No more lighting for Moxon Pond

The Mountainside Recreation Commission this week announced it would no longer provide lighting for ice skating at Moxon Pond because of recurring vandalism to the electrical fixtures there.

Lighting for the pond, located on Union County Park Commission land off Tracy drive. was provided by the borough last year but according to a recreation department spokesman, the bulbs were broken several times, apparently by air rifles. During a recent inspection of the area, it was discovered that the light pole had been pulled down, two lights had been stolen and the third was broken. The department spokesman stated that any residents wishing information on the condition of the pond for skating-or on the possibility of lighting it-should refer their questions to the Park Commission.

Board lists expenditures for $2 million school tab approved a tentative budget of $2,009,902 for the 1974-75 school year at its session Dec. 11, this week released itemized copies of that budget (The line-by-line tally appears on page two of

The $2 million-plus figure proposed by the school board this year represents a $27,175 increase from the present budget of $1,982,727.

Current expense appropriations amount to $1,853,775—up $57,330 from the 1973-74 total of $1,796,455. The largest item under that heading is the $1,176,030 budgeted for teachers' salaries. representing a $34,205 increase. Running second is the appropriation for administrative salaries, $86,700, or $3,000 more than currently budgeted. Third in line are the salaries for personnel involved in plant operation-$82,795. down $2,725 from this year.

Other major expenditures are: Salaries for health service personnel, $35,270, up $2,170; contracted services for plant maintenance.

Vacant house leveled by fire; cause probed

Fire leveled a home at 336 Central ave. early Monday morning, only three days after the occupants had left the split-level house to move to California

Mountainside Fire Chief Theodore Byk said the blaze, which was reported at 12:47 a.m., apparently started in the kitchen. Lack of water pressure hampered firemen's efforts. A neighbor, spotting flames leaping through the roof, reported the fire.

Byk said the volunteer fire department had to call Elizabethtown Water Co. The utility company responded a half-hour later by bringing special pumps to the scene of the blaze. The fire was brought under control as soon as water pressure was available but not before the home, previously occupied by renters, was destroyed. There were no injuries.

Firemen also had to contend with a rupture in a natural gas line, apparently caused by the heat from the fire.

"The house is a complete loss," said Byk "We had to knock down some walls to get to the fire. Part of the wing above the garage is still standing.

About 30 firemen fought the blaze. Equipment at the scene included three pumpers from the Mountainside Volunteer Fire Department and a pumper from the Westfield Fire Department. Springfield units provided standby services.

The cause of the fire is under investigation.

salaries, $28,805, a jump of $9,705 from the current appropriation of $19,100.

Also among the major cost items are those which fall into the category of fixed charges, such as insurance and judgments, totalling $58,200-or $4,700 more than this year. Included under the heading, too, are employee retirement contributions, which have risen from $25,390 to $31,220; and tuition, which remains at the present total, $28,000. Student transportation, including that to private schools is $62,650, down $2,840 from this year's $65,490

A reflection of the current energy crisis can be seen in the estimated cost for heating the borough schools next year, $46,200. The figure represents a $15,100 increase over this year's outlay of $31,100.

The difference between the $1.853,775 current expense portion of the budget and the $2,009,902 total is accounted for by the $156,127 appropriated for debt service-principal and anticipated at $1,569,875, an increase of $39,220 over the present levy of $1,530,655. Also listed as revenue sources are: balance appropriated, $50,000 (down $15,000); state aid, $227,900 (up $37,100); fuition, $5,000 (down $4,000); and miscellaneous revenue, anticipated to remain

Copies of the entire itemized budget are now available at the Mountainside Public Library After Jan. 7, they may also be obtained at any of the borough schools, the office of the superintendent of schools and at the Board of Education office.

Copies will also be available at the next public meeting of the school board, scheduled Tuesday, Jan. 8 at 8 p.m. in the Deerfield School. At that session, a preliminary budget discussion will be held; suggestions and recommendations by the public will be heard.

The formal budget presentation will take place at a public hearing Wednesday, Jan. 16 at 8 p.m. in the Deerfield School. Voters will approve or reject the budget in the annual school elections, set for Wednesday, Feb. 13, from 2-9 p.m. Balloting will take place in the Deerfield School gymnasium

A MUSING from the desk

When a nearby Board of Education last week was considering ways to cope with the energy crisis, one member commented that fuel is not needed for school dances, since active eenagers-generate_their_own_warmth.

Another commented that lights could also be eliminated, in the interests of both fuel conservation and togetherness. Along the same lines, we have our own set of modest proposals which might help us all to cope with the shortages. First of all, wise motorists could turn off their car engines and coast on all New Jersey highways, juding particularly by our experiences with Rt. 78, the whole state network is running

Second, all schools should immediately form varsity boys' and girls' bicycle teams. This would train our teenagers for a society in pedal extremities. And instead of driver education courses, the schools could provide instruction in techniques of hitchhiking—assuming there will be any cars left on the roads for hikers to hitch from.

All governing bodies and other municipal boards and committees should hold their meetings during daylight hours. This would not only save fuel and electricity, it would also reduce public participation and let committeemen run the town the way they were

The next step would be to outlaw all power mowers and snowblowers. Everyone will be staying home and will have plenty of time to keep-lawns-and-driveways-tidy.-Besides-if-we can't use our cars we won't have to shovel our

And while we're making sure that the schools don't bus children for distances less than the mandated distance, we can apply the same standards to commuters and shoppers. A brisk walk or bike ride of two miles or less would be good for us all.

And we could all put a little more effort into turning off the lights when we leave a room. Of all those eight-room houses we see with every room brightly illuminated, we imagine few actually have eight family members. And once we have finished making jokes about what is, of course, not at all an amusing situation, we can make sure that our major energy producers do what they have so conspicuously failed to do over all these years. They can start putting a decent amount of their money and their effort into seeking new and improved means of producing energyfrom thermal, solar and nuclear sources and others we can't even imagine in the present condition of our research facilities. ABNER GOLD

Senator CLIFFORD P. CASE Reports

As this is written Congress is taking a major step to deal with the railroad crisis in New Jersey and other northeastern states.

Under legislation now heading for final congressional approval a mechanism will be established for merging and restructuring eight bankrupt rail carriers serving the region.

Five of the eight carriers provide New Jersey with essential freight and passenger servicesthe Penn Central, the Jersey Central, the Erie-Lackawanna, the Lehigh Valley and the Reading railroads.

In the case of the huge Penn Central system, the bankruptcy judge handling its reorganization has threatened to liquidate the road unless Congress acts to deal with the rail

The reasons for the crisis are as numerous as they are complex. And they all lead to the conclusion that both government and railroad management have pursued policies that have worked to the detriment of railroad service in the Northeast-and elsewhere as well. It is really amazing that in such a climate any service at all has been able to survive.

There can be no argument that the survival of the northeastern railroads is essential to our region. But not just the northeast is affected. As the Senate Commerce Committee put it in a recent report: "The entire economy of the United States would suffer drastically if railroads in the Northeast and Midwest shut down operations.'

Such a shutdown makes no sense at any time and most certainly would not make sense now when the nation has a serious fuel shortage. Railroads are more efficient users of fuel than almost any other form of transportation. Their role should be strengthened, not the reverse. Congress has come up with a two-phase plan for restructuring the northeast railroads.

In the first phase a nonprofit organization would be formed to develop a detailed blueprint of the lines to be acquired and the services to be

Assuming Congress clears this "final system plan," a new profit-making corporation would be created to acquire and run the various lines. exchange for these properties the creditors of the bankrupt lines would be given stock in the new corporation.

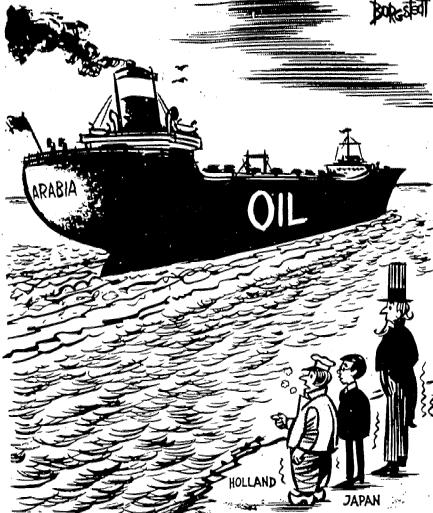

Those rail lines not included in the final plan could be dropped. But recognizing that some lines provide freight and passenger services essential to local areas, the legislation authorizes funds to assist the states both in acquiring and in operating lines they wish to

The bill also provides: Interim financial assistance to keep the insolvent carriers running during the planning phase; funds to assist rail employees who may be thrown out of work by the merger; and loan assistance for upgrading Amtrak's passenger service between Boston and Washington, which includes

New Jersey stops.

The legislation finally agreed to by Senate and House conferees may not include everything that is needed, but is a substantial, overdue, step in the right direction.

Meantime, the Appropriations Committee, of which I am a ranking member, already has approved funds to get the planning under way as soon as the President signs the bill.

THE STATE WE'RE IN

By DAVID F. MOORE, Executive director, North Jersey Conservation Foundation

This energy uproar has predictably led to some superficial proposals by politicians and others who are more interested in making a suggestion than in putting much thought behind it. Two come to mind immediately.

The first is closing schools to save the electricity and fuel needed to keep them functioning during the coldest weather period. Think about this for a minute and then enlighten your local board of education about its ramifications.

Let's say 400 youngsters are confined in a school during an average winter's day. Yes, it takes a given amount of fuel and electricity to keep them warm and illuminated. Now let's send 400 kids home. Close to 400 television sets will get turned on, and many household ther-mostats will have to be raised. More lights will be turned on, too.

Inasmuch as most of our electricity comes from oil or other fossil fuels, it shouldn't take long to realize that keeping the kids in one place, minus all that television, represents the true energy saving. It wouldn't hurt to reflect a bit also on the priorities involved. Isn't education more important anyway, even in the context of energy hysteria?

And then there's the bright idea of burning solid waste as a heat source for steam generation of electricity. This one is trickier and at first seems backed by a persuasive argument. We bury garbage now, so why not burn it and get some use out of it?

The answer is that we shouldn't be burying it, we should be recycling it. If we jump to the simplistic idea of burning it, we are committing ourselves to one more wrong direction in our maze of resource and environmental errors. Yes, energy could be obtained by burning solid waste. But it would be a false energy economy.

Here's why. In general, it takes less energy to recycle something than to manufacture it from virgin materials. This is especially true of paper, which is the most burnable component of solid waste, as it happens. Accordingly, we should recycle paper instead of throwing it away or burning it. That way, we will expend less energy than if we continue to use only paper made from wood pulp. And, I'm sure more energy would be saved than would be generated in the burning. Many kinds of plastic are in short supply now because of the oil shortage. These also could be recycled, And, needless to say, components of solid waste which won't burn anyway—such as aluminum, steel and glass—are easily recycled, all with energy savings compared to producing them from raw materials.

If anybody wants to do something sensible for the energy situation, be selective in appliance shopping. Did you know that the so-called "frost-free" refrigerators and freezers require almost a third more electricity compared to the old fashioned kind you have to defrost once in a while? That's not only energy wasteful, it also costs you several more bucks per month on the electric bill.

Or water heaters. The quick recovery kind uses almost 50 percent more electricity than the kind we were always able to exist with before somebody found a new gimmick to sell. Self cleaning ovens use a ridiculous amount of electricity. So do clothes dryers. Ditto air

Let's put some thought into this energy thing and we will be able to avoid silliness and still do

Last summer. I proposed that a national hotline be established for runaway youths—a hotline that young people could use as a means of informing their parents that they are alive

I envisioned a small office served by a tollfree number which runaways could call, giving their parents' names and addresses as well as their own names. The parents could then be notified by mail that their child had contacted the hotline, and was all right.

It is my belief that this means of notifying parents of their children's safety, without divulging the runaways' whereabouts, could be a tremendous source of comfort to anguished Furthermore, the hotline could be useful in helping to reconcile children who might wish to return home but are afraid to make the often wrenching initial contact. Those manning the hotline could serve as a bridge between the estranged parent and child, thus facilitating the reconciliation. contacted Caspar W. Weinberger, Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare in August, and urged him to implement my hotline proposal. Since then I have worked closely with him and his staff on this project. Only a few weeks ago, I urged him to expedite the implementation of my idea. I also told the secretary of my belief that certain problems of runaway youth and their families problems of runaway youth and their families are so pressing that immediate administrative action should be taken to assist them. I do not think that we can afford to wait for pending legislation to be passed, new programs to be developed and masses of paperwork to be processed before offering some hope to runaway young people and their families. Secretary Weinberger has reacted very favorably to my hotline suggestion. In a letter in response to my most recent communication, a high priority basis is currently exploring approaches that might be undertaken to reduce the problem of runaway youth. "I have personally been meeting with representatives across the country who have a special expertise in this area in the hope that 'I want to assure you that the Department on their ideas and recommendations will result in some effective programmatic solutions to the "The Department is currently investigating the possibility of establishing a pilot program for a Federally financed hotline very similar to the idea (you) suggested."

HEW's Office of Youth Development is now in the initial planning stages for this pilot program, which would involve setting up a runaway youth hotline in 20 major cities around the country. If all goes well, I anticipate that it may be in operation by next spring.

I have suggested that young people using the hotline be asked the following questions: What are your parents' names, address and telephone number? Have you any message for them? Would you like to speak with your family? Will you consider doing so? In all cases, the wishes of the youth should be honored. I offered these as minimal suggestions. With existing computer technology, it should be possible for parents to send in messages for their children so that if the youth does call in. the operator could read a message from the

Obviously, my suggestion is intended to bring families back together, but, unfortunately, many runaways may not want to go home. However, many may want to let their families know something, and for most parents, any news would be welcome. In view of this, I believe it is imperative that young people know for sure that their calls will not be traced. If they have this assurance, and thus make use of the pilot hotline, perhaps at this time next year the holidays will be merrier for many families.

Maybe we do not really mean it. All the song and circus, the great Twentieth Century revival of lung and earth, where air pollution meets the spirit.

... It makes no sense. On one hand we have the great human power push, a new ethic, where the realities of air pollution are tolled in the bells of the cradle, through school, the town halls, to the counting slabs of alerted morgues. . It makes no sense, when at last in New Jersey we have a law that would reduce the state's air pollution by one third, then scuttle it because its enforcement may be unpopular with those who would benefit most

New Jersey's mandatory automobile exhaust inspections had been stalled last year because somebody out there at the end of the government highway felt it would be better to have pollution than anger. Slow poison does no anger so much as losing the bast buck. All the divine rhetoric against air pollution only dissolves into rainbows raised from pots of

School visits slated by admissions aide

BUCKHANNON, W. VA.-Ted Brown, adnissions counselor for West Virginia Wesleyan College, has scheduled a series of visits to Jnion County, N.J., on Wednesday, Jan. 9, At 9 .m., Brown will confer with teachers and students at Jonathan Dayton Regional High School in Springfield, at 1 p.m. he will visit Gov. Livingston Regional High School in Berkeley

Wesleyan is a four-year coeducational college of the liberal arts and sciences, under the new presidency of John D. Rockefeller 4th. The college is located near the geographic center of West Virginia in a community of approximately 9,000. It is situated on a 75-acre campus of more than 20 buildings, mostly of modified Georgian design, Enrollment at Wesleyan is 1,550; the student-faculty ratio is excessive exhausts would amount to about $31. a fee about equal to a sleezy night on the town, with dinner and the movies and a stop at Joe's Dinner for coffee, pie and two slugs worth of Sinatra from the juke box. It is hard to measure air pollution anyway, until you join the army of the countable where the numbers add up and you only have time to look back and you can't even remember the song Frankie sang in plastic that night in the diner.

The simplicity of hooking air pollution to the dollar is a pure and simple truth of economic virtue, so pure and completely definable that it has become an absolute force of commerce. and so it stands in history and legislation. The dollar and air pollution is a naked marriage and you can't buffer the colors with new demands and crisis, as the energy problem. Though it does remain that if the State's motor vehicle emission law is enforced as written, New Jersey can save as much as 50 billion gallons of gasoline by 1975. Gasoline or lungs, the savings would be all under the rainbow where the gold is not seen.

Environmental controls such as new legislation or alertness to assorted techniques of back-tracking, as the present effort to delay the inspection of automotive exhausts, have become the concern of many boards of health and other groups. The priorities of environmental controls have been set by concerned boards which feel that perhaps now more than ever before, a special watchfulness must be maintained against unnecessary reversal of pollution law while the energy crisis may be conveniently around.

Environmental control does not come first in all cities of New Jersey. Some cities outward, others look inward. The average income of a city's residents appears to determine the attitude. Cities as ewark or Trenton may place their priorities on street problems, as drug abuse or com-municable disease. Where the incomes are higher the priorities are made by looking at the town walls and at the securities of space, distance, immunity and status quo.

Though many of the fears of upper income groups often become illusions because the extensions of inner city may be underground and longer and deeper than most people realize. However upper income cities have few

A library spokesman stated:
"Interest in ruins and destruction represente two distinct cultural activities. On the one hand, ruins are often the sole measure of man's historical achievements, providing archaeological data about our near and distant past. The major part of our knowledge about incient civilizations comes from the piles of stone that once were monutments.

"More recently, the effects of war, earthquakes and the "necessary" effects of urbanrenewal have managed to destroy large portions of our modern cities. The ruins provide an index to what once were man's nobler productions; pictorial records of these destructions disseminate their information.

'On the other hand, a romantic imagination may find a personal and compelling landscape in the visions of destructions, decay and ruins It is a landscape where time is forsaken and the connections to everyday reality are severed. "As long as the havoc and particular disaster are removed from our experience by time and distance, the landscape's pic turesqueness and melancholy can be visually appreciated. These landscapes are the background for the imagination; the results are sometimes lyrical and sentimental, at other times dramatic and terrifying."

The exhibition of 40 prints will be on display in the library during January. The exhibit is free to the public during regular library hours: 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday and Friday and Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The Grand Canyon by dory features a famous expedition offering an unusual view from a wooden boat. Nearly a mile separates the top and bottom of the canyon, and although millions have looked down at the Colorado River, relatively few have ventured to the canyon floor to look up.

The canyon program will be held Feb. 13.

The sailing voyage through the Mediterranean to the Baltic sea is the program slated for March 18, while on April 5 the story of the glamorous and romantic new African Riviera will be presented by Bill Madsen.

From Better Business Bureau anof Metropolitan New York, Inc.

I'm 60 years old and have been a widow for nine years. I'm very lonely and have so much time on my hands. I've decided that I'd like to learn how to dance so that I can meet people and also have a social life. When I told my triend about my idea she suggested that I enroll m one of the dance studios that are con-stantly advertising low-cost dance lessons. I just don't feel right about this idea. I used to discuss matters like this with my husband, but now I feel at a loss. Can you help me? Would I be making a right-decision if I took advantage

Dear Lonely:

Many low-cost dance offers are simply bait to get you into the studio for a high pressure sales talk. This the Better Business Bureau found out by shopping several studios which had advertised attractive, low-cost ($20 and under) offers implying that customers would learn how to dance. The shoppers were badgered and pestered by salesmen-instructors as well as operators of the dance studios who tried to get them to sign expensive, long-term contracts on the other hand, you may wish to sign for a long-term arrangement. Just be sure you understand what you want-and are getting

Dear Larrie:

I was very agitated over the bill I received from the moving and storage company that moved my belongings last week. Would you believe the bill was twice the amount they originally estimated? Who sets the rates charged by movers? There should be some way that people can avoid being taken by such

AGITATED MOVER Dear Agitated:

Unlike interstate tariffs which are simply filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission, intrastate rates are set by the state, No local mover can charge less than the rate

Before entering into an agreement with a local mover, consumers should check with the Better Business Bureau to determine if complaints indicate whether the mover has a record of giving low, misleading estimates to potential customers.

Dear Larrie: A retail store recently opened where I work that sells "unclaimed freight." I never heard of this kind of merchandise. I guess they have special sources for the goods they sell.

When I told my husband about this store, he said he didn't want me to buy anything from it. He said I'm foolish to believe they're selling unclaimed freight goods. Is this so? FORBIDDEN

Dear Forbidden:

""Unclaimed freight" is but one of many names used by some retail merchants who try to make the public believe that they have special sources for the goods they sell. Some use names like "Factory Outlet," "Mill Outlet," "Warehouse." "Unclaimed Freight" stores get their goods for resale in about the same way as other retail merchants; and sell at about the same prices.

To make a smooth transition from the worka-day world to the retirment years requires some planning, and much has been written about it. It is truly a major period of change and adjustment. But not enough is said about the non-working wives who suddenly find themselves with their man around the house 24

Through the years many women have their routines well established. They get their husbands off to work each morning and schedule and plan their housework. One housewife might like to go to the market at a certain time on a certain day of the week. Another housewife may belong to a morning bridge group, have a hobby, be a member of a club, or have other activities which occupy much of her time.

She, too, must plan for her husband's retirement. She might find that her husband now wants three meals a day instead of two. He might want to take her out for a ride on her bridge morning, or he might like to accompany her to the supermarket.

The wise wife should try to plan a time schedule before her husband retires. It is just as important to discuss spending time as it is spending money in retirement planning. The wo greatest considerations when planning should be time and money.

THE CLINICAL CENTER

An intriguing building tells an intriguing story.

The building is the Clinical Center of the National Institutes of Health; the story, medical research. For in this huge structure one gets a glimpse of all that we mean by investigating possibilities for healthier, longer life."

In this single building, American taxpayers have invested their dollars in an enterprise combining the talents not only of physicians but also of nuclear physicists. experts, chemists, sociologists and biologists, to mention only sampling of the myriad professions involved. The long Clinical Center with three wings at each end rises fourteen stories into the air: an additional circular wing (three stories high) juts out from one end. All this, and only 516 patient beds within: but the Center houses 1,100 laboratories as well. A hospital, yes; but much more, a research hospital. The building is sectioned off so that patients need be concerned only with the purely hospital aspects: patient rooms, nursing stations, a chapel, gymnasium, arts-and-crafts shop, auditorium. In corridors parallel to those on which patient rooms are located. however, laboratory after laboratory is occupied by scientists working amid the Doctors at the Clinical Center are giving their patients the best possible care and treatment, while also studying them intensively. trying to discover besides care and treatment, greater knowledge of the fundamenta cause of their diseases.

This kind of discovery depends upon detailed scrutiny of the material of which flesh, blood, bone and muscle are made. It depends upon a deepening understanding of the way these grow and function and upon a search for outside elements which can affect their growth or operation.

In short, the study of just one disease combines hund-dreds of highly specialized fields of endeavor. So, it is good sense and good economy of time and money to bring those specialties together where investigators can readily coordinate their skills

Streisand, Redford, as lovers, bring sentimentality to screen

Pink clouds, perfume-scented, and candycoated moments of love are the essence of what dreams are made of. But what happens to those dreams, as in the film, "The Way We Were" at the Jerry Lewis Cinema, Five Points, Union, when reality rears its ugly head to deflate the bubble to shreds?

Arthur Laurents, who wrote the screenplay from his own novel, makes a gentle attempt to rationalize the incompatability of the relationship between an over-active, idealistic Jewish girl, who, takes time out from her 11 jobs, her political affiliations and soap box lectures, to go to college and to fall in love with a high-minded, social-conscious gentile boy "the right side of the tracks," who eventually becomes a naval officer.

If "The Way We Were" had been made 25 or 30 years ago, a movie viewer would expect that this great love would overcome all obstacles, and the silver screen writers would give the viewers what they demanded in their private dream world. Today, however, a picture about the world of 25 or 30 years ago, makes too many demands on the reality of such impossible situations

Barbra Streisand and Robert Redford play the young lovers in "The Way We Were," and the two have a sizzling effect on the audience, particularly with Miss Streisand singing the title song at the beginning of the film, and director Sidney Pollack utilizing the sentimental ditty as a background for the remainder of the scenes. It certainly allows for the hardened, realistic crowd of today to sit back and melt the ice into real sentimentality.

The picture, itself, is an excellent one, in spite of the fact that such top performers as Bradford Dillman, Viveca Lindfors, Herb Edelman, Murray Hamilton and Patrick O'Neal, have nodding acquaintances with the film audiences. One tends to believe that much of their footage has been left on the cutting room floor to give more film time to sprawling, lengthy, consuming love scenes.

However, with the story set in the turbulent 40s, when, after the war, black lists appeared, and the cream of the Hollywood crop went sour, with pointed communistic accusations that resulted in the loss of jobs; the crumbling of "The Way We Were" is one of the best shows in town---Miss Streisand is at her best (but then, she always is--in all of her vehicles), and where do you find a handsomer man than Redford? When the two get together, they can almost make a viewer believe in pink clouds, perfume scented and candy-coated moments of

AAA urging délay on state inspection of auto emissions

The Public Affairs Council of the AAA Automobile Clubs of New Jersey this week expressed regret at Governor-elect Brendan Bryne's decision to proceed with the Feb. 1. 1974, mandatory emission control inspection of

"We hope the new administration, and particularily the legislature, will act quickly to determine what impact these mandatory emission inspections will have on the pocket books and gas tanks of the motoring public in New Jersey," said Frank J. Quinn, Council

He pointed out that there are contradictory opinions on whether these mandatory inspections will save fuel or increase gas demands

The administration should seek independent data on this question," Quinn said, "rather than accept the self-serving assurances of the Department of Environmental Protection.

To suggest that all that will be required here is a motor tune-up is simplistic at best and, at worst, deliberately ignores the expensive installation or repair of emission control devices that will be mandated in many, many instances

"The closing of service stations on Sundays, and early closing on other days, will certainly mean that motorists will be hard pressed to have repairs made on their cars during the 14day reinspection period.

"We hope the legislature will act swiftly to delay the mandatory emission test until definitive information is available as to whether it will further aggravate the fuel crisis," said the AAA chairman.

'If the facts support our contention that this is the worst possible time to institute emission testing, then we are confident that Governor elect Bryne will support legislation to delay the implementation of mandatory inspections.

'If the Feb. 1, 1974, deadline is imposed, then very careful monitoring must be conducted on the impact the program is having on the gas tanks, pocketbooks and patience of New Jersey motorists," concluded Quinn

Civilian training counts in Army

The U.S. Army is now offering skilled workers what any other employer can offer -good starting pay and a chance to get ahead. Under a new enlistment program called Stripes for Skills, applicants with at least two years of civilian training and experience in one of the program's 165 specified job categories can enlist at an advanced rank and pay grade and will be considered for possible promotion after only eight weeks on the job.

Men and women who qualify can enter the Army at pay grade E-3, Private First Class, at a starting salary of $377.70 a month, less deductions. Meals, housing, medical care, a month's paid vacation and other Army benefits are also provided.

Upon successful completion of the eight-week basic training course, an applicant in this program is assigned to the selected job category. Eight weeks after work assignment, an individual's demonstrated skills and job performance are evaluated and he or she can at that time be promoted up to an E-5, Specialist, at $408.30 a month.

X-ray technician, surveyor, dental assistant, teletypewriter equipment repairman and occupational therapist are only a few of the job categories included in the Stripes for Skills Program. A complete listing of all the jobs and additional information about the program are available from Sergeant Willie Harvey by calling 372-0233 or by visiting him at 960 Springfield ave., Irvington.

The 10,000-member New Jersey Association of Realtor Boards, after more than 50 years, has changed its name to the New Jersey Association of Realtors (NJAR).

The name change, to become effective Jan. 1, was approved by more than 3,500 delegates to the state association's 57th annual convention at the Chalfonte-Haddon Hall Hotel, Atlantic

Albert Rubin of Verona, a Newark Realtor

Albert Rubin of the group, said: "The change has been made to reflect a similar name change made by the National Association of Realtors and by its state association affiliates throughout the country. Our new name and trade mark will be used beginning Jan. 1 by all 39 county and area Realtor boards throughout New Jersey."
The new trade mark and logo, replacing the long familiar oval emblem worn and displayed by Realtors throughout the state and nation for more than a half century, is a square block imprinted with the letter "R"

Sidney H. Koorse of Westfield has been elected 57th president of the association. Koorse is a realtor in Jersey City.

We recommend that all Parkway motorists, especially those who have been partying, interrupt their holiday travels by stopping at roadside restaurants for a drink lacking

Lighting dimmed at Franklin State

A program of energy conservation for Franklin State Bank has been announced by Mayo S. Sisler, chairman, and Anthony D Schoberl, president, of the bank. They announced this week that the program has been instituted at all of the bank's 24 offices in compliance with the national effort on the conservation of energy.

All building temperatures have been set at no more than 68 degrees. There has been a reduction of lighting during daylight hours, and the program calls for all internal lights to be turned off when a department or branch is not in use. In addition, parking lot lights will be turned off when all employees have left and all outside lights will be turned off when the branch office is closed for business

Bank-owned vehicles are to be driven within the new speed limits. "It is also suggested that, wherever possible, employees discuss the possible pooling of rides to and from the bank,"

"This being the holiday season, all offices have been decorated in the spirit of the season, but without lights." Sisler added.

Contractors pessimistic on 1974 construction

The Building Contractors Association of New Jersey forecasts a sharp reduction in building construction in the state next year, based on a survey of the association's general contractors.

Fuel and material shortages lead the six major reasons given in the survey for the pesimatic prediction. Building Contractors Association of New Jersey is the largest organization of its kind in the building and construction industry in New Jersey, representing contractors engaged in commercial, industrial and institutional building.

Because of the critical fuel and material shortages, the association through its managing director, D. Bruce Evans, is suggesting to the New Jersey Users (Construction) Council and organizations representing architects, that new building contracts contain clauses stipulating that, "in the event of unreasonable delay, disruption, or change occurring in the work as a direct or indirect result of the shortages, or energy related material shortages, the owner of his representatives will have the responsibility to make an equitable adjustment in the contract price and the contract time.

The prediction of the construction reversal next year is based on a survey of association members completed Dec. 16. The key factors mentioned as detriments to new construction

Forty percent of the contractors indicate fuel shortages; 40 percent indicate material shortages; 30 percent cite environmental restrictions; 20 percent mention interest rates; 0 percent cite new Occupational Safety and Health Regulations, and six percent mention zoning restrictions. "We also must bear in mind that with each passing week the fuel and material shortagespercentages in construction increases, "Evans

He said his findings in the survey show a 39 percent drop in new construction in 1974. He

"Airport construction shows the biggest loss -100 percent - not one contractor can foresee any new airport construction. Our information indicates an overall reduction of 37 percent in educational construction, 29 percent in hospital construction, 28 percent in private construction and 23 percent in public construction.

"The only optimistic note in the entire survey is that there is indicated a 60 percent increase in waste treatment facility construction by our members," Evans said.

Early labor deliveries of infants helped by test and in cases where the mother

A simple, rapid and accurate test to select the best time to deliver infants when early labor must be induced was described to the American Chemical Society at a recent meeting. The test assesses fetal lung development and predicts whether Respiratory Distress Syndrome (RDS) and subsequent Hyaline Membrane Disease (HMD)—the leading cause of death in premature intants—will develop after birth, said Dr. John C. Morrison (M.D.), assistant professor of obstetrics and gynecology at the University of Tennessee Medical Units in Memphis.

Delivery of the infant "prior to term" is necessary in cases involving high-risk infants, in pregnancies that follow cesarean births (about two percent of all pregnancies), preselects her delivery date (about eight percent of all pregnancies), he explained.

The test measures the lecithin to sphengomyelin niotic fluid that bathes the fetus. Previous research has shown that the lecithin content of this fluid reflects the amount of surface-active material present in the fetal lung; that increased amounts of lecithin appear to be directly proportional to the fetal lung maturity, and that the amount of lecithin is inversely related to the incidence of RSD and HMD.

In 310 normal pregnancies. the test gave results that exceeded the 98 percent accuracy level in the assessment of fetal maturity, Dr. Morrison said.

Oil dealers, CD officials agree on emergency fuel

County Civil Defense and Disaster Control Department have asked homeowners to impose a self-rationing program to conserve energy and "avoid complete chaos" would result from unrestricted use of fuel.

The oil heat dealers and civil defense agency met at CD headquarters in Westfield to discuss the energy crisis and develop methods of saving fuel and providing emergency fuel

CD coordinator William J. McBride outlined preliminary plans for the treatment of hardship cases, including new home owners moving into Union County who do not have regular oil suppliers. Special emphasis at the meeting was placed on certification of hardship status.

The fuel dealers' group pledged cooperation to meet any crisis that might develope and agreed that all emergency deliveries would have to be handled on a pre-paid basis at the dealers' offices. Further, any service required must be handled by the dealer in question as a seperate transaction, again on a pre-paid basis.

The fuel dealers concurred with the recommended procedure that all hardship cases apply directly to their local Civil Defense

Responsibility for meeting hardship cases has been taken out of the hands of local fuel oil dealers and assigned to Civil Defense authorities for appropriate action. Federal penalties have been set up for dealers in Association president Robert M. Crane commended Civil Defense authorities for their "forward thinking in urging development of contingency plans for possible establishment of local evacuation centers. Crane said the "very definite possibility that the fuel situation could deteroirate to a point this winter where such plans would have to be implemented to safeguard the public."

He stated further that "many homeowners still apparently are not aware of the seriousness of the energy crisis involving all forms of fuel, despite the public statements of President Nixon and countless other officials. The Union County Oil Heat Associations' membership accounts for better than 80 percent of the retail sales of home heating oils in

Freeholders name two legislators to charter study unit

State Sen. Peter McDonough and Assem-blyman-elect Joseph Garrubo were named by the Board of Freeholders as members of the advisory board of the Union County Charter Study Commission, it was announced at a meeting of the study group last week.

The group discussed with Alfred E. Linden, director, Union County Planning Board, and George Albanese, director, Criminal Justice Planning, the merits of hiring consulting firms to assist the commission

The group heard from Synetics of Trenton, a research analyst agency; Knight, Gladieux and Smith of New York City, and Joseph Coleman, a management consultant from Rahway.

The commission decided, because of the holidays, to hold its next two meetings on Thursdays, instead of Tuesdays. Charles Kennedy, commission chairman, noted that the other members of the advisory board will be appointed Jan. 1, including Thomas G. Dunn of Elizabeth, mayor of the county's largest city; Christopher Dietz and George Syme, county chairmen of the major political parties; the Freeholder director for 1974; and the mayor of Winfield, the smallest community in the county, whose identity will not be known until Winfield's organization meeting Jan. 1.

Commission plans teen cultural event to be held at U.C.

The Union County Cultural & Heritage Commission held a meeting recently at Union College for those interested in participation in the Teen Arts Festival, which will take place March 19-20, at the Cranford campus of the

After Elizabeth Keating, chairman of the commission, sketched the background and workings of her organization, Perry Leib, commission member, told the audience some details of the March 1973 festival, which was held at Newark State College in Union (now Kean College). The affair, according to the speaker, was an outstanding success, with the county winners going on to Trenton to be judged at the State Teen Arts Festival.

Leib urged all 21 Union county communities to become involved in the 1974 venture, where a keynote will be originality in such fields as petry, creative writing, original music, the dance and graphic arts. Not only will students be invited to participate, but also members of various clubs and organizations. Once again, the top entrants will go on to Trenton, and possibly, to Washington, D.C. for the National Teen Arts Festival.

Jacqueline Rubel, chairman of the state TAF, asserted that the success of the festival depends upon the input of such people as those in the audience, and that strength at the county level was the most important element in suc-

`Don't Drive Over Point Zero Five' Motorists advised on safe blood alcohol levels

licensed drivers will be advised that drinking and driving do mix-to a point

"Don't Drive Over Point Zero Five" is the message imprinted on two million wallet cards being distributed statewide with registration renewal applications by the N. J. Division of Motor Vehicles Alcohol Countermeasures

Roger Surprenant, ACP coordinator, says,
"The wallet cards are unique because they are the only available indexes that focus on a safe blood alcohol level-that is, point zero five. And it is highly unlikely that a driver who follows the .05 percent guidelines will ever be convicted of a drinking driving offensde seause at point zero five a driver is legally presumed sober. He added, "There is no presumption of sobriety beyond .05 percent. studies have proven that measurable impairment begins at a blood alcohol concentration below .05 percent, all concerning drinking driving include blood alcohol content levels in safe, risky, and unsafe categories. Point zero five represents a reasonable liquor consumption varying with weight that still allows most drivers to operate motor vehicle responsibly, according to a project spokesman.

Surprenant notes that the national 20,000 to 25,000 alcohol-related traffic deaths are comparable to wiping out one-third of the populations of Hunterdon and Warren counties each year. "When drivers modify their behavior—that is, when they become more conscious of their use of alcohol before getting behind the wheel-there will be significant relief from the drinking driving problem," he says.

Noting that alcohol-affected crashes have an impact beyond the resulting grief and heart break, which cannot be measured, he reports that alcohol-related traffic deaths are a financial burden to the people of New Jersey in excess of $15 million annually and may be as high as $75 million, depending on whether a value is placed on life expectancy.

"As drinking drivers respond to our 'Don't Drive Over Point Zero Five' watchword and become more cognizant of its implications, we hope to see a gradual reduction of drinking driving fatalities," says Surprenant.

STRICTLY PERSONAL

By Pat and Marilyn Davis

Copley News Service

Dear Pat and Marilyn: My parents are getting more unreasonable the older I get. As an example: I had to stay home from a dance last week becausae I was just getting over the flu.I had to break a date with one of the most popular boys in school just because my temperature was 100. I must be in by 1 a.m. and always have to let my parents know exactly where I

How can I convince my parents to let me run my own life?

Dar Jerri:

It is better to miss one dance than to land in the hospital with pneumonia. It is also the duty of your parents to know where you are and what you are doing. Be glad Mom and Dad care enough to make

Dear Pat and Marilyn:

My husband is in business with his older brother Sam. My husband works longer hours but gets considerably less money. The theory is that they are equal partners but I see nothing equal about the whole affair.

Sam and his wife just returned from a month's vacation, John and I had a week's vacation two years ago. Now Sam says he intends to go to Canada on a hunting trip. This means John will have all the responsibility and work twice as hard. Whenever I complain, John always finds some excuse for Sam.

How can I get him to come to a reasonable agreement

However, I feel that John does resent some of the things Sam

with his brother?

Dear Sally: If John won't speak for himself, there isn't much you can do. You might suggest that he consult an attorney who can tell him exactly what is involved in a partnership. The attorney might suggest that the partnership be turned into a corporation.

Dear Pat and Marilyn:

We have one telephone in our house and it is in the kitchen, which means that it is never possible to have a private conversation. Someone is always in the kitchen eating, cooking, or cleaning. There are five in our family so you can see what I mean. I have pointed out this problem to Mom and Dad and all they say is, "The phone is right where we want it.'

I will be 16 on my birthday and have asked for a private telephone for my bedroom. Dad says, "Nothing doing." My mother hasn't said anything. I know the reason my father is hesitating is that he feels I'll spend all my time on the phone, but I won't . How can I convince Dad that I won't yak all night?

Wants a Phone Dear Wants:

Talk over some rules and regulations with Dad before you get the telephone. Come to an agreement. If you are fortunate enought to be blessed with your own telephone at 16, it doesn't mean that conversations should go on for hours. Most problems can be settled with a 15-minute conversation, And keep in mind that someone important just might be trying to call you. Limiting your conversation can be to your advantage.

If you agree to be reasonable, perhaps Dad will weaken. Then it is up to you to abide by the rules
