Regional Board budget: smallest rise in 16 years

By VICKI VREELAND
 The Regional Board of Education Tuesday night adopted a resolution to present the school board budget for 1984-85, with its lowest increase in 16 years, 1.16 percent, to the voters April 3.

Dr. Donald Merachnik, superintendent of schools, said that parents can still be assured of "quality education for their children. "This budget has been made possible because of the continuation of declining high school student enrollments," he explained.

"This board of education has made restrictions in spending and in staff," Merachnik said. There will also be no capital outlay budget for taxpayers to vote on. "All requests for capital outlay were carefully scrutinized. All the priorities will be done this year, and everything else will be held for another budget year," Merachnik stated.

There is a reported five percent

School budget for 1984-85 to rise 2.8 Pct.

The Mountainside Board of Education held its budget hearing Tuesday night before about 15 residents.

The Board made a proposed budget of $2,589,907 for 1984-85, a 2.8 percent increase over last year. The rise, however, is markedly less than the 6 percent increase for the 1983-84 budget.

The Board will adopt the final budget proposal at Tuesday's regular meeting.

According to Mrs. Camie Delaney, Board president, "The budget covers the educational needs of the children and provides for some improvement. It reflects the declining enrollment." It is expected there will be 50 less students next year.

The budget increase falls well below the cap limit, and covers the state aid shortfall.

decline in student enrollment for the 1984-85 school year, or 182 less students. Projected enrollments indicate that there will be 49 less students at David Brearley High School, 14 less at Jonathan Dayton High School, and 32 less at Governor Livingston High School.

Merachnik said that enrollment statistics show that the declining trend will continue until 1990. From 1990 to 1995, experts predict that there will be an upsurge in high school enrollments.

The staff cuts total 18: one guidance counselor, and 17 instructors spread out among all subject areas. Merachnik said that there would be no elimination of academic or industrial courses. He also said that the district would maintain all art and music programs, and extracurricular activities.

In addition, an accelerated reading class which has been offered to 11th and 12th grade students will be expanded to include 10th graders. Computer Science I will be offered as an elective to all students from grades 9-12, and Computer Science II and III will also be available for all students.

Taxpayers will have an opportunity to vote on the $16,892,575 current expense budget on April 3.

Harold Burdge, board secretary, explained that some of the budget's increase is due to the state cutting aid for transportation. Burdge said the state cut a half million dollars from the district's transportation allowance. He added that the district is second behind Elizabeth, as the biggest transporter of students, spending 1.3 million dollars this year.

The board's policy committee gave first reading to an ordinance concerning non-resident pupils. Guidelines were set up to allow students who would be moving into the school district to begin school before they were actually residents.

Students will be allowed 120 days of school attendance before they are charged tuition. Enrollment dates are Sep. 1 and Feb. 1.

Merachnik stated that the district schools are preparing for their state evaluation in the fall of 1985. If the district is certified, they would not be monitored for a five year period. However, if they fail in the 10 categories required for certification, such as Springfield Township schools recently did, the district is monitored comprehensively.

Merachnik reviewed the district's choice of four goals that are state required for the monitoring. Included are a unit on listening skills to be incorporated in all English classes; a pilot computer science program for freshman, basic skills courses for English and math classes, and a two-year program that would require chronically suspended students to meet with a guidance counselor.

The board convened at 10:30 p.m. to go into executive session. When the meeting resumed, it was announced that Mary Yalvak, an aide in the child care program at Governor Livingston, would be granted a temporary leave of absence.

Cancer Society seeking a fundraising chairman

The American Cancer Society is looking for a chairman to head its April educational and fundraising crusade in Mountainside.

This year, the Cancer Society plans to distribute life-saving information on lung, colon and rectal cancer and plans to raise $4,000 to support its programs in patient services, public education and cancer research.

It is the chairman's responsibility to make sure the residents of Mountainside receive the information and to see that Mountainside reaches its goal of $4,000.

Crusaders will be recruited by the Cancer Society to distribute the information and collect funds, but it is the chairman's job to organize the crusade and make sure it is running smoothly. The American Cancer Society provides training for the chairperson and a representative from the Cancer Society will work closely with the person by providing assistance and guidance.

The lack of a chairperson in Mountainside will make the Cancer Society's overall residential goal of $90,000 more difficult to reach and can effect the varied programs and services of the Society.

Interested applicants should call Steve Kolb at 354-7373 or 232-0641.

Seniors planning Mississippi cruise

The Senior Citizens Club of Mountainside is planning an 11-day (Nov. 2-12) fly and cruise tour down the Mississippi River aboard the Mississippi Queen from St. Louis to New Orleans, and the last two days of the Worlds Fair.

The cost is $1935 per person. For details, call 232-3875 before March 15. Some accommodations are still available.

A trend towards deregulation gaining steam in Reagan term

By ROSE P. SIMON
 SPRINGFIELD—Following are reviews of currently popular books in the Springfield Public Library.

RUNAWAY DEREGULATION

"Dismantling America." By Susan and Martin Tolchin.
 The Tolchins (she is a professor of public administration at George Washington University; he is a congressional reporter for the New York Times) assert that the general public does not fully understand the question of regulation, which seems to have gotten out of hand for the past several years (since 1978). Regulation, they declare, is "our major protection against the excesses of technology, whose rapid advances threaten man's genes, privacy, air, water, bloodstream lifestyle, and virtual existence."

Initially, regulatory agencies were meant to protect certain industries through such agencies as the Federal Trade Commission, Interstate Commerce Commission, and the Federal Communications Commission. Businesses which claimed devotion to the free enterprise system expected the government to protect them from foreign and domestic competition.

However, since regulation recently expanded to include the protection of the public, it has become less popular with big business, especially during this Administration.

During the early part of the Reagan Presidency, environmental protection became a thing of the past (EPA ignored laws dealing with clean air, clean water, and hazardous wastes). Also, workers' safety suffered through budget cuts, and lack of enforcement.

The authors cite many examples of conditions and products which have worsened because of the rush to deregulate. According to their thinking, it is causing "the dismantling of America." They claim "Regulation is the connective tissue, the price we pay for an industrialized society."

There is indeed a need for regulation, under the balanced control of the President, and the Congress, but it must be "intelligently crafted, skillfully managed, and sensitively enforced."

FOR A STRONGER ECONOMY

"The Twenty-Year Century," by Felix G. Rohatyn.
 The "American Century," so dubbed by Henry Luce when the USA was the dominant nation in the world) came to an end in 1965, after only 20 years. Its demise could be attributed "to Sputniks, the Vietnam War, Watergate, Japanese economic and technological competition, and two oil shocks." Since 1965 our economy has vacillated between growth and recession—recession combined with unemployment.

Rohatyn—a prestigious investment banker and former chairman of New York's Assistance Corporation (MAC) was instrumental in extricating New York City from financial disaster (1975). In these 10 essays—written for several periodicals over a five-year period—he examines various aspects of our national problematic condition, and offers plans for positive action.

He focuses on the need for balance and a sense of fairness indicating some of the disparities which exist in our economy. He believes that when balance becomes precarious (Yen vs. dollar, Sunbelt vs. Frostbelt), it is advisable for government to step in. He suggests a reconstructed RFC (the Reconstruction Finance Corporation of the 40s) with greater coordination between business, labor, and government.

Among Rohatyn's proposals are: a simplified tax, a minimum corporated income tax, a gasoline tax, greater stress on math and science in secondary schools, a reduction in nuclear armaments, and increase in conventional arms, and a stable international monetary system.

GUIDE FOR NEW PARTNERS

"Love Me, Love My Child," by Peter Rowlands.
 In the USA the proportion of homes with children where there is only one parent is about two in seven. This often poses problems, and is especially true for women who are contemplating entering into some sort of relationship (finances, friend) with a man who is a "custodial parent" (week-ender) with one or more child. Mr. Rowlands author of "Saturday Parent" (he himself is one)—explores the manner in which one should approach children from a broken family.

The author starts off by listing 20 points to remember about children, itemizing what they detest and what they appreciate (these are worthwhile hints for any stranger meeting a child for the first time). In any event, if at the beginning relations between the "new" woman and the child are strained, it is best to await the initiation of a breakthrough by the child.

Rowland discusses the need to know and understand the child's character beforehand (strong and weak points), the desirability for patience (don't rush), the importance of continuing contact between parent and child, one's readiness to respond to the child's appeal for help, and the necessity for avoiding criticism of the mother.

One of the first issues to be resolved, is that of the father's role, and together there must be agreement on habits, discipline, manners, money matters. Free lines of communication should exist between all principals. The writer makes special note of the approach to children in three stages, the tot, the schoolchild, the teenager. For each category he has lists of dos and don'ts.

Springfield professor conducts Kean trip to England, Scotland

SPRINGFIELD—What did Professor Sidney Krueger of Kean College and 23 students do over their winter break? They took a trip to England and Scotland, of course.

Krueger, a Springfield resident, has conducted a three-credit tour of England, sponsored by the English Department for 10 consecutive years. This year the trip ran from Jan. 2 to 20.

"I've done it for 10 years," reflected Krueger, "10 exciting, rewarding years in terms of observing students and reacting to the historic, literary and cultural facets of the English culture."

After arriving at the Heathrow Airport, London, Jan. 3, the students experienced the Museum of the City of London, a guided tour of York and the York theatre, and a trip to Haworth to view the home of Charlotte and Emily Bronte.

"Visiting the Bronte parsonage gave me a much better understanding of why some people turn to writing and other art forms," said English major David Wutrich.

In Edinburgh, Scotland, the students were given an orientation, a tour, and a night at the theatre. They returned to London and then visited Bath and the Charles Dickens Museum.

"It was terrific. Every student should go," commented George Schroepfer of Plainfield, "It was magnificent going to Europe for the first time, visiting the Manuscript Room in the British Museum and the King's Chapel in Cambridge."

Ogden offers aid brochures

MOUNTAINSIDE—Assemblywoman Maureen Ogden announced recently that brochures describing state and federal financial aid programs for New Jersey students, higher education loan programs and mortgage assistance programs through the New Jersey Mortgage Finance Agency are available at her legislative office, 266 Essex Street in Millburn.

Mrs. Ogden said Governor Tom Kean has helped to address the student aid program by increasing the state appropriation for tuition aid assistance by $5.6 million in his proposed Fiscal 1985 budget. She said the brochures describe the application process and basic eligibility requirements for both federal and state grants and loans. She said the brochures also contain lists of the lending institutions that are participating in the program.

"The Department of Higher Education operates two, toll free Hot Lines for information regarding federal or state programs of financial assistance," Ogden said. "The Financial Aid Hot Line, 800-792-8670, will provide information regarding funding assistance, and the Education Hot Line, 800-792-8355, will provide information regarding academic program offerings, degrees awarded and related questions."

Ogden said there are seven separate state financial aid programs including the Veterans Tuition Credit Program and four federally funded programs, all described in the brochures available from her legislative office.

"The Mortgage Finance Agency brochure describes eligibility for mortgage assistance and identifies the banks and savings and loan associations that are participating lenders," Ogden said.

Over the Jan. 15-16 "free" weekend, the students used the British Rail pass to travel anywhere in the British Isles or Paris or Ireland.

"Names like Tennyson, Blake, Shelley and Keats were simply no longer names; this visit made them new acquaintances in which time will prove them friendly companions and teachers," wrote Louise Dern, an English major from Avenel.

Company denies responsibility for 200G charge

KENILWORTH—After five months of debate, attorneys for the county and N.J. Transit determined last week that it is the responsibility of Sun Pipeline Co. of Wayne, Pa., to pay for removal of an oil pipeline blocking construction of part of the Carpenter Place Detention Basin in Roselle Park.

However, officials from the pipeline maintain that it is not their responsibility to pick up the estimated $200,000 tab.

The pipeline is buried 25 feet below the Lehigh Valley Railroad, now owned by NJ Transit and operated by Conrail. The Carpenter Place detention basin plans call for a 10-foot-wide culvert — or underground waterway — to be constructed from the southern end of the project in Roselle Park, under the tracks and into Roselle.

The pipeline lays in the projected path of that culvert. Robert Doherty, county attorney said, "The Sun Pipeline Co. is solely responsible to remove the pipe."

Contacted shortly after talking with Doherty on Feb. 27, Jack Boyett, chief of right-of-way for the company, responded "I'd say at the present time they are misinformed." Doherty explained that the original agreement between Conrail and the pipeline company indicates that because Sun Pipeline leases the land and is a tenant, either Conrail or NJ Transit can demand that the company move the pipeline.

Boyett noted "We have never said we would not move it. The problem is who is responsible to pay for it. It is our position that we are not, under the agreement."

Conrail granted the company a right-of-way for the pipeline in 1976. In 1978 NJ Transit took ownership of the rail line from Conrail. However, Doherty said he was unable to determine who actually owns the land.

Therefore, both Conrail and NJ Transit sent letters last month to Sun Pipeline notifying them that they are responsible for the removal.

Doherty said the company now will make an agreement with the contractor for the project so that the pipeline will be removed before work on the culvert has to begin.

Boyett said his company has hired a consultant to draw up plans for the removal of the pipe, but he emphasized that the company is not responsible for paying for removal.

The contractor for the detention basin project, Anselmi and DeCicco of Maplewood, is working in other areas of the detention basin while the debate over the pipeline continues, according to Roselle Park Borough Engineer Donald Guarriello.

"We want them done before we go through there," Doherty said, adding that if the pipeline company took the issue to court, "I feel we are in a good legal position. But I hope not to go to court."

Boyett said that he was not in a position to say whether Sun Pipeline Co. would go to court to settle the matter.

Brearley's students relive 50's in Grease

KENILWORTH—David Brearley Regional High School students will put on a production of "Grease"—the Broadway musical spoof of the '50's era—March 16 and 17. Each performance begins at 8 p.m. in the high school auditorium.

Revolving around a "boy-meets-girl" theme the play is punctuated with nostalgic scenes from burger joints, drive-in movies, and the high school prom. Songs like "Look At Me, I'm Sandra Dee" and "Beauty School Dropout" recall the sounds of Bobby Rydell and Elvis Presley.

"Nothing is quite so much fun as a satire—particularly a musical satire—that works. And "Grease works," says WNBC-TV of the book and music by Jim Jacobs and Warren Casey.

Brearley student John Tenneson is the slick-haired, tight-jeaned Danny Zuko and Meg Kinney plays wholesome Sandy Dumbrowski.

The T-Birds gang includes Paul Petrucci, Peter Tulley, Milton Cortes, and Willie Kinney; while Vivian Cortes, Angela Witik, Lois Nardone and Cathy Cardella comprise the Pink Ladies.

Completing the cast list are Margaret Wagner, Michael Barbella, Kenny Sokol, Charles Dolar, Susan Beurer and Pat Buckley.

The musical is directed by drama coach James Avidon and vocal music instructor Angelo Corbo. Allison Wall is the choreographer.

SCHOOL BOARDS APPOINTEE—David Hart of Mountainside, New Jersey School Boards Association Nominating Committee appointee, discusses foreign language offering in the Union County Regional High School District No. 1 with instructor of German Barbara Oberger.

Freeholders give update on 'flooding' problems

KENILWORTH—The Union County Freeholder's office recently issued an update to Kenilworth Mayor Livio Mancino and the borough council on flooding problems on Kenilworth Boulevard near South 31st Street.

Freeholder vice chairman Walter E. Boright informed the mayor and council that the County Department of Public Works "removed several blockages in the outlet drainage pipes that caused the recent flooding in this location."

The County's Division of Environmental Engineering is also conducting a study of the flooding problem in the area, near the vicinity of the Holiday Inn, the Arco Service Station, Volco Brass and Copper and the Beth David Cemetery.

Boright told borough officials he will provide additional information in the event that there are any new developments in remedying the problem.

A Scout salute

Girl Scouts. The name conjures up images of door-to-door cookies sales and camping trips. But Girl Scouts, who will celebrate their 72nd birthday during Girl Scout Week next week, do much more than that.

Girl Scout activities have kept pace with the times. Statewide, Girl Scouts can earn proficiency badges through their involvement in programs emphasizing the steps that people can take to protect themselves and their property in a crime prevention effort in cooperation with local police departments.

Locally, the Girl Scout Council of Greater Essex County, which is celebrating its 25th anniversary this year, has also kept up with the times. Girls can earn an energy badge while learning about the conservation of natural resources. The council is also involved in programs for inner city youths — both girls and boys. Summer Scene is a summer day camp in Newark which served 600 youngsters last year. Project P.L.U.S., Practical Living for Urban Survival, is an after-school program in Newark featuring courses in karate, modeling and consumer awareness. Through Project R.I.C.H., Resources in Career Help, Girl Scouts can prepare themselves for the future by visiting local businesses to learn what to expect in the work world.

These innovative programs are an extension of the principals which led to the the creation of the Girl Scouts in 1912 — friendship, teamwork and fostering global awareness and understanding that link girls across the street or across the ocean.

Girl Scout Week serves to remind us that for 72 years, girls have been having fun, gaining solid learning experiences and enriching their world through Girl Scouting. We applaud their enthusiasm and trust they will continue these traditions long into the future.

Precautions now save audit headaches later

If the thought of an IRS audit strikes terror in your heart, now is the time to address those fears, says the New Jersey Society of Certified Public Accountants (CPAs).

By taking a few precautionary measures now, you may be able to reduce the chance of being audited. And, by acting now, while the particulars of your 1983 return are still fresh in your mind, you can devise a stronger defense in case you are chosen for an audit. Without doubt, a little understanding of how the IRS audit system works can save you time and lessen any anxieties if your return is called into question.

In 1982, more than 1.4 million tax returns were audited and the IRS found an additional $3 billion in tax liabilities from individual taxpayers. Ironically, IRS audits also uncovered one-half billion dollars in overpayments to the IRS in 1982, resulting in refunds on 114,602 returns.

The principal method used by the IRS to pick who will be audited begins once all returns are run through a computer. The computer sorts out returns that have unusually high deductions or other discrepancies that seem out of line with their income levels. The computer scores returns, and those with the highest scores are picked for audits.

A return showing a $20,000 income and $10,000 in medical expenses may be flagged by the computer. To prevent being audited, you may want to attach a copy of your medical bills to your return in such a case. That may convince a IRS examiner that the high deduction is justified and it wouldn't pay to look any further.

Among the chief signs the IRS looks at in deciding who will be audited are: excessive losses from tax shelters, very high medical deductions, unusual business and travel expenses, high casualty or theft loss deductions, excessive sales tax deductions and steep alimony payments. Top IRS officials urge taxpayers to take all deductions to which they are legally entitled. Don't be intimidated and allow fear of being audited stop you from taking a deduction as long as you can prove you are entitled to what you are claiming, CPAs advise.

Another way of having your return audited is under the Tax Compliance Measurement Program (TCMP), which is done entirely at random. A TCMP is a rigorous, often multi-day, affair — a taxpayer's nightmare. This line by line examination of your return requires substantiation of every item and every number on your return.

Other ways the IRS selects returns for audits include matching different information forms, such as your W-2 and 1099 forms with your return, and following up on tips from informants. But no matter how you are selected for an audit, you should know what steps you need to take.

If you receive a letter saying you owe additional taxes, examine your return to make sure the IRS has not made any errors in your computation. If you don't have a copy of your return, the IRS will provide you with one for $5. If after examining your return you find that the IRS is not correct, simply send them a letter explaining your position. Then wait to be notified of the next step.

If you receive a letter directing you to come to an IRS office for an audit, be sure the audit date allows you time to prepare your case. If you need more time, ask for a delay. When your date comes up, be prepared to answer questions. Have receipts ready for inspection. These may include paid bills, cancelled checks and paycheck stubs. If you no longer have a receipt, say for a home improvement, get a letter from the contractor who did the work. You may be able to negotiate with an IRS examiner. If you are dissatisfied with a decision made by an examiner, you can ask to see a supervisor. You may be able to settle the issue with the supervisor.

If you are not satisfied with an IRS decision after an audit, you can appeal your case to the IRS appellate level. If you are still unable to work out a compromise, you can take the case to court.

The state we're in

Recycling filing due next week

By DAVID MOORE

Executive director

N.J. Conservation Foundation

There's a very important deadline coming up on March 15, and I don't mean income tax time. You must remember that Uncle Sam moved the tax deadline back to April 15 some years ago, giving us all another 30 days to fret.

No, this March 15 deadline is when a municipal government should have already filed a different kind of return with the New Jersey Office of Recycling. The necessary forms went out to all 567 local governments quite a while back, so I hope every one of them can too easily fall through a crack down at town hall.

The purpose of the returns is for local governments to report information on any and all recycling activities within their borders. This is important, because it's the information with the Office of Recycling will use to provide recycling grants to those municipalities. In general, the more recycling, the bigger the grant.

The money for the grants is being paid by all of us every time we pay our garbage collection bill. Twelve cents in a special recycling tax is collected by the state for each cubic yard which gets landfilled. The money goes into a kitty to provide to grants to encourage the towns to push recycling so that landfilling can be reduced.

It's been estimated that as much as 25 percent of the volume of waste now being landfilled can be kept out of the solid waste stream and channelled into recycling. Everybody is painfully aware of the rapidly approaching landfill-space crunch here in this state we're in.

And let us not forget that recycling something, instead of fabricating it from raw materials, uses vastly smaller amounts of energy. Lately we're regained a sort of euphoric feeling about abundant supplies of oil and gas, but reality is ready to catch up with us any time. All it will take is something like a ship sunk in the right channel due to the Iraq-Iran warfare to choke off a huge share of the world's oil supply. And for that matter, supplies of oil in the ground are still shrinking.

Last year a total of 241 towns reported on recycling activities. And some of the things recycled could be overlooked too easily. For example, the state recycling office reports that in 1982 collections included 6,723 tons of asphalt and 69,704 tons of yard materials, such as grass clippings and dead leaves. Not in step at all with the commonplace newspaper, aluminum and glass recycling, but still valid.

This is an important point: If there's a market for it, it's recyclable! Grass trimmings and dead leaves can be converted to compost by local governments or groups. Certain refiners can reclaim old asphalt and produce the makings of new roads. Food waste, such as stale bread and similar commodities, can be used as animal feed. Waste oil from automobiles can be refined to make new.

A guest column

Our European Allies must remain strong

By CONGRESSMAN

JAMES COURTER

(R-12th District)

The deployment of cruise and Pershing missiles in Europe represents two major achievements for the West: it redresses a serious imbalance in theater nuclear forces, and it culminates a long effort to sustain NATO's political will in the face of a vociferous campaign to block the deployment.

In fact, the political battle became so heated and so focused against the United States that it was easy to forget that European governments, acting through NATO, requested these new missiles in the first place. The request was made and honored for sound reasons of deterrence.

If our allies would now apply the same reasoning of deterrence to their conventional forces, they would enhance their own security and reduce the likelihood of a nuclear exchange provoked by a Warsaw Pact land invasion of western Europe.

This is the real danger to Europe, and potentially to the world: that NATO would be rapidly overwhelmed in a European war, so that its only recourse, short of surrender, would be nuclear retaliation. This scenario, and the dangerously limited options it presents, is the result of the large imbalance between NATO and Warsaw Pact conventional forces, and of NATO's failure to redress the imbalance.

How realistic is this scenario? Given the amount of Warsaw Pact manpower and equipment amassed on the central European frontier, it is very realistic indeed. Besides having 4 million troops to NATO's 2.6 million, the Warsaw Pact maintains a three-to-one numerical advantage in tanks and artillery and a two-to-one advantage in aircraft and armored vehicles.

NATO has set goals for specific force improvements which would require 3 to 4 percent annual defense spending increases, but its members have fallen far short of these self-imposed goals. Defense spending actually decreased in 1982 in Belgium, Germany, Greece, Netherlands, Portugal and Turkey. What really matters here is not the numbers, but the large force disparity and the dangers that result from NATO's inaction.

Under the NATO doctrine of "flexible response," the Allies would meet a Warsaw Pact invasion with conventional forces and use nuclear weapons only as a last resort, when conventional retaliation fails. With the current balance of forces, however, "flexible response" is not a real option, since the NATO commander would be forced to seek permission to use nuclear weapons within days, not weeks, of an invasion. After a few days of fighting, NATO would only have the "flexibility" to choose between nuclear retaliation and capitulation.

To some extent, NATO's weakness results from political pressure and the anti-military attitude of the peace movement. Whether to save money or to minimize the size of their armed forces, European governments seem to be consciously deciding in favor of the nuclear option. Britain has announced that it will not meet its NATO force goals after 1986, but is augmenting its nuclear force. The nuclear improvements come at the expense of conventional forces and readiness, most notably in the Royal Navy, which is slated to retire one-third of its warships by the end of this decade. Similar reductions in conventional force strength are occurring in France, where President Mitterand has undertaken a dramatic increase in his nation's "force de frappe."

The military dangers of this situation are as clear as day. The political dangers come into sharper focus each time we hear another European pronouncement on defense. Europeans are marching in the streets to express their fears of nuclear war, while their governments hold our feet to the fire to make sure that the United States is serious about arms control. At the same time, instead of paying for a defense that their economies can clearly afford, the Europeans are managing their defense in a way that effectively forecloses all but the nuclear option in the event of conflict.

Americans are right to ask: how can we continue our commitment to a nuclear defense of Europe when the Europeans aren't committed to their own conventional defense? How can Americans accept the risk of nuclear escalation when the Europeans don't provide the conventional deterrent that could prevent a war in Europe from reaching the nuclear threshold? There are many sound reasons for America to participate in Europe's defense, but none of them hold water if the Europeans lack the will or the reason to provide for their own security.

Already tough state laws get tougher

By ASSEMBLYMAN

CHUCK HARDWICK

Because there have been so many drunken driving laws recently enacted in response to the widespread public outcry about drunken drivers, I thought it would be timely to devote my monthly column to explain the laws, and to review the general philosophy behind them.

The first time a person is convicted of drunken driving in New Jersey he will lose his license for six months to one year, be fined $250 to $400, pay a $100 fee to the state to help fund drunk driving police patrols, pay $40 for the alcohol countermeasures program, attend two consecutive six-hour sessions at a county-based Intoxicated Driver Resource Center at a cost of $25 a day, pay a $30 fee to have his license restored, and pay a $1,000 auto insurance surcharge for three years. Excluding lawyer fees, the total cost could be as high as $3,620.

This $3,000 surcharge will apply to all those who have been convicted of drunk driving since January last year, and invoices are now being mailed. Personally, I object to the penalty being retroactive, and I am co-sponsoring legislation to change the effective date to Jan. 1, 1984.

The second time a person is convicted of drunken driving he will lose his license for two years, and face a fine ranging from $500 to $1,000. He also will be required to perform 30 days of community service and, depending upon the discretion of the judge, face a jail term of up to 90 days. Also, he will be detained at an Intoxicated Driver Resource Center for 48 hours for alcoholism awareness and education.

The third time a person is convicted of drunken driving, he will lose his license for 10 years, face a $1,000 fine and mandatory jail term of 180 days. He will be excluded from the resource center, and instead will be put into an inpatient program for up to 28 days, after which will be released into an "after-care" program for outpatient treatment for 16 weeks to a year, whose cost ranges from $160 to $2,340.

New Jersey's laws are indeed tough laws; on the whole the toughest in the nation. There are trade-offs in any lawmaking decisions, and it is the job of the Legislature and the governor to strike a balance between, or among, the extremes.

We had to toughen our treatment of drunken drivers simply because too many people were getting killed or maimed. At the same time, we realized that problem drinkers need more than a stiff jail sentence and big fines to stop them from drinking and driving, and thus the many stages of treatment. And, we realized the poor will be dealt a severe financial blow if convicted. So, there are provisions built into the law the permit the $1,000 surcharge — the largest fine of all for first-time offenders — to spread out over several years if the person cannot afford to pay it all at once.

One of the most striking features of the new laws is that from the first time a person is convicted of drunken driving, there is an effort to help the drinker, who without a proper balance of penalties and treatment, may be back on the road while drunk. The $40 countermeasures fee includes a screening to determine the extent of an individual's drinking problem. It is interesting to note that people charged with drunken driving are often problem drinkers, which is to say they are not yet alcoholics, and in the opinion of experts, the earlier they are helped, the better the chances that they will recover.

What we're seeking in this state, after all, is to create a climate, like that which exists in many other countries such as Sweden, in which drinking and driving are simply not acceptable, socially or legally.

Already New Jersey drivers are getting the message. It was recently reported that for the first time in 20 years, there was a decline in highway deaths in the state, believed due to less drunken driving.

The key here is that we already are beginning to save lives, and that's what we're after.

We've traveled to Springfield for our newest Scene around the towns, shown at right. If you recognize it, let us hear from you by 9 a.m. Monday. Write to Scene, in care of this paper, P.O. Box 3109, 1291 Stuyvesant Ave., Union 07083.

We fooled a couple of people with last week's Scene, above, Speedway Avenue School in Vailsburg. Irvington resident Ronnie Roberto thought it was Vailsburg High School. The two buildings are very similar.

There was no fooling another group, however. Ten pupils at Speedway Avenue easily recognized their school. Tahira West, who has attended Speedway Avenue for four years, summed up the feelings all of these pupils have for their school: "All the children love it because of the excellent learning they have received and the staff is so nice. I'll never forget this scene and my education." The other pupils who wrote in were Omika Williams, Tonia Mitchell, Latasha Watson, Lamar Harmon, Dena Atlantic, Al-Hadid Rollins, Angela Hubbard, Julius Bright and Nico Ross. "I know that scene well as I was the school crossing guard there during the 1950s," wrote Anna Sosnicki of Union. "I was crossing the children at the South Orange Avenue corner when the Garden State Parkway was being built as seen in the background of the picture. It does not seem like 30 years already," she added.

"My father immediately recognized this school," wrote C. L. Galla, a teacher at Florence Avenue School, Irvington. "He attended this school many years ago. In fact, he lived right across the street from it. In his words, 'those were the good ole days and times.'"

Kathy Pfeifer of Irvington also recognized the school. "My boyfriend's mother is a teacher's aide there," she wrote.

Finally, we received a late entry for the Scene of Feb. 23. Lenore Jeans of Kenilworth recognized the entrance of the Kenilworth Public Library because "my son and I visit quite often."

Letters to the editor

Identifying member

For months, I've been trying to identify a male in the audience at many Springfield Board of Education meetings. This person aroused my curiosity because of his foot-stamping, banging with his hands and his repeatedly hollering of one phrase over and over again. This type of behavior seems unnatural for an interested person attending a meeting. But now, thanks to Care, I've been able to identify the person as a Candidate of the Board of Education.

A faction fight

Three years ago Laura Rosenbaum stood up as Board of Education member and demanded that a school be closed. Specifically she named the James Caldwell School. From that time on, there has been a faction fight in this town. James Caldwell was to be closed in a 5-4 vote in Nov. 81.

In my opinion Mrs. Rosenbaum is the cause of all the problems in the town regarding the schools. She and her friends didn't care about the students on the north side of town. She and her friends were not concerned with curriculum, students, homeowners, or truth. Now, Mrs. Rosenbaum is blaming CAUSE and the present Board of Education for mistakes and omissions that have taken place for years, including the years she sat as President of the Board of Education.

1. Why weren't the classrooms that are presently labeled substandard, upgraded? Why didn't the administration apply for the use of the rooms, using a form that the state supplies?

2. How dare Mrs. Rosenbaum accept and pay Dr. Rizzetto $10,000 for a report that stated Walton School was an excess school and then ignored it. Did Mrs. Rosenbaum feel that Dr. Rizzetto was the enemy too?

It is clear to see that Mrs. Rosenbaum felt that we should close a school. THAT is on record. But when it became clear that this town wanted an elementary school on both sides of town, she became irate and began blaming the present Board of Education for mistakes that quite clearly fall on the shoulders of administration.

Mrs. Rosenbaum, how dare you place the blame on the Board of Education for the problems that exist, when you and your friends lit the fuse and fanned the fire all of these years.

Church and state

We were appalled to learn that Rabbi Joshua Goldstein apparently has decided against separation of church (synagogue) and state in the controversial Springfield Board of Education election.

In a newsletter, "From the Rabbi's Desk," Rabbi Goldstein has chosen to select a member of his congregation to address the board issues on the evening of March 16. As that board member is a participant on just one side of the controversy, the congregation, naturally, will not be exposed to all sides at stake.

Rabbi Goldstein, in his request that everyone attend this address, made mention of "ethnic tensions" on the present board. If, in fact, "ethnic tensions" do exist, Rabbi Goldstein is doing his part to heighten them. This is a sorry role for a religious leader. We hope the damage is not irreversible.

Newspaper machines

Regarding answer to Anonymous Complainer of newspaper dispensing machines in Springfield.

Dear "Thank you, concerned owner" on first letter dated Feb. 23 and Dear "Concerned Owner" on second letter dated Feb. 28, I'm very sorry that you cannot reveal who you are. However, you have sent two anonymous letters to me demanding that the newspaper vending machines be removed from our public areas.

It is not tactful to complain to public officials and not allow us to do our work and get back to you with an answer.

For this reason I decided to answer you through the press by my personal expression on the subject and not as the Construction Official of the Township of Springfield.

I must agree that some of these machines are placed in areas along our business district without our knowledge nor with a permit issued by the township or municipality.

To my knowledge, there are no permits required specifically for newspaper vending machines in Springfield. I stand to be corrected but, in my recollection, there was a legal action somewhere to remove these news machines from all areas of some municipality. The court ruled in favor of the machines placed in public areas because in our society it is deemed as an outlet for expression of the freedom of the press.

As you alleged in your letter, I do not agree that the news vending machines are taking business away from local merchants. For many people in our society who do not have time to park a car and walk to the store for a newspaper, these vending machines are helpful especially when the regular newsstand is closed for business.

A newspaper works 24 hours a day and 7 days per week so we can read in the papers what's going on in the world. Isn't this better than the way its done in many countries of the world whose citizens crave for day to day news and are lucky to get a newspaper once a month full of propaganda.

That very news vending machine is probably advertising many businesses in our township and that can only help commerce and not hinder it as you claim.

I hope that you will be satisfied with my answer and only in a free society such as ours am I able to answer you in the public press.

Thank you for your concern of our fine merchants in Springfield but there is a limit to what anyone can do to stop legitimate competition in a free enterprise system.

Solomon show at library

SPRINGFIELD—The Springfield Library is conducting a visit to the Theo Solomon exhibit in silver prints all this month. These are photographs in 16X20 format which represent one man's view of the world around him.

At Marietta

SPRINGFIELD—Jodi Ruff of Fieldstone Drive will be a member of the College Democrats at Marietta College for the spring term. Ruff, a 1982 graduate of Jonathan Dayton High School, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Ruff.

Solomon uses black and white silver prints to create uncommon visual representations of waterfalls, Egyptian Nile people, staircases, horses and even the mists of New Jersey. Black and white prints free the eye from distractions and reveal the basic construction and composition of the photograph.

Theo Solomon is a criminologist by profession and works for

New Jersey and New York criminal justice agencies. He is an artist in photography by passion and shows throughout New Jersey and New York. His most recent work was seen in the Bergen County Museum, the Newark Library, the Hudson Guild, St. John the Divine Cathedral.

CAUSE supporting 3 candidates

SPRINGFIELD—The Citizens Alliance for Unifying Springfield's Education (C.A.U.S.E.) today announced its endorsement of Elizabeth Simpson-Fritzen, Elaine Auer and Edward E. Franko for the April 3 Board of Education election.

The three candidates said that they support the CAUSE efforts for a policy of thorough and efficient education without increasing the education budget.

"In fact, with school enrollment at its lowest ever in the town of Springfield, there is no reason why the school budget should not reflect a tax decrease," said Franko, a teacher and secondary school administrator.

Franko, whose wife attended Springfield schools, is a graduate of Montclair State College, majoring in mathematics and science. He earned a master's degree from Seton Hall University, majoring in educational administration and supervision. At present, he is working on a doctoral dissertation with emphasis on alternative education programs and learning styles.

Franko is a member of the Association for Supervision and Curriculum Development, a national organization, and is a charter member of the Springfield Optimist Club. He holds a number of educational certificates. He and his wife are the parents of two children.

Simpson-Fritzen, a lifelong resident of Springfield, has served as a board member since 1978. A graduate of Kean College with a recreation and health major, she is with the Maplewood Recreation Department and is that township's Senior Citizen Director. Simpson-Fritzen is vice president of the Springfield Board of Education and chairs its Building and Grounds Committee. She is chief operations officer of the Springfield First Aid Squad and has served on the squad for the last 10 years. She also is chairman of the Springfield Recreation Committee, in addition to serving as the township's representative to the Union County Recreation Commission.

The incumbent candidate initiated the Halloween Window Painting Contest for Springfield, an event that attracted more than 125 participants. She has directed the Girls' Town League Softball Program for the last 10 years, while coaching and directing numerous athletic teams for the Springfield Recreation Department. She is vice president of the Union County College Alumni Association.

Elaine Auer, a mother of four, is an active member of the Springfield First Aid Squad and is a past president of the Caldwell Parent Teachers Association.

Mrs. Auer is a 23-year resident of Springfield, where she volunteered many hours to the painting, cleaning and landscaping of Caldwell School and its grounds. She is an active member of the First Presbyterian Church, where she teaches Sunday School.

A graduate of Katharine Gibbs School, Mrs. Auer is a former executive secretary. She is a member of the Future Directions Committee of the Board of Education and is secretary of the Springfield Parent Teachers Association Council and is a member of the American Legion Auxiliary.

The three CAUSE candidates are "enthusiastic about maintaining a neighborhood proximity school system and quality education while reducing the impact on property taxes."

CARE: We need 'new majority'

SPRINGFIELD—Three recently announced candidates for the Springfield Board of Education met recently with a group of C.A.R.E. supporters at an election fundraising dance and pledged to bring quality education back to Springfield.

Incumbent Board Member Ken Faigenbaum, seeking re-election after serving a one-year term, said "The recent decision by the Union County Schools Superintendent to recommend decertification of our school system is the direct result of the actions of the five C.A.U.S.E. members who have controlled the Board during the last year.

"Never before in the history of Springfield have the self-serving actions of a small group of people had such a devastating effect on the very fiber of life of everyone in town. Now is clearly the time to change the majority on the Board and save our schools—and in the process, the town."

Candidate Lee Eisen, citing some of the specifics of the County Superintendent's report commented, "The public has been totally disregarded. In fact, the five-member majority of the Board made it a point to disregard the 3300 Springfield residents who petitioned against the sale of the Edward V. Walton School. The total disregard for those 3300 citizens falls into the category of community relations described by the County Superintendent as "unacceptable".

"That total disregard for those 3300 residents resulted in a court case that has cost the school district over $150,000 in legal expenses to defend. That money should have been spent on learning, not lawyers. When 3300 people speak, you listen."

Dr. Richard Luciani added, "The only issue before the voters is quality education. The quality of the education in a school district certainly affects property values and saleability of houses, but those are secondary effects. The primary effect is on the children. The children are being deprived. The children are being hurt."

"The children are being robbed. They are our most precious asset and must be given the best tools possible if they are going to succeed in a high technology world. The school district is charged with the responsibility of giving the children the tools provided by a high quality education. This district is failing. The County Superintendent said so. He recommended to the State Commissioner of Education that Springfield's certification be revoked."

"The five C.A.U.S.E. members who control the Board are responsible for the failure. It's time for a new majority."

American Cancer Society looks for township crusade chairman

SPRINGFIELD—The American Cancer Society is looking for a chairman to head its April educational and fundraising crusade in Springfield.

This year, the Cancer Society plans to distribute life-saving information on lung, colon and rectal cancer and plans to raise $3,000 to support its programs in patient services, public education and cancer research.

It is the chairman's responsibility to make sure the residents of Springfield receive the information and to see that Springfield reaches its goal of $3,000.

Crusaders will be recruited by the Cancer Society to distribute the information and collect funds, but it is the chairman's job to organize the crusade and make sure it is running smoothly.

The American Cancer Society provides training for the chairperson and a representative from the Cancer Society will work closely with the person by providing assistance and guidance.

The lack of a chairperson in Springfield will make the Cancer Society's overall residential goal of $90,000 more difficult to reach and can affect the varied programs and services of the society.

For additional information, call Steve Kolb at 354-7373 or 232-0641.

Cookie sale under way

SPRINGFIELD—The girl scout cookie sale is under way.

Such things as a weekend camping trip, a trip to the Franklin Institute, adopting a grandparent, or making a Thanksgiving food basket, are just some of the Girl Scouts yearly activities that benefit from this sale.

The trips and service projects are made possible by the revenues of the annual cookie sale. Local scouts are holding their drive through March 18 as part of the Washington Rock Girl Scout Council's spring sale. The girls are going door to door to ask for orders.

The cookies is selling for $2 a box. Each box sold represents $1.27 contribution to the scouting program. A portion of the profit goes to the troop treasury and the balance to the Washington Rock Council, which provides the training, program, and resources to make Girl Scouting available in 25 towns throughout the area.

According to Fong Yee, the cookie manager for Springfield, the slogan for this year's campaign is, "Giving Never Tasted Better." She said, "We hope the slogan helps people remember that they're getting a lot more than cookies when they make a purchase. They are making the learning opportunities and fun of Girl Scouting available to the girls in Springfield."

AIR WAVES

CBS developing the "up close and personal style" that ABC used exclusively for so long. In a 10K road race in Phoenix shown Sunday, the recent decline of onetime marathon golden boy Alberto Salazar was traced.

In an interview conducted before the race, Salazar said he "would have no excuses" and that it would be a blow to his confidence if he didn't finish at least third in the world class field. Just a year ago, Salazar had won the same race in record time. Salazar also said he would like to "it to come down to me and De Castella" (Rob, the runner who has taken Salazar's throne).

Salazar came in eighth, and during one point in the race, he and De Castella went step-for-step, with the Australian eventually pulling away. Color commentator Bill Rodgers, the four-time New York and Boston Marathon champion, noted during the race Salazar looked "as tired as if he has been running a marathon", instead of a race 20 miles shorter.

After the race, John Dockery asked Salazar about his "no excuses", and Salazar said he had none, and then went on to make excuses. In a revealing statement, he said, "I haven't been able to sleep for over a year and a half without taking a sleeping pill. It has obviously affected me. Losing this race has to make me wonder."

Unfortunately, Rodgers took a step backward after his incisive comments during the race. He matter of factly said Salazar just needs a couple of good races to get back to top form. Since the entire segment revolved around Salazar's slide from prominence, Rodgers' remark didn't ring true.

The replay machine received a workout on ABC's coverage of the USFL game Sunday between the Generals and Jacksonville. When the Bulls' runner fumbled going into the end zone, the replay clearly showed he lost possession before crossing the plane.

Less clear was the replay of the controversial Jacksonville field goal in the final seconds which was ruled wide and preserved the Generals' victory. Unfortunately, there were no cameras behind the goal posts at that side of the field. The same replay was shown half a dozen times, and although this viewer thought the kick was good, there was nothing certain about it. Since the referee making the decision slipped, it would have been interesting to have a replay of him falling to see just when he hit the ground and if it forced him to take his eye off the ball. A replay of Danny Miller, the kicker, showed him with his arms raised upward thinking he had won the game.

With rumors flying all weekend on whether or not Steve Young had signed the largest football contract ever, Howard Cosell and Brent Musberger tried to outdo each other. At 3:15 Saturday, Cosell reported that Young's deal had fallen apart with the Los Angeles Express, and talked to USFL Commissioner Chet Simmons on the air to confirm that.

Musburger went one step better and had Young on CBS Sports Saturday at 4:10 to give his first-person account. Musburger tried to get Young to say he would wait for the May 1 NFL draft, but he wouldn't do that. On Sunday, Cosell bounced back by telling anchorman Jim Lampley that Young's agent, Leigh Steinberg, said the BYU quarterback would sign within 48 hours, which he did.

John Madden showed he knows more than football in his "Journeys" segment on CBS Sports Saturday. He profiled the "Running Nun" from California who has qualified for the U.S. Olympic Trials in the Women's Marathon. While giving her the tremendous credit due her, Madden correctly pointed out she has no chance to finish in the top three at the Trials and actually make the team.

"She will finish about 25 minutes behind the leaders," said Madden. "The trials will be her Olympics."

Starting today, the airwaves will be filled with college basketball post-season conference tournaments to decide who will go into the NCAA tourney. ESPN, which will be showing Big East and ACC games, will air 25 NCAA Tournament games beginning next Tuesday. CBS, which will show the team selections for the tournament Sunday, will televise many of the weekend NCAA games leading up to the final four in Seattle.

Kean lacrosse team relies on experience

Kean coach Hawley Waterman says that his 1984 lacrosse team will be relying heavily on the returning veterans who have made key contributions in past seasons. But, said the coach, good health will also play a vital role for the Blue Army Stickmen, too.

"We are going to use the talent we have, and hopefully, with our experienced returnees, we'll do all right," said Waterman, who began the Kean lacrosse program 14 years ago. "But we can't have any injuries to our experienced players, or we'll be in trouble."

Waterman points with pride to his outstanding, nationally-ranked goalie Bob Kozic of Martinsville, and a strong defense corps as the team's bright spots for the upcoming season. Kozic, who is a senior, played in all of Kean's 14 games last season and recorded all five of its victories. Juniors George Kragh of Spotswood and Gene Proneck of Farmingdale; and sophomores Frank Dara of Clifton and Robert Hudak of Levittown, N.Y., are the four backliners that Waterman feels will be the glue for his squad.

"They've all got experience," said Waterman, "and, of course, Robert will do a credible job. He works hard and he wants to, not to mention having another year of experience under his belt."

Senior Ron Wahler of Edison, who led his club in scoring last season, will anchor a somewhat inexperienced attack unit, along with sophomores Rusty Todd of Vineland, Mike McDonnell of Deal and freshman Ted Glynn of Morristown. Keith Antonides of Sayreville will team up with five others in the Blue Army midfield section.

Following a spring trip to Maryland on March 12-17, the Stickmen will be opening their 1984 season at home against Widener College of Pa. on Wednesday, March 21 at 3:30 P.M.

In the Small Fry League, the Rockets trounced the Raiders, 32-13, as Noah Sheinmann tallied 14 points. Ryan Huber, Andy Huber, DeJohn Cataldo each had six pints. Vic Worthington led the Raiders with 12 points and Greg Maltzman added one.

The Billikens beat the Celtics, 22-18, as Chris Schwabeck had 10 points, Terence Young 8, and Josh Beck 4. Brett Winter led the Celtics with 8 points; Don Weisholtz 6, and Mike Landol 4.

The Lakers whipped the Pistons, 10-6, as Mark Zucker scored 6 points and Bobby Grohs added 4. Jason Mullman had 4 points for the Pistons, and Neil Lynch added 2.

In The State League, Alabama defeated Oklahoma, 14-8, as Ryan Feeley scored eight points. Bob Sabol added four, and Scott Halpern two. Mike Lupina led the Sooners with three points; Lauren Meixner 2, Mike Montannari 2, Sue Saia 1.

Utah topped Texas, 16-11, as John Burger scored six points. James Morrison had four points, Brett Levy had three, Charles Maltzman two; Jamie Schutz, Greg Berman, Bindhal Turakhia each had a point. Scott Wisla led Texas with 4 points, while Dan LaMorges 3; Andy Arnold and Mike Reddington each had two.

Gagliano is reliever on Delaware's nine

Frank Gagliano of Mountainside, a 1982 graduate of Seton Hall Prep in South Orange, will be a key reliever for the University of Delaware baseball team when the Blue Hens open their season Saturday against Howard University at Delaware Diamond.

The 6-2, 190-pound sophomore was an All-State selection for Seton Hall and was 4-1 with a 1.37 ERA in the Inter-County (NJ) League this past summer. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Gagliano of Mountainside.

Delaware, which is coming off a 37-16 season, and who ranked 14th at the end of the year, returns eight starters and 16 lettermen in defense of its second straight East Coast Conference championship. The Blue Hens, who have won the ECC title four of the past five years and played in the NCAA playoffs five of the past six, play a 52 game schedule including a swing to Albuquerque, New Mexico, for a 10-day, 15-game road trip.

"We are looking at a large order of eight straight 30-win seasons," said Delaware head coach Bob Hannah, who is entering his 20th season just 31 wins shy of his 50th career victory. "But one of the strong factors of our success is the tradition of winning over a period of time. There is that overriding feeling that we should be successful and win."

"There are some questions marks, but the early part of our schedule and our spring trip will answer a lot of those questions. We will, however, score runs this spring, and our pitching should hold us."

Good blend appears key in men's tennis

Coach Tony Ochrimenko of Maplewood has said that a blend of veterans and skilled newcomers should make the 1984 season an interesting one for the Kean College men's tennis team. Ochrimenko, who also coaches the men's soccer team at Kean, likes nothing better than guiding young players who show promise.

"It could be a much improved team over last year's" said Ochrimenko, who was named as the 1983 New Jersey Athletic Conference's Soccer Coach of the Year. "We have some newcomers that know the game well and if the boys keep their heads together, we should have a good year. I'm looking forward to it."

Seniors Leeroy Foreman of Mount Holly and Fred Munoz of Hillside are two returnees that Ochrimenko will be counting on to form a top-notch partnership in doubles competition, in addition to providing leadership to his club.

Foreman will be competing in his fourth year on the team, while Munoz will be entering his third season of play.

Sophomores Vincent LaSalle of Nutley and James Reiner of Springfield are two southpaws who will have an opportunity to form a doubles partnership of their own. Since the team has no other left-handed players on its roster, Ochrimenko is hopeful that the two will add more variety to his team, and more difficulty for the opposition. Reiner is a transfer student from Union County College.

Freshman Mike Colalillo and Gary Kirsch

of Bound Brook are two of the newcomers in particular that have impressed Ochrimenko, in terms of talent.

"They both can turn into good players for us," said the coach. "Mike happens to have a wicked topspin on his ball, and I'm hoping that they will both continue to develop in the next year or two."

The Squires, who once again will be competing in New Jersey State Athletic Conference play, will open their season at home on March 21 against NJIT. The game will be the first the Squires will play on the newly-acquired courts of the East Campus in Hillside.

Bulldogs are thwarted by state setback in OT

The Jonathan Dayton Regional High School boys basketball team, which flourished in close games all season, ironically saw its campaign come to an end Friday night in an overtime tussle.

The Bulldogs were shaded by Millburn, 55-51, in overtime in a Group 2 state tournament game. The game was played at Millburn, which was the fourth-seeded team in the section. Dayton was seeded fifth.

Dayton concluded the year with a 19-6 record, winning many of its games in the final minutes, or in overtime.

A big second quarter propelled Dayton out to a 27-21 halftime lead. But Millburn ran off a 14-6 streak in the third quarter to take a 35-33 lead. But the Bulldogs bounced back to take a 47-43 lead late in the game.

However, the Millers scored two baskets to tie the contest, 47-47, and send the game into overtime. Millburn then reeled off the a six point tear in the extra session to win going away.

Dayton's Mike Graziano led all scorers with 17 points, while Mitch Nenner added 13 points and 11 rebounds.
