

CANINE'S CONCERN—Penny, a Cairn Terrior, seems a bit perplexed by application form for a 1975 dog license, but the human residents of Mountainside should have no difficulty understanding the questions. Borough dog owners have been urged to apply for the licenses as soon as possible (it should have been done in January). Licenses will be issued at Borough Hall, Rt. 22, any weekday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. A rabies inoculation—certificate must be presented. (Photo-Graphics)

Red Cross urges residents to buy flood insurance

Home and property owners of Mountainside this week were reminded by Mrs. Grant Lennox, chairman of the Westfield-Mountainside Red Cross chapter, to take advantage of low-cost flood insurance which is partially subsidized by the tederal government Under the Flood Disaster Protection Act enacted last year, insurance protection against property losses from floods and mudslides is available in communities which meet certain federal specifications, Mrs. Lennox explained

"Mountainside has met these requirements" she, said: "Now owners of homes and businesses here can take out flood insurance on their property up to $15,000 for single-family houses and up to a maximum of $100,000 for two-to-four family structures, plus $10,000 on eontents of each unit."

Insurance may be purchased from any local or broker. Premiums are 25 cents per $100 on. private dwellings and 35 cents per $100 on household contents

Under the new law, all communities identified as "floodprose" must enter the insurance program by July 1, 1975, and must adopt appropriate land use and other control measures to reduce the chances of flood losse

Failure to comply would discussify both the individual property owner and community from virtually any form of federal financial assistance for building purposes or from any financial help from any federally insured.

regulated or supervised lending institution. Nationwide, less then 10 percent of communities identified by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development as floodproce have enrolled in the program. Of 60.531 communities identified by HUD as flood-prope only 3.250 have joined in the program, as of Jan 1, 1975, according to HUD

Mr. Lennox warned local residents and businesamen to think of the consequences if they suffered total loss of home or place of business because they failed to take out flood insurance then it was available

The same fees will be charged for kindergarten through eighth grades, meaning an increase of $50 over the tuition schedule now in use.

According to finance committee chairman Eugene Kelly, the average cost of educating one child at the school is $725 per year, but the maximum any family with children in both levels of the school's education system will pay

The Rev. Gerard McGarry, pastor of Our Lady of Lourdes Church, stated that any parents with financial difficulties should contact him to work out any details necessary to keep their children in the parochial school.

According to the committee, the new tuition charge still does not cover entirely the costs incurred for the education offered, "but a fee adjustment was found to be necessary to insure parents of a quality education with Christian values for their children."

It also reported that disposable classroom items, such as paper, pads and pencils, will not be included in the 1975-76 school budget.

Regional budget cut by $212,000

The governing bodies of all six towns in the Union County Regional High School District last week agreed to cut $212,000 from the high school budget for 1975-76, which was rejected by the voters on March 4. All six were expected to complete formal action on the matter before tomorrow's deadline.

Regional board members, who also took part in the meeting last Wednesday at David Brearley Regional High School in Kemilworth, voted not to contest the reduction, thus eliminating the possibility of an appeal to state

The reduction amounts to less than 2 percent of the current expenses item of $11,814,544 which was presented in the annual Regional District election on March 4 Charles E. Vitale Jr. of Kenilworth, board president, presided at last Wednesday's ssion. It was the first of its sort within the district, since the Regional budget had been approved every year from 1937, when the

2 new members sworn in, walk out, leaving board unable to reorganize

The Mountainside Board of Education tried and failed to organize Tuesday. They'll try

William J. Biunno and Robert H. Wood, the two newly-elected members of the school board, surprised the audience and their fellow board members at the board's organization meeting at the Deerfield School by walking out.

John McDonough, board secretary, called the meeting to order at 8 p.m. and after reading the results of the annual school election, held last week, swore in the two new members. McDonough then took a roll eall and noted that Dr. Irvin Krause was in the hospital and Walter Rupp was away on business.

Biunno made a motion that the meeting be adjourned until tonight at 8 because two members of the board were absent. "Dr.

Krause is due out of the hospital either Wednesday afternoon or Thursday morning and the business of organizing the board is too important to leave up to the five of us. It's in the best interest of the board and Mountainside that we adjourn." Biunno added, "If the board does not adjourn I will have to remove myself from the meeting and I invite others to join

The adjournment motion was seconded by

Mrs. Gertrude Palmer said, "It is most unusual when the board is here in full for any meeting. Mr. Biunno and Mr. Wood ran on a platform of peace, harmony and a spirit of tranquility on the board and it seems to me what they are doing is undemocratic."

Wood asked McDonough, who was acting as temporary chairman, if the board could go on with its other business and nut off the election of officers. McDonough said it could if a temporary chairman could be agreed upon. The motion was put up for a vote after Mrs Palmer called it "a case of blackmail."

Only Biunno and Wood voted in favor of the motion while Mrs. Palmer, Mrs. Patricia Knodel and Charles Speth Jr. voted against it. McDonough told the board members that the organization of the group had to be completed by Friday or Dr. William H. West, Union County superintendent of schools, would do it. Mrs. Knodel nominated the absent Dr. Krause as president but before he could be seconded Biunno and Wood walked out of the meeting to a mixture of applause and boos from the 30 members of the public observing the meeting.

The meeting adjourned for 10 minutes while McDonough, Mrs Knodel and Mrs Palmer thoughts were on the problem.

While they were gone comments from the audience included: "This is a beautiful start." They can't face the issues." "This wasn't what they said they were going to do during the campaign.

McDonough, Mrs. Knodel and Mrs. Palmer returned to the room and McDonough said, "As temporary chairman of the Board of Education and with the advice of Dr. West, this meeting is adjourned until Thursday night at 8.

The official election results reported by McDonough were Biunno, 1,272; Wood, 1,291; Patricia M. Kaplan, 920, and John A. Farinella, 585. The total vote on the current expense appropriations was 1,013 in favor and 849

Council adopts '75 borough budget

Taxation needs down 8.3 pct. for 3 point cut

The Mountainside Borough Council, after a public hearing Tuesday night in the Beechwood School, unanimously approved its $1,568,412 municipal budget for 1975, a figure representing an approximate $123,000 or 8.5 percent increase over the 1974 tally.

Councilman Nicholas Bradshaw, who delivered the budget summary, noted that, after deducting anticipated revenues of $1,003,697, the borough taxpayers will be asked to generate $564,714, an amount down $51,400 or 8.3 percent from last year, resulting in a threepoint decrease in the local tax rate. Although no county tax figures are yet available, the estimated total rate is expected to be $2.92 per $100 of assessed property valuation. The current rate is $2.89.

"In drawing up the budget, Council made an effort to minimize the cost to the taxpayer but also to maintain the desired level of services needed to preserve our community's unique residential character," he noted.

Citing major cost increases, Bradshaw listed the reserve for uncollected taxes, which has jumped from $135,897 to $199,578, a rise representing more than one-half the total budget increase. This is based on a projected collection of 95.7 percent, down from 97.7 in 1974 and 98.6 in 1973, and is unfortunately a symp-tom of the general economic tone of the period," he commented.

Also emphasized were the $59,000 or 9.8 percent increase in operational expenses, excluding salaries and wages, which, Bradshaw noted, "is a direct impact of last year's inflation on utilities, gasoline, office supplies, ete: Approximately one-third of the increase is directly attributable to higher sewer charges and fire hydrant service costs." Salaries and wages accounted for the third highest increase in line items, roughly eight percent Although the budget hearing was expected to be the major concern of the audience of 25 persons, a number were in attendance to discuss another matter, an ordinance to appropriate $17,000 to construct a sanitary sewer. n the Coles avenue-Tanager way area. Six homes are affected by the project, but of these only four, which have faulty septic systems, require the sewer line. The other two homeowners are objecting to being assessed (Continued on page 2)

ACHIEVERS—Despite complete paralysis caused by a broken neck, Linda Clark of Mountainside (left) has gained a degree of independence and is an honor student at Drew. University, Madison, working toward a career as medical statistician. Howard Duda of Hillside, a quadriplegic, has completed studies to become an accountant; although also confined to a wheelchair, he has gained more mobility through a custom-equipped van. Both young people are former patients at Children's Specialized Hospital.

'Determination' is key Paraplegics gain independence

Encouragement and understanding on the part of staff of Children's Specialized Hospital, Mountainside, plays an important part in rehabilitation medicine, but success in reaching new life goals also depends on the will and determination the patient himself brings to the total effort. This is particularly true in the

On Oct. 30, 1965, Linda Clark of Mountainside was a healthy nine-year-old, pushing a playmate on a swing. The swing sailed out, and on its return struck her in the head, breaking her neck. She was taken to Overlook Hospital, care of traumatic injury.

semi-conscious, completely paralyzed and barely breathing. Linda spent 51 months at Overlook in traction while the neck healed, and then was transferred to Warm Springs, Ga. for rehabilitation. In July of 1966, nearly nine months after the accident, she was transferred to Children's Specialized Hospital near her home in Mountainside.

Physical therapy helped strengthen damaged muscles where formerly she could barely lift her upper extremities against gravity. In occupational therapy, Linda gained her first independence when she learned to feed herself with her arms supported on slings and using a fork with a thick handle which was clipped to her hand."Her spirit was phenomenal-she made every possible effort, even for small gains," says Dr. Margaret Symonds, acting medical director. "The entire staff found her an exceptional child to work

Linda maintained a high average in her school work in the special classes at Children's Specialized Hospital and graduated with nors in the same class she was in eight years before at the time of her accident

She was discharged in June 1967, but returns to the hospital as an outpatient from time to time to be checked and to visit with her friends. Her parents, always directly involved participants in Linda's progress, have adapted their home to her needs and learned along with her-about the management of a spinal cordinjured patient,

Although she will always be confined to a wheelchair, Linda has gained a remarkable degree of independence. She is now a sophomore at Drew University in Madison. Linda and her mother are a "team," as Mrs. Clark works at the university snack bar and is able to drive Linda to and from classes and be with her at times during the school day.

Linda altends Drew on three scholarships: one from the Mountainside Teachers Association and another from the David Brearley Regional High School PTA of Kenilworth, and a third from the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. In addition, she tutors elementary school students in math; and plans a career as a medical statistician.

proposed to the governor and the legislature by the New Jersey Builders Association. This plan would allow the use of some state pension funds for mertgages at reduced cost while providing higher yields of interest to the funds' in-increasing the availability of Jobs and housing.

The legislation and proposals that I have described are some of the efforts we in state government are making to cope with the recession. I would like nothing better than to be able to tell you that we will solve all of the state's economic problems. However, to make such a claim would be false and misleading. What I will tell you is that we in the state legislature are keenly aware of the problems generated by unemployment and inflation and to the extent that we can improve the economic efforts. There is no higher priority.

First period action was "Dayton all the way," with the Bulldogs scoring the first 14 points to lead at the end of the initial quarter, 14-2 The econd period was dominated by Johnson's team which fought to lessen the deficit to 27-17 at the half. Alcoholics seek new path to life

He was a one-man gang. Alcohol made him big and he was gigantic. At his peak, a week before last Thanksgiving when he entered the Alcoholic Recovery Unit at Runnells Hospital, he was lonely, sick and confused. Alcohol made him so big he lost interest in everything else. He was too

"I got to be big today. I got big business to take care of. I got to be me—a giant." All pay homage; get out of the way or die.

He lived in a rotten neighborhood not far from hell. He was killing himself. Anyone in range could get hurt. Nobody loves a dead glant.

He surrendered, packed it in, turned his back on it and took his first tentative step down the beanstalk.

By JOHNNY SILVER

Alcoholism is a devil of a disease, as wild and real as cancer. Some say there are the seeds of alcoholism in us all, that our physical makeup, our emotions and our culture constitute the soil; that some soils are conducive to rapid growth and full flowering, while others inhibit or resist germination

Whatever, it can strike anyone. The more it's allowed to gain momentum, the worse it gets.

the first warning signal of alcoholism is the applearance of a clear pattern in the drinking habits of an individual. The most distinguishing characteristic of alcoholics, one they all share, is the landency to dany their condition.

A signer of the Declaration of Independence and surgeon-general of the Continental Army, Dr. Benjamin Rush called the intemperate use of stephol a "disease" and an "addiction" in 1785.

Man drank in prehistoric times. The desire to alter reality, or at feast to make that reality seem less. threatening and more desirable, is one of man's

There are 350,000 alceholics in New Jersey, and ever one million of their family members are affected directly by alcoholism. There are nine million alcaholics in the U.S.

Alcohol enjoys wide acceptance, but the alcoholic and his randition are shrouded in an anonymity conferred by moral and social stiama, awaiting the evertue arknowledgement and full commitment of supporty's resources

PORTS OF ENTRY

Flaces like the Alcoholic Rehabilitation Unit at Unitable Calenty's John E. Runnells Hospital in Betkeier Heights can become parts of entry into a new world of sobsety for the alcoholic. Treatment carters like Runnells, may be established throughout the state of pending legislation is passed. The gnal is to make alcoholism a minor health problem the Alcaholic Rehabilitation Unit (ARU) began two years ago this month with a grant from the How Jersey Law Enlarcement Planning Agency. At test, holf of the participants were from the Bottle Gangs of Elepheth and Plainfield. Today they are mathers fathers sisters brothers, grandpas and grandmas; they are dreamers, lighters, lovers, haters. They get the rest and weapons they need to light their disease in the three-week Runnells ARU program. Some admit themselves after learning obout the program from families or friends; some are taken there by their families outright; some are referred to the Alcoholic Rehabilitation Unit by county judges at wellow ogencies; some ore urdered there by their employers.

the days bit detection follow, in which the parent si put intowed off the word, except to be X. rayed A complete physical exam is conducted, as is an entry interview with the staff of counselors and nurses. Medications, such as vitamins, are given at every meal. Sedatives are strictly regulated. Only patients in extreme need the first few nights get them.

For three weeks patients are on a boot-camp

There are wakeups at 7 a.m., breakfasts at 7:30, cleanups of the main room, hallways and lavatories at 8, tape sessions at 9, group therapy sessions at 10:30, lunches at 11:30, midday rest periods, more group sessions at 1:30, outdoor walks at 3:30, suppers at 4:30, more rest and incessant card playing, visiting hours at 7, bus rides to outside Alcoholic Anonymous meetings at 8, homecomings and snacks at 10:30 and lights out at 11:30.

GROUP POWER

The two group therapy sessions each day are the core of the rehabilitation program. They are conducted by experienced counselors, some of them alcoholics.

There's an "espirit de corps" among the staff. The battle cry is "Honesty!" The group powers alcoholics to victory.

For variety, there are relaxation exercises, and films, one of them the informative and entertaining "Chalk Talk on Alcohol" by a Catholic priest; another is the brutal "Fifth Street," filmed on Los Angeles' Skid Row. Of those who complete the program, about four of 10 stay sober. A relapse during the immediate post-hospitalization period is one of the most serious obstacles to successful recovery. Patients are urged to go to AA meetings for 90 days after discharge, as often as possible after that, and at least once a week for life. Runnells isn't AA, but it brings alcoholics into the orbit of AA. A patient is also urged not to enter for one year into a romantic situation because of its emotional content. He is warned, as well, that he'll run into a crisis within six hours after he leaves Runnells and he d better be ready to handle it. Some graduates have gone back a second and third time after "slips," backsliding into drinking. New rules will allow a second time-but only for 10 days and a third trip will be out.

If a patient leaves early, he will drink again, still vulnerable to his old habits and responses to life's challenges. A patient is free to check out at any time, unless he has been sent by a judge.

Some graduates have died, attested to by a bulletin board on which cardboard gravestones mark the name of ex-patients, the date they entered Runnells and the day their drinking finally become foral

A patient gets help, but only he can guarantee his sobriety. To be cured, the alcoholic must be willing to accept the realities of his situation, and make the socrifices necessary for his rehabilitation.

On a grassy slope in the Watchung hills, Runnells waits for the next traveler from an old world.

Welfare board copes with heavy food stamp demand

More than 31,000 Union County residents are doing something about the cost of food-they've signed up for food stamps:

The Union County Welfare Board, which administers the program for the U.S. Department of Agriculture, reports that 10,000 persons have been added to their files in the past year. The 31,140 county residents in the program paid $468,135 for $1,163,615 worth of stamps in January; a year ealier, 21,391 persons paid $334,674 for stamps worth $750,862.

You don't have to be on welfare to get the stamps, according to Robert W. Lowe, county food stamp supervisor. Of the 31,140 qualified for the program. 17,033 are on the public assistance rolls and 14,107 are not.

Officials of the program say that persons should consider applying for food stamps if they:

—Support a large family on a small income. -Are an elderly person with a small income. -Work fulltime or parttime for low wages. -Are unemployed. -Have a small income and their food budget is tight. -Do not have more than $1,400 in savings 153,000 for households with two or more which include someone 60 or older.) Food stamps are usually not given free to individuals. Stamps are purchased at a price which is lower than the stamps' face value. For instance, a couple with a retirement net income of $300 per month, paying rent (or mortgage or taxes) of $90 per month with normal utility expenses, pays $62 a month for $82 worth of food stamps, a 24 percent discount.

The difference between what is paid for the stamps and their value is the "bonus." The differential is computed by food stamp office personnel based on a variety of factors.

Some persons on public assistance are not required to pay for the stamps because of exceedingly low income-expense rations. They are mailed their stamps. Miss Canfield said the stamps cannot be delivered by letter carriers unless the mailbox is locked (or is a slot to the house or apartment) and marked with the recipient's name. "It's amazing how many people don't have their name on the mailbox," said Miss Canfield. Unless they do they won't receive their food stamps or welfare checks.

Unlike Social Security and other programs, food stamps are tailored to individual requirements. What applicants pay and receive based on income and expenses.

'There's no sure way of knowing whether or not you qualify or what your payments will be until you file an application," said Bobbie Canfield, assistant administrative supervisor for the county food stamp program.

Each applicant, said Miss Canfield, must complete an application form that rivals the federal income tax for complexity. The ap-plication form includes details on household income and expenditures; applicants are required to support their income and expense claims with documents, including pay stubs, bank books and receipts.

The food stamp office at 7 Bridge st., Elizabeth, is where individuals can apply for the federal program. Once the office grants authorization to an individual the stamps may be purchased in local banks, which have special hours for food stamps.

The beginning of each month is the busiest time for the 20 workers in the Elizabeth office and the branch in Plainfield

"You have to show up early during the first week of each month," said Miss Canfield. "The first week is the busiest and should be avoided. We can use 20 or 30 people just to answer telephone inquiries, but our staff must also take applications and work in the field investigating

The beginning of the month is a difficult time for many social service agencies because that's when Social Security and welfare checks go out. That's when many persons have all the money they'll see that month, so that's when they buy or register for food stamps.

The Bridge street office doesn't open for business until 9 a.m., but by dawn persons are lined up outside the building, waiting to apply or gain recertification for their food stamp purchase. By 7:30 the doors to the waiting room are opened and potential clients can take numbers which establish order of service.

In the waiting room individuals can study the requirements for program participation listed on a variety of Department of Agriculture fact sheets. Many who come to the office for the first time don't realize they need to bring along receipts, pay stubs and other documents before the application can be approved, so they are advised to take the application form and return another day with the necessary materials.

While Nursing Homes, public agencies, and medical professionals are working together. more closely, and harder than ever before there are still serious problems. Nursing Homes and other extended care facilities now contain over 850,000 patients. Common difficulties faced include

Lack of standards for evaluating care and services. Emphasis is usually placed on physical facilities.

Absence of clear-cut criteria for use in ercening patients for admission Inadequacies in information about the physical and mental condition of patients. Confusion regarding the proper role of the rehabilitation center, or a transitional care facility for psychiatric patients?

Shortage of adequately trained nurses and a lack of professionally trained administrators. Insufficient on the job-training.

Tendency of mursing personnel and physicians without psychiatric experience to overreact to the emotional problems of patients, and to treat them in terms, of stereotyped attitudes towards the mentally ill. Difficulty in differential diagnosis between somatic and psychiatric illness

Humber FBIC LIVINGS INSURED TO SILMS

Standardized tests given to Roman Catholic parochial school students in Essex, Union, Hudson and Bergen counties show that the students "are achieving the academic excellence we have been striving for in our schools, whether in the city or the suburbs," according to Msgr. William J. Daly, superintendent of schools for the Archdiocese of Newark.

"The general above-average performance and the fact that some grades tested as much as a half-year above the national average indicates the quality and value of the education these youngsters receive in our schools," said Msgr. Daly. "The dedication and professionalism of our teachers is readily seen in the numbers and graphs of the testing company's report

"All of our parents as well as all the people who contribute in some fashion to the support of the Catholic schools can take pride in these results," said Msgr. Daly, "We are happy to share these with our parents and the community and we commend the schools for the excellence of their programs.

All students took tests in language studies and math, while students in the second, fourth, sixth, seventh' and eighth grades took additional tests in such areas as verbal and nonverbal abilities, science and social studies. The purpose of the tests were to measure a pupil's progress in relation to all students, public and non-public, on a national scale and to provide an evaluation of the student's ability in the subject matter taught

In reading, all grades tested above the national norm except in the sixth grade, where results equalled the norm. The test in English showed that all students were above average with some as much as a half year above the national norm. In mathematics, every grade was above the national average with the fourth grade students indicating progress almost a half year above their fellow students across the Country.

The final composite scores listed by the testing organization for students in each grade covered basic skills needed for continued progress in academic work. In this category, students in the second, lifth and sixth grades easily surpassed the national norm while students in the third, seventh and eighth grades scored significantly above the national norm Students in the fourth grade achieved the best results by scoring one-half year above the national norm.

Role of aspirin in preventing heart attacks will be studied

Can ordinary aspirin help prevent recurring heart attacks

The chance that it may has launched a broad, collaborative study, in which the National Heart and Lung Institute has awarded a four-Heart and Lung institute has awarued a four-year, $350,000 grant to a group of medical scientists at the Raritan Valley Hospital of the College of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey (CMIDNJ). RVH is the primary teaching hospital of CMIDNJ's Rutgers Medical School, Discalance.

Piscataway.

As explained by Peter T. Kuo. M.D., professor of medicine and chief of the division of cardiovascular diseases, who heads the investigating team with John B. Kostis, M.D., associate professor of medicine, aspirin may have an important but indirect role in heart attacks by helping to inhibit the formation of platelet clusters.

"Platelets, the element of the blood responsible for clot formation, rush to damaged areas of the arteries after a heart attack," Dr. Kuo said.

"Often, passageways within the blood vessels have already been narrowed considerably by cholesterol and other fatty deposits. The current thinking is that if the platelet clusters, acting like small clots, reduce this space still further, another heart attack, with its serious complications, may result.

"Statistically, heart attack victims are two and a half-or more-times as likely to die within five years as members of the general population. The deaths often result from second and third attacks following quickly upon the

The CMDNJ physicians are asking heart attack patients to volunteer to take part in the study. Although heart attack is regarded as the nation's number one killer of men, they said, their study will include both men and women. The volunteers will be divided, at random, into two groups to help determine whether aspirin really has protective value against

"The relative ineffectiveness of anticoagulant therapy in preventing secondary heart attack and sudden death sharply accentuate the need for developing new approaches to the problem. Aspirin treatment is one of them:

Dr. Kuo said he has long been interested in the problem of diet, high blood cholestero. triglyceride and other fatty substances as associated with coronary heart disease.

'There are indications," he said, "that high saturated-fat intake, high blood lipids (cholesterol and other fats) and abnormal platelet function can interact to exaggerate the undesirable platelet clumping, or clustering,

Parkway accidents fall despite traffic increase

State Parkway in 1974, but the heavy traffic load failed to disturb the road's rating as one of the safest in the nation.

Safety statistics improved in most areas, Commissioner Salvatore A. Bontempo of the New Jersey Highway Authority noted this week as he released figures on traffic and accidents for the Authority-operated Parkway last year. He pointed out that there were decreases in accidents, in mishaps involving injuries and in the number of persons hurt

There were 1,875 accidents, down 13 percent from the 1973 total. The rate of 77.5 accidents per 100 million vehicles miles was the second lowest among United States toll roads with more than one billion vehicle miles, according to the International Bridge, Tunnel and Turnpike Association.

The Parkway recorded 670 mishaps in which persons were hurt and in these, 1,089 in-dividuals suffered injuries, with both figures being about 15.5 percent below the 1973 totals. There were 33 traffic fatalities on the Parkway in 1974, producing a death rate of 1.4 per 100 million vehicle miles. While this rate is slightly higher than the 1973 mark of 1.1 which was lowest among the nation's major toll roads, it is well below the 3.6 rate for all of the country's highways in 1974 and also is the lowest for New Jersey toll roads.

A record number of 179.6 million vehicles traveled on the Parkway in 1974, an increase of more than four million over the prior year and a distinct contrast to early-year projections that were based on the severe gasoline shortage. After the gasoline situation eased, traffic increased, though the energy crisis still was felt in another way is motorists took shorter trips, Commissione. Bontempo pointed.

The total distance traveled by cars on the Parkway covered 2 billion, 420 million miles in 1974, contrasted to the record high of 2 billion, 553 million miles in 1973. The decrease in mileage followed a national pattern according to IBTTA statistics, Commissioner Bontempo noted. Many of the other toll roads, however, also experienced declines in numbers of vehicles while the Parkway was recording its increase, he added. As for accidents, Commissioner Bontempo said, an analysis showed that loss of control, skidding and inattention remained the most

namanby TRUDINA HOWARD IN SCOTLAND Conclusion

Seventh of a Series A straight line may be the shortest distance between two points-but not in Scotland. In Scotland there are no straight lines. The roads either go around a mountain, a moor, a loch, a glen, a firth, a farm, a forest or a something, There is only one exception. They never seem to go around a city. They wind torturously through those. So getting around Scotland collecting cute Scottish names is not so easy. "Oh bah," you say, "so take a train-or a plane!" Oh Shhure. But the plane doesn't land where you want to be, and the train doesn't ge where you want to get. So in the end, it is a motor car you must get into after all.

It is true that here and there some new highways stretch near some big cities, but "here and there" isn't really a lot. It is also true that the smaller roads are lovelier, and a great many of them are kept in surprisingly good condition, but they are generally only a narrow two lanes wide, with no shoulders, and a road with no shoulders seems even narrower. The rest, while also well kept-and scenic-are only secondary country roads to begin with, or third rate, or fourth, or maybe fifth?

To wit: the road to Oykel Bridge. Now that is some road. It is also some experience, (It is also wildly beautiful, I must admit.) On one long particular stretch of it, though, it is decidedly deadly.

To begin with, it is exactly, and only, one lane wide, and it is a two-way road! I am beginning to understand where they get the name OYkel. The paying plays footsy too. One minute it is and one minute it isn't, so it is full of cute surprises. Because it is only one lane wide and is a two-way road, every so often there is a notch on one side of the road or the other for a car to pull into. This is a gentle little hint that if you see a car coming at you, this is the place to flee to. It seems to be the rule of the road that the car nearest to the notch, pulls into it. Or, if some polite driver flashes his lights at you, that seems to mean that he will pull into it and you can come dashing through no matter who is nearest the nitch-notch. All this would be all right, except that this one-lane road is also not straight. It is full of curves and you cannot see what is around the bend.

It happens that this part of the country is loaded with light-brained sheep and speedhappy drivers. You could just as well come around one of the bends and find a hundred sheep having lunch in the middle of the road, or one car on a spree headed straight at you. The Scots seem to think there is a 60-mile an hour speed sign on that road, and obligingly do itaround curves and all.

OYKEL BRIDGE is way up north in Sutherland county, a strikingly beautiful area. We had been down at Gleneagles Hotel at Auchterader, some 150 miles away, and after dwelling on the road matter, we had decided to take the train as far as we could. That was to Inverness. But we wanted to go further and see Oykel Bridge and Loch Ness and that meant a car willy-nilly-and the subsequent Oykel Bridge road-and others. But it wasn't only the roads. On top of that we had the blasted British inversions to contend with: the right-sided driver's seat and the left-sided driving method.

Well, at least the train was calming. As with most trains in Europe, it was a pleasure to take. We boarded at Gleneagles, although the train originated at Glasgow about 25 miles south, and went to the end of the lines at Inverness in the north.

That particular stretch is the highest main line run in all of Britain, going to 1,484 feet near Drumachair in the Grampian Mountains. The only other higher railroad is in Wales, but it is a narrow gauge rail up Mt. Snowden.

AT THE VERY START of the journey at the Gleneagles station, we were pleasantly surprised: perhaps even stunned. The station was CLEAN, and it was pretty. Our train's engine had caught-fire-even before getting to us and was almost two hours late, so we had a good long look. If stations can be beautiful this one was. First, it was, as stated, immaculate. Second, it was painted a cherry acqua and white, and even as we watched, young men were touching it up. Not a speck of litter was anywhere. Third, it contained some of the handsomest flower beds I've ever seen, even considering England and New Zealand. One large round bed in the middle of one of the station platforms, spelled out "Gleneagles-Hotel" in a variety of flowers and not a single petal of even one marigold was out of place.

Once on the train, it was the same thing; clean and nice. The trip took three and a quarter hours on an old style. Orient Express type train. Railroads in Britain are government-run and in the dining car there are two sittings for each meal, much as on a ship. While there is a choice of fare, each course is served to all at the same time, and if you miss the sittings you are out of luck.

But you could almost live on the scenery alone. It is entirely enchanting. We saw lush farm lands, glens, castles, forests, the heights of the Grampians, the moors-even Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson out hunting. Near the highest point of the trip, two men in the typical tweed hunting breeches and caps of the Scots. guns on shoulders, two dogs in tow, were walking the roughly beautiful overeast moors One was tall and gaunt and the other stocky, for all the world a reincarnation of Holmes and

Reorienting life to cities is goal by Regional Plan

Regional Plan Association this week urged the New Jersey Capital Needs Commission to lead the state to a new thrust toward reorienting life in New Jersey around city downtowns again.

The association said it is the only way to solve the major problems of New Jersey: conserving energy, protecting the environment, strengthening the economy and improving social relations.

'This is the moment.'' the association stated. Population growth has almost stopped; households and labor force will continue to grow only for 15 years, at most. Building for these needs is the last opportunity to con-centrate activities in the downtowns. All the prospective growth in jobs and services should go to the cities; state leadership and new limited state land-use controls are essential to prohibit future activities from lining the highways and scattering through the countryside, the association observed.

"To change the strong trends running against the cities will require a giant thrust in the opposite direction....Regional Plan Association urges the public to raise this issue sharply for public consideration and to take a strong position in favor or redirecting state investment and corporate interest to the cities,' the statement concluded.

Regional Plan Association is a civic organization that has worked for an improved urban, suburban and rural environment in the New York-Connecticut-New Jersey Urban Region since the 1920's.

Recycled earth could be the answer Dredged sediment may restore beaches

Can we recycle the earth itself the way we do paper and bottles? In some cases the answer may be yes, says Dr. Norbert Psuty, director of Rutgers University's Marine Sciences Center. The center, in cooperation with the Cooperative Extension Service of Rutgers' Cook College, is about to see whether sediment dredged from the New Jersey Intracoastal Waterway in Ocean County can be used to restore eroding beaches and disappearing

An applied research facility, the center works with extension agents in shore counties to convey scientific and technical discoveries directly to those who can receive practical benefits from them.

"Our role is to help Extension provide the kind of service to the marine community that it has always provided for agriculture," Dr.

Psuty explained.
The New Jersey Intracoastal Waterway is a 117-mile link in a partly manmade waterway extending from Massachusetts to Texas. A sheltered route for pleasure craft and commercial and sport-fishing vessels, it is of crucial importance to the economic and recreational life of Ocean County.

damaging effect which generation of electrical power has had and continues to have on the health of our nation's water resources. This is no greater than that of many other industries which use and discharge into their surrounding streams and rivers, however, the power industry has a well-developed reputation for ignorance and callousness regarding water and the wildlife it supports.

Many power plants sit plumb in the middle of our most important estuarine areas--areas which are the nursery grounds for the young populations of important food and gamefish Eggs and larval stages of striped bass, shad. alewife, menhaden, weakfish, and bluefish are sucked into the intakes of power plants by the hundreds of thousands and thus lost forever to the heat and turmoil of condensers and other

It is a clear and well-documented fact that prior to the mid 1960's no biological considerations were taken into account engineers who design and execute 'designs for major industrial power plants along waterfronts. As a result, most of these facilities have the most primitive, least expensive methods of technology in the environmental protection

Construction engineers have traditionally been out of touch with less well-defined considerations than cost-benefit ratios and design specifications. So fish and fishing may seem an insignificant issue to most as they go about their work. We have found in the past decade, however. that there is a need for increasing the sensitivity of engineers, lawyers, beaurocrats and political executives to the impact of their decisions. The narrow planning and impersonal projects that have marked estuarine andcoastal development over the past half-century suggest the need for curriculum reform in schools of engineering, architecture, and in public and business administration. The professionalism that these schools seek requires more than a technical proficiency. Instruction must also cover social and environmental responsibility. Schools must assume some of the blame for the fact that while their graduates are more finely trained than earlier decision makers and builders of industrial facilities, they still have a narrow view of their social roles and seem to be less interesting as people.

The power industry has been a prime example of this and it is time for this industry to broaden its concern for the public welfare depths and to keep its boat basins open, periodic dredging is required. What to do with the dredged sediment is a serious problem.

Sediment must be dumped somewhere within a one-mile radius of the dredging site if the operation is to have any economic feasibility," Dr. Psuty said. "In the past, dredging was done with little attention to its environmental impact and much valuable marshland became a dumping ground and was

"Today we're trying to develop an environmentally viable balance sheet where recreational, commercial, and ecological factors will all have a place."

One approach to this balance sheet is to determine whether dredged sediment can be used and not just dumped.

"Materials dredged from inlets are predominantly sand and these materials make good beach fill," Dr. Psuty noted. "If tests we are about to conduct show that sand or certain types of sand will remain on the beaches, we will be able to slow the process of erosion by replacing the sand that is being washed away. This can be a tremendous boon since 20 percent of the waterway is accessible to this type of treatment.'

primarily silt and clay. According to preliminary calculations by Marine Sciences Center scientists, these materials are compatible with those found in marshes and make up for wetlands lost during earlier dredging operations and development projects. "We plan to fill in shallow waters adjacent to in the back bays, dredged material is s and transplant marsh grasses from the existing wetlands into the new materials. These grasses should fix the fill in place so that it won't slip back into the channels," Dr. Psuty explained. "Since an appreciable percentage of New Jersey's marshlands are near dredged areas, the results can be important.'

RECYCLING THE EARTH — Dr. Karl Nordstrom, left, specialist in storm effects and beach erosion, and Dr. Norbert Psuty, director of the Rutgers University Marine Sciences Center, identify severely eroded beach segments along the New Jersey share and consider where replacement sand can be obtained. They have suggested that certain dredged material might be used as beach fill.

Science, health seminar planned by Seton students

A science and health conference sponsored by the Black Students Science Organization at Scion Hall University will be held Saturday, on the South Orange campus. More than 1,000 are expected to attend the conference which has taken its theme "A Struggle to Make Science Benefit the People."

The sponsoring organization hopes that the conference will motivate black communities, students, professionals and youth to take action on such vital issues as: the high rate of infant mortality, inadequate hospitals, insufficient housing, poor nutrition, and general health problems in their respective communities throughout the State. The sessions, which will begin with registration at 9 a.m. in the Student Center, are open to the general public.

Professionals in the fields of health, education and welfare will chair related workshops and be on hand to answer questions from the participants. Expected to attend are Amina Baraka the wife of Amiri Baraka, Congress of Afrikan People; Beulah Sanders the acting chairwoman of Welfare Workers for Justice; Carl Wilson, director of Health Planning Agency, Dr. Wyman T. Garrett, gynecologist and obstetrician; Earl Philips, director of Newark Housing Authority; Dr. S.E. Anderson, assistant professor at the State University of New York College at Old West

The host organization, made up of black students majoring in natural science and related fields at Seton Hall, feel that the overwhelming response to the up coming conference is due to the multiconcerns of minorities over the issues being aired at the day long event. More information on the programs may be obtained by calling 762-9000 extensions 551-553.

Includes: WIRE

POSTS, FITTINGS

Seton Hall University social science students and faculty are sponsoring and conducting the series on "Conflicts and Conciliation in Our World." Programs consider areas of confrontation which pit people against each other, prevent social harmony or peacful coexistence and threaten to keep the world in a state of turmoil and uncertainity.

Speakers for the Tuesday session are Prof. Patrick Caulker and Prof. Larry Greene, historians and Black studies scholars. An open discussion will follow their lectures; sessions will also include refreshments and opportunity for further informal discussion

Students from both public and private high schools in the surrounding communities and counties are eligible to attend the series. Registration in formation and further details' may be obtained from the Seton Hall University Department of History, 762-9000 ext. 5155.

UNDERSTANDING MENTAL HEALTH Bertram S. Brown M.D., Director National Institute of Mental Health

MANAGING MOODS 'Who's in charge around here?" is a good question to ask yourself when you've been experiencing too many moods that block or reduce your satisfaction in living. But don't get the idea that if you aren't always feeling gay "high," you should start worrying about the state of your mental health.

A good basic test for determining when your moods may need special attention is to ask yourself: "Do my feelings get in the way of my doing my best work or of my ability to love and be loved?" It is human and normal to feel sad, angry, guilty, fearful, joyful and all the other ways a person can feel—if the feelings have resulted from an ap-propriate cause and if your reactions are realistically designed to bring you back in balance. One of the big problems we face in attempting to manage our moods is that we don't always know what causes them. Many feelings are deep sometimes we can't ferret out the root causes of negative moods that absorb our energies and thus present heir use for productive living.

If the problem is more than a person can handle, he may need belp from a mental health professional. However, there is much that the average individual can do to improve day-to-day emotional functioning.

The first step in managing your moods is to remove the scales from your eyes, so to speak, and admit to yourself the real cause of your unwanted feelings.

Another important step is to express your feelings in appropriate ways-and-toward appropriate persons if such are involved-rather than allowing the feelings to fester and grow and then perhaps to expression inappropriate targets.

Many useful pointers for understanding your emotions and managing your moods are found in a pamphlet published by the National Institute of Mental Health, which is a part of HEW's Alcohol, Drug Abuse, and Mental Health Administration.

An unorthodox teacher 'Art not confined to galleries'

An art teacher who has strong convictions about not confining art to the museum and gallery, she has included all of the above in her-

"Art is meaningful in every phase of our lives," she said, "and in my course on Women in the Arts, I want to lecture on art history and also make sure that my students understand the relationship of women and the arts in their own lives and in the light of their own interests.

"Their finals were self-assigned. I just insisted that every student had to do something in which he or she was truly concerned."

A vital young black woman whose looks deny her admitted 40 years, she also teaches a course in ceramics, where her methods again

"We are not simply hands working clay," she said. "We are whole, entire people and the clay is part of ourselves, our thoughts and feelings—and our problems, too. So we talk with each other while we work, and if a visitor coming in would mistake us for a group in therapy, that's fine. The clay in our hands is not just a cup or a bowl, it's us!" Her students run from a teen-age freshmen to junior who is a grandmother of five, a onetime nurse who had to wait until her children were grown before she could attend a college.

They are enthusiastic about what they have learned, beyond the chemistry of glazes and the skill of firing and the art of creating in clay. "I've learned about myself and what I can do," said Liberta Marcantuono.

During her Arts and Ritual course, Prof. Billops brought in a former Japanese student who demonstrated the technique of the tea ceremony, using student-made tea bowls. Another student brought in a Kiddush cup used in the Passover Seder and explained its purpose. A Catholic student who was studying for the priesthood brought a chalice used in celebrating Mass.

"The ceramic cups we make are part of us," according to Ms. Billops' educational philosophy, "and the more we know about the traditions and uses and appearances of all hollow vessels, the more we can accomplish here and now

She is particularly anxious to develop the ceramics program at Rutgers in Newark

"I would like all students, regardless of their major, to take ceramics for a year. We should all learn to be hand-builders. No matter what we choose to do for our lifework. I know it is done better if we have learned to make something out of our own selves with our own

Together with her husband, James Hatch, an associate professor of English at CCNY, she founded and is developing the Hatch-Billops Collection; an archive of Black America, consisting of visual and audio material. There are more than 5,000 slides of Black American art and hundreds of tapes comprising an oral history of black people in the visual arts and in the theater There are files of clippings, biographies of artists, playbills and catalogs.

Funded by a grant from the National Endowment for Humanities and by the New York Council of Arts, the archives are presently housed at the Schomburg Collection
