offer with a "take it or leave it" attitude. When asked for further meetings, the board refused saying they could serve no purpose unless the Association would drop its counter-proposals and work within the board's proposal.

FROM THE ASSOCIATION'S viewpoint, the Mountainside teachers report lack of progress

Lack of progress in negotiations between the Mountainside Teachers' Association and the borough's Board of Education was described by William Teley, a spokesman for the Teachers' Association, at a press conference sponsored by the Union County Education Association last Friday at the Holiday Inn, Kenilworth. He stated:

"The Mountainside Teachers' Association was forced to declare an impasse in its negotiations with the Board of Education on Dec. 8 after five previously scheduled meetings proved fruitless.

The Mountainside Teachers' Association proposed only six items, complying with a request made by the board last year, that the Association limit its proposals this year to items of most concern to the teachers.

"The board, after agreeing at the first meeting this year to negotiate all six items, reversed itself at the second meeting and said that only salary was negotiable. They maintained this position throughout the rest of the meetings, leaving the Association with two alternatives: declare an impasse or resign its rights under law 303.

"The board's position is that terms and 'conditions of employment' relates only to salary. The Association feels that, among other things, the number of hours a teacher works, the number of classes he teaches per day, the number of students he has per class, the methods used in evaluating him and dismissing him, and his personal leave policy, are all conditions under which the teacher works, and the teacher should have some voice in determining the school policies that affect these items.

"It is interesting to note that on Dec. 9, one day after the filing of impasse papers, the board, at its public meeting, adopted nine new policies covering teachers' working conditions.

"Several of these policies were parts of those previously proposed for negotiations by the Association and deemed by the board to be non-negotiable. This was a unilateral action by the board which the Association feels is in direct opposition to Law 303 which states, 'Proposed new rules or modification of existing rules governing work conditions shall be negotiated with the majority representative before they are established.'

"Although a meeting attended by 327 of the Association's 352 members unanimously rejected the last salary and insurance proposal made by the board, the Association consistently expressed its willingness to continue negotiations with the board, only to be rebuffed by the board's employed negotiator.

"The Association's proposal to the board represented a fair and reasonable professional salary guide designed to attract qualified teachers to the district to replace those who are leaving. The Association has reduced its proposal by more than $1 million, while the board has offered to increase present salaries and insurance by approximately $205,000.

"The last offer from the board would give teachers holding a bachelor's degree from $7,700 with no experience to $12,600 after 15 years teaching; master's degree, $8,300 to $13,600 after 16 years, and six years of education, from $8,900 to $14,600 after 17 years. The board offered to increase registered nurses' salaries by $400, a three per cent increase.

"The Union County Regional High School District consists of four high schools receiving approximately 5,000 students from Berkeley Heights, Clark, Garwood, Kenilworth, Mountainside and Springfield."

SPEAKING AT THE SAME press conference, John Gardner, president of the Union County Education Association, issued the following statement:

"As president of the Union County Education Association, I am disturbed by the number of impasses which have occurred so far this year in negotiations between Boards of Education and employee bargaining units. Some boards and superintendents are apparently showing their displeasure with public law 303 by deliberately refusing to enter into meaningful negotiations.

"When, for example, a board seriously proposes freezing the salaries of teachers in this period of marked inflation and maintains this stand throughout negotiations, or when a board takes a position in negotiations which has been termed an unfair negotiations practice by the United States Supreme Court. When the board made its unilateral determination of what its firm and final offer would be, and then refused to entertain further meetings except to work within the confines of its proposal, the board ignored the unfair decisions which declared 'Boulwarism' an unfair practice.

"Although a meeting attended by 327 of the Association's 352 members unanimously rejected the last salary and insurance proposal made by the board, the Association consistently expressed its willingness to continue negotiations with the board, only to be rebuffed by the board's employed negotiator.

"The Association's proposal to the board represented a fair and reasonable professional salary guide designed to attract qualified teachers to the district to replace those who are leaving. The Association has reduced its proposals by more than $1 million, while the board has offered to increase present salaries and insurance by approximately $205,000.

Some boards and superintendents are apparently showing their displeasure with public law 303 by deliberately refusing to enter into meaningful negotiations.

"When, for example, a board seriously proposes freezing the salaries of teachers in this period of marked inflation and maintains this stand throughout negotiations, or when a board proposes removing benefits obtained through hard negotiations last year, there are certainly grounds to suspect that mutually satisfactory agreements will not be reached.

"The present situation is a serious one for it creates a climate which is both unproductive and dangerous. As local associations become more aware of the cynical and recalcitrant attitudes of some school boards, concerted action will be taken to meet such attitudes, in some instances, employee groups may even feel justified in taking actions which strain the limits of the law. This possibility, however remote, makes it absolutely imperative that all parties bargain in good faith.

"Educators are well aware of the archaic tax structure upon which public education in New Jersey rests. The Union County Education Association, together with the New Jersey Education Association, has been, for some years, an advocate of tax reform. I urge Boards of Education members as well as all other citizens to join in pointing to the need for such reform and in urging the members of the legislature to see that such reform is enacted. "In the meantime, educators see no reason to continue to do what they have done all too often in the past: namely, to subsidize education by accepting low salaries and poor working conditions. Association leaders in this country will continue to meet together to review events and to plan appropriate action. They will take whatever steps are necessary to bring about equitable settlements of local issues."

Education a vital part of battle against drug addiction, says medical professor

"The key to solving the drug problem in New Jersey is education," Dr. Donald B. Louria, professor and chairman of the department of public health and preventive medicine of New Jersey College of Medicine and Dentistry, said this week.

The college, which has a $22 million federal grant over five years to treat addicts in a program coordinated with existing drug addiction rehabilitation programs, is on its own conducting an extensive drug education program in schools throughout the state. As a Division of Drug Abuse staff member presents these programs, they also are being educated in the extent of the problem in New Jersey. "One of the difficulties has been that there is no accurate estimation of the amount of drug abuse in this state," Dr. Louria said. "I can tell you, from our limited experience to date, that the problem is enormous and more widespread than any of us in public health had thought."

THE COLLEGE IS GETTING the answers partially through an 80-part questionnaire which is taken voluntarily by junior high and high school students in schools where the education program is taking place. The questionnaire is providing answers to the socio-economic levels of drug abusers, the knowledge of students concerning drugs, their drug habits, their parents' drug habits, their extra-curricular interests, their plans for the future, knowledge of laws concerning drug abuse, reasons for drug use and availability of drugs. The student answering remains anonymous but is given a code number which enables the division's staff to evaluate the effectiveness of its educational program via another questionnaire given at the conclusion of the sessions.

Actually, there are several types of drug education programs being pursued by the college. The first was a "hospital-college family" program designed to provide in-depth information on drug abuse and treatment for attending physicians, residents, interns, medical students and nursing students. These were accomplished through workshops, rounds, and lecture courses. "Once the college staff had become somewhat knowledgeable, the division turned its attention to the community where drug workshops are being presented for school administrators, guidance counselors, teachers, public health nurses, PTAs and social service groups. Mostly these have been workshop conferences presented by Dr. Louria, Dr. Edward A. Wolfson, director of the Division of Drug Abuse; Dr. Stanley Einstein, educational coordinator of Mark Quinones, a Ph.D. candidate who is the program's administrative director.

BUT THE PROGRAM which the staff feels is the most important is the comprehensive program which includes the questionnaire mentioned earlier. In this, students voluntarily fill out the questionnaire. Following this,

either Dr. Louria or Dr. Wolfson present a one hour formal talk to the student body. Then a team of medical students present all-day

R & S announces Kratka promotion

Herman Schlenger, chairman of the board, and Donald Schlenger, president of Roth-Schlenger, Inc., Union, this week announced the promotion of Joseph M. Kratka from vice-president to executive vice-president of the company and its subsidiaries.

Kratka, a veteran in the automotive field, has served as purchasing manager of Rayco, director of purchasing, TBA Centers (Division of Uni-Royal), and merchandise manager of Spartan Industries. He joined Roth-Schlenger in April 1966 as general merchandise manager. A graduate of City College of New York, he was a captain of infantry during World War II. He resides in Flushing, Long Island, N.Y.

Roth-Schlenger, Inc., a Union based corporation, operates R & S Home & Auto super-highway and shopping center stores and auto service centers, the largest and oldest chain of its kind in New Jersey, established in 1919, as well as leased automotive departments in New York State, Pennsylvania, Virginia, Maryland and New Jersey, and a large number of R & S franchise stores and feeder operations.

seminars of small groups, each led by a medical student. Participants ask questions and the medical student discusses the broad use of drugs.

The questionnaire was developed by faculty members and students and was pre-tested. It was reviewed by psychologists, psychiatrists, sociologists and other experts in drug abuse. Dr. Louria believes it is the "most comprehensive" questionnaire in the field. Following the full day of workshops, students fill out a shorter questionnaire designed to demonstrate what they have gotten from the program.

School administration is provided with all material except student names so they know exactly the extent of the drug use in their school.

The college is presenting this program in eight schools during this school year. Other schools interested may write to the college to be put on the list for next year.

A SENIOR MEDICAL student, Richard H. Blum of Bayonne has been an innovator and leader of the program.

Under the federally-funded program, the division has established a six-bed detoxification unit at its Martland Hospital. About 150 persons have come for help since the program started last October 1. There is a waiting list for beds.

In addition about 600 heroin and narcotics users have come voluntarily to be listed in a confidential registry. Every day physicians "sweep" the hospital to find patients with other illnesses who also have drug problems.

In Newark, "the big problem," according to Dr. Louria is heroin. In the suburbs it is drug combinations, he said.

Song writer turned off by 'turn-on' hit records

The effect on youngsters of "hit" records that refer to drugs and the drug experience is a subject of great concern to song writer Sajjad Toqi.

Writing in the current issue of the United Nations Bulletin on Narcotics, Toqi notes that the "constant flow of records focusing on illicit drug usage ... is not only revealing an aspect of popular culture, it has the capacity of becoming propaganda of the highest order."

Powerful economic factors keep record companies and radio stations promoting what he terms "the rock and roll drug movement," without consideration for the possible effect on the giant audience of young people.

Idolized singers with tremendous influence on the thinking, attitudes, dress and way of life of the young "have seen fit to be reported as having experimented with drugs, and have released a profusion of drug-slanted songs." The end of it all, Toqi suggests, is that when a child who lives in an ordinary world -- not a "pop world" where drug conviction can be shrugged off -- is offered a marijuana cigarette or a dose of LSD, he will remember not his health and hygiene teachers' warnings -- but Mick Jagger, John Lennon or Paul McCartney's boasts.

Toqi concludes that if the Beatles "who maintain a god-like status in the eyes of the young who produce the record industry's material" had chosen to ignore the drug theme in such highly successful albums as "Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band," "the course of the trend may have been different."

Aerial survey started

Photos taken of tri-state area

The New York Metropolitan area is sitting for a family portrait. On any clear day within the next few months, two of the aircraft traversing the skies of the Tri-State Region are likely to be photographing the ground below. They will be taking aerial photos for the Tri-State Transportation Commission. This series of pictures will update the information on a previous Tri-State sponsored series of photos, made in 1963, while Tri-State travel surveys were under way.

This latest set will not only record what changes have taken place in seven years, it will also be designed to match the facts being collected by the U.S. Census Bureau in this year's census.

According to Commission Chairman Charles D. Urstadt, this new regional "portrait" will allow the commission to gauge changes in land use since the 1963 effort. "The photographs," he declared, "will allow us to find out what has been happening across the face of the region throughout the last few years. They will round out and verify the building records and household information to be collected by the census during 1970."

The entire 8000-square-mile region that stretches some 60 miles from New York City's Columbus Circle in every direction will be photographed at the scale, one inch equals 2000 feet. In New Jersey, this includes the ten counties of Bergen, Hudson, Essex, Union, Passaic, Morris, Somerset, Middlesex, Mercer and Monmouth. Photos of the first four and of the intensely settled parts of the others will be enlarged to the scale, one inch equals 400 feet. The photographs will be reproducible for sale at cost as Diazo-process prints. The enlarged photos (one-inch-equals-400-foot scale) will be available with drawn-on municipal boundaries, state and county lines, the commission's grid coordinate system and major transport routes.

The Raytheon Co., under contract to the commission, is undertaking the actual photography. It is using two aircraft to fly at various times between Nov. 15, 1969, and the spring of 1970. The aircraft will fly at a planned altitude of 12,000 feet. They will pass back and forth across the region at two-mile intervals.

Weather and climatic conditions affect the time when the flights can be undertaken. In order to provide unobstructed views of structures, the flights must take place after the leaves have fallen from the trees. A time during the short winter days that is neither too near sunset nor sunrise must be chosen in order to avoid long shadows cast by buildings and other objects on the ground.

In addition, the air must be relatively free of smoke and haze to permit sharp photographs to be taken. Days that are clear enough to meet such aerial - photograph - clarity standards average four per month.

Photographs taken from the planes will overlap. Every mile in the aircraft's line of flight a photo will be taken, even though each photo will cover an area about 3.5 miles square. This overlapping is necessary to reduce or eliminate possible distortion.

The Tri-State Transportation Commission was formally constituted by the legislatures of New York, New Jersey and Connecticut in 1965. It succeeded the Tri-State Transportation Committee, formed by executive action of the governors of the three states in 1961. The committee undertook the first set of aerial photographs; these represented the first made of this area on a regional basis.

Tri-State will make photos available to local governments and others as part of its function of support for the region's governing bodies. The commission already makes results from its wide factual surveys available to technical users and the public agencies on request. And these facts are reported to the general public through publications. It thus supplies all throughout the region with a common set of data on which to base planning and land-use decisions.

MRS. MILLICENT FENWICK

Chairman named for Symphony Ball

Mrs. Millicent H. Fenwick of Bernardsville, a state assemblywoman, has been named state chairman of the New Jersey Symphony Ball, to be held Saturday, April 18, at the Robert Treat Hotel, Newark. The ball entitled "The Gemini Ball," helps to underwrite concert and educational activities.

The women's committee of the New Jersey Symphony Orchestra, whose membership of 800 represents seven chapters and a junior com-

5 million workers will be affected by bargaining in '70

WASHINGTON—At least five million workers under contracts covering 1,000 employees or more—a greater number than in any year during the 1960's—will be affected by collective bargaining in 1970. Another five million will receive deferred wage increases, according to estimates of the Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Labor contracts expire in 1970 in the trucking, construction, rubber, automobile, farm and construction equipment, apparel, and meat-packing industries among others. In addition, many railroad pacts expire the end of this year and, presumably, will add to the 1970 bargaining load.

Because of the numerous contract expirations, deferred increases under existing agreements are scheduled for fewer workers in 1970 (five million) than in 1969 when over seven million received such changes. Continuing the upward movement in the size of settlements in recent years, the average deferred increase in 1970 will be the highest on record: an estimated 5.6 percent.

Principal manufacturing industries scheduled for deferred increases include: food (except meat packing); lumber; stone, clay, and glass; and metal working. The average increase for 2.7 million workers will be 4.3 percent or 14.6 cents an hour.

Non-manufacturing industry workers scheduled to receive deferred increases are in the construction, mining, transportation, communication, and retail trade industries. The average increase for 2.4 million workers will be 7.1 percent or 33.1 cents an hour.

The women's committee of the New Jersey Symphony Orchestra, whose membership of 800 represents seven chapters and a junior committee composed of younger adult supporters of the orchestra, will handle the arrangements for the ball.

Corita Kent serigraphs to be shown at Upsala

The serigraph prints of a former nun turned professional artist will be exhibited at the chapel of Upsala College, East Orange, from Feb. 1 to 15.

Corita Kent, who spent 32 years as a nun before she left the sisterhood in 1968, is recognized as one of America's most unusual modern artists. Art critics have described her as "dynamic" and "extraordinary."

Her art work will be shown at Upsala for the second time, her silk screen prints, which are called serigraphs, were displayed in 1967 when she was still a nun.

Upsala chaplain Stephen Johnson, who arranged for both displays, said it was considered "somewhat of a novelty in 1967 for a Lutheran supported institution to be hosting pop art of a Roman Catholic source."

"The exhibit now will enable those who saw the previous exhibit to follow the development of Corita Kent's work," he said. "Those who are not exposed to the work will be afforded an opportunity to view the products of one of

Thursday, January 22, 1970— the more significant contemporary religious artists. The exhibit will be open from 9 to 5 p.m. during the week and on Sundays, Feb. 1 and 15 from 1 to 5 p.m. Miss Kent was a member of the Immaculate Heart of Mary order and was chairman of the Immaculate Heart College art department in Los Angeles, Calif., before she left the sisterhood. Her work has been hung in major art galleries throughout the nation and while a nun, she and her students have given exhibits for various churches and denominations including the World Council of Churches meeting in Sweden.

Education a vital part of battle against drug addiction, says medical professor

"The key to solving the drug problem in New Jersey is education," Dr. Donald B. Louria, professor and chairman of the department of public health and preventive medicine of New Jersey College of Medicine and Dentistry, said this week.

The college, which has a $22 million federal grant over five years to treat addicts in a program coordinated with existing drug addiction rehabilitation programs, is on its own conducting an extensive drug education program in schools throughout the state. As Division of Drug Abuse staff members present these programs, they also are being educated in the extent of the problem in New Jersey. "One of the difficulties has been that there is no accurate estimation of the amount of drug abuse in this state," Dr. Louria said. "I can tell you, from our limited experience to date, that the problem is enormous and more widespread than any of us in public health had thought."

THE COLLEGE IS GETTING the answers partially through an 80-part questionnaire which is taken voluntarily by junior high and high school students in schools where the education program is taking place. The questionnaire is providing answers to the socio-economic levels of drug abusers, the knowledge of students concerning drugs, their drug habits, their parents' drug habits, their extra-curricular interests, their plans for the future, knowledge of laws concerning drug abuse, reasons for drug use and availability of drugs. The student answering remains anonymous but is given a code number which enables the division's staff to evaluate the effectiveness of its educational program via another questionnaire given at the conclusion of the sessions.

Actually, there are several types of drug education programs being pursued by the college. The first was a "hospital-college family" program designed to provide in-depth information on drug abuse and treatment for attending physicians, residents, interns, medical students and nursing students. These were accomplished through workshops, rounds, and elective courses.

Once the college staff had become somewhat knowledgeable, the division turned its attention to the community where drug workshops are being presented for school administrators, guidance counselors, teachers, public health nurses, PTAs and social service groups. Mostly these have been workshop conferences presented by Dr. Louria, Dr. Edward A. Wolfson, director of the Division of Drug Abuse; Dr. Stanley Einstein, educational coordinator; or Mark Quinones, a Ph.D. candidate who is the program's administrative director.

BUT THE PROGRAM which the staff feels is the most important is the comprehensive program which includes the questionnaire mentioned earlier. In this, students voluntarily fill out the questionnaire. Following this,

either Dr. Louria or Dr. Wolfson present a one hour formal talk to the student body. Then a team of medical students present all-day

JOSEPH M. KRATKA

R & S announces Kratka promotion

Herman Schlenger, chairman of the board, and Donald Schlenger, president of Roth-Schlenger, Inc., Union, this week announced the promotion of Joseph M. Kratka from vice-president to executive vice-president of the company and its subsidiaries.

Kratka, a veteran in the automotive field, has served as purchasing manager of Rayco, director of purchasing, TBA Centers (Division of Uni-Royal), and merchandise manager of Spartan Industries.

He joined Roth-Schlenger in April 1966 as general merchandise manager. A graduate of City College of New York, he was a captain of infantry during World War II. He resides in Flushing, Long Island, N.Y.

Roth-Schlenger, Inc., a Union based corporation, operates R & S Home & Auto super-highway and shopping center stores and auto service centers, the largest and oldest chain of its kind in New Jersey, established in 1919, as well as leased automotive departments in New York State, Pennsylvania, Virginia, Maryland and New Jersey, and a large number of R & S franchise stores and feeder operations.

seminars of small groups, each led by a medical student. Participants ask questions and the medical student discusses the broad use of drugs.

The questionnaire was developed by faculty members and students and was pre-tested. It was reviewed by psychologists, psychiatrists, sociologists and other experts in drug abuse. Dr. Louria believes it is the "most comprehensive" questionnaire in the field. Following the full day of workshops, students fill out a shorter questionnaire designed to demonstrate what they have gotten from the program.

School administration is provided with all material except student names so they know exactly the extent of the drug use in their school.

The college is presenting this program in eight schools during this school year. Other schools interested may write to the college to be put on the list for next year.

A SENIOR MEDICAL student, Richard H. Blum of Bayonne has been an innovator and leader of the program.

Under the federally-funded program, the division has established a six-bed detoxification unit at its Martland Hospital. About 150 persons have come for help since the program started last October 1. There is a waiting list for beds.

In addition about 600 heroin and narcotics users have come voluntarily to be listed in a confidential registry.

Every day physicians "sweep" the hospital to find patients with other illnesses who also have drug problems.

In Newark, "the big problem," according to Dr. Louria is heroin. In the suburbs it is drug combinations, he said.

Song writer turned off by 'turn-on' hit records

The effect on youngsters of 'hit' records that refer to drugs and the drug experience is a subject of great concern to song writer Sajjad Taqi.

Writing in the current issue of the United Nations Bulletin on Narcotics, Taqi notes that the "constant flow of records focusing on illicit drug usage ... is not only revealing an aspect of popular culture, it has the capacity of becoming propaganda of the highest order."

Powerful economic factors keep record companies and radio stations promoting what he terms "the rock and roll drug movement," without consideration for the possible effect on the giant audience of young people.

Idolized singers with tremendous influence on the thinking, attitudes, dress and way of life of the young "have seen fit to be reported as having experimented with drugs, and have released a profusion of drug-slanted songs." The end of it all, Taqi suggests, is that when a child who lives in an ordinary world — not a "pop" world — where drug conviction can be shrugged off — is offered a marijuana cigarette or a dose of LSD, he will remember not his health and hygiene teachers' warnings — but Mick Jagger, John Lennon or Paul McCartney's boasts.

Taqi concludes that if the Beatles "who maintain a god-like status in the eyes of the young who produce the record industry's material" had chosen to ignore the "drug theme in such highly successful albums as 'Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band,'" "the course of the trend may have been different."

Aerial survey started

The New York Metropolitan area is sitting for a family portrait.

On any clear day within the next few months, two of the aircraft traversing the skies of the Tri-State Region are likely to be photographing the ground below. They will be taking aerial photos for the Tri-State Transportation Commission. This series of pictures will update the information on a previous Tri-State sponsored series of photos, made in 1963, while Tri-State travel surveys were under way.

This latest set will not only record what changes have taken place in seven years, it will also be designed to match the facts being collected by the U.S. Census Bureau in this year's census.

According to Commission Chairman Charles U. Urstadt, this new regional "portrait" will allow the commission to gauge changes in land use since the 1963 effort. "The photographs," he declared, "will allow us to find out what has been happening across the face of the region throughout the last few years. They will round out and verify the building records and household information to be collected by the census during 1970."

The entire 8000-square-mile region that stretches some 60 miles from New York City's Columbus Circle in every direction will be photographed at the scale, one inch equals 2000 feet. In New Jersey, this includes the ten counties of Bergen, Hudson, Essex, Union, Passaic, Morris, Somerset, Middlesex, Mercer and Monmouth. Photos of the first four and of the intensely settled parts of the others will be enlarged to the scale, one inch equals 400 feet.

The photographs will be reproducible for sale at cost as Diazo-process prints. The enlarged photos (one-inch-equals-400-foot scale) will be available with draw-on municipal boundaries, state and county lines, the commission's grid coordinate system and major transport routes.

The Raytheon Co., under contract to the commission, is undertaking the actual photography. It is using two aircraft to fly at various times between Nov. 15, 1969, and the spring of 1970. The aircraft will fly at a planned altitude of 12,000 feet. They will pass back and forth across the region at two-mile intervals.

Weather and climatic conditions affect the time when the flights can be undertaken. In order to provide unobstructed views of structures, the flights must take place after the leaves have fallen from the trees. A time during the short winter days that is neither too near sunset nor sunrise must be chosen in order to avoid long shadows cast by buildings and other objects on the ground.

In addition, the air must be relatively free of smoke and haze to permit sharp photographs to be taken. Days that are clear enough to meet such aerial - photograph - clarity standards average four per month.

Photographs taken from the planes will overlap. Every mile in the aircraft's line of flight a photo will be taken, even though each photo will cover an area about 3.5 miles square. This overlapping is necessary to reduce or eliminate possible distortion.

The Tri-State Transportation Commission was formally constituted by the legislatures of New York, New Jersey and Connecticut in 1965. It succeeded the Tri-State Transportation Committee, formed by executive action of the governors of the three states in 1961. The committee undertook the first set of aerial photographs; these represented the first made of this area on a regional basis.

5 million workers will be affected by bargaining in '70

WASHINGTON—At least five million workers under contracts covering 1,000 employees or more—a greater number than in any year during the 1960's—will be affected by collective bargaining in 1970. Another five million will receive deferred wage increases, according to estimates of the Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Labor contracts expire in 1970 in the trucking, construction, rubber, automobile, farm and construction equipment, apparel, and meat-packing industries among others. In addition, many railroad pacts expire the end of this year and, presumably, will add to the 1970 bargaining load.

Because of the numerous contract expirations, deferred increases under existing agreements are scheduled for fewer workers in 1970 (five million), than in 1969 when over seven million received such changes. Continuing the upward movement in the size of settlements in recent years, the average deferred increase in 1970 will be the highest on record; an estimated 5.6 percent.

Principal manufacturing industries scheduled for deferred increases include: food (except meat packing); lumber; stone, clay, and glass; and metal working. The average increase for 2.7 million workers will be 4.3 percent or 14.6 cents an hour.

Non-manufacturing industry workers scheduled to receive deferred increases are in the construction, mining, transportation, communication, and retail trade industries. The average increase for 2.4 million workers will be 7.1 percent or 33.1 cents an hour.

A committee composed of younger adult supporters of the orchestra, will handle the arrangements for the ball.

MOMENT OF DECISION — Dr. Warren Davis, superintendent of the Regional High School District, has the responsibility of deciding when to call off school because of heavy snow or icy roads. Here he looks out of his office window at the snow in the courtyard of Jonathan Dayton Regional High School, Springfield.

Schoolmen's winter job includes a 'snow watch'

A heavy snow warning has been posted for the metropolitan area including northern New Jersey where at least a six-inch accumulation is expected in the outlying suburban areas. A radio report like this is enough to send housewives scurrying to the nearest supermarket to stock up on the staples, place municipal, county and state road departments on the alert—and launch "Operation Snow Watch" for school superintendents.

"Do we close the schools tomorrow?" he answer to this $64 question is preceded by many hours of checking and double-checking weather reports and road conditions within the school district.

"It's a decision based solely on student safety," said Dr. Warren M. Davis, superintendent of the Union County Regional High School District, "and it must be made no later than 5:30 a.m. After that, it may be too late to get the closing announcement on the radio."

A typical snow watch begins with the forecast of an impending storm. Dr. Davis and Dennis Lynch, the district's transportation director, start by checking weather reports throughout the afternoon.

"In the evening, Dr. Davis continues to check radio reports and puts in periodic calls to the weather bureau at Newark.

"The Newark forecast would be more accurate for this area than one in New York," Dr. Davis said.

In the district, Lynch may also hop into his car for a personal check of road conditions, a job that Dr. Davis used to perform himself.

Of particular importance are the two "mountainous" communities in the district, Berkeley Heights and Mountainside. Also checked are road conditions at the southern end of the district, in Clark.

The information is fed to Dr. Davis by 5 o'clock. He then calls local school superintendents for their appraisal of the situation.

"When you're concerned with the safety of almost 5,500 students, every possible source of information must be checked. Many of our students are transported to school," Dr. Davis noted.

If the decision is made by 5:30 to close one or more of the schools, the transportation director, using a prearranged secret code, calls five radio stations (WOR, WERA, WNEW, WVNJ AND WABC) which then begin announcing the closings.

An extensive telephone chain is also started to let all school employees know.

"It's getting a little easier to make a decision," Dr. Davis said. "Weather forecasting has improved, and the local road departments and police are better able to give us reports on road conditions."

"But weather forecasting is tricky in this area. A storm roaring in from south Jersey which appears to be heading our way may suddenly veer to the east at the last minute," he said.

"It all adds up to a few more grey hairs for superintendents, I can tell you that," Dr. Davis smiled as he looked out at the falling snow.

IF THE NEWS worsens along with the weather, "Operation Snow Watch" then goes into the early morning hours.

At about 4:30 a.m. calls are made to police and road departments of the six communities.

Five persons fined for traffic violations

Five persons were fined by Judge Jacob Bauer at the regular session of the Mountainside Municipal Court last Wednesday evening for motor vehicle violations.

Matthew Trana, 19, of Rahway, and Jesus R. Otazo, 19, of Watchung, were fined $30 each on a charge of racing on the highway.

John Ortiz, 36, of Hoboken, paid $35 for failure to keep right. Two men were found guilty on a charge of improper passing on the shoulder of the road; Joseph Moneghan, 42, of Somerset paid $25, and Roger T. Heinrich, 29, of North Plainfield was fined $10.

Merachnik earns praise for help on a vocational guide

Dr. Donald Merachnik, assistant superintendent for pupil personnel services in the Union County Regional High School District, played a key role in the development of a State Department of Education guidebook for teachers and counselors designed to increase the vocational awareness of elementary school children.

Dr. Merachnik acted as consultant in the development of the 55-page guide. He has been invited to speak on the psychological implications of vocational awareness at the American Personnel and Guidance Association convention in New Orleans, in March.

In a letter to Dr. Warren M. Davis, superintendent of schools, Robert M. Worthington, assistant commissioner of education, said Dr. Merachnik "is to be highly commended" for his services as consultant.

During the past three years, the Division of Vocational Education of the State Department of Education has been meeting with teachers, counselors and other educators in an effort to develop appropriate vocational guidance activities on the elementary grade level, according to Thomas Gambino, state director of career development.

It is felt that early school experiences are needed for establishing a broad foundation for career choices.

Also among the workshop participants in the development of the guidebook was John Conlin, principal of the Frank K. Henny School in Clark, and a member of the Union County Regional High School District Board of Education.

CEREBRAL PALSY - Rh FACTOR

One of childhood's greatest crippling cerebral palsy (CP) afflicts about 25,000 infants in the United States each year. CP is centered in the brain and causes a lack of muscle control. It is not a single disease but a group of ailments.

A number of factors before, during, or after birth can cause cerebral palsy. These include blood-type conflict between mother and unborn child, German measles infection in early pregnancy, anemia and toxemia, complications at birth, and injury of infection after birth.

Research into the causes of cerebral palsy has produced a means of preventing CP in cases stemming from a blood-type conflict between mother and unborn child or fetus. The Rh factor is an element found in the blood of most people, but not all. When this factor is present in the red blood cells of the fetus (Rh-positive) but not in the mother (Rh-negative), the result is a blood-type conflict. This condition can produce stillbirth, mental retardation, hearing loss, or cerebral palsy.

Why does this sometimes occur? Some of the unborn child's Rh-positive red blood cells enter the mother's bloodstream. Since the Rh factor is not present in her blood, the mother's system may produce antibodies or substances which fight off the Rh-positive cells. These antibodies travel back to the fetus through the bloodstream where they may destroy the red blood cells of the unborn child, resulting in infant death or birth defects.

Researchers have now developed a serum, Rh-(D) Immune Globulin, which prevents an Rh-negative mother from becoming sensitized or immune to her child's Rh factor during pregnancy and childbirth. A single injection of Rh immune-globulin, given to the mother within 72 hours after delivery of an Rh-positive infant, will effectively prevent the production of the immunizing antibodies in her system.

To insure prevention, Rh immunoglobulin should be given after each delivery or miscarriage to Rh-negative mothers who face a possibility of becoming immune to the Rh blood factor. However, this measure appears to be only preventive. So far, it has proved helpful to women who have become sensitized from previous Rh-positive births.

If the serum is systematically given to all mothers who still risk immunization, the incidence of this type of red blood cell destruction and the resulting cerebral palsy and other birth defects can be reduced to almost the vanishing point.

Although the development of Rh immunoglobulin has provided the key to preventing one form of cerebral palsy, the goal of research is the prevention and treatment of all types. The National Institutes of Health in Bethesda, Maryland, supports research and training of specialists through the National Institute of Neurological Diseases and Stroke.

For And About Teenagers

THE WEEK'S LETTER: I am 13 and have a problem. There is a boy in my room and I like him very much. Sometimes he acts as if he likes me, sometimes he doesn't. There are three girls in my room who are good friends of mine. When they are around this boy he talks to them and flirts with them, but when I come around he just walks off and pays no attention to me. Then, when I'm around him by myself, he flirts around with me and talks to me, I'm really puzzled. Why does he act that way??

OUR REPLY: You are probably making too much out of nothing. It is possible he stops flirting with other girls when you come around because he doesn't want you to believe that he flirts with everyone. If you think that he flirts with everyone, you would be less impressed when he flirts with you. At any rate, don't be concerned about trying to figure it out. It isn't that important. What is important is the way he acts toward you, whether he likes you and you like him. If he completely ignores you when others are around, you can be sure that he doesn't like you as much as you like him.

If you have a teenage problem you want to discuss or an observation to make, address your letter to FOR AND ABOUT TEENAGERS, COMMUNITY AND SUBURBAN PRESS SERVICE, FRANKFORD, KY.

NJEA opposes plan to allow larger kindergarten classes

The New Jersey Education Association is opposing a proposed change in state regulations that would allow kindergarten classes beyond existing size limits.

"The kindergarten class-size limit should not be weakened," says an editorial in the current issue of the NJEA Review, a professional journal distributed each month to more than 65,000 New Jersey teachers. "Young children need close attention. A low adult-pupil ratio is critical in assuring success for all."

The present limit on kindergarten size is 25 pupils per teacher. This limit can be exceeded by permission of the county superintendent of schools but only when "another teacher, an auxiliary teacher, or a teacher aide is employed full-time to provide for the increased size."

The proposed change would eliminate the restriction governing when the county superintendent may authorize larger classes. It would require him only to "give proper consideration to the need for employment of another teacher or teacher aide."

State Education Commissioner Carl L. Marburger is proposing the change. The N.J. State Board of Education is scheduled to act on the proposal at its next meeting, Wednesday, Feb. 4.

"The change cannot be justified," claims the NJEA editorial. There are already too many known abuses to the rule as established. It is especially violated in our urban centers where some county superintendents already look the other way when city boards of education jam young children into overcrowded kindergartens.

"The last thing needed is a rule change to justify existing neglect."

Cahill transit stand lauded by Williams

WASHINGTON, -- U.S. Sen. Harrison A. Williams, Jr., (D-NJ) said this week that Governor William T. Cahill is entering office "with the enlightened attitude toward mass transportation problems that is required if we are to meet our needs in that area."

Williams made his comments after receiving a letter from Cahill in which he said, "I want to assure you that we will be glad to cooperate in any way in every aspect of mass transit, particularly with respect to improvements in Northern New Jersey."

Sen. Williams is sponsor of the Mass Transit Act which would permit the Department of Transportation to immediately obligate itself for up to $3.1-billion in assistance to mass transit programs. It would be the largest boost for mass transportation facilities in the nation's history.

Governor Cahill made his statement in a letter responding to one from Senator Williams in which he asked Cahill for his assistance in obtaining $20-million in Federal funds for the improvement of the New York and Long Branch Railroad.

Master plan for Meadowlands moved closer by state study

A major step in the development of a master plan for the Hackensack Meadowlands has been taken with the completion of data on lands in the Meadowlands district.

The Navigation Bureau in the State Department of Conservation and Economic Development, under the supervision of the State Resources Development Council, undertook a study of the Meadowlands in order to determine the extent of the state's interest, a question which has been debated for many years.

According to the Department, "the present task, undertaken under the provisions of Chapter 404 of the Laws of 1968, by necessity was complicated by the lapse of time. During the last 300 years, the face of the Meadowlands has undergone a multitude of changes, such as dredging, filling, dumping, re-routing of drainageways, construction of buildings and roads, etc.

"All of these factors have had an effect on the environment and therefore on the physical condition of the land. The net effect was the need to reconstruct with as much accuracy as possible the physical environment of the Meadowlands prior to these changes."

"The Navigation Bureau approached the study by initially instituting a thorough quantitative study of all available maps, records, reports, studies and surveys available relating to the Hackensack Meadowlands. All of these historic records were evaluated and reviewed in light of modern-day technology and scientific analysis in order to determine their relevancy to delineating the extent of the state's interest in the Hackensack Meadowlands."

"Specifically, the Navigation Bureau determined through application of engineering technology the current-day applicability of these records to the delineation of the state's interest."

"Additionally, for the first time an exhaustive review was conducted of other scientific specialties in order to determine what contribution, if any, they could make to the evaluation and delineation of the state's riparian interest. Some time was spent in evaluating the various methodologies and combinations thereof to determine their usability in delineating land subject to tidal waters."

Symphony concert scheduled Feb. 21 to benefit charities

The Theater for the Performing Arts at Newark State College in Union will be the scene of a concert to be presented by the New Jersey Symphony Orchestra on Saturday, Feb. 21, at 8:30 p.m. This will be the first performance of the orchestra in Union and will be conducted by Henry Lewis, the symphony's music director.

The concert will be sponsored by Union Lodge No. 1782, B'nai B'rith, to raise funds for the charitable activities of the national B'nai B'rith organization. Norton Scherzer, fund-raising chairman and vice-president of the lodge, noted that this was the first time a B'nai B'rith group has sponsored such a concert.

The program will present Anthony di Bonaventura, pianist, as guest soloist. The program will include Brahms Concerto No. 2 in B-flat major, Mozart's Sinfonia Concertante in E-flat major for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn and Bassoon, and Kraft's Concerto for Percussion and Orchestra.

Tickets for the concert are $5 and are available by calling Leo Boyar, ticket chairman at 687-1204. All seats are reserved.

Interracial Business Council lists courses for winter term

Malcolm L. Corrin, executive director of the Interracial Council for Business Opportunity of New Jersey, this week announced the winter semester courses that comprise the ICBO educational program.

The courses will be given at the Rutgers Newark Law School and will start the week of Feb. 23. Record keeping, bookkeeping, basic business management and advanced business management will be given on successive nights.

Each session is two hours, and 10 sessions complete the course. Certificates are given to those students who complete the requirements.

The courses are free and are given as a community service for minority groups to prepare them for a successful career in business. Prospective students can enroll by mail or by telephone by contacting Bernard H. Saperstein, education director, at the ICBO office, 24 Commerce St., Newark, at 622-4771.

Record keeping will instruct the entrepreneur, or would-be entrepreneur, in the hows and whys of records and their importance to the business inventory records, payroll, bank checking account reconciliations, petty cash handling, budgeting, etc. will be discussed.

Bookkeeping will continue into profit and loss statements, balance sheets, T accounts, and other elements of bookkeeping theory and practice.

Basic business management discusses such questions as "Do I belong in business?" selecting a location, negotiating a lease, how to buy, how to sell, fraud protection and credit selling.

Advanced business management gets into the areas of borrowing money to expand a business, net worth, advertising, business law, insurance, investing, the stock market, business vocabulary and more sophisticated aspects of entrepreneurship.

Space is limited and enrollment is on a first-come first-served basis; interested people, especially those now in business, should register immediately.

The ICBO is a voluntary organization formed to help minority group members to organize and operate their own businesses. Through the use of volunteers from the business community, applicants are given free one-to-one counseling in their specific business areas. Through this technique it has been noted that new or existing owners of small businesses generally lack, or are not fully aware of, the managerial responsibilities involved. To further the applicant's chances of success, the ICBO has developed its educational program to supplement the benefits of the counseling program.

Former New Jersey Governor Robert B. Meyner and Don M. Thomas are chairmen of the ICBO New Jersey Council and Leonard Howard is the president of the executive committee.

U. S. aide talks with exporters

A representative of the U.S. Department of Commerce is meeting with businessmen in four New Jersey counties this week to discuss overseas marketing opportunities available and the department's services to exporters.

Stanley Schwartz of the department's New York field office is spending the week in Union, Essex, Warren and Hunterdon counties. Interested businessmen may make appointments by calling 212 264-0623 or contacting cooperative offices at the Bloomfield Chamber of Commerce, the Chamber of Commerce of Eastern Union County at Elizabeth, the Greater Newark Chamber of Commerce, and the Plainfield Area Chamber of Commerce.

The 70's a whole new ballgame for New Jersey.

Sure the Sixties were tremendous. In '69 alone there were more new jobs and more new business for New Jersey than in any other year... ever.

But the Seventies are a whole new ballgame for New Jersey.

In the Sixties we at Public Service invested about $1.5 billion, expanding our electric and gas energy system. But now, in just the first three years of the Seventies, we plan to invest over $1 billion more!

It's going to be a whole new ballgame in a lot of other ways, too... even in the way we produce and deliver the energy New Jersey needs. A good part of that $1 billion will go toward completing two of the largest nuclear generating stations in the world. All of our $1 billion will go toward continually bettering the service we provide to nearly 80% of New Jersey's people in 295 municipalities, including our six major cities.

New Jersey's cities... that's where we think the real action of the Seventies will focus. The reason? Our cities offer business many advantages, including good people who are good workers, excellent transportation, and significantly lower rents than the other metropolitan centers of this rich marketing region. And these are the facts that more and more companies are discovering for themselves.

Discover New Jersey's many opportunities for business, investment, and growth for yourself. Send for our free 48-page booklet, "New Jersey, Land of Amazing Advantages." Please write Public Service Electric and Gas Company, Dept. 8311, 80 Park Place, Newark, New Jersey 07101.

Y group plans reorganization

The Single-Altes, formerly known as the business and professional group of the Eastern Union County YM-YWHA, Green Lane, Union, will hold a reorganization meeting Sunday, Feb. 8, at 8 p.m. The group, which has met for several years at the Y, serves single adults between the ages of 35 and 55.

The reorganization meeting will be open only to current members of the Y or people who plan to join the Y on Feb. 8. Current membership cards from any other YM-YWHA in the greater New York-New Jersey region will be honored.

The membership fee for a single adult is $50 a year, plus a building fund pledge of $125, payable over a five-year period. If enough people respond on Feb. 8, Carl Shackman, the Y program director, will serve as advisor in organizing a permanent group which would meet more frequently than once a month as in the past.

Gov. Livingston Regional High School, Berkeley Heights, during the spring semester, Dean Wolf said. Students planning to take these courses for credit must apply for admission to the evening session and register at the college. Those who do not seek college credit may apply at the high school they plan to attend.

Credit courses to be offered at Plainfield High School are: English composition (English 101), business law (Business 201), and General psychology (Psychology 101). Classes will be conducted Mondays and Wednesdays from 7:50 to 9:05 p.m. for 15 weeks beginning Feb. 2.

Child psychology (Psychology 103), a three-credit course, and physical geology, a non-credit course, will be offered at Gov. Livingston Regional High School. These classes will meet Tuesdays and Wednesdays from 7:45 to 9:10 p.m., beginning Feb. 3.

Tuition for evening session and off-campus courses is $12 a credit hour for Union County residents and $25 a credit hour for all other New Jersey residents.

Members sought by Waiting Wives

The Waiting Wives Club this week invited wives of servicemen stationed away from home to its next meeting on Wednesday, Feb. 4, at 7:30 p.m. The club meets at the Red Cross house, 203 W. Jersey st., Elizabeth.

"The main feeling of present members is that the club offers an opportunity to meet other girls in the same situation with similar problems," a spokesman said.

"Many questions the girls have, such as what privileges and facilities are available to wives, have been answered. Information regarding 'R&R' is also available. At a future meeting a representative from the Internal Revenue will speak on how we should file our income taxes."

Further information may be obtained from the Eastern County Red Cross Chapter.

Y to honor Diamond brothers

Harry and Irving Diamond, industrialists whose business careers began as apprentices in their immigrant father's blacksmith shop in Elizabeth, will be the recipients of the "Men of the Year" award of the Eastern Union County YM-YWHA, Green Lane, Union, at its annual Award Ball Saturday at 7:30 p.m.

The Diamond brothers, natives of Elizabeth, with Harry still residing there, and Irving in Hillside, now head the Elizabeth Iron Works, Green Lane, Union which recently celebrated the 60th anniversary of its founding.

Both were educated in the Elizabeth public school system, and were active in their teen years in the sports program of Bartin High School and on various athletic teams at the YMHA, then on East Jersey street, Elizabeth. In their adult years they continued their interest in the 'Y' particularly in the planning and developing of the new facilities in Union.

Harry headed the Elizabeth Youth Foundation, which sparked the purchase of the land on Green Lane, and was a member of the praesidium which gave leadership to construction of the new building. He is also active of the Alexian Brothers Hospital Foundation in Elizabeth, and was vice-president of the board that planned the new Memorial General Hospital in Union.

Irving, like his brother, has served as a member of the 'Y' board of directors and has continued his interest in the health and physical education programs of the 'Y.' He is a former president of the Structural Steel and Ornamental Iron Association of New Jersey, and with his brother is active in the Diamond Foundation which recognizes and supports numerous individual and group causes.

This will mark the second year of the presentation of the award, with the first recipient having been Albert L. Kessler, an immediate past president of the agency.

The committee in charge of the award ball is headed by Mrs. Alvin Hirschberg of Hillside. In conjunction with the dinner-dance, a special journal is being published and will be distributed on the night of the affair in honor of the award recipients. Mort Salov of Elizabeth, a member of the 'Y' board, sponsors of the event, is in charge of the journal.

Hiking club plans treks

Three hikes are scheduled this weekend for members and guests of the Union County Hiking Club.

On Saturday, Ann Kent of Irvington will lead a six-mile afternoon ramble in the South Mountain Reservation. The group will meet at the Locust Grove parking area, near the Millburn railroad station, at 1:30 p.m.

On Sunday, Robert Evers of Irvington and Lee Fanger of Summit will lead two rambles in Jockey Hollow Park, Morristown. The first trip will begin at 10 a.m. from the Tempe Wick House parking area. The second will start at the Tempe Wick House parking area at 1:30 p.m. Parents are encouraged to bring their children on these rambles in an area where George Washington made history during the Revolution.

Cultural series set at UC, six events to highlight agenda

A cultural arts series for Union College alumni was announced this week by Dr. Kenneth W. Iversen, acting president, and Richard P. Muscatello, president of the Alumni Association.

A showing of the film "Oklahoma" and reception will open the six-event series on Friday, Feb. 6, at 8 p.m. Two young people's concerts will highlight the series, which also includes opera, drama and the dance.

The series is being offered without charge as a gift from the college in appreciation of the alumni's support over the years, Dr. Iversen said.

The schedule of events includes a young people's concert, "Music of the Candlelight Age," presented by the Suburban Symphony Orchestra of New Jersey, on Feb. 22 at 3 p.m.; a performance of "Carmen" by the Amato Opera Company, on March 1 at 8 p.m.; a young people's concert, "Music of the Electronic Age" by the Suburban Symphony on March 15 at 3 p.m.; the Union College Drama Club production of "Dangerous Corner" by J. B. Priestly on April 3 at 8:30 p.m., and "Excerpts from Famous Ballets" by the New Jersey Dance Theatre Guild on May 3 at 8 p.m. All events will be in the theater of the Campus Center, Cranford.

Attendance is limited to 500, the capacity of the Union College Theatre, and tickets will be provided on a first come first served basis, Muscatello said. Tickets are available for alumni and all members of their family by writing to the alumni office at Union College. For the two young people's concerts, only adults accompanied by a fourth grade through high school student will be admitted.

The series was arranged by a committee headed by George Van Dorn of Cranford.

A GOOD-LOOKING GROUP—The Rebel Patrol of Mountinside Boy Scout Troop 177 won first prize for their appearance at the 15th annual Klondike Derby held Saturday at Surprise Lake. The Derby is a nation-wide scouting event in which 100 scout patrol sleds raced around the lake performing scouting skills at specified stops along the way. This year's event was governed by M. Edward Steel of Mountinside, who commented, "Although the Klondike Derby means a lot of work every year on the parts of some 100 fathers who spend long hours organizing and managing the countless details, the gratification comes in seeing the boys experiencing excitement and fun in exhibiting their scouting skills."

VFW names Mountinside student as winner of patriotic essay contest

Mountinside Memorial Post 10136, Veterans of Foreign Wars, in conjunction with the Berkeley Heights Post, recently announced the winners of its recent essay and scholarship contest held at Gov. Livingston Regional High School.

The first place winner was Robert G. Bauer of 1256 Poplar ave., Mountinside, followed by second place winner, Donald Jasko of 1246 Knollwood rd., Mountinside, and third place winner, Thomas S. Burgess Jr. of 278 Timberline rd., Mountinside.

U.S. Bonds of $100, $75 and $50 were given to the winners. A VFW spokesman, in announcing the awards, said: "We are pleased, not only to make these awards, but we are also very proud and appreciative of the time, effort and thought that these winners, and all the other participants put forth to make the contest meaningful and successful."

He went on to say, "We hope that all persons, students and adults alike, will thoughtfully read and reflect upon what these young people have to say. Certainly, they have established high standards for all of us to live up to. More importantly, perhaps, is that they have outlined, too, obligations which each of us should personally accept—and live up to," he concluded.

The text of Bauer's essay follows: "SINCE THE BEGINNINGS of this country, Americans have been seeking a type of government in which everyone is as free as they please, with an existing bond between them all, creating a unified and respectable government. The challenge still left to us is that of freedom. This can only be accomplished by everyone working together. I already consider myself a free person and it's a privilege to live in this country. But this is not enough. Along with my feeling of freedom, I believe it is also my duty to make others believe the same thing because it is everybody together who makes a nation, particularly a free one."

"Now in high school, through certain courses and just growing up, I've learned quite a bit concerning the building and running of this country. I also see how very much I can influence the whole process. As a student, I therefore find it important to read newspapers, to keep up with current happenings, and to become actively involved in social activities, whether they be for my school, my community, or the country; all of them consisting of Americans. All of the awareness that comes from high school learning gives me more and more faith in considering the United States as a free nation to be a success."

"I know that right now the United States is in a crisis because a democracy is people, and many Americans are going off to different extremes to protest our government. Although this is wrong and cannot keep a nation united or free, I know I can't just close my eyes and ears to the whole situation. I feel it is partly my job to bring us out of this crisis, but I can't do it by myself, and I cannot be influencing enough to do it right away. But I can definitely begin to prepare myself right now to face others and make them realize the beauty of this nation with its freedom, and perhaps even prevent some people of my own age from becoming radicals."

"I can start now by first of all taking a firm stand on my position as an American citizen. Then I must resist any other possible paths, such as my environment or propaganda, which may lead me astray. And though I still cannot support my country's freedom by means of voting or fighting, I can in my own conscience agree with its policies and decide where I will stand in the future."

"I even have already decided to a certain degree how I will run my family, since I believe that most of a person's feelings toward anything begins in the home. I can honestly say that most of my feelings, even toward freedom and the United States government, have come from my upbringing."

"The U.S. is beautiful, and it is our challenge to keep it that way. Our founding fathers laid out for us the whole idea of a free nation, so it is our job to carry this idea through to its entirety."

The VFW issued its thanks to the three judges: Dr. Levin B. Hannigan, the Rev. Joseph P. Fagan, and James E. Palmquist for their work, and also to Fredrick Aho for his cooperation and Norman Schneider for conducting the contest at Gov. Livingston Regional High School.

Mrs. Hughes tells churchmen of fight on obscenity in media

At Our Lady of Lourdes Holy Name Society meeting last week in the school auditorium in Mountinside, former State Sen. Mildred Barry Hughes spoke before an audience outlining her work in the fight against obscenity and depravity in the public media. Mrs. Hughes served in the New Jersey Assembly for eight years from 1958 to 1966, with two years as the assistant majority leader. In 1966 through 1968, she was the only woman senator in the history of New Jersey. Last year, she was appointed by Gov. Richard J. Hughes (no relation) to serve on a commission to study obscenity and depravity in the public media.

Sen. Hughes in her talk stressed that obscenity and depravity is a problem which is growing worse each year. She feels that the reason for this rests with the Supreme Court's "inability to properly define the meaning of obscenity. This has left a large gray area in determining what is pornographic and what is not. Many abuses in this area have been the result."

Sen. Hughes stressed that if effective measures are not soon taken the situation will become acute. She emphasized very strongly, the great need for the average citizen, "the silent majority," to speak out and make his views known to legislators, TV, movie producers, writers and publishers. Sen. Hughes feels that parents, especially of young children and teenagers, should speak out. It is these children who will be most seriously affected by the spread of obscenity and pornography, she said.

Witnesses hear a lecture on the methods of worship

"True Worship Versus the False" was the theme of the lecture attended by an overflow crowd of 2,836 Jehovah's Witnesses at Thomas Jefferson High School in Elizabeth on Sunday afternoon. "That lecture was one of the highlights of the entire 3-day convention" was the remark made by Michael Jakubowski, spokesman for the Witnesses, from the Mountinside area. "Another highlight," he continued, "was the baptism of 60 new ministers on Saturday morning."

C. H. Weining, the district supervising minister of the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society, in giving the lecture, asserted distinctions between right and wrong methods of worship. Weining commented on current religious attitudes by claiming: "The modern religious spirit today is to be liberal and to worship God anyway a person desires. People maintain that only a fanatical egotist would claim that his way of worship is right and others are wrong."

Yet the whole basis of the proper view depends on recognizing the fact there are definitely true and false forms of worship. The standard for this judgment is not human opinion, but statements the creator of man has made as to what constitutes true worship.

Another feature of the Sunday afternoon program was a 30-minute demonstration of a model congregational Bible study arrangement. This was handled by one of the 16 presiding ministers present at the assembly. It featured the theme "The Implanting of the Word."

Weining concluded the assembly with an exhortation for those gathered to "Maintain Their Conduct Fine Among the Nations." Immediately thereafter, scores of volunteers from among the delegates cooperated in removing convention equipment such as closed circuit TV systems, sound systems, cafeteria installations, and overflow seating.

Earnings climb 35 per cent for Great Eastern's parent

Daylin, Inc. first quarter sales topped $78 million and earnings climbed 35 percent to 70 cents per share versus 52 cents in the comparable period the year before, Amnon Barnes, board chairman, announced this week.

Daylin Inc. is the parent company for the local Great Eastern Discount Department Stores located in New Jersey and Long Island.

"The company sales pace is exceeding the $300-million-a-year volume which it had projected at the beginning of the fiscal year," Barnes noted. "Daylin pharmacists are filling prescriptions at a rate in excess of six million per year."

The first quarter reflects operating results of the multi-management drug company for 13 weeks ending Nov. 30, with comparative figures for 13 weeks ending Dec. 1, 1968. Sales and other income totaled $78,216,000 for the period compared to $23,606,000 the year before. Current figures include results from Diana Stores Corp. which was acquired as a purchase in April, 1968, while last year's figures do not.

Net earnings rose to $1,279,000 from $761,000 while stockholders' equity per share at the end of the period showed a sharp increase to $18.27 from a previous level of $10.02.

Barnes noted that three acquisitions are pending on which an agreement in principle has been reached which would add another estimated $30 million in sales when they are completed.

The number of shares issued and outstanding at the end of the period totaled 1,801,946, up from last year's 1,577,431. Earnings per share are based on the average number of shares outstanding during the period.

The figures for earnings per share, shares issued and outstanding and stockholders' equity for the current and comparable quarter have not been restated to give effect to the two-for-one stock split which became effective Dec. 30, one month following the close of the first quarter's business.

Upsala will offer computing classes, starting Jan. 28

With the installation of a $101,315 computer facility later this month, Upsala College will be offering courses in computing for the first time at its evening and day sessions, starting Jan. 28.

Because of the heavy registration demand for computer courses, Upsala will hold unprecedented Saturday morning sessions in addition to its regular evening and daytime classes.

John White, director of the general studies division (evening sessions), said no previous knowledge of computer programming is required. Students who have had previous computer experience will be encouraged to proceed with more sophisticated programming applied to the topics being considered.

The introduction to computers course will be offered on Monday and Wednesday nights from 6:15 to 8:50 and on Saturday mornings from 9 to 12:45. The more advanced course of information processing will be given on Friday nights from 6:15 to 10.

Classes will be held in Upsala's new $2.6 million science building, Puder Hall, where the computer also will be situated. The system consists of an IBM 1130 computer with 8,000 words of memory and a disk having 500,000 words of memory. Peripheral equipment included a card punch-read and a printer. Three card punch machines are available for punching programs.

IN ADDITION, Upsala will offer a variety of other evening courses ranging from choir conducting to federal taxes and law. Charles Pierce, director of Model Cities for East Orange, will teach the course, "The American City and Social Change," on Tuesday and Thursday evenings. The community oriented course will be of special interest to those actively involved in the planning of model cities, Director White said.

Professor Richard Toensing, director of Upsala's 48-member choir which will go on tour for the 30th time this year, will teach a course in "Choral Conducting and Repertoire" on Monday evenings. Yoshi Higa, an Okinawa born artist, will teach drawing and painting on Tuesday evenings and Professor Delbert Earlsman will conduct a Shakespear-

'Spinning' wheels

Spinning your car's wheels will only melt ice and snow and reduce traction, warns the Allstate Motor Club. Always apply power slowly and creep gently forward. In a pinch, you can use rubber floor mats from your car placed in front of the rear wheels to obtain extra traction to get you going again. Never let anyone stand directly behind a spinning wheel, which can throw debris.

Jets, Raiders lead Sandmeier league; Pirates jolt Chiefs

In Sandmeier Small-Fry League play Saturday, the Jets and the Raiders posted impressive victories to remain undefeated.

The Jets put on another offensive display in trouncing the Chargers, 17-2. Steve Schlein played another good game for the Jets, as he paced both squads with eight points. Rich Green was also outstanding for the winners, getting two big buckets. Jeff Schnee and Mike Wittenberg also contributed to the Jets' attack. Paul Kanengiser gave the Chargers their only points with a pair of first-period free throws. Paul played well throughout the game, as did Ira Starr, who was outstanding on defense.

The Raiders kept pace with a 15-8 victory over the Comets. The Raiders jumped off fast in the game and held off a strong Comet rally in the second half. Kenny Fingerhut scored 12 of the Raiders' 15 points. Neil Meisel and Elliott Buzin were outstanding on defense for the winners, while Mike Patetta also contributed to the victory. Dave Baronck led the Comets with six points and played well at both ends of the court. Mike Cooper also looked good for the Comets, as did Frank Zahn and Steve Geltman.

Joe Gelwary's spinning shot with five seconds left gave the Pirates a 16-14 victory over the Chiefs. Joel was outstanding throughout the game, scoring 11 points to give the Pirates their initial victory. Mike Lemmerman and Gary Pedinoff were tough on defense for the winners and each chipped in with a big bucket. Dave Iranson and John Frieri shared the load for the Chiefs. Dave played well and had six points while John added five. Rick Minster was the Chiefs' defensive star.

The Rockets hit six free throws in a defensive battle with the Tigers to down the Tigers, 6-0. Kenny Feld had three points to lead the winners, while Mike Blackman, Mitch Slater and Stu Brummer had one foul shot each. Brummer's defense held the Tigers without a score, with Blackman and Slater helping. Paul Kiesel, Art Salman and Marc McCourt played very well in a losing cause. All three were mainly responsible for holding the Rockets without a field goal.

Documentary film to be shown today for Hadassah unit

Springfield Chapter of Hadassah will meet tonight at 8 at Temple Beth Ahm in Springfield. A color film, "The Goal is Peace," a new documentary of Israel "emerging from the six-day battle to face new and difficult problems of winning the peace" will be shown, according to a chapter spokesman.

Hadassah is working toward a two-year community college designed to serve students of "limited background" who seek higher education. Education authorities in Israel hope that Hadassah can evolve a pattern which would be useful for a series of similar regional colleges which the government envisages as an inevitable part of Israel's education growth plan.

Hadassah's community college will be located within the existing facilities of the present Seligsberg School complex in Jerusalem. The facilities of both the Hadassah-Alice Seligsberg Comprehensive High School and the Brandeis Vocational Training Center will be used. President of Springfield Hadassah is Mrs. Laurence Goodman, and the program chairman is Mrs. Leon Berger. Mrs. Berger is planning a humorous fashion show for the February meeting and has asked anyone who has vintage clothing, hats, accessories from the '20s or '30s to call her at 379-9413. Especially wanted are a racoon coat and other old furs, she said.

Time To Spare By Gerald Andrews - Retirement Advisor

THE SECOND HUNDRED YEARS
The Assistant Commissioner for Public Affairs of the Social Security Administration came up with an intriguing title for a recent article. Writing in Harvest Years, Russell R. Jalbert discussed "The Second Hundred Years"... meaning, the number of Americans on the Social Security rolls who have passed the century mark. Number—3,200. Of course, that's a round number that fluctuates when you get to specifics. But it shows that reaching the ripe old age of one hundred is not quite as rare as one might think. The interesting thing is that some of our centenarians remain active. For instance, John Newhard of Allentown, Pennsylvania, worked at a cemetery as its manager until he was one hundred and two years old. Mr. Jalbert mentions the following interesting examples of longevity and hardihood. "Thomas Anderson, one hundred and one, still does surveying in Greenwood County, S.C. Anderson has been a licensed surveyor for eighty years.... "Charlie Smith, one hundred and twenty-seven, still sells soft drinks at his little store in Bartow, Fla." We are told by the Social Security official that Charlie Smith is "the oldest social security beneficiary."

How do centenarians feel about the way the world is going? What about the hippies, etc.? "No generation is perfect," says Charlie Steuer of Tarrytown, N.Y., who is one hundred and one. "They're no worse than my generation... The so-called bad ones get more publicity, that's all." It would be ungalant to close this column without bringing in the ladies. Annie Risinger of Ringoes, N.J., is one hundred and two. She disapproves of slacks and minis. She smiles when she recalls the old days when skirts reached the ground. Mrs. Anna Moten of Jackson, Tenn., one hundred and two years old, was active as a child, and remains active as a centenarian. "I used to saw trees, and not knowing which way they'd fall, I'd just outrun them."

A lively group, our centenarians, maybe the first hundred years are the hardest. Mr. and Mrs. Richard Kessler of Cornmack, N.Y., became the parents of a daughter, Melissa Bath, Jan. 10 at St. Barnabas Medical Center. Mrs. Kessler is the former Naomi Kurtz of Springfield.

Stork Club

Mr. and Mrs. Allen Rubel of Clark became the parents of a daughter, Lisa Michelle, Jan. 7 at St. Barnabas Medical Center, Livingston. Mrs. Rubel is the former Judith Lawit of Springfield. Mr. and Mrs. Richard Kessler of Cornmack, N.Y., became the parents of a daughter, Melissa Bath, Jan. 10 at St. Barnabas Medical Center. Mrs. Kessler is the former Naomi Kurtz of Springfield.

Miss VanArsdale married Saturday to Fred E. Clow

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin D. Harris of Gillette have announced the marriage of Susan VanArsdale, of New York, formerly of Mountainside, to Fred E. Clow 2nd of Boston, son of Dr. John H. Clow of Lebanon, N.H.

The marriage took place Saturday at the Westminster Presbyterian Church, Berkeley Heights. The Rev. Robert B. Sheldon officiated. The bride was given in marriage by Mr. Harris. Mrs. Cheryl Boyer of Merchantville was matron of honor. Theodore Ushers of New York City served as best man. Ushers were William V. Smalley, brother-in-law of the groom, of Briarcliff Manor, N.Y., and Richard B. Reynolds and John J. Murray of Boston.

The bride is a graduate of Gov. Livingston Regional High School, Berkeley Heights, and the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, Division of Physical Therapy. She was formerly a supervisor in the Neurological Institute of Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center, New York.

Her husband, a graduate of Hebron Academy, Hebron, Maine, and Colgate University, Hamilton, N.Y., is employed in the Mutual Funds Division of State Street Bank and Trust Co. Boston. Following a two-week honeymoon in Aspen and Vail, Colorado, the couple will make their home in Boston.

Miss Fitzsimmons sets June wedding

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph P. Fitzsimmons of 151 Linden ave., Springfield, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Patricia Ann to William Thurlow Newell, son of Mrs. Thurlow Newell of Englewood, Colo., and the late Mr. Newell. The bride-elect is a graduate of Jonathan Dayton Regional High and the University of Colorado at Boulder. She is on the nursing staff of General Rose Hospital in Denver. Her fiancé, an alumnus of the University of Colorado and a member of Sigma Chi Fraternity is presently attending the University of Arizona. A June 6 wedding in St. Rose of Lima Church, Short Hills, is planned.

Area Witnesses hear lecture on 'True Worship vs. False'

"True Worship versus the False" was the theme of the lecture attended by an overflow crowd of 2,836 Jehovah's Witnesses at Thomas Jefferson High School in Elizabeth Sunday afternoon. "That lecture was one of the high lights of the three-day convention," according to Felice Episcopo, spokesman for the Witnesses from the Springfield area. "Another highlight," he continued, "was the baptism of 60 new ministers on Saturday morning." C. H. Weining, the district supervising minister of the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society, the speaker, made distinctions between right and wrong methods of worship. Weining said: "The modern religious spirit today is to be liberal and to worship God any way a person desires. People maintain that only a fanatical egotist would claim that his way of worship is right and others are wrong. "Yet the whole basis of the proper view depends on recognizing the fact there are definitely true and false forms of worship. The standard for this judgment is not human opinion, but statements the Creator of man has made as to what constitutes true worship." Another feature of the Sunday afternoon program was a 30-minute demonstration of a model congregational Bible study arrangement. This was handled by one of the 16 presiding ministers present at the assembly. It featured the theme, "The Implanting of the Word." Weining concluded with an exhortation for those gathered to "Maintain Their Conduct Fine Among the Nations." Immediately thereafter, scores of volunteers from among the delegates cooperated in removing convention equipment such as closed circuit TV systems, sound systems, cafeteria installations and overflow seats.

Winter though it be, peaches and pears can add an exotic note to any meal and yet be easy on the budget. In canned form, these fine fruits are not only available but in plentiful supply.

"one generation tells another...about fine furniture at Hahne & Company"

Ask Amy

By AMY ADAMS

Dear Amy: I don't know how to start this letter, but please study it over and tell me what you think is best.

Six months ago, my granddaughter, who is an alcoholic, asked me to come over to her house. As soon as I got inside she knocked me down with her fist, jumped on my stomach with both knees and beat me. I am 62 years old and have had 6 operations. I've been mostly sick all my life. She knew I could not fight back so she held me down and told me that she was beating me to get even with my 40 year old son for something he did. Since he is a strong man and probably would fight back, she took it out on me. She beat me half to death. I have been treated for bruises and my nerves ever since.

Her mother, my oldest daughter, took up for her when I complained to her. I feel so rejected and disheartened. I pray God will repay them for the way they treated me.

A Grandmother Dear Grandmother: I read your letter with horror! I don't know what kind of relationship that you have with your children and grandchildren, however, it is illegal for anyone to strike a person without provocation. Regardless of their relationship to you, if I were you, I would disown the members of the family who had the nerve to treat you unkindly and never have anything to do with them again in any way, shape or form.

Dear Amy: Please tell me which is right: Absence makes the heart grow fonder for somebody else, or is it this way: Absence makes the heart grow fonder.

My friend and I had a discussion over this and do not know which one is correct.

Dear A.N.: The quotation that you inquire about was written by Thomas Haynes Bayly (1797-1839) and it reads: "Absence makes the heart grow fonder."

This quotation is from the Marty Ferns PHOTOGRAPHER DISTINGUISHED PORTRAITURE 252 MOUNTAIN AVE. SPRINGFIELD, N.J. 07081 379-7666 CLOSED WEDNESDAYS poem "Isle of Beauty"

Dear Amy: You may not want to print this letter since it deals with a subject that is not in keeping with the usual material you publish, but I still would like to express my thoughts on the young generation of America.

The papers are full of reports of the small minority that is attempting to change the "establishment". Unfortunately little news space is devoted to the deeds and accomplishment of the great majority of young are contributing to our society.

Though I, too, feel that change is necessary, I have great faith in that our youth will gain the maturity necessary, along with the schooling that has taught them to think for themselves, to continue the world leadership this country has maintained for so many years.

People say "save us from our youth". I still say "our youth will save us!" Mr. L. Weiss (Berlin, N.J.)

Dear Amy: I would certainly appreciate your help. I am 17 years old and I'm in love with this man

Eight budget-savers for the wise shopper

By MARY LEE

With food prices what they are, it might be neat to start the New Year with a plan that makes good "cents." Even if you don't exactly have to count pennies, it's nice to have a few extra for special events.

Most of the wise shoppers we know have a plan they follow to keep the budget on the straight and narrow. The eight budget-savers listed here are typical.

1. It's a good habit to check your local newspapers for money-saving specials, then plan your menus around them.

2. Before you start to shop, plan menus completely, too. If you jot down items by departments as they're stocked in the store you'll also save time and energy.

3. But take time to read labels and compare grades, sizes, brands. They can be the key to added savings. For example, use canned whole fruits for salads and cut up varieties for a baked dessert.

4. Consider ready-to-heat foods, too. Some cost less than those made at home. Canned soups are a case in point, and look at the time they save, too.

5. Cook with evaporated or instant nonfat dry milk. Both supply the same important nutrients as whole milk but at a big saving. Also they taste equally good in puddings, gravies, white sauces.

6. When you compare prices of meats and poultry remember to discount the bones. A rule of thumb is four servings from a pound of boneless meat; two servings from a pound with bone in it.

7. Think of bacon as an extender as well as a breakfast dish. Add a few slices cooked and diced to scrambled eggs, potato salad, macaroni, other leftovers to give them more protein and flavor.

8. Be creative, with leftovers, canned foods or sale-priced items. For instance, mix left-over vegetables and sea food with condensed vegetable soup and stewed tomatoes for a quick gumbo. Or add leftover ham or sausage to a can of beans in tomato sauce for a one-dish meal.

Canned salmon stirred into left-over mashed potatoes with a bit of grated onion makes great "pancakes." Just pat into shape, brown, and serve.

Canned ripe olives are fine for making leftovers seem elegant, too. Slice them in spaghetti, noodles, coleslaw, casseroles, and salads.

Need a quick dessert? Pour canned applesauce into a buttered pie plate. Sprinkle with macaroon crumbs and a dash of cinnamon. Bake until bubbly brown, and serve warm with a splash of cream.

Eye, aye, the miniskirt is here to stay

Rutgers study links hemlines, handwriting

To the legions of dedicated girl watchers, probably no fashion trend during the last four decades has been more appreciated than the miniskirt.

They were disheartened last year when a Rutgers University sociologist and assorted fashion experts predicted the doom of the short, short skirt.

But the sociologist, John A. Becker, after diligent research and data collecting, has changed his original prediction and now is confident that the short skirt is here to stay despite recent attempts by designers to reverse the international trend.

The hypothesis of his study was that individuals tend to seek personal expression in many seemingly unrelated ways, such as handwriting and mode of dress.

Becker used the miniskirt as the focal point of a class project on "the practical aspects of social research techniques." Sociology students enrolled in Rutgers University College, the evening degree-granting program at the Camden campus, collected the signatures of 400 women and noted the length of the skirt each was wearing.

THE SIGNATURES WERE given to a handwriting expert and then a correlation was made between a woman's preference for either the mini (anything shorter than one inch above the knee) or the traditional length (one inch above to below the knee) and the analysis of her handwriting.

On the basis of the leg work done by the student researchers, the study by Becker's team, which included a psychologist as well as a graphologist, indicated that "extroverted females are more likely to sport a mini than their less out-going sisters."

Yet, it was noted that most miniskirted women were of the personality type who might have a negative self-image. The inference is that mini-clad gals are somewhat insecure and, in turn, may feel a need to express their womanhood rather dramatically through their form of dress.

Becker says, incidentally, that if it had not been for the development of new hosiery, the miniskirt movement "never would have gotten off the ground — much less above the knee."

While only one out of seven women today wears a true miniskirt, the hemline is gradually and consistently going up among the "in-betweeners," who for certain personal or psychological reasons cannot openly accept the short mode.

TRACING THE HIKED hemline back to the ancient Greeks, Becker theorizes that "short skirts and big paychecks crop up together in history. During an era of affluence, women are more likely to let themselves go."

The Rutgers sociologist looks upon the short culotte wearer as an "imposter," and says "women who have adopted this fashion want people to think they are confident, enticing and aggressive."

While the fashion industry has successfully introduced the maxicoat and the pants suit, designers still will be unable to reverse the upward creeping hemline, according to Becker.

He says women are reluctant to relinquish this new "degree of naughtiness" which was last made available to their grandmothers during the Roaring Twenties.

And he further assures girl watchers that "if a change does come, we can be certain it will not be the females' doing."

The blazer is back in fashions for men with look of 1900's

Modern motor modes for men are as different from those of the past as a 1970 automobile is from a turn of the century horseless carriage. However, there are some excellent fashions of the 1920's and 1930's, as well as some dating back to the 1900's, that are influencing today's super-highway styles.

The current popular double-breasted blazer has the same broad sweeping lapels, accentuated "shape" and longer lines that marked clothing of the 1900's. The deeply rolled brims on the new felts are reminiscent of the curled brims of the old derbies, too. Of course, the old hard collars are now replaced by long-pointed casual styles and the little bow tie has evolved into the flowing Apache scarf.

Knickers moved from the golf links to other casual uses during the 1920's and were a very popular style for driving. However, today's flared slacks are more comfortable and more practical. Smart modern motorists often top their flares with shapely sport coats some of which add the final flourish of a matching vest. And, rather than old laced oxfords, today's smart driver wears squared-toe monk strap shoes.

The single-breasted blazer is a classic that can be "dress-up" or "dress-down." It's a fine coat for motoring, especially when dressed-down with a knitted sport shirt, a V-neck sweater and bold plaid slacks. A foulard ascot lends the sophisticated touch.

OF SKIRTS AND SCRIPT — There's a definite connection, says a sociologist at Rutgers College of South Jersey, between hemlines and handwriting. The way she writes, says John A. Becker, can indicate the length of a woman's skirts. He also says the mini (anything shorter than an inch above the knee) is here to stay.

Acetate, triacetate fibers are marked by versatility

Many people consider acetate and rayon fibers as the same because of the early history of the first man-made fibers.

However, they are two distinct fiber groups, and in 1952 acetate was made, by law, a separate classification from rayon.

Further distinction was completed when during the 1950's, triacetate was further refined from the acetate generic fiber group.

A major difference between acetate and triacetates are the "easy care" fibers of this classification.

Acetate is the oldest thermoplastic fiber, while triacetate is one of the newest. Both fibers compare favorably with rayon on cost and versatility of use.

Acetate and triacetate are good conductors of heat; however, they are not quite as cool to wear as rayon because of their non-absorptive nature. They do not absorb water and perspiration as readily as rayon. Acetates are subject to static electricity unless special finishes are applied.

The natural color for acetates is pure white and the usual dyeing techniques have been a problem with gas fading of blue being the major problem. The "solution dyeing" process and special finishes have been most successful to the extent that now most acetates have good color-fastness to sunlight and cleaning processes.

Strength is not an outstanding quality of acetates. However, they do have greater tensile strength than rayon.

These fibers are naturally bright and lustrous, and if delustrated, there is less resistance to sunlight.

County meets minimal nursing needs, according to Union College survey

Union County has almost enough nurses to give adequate and safe care, according to a study of Union County nursing needs made by Miss Suzanne Law, director of nursing education at Perth Amboy General Hospital, for Union College, Cranford.

However, future nursing needs may not be met by sheer numbers, Miss Law's study asserts. In anticipating nursing needs, the population composition and the educational level of the nursing profession must also be considered, she stated.

Union County's active nurse population of 2,810 registered nurses and 892 licensed practical nurses falls within the surgeon general's estimate that four registered nurses and two practical nurses per thousand population meets minimal needs, Miss Law reported. Union County's population is 577,400.

The Union College study was undertaken for the Union County Coordinating Agency for Higher Education to examine the current production of nurses and the need for them in the health facilities of the county.

While Union County has passed its peak growth period, with a population increase of only 67,500 anticipated over the next ten years, the static population in the county tends to be an aging one, with different demands from health services than a younger population. The report states that health services are growing, but chronic care requires almost five times as much nursing service as care for acute communicable diseases.

ALSO RELEVANT to nursing needs is the educational level of the nurses themselves. According to criteria established in the program review report of the Nurse Training Act of 1964, 12 percent of all nurses should have master's degrees, 24 percent baccalaureate degrees, and 63 percent diplomas and associate degrees, Miss Law said.

The greatest shortage in New Jersey, and subsequently in Union County, is with the baccalaureate and higher degree nurse population, Miss Law reports.

Nursing leaders and employers of nurses indicate there is urgent need for raising educational levels for nurses. The types of responsibilities that nurses are asked to take, in addition to the leadership skills they must possess to coordinate the work of the many people who assist in care for patients, point to higher education for nurses," she states.

This shortage is not expected to decrease under the present nursing education system in New Jersey. Only one school in the entire state offers a master's degree in nursing and only six have baccalaureate programs. In addition, many promising young nurses seek advanced education elsewhere and do not return to New Jersey, according to Miss Law. Union County has two diploma schools and two schools of practical nursing. In 1968, Union County produced 73 registered nurses and 82 practical nurses. Only in-county migration forestalled an acute nursing shortage and vacancies exist on the nursing staffs of all of the county's ten hospitals, Miss Law reported.

NURSING EDUCATION in the state of New Jersey has lagged behind other states whose populations can be considered comparable, Miss Law reports. A preliminary state master plan is being drawn up to fill production gaps, and at the same time, spread educational institutions offering programs in nursing throughout the state.

In addition, the New Jersey State Nurses Association and the New Jersey League for Nursing are also integrally involved in planning for the future. The goal of the association is to eliminate non-collegiate institutions as soon as the colleges can assume responsibility for nursing care, Miss Law said. These include four-year baccalaureate programs and two-year colleges granting associate degrees.

Based on data collected during her study, Miss Law proposes seven alternatives for Union College and other institutions to consider in the field of nursing education. The first would be to continue to assist diploma programs. Union College has participated in nursing education for the past 20 years by offering credit courses in English, psychology, sociology and science to first-year student nurses from Elizabeth and Perth Amboy General Hospitals.

The other alternatives, all of which, Miss Law says, require further study to determine feasibility and possibility, include: pre-nursing course work for transfer into a baccalaureate program; several designs for associate degree in nursing to include practical and diploma students, and experimentally designed programs.

GEORGE SHERIDAN JR.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — George Sheridan, Jr. of Union, N.J., was awarded the Master of Divinity degree during the January 1970 graduation exercises at the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary here.

He was one of more than 130 students to receive a degree from the seminary during the winter commencement.

Sheridan is a 1967 graduate of Eastern Baptist College in St. Davids, Pa. He formerly was associated with the Suburban Publishing Corp., publisher of this newspaper, handling assignments on Union, Linden, Roselle, Roselle Park, Springfield and Mountainside.

During the commencement exercises tomorrow in the Alumni Memorial Chapel on the seminary campus, Clifton J. Allen, retired editorial secretary of the Sunday School Board of the Southern Baptist Convention and a 1928 graduate of Southern Seminary, will deliver the commencement address.

Southern Seminary was founded in 1859 in Greenville, S. C., and the school was moved to Louisville, Ky., in 1877. The school, with a faculty now numbering about 70, annually provides graduate instruction in theology, church music and religious education to more than 1,300 students.

Approval withheld on partial closing of Elizabeth RR depot

Action has been taken by the State Board of Public Utility Commissioners to prevent the Penn Central Railroad from closing its Elizabeth passenger station waiting rooms "certain hours" until the board can determine if the closing will be harmful to the public interest.

Under the proposed new schedule, the waiting rooms would be open from 6 a.m. to 8 p.m., Mondays through Fridays and 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturdays. They would also be closed Sundays and holidays. Initial investigation by board staff indicates that 142 trains a week stop to discharge and accept passengers during the hours the waiting rooms would be closed.

"Penn Central's proposal is an apparent response to complaints that the station has become a home for derelicts and other undesirable," the board said. "They maintain that the closing of the waiting rooms during these hours will rid the area of derelicts. Complaints about the station, however, were not limited to the presence of derelicts. An informal petition from users of the passenger station complained of unsanitary conditions as well."

An informal conference between the staff of the board's Division of Railroads, officials of the City of Elizabeth and Penn Central management was held Jan. 9, to determine what the railroad would do to improve conditions. It was at this conference that Penn Central officials proposed a plan to partially close the waiting rooms.

A letter from the board to Penn Central maintains that "no determination can be reached in this matter until Penn Central gives detailed reasons for the partial closing, a proposed schedule for railroad police patrol, details of the arrangements for opening and closing the waiting rooms and, most importantly, a survey of the number of railway patrons per hour using trains at the station during the proposed closing time."

The board has also requested evidence that the City of Elizabeth is agreeable to the closing and that arrangements have been made with the Elizabeth police department for adequate patrolling.

Tiller appointed county chairman for CP telethon

Edward H. Tiller, director of the Board of Chosen Freeholders, has been named Union County chairman for the nineteenth annual United Cerebral Palsy telethon on Channel 9 from 10:30 p.m. Saturday through 5:30 p.m. Sunday. Starring again this year will be Steve Lawrence and Eydie Gorme, Dennis James and Jane Pickens.

Tiller said that all pledges phoned in from Union County will be returned to the local treatment center at 216 Holly St., Cranford.

Tiller noted that "people are unaware that the Cerebral Palsy Center for Union County is the agency which in many cases transforms helpless limbs and uncoordinated muscles into children and adults who can learn, communicate and attain some degree of self-dependence. The center offers many therapeutic, educational and vocational programs on an outpatient basis for children and adults with physical and mental defects so that they can lead relatively satisfying and useful lives."

Tiller is in his fourth term as a freeholder and third year as a director of the board. He has been chairman of the roads and bridges committee and also the purchasing committee. He has served on administration, public affairs and public property committees. He is an ex-officio member of the Welfare Board, the Planning Board, and the Board of Estimates for the Union County Vocational and Technical Institute. He has served as mayor of Garwood for four terms and Garwood councilman for two terms. He is also a trustee of Union College.

Workers' rally to kick off Heart Fund's campaign

The February Heart Fund drive will be kicked off at 5 p.m. Sunday during a workers rally in the Town and Campus, Union, it was announced this week by State Senator Matthew J. Rinaldo, chairman of the Union County Heart Association's fund drive.

Harold Sherman of Elizabeth, chairman of the Union County Heart Association board of directors, will open the session, which is expected to be attended by 200 volunteer workers.

Leonard Mackie, two-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Mackie of Union, will light a torch signifying the start of the month-long drive in Union County. Leonard, who has successfully undergone heart surgery, is serving this year as "Little Mr. Heart Fund."

Mrs. Henrietta Froehlich, executive director of the Union County Heart Association, will serve as moderator of a panel discussion on fund raising. Panelists will discuss door-to-door solicitation, mail appeals, business gifts and special donations.

Senator Rinaldo said the panel discussion format was adopted two years ago. "We want to arm our volunteer workers with all possible information, so they can collect the most money possible during this campaign," he said.

Every state protects against wage losses

All states have unemployment insurance laws which protect workers against wage losses caused by economic unemployment. In addition, all states have workmen's compensation laws which protect employees against wage losses caused by work-connected accidents or illnesses.

Only five states and Puerto Rico provide such protection when the wage loss is caused by a disability which is not work-connected, said. "The headlines dealing with heart transplants in the past year have made the American public more heart-conscious than ever before. If ever there was a time to out-do ourselves raising funds to defeat our number one killer, this is it."

Guests were greeted by Mrs. Dominic Menzaco of Linden, chairman of the county association's special meetings committee.

Thompson named industry head for Heart Fund drive

Robert C. Thompson, assistant personnel director of White Laboratories, Kentwood, has been named industrial chairman for the Union County Heart Association's February fund drive. His appointment was announced by State Senator Matthew J. Rinaldo of Union, chairman of the county drive. Thompson has served in a similar capacity since 1966.

A graduate of Morristown High School and Lehigh University, Thompson also has studied at the New York University Management Institute.

Thompson is a former Union County advisor to Junior Achievement. He has served as solicitations chairman for Union County Boy Scout Fund drive. A former member of the Morris County Heart Association, he served in 1961 as chairman for Morristown.

In accepting the industrial chairmanship, Thompson said he was "conscious of the tremendous need for funds to fight our nation's number one killer. Heart disease can be conquered if we raise enough money."

Post offices seek clerks and carriers

A new announcement for clerks and carriers in first and second class post offices in New Jersey, excluding Camden County, has been issued by the Interagency Board of U.S. Civil Service Examiners for New Jersey. No special experience or training is necessary and the written test is open to both men and women.

All appointments will be made to substitute positions and will be either career or temporary. Substitutes replace absent regular employees or supplement the regular complement. Advancement to regular positions is made according to seniority of career substitute appointment.

Career appointees receive such benefits as paid vacation and sick leave, low cost life and health insurance, periodic pay increases and uniform allowance. They are covered by the civil service retirement plan and employees compensation.

Substitutes receive $3.06 an hour for regular time, $3.37 an hour between 6 p.m. and 6 a.m., and $4.59 an hour overtime. Initial appointment almost always involves irregular hours, shifts or night work. The best opportunities are in the large urban post offices, especially in the northern part of the state.

Complete information about these opportunities is contained in announcement NJ-0-01 available at the larger post offices or from the Federal Job Information Center, 970 Broad St., Newark, N.J. 07102. The center's phone number is 645-3673.

UN planning expansion

Overcrowding has long been a problem at the United Nations. Because it is estimated that by 1979 the New York staff will have grown from 3,572 to 5,251 members, the General Assembly has given the go-ahead for a $75 million expansion program.

Rising construction costs have increased the original price from $50 million to the present estimate. Of the estimated $73.4 million building cost, $25 million will come from the United Nations budget. Most of the remainder will be provided by private and government sources in the U.S.; the Rockefeller and Ford Foundations contributed to the original plan.

The plans call for an eight-story office building to be built south of the present headquarters complex on Manhattan's East River. The UN is now compelled to rent off-site office space at a cost of approximately 1-1/2 million annually. A park to meet the recreation needs of the diplomats as well as of New York City residents is also blueprint.

The expansion proposal may run into opposition from delegations who complain about the difficulties of life in New York and who would prefer to see more of the organization's facilities moved overseas.

'70s manpower picture termed bright by U. S.

WASHINGTON — Full and rising employment, highlighted by greater demand for well-educated and well-trained workers, has been forecast for the 1970s by Assistant Labor Secretary Jerome M. Rosow.

"The Seventies open as a decade of continued growth and expansion of the vibrant American economy," he said. "Manpower supply will increase by 15 million workers and demand will be in approximate balance, so that we can foresee a period of rising and full employment."

ROSWO ALSO CITED these projections of the Bureau of Labor Statistics for the coming decade:

- The real squeeze in demand will be for managers and supervisors in the 30-45 age range, and their ranks "show no significant growth in numbers during the 70's."
- The demand for professional and technical workers will increase by about 45 percent — twice as fast as demand for all workers.
- The demand for white-collar workers will increase by about 50 percent. "Technological advances and computers will not solve clerical shortages."
- Half the total population will be under 30, but about 40 percent will be over 45.
- All levels of government will need 40 percent more workers "to cope with the needs of a population of 243 million people."
- Steady de-escalation in Vietnam and ultimate Vietnamization of the war will release hundreds of thousands of servicemen and upwards of 750,000 civilian defense production workers will move across the labor force.

A Bureau of Labor Statistics analysis shows that "a rough overall balance between the supply and demand for college-education personnel is likely" for the 1970's, Rosow said. He termed this "a major turning point after a long period of shortages." The analysis also projects a greatly expanded supply of Negro graduates by 1972 and beyond.

ROSWO MADE these additional observations for the 1970's:

- The high demand for professional and technical workers, a 45 percent increase that is twice the national rate, "should encourage a critical look at college recruitment."
- There will be "possible surpluses" of elementary and secondary teachers that will provide "a new manpower pool."
- Shortages of engineering graduates will require continued upgrading of technicians, employment and training of non-engineering graduates as substitutes, and job redesign to simplify entrance requirements.
- Workers already with companies represent an untapped potential which management cannot ignore.

Management's task "is to continue to make the free enterprise system work but to make it work better," Rosow emphasized.

Seton Hall plans 1st women's dorm; to accommodate 300

Seton Hall University has released plans for its first women's dormitory which is scheduled for occupancy in September 1971 on the South Orange campus. The new facility will accommodate 300 coeds and will rise five stories on the site of three present barracks structures which are a carryover from the post World War II years.

Robert J. DeValle, vice-president for business affairs, said that the decision to house women on the South Orange campus "is a natural one since the university admitted young women in the daytime undergraduate program for the first time in February 1968.

"We now have more than 1,100 young women out of an enrollment of 4,200 matriculating in South Orange," he said. "Many of these girls come from quite a distance to attend the University and as a consequence have sought lodging in homes in the surrounding communities or because of lack of accommodations have experienced inordinate commutation burden. It is only right that they should be able to experience the full measure of campus life if they so desire."

The residence hall, designed by Walter Kidde Constructors, Inc., will be built facing Bayley Hall, an administrative complex, and will contain 60,000 square feet. Each floor will have its own study lounge and kitchen facilities. There will also be a ground level social lounge and laundry areas.

The building will be funded by a government loan of $2,235,000.

Management's task "is to continue to make the free enterprise system work but to make it work better," Rosow emphasized.

Lehigh joins pollution war

BETHLEHEM, Pa. — A group of Lehigh University students and faculty, concerned about the rising environmental crisis, will participate in a nationwide environmental "teach-in" scheduled for April 22.

The Lehigh Ecology Action Group, numbering some 100 students and faculty after only a month of existence, plans to take part in the event by presenting recognized authorities on various facets of the growing pollution crisis.

Dr. Francis J. Trembley, nationally known ecologist and professor of biology at Lehigh who has been in the forefront of the fight against the pollution of our environment for many years, is associated with the group.

Coordinated from the Office of Senator Gaylord Nelson, Wisconsin Democrat, the national day of observance of environmental problems is intended to drive home to the American public the fact that the nation's and world's "quality of life" is deteriorating, and to stress the need for action to stop the trend.

'Santa Vittoria' on three screens

Three RKO-Stanley-Warner theaters, the Millburn Cinema, the Union Theater, Union Center, and the Regent Theater, Elizabeth, opened with the much-awaited "The Secret of Santa Vittoria" yesterday.

Robust Anthony Quinn stars with Anna Magnani in the World War II comedy-drama about an Italian village hiding a million bottles of wine from the Germans in the war.

The stellar cast is composed of Virna Lisi, Sergio Franchi and Hardy Kruger. Saturday and Sunday matinees at the Millburn, Union and Regent will be "The Prince and the Pauper," Mark Twain's classic adventure story. The picture (not a cartoon) has never before been shown anywhere.

Frankly-explicit movie held over on Art screen

The film that caused the most controversy in American movie houses in 1969, "I Am Curious (Yellow)," continues at the Art Theater, Irvington Center.

The producers say that the film "offers a creative attempt to give artistic voice to youth dissent from hypocrisy. It has a frank, explicit depiction of sexual relations in its storytelling." The movie for adults only, has Lena Nyman, Borge Ahlstedt and Peter Lindgren in leading roles. Vilgot Sjoman directed.

BERT CONVY is ace reported Hildy Johnson in Hecht-MacArthur's 1928 comedy classic, "The Front Page." Maureen O'Sullivan and Jan Sterling have joined the headline cast of the revival at the Ethel Barrymore Theatre, W. 47th street, New York.

TO APPEAR IN "JOE EGG" HOLLYWOOD — Shakespearean actress, Janet Suzman has been signed to co-star with Alan Bates in "Joe Egg," for Columbia Pictures. The screenplay is by Peter Nichols based on his play which was acclaimed on the London and Broadway stage.

'Lion In Winter' in two theaters

"The Lion In Winter," which won three Academy Awards including the Best Actress Award for its star, Katharine Hepburn, opened yesterday at two local theaters, The Mayfair in Hillside, and the Elmore in Elizabeth. The picture, which also stars Peter O'Toole, concerns a 12th century royal family, sparked with love-hate dialogue and internal power plays. Featured in the cast are Jane Marrow, John Castle, Timothy Dalton, Anthony Hopkins and Nigel Terry. Anthony Harvey directed the picture from the play and screenplay by James Goldman. The picture was produced in color.

At the Mayfair, the associate feature is "Lock Up Your Daughters," humorous film based on the restoration comedy, "Rape Upon Rape" and the London stage musical. Susanah York, Glynis Johns, Ian Bannen, Tom Bell, Jim Dale and Elaine Taylor have stellar roles. Peter Coe directed the picture.

Also at the Mayfair, the Saturday matinee offering is "The Nutty Professor," starring Jerry Lewis, and "Easy Come, Easy Go" starring Elvis Presley.

Saturday matinee at the Elmore features "Challenge of Robin Hood" and cartoons.

Bizarre movie held by Ormont Theater

"Putney Swope," the imaginative truth and soul movie, by movie satirist Robert Downey, continues at the Ormont Theater, East Orange. In his synopsis of the picture, Downey writes: "We're all in trouble no matter who we are unless we stop getting involved with systems, people and projects that we really, deep inside, don't want to get involved with. Also the most meaningful moment can be a moment of laughter."

Among his bizarre characters in a huge, amusing cast are Arnold Johnson and Laura Greene. The picture was filmed in color and black and white.

'Butch Cassidy' held

"Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid" goes into its sixth week at the Fox-Union Theater, Route 22, Union, this week. The picture, in color, stars Paul Newman, Robert Redford and Katharine Ross.

ROCK SINGER TO COMPOSE SCORE HOLLYWOOD — John Phillips, a member of the Mamas and the Papas folk rock musical group, has been signed to compose the score for 20th Century-Fox's "Myra Breckinridge."

The classical master behind the somewhat hippie facade

So much for looks. As for sounds, Hollander demonstrated his well-earned success in the musical scene. The program ranged from two sonatas by Scarlatti, to Prokofiev. No one piece could be named the highlight of the evening, although Sonata No. 7 by Prokofiev and Sonata No. 18 in G ("Fantasy") by Schubert allowed Hollander to utilize his skills. Particularly exciting was the final movement of the Prokofiev piece: it ended too soon for this listener. Hollander is not a technician like all too many of the concert pianists making the rounds these days. When playing, the piano becomes an extension of his own personality, becomes a part of him. Other pianists force the instrument to produce emotions; Hollander becomes one — his piano. When he cries, it cries; when he laughs, it laughs. Hollander limits his concert dates to 45 a year, plus some recording sessions. Fortunately, many of these concerts are in the area. Take advantage of location and hear him.

Top stars, plays at Meadowbrook

Two performances of the Pixie Judy Troupe during the pre-Christmas season at the Meadowbrook Theatre Restaurant served as a trial balloon to determine interest in a children's theater. As a result, children's theater now will become a regular part of Meadowbrook presentations.

Beginning Feb. 7 and on the first Saturday of the following months, the Pixie Judy Troupe will appear in a series of plays based on classic stories for children. This troupe was selected by the Theatre Guild as representing the best in children's theater.

Plans for the regular Meadowbrook audiences also are under way. Beginning with February, top Broadway shows are scheduled. Orson Bean, the first star in the 1970 luminery, will appear in "The Odd Couple" which will open Feb. 5. Henry Morgan will follow in "Generation," opening March 5. Comedienne Imogene Coca and Dorothy Collins also are scheduled for shows in the spring.

"The new year promises to be a banner year at the Meadowbrook," John Beaumont, president of Meadowbrook Productions, has predicted. "This past season has been received with great enthusiasm. Now we are planning a schedule of sparkling entertainment for our adult audiences, as well as other innovations, such as the Children's Theatre. We will continue to build on the already solid reputation for great entertainment that Meadowbrook has earned during the more than 30 years of its existence."

Pfaltz attacks Cahill's proposed sales tax boost

CHARTS CRISIS — Union County assemblyman (district 9B) Hugh M. Pfaltz Jr. shows chart he prepared indicating fiscal crisis he says will occur if Governor William T. Cahill's demand for an increase in the sales tax goes through.

"I believe that it would be foolhardy for the legislature to precipitously pass an increase in the state sales tax at the present time," Assemblyman Hugo M. Pfaltz, Jr. (R District 9B, Union County) said this week in challenging a request by Governor William T. Cahill for the immediate passage of legislation increasing the sales tax from 3 percent to 5 percent.

Cahill's request, made to the legislature at its opening session, noted that New Jersey is faced with built-in budget increases, which will leave a deficit of $300,000,000 or more between expenses and present State revenues during the next fiscal year which begins on July 1.

"Actually," said Pfaltz, "this deficit is nothing new. It is a reflection of the inherent budget gap which has existed since 1967-1968 between state revenues and state expense. This built-in budget gap was carefully explained in the report of the Governor's Commission to Evaluate the Capital Needs of New Jersey which was published in April 1968. The deficit has never been a state secret, and in 1968, I personally called attention to this emerging fiscal problem by preparing a chart for the legislature to show the magnitude of the growing budget gap."

Pfaltz said that for the fiscal years 1969 and 1970, the gap was closed by imposing small additional excise taxes and by accelerating certain tax receipts, all of which merely delayed but did not avert the coming fiscal crisis. "However," said the assemblyman, "now the crisis is upon us, and it is no time for the legislature to abdicate its responsibilities and panic."

"If we blindly follow Cahill's request, we will once again merely be accelerating receipt of 'one-shot' income without facing the essential problem of closing the budget gap. Thus, the addition of increased sales tax revenues during the final half of fiscal 1970, will leave the state with an apparent surplus which will obscure the need for basic re-consideration of New Jersey state revenues," Pfaltz said.

"By raising the sales tax now the extra revenue generated during the first half of 1970 may be applied against expenses to be incurred during the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1970 and ending June 30, 1971. But this gimmick will only delay the final day of reckoning which must come very soon."

Assemblyman Pfaltz said that he has "always been willing to accept responsibility for maintaining a balanced state budget; however it is unfair to continue stop-gap arrangements. If the legislature is going to increase the sales tax, it must make certain that the burden will fall proportionately on those who have the means to pay." He said that the legislature "should consider removing illogical sales tax exemptions, such as the exemption for purchases of expensive clothing."

"There is no doubt that a sales tax tends to weigh most heavily upon those who can least afford it," Pfaltz said. "Perhaps this burden was not unreasonable when the sales tax rate is low, but if we increase the tax rate, we must make certain that we will not impose unreasonable hardships on a large segment of our State's population."

Pfaltz said that he would prefer to consider an increase in the sales tax as another aspect of the total question of raising state revenues. "There are already tax sources, such as the real estate property tax, which have become virtually confiscatory in some communities, such as the City of Newark," he stated.

"Moreover there are other tax sources, such as the inheritance tax where rates have been raised arbitrarily. In considering sources of new revenues, I want to be sure we do not overlook reasonable claims for relief from current impositions," Pfaltz said.

"Furthermore," Pfaltz observed, "we should consider the proposed use of additional revenues as well as their sources." He noted that the legislature has already granted substantial salary increases for top cabinet officers. "Now," said Pfaltz, "it appears that the governor may be seeking to create new cabinet officers. In particular it appears that he intends to divide the Department of Banking and Insurance into two cabinet offices, namely the Department of Banking and the Department of Insurance."
