The Regional expansion plans get off the drawing board

The Regional High School District expansion bond proposal which will be presented to the voters of the six member communities on May 12, represents the distillation of ideas from the Regional board, professional consultants and the architectural firm of Elsasser and Miller of Union.

Frederick A. Elsasser, the senior partner of the firm, has specialized in school architecture for more than 40 years and planned the construction of the four buildings which currently serve the district.

To Elsasser, the duty of an architect includes more than the task of providing a building to meet his client's needs. "An important part of the architect's job," Elsasser, states, 'is trying to lift the sights of what school people are trying to do. We've been in the school business all our architectural lives, so to speak, and we've done schools all over the state."

Elsasser and Miller were the creators of the $4.5 million expansion proposal which was defeated at the polls in March, 1968, "We feel better prepared to deal-with the future than two years ago," Elsasser said. We're working under a different philosophy.

"Two years ago we were concerned with preserving the unity of Mountainside and Berkeley lieights. Now we're trying to keep all four schools more equal in size, It's a wedding of six communities, not two."

ELSASSER EXPLAINED the kind of architectural work that goes into preparation of a venture as complex as the expansion of four related high schools. He began with the backferences with the superintendent (Dr. Warren Davis), coordinators and principals, the architects submitted a memorandum in which they summarized the stated needs of all these administrators. The following October, an education consultant, Dr. Henry J. Rissetto, professor of education at Columbia University, offered a report which he had been contracted to provide.

"Our work was based on those needs," Elsasser said, "We formulated our schematic drawings which were submitted to the board and which were defeated in March 1968 by about votes," (approximately 53 percent op-

"The board decided to take another look at the plans and engaged Dr. Rissetto again for a more complete survey. Rissetto and the of the projected school populations of the six

"We then took this basic enrollment projected to 1974 or 1975 and sticking to the findings of the Rissetto report, we produced new sketches. In so doing, we more equalized the tizes of the schools." Elsasser added.

"More conferences were held and the principals formulated a very comprehensive and enlightening set of specifications of their needs. We then prepared new sketches with some feel even for the future development of educational philosophy."

AFIER 40 YEARS of school architecture, in which styles have moved from the traditional quality of Jonathan Dayton Regional (1937) to the mod look of Gov. Livingston Regional (1960) and David Brearley Regional (1966), the architect still keeps up with the latest trends. In his office one finds the most recent issues of such periodicals as American School Board Journal, American Schools and Universities, School Management and Progressive Architecture.

"These preliminary sketches went far and above what the board throught they could afford, so we were requested to set up with the principals a series of priorities which would satisfy the demands of the present with provisions for future development.

Elsasser then produced a copy of the sche-matics -- which will be made available for everyone to inspect -- and pointed to shaded areas representing the 1970 plan and dotted outlines for future construction. (A schematic sketch is like a cartoon. Unlike actual blueprints, schematics don't show electrical fixtures, sinks, doors, windows, etc. This makes them intelligible to nonprofessional eyes.) "The important thing is that we didn't close it in," Elsasser said, "Inever leave a building tied up."

'I'd say that 95 percent of architectural design is based on what's functional; then comes beauty. The only thing that makes architecture good is living in it for 10 to 15 years. Then you should ask whether or not a building is beautiful.''

Elsasser expressed disapproval of architectural gimmickry such as second story facades where there is nothing behind it, "Our plans for the Regional District schools have to be based on geography, travel and availability of land. No one man settles all the destinies, and it isn't always perfect," he added, "The value of it is, What does it do for you?"

Council defers action on shift in zoning law

Final voting on the proposed changes in the Mountainside zoning code was postponed beordinance at the special public hearing held Monday evening. The final vote will be held at the Borough Council meeting on April 21.

The amendment states that any structure that exists at the time the new ordinance is passed can stay where it is. The building can reconstructed or struct it were in a family residence zone.

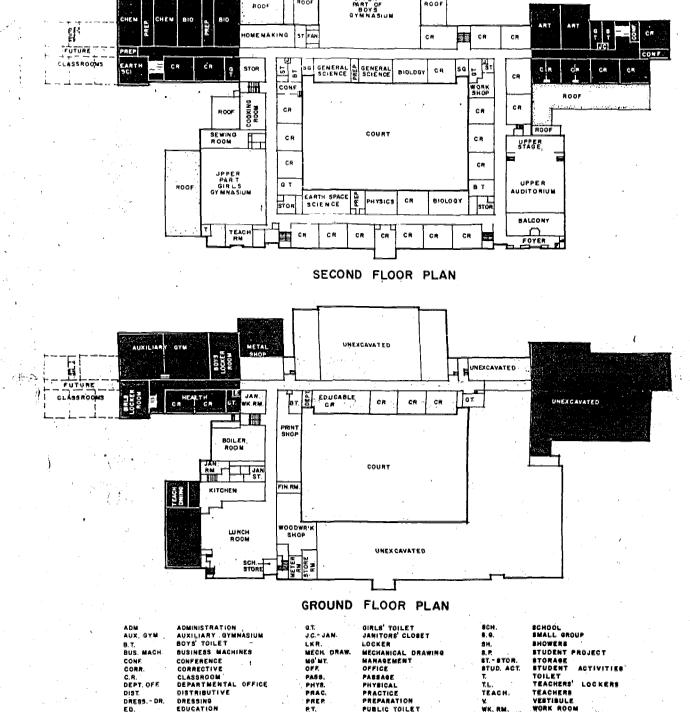

Each undeveloped lot with less then 30,000 square feet or a minimum lot width of 150 feet will be considered a nonconforming lot, The property can be developed for residential use provided that construction conforms with requirements for a family residence zone.

Two main areas were spotlighted at the hearing. The proposed change in the zone between Locust and Walnut avenues brought discussion. Residents from that area said they would like to leave it as it is. They said that they now are surrounded by a park and oppose any change. It was said that if a re-stricted commercial zone were put there, the residents would have to sell their homes.

PTA'S VS DRUG ABUSE All over the country, Par-ent Teacher Associations have taken up the challenge of drug abuse and are doing something Their work is part of a newly invigorated national attack upon narcotic and dangerous drug abuse. The President and his Administration are concentrating much effort upon this massive problem. As a part of its role in the nationwide endeavor, the Na-tional Institute of Mental Health seeks to make widely available to everyone the known facts about drug abuse, the current state of drug research, and the best thinking about ways of combatting the serious dangers of drug abuse among youth.

One important way of dis-seminating this information is through the cooperation of the Nation's PTAs since the PTAs are deeply concerned about the misuse of drugs and are con-vinced that education is one of the best preventive measures.

CANCER CRUSADE STARTS -- A. Arthur Caprio (right), vice-chairman of the Springfield Cancer Crusade, looks on approvingly as Mayor Henry J. Bultman (center) officially opens the drive by handing his donation to Harold Liebeskind, chairman of the crusade.

Crusade chairmen report why town's help is sought

H. Liebeskind, chairman of the Springfield drive, and A. Arthur Caprio, vice-chairman. They said:

"How often have we heard the expression why me?' concerning various community fund drives or other township activities. Unfortunately, many of us do not realize the significance or benefits of a community function until we have the misfortune of being personally affected by a tragic experience.

'The Springfield Cancer Crusade, being completed during April, is an integral part of a total national program dedicated to research into the cause of cancer. Funds obtained from this crusade also are directed to our community's education and the rehabilitation of patients afflicted with this chronic and often terminal disease. Many free services and facilities are offered through the offices of the Union County Cancer Society. These services minimize the disturbing features of this disease that impose serious burdens endured by the patients, their families and friends. The total breadth and scope of this cancer crusade is far greater than many of us would ever recognize.

'Continued research and new product development is the only effective defense against cancer. Unless this research is successfully completed, over 50 million Americans will develop this disease. This statistic is not in-tended to be a 'scare tactic' or 'threat;' it is plain fact.

'The Springfield Cancer Crusade, therefore, is an obligation which everyone in our community must recognize. The research, training and rehabilitation facilities of the national and community American Cancer and community American Cancer Society are outstanding. The 'seven warning signs of cancer' is one of the society's most popular and successful education programs. Many other facilities and functions are also available from our community chapter.

"THE CANCER CRUSADE --Why me?"-- Cancer shows no preference for race, color, creed or religion. It is, therefore, a disease which may touch each of us and/or our families.

"Why Me?'--- Funds and workers can only be obtained from our community. This is our obligation and each one of us must recognize that our participation -- no matter how small -- is absolutely necessary. In effect, our community is going on record in supporting a recognized and worthwhile campaign.

'Why Me?'--Each of us, in our hearts and desires have expressed the need to defend outselves against the potential danger of cancer. The anti-smoking campaign has stimu-lated our thoughts and comments on this

'Why Me?'--- Well maybe you still feel that the cancer crusade is not for you. So let's restate it --- 'You may not need the cancer crusade -- but the crusade needs you!' We urge and plead that you participate -through your contributions and field work -- in this program."

Liebeskind and Caprio concluded, "No one can take your place; we urgently need your help. Your support will not only be appreciated on a total community basis, but may just be the service which provides the major re-search breakthrough we all hope and pray

Anyone who is interested in helping with the cancer crusade can call Liebeskind at 379-9081 or Caprio at 379-6931.

Martland is given dialysis machines for kidney victims

How can a middle-income family afford vital dialysis treatment for kidney failure at a cost of $12,000 per year? Should poor patients, faced with the same problem, be allowed to succumb for lack of money or availability of

New Jersey College of Medicine and Den-tistry's Martland Hospital is working and planning toward solution of these problems. The hospital has had just two dialysis (artificial kidney) machines in constant 24-hour use. Last week, Frank Scott, Martland administrator, announced the gift of two additional life-saving units. One machine is being given the hospital by the Ruth Gottscho Foundation in Millburn, in memory of Bernard McGee, prominent Newark businessman who succumbed to kidney

The McGee family, impressed with the foundation's work, has contributed so that units can be made available without regard to the patient's ability to pay.

Ira Gottscho, foundation president, arranged the donation of the second machine by the manufacturer.
The Ruth Gottscho Foundation was established in memory of a child who suffered uremic poisoning many years ago. The availability of dialysis machine at that time might have saved the girl's life.

In accepting the machines, Scott said, "These artificial kidneys are a gift of life to patients whose condition is hopeless without them. Martland will be able to serve twice as many kidney failure patients as before."

A dialysis machine takes over the job of cleansing and purifying the blood when kidney failure, due to disease or infection, is present. Waste materials and impurities in the patient's blood are filtered through a semi-permeable membrane into a large bath. The refreshed blood is then pumped back into the patient's blood stream minus elements usually secreted by the normal kidney. Patients in need of dialysis must usually have eight-hour use of the machine twice weekly under the watchful eyes of specially-trained technicians.

It is estimated that 200 new patients in New Jersey will require dialysis treatments each year. The medical school and Martland planto establish a dialysis treatment center within a few months to help meet the pressing needs of present and future kidney failure patients. The center will make it possible to deliver this vital health service without regard for the patient's financial status, It will also serve the college's other primary functions of teaching and research.

Tips for owners ot power mowers

Don't let that power mower become a liability this summer, home owners were cautioned

The Insurance Information Institute noted that many injuries are recorded each year because of careless operating errors that can and should be avoided — cleaning or lifting the machine while it is running, walking backwards while pulling the mower, or for some reason touching the blade before it is stopped.

"Such incidents are easy to provent, must by being careful," the institute observed, "But for your own safety and for the safety of others, there is another factor to be kept in mind that the lawn should be raked free of stones and debris before you start."

Noting that a stone or branch thrown by a power mower can injure another person or even damage his property, the institute pointed out that within limits any financial obligations which might accrue are covered under the homeowners insurance policy.

Homeowners or tenants who do nothave such a policy were advised to check with their insurance agent or broker about obtaining coverage in some other form.

State police training begins this week in use of computers to clock speeders

The training phase of the State Police in-car computerized speed meter program got under way during March with the installation of 45 new Visual Average Speed Computer and Recorder (VASCAR) units, according to an announcement by Colonel D. B. Kelly.

The units will be used in training the initial troopers who will then be certified instructors to complete the training of all troopers in the operation of the new equipment. A total of 236 VASCAR units will be installed in State Police patrol cars during the training phase under a $215,694 federal Regional training sessions began this week for 15 troopers from Troop C at a site in Manalapan Township. -Today-another 15 troopers from Troop B will report for their training at Somerville and on Friday the remaining troopers from Troop A will attend sessions at Hammonton.

Upon completion of the two-day training sessions, the troopers will operate the equip-ment for 30 days with periodic instruction checks, then undergo proficiency tests before they qualify as VASCAR operators. They will then begin training 418 more troopers on a station area basis.

HERE'S HOW THE equipment works:
A trooper spots a possible violator. He chooses a convenient marker on the stretch of highway being traveled and starts his timer as the subject vehicle passes that point. He flips his time switch off as the subject passes a second marker. The trooper travels the same distance in his patrol carflipping the distance switch on at the first marker and off

With the patrol car parked off the highway, distance between the two points has already been measured and speeding vehicles need only be timed for an automatic computation of miles per hour.

The units operate on the principle that speed equals distance divided by time. Troopers will be able to clock speeders whether they are coming or going, behind or ahead of the patrol car, or even moving on a cross street. The device works whether the patrol car is parked or moving and is accurate to within 1/10 of a mile per hour.

Colonel Kelly said, 'After extensive testing of in-car computerized speed meters and careful analysis of their use by other law enforce-ment agencies in the country, we are conment agencies in the will be a valuable, adjunct to our highway safety program, We fully expect that within the next few years fully expect that within the next few years every State Police traffic patrol car will be equipped with the device.*

Colonel Kelly wants it understood that.

"During the initial training phase there will be no use of the equipment for enforcement be no use of the equipment for emorgement purposes. There will be an extensive public education program culminating with an an-nouncement of the date that State Police VASCAR will go into effect."

Bad driving manners

Numerous studies have shown that one of the worst causes of traffic accidents is simple discourtesy. Bad manners on the road are dangerous because they work two ways. Although a discourteous driving act is usually cause enough for an accident, it also often acts as a fuse, setting off a chain reaction of dangerous driving conditions that results in death and destruction.

A. No. Such exceptions are

The Age Discrimination in Employment Act is designed to protect persons between the ages of 40 and 65 from being denied employment opportunities because of age. It is a relatively new law which went into effect in June, 1968. As a result, many persons are unaware of the statute or are unfamiliar with its provisions. The following Question and Answer series is intended to inform both employers and employees about Act and to stimulate compliance with its provisions.

Q. What is the purpose of the Age Discrimination in Employment Act?

A. The Act is designed to promote employment of the older worker based on ability rather than age: prohibit arbitrary age discrimination in employment; and held em-ployers and employees find ways to meet problems arising from the impact of age on employment.

Q. Does the protection of the law apply to persons of all ages?
A. No. Only to persons between the ages of 40 and 65. It is within this age group where age discrimination in employment has been found to be most prevalent.

Q. What specific types of employment discrimination does the law prohibit?

A. The law prohibits discrimination on the basis of age in such matters as hiring, discharge, compensation, fringe benefits, leave policy, career development, seniority or merit systems, and hours of work, including overtime.

Q. What types of establishments are covered?

A. Employers of 25 or more persons in an industry affecting interstate commerce. It is estimated that there are 675,000 establishments with jobs within this scope of the Act, Employment agencies serving such employers. Labor organizations with 25 or more members in an industry affecting interstate dusu y commerce.

Q. Must employers give older workers the same pension, retirement and insur-ance benefits they provide younger workers?

Regional netters to show improvement but title dreams are still a year away

Several key returnees, plus an unexpected surprise in Tom King, present a bright pic-ture for improvement on the Gov. Livingston tennis team after a disappointing 1969 season in which Regional's record dropped to a mediocre 3-9. However, Coach James Lenox's squad has a long way to go if it is to reach the state tournament.

Gov. Livingston competes in the Watchung Conference, but has a slim chance of winning the title. There are three solid reasons: Cran-ford, Scotch Plains and Westfield. Any one the three could take the conference title. The Highlanders may do very well, but probRealistically, Regional's goals will be to attain a winning record and a first division finish. The Watchung Conference is one of the toughest in the state, and includes probably the finest high school tennis player in the ule including Cranford and Westfield, Regional will also face Scotch Plains and Jeff Miller. Milfer, a member of the Junior Davis Cup team, was voted the top tennis player for his age group in the United States.

Although a high finish is unlikely this sea-son, only Carlson and Ranz will be graduating. The experience gained this season may provide the foundations to a high finish next season. LAST SATURDAY was one Gov. Livingston followers wish to forget. Before scouts from three professional clubs, including one from the New York Mets, the Highlander baseball team was routed by Union, 12-0. The Highlanders literally gave the game to uncarned runs. Union hurlers Neil Gold and Jim Curnal struck out 16. Regional managed only three hits, all in separate innings.

In contrast, Union had eighthits which, combined with these errors totals 18 becomes as bined with those errors, totals 18 baserunners, which is almost three an inning.

The professional scouts came to see shortstop Dave Daniels, who lived up to his all-state rating. Daniels, who had beaten Regional in basketball this season with a last-second bucket, had one hit in three appearances and scored three runs, as did teammate Jay Petrillo. Union blew the contest open early, getting three runs of Kyle McCormick in the first inning, six in the second and two in the third. The Highlanders played evenly the rest of the way, but by then the game was out of reach.

"People cannot live and face the stark realities of their lives without defenses of one kind or another," points out Dr. Lombardi, adding that fantasy, humor, illusion and de-ception have always been a necessary and vital part of life, but it is conceivable that "chemical highs" might be an important part of some future way of life.

"To simply exist and survive in this populous, complex, technical and technological world is to experience anxiety. Thus people become increasingly selfish in the frantic effort to satisfy their basic needs. One consequence is the development of addesyrand sequence is the development of widespread neurosis and drug use and abuse," says Dr.

Participants at the program at Seton Hall will include two children of Alfred Adler who are both now practicing psychiatrists and two colleagues from Adler's early career.

ADLERIAN PSYCHOLOGY holds that man can be prepared, through the cultivation of his inborn capacity for social feeling and co-operation with others for the benefit of mankind, to master life's problems, Adler referred to his school of thought as "optimistic psychology" and it was his differing view of man's basic nature which led to his split with his early mentor Sigmund Freud. Adler asserted that man is an upward striving being who aspires for mastery and perfection in a mutually cooperative society and it is the goal of perfection, said Adler, rather than Freudian repressed instincts, which motivates human behavior.

"But it is difficult today for one to find his place in the sun," points our Dr. Lombardi, who is also a lecturer at Adler Institute in New "to feel that he is a significant, worthwhile human being with a sense of security."
Drug addiction, he believes, exemplifies the price paid by youth in its search and quest for significance and security in a modern "Society must facilitate each of its members achieving a place," Dr. Lombardi emphasized. Mutual respect must be promoted; man must go from selfishness to genuine concern and regard for fellow man, believes Dr. Lombardi.

"We are socially embedded and our very survival depends on our aptitude for social cooperation," says Dr. Lombardi. "Finding one's place must be in a way that will benefit others as well as one's self."

THE PROGRAM AT SETON HALL will deal with social issues as well as psychopathology. Dr. Helene Papanek, dean and executive director of the Adler Institute in New York, will discuss 'life style and social feeling.' Adler was the originator of the term 'life style' as well as the concept of inferiority and superi-ority complex which he introduced in 1926. Mrs. Danica Deutsch, executive director of the Adler Mental Hygiene clinic in New York, will speak on family and education problems. Both Dr. Papanek and Mrs. Deutsch were co-workers with Adler.
Dr. Kurt A. Adler will discuss the relevance of Adler's philosophical and sociological ideas for today and the theory of individual psychology and psychopathology will be the topic of Dr. Alexandra Adler. They are the son and daughter of the pioneer psychologist, who died

A question and discussion period will follow the panel presentations, with a social hour concluding the afternoon. The program has been arranged by students David J. Hess, president of Psi Chi honorary fraternity, and Robert P. Linarducci, president of the psy-chology Club. Special invitations have been extended to

Is there a moratorium on heart trans-

Not at Stanford University, says Dr. Eugene Dong, a member of the transplant team under Dr. Norman Shumway who developed a surgical technique for heart replacement.

According to Dr. Dong, an established in-vestigator of the American Heart Association and an assistant professor of surgery, the record for heart transplants at Stanford is better than was the case with kidney transplants after a like amount of experience.

To date, 153 persons throughout the world have received heart transplants, and 25 of them -- or about 1 out of 6 -- were still living at the end of February.

At Stanford, out of 20 heart transplant patients, 8 are still alive -- the longest over a year and a half.

Dr. Dong says that with growing experience the Stanford team has increased the chances of survival for its patients, even though no new miracle drug has been introduced to combat rejection -- the major obstacle in successful transplantation.

Rejection is spotted primarily through the use of the electrocardiogram, which gives a record of the electrical activity of the

DR. DONG SAYS that Stanford protocol for managing a transplant patient calls in part for keeping him on antilymphocytic globulin (ALG) for about six weeks, and main-taining him thereafter on drugs designed to suppress the immune response such as cortisone and azathioprine. This form of therapy must ultimately be stopped because the body tends to develop antibodies against

Dr. Dong is optimistic about the ultimate success of heart transplantation. He says there are signs, based on the recent experience, that the body may eventually adapt to the new heart so that it slackens its immunological attack on the graft.

He says the Stanford group still uses the same criteria for selecting patients for heart transplantation as it did in the beginning. There must be unanimous agreement between physicians and surgeons that the patient is "terminal" and that only a new heart would hold out any hope. Great care is also taken in tissue matching between the donor and

For And About Teenagers

THE WEEK'S LETTER: Some of the girls in our class have a problem, it's this one girl who last year moved to our school. At first she was real nice, but then after a few weeks it wasn't fun to be with her. She always complained about our school, its "rotten" boys and how she had many boyfriends in her other school. We told her just to give it a little time and she will have boyfriends. But, she kept right on complaining and asking us if we liked her. A couple of weeks ago some of us girls got mad at her. After this mad simmered down, we told her why we were mad at her. But, she wouldn't listen. What can we do? We know we have hurt her and we are sorry. But how can we say we like her when she is like this? - OUR REPLY: You obviously like something about her or you would not be concerned. You like her, What you do not like is the fact she is critical of your school and, apparently, is a constant complainer. Tell her that you are sorry for the "mad", but tell her what you are sorry for the "mad", but tell her what caused once more and impression. her what caused, once more, and impress upon her that you cannot possibly enjoy her company unless she changes her attitude. The rest should be up to her.

The rest should be up to her, to lif you have a teenage problem you want to discuss or an observation to make, address your letter to FOR AND ABOUT TEEN-AGERS. COMMUNITY AND SUBURBAN PRESS SERVICE, FRANKFORT, KY.

Cancer drive chairman cites triple action against disease

"Each dollar given to the American Cancer Society goes to work three ways against a cruel disease," Arthur C. Fried, county chairman of the fund-raising and education Cancer Crusade, said this week. The Crusade continues through April.

"Triple action against cancer is mobilized riple action against cancer is mobilized through the American Cancer Society's programs of research, education and service to the cancer patient," Fried said,

"The first part of the program is well known. The ongoing ACS research program, currently pegged at $21-million, is the largest such program of any private organization or of any health-related organization other than the federal government," he said. "The American Cancer Society supports research projects and top-flight scientists in 125 colleges, universities, hospitals and institutes,

"Education is approached in two ways—
professional and public. American Cancer Society publications, films, lectures and conferences bring cancer news and facts to mem-bers of the medical and allied professions. The American Cancer Society also assists physicians in acquiring the added skills necessary for cancer management through its clinical fellowship program," Fried added. "The 58 Divisions and more than 3,000 American Cancer Society Units educate the American public to the importance of early detection of cancer, when prompt treatment could result in a cure. Cancer prevention also is emphasized. Television, radio, school programs, involvement of employee and fraternal groups are some of the means by which the American Cancer Society teaches.

lce patrol is tracking stray bergs

The U. S. Coast Guard has begun its annual tracking of Arctic icebergs which threaten North Atlantic ship-ping lanes. The Coast Guard is broadcasting iceberg infor-mation twice a day., Rear Admiral Mark A. Whalen serves as the Commander, International Ice Patrol. Marking its 56th year of operations, the Ice Patrol was started in January 1914, less than two years after the British luxury liner "Titanic" collided with an icebery 300 miles south of Newfoundland on her maiden voyage and sank with a loss of more than 1,500 lives. A Coast Guard Reconnaissance flight earlier this month along the Labrador coast in-dicates that the 1970 ice season will be a heavy one. Some 400 'bergs' are expected to drift south of 48-degrees north latitude into maritime traffic lanes. The 48th parallel is considered by maritime of-ficials to be the approximate northern boundry of North Atlantic shipping.

The Coast Guard manages the Ice Patrol services under the provisions of the Inter-national Convention for the Safety of Life at Sea, Tracking of bergs is accomplished by Coast Guard aircraft but sightings are also reported by other planes and vessels. Broadcasts concern those icebergs which drift south past Newfoundland into the area of the Grand Banks, Ice Patrol activities are coordinated from headquarters on Gover-nors Island, N. Y.

The

Theater Seen

By ROBERT LYONS
'Operation Sidewinder' at Lincoln Center is a shrill, oblique fantasy enveloped in spotty dramaturgy. However, it is a play that should not be quickly dismissed by a playwright, who at 26, might eventually rank high. Sam Shepard is still having fun, but he is not kidding around, and that is an intriguing asset in this prolific writer.

The Sidewinder is a snake designed computer mirned loose in the southwestern descritto do its own thing. An uproar without much uproarown thing. An appear without mach appear-nousness follows. An endless succession of symbolism gluts our theatrical responses and even bogs down our thoughts in areas where we might like to agree. For instance a CIA captain is named Bovine. Get it? Dull, stolid. That's the trouble, all we do is get it, all night. The translations are obvious and occur too swiftly to stimulate or provoke.

Most of the first act is perfunctory exposition dealing with instant murder, plots to poison water supplies on military bases, and a spoof white liberal accommodation with Black Panthers.

IN ACT TWO MR. SHEPARD lets his feelings, not his rampant emotions, take the stage, and the evening, if not saved, becomes moderately worthwhile.

The snake's head has been severed and a mystic tells the local Hopi Indian tribe—here the name bit does work—that if the head is rejoined a star will take the tribe off the planet before it burns.

In a magnificient ceremonial exorcism attended by two white earth litterers the head is replaced only to be torn off again by invading tactical troops sent out to recover it for the industrial-military complex. But the Indians are carried off the earth and modern civilization is left choking and dying for having disturbed the ritual and ripping apart the spirit of life.

Since Mr. Shepard avoids writing character it is difficult to discuss the acting. But I would like to discuss the snake. It was super. From its first appearance, lonely and dis-oriented in the desert night, to its quiet strength, its compliance, its helpless victim desire to make things right, I was fascinated. But Mr. Shepard knows that it is man who does all the destroying and all the building.

REMEMBER WASHINGTON IRVING If Americans were polled on the question of their favorite author, I have an idea that quite a few of us would reply - Washington Irving. With good reason.

Irving is one writer we all meet in high school. The authorities who run our educational system realized a long time ago that it's a good idea to introduce youngsters to the antics of Rip Van Winkle, the Headless Horseman, and the rest of the characters who parade through the pages of those famous short stories.

Still, we keep reading them beyond child-hood, which means that Irving appeals to all ages. His art is that of the great story-teller. And like all great storytellers, he has different virtues that appeal to different age groups.

Exhibit A ~ myself. When I was first exposed to the Headless Horseman, I thought he was as terrifying an apparition as one could find on the printed page, I fully shared the fear of Ichabod Crane riding home through the darkness. Today, that scene strikes me as a delicious example of Irving's gift for humor, It's also full of those little touches that bring literary characters to life. Think of the gaunt schoolmaster clinging to his horse, galloping for dear life away from his pursuer.

I'd like to continue in this vein since Wash-ington Irving is one of my favorite subjects. However, my precise subject just now is Irving's home.

You probably know that Sunnyside, north of New York City near Tarryton, is one of our priceless national possessions. If you've never been there, you've missed something rally worth seeing.

Irving called Sunnyside "a little, old-fashioned stone mansion, all made up of gable ends, and as full of angles and corners as an So it remains. The house and the grounds show how Irving lived. The rooms are full of memorabilia, things he owned, bought and A tour through Sunnyside is an unforgettable experience. That's as it should be, Washington Irving is an unforgettable American.
