Mountainside divided into 10 voting districts

VOLLEY OF DECISION -- Some of Mountainside's top athletes take part in weekly volleyball games, as part of sports program at the Deerfield School sponsored by the Mountainside Recreation Department. Activities also include basketball competition.

Plan okayed after debate over legality

New posts created in Fire Department

An ordinance establishing 10 election districts instead of the present five, in the borough was approved by the Borough Council by a 4-1 vote Tuesday, Councilman John Hechtle cast the dissenting vote and Councilman Robert Ruggiero was absent.

Russ Cardoni of Short drive led off an hour's discussion on the matter by requesting that a letter sent to Borough Council by Robert Jaffe be made public. Excerpts from Jaffe's letter which opposes the redistricting appear elsewhere in today's Echo.

Murray Staub, assistant township attorney, replied to Jaffe's allegations that the redistricting is illegal. Staub maintained that the redistricting is perfectly in order.

According to Jaffe, the state statute says the districts should be geographically compact and as rectangular as possible, Staub said the new districts do this as best as possible.

Jaffe also said that the ordinance, as published, is "vague" and that no map was provided so that the public can have an opportunity to be heard and that no map is required when this is done. He added that publication "just informs the public that a hearing will be held."

UP AND OVER -- Spirited competition in volleyball is part of the weekly men's athletic program sponsored by the Mountainside Recreation Department at the Deerfield School.

Defeated school budget is discussed as board holds organization meeting

The defeated school budget was discussed Monday night as about 15 people attended the organization meeting of the Mountainside Board of Education.

A member of the audience requested during the public session that the board hold a public meeting to discuss what will be cut from the budget and how the budget will be affected. Grant Lennox, president of the board, said the budget has been turned over to the Borough Council for recommendation and the person who made the request should repeat it to the council.

Lennox noted that the budget is no longer in the board's hands. The board now has to recommend categories where adjustments can be made. This, according to state law, has to be done within 30 days of the election.

In response to another question, Lennox said that the council has to consult with the board as a method of reviewing the budget. In addition, he added, the board can appeal if it believes the budget has been cut too much, so that funds can be restored to specific parts of the budget.

John M. McDonough, board secretary, administered the oath of office to newly-elected members Mrs. Patricia Knodel, Walter H. Rupp, Peter R. Taussig and James D. Taylor. Other members of the board are William J. Blunno, Grant H. Lennox and Thomas J. Spina. Lennox was unanimously elected to his fourth term as board president. Spina was elected vice-president to succeed Blunno, who declined re-nomination. McDonough was elected for his 11th term as board secretary and Elmer Hof-farth was re-elected custodian of school monies.

The board agreed that all the board's accounts be kept in the Mountainside branch of the Central Jersey Bank and Trust Company. In addition the Beechwood School, Deerfield Middle School, Deerfield Elementary School and Echobrook organization funds and the milk fund are to be kept in the Central Jersey Bank and Trust Company.

The board, after a brief discussion, adopted the policies, rules and agreements of the previous board. Mrs. Knodel commented that a board of education cannot be legally bound by what a previous board agreed upon. She continued that she wanted to make sure that the newly-constituted board is not bound to the previous one because there are policies with which she disagrees. Lennox said this is just a guideline until changes and amendments can be made. The board will still hold its public meeting the second Tuesday of each month and committees will meet the preceding Tuesday. Charles Jerome was reappointed as the board's attorney for the coming year.

The Mountainside Echo, the Westfield Leader, the Plainfield Courier Journal and the Newark Evening News were named as the board's official newspapers. The latter two were approved after Mrs. Knodel requested their use so that board news could reach more people in the borough.

Benninger, Tansey and Co. of Mountainside was approved as the board's insurance agent for the coming year. The appointment of auditors and committee appointments were tabled until the March meeting so the board can discuss the matters.

Several persons questioned the purpose of the redistricting. Mayor Thomas Ricciardi said that it would likely raise interest in how the community operates. He added that this will bring more people in contact with others and will make them more knowledgeable by possibly creating discussions.

Councilman William Van Blarcom, who did most of the work on the redistricting, said "the purpose of redistricting is to equalize the sizes of election districts and to make voting easier for the voter." He added that the new districts would average around 450 voters each, with the smallest containing 407 and the largest 462.

According to the 1970 voter registration list in the borough, there are disproportions in districts two, four, and five. Van Blarcom said. According to districts the 1970 voter list was: district 1, 695 voters; district 2, 1,166; district 3, 582; district 4, 964, and district 5, 937.

The new districts are: district 1, 419 voters; district 2, 445; district 3, 454; district 4, 462; district 5, 433; district 6, 407; district 7, 419; district 8, 439; district 9, 447, and district 10, 419.

Former mayor Fred Wilhelms said he feels the objections to the redistricting are based on "political motivation." He said that in his opinion the action would induce more of the borough's residents to become aware of what is going on in the community. He added that

Rehearsals are under way for high school musical show

Steve Dendinger and Suzanne Snell, chosen to play Finian and his daughter, are rehearsing the leading roles in the musical, "Finian's Rainbow," to be presented at Gov. Livingston Regional High School in Berkeley Heights on March 4, 5 and 6 at 8:15, according to Walter Both, who is the producer and musical director.

Steve portrayed the Grinch in the Christmas fantasy, "How the Grinch Stole Christmas." He also appeared in last season's productions of "Inherit the Wind" and "The Lark." Suzanne was seen as Maria in last year's production of "The Sound of Music," as well as his role of Sunny, the harmonica player, in "Finian's Rainbow."

Other members of the cast have also appeared in productions at the high school.

Seth Brown, who plays Og, will be remembered for his comic role of the promoter in "The Sound of Music" and as one of the Welsh boys in "The Corn Is Green," the drama club's fall production. GERALYNN ALBAMONTE plays the girl who is a deaf mute so that she dances everything that she has to say. She was previously seen in "Inherit the Wind" and "The Corn Is Green." Tim Caffrey played old Tom in "The Corn Is Green," and is preparing for the Little Flower production of "The Man Who Came to Dinner" as well as his role of Sunny, the harmonica player, in "Finian's Rainbow."

Driver escapes injury; cited after car hits restaurant wall

John J. Drexinger of Scotch Plains escaped injury Saturday morning when his car hit and slightly damaged a wall of Teddy's Seafood Restaurant on Rt. 22 West, according to Mountainside police. However, he was given summonses for careless driving and leaving the scene of an accident.

Police said Drexinger was traveling west on the highway around 4:20 a.m. when his car swerved right, hit the building and left the scene. Witnesses took down the license number and called police, who apprehended him. Michael A. Dugan of Roselle was slightly injured Saturday afternoon when his car hit the center divider on Rt. 22, police reported. The Mountainside Rescue Squad took him to Overlook Hospital, Summit, where he was treated and discharged.

According to the police report, Dugan was traveling on the highway when he reportedly saw a red blinker ahead. He applied his brakes; skidded on the pavement and the car hit the divider.

Two passengers in a car driven by Walter Lindner of Sparta were slightly injured late Friday afternoon after the Lindner car was hit by a car driven by William L. Lachemacer of Lebanon on Rt. 22 East near New Providence road, police said. Susan Stamp of Scotch Plains and Mary Ann Bertinelli of Howarth were taken to Overlook Hospital, where they were treated and discharged.

The police report said Lindner had stopped for the traffic light at New Providence road. Lachemacer, who was behind Lindner, applied his brakes but was unable to stop in time. The Lindner car, owned by C-C Rentals Inc. of Akron, Ohio, had to be towed away.

PTSA to conduct program at Dayton on picking college

How many times one should take the College Board Scholastic Aptitude Test, what colleges look for in students, where to apply for financial aid, and what assistance the guidance department of Jonathan Dayton Regional High School offers its students are some of the questions that will be answered at the Parent-Teacher-Student Association "College Night" this evening at 8 at Jonathan Dayton in Springfield.

Edward Carine of the Educational Testing Service in Princeton will speak about the PSAT, the SAT and advanced placement tests. Robert Blunno, the dean of admissions at Rutgers, New Brunswick, will discuss the importance of extra-curricular activities, class rank, the SAT and personal interview.

A financial aid expert will be present to give advice about scholarship aid, loans, and jobs available on campus. The role of the computer in selecting a college and the help offered the students by the guidance department will be discussed by Charlotte Singer, director of guidance at Dayton.

Three Dayton alumni, John Vaselli, a junior at Newark College of Engineering; Marie Tarantula, a sophomore at Fairleigh Dickinson, and Arnold Gerst, a freshman at Rutgers, will speak about their own experiences in applying to college. They will be available afterwards for questions.

A question-and-answer period will follow the speeches. Then all of the Dayton guidance counselors will talk in small groups to the parents and students. Parents will have an opportunity to sign up for personal interviews with their children's counselors.

Shoppers' thirst for bottled water depletes shelves

Sales of bottled water in local supermarkets soared last week as more residents than ever began adding the product to their shopping lists.

Most of the sales were due to the heavy taste of chlorine in the tap water which lasted for more than a week. The taste began to disappear early this week.

Extra chlorine doses were added during the first week of February, according to officials at the Elizabethtown Water Co., which serves most Union County municipalities. The problem began when the snow started melting and the rains started to fall, creating a "large run-off" that had to be treated.

The water company spokesman called the water condition "highly unusual" and blamed it on a combination of melting, rains and flooding. He said the problem was common to almost all of New Jersey and extended as far south as Wilmington, Del., and Philadelphia.

He added that the problem might also be "due somewhat to people" and that the population factor was under careful study by the water company.

The water company received a heavy number of telephone calls during the past week, mostly from residents "concerned" about the safety of the water. Health Department statements were issued by a number of municipalities last week, giving assurances that the water was safe and drinkable.

Although the water has remained bacteriologically safe, many residents apparently did not agree that it was drinkable and so turned to bottled water, which can be taken straight or used in making coffee, tea, juices or in any part of cooking.

The bottled water sells for about 55 to 65 cents a gallon at most supermarkets, although the cost begins to skyrocket if bought in smaller quantities. The same brands selling for 60 cents a gallon may sell for 41 cents a half gallon.

Shoppers also have a wide choice of bottled water, including natural spring water and the distilled versions. Some stores also carry imported brands.

By the end of the week, however, the unusual demand had nearly overtaken the supply and in some cases the stores sold out.

Restaurants and bars also reported dissatisfaction with the tap water, although some already use bottled water as a matter of course.

One bartender complained that pouring drinks and then having to add water with so much chlorine was "less than satisfying."

Catholic priest to talk at temple

The Rev. Rocco L. Constantino of St. James Church, Springfield, will be the guest speaker at Temple Shalom's services tomorrow night. He will discuss "The Roman Catholic Church Today - Its Future Direction."

"The talk is being sponsored with the hope that, through further understanding of the religions of our neighbors, closer communications can be established in the interest of true brotherhood," a temple spokesman said. Services will begin at 8:45 and the public is invited, he added.

Presbyterians plan special service for

The Lenten season will be inaugurated this week at the First Presbyterian Church of Springfield with special Ash Wednesday services conducted by the Rev. Bruce W. Evans at 8 p.m. in the church sanctuary.

Dr. Evans has announced his topic as "Time of Renewal," with music provided by the Senior Choir under the direction of John Bunnell, music director, assisted by Mrs. Elsie Brooks, organist.

Dr. Evans called attention to the word "Lent" which is a derivative of the Anglo-Saxon word "Lencten" meaning "spring" and the consequent seeming rebirth of nature after the long winter. The season, he added, is one which is devoted to Christian nurture through discipline and penitence. It begins on Ash Wednesday, the 40th weekday before Easter, and concludes at noon on Saturday of Holy Week. The preaching in this season is always centered on the life, teachings and sacrificial death of Christ.

Following the Ash Wednesday Service, on subsequent Wednesday evenings in March, Dr. Evans will give a series of lectures in the Parish House entitled "The Chaos of the Cults." One evening, March 10, will feature a church family night at which a dinner will be served, followed by the film, "Jerusalem," which is narrated by the Rev. Billy Graham.

THE STATE WE'RE IN

By DAVID F. MOORE, Executive director, North Jersey Conservation Foundation

DREDGING AND DESNAGGING Do you know what dredging and desnagging are? The New Jersey legislature has authorized $4 million for such an activity in the Passaic Valley in a bill which, incidentally, the Governor has not signed...

Simply stated, dredging and desnagging is "clearing" a stream by dragging, bulldozing and dredging. Normally the result is a channel, trapezoidal in cross section, straightening the stream from point A to point B without trees on or near the banks...

Usually stream sterilization is done in the name of flood control, wetland drainage for mosquito control, land "reclamation" or pollution clean-up. But in reality it normally not only fails to result in these goals being met on any but the smallest or shortest of terms, but has a number of most undesirable side effects...

1. Dredging increases siltation by sucking up mud, spewing it out on the banks and allowing finer particles to flow back into the stream. Bulldozing and dredging add to this problem. Siltation causes stream life to choke and covers bottom vegetation.

2. Drainage of wetlands (often adjacent to streams) reduces long term water storage, causing greater variation in stream flow (especially reducing dry weather flows) and adding to pollution problems. Wildlife habitat is diminished as well.

3. Many times river debris is placed on the bank to create a dike, and the dredged material dumped behind the dike. If one considers the stream and its flood plain all as part of the stream during a flood, the widening and deepening of the center channel doesn't do anything for flooding. At best, such channelization only serves to keep small rises in water flow in the channel. This is true even if the debris and dredge material are taken out of the stream and flood plain altogether.

4. Loss of stream bank trees, aside from the aesthetic damage, promotes stream bank erosion and hastens meandering -- the constant cutting and filling process that results in winding streams. Thus the straightening of the channel is immediately at odds with the inherent tendency of a stream of water in motion, making lots of work for contractors. The straightening process must be done again and again, once started.

5. Straightening of a stream and clearing of its channel of all obstructions makes the water move faster -- and back up faster when it reaches some sort of restriction. Thus the whole process makes the flooding problem worse for someone down stream.

6. Because of the publicity attending the job, the public is lulled into thinking that the flood plain is safe to occupy with new houses, until the flood exceeding the new channel's water capacity comes along. Then the cry goes up, "Why wasn't I told? We need dams and levees to keep the water out when it rains." And the public expense goes up again and again, because the dams and levees further lull people into building more and more until the dams' and levees' capacities are exceeded, etc. Many channelization projects are quite short-lived -- from five or even less, to 25 years. This is due to normal stream action -- moving sediments about in the new channel to fit the normal stream flow, something like an old dog fussing with his blanket until it suits him just right. In the case of the stream, the new bed looks much like the old one -- when all is adjusted. Life in the stream will not come back for many years though -- as many as 40!

8. Secondary effects are not always oberved, but many occur. Dredging material and soil placed along the banks changes the grade of the land. Such changes can suffocate trees growing along the banks within one to five years. Removing all the obstructions results in fewer water-falls and less mixing of the water flow, which means less oxygen in the water. Oxygen is needed to reduce organic pollutants to harmless material, and to sustain animal life. At the same time all shade is removed, thus making the water warmer, and since warm water holds less oxygen and promotes the growth of microscopic stream life, the oxygen is reduced still further.

The act of dredging and desnagging -- except in streams already devoid of any life, on location or downstream -- may thus be classified as premeditated stream murder.

Western Electric is responsible for engineering products which are sold to Bell Telephone subsidiaries throughout the United States.

Time To Spare By GERALD ANDREWS - Retirement Advisor

The age of retirement is a time of reason, a time of adjustment. It can be a difficult time, but it doesn't have to be, for anyone. Few individuals approach retirement in exactly the same frame of mind. For some, retirement has always been an incentive to work, a reason to save, the fulfillment of a dream. To others, retirement is a date on the calendar, a black moment when the powers-that-be pass out a gold watch, a handshake and a set of walking papers. Retirement, like most happenings in the individual life, is a very personal thing.

Because retirement is a personal thing, there are no patented guidelines for success and happiness when it becomes a reality. So, how does one prepare?

A good beginning is to accept the eventuality of retirement and, in fact, plan a course of action from that day forward. Retirement should be considered not as a time when someone says "step down" or "move out," but as the beginning of a period of life when one is free to pick and choose activities and interests. Retirement years are dividend years, earned-time years, as you choose. But, they are your years, to use as you like, to live as you like. As such, they are extremely valuable, and can be profitable in many ways.

For the individual who reaches mandatory retirement age and knows that he is far from "through", retirement is a special challenge. He will meet that challenge easily once he recognizes that there is somewhere a market for the experience, knowledge and talents he has cultivated through the years. Finding that market is not always easy, but the individual who has known success will continue to find a way... and to enjoy the effort.

Movie and speaker to tell about capture of a baby narwhale

The Summit Nature Club will hold its regular meeting tonight at 8:15 in the Lincoln School auditorium, Summit.

Dr. Jay Hyman will speak and show pictures on the "Capture of a Narwhale" and of the narwhale rescue mission in which he had a part. Dr. Hyman, a graduate of the Cornell School of Veterinary Medicine, has been a veterinarian working with small animals in New York City since 1961.

Since 1966 he has been a consultant for the New York City Aquarium and has collected porpoises, pilot whales and barracuda for the Aquarium from Florida, California and the Bahamas. He is also a lecturer and has appeared on the Dick Cavett TV show to tell of the capture of the narwhale.

Whales are hunted by the Eskimos for their tusks, the sale of which forms a part of their livelihood. The Eskimos of a certain village had killed a narwhale and found that she had an infant which they captured. The baby whale was still in the nursing stage so the Eskimos called on the Canadian Mounted Police for help to save it. The Mounted Police called on the New York Aquarium for advice.

A rescue team was formed which flew to the Eskimo village and got the whale on a plane. It was the first narwhale to be raised in captivity.

Hawkins is chosen for training plans

Williams R. Hawkins, executive director of the Westfield YMCA, has been chosen to help design a more effective educational program for the training of Y professionals.

The Westfield executive director and a representative of the Boston Y were selected as representatives of the nation's local YMCAs to work with college officials on a relevant educational program. Franklin Thomas of Montclair, national YMCA director of personnel services, and Alan Pickering of Lincoln, Neb., a national YMCA career-development specialist, represented national viewpoints. Hawkins, 31, who has headed the local Y since last fall, has received special instruction in training methods through the National Y Board. He has also been active in the Methodist Church in training programs, and is chairman of the department of leadership development of the Northern New Jersey Annual Conference of the United Methodist Church.

Dutcher estate leaves legacy for Westfield Y

An "especially precious" legacy of $2,500 was received this week by the Westfield YMCA. The gift to the Y's endowment fund came from the estate of the late Edith S. Dutcher, widow of Malcolm S. Dutcher, one of the original directors and trustees of the Westfield Y. "This is a most marvelous gift," said D. Harry Chandler of Mountainside, chairman of the endowment committee. "It is doubly precious to us because of Mr. Dutcher's important role in building the Y and the endowment fund."

Other means must be taken to keep bacteria out of safe nesting places in cracks and pits on a tooth's chewing surface. Against this most common type of decay, the Institute has supported development of a durable, but still experimental, plastic sealant. Sweet taste good and provide energy, but many bacteria turn them into acid more readily than other foods. Because it is so hard to change eating habits, the Dental Institute is looking for something, perhaps phosphates, to add to sweet foods to counteract decay.

Special types of bacteria form sticky, acid-holding films called plaque on the sides and sometimes the roots of teeth. If not removed promptly, plaque hardens. Then it requires a dentist or hygienist to scrape it off. The Institute is also searching for ways to prevent plaque formation, and to reduce the numbers of harmful bacteria in the mouth. Your part in helping your children prevent decay is to assure that they clean all sides of each tooth thoroughly every day, and get regular dental checkups. Children should learn how to keep the smile of health as soon as they learn to dress themselves.

NIH THE SEARCH FOR HEALTH A REPORT FROM THE NATIONAL INSTITUTES OF HEALTH BETHESDA, MARYLAND

YOUR SMILE What have you done for your smile lately? Perhaps you and your children have had a semi-annual dental checkup, found no cavities, and are smiling. For your sake, the National Institute of Dental Research hopes so. But what about half of the children in the United States who never see a dentist, and hundreds who go only when driven by pain too late to save their smiles. This Institute, one of the National Institutes of Health in Bethesda, Maryland, knows there are too few dentists to treat all who need help. That is why it has a special National Caries Program to promote research on prevention of tooth decay, or caries. Unlike diseases caused by one germ or virus, caries requires that three conditions operate at the same time. First, sufficient numbers of specific bacteria must live in the mouth. Second, food is necessary for bacteria to thrive. Sugar and starches supply most of this. The more often one eats, the more active his bacteria are. Acid wastes from their digestion dissolve tooth enamel. Finally, teeth must be susceptible to these acids. Very few people have such resistant teeth that no harm results if they harbor the necessary bacteria and nibble frequently. Unfortunately, 98 percent of us have caries. To prevent caries, the NIDR is trying to reduce all three decay factors. When fluoride is present in drinking water in the level of one part per million, the decay rate falls about 60 percent. But because over 40 million Americans do not use community water supplies, other methods of fluoride protection are necessary. Fluoride can be applied directly to teeth for a few minutes a day in a gel held close by a plastic mouthpiece. It also helps when given with vitamins, and is especially

Family Counseling Service reports on a year's progress

The Youth and Family Counseling Service, which helps Mountainside people with problems, counseled 383 families with problems, in the eight communities it serves, in 1970. A total of 5,033 service hours were expended in Mountainside, Berkeley Heights, Clark, Cranford, Garwood, Rahway, Scotch Plains and Westfield last year, executive director Milton Faith wrote in his annual report made public this week.

In addition to providing direct, professional counseling to Mountainside residents, Faith is a member of the new Mayor's Advisory Committee on Narcotics. He also works closely with Gov. Livingston Regional High School from which he gets referrals. A referral system has been set up whereby police refer young people to the service for counseling. YFCS is located at 233 Prospect st. in Westfield. Three Mountainside residents are members of the YFCS board of directors. They are the Rev. Raymond Aumack of Our Lady of Lourdes Church, Mrs. S.N. Seager of 379 Park Slope and Mrs. Marion C. Reed of 1368 Wood Valley Rd. Mrs. Seager is recording secretary. YFCS is a member of the Mountainside Community Fund. The Youth and Family Counseling Service will receive proceeds from the "Star Spangled Ball" which The Junior Woman's Club of Westfield will hold on Saturday, Feb. 27 at Shackamaxon Country Club in Scotch Plains. Mrs. Robert Bunting of Westfield is chairman of the ball and has issued an urgent plea to residents of communities served by YFCS to help support it by attending the ball or being a patron in the program book. Mrs. Linn Smith of 316 Harrison ave. is ticket chairman and Mrs. Norcross Teel of 211 Eaglecroft rd., both Westfield, is chairman of the program book.

Highlander season turns upside down with upsets of Westfield, Scotch Plains

By BILL LOVETT

In a week which will be remembered by Highlander supporters as one of the most dramatic in Gov. Livingston's 10-year history, the basketball team defeated Westfield and Scotch Plains, two of the best in Union County, to just about a sure the team's first winning record in years. Making that achievement outstanding are the obstacles Regional has faced. Basketball has not been a strong sport at

Gov. Livingston since the early 1960s and this season was not expected to be any different. Indeed, when the Highlanders started the season by losing seven of nine games many predicted this would be Regional's worst year. Credit for astounding comeback should go to the coaching of Frank Petrucci. The resurgence of Rich Weiss, and the overall teamwork which finally developed.

Amazingly, the team is now 10-8 with just two regular season games left—New Providence and Clark. Coming up are the county tournament (in which the team faces St. Patrick's in the first round), and the state tournament. Regional should defeat Clark so even if it loses to New Providence and in the first round of both tournaments, the worst the Highlanders could wind up is 11-11. Judging by last week however, it should be better than that. If the Westfield and Scotch Plains victories mean anything, the Highlanders are capable of beating any team in the county on a given night. Gov. Livingston has now won eight of its last nine and the two victories last week are by far the outstanding ones. In the past two years, the Highlanders had not beaten Scotch Plains in a major sport so this victory should provide a psychological lift for Gov. Livingston.

Westfield was supposed to win easily but unbelievably, it was Westfield which was humiliated, 74-58. For the first time this year, Gov. Livingston was able to put it all together and in so doing knocked both teams out of the Watchung Conference race.

Westfield was ranked No. 7 in the county going into the game, but the Highlanders came out fired up and rolled to a 40-23 halftime lead, held off a third quarter challenge and won going away. Rich had a fine game, scoring 18 points on a variety of long jumpers and driving layups. In addition he had a dozen assists, many of those going to Kevin McEneaney, who also scored 18.

Time and time again, Weiss would penetrate; and one of the Westfield defenders left his man to help out, Richie hit the open player for an easy bucket. It should be noted, however, the Westfield played without guard Ted Mavraganis, who has been a special tact in Regional's side. He had 26 against them earlier this year. As it was, the Blue Devils cleared the bench in an effort to find a combination which would stop the Highlanders.

It was tougher against Scotch Plains' Blue Raiders but Gov. Livingston, without a single substitution, squeaked by with a final quarter in which it outscored the home team, 18-10. Scotch Plains' Randy Hughes and Brian Day had 23 and 24 points respectively, for 47 of their team's 57 points. It appeared good enough to win, until the final quarter Highlander rush.

Down by six, the Highlanders cut the margin to two then a six-point spurt (four by Weiss), gave Regional a 59-55 lead. The Raiders got two of those back but time ran out as Steve Deck stole the ball and missed a forced shot under the basket at the buzzer.

For the Highlanders, McEneaney had 18, Curt Mohs 12, Don Reynolds 10 and John Barrynine. Weiss also had 10, and the big play when after Deck stole the ball he denied him position and pressured him into taking that forced shot in the final seconds.

ELECTION DISTRICTS

The following are excerpts from a letter to the Mayor and Borough Council concerning the proposed establishment of 10 election districts in the borough.

I am opposed to the passage of this ordinance on second reading for the following reasons:

The ordinance is based on a misreading of the N.J.S.A., 19:4-6, the statute cited in the ordinance. The statute clearly indicates that election districts in which voting machines are to be used may contain 750 registered voters or 1,000 voters, depending on whether one or two voting machines are used. The council appears to be following a suggested number of residents in election districts where paper ballots or other primitive methods of tabulating votes are used.

The statute calls for geographical compactness of election districts with each district being as rectangular as possible. The 10 proposed election districts are anything but compact and certainly not rectangular.

The ordinance as published in the Mountain Echo is vague on the location of the proposed election districts and refers to a map without having the map published. I do not see how this can give sufficient information to any resident, voter or taxpayer as to the new proposed election districts will effect them.

The establishment of 10 election districts in our small borough will create unnecessary expense in the requirement of additional poll workers, voting machines and readjustment of present election districts. The manner in which the proposed districts have been drawn will undoubtedly create confusion as to the election district in which a person resides. Consequently, the borough may then experience a reduction in voter participation.

One argument for the 10 districts is that it is possible that the voting age may be reduced to 18-year-olds. However, the present Supreme Court decision only allows 18-year-olds to vote in federal elections. It will not be until 1973 that New Jersey will be able to vote on another constitutional amendment which would give 18, 19 and 20-year-olds the right to vote in state and local elections.

It would appear that the most sensible proposal with respect to the 18, 19 and 20-year-old vote would be to set up a separate election district so that the voting machine in that district would only provide for federal offices. Even with the addition of 18, 19 and 20-year-old voters, the present voter registration of approximately 4,300 would not be increased more than 300, which still averages to less than 1,000 voters per district.

In short, the proposed ordinance appears to be illegal, arbitrary, capricious and totally without value to the community. Its only value appears to be a political one in attempting to fragmentize the organization of the loyal opposition by increasing the cost of political organization. Neither the treasury of the borough nor the convenience of borough voters should be sacrificed in order that the present administration can better continue its political stranglehold on our community.

I strongly urge that the Borough Council put politics aside and make such changes in election districts as are in accordance with the standards set forth by the statutes of New Jersey. I strongly urge the defeat of the ordinance on the second reading.

Council meets

The plan probably would be more readily accepted if it had not been proposed by a Republican-controlled Borough Council and had it been agreed upon by both political parties.

The Council also adopted an ordinance which realigns the command responsibilities of the borough's volunteer fire department.

The measure creates two deputy fire chief positions to direct line or fire fighting functions and administrative details. Under the present regulations, a fire chief can only serve for two years. With the addition of the new posts, a man stepping down after a stint as chief will automatically become a deputy, thereby maintaining a continuity of command.

The Council and Board of Education met Tuesday night after the council meeting to review the defeated school budget and discuss possible cuts. A decision will be made before the next Borough Council meeting on March 16. Ricciardi said.

Hechtle gave a report of recreation department activities; through Councilman Wilfred Brandt because he had laryngitis. An adult ski trip planned Feb. 5 was cancelled for lack of interest and a family ice skating party was scratched because of warm weather and heavy rain.

The adult spring program will begin March 3 and will run through May 12. Courses will include slimnastics, bridge, woodworking and glasscraft. Brochures have been mailed out, Hechtle said.

Council approved a measure allowing the sale of liquor on Election Day.

Kiehn bill stiffens penalty for assault on police, firemen

Penalties for assault and battery upon any police officer, fireman, school law enforcement officer or rescue squad and first-aid personnel while they are performing their duties would be increased under the provisions of a bill being sponsored in the State Assembly by Assemblyman Herbert H. Kiehn of Union County District 9-C.

The bill, which has been referred to the Assembly's Committee on Law, Public Safety and Defense, also would provide for imposition of the death penalty upon any persons convicted of the murder of law enforcement officers, firemen or aid personnel while they were on duty. Assemblyman Kiehn noted that the death sentence would not be mandatory since state law now provides that if the accused person pleads non vult he cannot suffer a greater penalty than life imprisonment. Assemblyman Kiehn said the court has discretion as to whether to accept such a plea.

The existing state statute concerning simple assault and battery, a disorderly conduct charge, makes such an offense a high misdemeanor, when committed against policemen, firemen and ambulance and rescue squad personnel. The bill, if enacted, would set the penalty upon conviction to imprisonment for not less than 15 years.

Assemblyman Kiehn explained that the first degree murder provisions of the law pertain to persons convicted of murder of the following: Police or other law enforcement officer acting in performance of his duty or of a person assisting such officer; paid or volunteer fireman while on duty and in uniform; member of an ambulance, rescue, first-aid or emergency squad or corps while on duty, and physicians, nurses, medical assistants or hospital employees while engaged in performance of emergency duties and wearing identification.

RUSSIAN ARTIST - Noted violinist Igor Oistrakh will offer his final performance in the metropolitan area with a concert at Symphony Hall, Newark, on Feb. 28. The Odessa-born musician has toured the world to critical acclaim.

Oistrakh to perform at Symphony Hall

Violinist Igor Oistrakh will perform his final metropolitan area concert this season at Symphony Hall, Newark, on Sunday, Feb. 28.

Oistrakh has curtailed his full American tour this season in order to meet commitments in his native Soviet Union. After his Symphony Hall appearance, starting at 3 p.m., Oistrakh will journey to the Midwest for concerts in Kansas before returning home.

Son of the illustrious violinist David Oistrakh, Igor was born in Odessa in 1931. He began his violin studies at six; his teachers included both his famous father and his father's teacher Pyotr Stolitsky, who also taught Nathan Milstein.

In the autumn of 1953, the young musician emerged from Moscow to conquer London and Paris where he was acclaimed the peer of his famous father. Cecil Smith of the London Daily Express called him a "genius" on the occasion of his Albert Hall debut at which he played the Beethoven and Khatchaturian concertos and one week later when his program included unaccompanied Bach at the Royal Festival Hall, he wrote "that big word still stands."

Overwhelming ovations at the Palais de Chaillot for his performances with the Conservatoire Orchestra under Andre Cluytens greeted his Paris debut shortly thereafter. In the United States his recordings for the Angel label created a demand for his appearances and in 1962 S. Harok brought him to North America where his transcontinental tour was completely sold out - a condition that has prevailed on each of his returns to these shores. He has met with the same praise in Europe, the Far East and the Near East.

Food executives hear 'generation gap' talks

The existence of a separate and distinct 'youth culture' that some day may inherit the earth" was acknowledged by 700 Wakefern and Shop-Rite retail food executives and their spouses who met Feb. 7 in Paramus to discuss the generation gap.

Wakefern is the supplying corporation and franchisor of 155 Shop-Rite Supermarkets.

The meeting was designed to educate all Shop-Rite management on the conflicting life-style and different values of youth as they affect Shop-Rite business internally and externally.

Recognition that today's youth - men and women under 30 - is substantially different from the older generation in thought, outlook and action, came through a panel discussion in which the audience participated. The discussion followed a half-hour audio-visual presentation called "The Generations" produced by A T & T for the Bell System.

Dr. Thomas R. Bennett II, a psychologist and panelist, drew a sharp contrast between the personal, existentialist credo of youth and the economic success orientation of the older generation. These are two separate cultures, he said.

Robert L. Henry, Wakefern president, a panelist and father of four children, was the first to acknowledge that youth is different. Commenting on a recent difference of opinion with his daughter, he said "the young feel the right to say exactly what is on their mind. We have an obligation as parents and employers to listen," he said.

Arts Center to present Bacharach, ballet group

The Garden State Arts Center announced this week that two of its amphitheater stage attractions this summer will be Burt Bacharach and the Stuttgart Ballet, each in week-long appearances.

Chairman John P. Gallagher of the New Jersey Highway Authority, which operates the Arts Center on the Garden State Parkway, said Bacharach will perform in the popular subscription series and the Stuttgart Ballet in the season's classical run.

The Arts Center, located off Parkway Exit 116 at its Telegraph Hill Park roadside area, will open the fourth summer season of nightly performances the second week in June. A full subscription schedule will be announced next month.

Bacharach is a pianist and one of the foremost composer-songwriters on the contemporary scene. The Stuttgart is considered one of Europe's greatest ballet companies.

Bacharach is scheduled to appear at the Arts Center the week of June 28, Monday through Saturday, and in a special Wednesday matinee free for children from disadvantaged areas of New Jersey. The Stuttgart Ballet is to present seven performances, including a paid-admission matinee, the week of July 12.

AUTHORS—Seton Hall University history professors Dr. Peter M. Mitchell (left) and Dr. John B. Duff examine a copy of their new book, "The Nat Turner Rebellion: The Historical Event and the Modern Controversy," which has just been released by Harper and Row publishers.

Nat Turner controversy Research evolves into book

Classroom assignments that generate enthusiasm in students are reward enough for most teachers, but two Seton Hall University professors have the added satisfaction of seeing one of their research assignments develop into a book.

"The Nat Turner Rebellion: The Historical Event and the Modern Controversy," edited by Dr. John B. Duff and Dr. Peter M. Mitchell, both of Livingston, is being issued this week by Harper and Row publishers.

In 1968 the two professors were teaching courses in American history on the South Orange campus. During the previous year a novel based on an actual historic event,

Mrs. Askin named to direct programs of AJC chapters

Marilyn Askin, a New Jersey lawyer and former newspaperwoman, has been appointed New Jersey director of the American Jewish Congress, according to an announcement by Will Maslow, national executive director.

Mrs. Askin, a resident of South Orange, will head the state office at 24 Commerce st., Newark. The new director will co-ordinate efforts by the local AJC Chapters to deal with problems confronting American Jewish life. "Some of these problems involve peace and poverty, race and freedom, Jewish continuity in the United States and Jewish survival in Israel and other lands," Maslow said.

Mrs. Askin, a 1970 graduate of Rutgers Law School, Newark, is also a CUNY graduate and alumna of the Russian Institute, Columbia University. She worked for six years as a reporter at The Record, Hackensack, and taught English from 1964 to 1967 at Weequahic and Arts High Schools in Newark before entering law school.

She has three children: Andrea, 8; Jonathan, 6; and Daniel, 3. Her husband, Frank, is a professor of law at Rutgers Law School and a National Board member of the American Civil Liberties Union.

'Fly now, pay later' is warning on LSD

"Fly now, pay later" is a particularly apt slogan for those planning a 'trip' with psychedelic or hallucinogenic drugs," Isadore Singer, president of the New Jersey Pharmaceutical Association, said this week. "LSD, for one, can be a one-way trip to the mental hospital -- or the morgue."

Stressing that all LSD use is illegal, Singer added: "Psychedelic recruiters may stress new sensations of color and sound, a sense of love, expanded creativity--but medical, hospital and court records show otherwise."

"The drug produces hallucinations by crossing the sensory circuits so that sound may appear as color, images may distort, unreal landscapes may appear. Unfortunately a round-trip is not guaranteed. Some users find it a one-way journey."

"A trip to the point of no return can leave the user imprisoned in a nightmare, dependent and maimed. Extensive hospitalization is often required. Abnormal brain waves recorded under LSD use may persist."

An additional danger is the afterglow. LSD's ability to take the user on an unplanned trip six months or a year after original use. When the hallucination recurs under unexpected conditions, dangers can increase.

"Recent medical evidence also indicates that chromosomal damage may result. Genetic effects, which may appear in the user's future children, are causing serious worry to researchers who are conducting animal tests as well as tests on confirmed LSD users."

"Law enforcement officials also point out additional hazards that hover over the LSD user -- delinquency, assault, robbery to obtain drug funds, highway accidents, arrests for drug distribution.

"These factors that affect the future health, the careers and the marital happiness of today's youth hardly add up to the glamorous world pictured for drug takers by recruiters."

Singer emphasized that LSD is not distributed legally.

"No doctor can prescribe it, no pharmacist can sell it. Most street suppliers are produced illegally, often under unsanitary conditions."

"In its pure state LSD is odorless, colorless, tasteless, and one of the most powerful drugs known. Often it is bulked for sale with other substances. At the present time it has no known medical application, although scholars have speculated that it might eventually help in treating alcoholics and in alleviating the pain of terminal patients.

"But as of today, any use is illegal and highly dangerous. A trip, when motivated by a non-user hopeful of preventing harm to the taker, may or may not lead to a safe return. A 'burn trip' can lead increasingly to the psychiatric ward or to a slab in the morgue."

'Civilisation' at Upsala

Upsala College and the East Orange Public Library will co-sponsor the showing of the film, "Civilisation" in the Upsala chapel during a period from Feb. 25 to March 18.

"Civilisation" is a highly acclaimed series of 50-minute color films covering a personal view of the ideas and events of the last 1,600 years.

Arrangements for the showing were made by Learned Bulman, director of the library, Charles Pierce, executive assistant to the Upsala president, and Mack Langford, director of the college's development department. They said the presentation of the films is the first step of what they hope will be a series of cultural programs jointly sponsored by the college and the library for the benefit of the public.

The schedule for each showing follows:
Feb. 25, "The Frozen World"; March 2, "The Great Thaw" and "Romance and Reality"; March 4, "Man -- The Measure of All Things" and "The Hero As Artist"; March 9, "Protest and Communication" and "Grandeur and Obedience"; March 16, "The Smile of Reason" and "The Worship of Nature"; March 18, "The Fallacies of Hope" and "Heroic Materialism."

Complete showings will take place twice on the specified days at 1:45 and 7:30 p.m. Admission is free.

New degree at Brooklyn

NEW YORK — Polytechnic Institute of Brooklyn will offer program leading to engineer degrees in both mechanical engineering and industrial engineering next fall.

The degree -- requiring a minimum of 30 credits beyond the master's -- is different from a doctorate in that it is oriented toward professional application rather than pure research.

Polytechnic also offers engineer degrees in aeronautics and astronautics, applied mechanics, chemical engineering and civil engineering. It is one of approximately 15 institutions in the country with programs leading to the post-master's degree.

The college conferred its first engineer degree last spring.

Requirements for the mechanical engineering department's engineer degree include four mandatory courses, seven technical electives and a project resulting in a new design or design technique.

The engineer degree in industrial engineering (offered by the Operations Research and System Analysis Department) represents completion of three required courses, at least 12 electives and a special project.

Both degrees carry pre-requisites of master's degrees or their equivalent in their respective fields.

Education boost

"The Confession of Nat Turner" by Southern writer William Styron, had appeared on the literary scene and immediately touched off what has been called "the most bitter, interesting and far-reaching literary controversy in recent memory." It was a fictionalized account of an 1831 slave uprising in Virginia during which 60 whites were slain.

Black critics of the novel, whose objections themselves resulted in a subsequent book, "Styron's Nat Turner: Ten Black Writers Respond," contended the author distorted history and emasculated a Negro hero. Styron, dismayed, claimed the right of literary interpretation tempered by "responsible imagination."

TO THE TWO Seton Hall teachers, the controversy provided a unique opportunity for their classes to examine both a historic event and its literary version and to make up their own minds as to the validity of the arguments it raised. Students were to read slave leader Nat Turner's own account, contemporary newspaper reports, historians' treatment of the event, the novel itself and leading articles on the controversy. In one course, a special Equal Opportunity Program class, most of the students were black and the project captured their imagination from the start.

Dr. Duff and Dr. Mitchell, in recognizing that historic and contemporary events may illuminate one another, also felt that the reading material would be of interest to the general public for a more complete understanding of both the history and the controversy of Nat Turner's rebellion.

THEIR BOOK brings together under one cover the most significant selections plus their own commentaries. The two historians also point out that the controversy reveals much of which Negroes and white think about one another.

"What it tells is not very pleasant," they write. Styron's bewilderment at the reception of his book by blacks "perhaps mirrors the bewilderment of whites at the fury and hatred so evident in America's ghettos today." For blacks, the praise and adulation initially accorded Styron's book by whites indicates how little understanding of black America survives in the white world.

"Americans, black and white, still have a long way to go," conclude the Seton Hall historians.

Dr. Duff, who is also Seton Hall's vice president in charge of instruction, is a graduate of Fordham University with an M.A. degree from Seton Hall and Ph.D. from Columbia. He is the author of many articles in historical journals and encyclopedias. His monograph, "The Irish in the United States," is scheduled for publication in March.

Dr. Mitchell, a graduate of Marquette University with master's and doctor's degrees from Colorado University, has written reviews for scholarly journals.

Israel Verein to show works of local artists

The Israel Verein will meet Thursday, Feb. 25, at 8:30 p.m. at Temple Israel, 2372 Morris Ave., Union. There will be an art show, at which prizes will be awarded. Charles Kelstein will preside. Harry Weiss is program chairman, and Al Dubman will be in charge of refreshments.

Seminary names campus speaker

The Rev. Dr. Olov Hartman, novelist, pastor, playwright, theologian and recently retired director of Sweden's Signa Foundation, will make several public appearances on the Princeton Theological Seminary campus March 17 and 18, President James I. Bird in the bog might be a fish

Will "cranberry pheasant" be the newest taste-tempting Garden State specialty? The retiring president of the American Cranberry Growers Assn. has raised the possibility, but growers are thinking it over. Robert Goodrich, presiding at the last meeting of his term, seriously proposed that South Jersey cranberry growers consider stocking their reservoirs with channel catfish to become a secondary crop. Every cranberry grower must have a reserve water supply to flood his bogs, so why not make double use of these ponds? Goodrich documented his proposal with an armful of publications and other information from the south central states during his talk at the growers meeting. Some of these described methods of raising catfish in farm ponds and feeding them scientifically like other farm livestock to produce high quality protein food in the form of a gourmet item. However, he pointed out, fresh and frozen catfish has not really caught on in Philadelphia and New York markets as it has in other regions. If the name of this delicacy is holding sales down, then why not "cranberry pheasant"? The idea is that if tuna can be called "chicken" then catfish may well be named pheasant.

Weight Watchers' diet stresses keeping it off

A new type of Weight Watchers diet takes the stress off of taking weight off and emphasizes keeping it off, according to Weight Watchers spokesmen. A person in the new diet program "may actually sit at a meeting and munch popcorn or peanuts," a spokesman said. "He—though it is most usually she—doesn't bulge over the side of a chair, wear extra clothing or walk in fear of buttons popping." The new Weight Watchers program, known as the Maintenance Plan, is a supple-

Centennial unit named

Ninety-three of New Jersey's leading citizens, representing government, education, religion, the arts, industry and business, have been named to the St. Peter's College Centennial Council. The council will advise the college on the direction and activities of its 1972 anniversary celebration. It will be chaired by Rev. Victor R. Yantelli, S.J., St. Peter's president. The first meeting will be at noon March 1 at the college. Government officials on the council are Gov. William T. Cahill, U.S. Sen. Clifford P. Case and Harrison A. mental program. The person who takes part in the Maintenance Plan may have lost weight in Weight Watchers or may simply be fighting weight and learning how to keep it off while eating pizza, potatoes, bread-and-butter, cake, pie and ice cream, the spokesman said. "Such a person is learning how to maintain normal weight gaining," he explained. "The secret is that Weight Watchers has learned to adapt its famous portion control program to everyday eating. It is this portion control that supercedes the need to count calories. It enables one to eat normal foods without glutony."

All Weight Watchers meetings now start with Maintenance Plan classes, said Lester S. Fein, area director. He added that one does not have to be a person who lost weight in Weight Watchers to join. "We spent years of research on the problem of keeping lost weight from returning," Fein added, "and we came up with something we found to be ideal for the person of normal weight who is constantly fighting to keep from gaining. We are getting more and more of these people in the Maintenance Plan."

The Maintenance Plan is being offered at these locations: Union: Veterans Memorial Home, High and Kirkland streets, on Wednesday evenings at 7:30; on the YMHA on Green Lane, on Monday mornings at 9:30; and Thursday evenings at 7:30. Springfield: Temple Shalom, Shalom, Shampiker road and Springfield avenue, on Tuesday evenings at 7:30. Linden: Polish National Hall, 300 Roselle st., Tuesday evenings at 7:30 and Wednesday mornings at 9:30. Irvington: Le Seul, 925 Springfield ave., on Wednesday and Thursday evenings at 7:30 and Wednesday at 12 noon. For information about the Maintenance Plan call Carol Gallanter at 276-3563 or Weight Watchers at 992-8600.

Mercury pollution under limits in N.J.

Laboratory analysis of water and marine life samples taken in New Jersey waterways has shown mercury content to be within the maximum limits of safety in food fish and drinking water.

Environmental Protection Commissioner Richard J. Sullivan, in making this announcement this week, said teams of federal, state and interstate government agencies had been cooperating for the past eight months, in making investigations of various waterways of the state, including those in the more industrialized areas.

Sullivan said he was issuing the statement because of the public interest in the mercury problem.

It follows a meeting in Trenton of representatives of the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, the Federal Environmental Protection Agency, two interstate water pollution commissions, specialists from the State Environmental Protection Department's own shell-fisheries and water pollution control bureaus, as well as the chief of the State Health Department's laboratories.

Sullivan said that, as a result of the meeting, it was agreed that portable water testing should include surveillance for mercury on a regular basis.

Another positive result, he said, was "the close look we should take at the sewage sludge we are now depositing off the Sandy Hook dumping grounds."

Sullivan revealed that the investigations and lab analysis had shown that sludge from treatment plants contained quantities of mercury and other heavy metals. He said this "further indicated the need to take strong action to control sludge dumping near our coastline."

Water Pollution Control and the Federal Water Quality Administration: Much of the work done in Essex, Union and Passaic counties has been based on a list of 100 mercury-using industries furnished by the United States Bureau of Mines.

"Our teams have visited many of these plants. Where indicated, grab samples of effluents have been taken, and through interviews, data has been collected with respect to the use of mercury in processing operations to find out those plants where mercury finds its way into wastewater discharges."

"We have found 15 plants which discharge mercury into receiving waters in amounts up to one-half pound per day. These levels are not satisfactory and we are working with these plants to reduce this discharge."

"In fact, regardless of the amounts of mercury discharged, the plants must show us they are planning to control even the less critical amount discharged. One substantial industrial source has brought its mercury release to very low levels."

BUYING WISELY

From Better Business Bureau of Metropolitan New York, Inc.

Dear Larrie,
A friend of ours keeps telling my husband and me that New England has free land for people. In fact, he says that he has been selected to get a free lot or a cabin site.

Dear Larrie,
My wife is always giving to some charity or another. We have thermometers, key chains, Indian gifts, etc. - you name it - from organizations she's sent money to.

Dear Sucker,
First of all, ask your wife to call the Better Business Bureau before she indulges in her next burst of charity. We have information on most charities. And if we don't, we'll be happy to get it for her.

Dear Concerned,
He may not mean any harm - but what he is doing has a name: stealing. You and your husband should talk to him about it and you should certainly return the "little things" to the manager or pay for them.

Dear Larrie,
My husband and I would like to be able to have an evening out once a month. But we have two small children and we don't really know how to get a baby sitter who is reliable.

Dear Larrie,
My little boy is 7 and lately he has been coming home with things he has taken from our supermarket. He thinks it's fun to take the merchandise without paying for it.

Heart Fund volunteers will canvass on Sunday

The month-long 1971 Heart Fund campaign will reach its high point Sunday, when Heart Sunday volunteers will begin to canvass residences in 19 Union County communities, according to State Senator Matthew J. Rinaldo of Union, chairman of the county drive. The door-to-door canvass is conducted in all towns except Summit and Linden where mail solicitations are used. It is anticipated that all residential visits will be completed and that kits will be turned in not later than Feb. 28.

The residential canvass will augment the total already collected in the February campaign, which is being conducted to support and expand research, education and community service programs of the Union County Heart Association. It is part of the American Heart Association, the only national voluntary health agency devoted exclusively to combating diseases of the heart and blood vessels.

During the past year these diseases were responsible for approximately 53 percent of all deaths in the nation.

"Each Heart volunteer will call at the homes of between 50 and 100 neighbors, distributing helpful information about the heart diseases and receiving contributions for the Heart Fund," Senator Rinaldo said.

Emphasizing the uniqueness of the Heart cause, Senator Rinaldo pointed out that Heart

Fund contributions go to fight a vast complex of diseases, including heart attack, stroke, hardening of the arteries, high blood pressure, rheumatic fever and Inborn heart defects.

He asked all Union County residents to be generous when the Heart Sunday volunteer calls.

In case of inclement weather, the Heart Sunday canvass will be postponed until the following Sunday.

Homemaker group tallies its 18th year of public service

Mrs. Robert Sutman of Westfield, president of the board of trustees of the Visiting Homemaker Service of Central Union County, noted that the group, in its eighteenth year, has given 48,356 hours of service to 429 clients. The service has 93 homemakers.

The board met last week at the Lynn Restaurant in Elizabeth with 30 members and guests present.

Leo Mover, executive director of Montclair, spoke on the Future of Homemaker Service. He pointed out that all volunteer agencies are being forced to take a close look at their structure, purposes and goals at the present time. It is essential to question financial status and relevant programs as well. Mover believes that homemaker services should be a part of an overall Home Care Agency and that public cooperation is highly important in planning toward this goal.

Officers of the board of trustees elected for a two year term were Mrs. Robert W. McArthur of Cranford as vice-president and Mrs. Clinton H. Holder of Westfield as treasurer.

Five new trustees were elected for a two year term: Mrs. Charles F. Bahr and Miss M. Dorothea Benn of Elizabeth, Mrs. Geraldine Casey of Rahway, Mrs. Walter M. Moon of Plainfield and Mrs. Ford C. Pethick of Cranford.

The following were re-elected for a similar term: Mrs. Marcus Hamilton and Mrs. Arba Taylor of Cranford, Mrs. J.H.S. Pearson of Plainfield, Mrs. Howard Young of Roselle, Mrs. Philip Schick of Scotch Plains, Mrs. Peter L. Hughes Jr. of Union, Mrs. William Linn and Mrs. Robert Sutman of Westfield.

25 at observatory for eclipse of moon

Twenty-five persons visited the Sperry Observatory on the Cranford campus of Union College to observe the total eclipse of the moon which took place early last Wednesday.

Prof. Patrick J. White of Warren Township, director of the observatory, reported that the nocturnal astronomy buffs were members of Amateur Astronomers, Inc., which operates the observatory in cooperation with Union College, students who are researching the subject in the college's astronomy laboratory, and observatory personnel.

During the course of the night, the turret-mounted telescopes at the sky-scanning complex were in constant use and were augmented by five portable instruments which were set up at strategic points on the grounds. Viewing conditions were satisfactory enough so that many lunar photographs were taken and occultations measured during the course of the eclipse, according to Prof. White.

Step right up for 2 walks

A six-mile afternoon ramble in Union County and an 11-mile hike in New York State are planned this week-end for members and guests of the Union County Hiking Club.

On Saturday, Lester Goldberg of Cranford will lead a ramble from Nomahegan Park, Cranford, through Lenape Park, and Echo Lake Park and return to Nomahegan Park. The group will meet at the parking area in Nomahegan Park at 1 p.m.

On Sunday, William Myles of Summit will lead an 11-mile hike in the Lake Tiorati area of Harriman State Park, New York. The group will meet at the administration building of the Union County Park Commission, Warinanco Park, Elizabeth, at 8:15 a.m., or at the Lake Tiorati parking area on Seven Lakes Drive in Harriman Park at 9:45 a.m.

For further information concerning the above hikes contact the recreation department of the Union County Park Commission.

Family concert Guitarist featured

GUITARIST Louis Hemsey, who will headline New Jersey Symphony Family Concert at Newark State College on Feb. 28.

Guitarist Louis Hemsey will be the guest soloist with the New Jersey Symphony Orchestra at the second concert of the Elizabeth-Union series at Newark State College, Union, on Sunday, February 28 at 3 p.m. This concert, the first family concert to be given by the Symphony in the Elizabeth-Union area, will be directed and narrated by Henry Lewis, the Symphony's music director.

Hemsey, who will perform Rodrigo's Concierto de Aranjuez with the orchestra, is a native of New Jersey. His musical training began at the age of 12, with private guitar lessons in his home town, Fair Lawn. In a few years, he was performing in a rock band, and playing dates all over the metropolitan area.

It was during his senior year at Fair Lawn High School that Hemsey began to think seriously of taking up classical music. In a concentrated effort, he taught himself classical guitar and was accepted at the Mannes College of Music in New York. There he increased his skill in the instrument and minored in composition.

Last year he was selected to represent the United States at the Festival of American and Spanish Music held in Puerto Rico. His guitar virtuosity has also been featured in performances with the Metropolitan Opera Orchestra under the direction of Colin Davis and Richard Bonynge.

The program for this family concert will also include excerpts from the "Mother Goose Suite" by Ravel, Carnival of the Animals by Saint-Saens and Rossini's William Tell Overture.

The Elizabeth chapter of the Women's Committee for the New Jersey Symphony has been instrumental in bringing this concert series to the area. The third, and final, concert will be held on Saturday, March 20 at the Masonic Temple in Elizabeth. Tickets for the upcoming concert are priced at $6 and $5 with special student rates at $2. Reservations may be obtained by calling Mrs. Richard A. Krinzman, ticket chairman, at EL4-9077 or the Symphony office at 624-8203.

Learning specialist to begin lectures at NSC on Tuesday

Dr. Nathan Weiss, president of Newark State College, Union has announced plans for the two-day visit to the campus by Dr. Stanford Erikson, director of the Center for Research and Learning of the University of Michigan, on Tuesday and Wednesday.

Dr. Erikson will talk to the college faculty on the topic of "The Individual Student as the Moving Force in Higher Education," and will conduct two seminars on "Factors Important for Learning and Thinking," and "Motivation and the Idiosyncratic Student." According to Dr. Weiss, "Dr. Erikson's visit to our campus is but one of the initial steps we have taken for continuous development of teaching innovation at Newark State College."

Dr. Erikson joined the University of Michigan in 1962 as the center's first director. Born in Chicago, Dr. Erikson spent most of his early years in Salt Lake City, Utah. He earned his bachelor of arts degree in 1933 and his master of arts degree in 1934 at the University of Utah and received his doctor of philosophy degree from the University of Chicago in 1938.

Professor Erikson is a research specialist in the field of human learning and thinking. His work at the center seeks to bridge the gap between the impersonal science of human behavior and the highly personal nature of teaching and of learning by the individual student. In addition to conducting his own program of research, Dr. Erikson and his associates at the center consult with teachers and departments in all parts of the university on problems and innovations related to classroom activities. Erikson is editor of the "Memo to the Faculty," which reports new developments on topics of interest to college teachers, such as the educational uses of technology, testing and grading, and the personality and social factors that influence the educational achievements of college students. He also edits "Development and Experiment in College Teaching," a survey of new instructional activities at the Big Ten Universities and is completing a book entitled "The Teacher and The Young Adult."

DR. STANFORD ERIKSEN

Prior to coming to the University of Michigan, Dr. Erikson was professor and head of the Department of Psychology at Vanderbilt University. During World War II he served as an officer in the U.S. Air Force psychological research program. He also performed various consultation and advisory services for the government and for other agencies. He was a member of the Advisory Panel on Personnel and Training Research of the U.S. Department of Defense during 1954-59. In August, 1960, he served as a member of the working group conference on training of astronauts of the Armed-Forces-National Research Council Committee on bio-astronauts. He also served as a member of the committee on teaching of the Association for Higher Education and as president of the American Board of Examiners in Professional Psychology, Inc.

Author of numerous research articles and scholarly publications, he served as president of the Southeastern Psychological Association and of the Vanderbilt chapter of the American Association of University Professors.

He also is a member of the American Psychological Association, Midwestern Psychological Association, Southern Society for Philosophy and Psychology, American Association for Advancement of Science, Sigma Xi and American Educational Research Association.

Black author to lecture, conduct seminars at UC

Dr. Nathan Wright Jr., one of today's most respected black authors as well as professor of urban affairs and chairman of the Afro-American history department at the State University of New York, will speak with Union College students on Friday, March 12, when he visits the Cranford campus as part of Black Awareness Week.

His visit will be sponsored by the Society of Modern Reconstruction, according to Terry Benjamin of Elizabeth, chairman. Dr. Wright will conduct a series of seminars during the afternoon, beginning at 2 p.m., covering numerous topics pertaining to the black man and his role in contemporary society.

Later that day at 7:30 p.m. in the Cranford Campus Center gymnasium, Dr. Wright will deliver a lecture on "Black Genocide." The civil rights leader believes pervasive racism coupled with growing automation and increased emphasis upon overpopulation will lead both consciously and unconsciously toward efforts at the extermination of the black people.

The public is welcome to attend the evening lecture. Admission is $2.

Black Awareness Week is being conducted by SMR in order to promote on campus a knowledge of black studies and culture and to inform the average student of the problems and complexities facing the black man, Benjamin said.

Syndicated columnist in several major newspapers, Dr. Wright has written a book, "Let's Work Together," nominated for a Pulitzer prize. His "Black Power and Urban Unrest" received the Media Workshop Award, and "Ready to Riot" was hailed by critics as "perhaps the best book in print on our cities as human fabric."

From 1964 until 1969, Dr. Wright served as executive director of the department of urban work of the Episcopal Diocese of Newark, and this year was a government witness on public corruption in that city.

Dr. Wright was chairman of the 1967 and 1968 national and international conferences on black power and also a consultant to the city of Newark during its civil disorders several years ago. He is a former member of the planning committee for the White House Conference on Children and Youth.

The recipient of five earned university degrees, including a doctorate from Harvard University, Dr. Wright was awarded the honorary Doctor of Laws degree by Upsala College for "his outstanding work in education and civil rights work."

Party for sorority

RECREATES ROLE -- James Earl Jones portrays Jack Jefferson in the film version of the Broadway stage hit, "The Great White Hope," which opens tomorrow at the Fox Theater, Route 22, Union.

Ice dance champs to appear in benefit at South Mountain

The winning dance team in North American ice skating competition, Judy Schwomeyer and Jim Sladky, has accepted an invitation to perform in the 1971 Funorama-on-Ice show April 17 and 18 at the South Mountain Arena, West Orange.

Sladky and Miss Schwomeyer swept the U.S.-Canadian finals two weeks ago at Peterborough, Ontario, after winning the gold medal for dance earlier in United States figure skating competition for their fourth straight year.

The team's brilliant performance in last year's World's finals won a silver medal. Funorama, now in its 12th year, is held annually for the benefit of The Hospital Center at Orange and will present world-famous ice stars together with a cast of nearly 200.

Producers of the show since its inception have been the Essex Skating Club.

Miss Schwomeyer, 21 years old, has attended Syracuse University and the University of Detroit, and is a foreign language major. The diminutive Miss Schwomeyer, only 4 feet 10, is a former national champion in gymnastics.

Sladky, 24 years old, is a graduate of Syracuse University where he majored in chemistry.

Miss Schwomeyer is a native of Indianapolis, Ind., and Sladky has been in Syracuse, N.Y. Both now reside in Wilmington, Del., where they are training with their coach, Ron Ludington. The two have been competing in figure skating events since 1962 but have only been skating as a team since 1966.

Some special honors earned by the pair include: members of the championship exhibition tour of 12 European countries, sponsored by the International Skating Union; participated as celebrities in the 1970 Indianapolis "500" Festival; demonstrated ice dancing at the 1968 Winter Olympic Games in Grenoble, France.

They placed second in the 1970 World competition by only 1/10 of a point out of a possible 540.

Tickets for this year's benefit may be obtained at the Arena box office or the Funorama office at The Hospital Center at Orange.

'Tora! Tora! Tora!' troubling, disconcerting, a 'must see'

By JERRY ENIS "Tora! Tora! Tora!" which opened last week at the Rialto Theatre in Westfield should be placed on every movie-goer's "must see" list -- but no one is going to "like" it. The film is not easy to watch and, for anyone who remembers World War II well, impossible to enjoy. Though the viewer knows that America won the war and that the brilliant strategy of Admiral Yamamoto and Commander Genda, architects of the attack on Pearl Harbor, engineered only an opening victory, he finds "the facts" hard to swallow.

What perhaps is even more disconcerting, is viewing the American bungling and mental constipation that made the attack far more successful than the Japanese ever dreamed it could be. Disconcerting, because anyone who has served in the armed forces knows that the cockeyed misdirection of command they are seeing in living color on the screen can be factual.

A viewer will be very uncomfortable if he likes his World War II movies to give five minutes to the bombing of Pearl and an hour and a half to John Wayne making them sorry they did it. He will want to create out: "You confounded idiot!" -- or words to that effect. The story is told in the style of "The Longest Day," intercutting the Japanese and American sequences. Japanese characters speak in their native tongue with English subtitles (sometimes difficult to read) provided for their dialogue.

There are many Hollywood luminaries in the cast. Martin Balsam as Admiral Kimmel, Joseph Cotton as Henry Stimson and E.G. Marshall as Lt. Colonel Bratton, a military intelligence officer who spends the entire length of the movie trying to get someone to believe the Japs are going to attack. However, there are no "stars." There is not enough time to develop characters. The authors assume that the viewer can "tell the players without a scorecard." In many instances, however, it is difficult to remember who the villain is.

The 20th Century Fox film is climaxed by a full-scale restaging to the attack itself spectacularly photographed on the actual locations in Hawaii where it all took place 30 years ago. The special effect and aerial photography were excellent.

'Trash' remains for second week

"Trash," adult film with a shattering mixture of outrageous parody and a raw realistic lower depths plunge into the subterranean drug world of loners, is being held over for another week at the Ormont Theater, East Orange. The picture, which concerns a young man who lives with a homosexual in New York, and his confrontations with various types of people, has Joe Dallesandro, Holly Woodlawn and Jane Fonda in stellar roles.

'Ann and Eve' film now at Art Cinema

"Ann and Eve," a Swedish adult motion picture drama about two girls on a vacation in Yugoslavia, their sexual adventures and their involvement with a murder, opened yesterday at the Art Cinema in Irvington Center. Gio Petre and Marie Liljedahl portray the title roles.

The picture, in color, was directed by Arne Mattsson. Admission is restricted to adults.

Dr. Somberg is an assistant professor of neurosurgery of the College of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey at Newark and is a graduate of New York University and Long Island College of Medicine. He is certified by the American Board of Neurological Surgery.

Dr. Somberg succeeds Dr. Lewis E. Savel of South Orange, chief, Obstetrical and Gynecological Service, who served as president of the medical staff for three years.

'My son, the wild food gatherer' 80 enrolled in foraging course at Rutgers

It's bound to happen. Some young man home from college is going to be asked what he's studying. When he answers "foraging," he's going to be greeted with a blank stare.

The student will be one of the roughly 80 young women and men enrolled in a new course in the anthropology department at Livingston College of Rutgers. Officially titled "College Course in Foraging," it is aimed basically at teaching students how to identify, collect and even cook edible wild plants.

Assistant Professor of Anthropology Mark Dornstreich and Livingston student Peter Brann jointly developed the unusual course. They believe it is the first of its kind to be offered to undergraduates by any American college.

Dornstreich became deeply interested in the anthropological aspects of food gathering while collecting information for his doctoral dissertation among the Cadjo Enga people in the East Sepik District of the Territory of New Guinea.

Because of the unexpectedly large size of the class, Dornstreich has had to plan several field trips each Saturday. They will be led by botanists and biologists who are experts in identifying plants in the Northeast.

Rutgers College sophomore Joseph Bird (center) of Washington D.C. is one of the 80 students enrolled. fort in a natural setting, away from the supermarket?

"There's a marvelous sense of self-sufficiency to be gained in knowing you can live off the land if you have to," Dornstreich comments.

A fourth benefit lies in the "gourmet" qualities of wild edible plants. They can brighten a boring diet and simultaneously serve as an escape from the pesticides and chemical fertilizers which are used on commercial crops.

And, also very important from an anthropological perspective, learning how to find and prepare edible plants can give a student insight into the everyday food-gathering rounds of primitive peoples, insight that would be hard to get any other way.

As Dornstreich pointed out in their first class, the Lenape Indians, who originally lived in New Jersey were so intimately involved with subsistence activities that they named the months of their lunar year after them.

March was Shad Month, because that was the important fish caught at that time. It seems somehow appropriate that in the forthcoming Shad Month, a class of modern young New Jerseyans will begin to spend Saturdays learning about the natural foods with which the Indians were so familiar.

Three hearings set on new master plan for higher education

Three hearings on the draft of Phase Two of the state's master plan for higher education are scheduled for next month.

Mrs. Katherine K. Neuberger, a member of the New Jersey Board of Higher Education, will conduct the hearings, scheduled for different areas of the state.

The first hearing, beginning at 9:30 a.m., Tuesday, March 2, will be under the sponsorship of Mercer Community College and will be held at the State Auditorium at 205 W. State st. in Trenton.

The second hearing is scheduled for the same time on the following day, Wednesday, March 3. It will be held in the Moot Court Room (Room 121) in the Rutgers Law School Building at 180 University ave. in Newark.

Classboro State College in the southern part of the state will be the site of the third hearing, in the auditorium in the Little Administration Building at 9:30 on Wednesday, March 10.

The purpose of the hearings is to encourage public discussion of the draft plan released by the Department of Higher Education last month. Phase Two of the master plan addresses itself to roles and missions and enrollment goals for the state's colleges and universities.

Included among its recommendations are a proposal to establish a Graduate University of New Jersey, as well as four new state colleges.

Organizations interested in being heard have been invited to contact Mrs. Nancy Mattek at the Department of Higher Education in Trenton (609-292-6462). Speakers will be limited to 10 minutes but may offer longer written statements, of which 20 copies should be available for distribution to members of the Board of Higher Education.

Copies of the Phase Two draft of the master plan are available at college and public libraries, or may be obtained for $1.50 from the Master Planning Office, Department of Higher Education, 225 W. State st., Trenton, 08625.

Worrall elected to head newspaper advertising group

Walter Worrall, publisher of the News-Record of Maplewood and South Orange, was elected president of Quality Weeklies of New Jersey at its annual meeting.

Quality Weeklies is the national advertising representative of 53 newspapers in 12 northern New Jersey counties and includes this publication.

Worrall acquired the News-Record in 1968 when he formed the Worrall Publishing Co. His entire business career has been in newspapers, first as a compositor with the Paterson Evening News, then as advertising manager of the Citizen of Morris County for ten years prior to taking over the Maplewood-South Orange paper. He received a degree in business administration from Rutgers University, and lives in North Haledon.

Worrall's paper is a charter member of Quality Weeklies, which was founded 28 years ago. The association offers the economy of scheduling advertising campaigns in many papers at one time on a one-order, one-invoice, one-check system, strengthened by regional merchandising and marketing services and long-term rate guarantees. The office is at 543 Valley rd., Upper Montclair.

John A. Sullivan III, advertising manager of the Caldwell Progress, was elected vice-president and associate publisher of the Montclair Times and executive vice-president and secretary of the Verona-Cedar Grove Times, was re-elected secretary. Litvany, general manager of the Bloomfield Independent Press and the Glen Ridge Paper and secretary-treasurer of the East Orange Record, Orange Transcript and West Orange Chronicle, remains as treasurer.

The terms of two executive-board members were extended for another year: William Klaber, Jr., editor and publisher of the West Essex Tribune in Livingston, and Gordon Glover, editor and publisher of the Citizen of Morris County in Denville.

Pat Faiella, who is general manager of Quality Weeklies.

DDT in caviar? Prof to find out

Sponsored by the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, a Rutgers specialist in detecting pesticide residues in food is on his way to Iran.

The mission of George Winnett, a professor of chemistry at the College of Agriculture and Environmental Science, will be to study the amounts of DDT in caviar and its source, the sturgeon and the food chain of sturgeon.

Iranian interests requested the study because of their awareness of worldwide pesticide residue problems and a desire to maintain the high quality of sturgeon and caviar exports.

Prof. Winnett will work most of March in Teheran and Bandarabadi, near the Caspian Sea sturgeon fisheries where the fish roe is produced and processed. He will advise technicians on pesticide analysis techniques.

Tax act provides bigger exemptions

The Tax Reform Act of 1969 raised personal and dependence exemption deduction for Federal income tax from $600 to $625 for 1970, Roland H. Nash Jr., IRS district director for New Jersey, said this week.

The extra exemption for taxpayers 65 or over or for those who are blind is also $625.

The increase in dependency exemptions was accompanied by a change in the income test for claiming dependents. Previously, a person had to have income of less than $600 to qualify as a dependent. That amount has now been raised to $625 for 1970.

The gross-income test, however, does not apply to children under 19 or to full-time students, but parents still must furnish over half of a child's support and meet the other dependency requirements to claim a child or student as a dependent.

Epilepsy Foundation hopes to educate public on disease

A seven-step public education program was outlined for volunteers of the New Jersey Chapter, Epilepsy Foundation of America, this week by James F. White, president.

"The Epilepsy Foundation is a neophyte in New Jersey," White explained, "therefore our primary objective will be educating the public to our problems, needs and programs."

White estimated that one in 100 New Jersey residents suffers from some form of the malady.

White outlined the seven-step program of education as follows:

- Expand the referral and information service which chapters provides to epileptics and their families;
-Establish a chapter newspaper to improve and strengthen the lines of communication between members;
-Provide medical alert necklaces and identification cards for New Jersey epileptics;
-Institute employment assistance programs through which employers would be encouraged to provide employment and on-the-job training opportunities;

-Conduct school alert programs and educate school personnel to better understand the epileptic student;
-Institute social and discussion activities in various peer groups, and
-Conduct information seminars with the cooperation of the medical profession, government agencies and other interested groups.

"The problems facing our chapter," White explained, are many. Because the foundation is so new, our message has not reached all those who come in contact with epileptics.

"There is a real job to be done here," White said, "and we can use all the help we can get."

Further information regarding the work of the Foundation may be obtained by calling 688-4231 or writing the New Jersey Chapter, Epilepsy Foundation of America, 1423-Stuyvesant ave., Union 07083.

Upsala gets okay to hire objectors

The New Jersey division of the Selective Service system has granted Upsala College, East Orange, permission to employ conscientious objectors in the civilian work program in lieu of induction.

Under the terms of the arrangement, a qualified objector may work as a chaplain's assistant, a janitor or a grounds keeper. The salary will be $1.50 per hour which is the state minimum. Eligible applicants are not necessarily confined to the Upsala community.

Selective Service regulations provide that the assignment of a conscientious objector shall parallel as nearly as possible the 1-A man in his processing for and performance of military duty. The registrant does not have a right to select the work which he is to perform. Consideration is given to the utilization of his skills, as is done in the armed forces, when other considerations do not prevent it, but, as in the armed forces, it is not always practicable to assign a man to a job where he is able to utilize all his special skills.

Arrangements for the civilian work program for conscientious objectors were made by Charles Lundgren, Upsala's placement director.

Banking institute to hear economist on financial outlook

Dr. Edward M. Syring Jr., associate economist of Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co., New York, will be the guest speaker at the New Jersey Bank Administration Institute's dinner meeting tonight at 6:30, at the Robert Treat Hotel, Newark. His topic will be "The Economic and Financial Outlook."

Formerly economist with the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, Dr. Syring received his three degrees at the University of Oregon. He was the recipient of a doctoral grant from the Ford Foundation and a fellowship from the American-Scandinavian Foundation. He presently acts as adjunct assistant professor of economics at The City University of New York.

Dr. Syring is the author of the book Demand for Money in Norway, published in 1968, and articles written by him have been published in professional journals.

He is a member of the American Economic Association, National Association of Business Economists, New York Association of Business Economists, Metropolitan Economics Club of New York City, and the Downtown Economists Luncheon Group.

A pre-dinner workshop is scheduled for 4:30 p.m. Topic for discussion is "Tellers—Offense and Defense," with George Holman, vice-president of the State Bank of North Jersey acting as moderator.

Overlook opens center to check heart batteries

Safeguarding patients with Pacemaker implants and bringing an important new service to the community, Overlook Hospital this week opened a Pacemaker Evaluation Service to check the battery strength of implanted Pacemakers against early battery failure.

Some 46,000 Americans today are leading normal lives, thanks to Pacemaker implants, according to recent statistics compiled by Dr. Victor Parsonnet, member of the Overlook Medical Staff and Chief of Surgery at Newark Beth Israel Hospital.

The Pacemaker procedure, which made medical headlines 10 years ago, has become a relatively simple operation -- but a vital factor in modern medicine's battle against heart disease. The Pacemaker is a small battery-operated mechanism, usually inserted under the skin just below the collar bone, that maintains the heart at a regular beat. The battery is usually good for a period of two years, when it must be replaced.

Case histories of patients who were so weak and faltering that they could hardly navigate, read like a modern-day miracle after the Pacemaker implant, which restores most patients to vigorous patterns of normal living, according to medical authorities.

Overlook's Pacemaker service is co-sponsored by the New Jersey Regional Medical Program, which is sharing the $6,000 cost with the hospital, as well as providing technician training and sharing other operational costs. It will be run in conjunction with the pacemaker evaluation clinic at Newark Beth Israel Medical Center.

OVERLOOK'S IS THE SECOND installation in a planned statewide network of five or more evaluation centers to be connected with the Beth Israel computer clinic.

Patients will be connected to electronic equipment, which will monitor the functioning of the Pacemaker unit and the patient's own heart. This data will be teletyped to the Beth Israel computer center where the patient's former data will be printed out, along with the new information and percentage of change, if any. This information will be returned to Overlook within minutes for evaluation by Overlook physicians, who will then determine the course of action for the patient.

The Pacemaker Service is located in Overlook's new Cardiorespiratory Laboratory, the director of which, Dr. A. G. Vitale, developed the new service with Dr. John Gregory and Dr. Richard Brenner and members of the Overlook cardiology staff.

As information is gathered in quantity through patient case histories, standardization of pacemaker evaluations should become possible, aiding research to the field.

Another advantage to patients in the Overlook area will be the proximity of the new evaluation service. Formerly it was necessary to travel to Newark Beth Israel for such evaluation.

It comes in three economy sizes.

These are just some of the sizes Volkswagens come in. Regular, large and giant economy size.

Regular, you know. It's the familiar beetle.

Large is our Squareback sedan. It holds more than the largest trunk of the largest sedan.

Giant economy size is our big 'bus-like box. It holds nearly twice as much as the average station wagon.

And all three VWs do everything you expect a Volkswagen to do.

They have air-cooled engines in the rear, of course. So there's no water to boil over or freeze up. And no need for antifreeze.

And they're easy on gasoline. The bug and the Squareback average about 26 miles on a gallon. The box about 23.

So you see, no matter what size we make Volkswagens, they're all economical.

Why not come in and size one up?
