School to help students stop smoking

By DANIEL P. JONES

The Union County Regional Board of Education Tuesday night gave approval to George Cuzzolino, assistant principal at David Brearley High School, to begin a pilot program to help students quit smoking.

Rather than use "purly punitive means," Cuzzolino intends to use "Madison Avenue" techniques. Ten students have volunteered for the program, which will utilize psychological and sociological ways to get them to stop smoking.

Cuzzolino and school psychologist Gus Gavornik will use Madison Avenue techniques in reverse for the threeweek program.

The program, according to Cuzzolino, will cost no additional school money, and students will use study-hall time or after-school hours.

In another matter, the board revised its budget, increasing the projected amount of money to be raised for pupil transportation by $13,950.

The change was made to conform to a state aid figure for transportation, Burdge.

The decrease in state aid from $603,000 to $589,060, means that the $13,950 will be added to the amount to be raised by taxes for current expenses.

The state Board of Education mandated the change and the regional board could not have advertised its budget in local newspapers if the change was not made. By law, school districts must publish their proposed budgets in at least one local newspsper. It must appear in an issue that comes

The board cut costs for the required publishing of the budget. Last year the board spent $2,000 to publish the budget in eight newspapers. The budget, to be published Feb. 21, went from a threecolumn ad last year to an eight-column ad this year.

To put the much larger ad in the eight papers would cost more than $5,000, according to Burdge.

MAN AT WORK — Pete Falzarano, new athletic director at Jonathan Dayton Regional High School, realizes it's a varsity-sized job to keep up with all the paperwork that goes with his assignment.

Sports chief brings varied background

rnere is one thing any director must know: everything.

From referees to rebounds to requisitions, an athletic director will see them all, and Pete Falzarano, recently hired as the athletic director at Jonathan Dayton Regional High School, Springfield, seems to have a good start.

A native of Stirling in Sussex County, Falzarano comes to Springfield from Watchung Hills Regional High School where he coached football and baseball and taught physical education for 10

"My coaching experience prepared me for understanding the problems coaches go through," Falzarano said. He also did some scheduling, which is an important part of a director's job.

Falzarano has viewed athletics from a referee's perspective. "I might have done 35 different games in a basketball season," he said..."It's an educational process as much as anything else. You get a broader picture of the problems and the good things. It's like a classroom, but a much larger classroom." Falzarano said that as an official he could not only talk to coaches and administrators at the avarious schools, but also draw on the experience of the other officials he met.

His formal education included a and health at North Carolina State, Raleigh, which he graduated from in 1965. He also has completed a master's degree in administration and supervision at Seton Hall, and he's taken miscellaneous courses in athletic supervision and guidance.

"I'm still in a process of learning," he said. His views on the role of athletics in

"He (a student) has the opportunity to participate along the line. All of a sudden, his whole world expands." And then he adds, "Why do you think so many people join fraternal groups?"

But participating in athletics has more than just social value, according) to Falzarano. "I think it's an integral part of education. I don't think you can say you offer a well-rounded education without it. It teaches you to adjust, adapt and cope with problems. It parallels life.

The band is also integral. The drama club. The yearbook. Any and all are important. It makes no difference to me which."

And about winning, he says, "We all like to win, but at what cost? We strive to win, but that can't be the ultimate, bottom line.'

At North Carolina State, Falzarano played varsity football and baseball. In his senior year, he played fullback on offense and linebacker on defense. His team traveled to Alabama University that year to take on the number one team in the nation, led by coach Bear Bryant and Heisman Trophy winner Joe Namath.

Falzarano still lives in Stirling, with bachelor's degree in physical education his wife Barbara and four daughters: Laurie, 11, Christen, 9, and twins Sheri and Kimberly, 5.

> Because he must supervise athletic events at the high school, Falzarano sometimes must work late. One night last week he turned out the lights in his office at 10 p.m. "It's a full-time job," he said. When you go into physical education and coaching, you get used to

During his six years on the board. Speth spent much of his time attempting to decrease school spending.

"When I first presented myself as a candidate in 1974, I was deeply disturbed with the financial situation of the board and ran on a basic platform of fiscal responsibility," Speth said.

He noted that subsequent budgets have reflected "an increasing emphasis on good management rather than money, with no sacrifice to the quality of education.'

The Wood Valley Road resident predicted difficult times ahead for small districts unless they can prove "their cost effectiveness and educational value, in view of the consolation threat (from the state).'

Public Library lists progress despite maintenance problems

Maintenance problems placed some heavy burdens on employees of the Free Public Library of Mountainside last year, but there also were bright sides to the year, according to the library's annual report for 1979.

The report was presented to the library board of trustees last week by Johanna Chen, library director.

Trouble with the roof, which caused Ricciardi performed the repairs leaks in several rooms, was corrected. but not without initial problems with diagnosis of the problem. "Continuous dampness and water dripping on electrical installations was beginning to cause electrical hazards," shortly before it was repaired, the report said. A local roofer called in by Mayor Tom

Early on the foggy and rainy evening of April 28, vandals broke 12 windows. slashed nine screens and destroyed 24 screens. "The police were not able to apprehend anyone and since the vandals were gloves and left no fingerprints, we will never know why such senseless destruction was committed," Chen wrote.

The cost of the vandalism amounted to $1,133.07. The library received an insurance refund of $787.

The book chute also was the object of vandalism. Burn holes were discovered in the carpet underneath the chute, forcing the library to close the chute permanently and to purchase an outdoor book return, the report said. But the outdoor book return also was: vandalized. Books of matches, apparently lighted, the report states, were thrown into the return, and the door was pried open in broad daylight. Two additional locks were added to the

Despite these problems the report said, "Patrons enjoy this new service and it eliminates emptying the book bin when the library is closed over a longweekend.

Although the library has experienced problems with its cleaning service. apparently from a high turnover rate at the firm, excellent service has been rendered by the library's electrical, air conditioning and heating contractor. A new roof compressor was installed at the end of the summer, which should air-condition the meeting room.

On the positive side the report reveals a lower use of electricity in 1979. Almost 8,000 fewer kilowat hours were used in 1979, constituting a saving of $350.16 over 1978, despite a higher price for

The increase in circulation was slight, 1.57 percent, but was termed encouraging because a decrease was expected. Juvenile registration and book circulation were down, but the decrease corresponds to a decrease in the population of children younger than 14 in the borough. Roughly 58 percent of the borough population is registered at conducted by the Mountainside PTA, is scheduled for Wednesday, March 5, and the library.

The average use of cassettes rose from 11 per month in November and December of 1978 to 27 per month in Children's programs were a big success in 1979, the report said, especially the puppet collection. The children's department is now conducting a reading club-story hour for patients at the Children's Specialized Hospital. The story hour has been well received, the report

In addition, the travelogues drew large audiences. Patrons have requested a continuation of the program, Chen reported.

The longer lending period of four weeks with one-week renewal did not result in lower fines for 1979. Fines were up 4.55 percent.

The Xerox copier has become an important source of income, Chen reported, despite the rising cost of supplies. The 1978 income, less expenses, was $1,511.01. In 1979, the surplus was $2,156.90, according to the George Siefken, who did many of the exhibits in the display cases, moved to Pennsylvania. In addition to the books and records he has given to the library, he gave 600 to 700 classical recordings and roughly 200 books on art and civilization.

Work by Jankowski gets Jersey premiere

A work entitled "Lustrations," by the young American composer, Loretta Jankowski of Mountainside, will receive its Garden State premiere by the New Jersey Symphony Orchestra on Saturday evening, Feb. 23 at 8:30 at Millburn High School. The orchestra, under its music director. Thomas Michalak, will repeat the performance the following day at 3 p.m. at the same location.

In the ensuing weeks, the NJSO will introduce this composition, which was nominated for a Pulitzer Prize in 1979, to its audiences at six other locations, as part of the Symphony's regular subscription series throughout the state. "Lustrations," commissioned by the Women's Association for Symphony Orchestras, was given its world premiere by the Chicago Symphony Orchestra in 1978.

Associate professor of theory and confiposition at California State University in Long Beach, Miss Jankowski began to study music as a 10-year-old child. She went from the preparatory division of the Juilliard School to the Eastman School of Music at the University of Rochester to the University of Michigan for graduate study and then back to Eastman for the doctorate that she earned with "Lus tations." She has also studied in England and in Poland.

The first New Jersey performance of a Jankowski composition took place in 1974 when the Recital Stage Symphony Orchestra of New Jersey presented the premiere of "Demeanour." Since then, her compositions have been performed throughout the United States and Europe. Most recent is the world premiere of "A Naughty Boy," which was commissioned by the clarinetist Bernard Yannotta for his debut recital at Alice Tully Hall on October 24, 1979. "A Naughty Boy" will again be heard in New York City in March as part of "Festival III of Women's Music."

According to symphony officials, a limited number of tickets can still be obtained for the Feb. 23 program by contacting the N.J. Symphony Orchestra box office, 213 Washington St., Newark 07101; 624-8203.,

Jewelry stolen in break-entry

A Wyoming Drive home was broken into Saturday night and $100 in jewelry according to Mountainside police.

A neighborhood watching the house for the owner, who was away for the weekend, saw three men walking around the house and a blue van parked in the driveway, police said. The men left the area and the neighbor called police.

The neighbor called the homeowner and he returned to find that the house had been entered. A man's jewelry box and its contents were missing, according to police.

Apparently, the house was entered through the back door, police said. There were pry marks around the door.

Perhaps one of the most rewarding government programs in existence is also one of the least known. Operated by the Library of Congress, the program is called "Talking Books" and was established to provide blind and physically handicapped people with access to books and magazines. Through a national network of cooperating libraries, an extensive collection of braille and recorded books and magazines is available for the estimated three million Americans who cannot see well enough to read conventional printed material, or, because of physical handicaps, do not have the ability to hold a book or turn the pages. Thanks to this program, the ideas, information and pleasure that books convey are available to everyone, not only to those who can read conventional material. Best sellers, classics, history, children's books and even foreign language material are available in recorded form at no charge to subscribers. Specially designed phonographs and cassette players are loaned free to persons borrowing these talking books, and all materials are provided to eligible readers by postage-free mail. In New Jersey, the Library for the Blind and Handicapped works along with more than 40 public libraries, nursing homes and correctional institutions to reach those who are isolated by their inability to read conventional material. It is important to note that these services are available not only to the totally blind, but also to people whose sight has deteriorated with age, accident victims or those with diseases which have limited their sight, making it difficult, if not impossible, for advanced squads of them to read standard books and

SIGN OF THE FUTURE—A new twist to an old invention, the windmill, solved two old problems in windmill technology. Built and designed by former Kean College student Daniel Wissell, this windmill is located on the roof of the industrial studies building. (Photo by Linda Carleu)

In the windmills of his mind: energy

By LINDA CARLEU A once-popular source of energy has been rediscovered by former Kean College student Daniel Wissell-the windmill.

Wissell is one of many farsighted energy students looking to the past for answers to America's energy future. Wissell, with the help of Professor Joseph Clinton, designed an experimental vertical axis windmill as a senior project for an industrial technology class and, in the process, solved two old problems in windmill technology.

The vertical axis windmill, located on the roof of the industrial studies department, is unusual because Wissell has developed a combination of a spring tension windmill and blades which keep it in a running position. His second breakthrough is a tethering device. which prevents the blades from whipping apart in high wind.

The windmill can now operate in winds of 6 to 30 miles per hour with blades that move at about 600 or 700 revolutions per minute, Wissell said. A monitoring device to measure the actual efficiency of wind, speed and power output also will be set up, Clinton said.

The windmill generates enough energy to run a small stereo system for a month—about 12 volts or 600 watt-hours-although energy from the model on the industrial studies building is brought to the laboratory where Wissell stores it in batteries.

Starting, running and tethering were long-standing problems in windmill technology which had not been solved, as far as Wissell could tell from a study of literature on the subject. At present, a variety of vertical wind turbine designs similar to Wissell's are under study by NASA research teams, Clinton

One way to describe the vertical axis wind turbine is to imagine a person as the vertical axis, standing with his arms outstretched and a two-inch-wide blade in each hand. Meanwhile, he is standing on a record turntable and the bottom ends of the blades are attached to the turntable by metal arms. The wind blows and the person spins, according to Clinton.

Wissell said he believes small windmills, such as the one he has built, could be a valuable source of energy for home use. Americans do not want to give up their lifestyle or cut back their use of energy, so small windmills such as the one he has developed could provide the energy for luxury items, he said.

A small windmill could be supplemented by a solar collector to provide enough energy to heat a house in northern New Jersey, he added. However, site and wind conditions must be analyzed before attempting to install such a system, he cautioned.

Wissell started the design last spring and conceived most of it on paper. He started building the windmill in mid-September and worked on it every spare minute until it was completed Nov. 24, he Wissell said he plans to continue experimenting with the windmill and would like to adjust the blades more precisely for better efficiency.

In America's future, Wissell said, "I'd like to see as much energy independence as possible. With energy, we should strike a balance. We should live in harmony with nature."

Cut-price foreign goods flooding the U.S. market are having a devastating impact on our nation's economy.

Thousands of American workers are losing their jobs as U.S. industries and businesses are being driven into

Tax revenues of domestic business operations are being lost, and the nation's economy is being undermined. A serious challenge has been posed to America's role as the industrial and business leader of the world.

The toll is awesome:

America's domestic black and white TV industry, which provided substantial employment in New Jersey, is virtually extinct. The color TV industry is now being seriously threatened by Asian imports.

The U.S. auto industry, anothermajor employer in New Jersey, is in trouble, facing production cutbacks and job layoffs because of imports.

The U.S. pharmacy industry is being hurt for the same reason. So are our nation's chemical and steel industries.

The blame for what has happened must be shared by the American people and by the federal government.

Consumers have largely moved away from a patriotic policy of buying American goods. Meanwhile, the federal government has adopted policies that encourage subsidized imports, while hitting American industries with excessive federal regulations.

The time has come for strong action to revitalize American business, protecting it from cut-throat competition of foreign subsidized

I have urged President Carter to require Japan to make substantial new cuts in imports to the United States. Inaddition, it must be made clear that Japanese cars will not be dumped at cut-rate prices in America. Japanese cars that can be imported under restricted guidelines must be sold at the same price levels charged in Japan, plus the cost of transportation to ship the cars to America.

There also must be a policy allowing fair export of U.S. automobiles to Japan. For years, Japan has blocked the import of U.S.-built cars through a variety of policies that double or triple the selling price of U.S. cars, effectively closing the Japanese market to American imports.

Meanwhile, Japanese government policies have allowed cars made in Japan to be shipped to America for sale at prices far below those charged in their own country.

It is largely because of such cut-rate imports that more than 190,000 American auto workers have been laid off in recent years-a major industrial dislocation creating shock waves through the entire U.S. economy.

A get-tough policy also is needed to protect American interests from an entire range of imports. Our nation's economy will be permanently damaged if we-continue to allow our consumermarket to become dependent on imports.

No other country in the world has allowed its economy to be undermined by imports as much as the United

The auto import situation provides an example. Brazil slaps a 170 percent duty on imported cars. Common Market countries impose an 11 percent tariff. Australia requires that 80 percent of its car sales market must be filled by domestic production.

In contrast, the United States has only a 3 percent import duty, which is far too low to have any meaningful impact.

In virtually every field where American enterprise and investment have built substantial industries, the achievement is endangered by unfair competition from abroad, much of it subsidized by foreign governments.

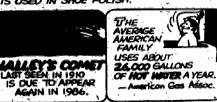

At the same time, U.S. business has been severely shackled by a mounting flood of regulations pouring out from Washington.

While the Carter administration boasts of cutting back on the size of government, detailed studies show that the volume of federal regulations has become steadily greater and far more complex.

Legislation that I have sponsored in Congress would cut back considerably on federal regulation, and I am pressing hard to get it enacted.

The State We're In

We are launched on the Year of the facility siting; (3) review of flood Coast, as 1980 has been dubbed and, in insurance and disaster relief programs New Jersey, that has special meaning to avoid more damage, especially on because such a big hunk of the economy coastal flood plains, and finally (4) a and environment of this state we're in scrutiny of how federal grants, such as hinges on our 126 miles of coastline. transportation funds, power lines,

All those interests need a healthy coastal environment to thrive. But other interests, like oil and heavy industries, don't necessarily care about that aspect.

That's how it is in this Year of the Coast, and it all lends more importance to current congressional activities leading up to reaffirmation of the federal Coastal Zone Management (Act (CZMA), which is due to expire this year. President Jimmy Carter is behind legislation to reauthorize CZMA and will recommend amendments to. establish a national coastal policy.

In line with that, Congressman Gerry Studds, chairman of the Subcommittee on Oceanography of the House Merchants Marine and Fisheries Committee, is holding hearings around the country's perimeter to collect useful ideas from the public. A hearing was held in Atlantic City on Feb. 2, but you can still make your opinions known by sending them to the subcommittee. They should be addressed to Jeff Pike, 1511 Longworth House Office Building, Washington, D.C. 20515.

New Jersey is in better shape than most states regarding intelligent laws to protect our coastline and its essential wetlands; e.g., the Coastal Area Facility Review Act (CAFRA); the Wetlands Act and the Riparian Permit Act. But none of these state laws will achieve their full potential without meaningful companion legislation at the federal level.

Support for a new and wisely worded CZMA is nationwide and has taken form as the Coast Alliance operating in Washington, D.C. It is a hybrid representing some of the country's biggest- national environmental organizations.

Coast Alliance spokesmen report that Congressman Studds supports strengthening CZMA, and needs examples of existing problems which need changes in its structure so that they can be corrected. Special interests, such as the American Petroleum Institute, have wasted no time in making their own suggestions, and that means it behooves those with interest in retaining healthy, pollutionfree beach and wetlands areas to give their views to the legislative committee in no uncertain terms!

And don't forget, it's all one coast, whether in New Jersey, Maine or Florida. Any good laws existing in New Jersey may be lacking elsewhere. Areas which especially need tightening in a new CZMA include (1) improved public access to oceanfronts; (2) better coordination between government agencies which often pursue conflicting goals, as with energy

Two Mountainside students are academic and extracurricular records among 50 Union County residents in secondary schools, and their nominated by Rep. Matthew J. Rinaldo, potential for careers as officers in the (R-12), to compete for vacancies at U.S. service academies this year.

They are Stephen C. Maguire, Stony Brook Lane, who has been nominated for the military academy at West Point, and Robert Ament, Meeting House Lane, for the Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs.

Those nominated will be required to compete for appointment through a process administered by the academies. Final appointments will be made by the academies following their evaluation of the candidates' college entrance examination results, their

"My nominees have impressive academic credentials, and I am sure that the 12th Congressional District will be well represented when the appointments are made," Rinaldo said.

In announcing his nominations, Rinaldo said it was not too early for high school juniors to begin the process of applying for admission to a service academy in 1981. Information about the application procedure can be obtained by writing to Rinaldo at 2338 Rayburn House Office Building, Washington,

Franks hails chance to 'trim fat' of budget this week said he welcomes the decision of Gov. Brendan Byrne to shift responsibility for balancing the new state budget to the legislature.

"The decision guarantees full debate on cost-cutting initiatives," Frankssaid. "Had the governor presented a program, it would have been easier for the legislature to rubber-stamp the whole package. Now, those of us interested in finding ways to trim the fat will have a forum for debate."

Byrne has forecast a gap in the fiscal 1981 budget exceeding $200 million. Earlier administration estimates were as high as $280 million.

"None of us really knows what the shortfall will be," Franks said, noting

Assemblyman Bob Franks (R-22) that some experts have said the projected deficit is seriously overstated. "Full debate in the legislature will uncover the facts about revenues, costs and the true nature of the budget gap."

Franks said the Republican minority will offer several cost-cutting budget balanced with a specific new tax, amendments during hearings by the Joint Appropriations Committee and said major proposals would be taken directly to the floor for debate.

"My own research indicates the governor has underestimated the yield from existing taxes which inflates the so-called gap," he said. "We will try to enact a realistic spending plan without frills and with realistic revenue projections based upon history and the inflationary spiral."

By ELLEN APPEL

For whiling away winter evenings, here's an easy necklace that combines macrame with beads. "Macrabead" projects typically call for slender cords and dainty beads. As a result, macrabead necklaces are fashionable. unique - and usually too pretty to part

To make a necklace, all you need to know are two macrame knots. The most elaborate beaded pendants are simply variations of basic knots. One easy macra-bead necklace is described below.

MATERIALS: Nine yards of waxed linen, small beads, barrel clasp, knotting board, T-pins, scissors, yardstick,

STARTING: 1. Cut two 2-yard cords. 2. Thread cords through one loop in the barrel clasp. Even up ends. 3. Wrap a 1foot cord around the other cords as

(1) Loop one end of the wrapping cord. (2) Wrap the other end around the loop and all other cords. (3) Thread wrapping cord through the loop (a). (4) Pull other end of wrapping cord to secure loop under the wrappings. (b).

4. Cut two 2-yard cords. 5. Thread cords through other loop of barrel clast. Even up ends. 6. Wrap a 1-foot cord around the other cords as described above.

KNOTTING THE NECKLACE, 1. Pin both ends of barrel clasp to knotting board. 2. Knot both sides of necklace, using half-knots (c) and square knots (d). 3. Where desired, slide a bead over all cords (e). 4. Knot until necklace is desired length. PENDANT: 1. Thread all cords from the left group through one long bead. 2. Thread all cords from the right group through the opposite end of the bead. 3. Make half-knots on each group. 4.

Thread one cord from the left group through one long bead. 5. Thread one cord from the right group through the opposite end of the same bead (f). 6. Make half-knots on each group. 7. Slide beads over all cords in each group. 8. Knot ends securely. Trim ends.
