Membership fees increased at pool to meet rising costs

The Mountainside Borough Council, at its regular monthly meeting last week, voted to raise family and individual membership fees at the Mountainside Community Pool.

Councilman William Cullen, chairman of the recreation committee, explained the increase was a result of declining membership and rising costs. He also read the official statement by the pool committee of the borough Recreation Commission. Following is the complete text of that statement:

"The Mountainside Community Pool has been in existence for seven years and on Memorial Day will open its doors for its eighth season. During the period 1966 through 1972, the family membership fee has remained constant at $80 per season despite two (actors:

-A decline in revenue because of a drop in membership from 794 in 1967 to 691 in 1972 (a decrease of 103 families);

"-Rising expenditures brought about by an increase in the cost of utilities, chemicals, maintenance and repairs to the facility.

rise from $10,000 per year to $20,000 per year. This fact coupled with the decline in revenue the increase in operating costs dictates that an adjustment in pool fees take place.

"For the 1973 season the family membership fee will be $100 and the single membership fee will be $50. Guest fees have also been adjusted by a very modest amount.

"The operations of the pool have always been administered in an efficient and businesslike manner. The adjustment to pool fees is in keeping with sound business principles as it will keep the pool a self-liquidating asset and no burden to the Mountainside taxpaver.

"The pool continues to be one of the finest in the state of New Jersey and is the best entertainment buy for the family. As in the past, many social events are planned for both the young and also the young at heart during the coming season.

"In an effort to stimulate membership in the pool, an invitation will be extended to all nonmember families and, in particular, to new families in town to spend a day at the pool as our guest. Details of this program will be

Red Cross unit starts drive for funds by mail

The Westfield-Mountainside Chapter of the American National Red Cross has launched its annual mail fund-raising drive in the Mountainside area, it was announced this week by Mrs. Elmer A. Hoffarth, retired Mountainside library director, chairman of the Red Cross fund campaign.

She declared, "The work of the Red Cross is financed by the voluntary membership contributions of the American people. If it were not for the generosity and complete support of the residents of Mountainside and the United Fund of Westfield, the Westfield-Mountainside Chapter could not have served so efficiently during the past years.

"The Red Cross idea grew out of the neighbor-to-neighbor spirit of extending a helping hand," Mrs. Hoffarth explained. "Through it today we reach out across the communities of this nation and the world to help the stricken and distressed, just as we do with the family nextdoor in time of illness and trouble.

"This is the true meaning of belonging to the Red Cross. We don't just give to the Red Cross we 'join' the Red Cross. And through our membership and volunteer support, we band together with millions of other good neighbors to accomplish what no one of us could do alone

"We continue to reshape the organization's programs in the light of today's local and national priorities and social concerns," Mrs. Hoffarth said, "so that we might more efficiently aid all Americans who might need

"This is your opportunity to join and renew your association with the Good Neighbor. March is Red Cross Month and all residents and business firms in Mountainside are urged to join in supporting their local chapter of the American National Red Cross

Baseball diamond finds best friends are borough girls

It may be the effects of the women's liberation movement, or it may simply be because Little League registration dates fell on weekends bracketing a vacation period, but, whatever the reason, figures indicate the borough's girls seem more interested in getting on the baseball diamond this year than do the Recreation Commissioner William Cullen noted in his report at the February Borough Council meeting that Little League registration "has been very, very poor," while the girls" softball sign-up was highly successful.

After holding two sign-up days, Feb. 10 and 17, there were a total of 207 boys' registrations submitted, according to Little League president, Ed Steele However, this figure can be misleading.

"Last year we had a total of 129 registrations." Steele noted, but that was just in the 10, 11 and 12 year-old age groups. The 207 figure includes boys from 8 years of age up to 12. Also, we have a number of boys who played last year and failed to sign up for this season

For instance, there were 90 playing in the senior league (covering ages 13, 14, 15) last year, and now we have only 70 registered '

There are four sub-leagues in Little League play the American League for eight and nine year olds, the "major" Little League for 10-12 year olds, a "minor league" division for the same age group and the Senior League

"We arrange it this way so that every boy who signs up gets to play." Steele said However, if we do not get additional registrations, we'll probably have to do a little rearranging of teams

The girls' softball program, which was directed by the Little League up until two years ago, last week had a total of 177 young ladies registered. The fifth-through-eighth graders have been signing up since early February, and more were expected to apply before the deadline tomorrow.

Motor vehicle violations, all of which oc-curred on Rt. 22, and drug charges, including those stemming from a raid on a Rt. 22 home, were on the docket of the Mountainside Municipal Court Feb. 21.

Judge Jacob R. Bauer levied the heaviest fine of the night against Michael Glasco of Plainfield, charged with driving while his license was revoked, operating an unregistered vehicle and failing to have the auto inspected. Glasco paid a total of $250.

Robert T. White of Scotch Plains was fined $15 for passing on the shoulder of the highway. John S. Goodrich Farms of Avoca, N.Y., was ned $20 for not having license plates on its hearing on his client's case. That defendant has been charged with possession of more than 25 grams of marijuana, and possession with intent The court session included two other narcotics cases. Paul E. Tamayo of Elizabeth, arrested in the borough Jan. 29, pleaded guilty to possessing less than 25 grams of marijuana and using or being under the influence of the drug. He was fined a total of $130 and was placed on six month's probation.

Stuart C. Caldwell, both of 1277 U. S. Rt. 22. They were arrested after a Feb. 2 raid on their home, located next to the Mountainside police headquarters. Sanford is accused of possessing less than 25

A MUSING from the desk

Now that the school board elections are over and everyone has wished everyone else well. there are still a few suggestions we would like to make about adapting our schools to prepare youngsters for a world which no one will ever understand.

For our very youngest classes, we urge at least a minicourse in shoelace tying. We realize that most kids do manage to slop along until adolescence, but there are rare occasions when all laces should be tied. And in this, as in so many other fields, it's up to the schools to deal with problems beyond the abilities of most

Also for the small fry, we might well benefit from instruction in cereal-box reading. Children not adequately trained might miss out on some of the premium offers, leading to feelings of inferiority and a poor relationship with the peer group. Besides, kids without cereal boxes to read might be tempted to emit cheerful conversation at the breakfast table. thus inflicting severe traums on their parents.

Also valuable at a comparatively young age would be a comprehensive course in animal husbandry; from turtles to gerbils, not to mention salamanders, guinea pigs, hamsters and infant siblings. This could alleviate a great deal of domestic tension.

Just by way of example, we might mention that we are missing one newt from our familial collection. The only one who knows exactly what happened is the cocker spaniel, and he isn't telling.

Somewhat older scholars could greatly expand their horizons with instruction in selfdiagnosis. Students who don't want to go to school all too often limit their symptoms to headaches and stomachaches. Family life would be much richer if they could come up with 7 a.m. symptoms of gout or yaws or Rocky Mountain spotted fever.

Teaching the facts of life to budding adolescents is old hat, of course, but too much is overlooked in preparation for intergroup relations between mankind's two largest

Few boys, for example, ever receive formal instruction in what to do when their wives, in later years, develop runs in their stockings en route to the football game.

And our daughters urgently need help in dealing with the state of depression which ensues when their husbands' TV sets develop acute senescence five minutes before the start of the Super Bowl.

Our high school students, although well enameled with a layer of sophistication, still need the advantages which a truly progressive curriculum might provide.

They should be prepared, to give just one example, for what to do at college when the lights fail everywhere on campus except in the library. And they should also be trained for taking examinations when the scholars have to sit at least 10 feet apart.

All of them, whether future college professors or doctors or refuse disposal technicians, could benefit from practice and instruction in filling out job applications.

The worker fired for chronic alcoholism can learn, perhaps, to say that he or she was separated from the payroll because he or she was overgrained for his or her responsibilities. And the one who was canned for spending too much of the employer's time on the telephone might well report on his or her next application that she or he was dialed out in a long-line

Actually, our schools don't have to go all the way from the old Three Rs of Rules, Regulations and Repressions to the new ones of Rum, Romanticism and Reciprocity-but a few steps in that direction might help.

IN LIKE A LION

March comes in like a lion and goes out like a lamb. This is certainly true. March sets the scene for a change of weather, and reminds us that it is time

By now most of us have forgotten our New Year resolutions and we are back on the old track again. But now is the time for change. Just as the cold northern winds start to yield to the warm southern breezes, our lives can yield toward new purposes and values, enriching our minds and hearts. For there is a feeling of change that comes over the countryside in March, a feeling of change all of us, if we are perceptive enough to receive it.

The sense of balance, which is disturbed when a person feels dizzy, results from a combination of information coming to the brain through the inner ear, the eyes and the muscle's sense of position. Older people, particularly, should change positions slowly, especially from lying down or sitting to standing or walking. This allows time for the inner ear balance system and the blood circulation to adjust to this change without

Inner ear problems account for about 85 percent of dizziness complaints. Many victims of dizziness are diagnosed and treated by their physicians for a mild infection of the inner ear. Often, an antibiotic is prescribed and the dizziness disappears in a few days as the infection clears up. Sometimes, however, the cause is more complicated and treatment more extensive. In some cases the patient may be sent to an ear specialist

The remaining 15 percent of patients may suffer from aging of the blood vessels or arteriosclerosis, a sensitivity to drugs, an injury to the ear, at timor pressing on the balance nerve, or other nerve

Treatment is important since the attacks can make work or driving unpleasant or even dangerous, and the temporary hearing loss could become permanent nerve deafness. 'UTTERLY SHOCKED'

I was utterly shocked when I heard of the shooting down of a Libyan passenger plane by Israeli jet fighters this past week. The feminine "umps" are expected to be on hand for all girls games, which will probably be an asset, since Mrs. Pollock feels "they seem to know the rules of girls' softball better than the boys do.'

Steele still is hopeful more of the borough's boys will join the Little League, and he has scheduled an additional registration day this Saturday. Parents are asked to bring their sons to the all-purpose room at the Deerfield School, from 9 a.m. to noon. Boys aged 8 through 15 are

Steele believes the low registration on previous dates was partially due to the fact schools were closed the week of Feb. 11. "Many families were off on vacation or ski trips, so the boys could not register." he said.

He also noted the increase in registration fee may be a fact. There is now a $10 charge to the first boy in each family who registers, and a $7 fee for each additional child. Last year the costs were $5 and $7, respectively, but then a $5 deposit for uniforms also was required. (The girls pay $4 each to register in their league.)

The raise in fees was necessitated by rising costs in all types of equipment needed to give boys the opportunity to participate in a well-run program," Steele commented. "This year, the league is also looking into the possibility of buying a new type of shirt for all leagues. This will be a softball-type T-shirt which the boys can keep at the end of the season.

The league president added, "Our managers and coaches are looking forward to a very good season. I join them in asking for your support. It is a very dedicated group of men who are trying to give our town a good baseball program."

He urged parents to bring their boys to Saturday's registration. "This will be the last opportunity for them to sign up for the season,' he said.

coldness suppose to be the sign of "toughness?" They must be kidding. I would have certainly felt somewhat more respect if they admitted, for once, they made a mistake.

This tragedy once again focuses our attention that not all in the world is peaceful. This tense situation must be settled and I would like to see the superpowers impose an arms embargo upon these nations in the Middle East.

At a time when America seems to be revaluating how to spend its money, how our foreign aid is given deserves close examination. If we are to spend hundreds of millions of dollars on foreign aid, let it be on something more constructive than on the latest fighter planes. And it should be stated here that the President has proposed to give $500 million in aid to Israel. Exactly what is that money going to be spent on?

I am going to let my feelings be known to our congressmen (I urge everyone to write who feels this way), that I do not want to see American dollars continue to be turned into fire, destruction and death upon innocent civilians because of some nation's utter be offered a special umpiring clinic, planned arrogance of power and blatant imperialistic

With the end of United States participation in the Vietnamese conflict, there have been suggestions that outright amnesty be granted to the estimated 15,000 to 60,000 Americans willough the country or otherwise made themselves fugitives to avoid or escape service in the

I am flatly opposed to outright amnesty, which is a pardon or forgiveness for past misconduct. I believe it would be unfair to the two million who obeyed the law if we were to grant ex-post-facto absolution to those who evaded or thwarted the law that all public officials are sworn to uphold. It would be even more of an injustice to the memories of those 45,000 who lost their lives in the war and a terrible affront to their survivors. For each one who evaded the draft, another American had to be drafted to serve in his place and some of ese substitute soldiers undoubtedly were killed in action.

Obedience and disobedience do not balance evenly on the scale of justice. The former

Mrs. Allan Gray, co-founder and board member of Spaulding for Children, will focus attention on the theme of "alertness" through her topic, "The Ecology of Recycling Children's Lives." Mrs. Gray, a resident of Westfield for nine years, stated, "Children are our most important and fragile national resource." She attributed her awareness to the needs of children, particularly "our throwaway children," to her experiences both as an active member of Spaulding for Children and as a parent of six children, three of whom are represents an acceptance of responsibility, the latter a shirking of a duty that is a concomitant of citizenship in a democracy. To oppose outright amnesty is not vindictiveness, as some amnesty supporters have contended. Rather, it is a reaffirmation of the fundamental principle that a rational person should be held accountable for his deeds. Those who took it upon themselves to leave the country or otherwise go underground to avoid service in a war which they deemed immoral presumably made their decisions freely with full knowledge of the possible consequences And, by their very actions, they tacitly agreed to accept those consequences.

Now the scales must be balanced. For, with the contest ended, it would be most unfair to change the rules by wiping the slate clean and permitting them to escape any performance of their duty as citizens.

Amnesty has seldom been granted. Since 1795 there have been only 37 instances of amnestyand none of these were of the general, unconditional kind now being urged for draft evaders or deserters. In fact, no amnesty was granted after the Korean War. I see no reason why those who have evaded their obligationand indeed acknowledge no obligation at allshould be given a blanket pardon.

While I oppose an outright grant of amnesty, I do believe those who fled should be given the chance to redeem themselves and to resume their places in our society. I also believe they should be given the opportunity for a hearing, at which their guilt or innocence can be determined in a completely legal manner, with full respect for due process of law.

Those found guilty of draft evasion or desertion should be required to spend two years or the remaining time they owe the government in an appropriate alternative service capacity.

Thus, while opposing outright amnesty because of its inherent injustice to the many who served. I would allow the return of those willing now to accept their responsibilities. Those who refuse remain free to march to the beat of their distant drummer in whatever faroff place they have gone to spend their selfimposed exile. The choice should be up to

During the Great Depression millions of Americans fell upon hard times and learned. first hand, about bread lines and soup kitchens. The federal government responded to the need in a number of ways, by creating work for those out of jobs and getting food to those in need. A major response to the crists was the creation of the National School Lunch program which still is one of the most successful programs initiated by the federal government.

But the National School Lunch program, as important as it was, certainly did not fill all the nutritional needs of the hungry.

Other events triggered a national interest in those who were hungry and in need. In the 1980s the struggle for civil rights highlighted deprivation and poverty in the South and made the country aware that thousands of adults and children were living on a marginal diet at best.

The plight of the urban poor was spotlighted by the upheavals in our urban centers in the 1960s-in Watts, Chicago, Newark and

The cry for "bread and justice" was heard again in Congress and Congress responded by creating a number of programs to help feed

One of these is the food stamp program which was designed to equalize the food buying power of the poor and near poor. With all its faults this program has helped millions of Americans. Congress also acted to extend the school lunch program into the summer months. This program provides food for children of both the urban and rural poor who, when school is out, would otherwise be more or less left to fend for

More recently, Congress also created a number of special programs to get needed foodstuffs to pregnant women and infant children. And Congress expanded the school lunch program to include breakfasts so that the crucial morning school hours we is not lost to hungry and listless children.

Certainly Congress can be proud of its achievements in securing food for those in need. But, unfortunately, the good intentions of the Congress have been blunted both by inadequacies in the administration of the federal food programs and a deliberate effort to cut the programs back even when they are most needed Most of the children's feeding programs are administered by the Department of Agriculture. The main interest of the department lies in farming, not in feeding the poor. Rather consistently, over the past few years, the department has trimmed back nutrition programs while expanding its own farm subsidy programs.

The department is still doing this although food prices are soaring higher than ever before and the average American housewife has to cut back her buying, especially of essential protein foods like meat, poultry and milk. Those who have limited incomes have ar especially difficult time when food prices increase. Children and family feeding programs become especially critical in these times. Yet, a few days ago, the Department of Agriculture dropped inexpensive powdered milk from federal feeding programs because of its concern for price support levels.

Given the position of the Executive branch and, particularly, the Department of Agriculture, the responsibility fails on Congress to prevent further erosion of this nation's feeding programs and restore their intended vitality.
In the last session of Congress I pressed for a number of amendments both in the Appropriations Committee and on the floor of the Senate to achieve this end. I shall continue to do so this year. It is more important than ever to reach every needy child-whether at home, in a day care center or in school.

may be due for a refund on a bogus burglar alarm system sold by Vigilant Protective Systems, Inc. of New York City, it was announced this week by Millicent Fenwick, director of the New Jersey State Division of Consumer Affairs.

The refunds are the result of a settlement negotiated by the division with the Bankruptcy Court of New York City and Superior Court Judge Max Mehler of the Changery Division in New Jersey. Vigilant filed for reorganization in the Bankruptcy Court in July 1971 after the New Jersey Division of Consumer Affairs brought suit against it for consumer fraud.

According to Mrs. Fenwick, the Division of Consumer Affairs is currently seeking to locate an estimated 1,000 consumers who are considered eligible to apply for a refund under the settlement. Because of inadequate records maintained by the company, the Division is asking all consumers who purchased the Vigilant Alarm system to contact Division Headquarters, 1100Raymond blvd. Newark, so they may be processed for reimbursement of any money owing to them.

Three special telephone numbers have been set up to handle inquiries on the Vigilant Alarm case-(201) 648-4016, 648-2812 and 648-2693.

The Division of Consumer Affairs has been involved in litigation against Vigilant since March 1971, when suit was filed in the Chancery Division of Superior Court, Newark, charging the company with violations of the consumer fraud statute and consumer credit laws. The suit was filed as a result of approximately 60 consumer complaints, as well as complaints from community leaders in Newark, Jersey City and Paterson. The company, located at

A European treasure hunt conducted by an Upsala College student and her husband from Maplewood has resulted in 31 unusual contributions to the college. Virginia and William Hildebrand are brass rubbers. They pursued the popular European hobby last summer in searches for historic churches in Belgium and England. The rubbings will be on display periodically at the college and also will be used as a teaching source for subjects relevant to the historical periods they cover Brass rubbing consists of making paper replicas of engraved brass grave markers dating back to the 13th century. The markers are situated in the aisles, floors and walls of churches. They are considered important historical records of heraldry, armor and costume design of the various periods. A rubbing is accomplished by cutting architect's detail paper to size, taping it with masking tape, placing it on top of the brass marker and then rubbing it with a hard wax called heel ball, a substance cobblers use to blacken the heels of shoes. Properly done, the artistic design of the brass marker is transferred to the paper.

Mr. and Mrs. Hildebrand became interested in brass rubbing on a trip to Europe in 1970. Bitten by the bug, they decided to devote their entire vacation last June to brass rubbing in Belgium and England. They plan to return next

Mrs. Hildebrand said there has been a resurgency of this hobby in England during the past few years, although it has been done there for a century.

"It's fun to do. You learn a great deal about history and you meet interesting people," she commented.

While brass rubbing may be "fun" it is not easy, Mrs. Hildebrand points out. It takes many hours of meticulous rubbing, usually kneeling on a cold, stone floor to produce an artistic rubbing, she explains. Usually there is a waiting list, from a day or two to as long as six months, to obtain permission to get into a church for a rubbing session. Most of the markers are listed in a book from which brass rubbers get their leads.

there's all that traipsing about the English countryside from one church to another which, while enjoyable, is still time consuming.

The model railroad will be housed in a new building being constructed by the Model Railroad Club, now based in Union, and located on Union County Park land.

The building is going up on a small parcel (three acres) of Lenape Park near Rt. 22 in Union. Lenape Park itself is 400 acres in size and extends well into Kenilworth, where a skeet range is already in existance

Plans for Lenape Park, according to the park commission, will center around hobby activities and will be developed in the next decade. Model airplane circulars are planned on the section of land near the model railroad

The idea for a model railroad of "the largest proportions was conceived in undramatic fashion when the Model Railroad Club got too bigefor its quarters.

The club originated as the Summit-New Providence Model Railroad Club and was housed in the basement of the Club's current president and one of its founders, Paul Mallery of Murray Hill, author of five books on model railroading and an avid hobbyist.

When the club began in 1949 with a handful of members, Mallery's basement was a good enough place to build a railroad, but things got out of hand. About 10 years ago, the scores of members began thinking of a separate facility

The club now has more than 50 active members and many others who maintain an active interest in model railroading.

Among the club's active members are Ron Heller of Westfield, Robert Volk of Union and Russ Sprague of Woodbridge, all classmates at Union High School in the early 1960's; Joe Kaspar of Union, Bill Barth of Roselle Park, John Allen of Springfield, Ed Eckert of Roselle, and Frank Teifeld of Linden

Volk also serves as the club's secretary and Heller is a member of its board of trustees. The work on the building is being done by the club members. The multi-level structure will be completed in several stages, and track will be laid as each stage is up The first stage is scheduled for completion this spring and the first trains will be in by the fall. The first show is planned for February

HELLER IN SPEAKING for the club,

Skate show entry open

Entries have been coming in at a rapid pace for the 10th annual state-wide free-skating and ice-dance championship on Saturday, March 10, at the Warinanco Park Ice Skating Center, Roselle

Entries must be postmarked no later than this Saturday, according to Lee Emerson P.O. Box 83. Demarest, 07627.

Many amateurs in the state, representing 14 figure-skating clubs, will participate. The N.J. Council of Figure Skating Clubs will sponsor the competition, with the cooperation LEHIGH AVE., UNION 687-0770 of the Union County Figure Skating Club and The Union

The concert will feature the works of three major comcosers of the Renaissance-Baroque Era: Buxtehude. Bach and Telemann

Frequently, the cars are made by the hobbyists. The landscape along the track usually records some scene actually in existence, or once in existence. A model railroad, for example, will not have any cars where a model milkman lifts model milk cans in and out of a model milk car. The Model Railroad Club's planned railroad will include stops in Hoboken, Newark, Orange, Summit, Morristown, Dover, Washington

(N.J.), Easton, and 10 other Pennsylvania cities on the way to Pittsburgh. The railroad yard in Summit, according to Heller, will be a replica of what it used to be in its busy days. A portion of track will be used. only by traction (trolley cars). Most of the track will be HO gauge, although part of the layout will be N and O gauge All of the trains will be coordinated through a computer. It will require between 25 and 50 persons to operate the railroad fully. The computer will eliminate duplication in wiring and is being designed by Mallery, Heller said.

The club is now organized into committees which become activated as each stage of construction is reached. For example, the electrical committee will be active in the earlier stages, the track-laying and bridge committees later.

The building will have a lower level workshop, a level for the layout, a side area for engineers, a platform for observers, and a lobby and meeting room. The building will be completely climate controlled.

Heller said that the meeting room may serve as a meeting place for other hobby organizations as they gather at Lenape Park. The Model Railroad Club is now busy preparing for its annual hobby show, to be held the TB-Respiratory Disease Association of Central New Jersey-sponsors of the Christmas Seal campaign-announced this week that the association is supporting the expansion of the Central Jersev Regional Air Pollution control Agency to include Union County communities not presently participating in an official control effort.

Pollution unit expansion supported by TB group

According to Kotuby, only Elizabeth, Linden, Rahway, Hillside and Union have air pollution control programs.

Linden and Rahway are covered by the Central Jersey Agency and Union and Hillside are served by the Suburban Easex group. Elizabeth has conducted its own program for several years. All are financed in part by the Federal Environmental Protection Agency.

"TB-RD Central," Kotuby said, "has advocated the development of a regional control effort in Union County for more than a year. Initially, we directed our efforts toward the expansion of the Elizabeth program; however, this has not materialized.

"The association," Kotuby continued, concerned about the air the citizens of Union County breathe each day, because polluted air is closely associated with the rising number of cases of emphysema, asthma and chronic bronchitis and is a general hazard to public

Kotuby also noted that air pollution does not adhere to geographic boundaries, and that the regional approach in combatting pollution offers the most effective and economical means of preventing and controlling air pollution

According to George Wasser, executive director of the Central Jersey Control Agency. preliminary discussions regarding the expansion have been conducted with several Union County municipalities

In order to join the regional effort, Wasser said that the participating communities must standardized air pollution control ordinance.

The Central Jersey Agency is funded on a three to one basis by the participating municipalities and the Federal Environmental Protection Agency, with the federal government assuming the burden of the cost.

Wasser said that he has prepared approximate annual costs for the following communities: Cranford $3,565, Kenilworth $3.845. Plainfield $3.625. Roselle $2,762, Springfield $3,300 and Westfield $3,412.

The agency has also submitted an estimate of $9,200 to Elizabeth officials for their considera-Wasser said that he expects to receive in formation from Scotch Plains, Fanwood and Garwood to use in preparing cost estimates for those communities The assessments are based on a weighted formula which considers such factors as population, area in square miles and the number of industrial parcels in each com-

According to Wasser, the agency would provide a variety of services to the participating communities such as preliminary and continued inventory of existing and potential air pollution sources, daily patrol and enforcement Monday thru Friday, between 8 a.m. and 11 n.m., and off-hour response to local air pollution emergencies including Saturday, Sunday and all holidays,

In addition, the participating communities would be represented on the agency's Board of Commissioners and all fines levied in municipal court as a result of air pollution violations would be payable to the respective communities.

Kotuby said that TB-RD Central is read and willing to assist the agency and the respective Union County municipalities coordinate the flemington's ANCE expansion of the control program.

Rinaldo bill would extend grants for mass transit

WASHINGTON, D.C. Congressman Matthew J. Rinaldo has introduced legislation to amend the Mass Transit Act of 1964 to extend existing capital grant programs and to provide additional funds for operating assistance to commuter rail and bus lines. The bill introduced by Representative Rinaldo would provide $400 million in new federal operating ssistance over the next two years

The congressman from Union Township said the legislation would have particular applicability to residents of his home cummunity who are "virtually immobilized by traffic on roads like Rt. 22 and Morris avenue. New Jersey's mass transit systems are fast approaching a do-or-die situation. Dwindling revenues and passengers, along with rising costs and fares, have combined to make the public transit crisis national in scope.

"The spectre of high transit fares is all-tooreal in many of our counties and cities already At the same time, studies reveal that a fare rise beyond 35 cents results in fewer people using mass transit facilities. Obviously, raising fares to meet increasing costs results in less service and more and more transit riders using automobiles." Congressman Rinaldo said

The bill would amend the Urban Mass Transit Act of 1964 to increase funding from $3.1 billion by the end of fiscal year 1973 to $6.1 billion in fiscal year 1978 for purchase of equipment and facilities.

The provisions of the Mass Transit legislation also provide for federal grants for operating expenses up to $400 million in 1975, and grants for technical studies. It would also permit the federal government to pay up to 80 percent of the net costs of any mass transit project.

In a major effort to aid the elderly and handicapped and fight the spiraling cost of using mass transit systems, the bill would prohibit funds to any State or locality which fails to provide reduced fares for senior Congressman Rinaldo, who is a member of the Banking and Currency Committee which will consider the bill, said, "We are faced with a crisis in solving urban mass transit problems. I strongly believe that the federal government has a legitimate and justifiable role in its

"A single transit vehicle can replace between 30 and 60 individual automobiles commuting to work. If we can provide the efficient, dependable and low cost mass transit services the people need and deserve, I think we can make urban living a lot easier

medical and dental schools has risen sharply in the past

Statistics at the College of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey show that increasing numbers of women are seeking professional careers in health care delivery

At the request of Stanley S. Bergen Jr., M.D., president of the college, a committee on the status of women was recently formed to study the role of women at the four schools of the college. Graduate School of Biomedical Sciences and New Jersey Medical School in Newark: the New Jersey Dental School in Jersey City, and the Rutgers Medical School is Piscataway The study has shown that the number of women in the student body has mushroomed in the past three

There are presently 41 women in the student body at Rutgers Medical School, as compared to two in 1969; 60 at New Jersey Medical School as compared to 16 three years ago; nine at the Graduate School of Biomedical Sciences as compared to one, and six women at the New Jersey Dental School, where only one woman was enrolled in 1969

The College of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey actively encourages women applicants, aiming both campus visits and mailings at predominantly women's col

According to Mary J Mycek, Ph.D., associate professor of pharmacology at the New Jersey Medical School and chairwoman of the committee on status of women, recruitment of female students represents a new trend for professional schools.

Traditionally, professional schools had no recruitment programs, since the number of applicants was more than they could possibly accept,' she pointed out.

"But in recent years, we have begun to seek applicants from specific groups, includ-

minorities, because of past practices in limiting the number of these minorities admitted into the professions

Dr. Mycek attributes the increasing interest of women in professional schools to "a shift in the attitudes of society both toward women and toward home and family."

Women were formerly discouraged from seeking careers in medicine and dentistry," Dr. Mycek said. "If a woman expressed an interest in the health sciences she was directed toward nursing or dental hygiene because society enforced the traditional image of woman as an auxiliary to man."

She said that changing life style patterns and smaller families have made the prospect of a professional career more feasible for a woman.

Although the percentage of women in dental school improving, they still lag far behind medical and other professional schools in the number of women enrolled

Grace B. Austin, D.D.S., assistant professor of prosthodontics at the New Jersey Dental School, feels that the major problem is that most women don't even consider dentistry as a career possibil ity, envisioning it as "a mechanical field involved with the use of complex equipment and the possibility of causing pain."

She sees the advent of the expanded duty dental auxiliary as a possible bridge to bring women into dental careers.

"As auxiliaries begin to assume the duties formerly performed by the dentist alone, women will begin to understand dentistry, and accept it as a reasonable career choice for them," she predicted.

Both Dr. Mycek and Dr. Austin project that the ratio of women in the college will continue to spiral upward.

"In each of the schools," Dr. Austin pointed out, "the largest number of women are in the freshman class. At the New Jersey Medical School, we have 30 women in the first year; at Rutgers, 25, and four at the dental school.

"The door is open for women," Dr. Mycek ob-served. "What we are Aiming for, it seems, is a sufficient number of practitioners in the health professions to satisfy the need and that their calibre and training be of higher quality regardless of their

Silk will be soloist with symphony in Bloomfield concert

A Winter Concert by the Bloomfield Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Edward Napiwocki, will be held on Sunday, March 4, at 3 p.m., at the North Junior High School, 60 Huck rd., Bloomfield. Adam Silk, violinist from Montclair, will be featured in Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto in E Minor. The program will also include Beethoven's Lenora Overture No. 3 and Tchaikovsky's Symphony Silk, 16, is studying in the Pre-College Division of the Juilliard School of Music with Ivan Galamian and Sally Thomas. He began his musical studies with Ester Gilbert, assistant concert master of the New Jersey Symphony Orchestra.

Adam was one of the young people chosen by Alexander Schneider for his New York String Orchestra, and played with the group in two series of concerts at Carnegie Hall. He also participated in a festival of American music at Queens College under Schneider in April 1972.

The young violinist is concert master of the New Jersey Junior Orchestra and was formerly concert master and soloist with the Preparatory Orchestra of the New Jersey Symphony Orchestra. He was a member of the District of Columbia Youth Orchestra and was chosen as a member of international or chestras at festivals of youth orchestras in St. Moritz, Switzerland in 1970 and in Berlin in 1972. Last May, Adam performed the Mendelssohn violin concerto at Carnegie Hall with the Senior Concert Orchestra of New York.

The public is invited to attend the concert. There is no admission charge and no tickets are

Bird watching in winter Some stay behind at migration

It's the birds that don't go south for the winter that bring out thousands of volunteers for a bird count in the frigid weather.

According to Richard Ryan, director of Turtle Back Zoo, some 20,000 volunteers throughout the United States and Canada participate in counts sponsored by the National Audubon Society. Results are published in the society journal, "American Birds."

The counts, which cover a 15-mile diameter circle, this week showed almost 400,000 birds of 123 species in an urbanized section of northern

"While some birds that feed primarily on insects leave for warmer climates where their favorite food is still in abundance, a great many others, especially seed-eating species and many fish eating species, remain," said "Backyard bird feeders have had considerable effect in keeping some bird population levels higher than would be otherwise." Nuthatches, woodpeckers, many species of sparrows, Starling, blackbirds, Chickadees, Cowbirds, finches and numerous other species profit from this artificial supplement to the normal wild supply, says the zoo director

Not all birds are dependent on, or even use, man's offerings," he added. "Despite being largely insectiverous, two species of kinglets stay with us for the winter, gleaning insect eggs from leaves, twigs and bark. Herons of several species wait patiently near patches of open water for small fish to venture near the surtace Ducks also utilize open water such as the Hudson, Passaic and Hackensack Rivers as feeding grounds, for, despite the high levels of pollution found in the lower reaches of these rivers, 26 species of ducks, geese and swans, totaling almost 7,000 birds, were counted on or near these waterways.

Ryan continued, "Annually, two species recorded on the count constantly surprise people by their presence, the Cardinal and the Mockingbird. Both are generally thought of as southern. Though more abundant to the south of us, Cardinals are present throughout the year in some numbers and 58 were seen this year. Mockingbirds are partially migratory, meaning some move southwards, but the majority remains with us year-round. In fact, both species are spreading still further north and both now nest and winter as far as Mon-

"Another aspect to bird migration is that we are in the south to many arctic species. Most of the six species of owls seen this year are migrants from farther north," noted the director

"Contrary to popular myth winter is really a good time to see birds if you know where to look. Patches of open water, bushy tangles, especially berry bushes, evergreens, and fields of tall weeds are all excellent places to look

Dept. of Transportation asks grant to aid Erie Lackawanna

filed a preliminary application with the U.S. Department of Transportation for a capital grant to finance major rehabilitation of the Erie Lackawanna Railway electrified lines and new equipment to cost $141,137,500.

The application is for $94,091,666, two-thirds of the project cost, to be provided under the Urban Mass Transportation Act as amended through 1970. The State would provide $47,045,834 from the 1968 Transportation Bond

This project would cover various improvements to the electrified portions of the railroad and the purchase of 200 high-speed. multiple unit passenger cars which would be capable of operating on Penn Central tracks into New York City.

Conversion of the present direct current electrical system to alternating current would require upgrading of the catenary supp structures, and electrification would be ex tended from Dover westward to Netcong. New terminals, including new train yards, passenger stations, and commuter parking facilities would be constructed at Gladstone and in the Netcong area.

Mini-mousers precocious mammals

Study shows rapid behavioral development

precocious than even most members of the scientific community realize.

Kittens, like other young mammals, may seem virtually helpless at birth. Prevalent scientific theory holds that newborn mammals lack the ability to learn until they achieve an advanced level of sensory and motor development. But according to one professor, that's just not so.

In an article in a recent issue of "Scientific American," Dr. Jay S. Rosenblatt, professor of psychology and director of the Rutgers University Institute of Animal Behavior, noted that kittens "...are quite capable of learning learning plays an important role in the animal's growth and development."

The article details extensive studies on the suckling and homing behavior of newborn felines, performed at the institute by Dr. Rosenblatt, the late Dr. T.C. Schneirla of the American Museum of Natural History, and Dr. Gerald Turkewitz, professor of psychology at Hunter College.

The broad implications of what the studies mean to understanding early human learning and behavior have not been scientifically examined, but Rosenblatt pointed out in his article: "The similarity of behavioral development in the young of many animals indicates that there may be a general pattern of infantile development.

Rosenblatt and his colleagues began their studies by observing the normal course of social development of newborn kittens. The animals were housed with their mothers in cubical cages in the institute during an wightweek nursing period. After observation of large numbers of mother cats and their litters, certain behavioral patterns of the kittens were

THE KITTENS' SUCKLING begins within a few minutes of birth and is initiated by the mother, who lies on her side and guides the kittens to the nipple region, the psychologist noted. This manner of nursing goes on for three weeks and only in the "home area" of the cage.

Kittens open their eyes a week after birth, but do not make use of their visual sense until the end of the second week! After the third week they begin to wander from their "home area" and approach the mother when they want to

Simple forms of play among kittens also begin the third week, increasing in activity during the fourth week. By the fifth week the kittens become more active-Chasing, rolling and hugging-causing the mother to become less willing to nurse, and the kittens begin to eat and drink from dishes placed in the cage. Once weaning starts, it progresses rapidly, until it virtually replaces nursing by the end of the eighth week

At the time of these studies, according to Rosenblatt, the prevailing view was that newborn mammals cannot learn until they reach a critical age ranging from a few days to several weeks, depending on the species. The view stemmed from attempts to develop a conditioned reflex in newborn pupples, which proved unsuccessful until the canines reached two to three weeks of age.

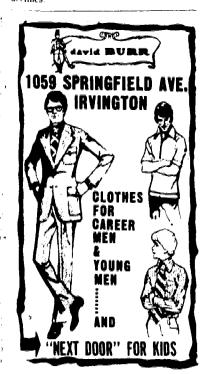

'Working with the more natural behavior of newborn animals, such as suckling and home orientation, we found that one could come to quite another conclusion," he wrote.

The IAB researchers found that kittens, at the start of nursing, develop a preference for the nipple on which they suckle during the first and second day. Testing how kittens determine a preferred nipple from four pairs available to them, graduate students Robert J. Woll and Natalie Freeman have been conducting experiments with kittens exposed to an artifical mother with two rubber nipples—only one of which provides milk-and to natural mothers whose nipple region was washed or shaved.

USING TACTILE and odorous stimuli-such as textured rubber flanges around each nipple and flages scented with men's cologne-it has been found that kittens associate the sensory cues with feeding from the first day and suckle almost exclusively at the correct nipple of the artificial mother. In the more difficult nipplepreference experiments with a natural mother was found that odors play a more important role than tactile cues.

In an effort to trace the development of home orientation in kittens, the IAB team conducted series of tests of the animals' responses to being placed both in a strange cage and a home cage. Among the findings were the following: Kittens are able to distinguish between a strange cage and their home cage the third day after birth. When placed in a strange cage, their crying becomes more intense. When they are returned to their home cage, the crying

In the home cage area, kittens are able to reach the home quadrant of the cage from an adjacent corner, when they are from five to seven days old, although their eyes have not yet opened. Tests confirm the researchers belief that kittens follow feline odors deposited on the floor to find their way home

-When kittens reach the third week of age, odor cues give way to the use of visual cues in home orientation. And, as kittens increase their visually-based orientation, it leads to behavioral changes, such as the start of leaving their home briefly at first, then for longer in-

- At about this time, kittens change their suckling behavior and begin to pursue the mother to initiate feeding. They also shift their orientation from the home area to the mother and to their littermates-extending in a sense their learning environment and showing signs of future independence.

Summing up, Rosenblatt said the studies show that learning plays an important role in behavioral development of newborn kittens and is closely related to the maturation of sensory and motor processes and cannot be studied apart from such processes. "Specific behavior patterns arise from a fusion of experience and maturation," he said.

The advent of Andy and David Williams into the recording industry and show business marks another notch in the legend of the talented Williams family

The very talented Andy and David are 13year old identical twins. They come from a show business family Their uncle is the famed "Moon River" man, Andy Williams, who originally began his career with a group called the Williams Brothers. The Williams Brothers consisted of Andy, Don, Dick, and Bob.

Don Williams, Andy and David's father, is now in personal management and represents such artists as The Brady Bunch, Mary Tyler Moore, and Bob Newhart. Their mother, Marilyn, and her twin sister, Marcia, were known to show business as The Darcy Sisters. Andy and David were born in Las Vegas on Feb. 22, 1959, practically between shows while their parents were appearing there!

Collectively, the boys pose a problem to the untrained eye in detecting physical differences. Andy is 5'5" tall, weighs 97 pounds and claims 13 minutes as his mark of being the "older brother." David, on the other hand, stands 5'6" and checks in at 99 pounds. Andy plays guitar and sings harmony while David sings melody and plays piano. Both are blonde haired, blue eyed, and pose a double threat to any of the current teenage idols in show business So watch out, you Osmonds!

Complete labeling of food required in Williams bill

Williams Jr., (D-NJ) introduced in the Senate this week a bill to require complete labeling of food products.

Williams' bill, the "Truth in Food Labeling Act," would require that food manufacturers and distributors list on package labels "all ingredients" contained in the product, "in the order of their predominance in the food."

"This legislation is necessary in order to put an end to the misleading, inadequate, and incomplete practice used in informing the public of what actually and totally is in the product they are consuming," Williams said on the Senate floor

He pointed out that under the present law, which established a "Standard of Identity" requirement, only those ingredients that the Federal Food and Drug Administration requires to be listed are printed on food package labels.

"The Standard of Identity has not been totally effective," Williams said, "and has only insured that certain manufactured food products be substantially the same regardless of manufacturer, in other words, all peanut butter must contain the same basic

This existing FDA provision does not go far enough in fully informing and protecting the consumer. Serious concern should be given to the many Americans who are limited in their food consumption for various reasons-health problems, religious beliefs, and specific dietary practices

"In addition to those persons who are restriced from certain substance intake, the average consumer is deserving of complete

Number of autos, traffic mileage set Parkway record

More vehicles than ever rode the Garden State Parkway in 1972. Traffic mileage also reached an all-time high while the average trip distance increased slightly over the previous

Chairman George M. Wallhauser of the New Jersey Highway Authority, which operates the Parkway, today reported that 166,456,108 were on the 173-mile-long road last vear and covered a total distance of 2 billion, 443 million miles. The average trip was 14.7 miles, a bit longer than the 14.6-mile mark of

The daily traffic average for the past year was 454,798 vehicles, up some 6,700 over 1971. The travel distance averaged 6,675,277 miles daily, up more than 155,000 over the prior year.

The number of vehicles is determined by traffic counts taken at each toll facility and the non-toll ramps.

As in the past, the numbers of vehicles and their travel mileage in 1972 were highest in the months from May through October. August again had the heaviest traffic, with an estimated count of 16.538.376 vehicles. July again led in travel distance with an estimated 283,377,836 miles.

The average daily traffic in August was 17 percent above the annual average daily traffic level while July's was 16 percent over. In average travel mileage, July was 37 percent and August 36 percent over the annual daily

The all-time high traffic tally for one day was on Saturday, July 29, when 755,707 vehicles rode the Parkway. The peak prior to 1972 was 710,000 on Saturday, Aug. 14, 1971.
The record for a weekend was set on the Friday, Saturday and Sunday of July 28-30, when 2.113.504 vehicles used the road. The period of Monday through Sunday, July 24-30, produced a one-week record of approximately 4,700,000, and the August total cited above was the one-month peak of all time.

BUYING WISELY

From Better Business Bureau manning of Metropolitan New York, Inc. (1999) (1999)

This may sound silly to you, but I find it difficult to understand what a guarantee means. I recently purchased a washing machine from a neighborhood store. When I called the store for service on a water leak, he refused to honor my guarantee and said I would have to call the manufacturer's service center

CONFUSED

Dear Confused: Every day Better Business Bureaus receive calls and visits from people who are having problems with an appliance, or work they have had done, and invariably they tell us "it's guaranteed." Most people believe that a guarantee means that no matter what goes wrong with work that has been contracted for and guaranteed, or an appliance or automobile that has a guarantee (or warranty), it will automatically be fixed free-of-charge. This is not necessarily so.

We urge you to read and understand what the guarantee covers, for how long and whether or not you will be required to pay for labor or service calls. This is important.

For example, a housewife living in the Westchester County area complained to our Better Business Bureau there that an iron she had bought a month ago kept over-heating and that the store where she bought it refused to take the iron and solve the problem. When Bureau personnel read her guarantee it clearly stated that the iron should be taken to the manufacturer's service center (which in this case turned out to be only two stores away from where she had made the purchase.) Another woman complained that a company would not honor her guarantee on a new refrigeratorand we learned that she had not sent in the card that would place her guarantee on file.

Here's a quick check list on what to do about

If you are buying goods or services which are guaranteed, make sure you understand what is covered by the guarantee and for how Many items come with a card which you have to fill out and return to the manufacturer so that your guarantee is on file. Do this immediately.

-Make sure that you have a file to keep copies of your guarantees. Don't be like the irate consumer who kept complaining to us that

If I hadn't been nagged into getting a checkup, I'd be kicking up daisies.

The toughest fight I ever had didn't happen on any big, wide screen. It happened in real life.

I was just finishing my 99th picture. My 99th ridin', jumpin', fightin' picture. Never felt better in my life.

I told the family when I'm through here, I'm going out on my boat. Sure, they said, just as soon as you've had your medical checkup. I said nonsense, I had one eight months ago. They said it was more like eighteen.

So I said okay, okay, I went to my doctor and the chest X-rays showed a spot on my lungs. It was cancer. If I'd waited a few more weeks, I'd be dead.

The first couple of months after surgery, it hurt like hell to get on my horse. Since then I've been good as new. If you caught "True Grit" or "Chisum" you've seen for yourself.

So, friend, I know what I'm talking about when I tell you, get a checkup. Nag someone you love into getting a checkup.

And when the lady from the American Cancer Society rings your doorbell, dig deep in your pocket. They're working to rid this world of cancer once and for all.

IMPROVEMENTS Replace Those Leeky

THE OTHER FIVE N.A.

In covering the Netherlands Antilles in the Caribbean one must go to two sets of islands. One set is at the very bottom near the coast of South America, and the other set is way up north near the Virgin Islands

The down set are the ABC islands of Aruba Bonaire and Curação, and the up ones are St. Maarten and its two little near by islands of Saba and St. Eustatius.

The ABC's are desert-like and semi-arid, and while all are therefore somewhat similiar, they are all also somewhat unique from each other in their own little ways.

Aruba, for instance, reportedly has nicer, natural beaches than Curacao. Its Palm Beach. three miles long, is supposedly one of the finest in the entire West Indies. The island also has curious rock formations, some brilliant tropical flowers, and, most of all, the strange divi-divi tree. It is commonly called the "oneway" tree because the winds blowing constantly from the northeast, cause it to lean in one direction. It looks for all the world as though it were a sick pine constantly in a full hurricane force. Its trunk is rather gnarled looking and crooked, and if it were upright, it very likely would be approximately the height of a dogwood tree.

Bonaire is known for its flamingos, unspoiled surroundings and astoundingly abundant fishing, which the other two are not par ticularly known for. Also, on its Sorobon Beach, local fishermen have piled up thousands of pink conch shells, and they are free for the taking

GOING NOW to the upper group of the Netherlands Antilles islands, one must journey almost directly north some 500 miles and there you have St. Maarten and its satellite islands of Saba and St. Eustatius. Now the look is greener and the brown desert look is gone. Nonetheless, all three of these islands are different from each other also, and the littlest one of Saba is really something. Take St. Maarten, to begin with: it shares an island with the French, the Dutch side being called Sint Maarten or St. Maarten, and the French side, St. Martin, as in the man's name, "Martin." (Not "St. Maarten" again, as a misprint in Number Two of this series stated 1

The St. Maarten side is a dependency of Curacao, and the St. Martin side is a dependency of Guadeloupe. All in all, the total island is 17 square miles in size, with the French having the larger share, but the Dutch having the once valuable sait flat.

Philipsburg, the capital of St. Maarten, is located on a narrow sand bar which separates Great Bay and the Great Salt Pond, and is overlooked by rolling green mountains on both ends. Marigot, the capital of St. Martin, is on an open bay and is overlooked mostly by hotels where fairly good dipping in the clear waters is offered to the guests. Both are small, quaint towns with Marigot being rather the Cinderella of the two.

THERE ARE no border barriers on the island and only a small inconspicuous sign marks the border line on the road. It says rather succinctly and with a rather frugal, although nicely cooperative touch, "Welcome to St. Martin" on one side, and on the same board, but on the other side,

THE MAIN STREET in St. Maarten. Two non-tourists stroll down Front Street, the major thoroughfare on St. Maarten. The car top which is visable is parked on one side of the street, the house on the other, showing quite vividly just how narrow the

'Welcome to St. Maarten.' Which does exactly the right thing depending on which direction you are heading, and wastes no materials. Traffic between the two is free as well as labor, personal movement, etc. No problems, seemingly

The main street in Philipsburg is perhaps all of six or ten blocks long. There are a goodly number of shops, however. Some have very arty decor and flamboyant colors, some have modern fronts, some with European moods, all seem to be air-conditioned, and the shopping is quite good. But also on the main street are simple houses. Philipsburg, St. Maarten, is no Willemstad, Curacao.

The island is perhaps best known for vacationing on water front hotels, with good beach boys, good beach equipment, good bars, good restaurants and-some good gambling. There are casinos in a great many of them.

The look of the island is green and rolling with some large meadows, ex-plantations. pleasant trees, lots of bush type plants and lots of cashew nut plants, but it is no jungle. I cannot remember a palm tree.

ST. EUSTATIUS, the next largest island in this group, is about 12 square miles and is centrally administered from the island of Curacao. Fondly called "Statia," , thank goodness, it was formed by a cratered volcanic cone and rises to an elevation of 1,978 feet. It lies about 40 miles from St. Maarten and is a tiny green jewel where lovely 18th century buildings are still in use in its capital of Oranjestad. It has one new hotel with shops, restaurant and a cinema.

Seba, an even smaller island of five square miles, is quite a piece of work. It consists enout of St. Maarten and back to both Statia and Saba, or you can take a flight just over them, or you can go by sea in a small boat and take a look from the sea. On certain days you can see the faint outline of Saba from St. Maarten, but not Statia.

And there you have the other five Netherland Antilles, Curacao (formerly described in previous columns) making the sixth. All are interesting in one way or another, and certainly, any one of them is a real Dutch treat. Next: St. Maarten Experiences
