Deerfield musicians to perform in concert

Twelve talented instrumental music students from Deerfield School will play at 2:30 p.m. this Sunday, in a concert at Chatham Township High School.

The concert will feature performances by a band and orchestra

The Mountainside School District is one of the thirteen school systems belonging to the Consortium, which is an alliance of school districts for the cooperative pooling resources.

Originally founded to address the combined special education needs of member districts, the Consortium is expanding its services to include other areas of pupil services and staff development. The aim is to share expenses in ventures that would not be possible or practical for individual districts.

Reagan tops voting in boroug.

By BEVERLY GOLDROSEN President Ronald Reagan drew more votes in the Mountainside primary Tuesday than any other candidate. While 460 of the the borough's 1,994 registered Republicans voted for Reagan, a total of 364 of the borough's 859 registered Democratics turned out to support the four Democratic candidates for president.

Former Vice President Walter F. Mondale led the pack locally and statewide, receiving 184 votes in the borough. Colorado Senator Gary Hart won the support of 132 voters, with Jesse Jackson picking up 30 votes. Lyndon LaRouche Jr., in his third presidential bid since 1976, received 18. In the U.S. Senate race, the Mayor of Montclair, Republican Mary Mor-chary, won 224 votes, defeating Robert Morris, who received 103 votes locally. Democrat Bill Bradley, Senate incumbent seeking renomination for a second term, overwhelmed challenger Elliot Greenspan, 201 to 18. Greenspan and LaRouché are associated with the National Democratic Policy Committee, a controversial political group that has recently been active throughout the state. Greenspan is the NDPC's New Jersey coordinator.

Republican candidate for the House of Representatives Matthew Rinaldo, running for his seventh congressional term unopposed, received 449 votes. The three contenders in the Democratic race for the House were led by organization candidate John Feeley of Roselle Park with 93 votes. Dwight Gatling of Plainfield followed with 63, while Bound Brook resident James J. Cleary received the support of 20 local voters

Of the eight Democratic candidates seeking election to three three-year terms on the Union County Board of Freeholders, Mary Ann Dorin of Linden fared the best, with 117 votes. Incumbent Gerald Green of Plainfield ran a close second with 114, followed by Harry Pappas of Springfield with 109. All three are organization candidates. The votes diminished dramatically for the remaining five candidates. Regular Hillside Democrats William Galik, Samuel McGhee and Adrianne Sneed picked up 23, 22 and 20 respectively. Myra Satterfield and Abdul-Salam Ismial, both of Elizabeth and running with Jesse Jackson's Rainbow Coalition, obtained 20 and 15 votes respectively.

Former Freeholder Peter Okrasinski, a Democrat from Union, garnered 126 votes in his uncontested bid to succeed Assemblyman Thomas Long of Linden for a one-year term on the Union County Board of Freeholders.

The three candidates running uncontested for three-year positions on the Union County Republican Board of Freeholders received virtually equal support locally. Incumbents Edward Slomkowski of Union and Alan Augustine of Scotch Plains both won 410 votes, while Linden City Council President Robert Goner pulled in 409. C. Richard Malgran of Plainfield earned 406 votes in his unopposed bid for a one-year term.

Republican Council President Robert Viglianti and Councilman Ronald Romak - the lone candidates for Borough Council seats - fell within six votes of one another in uncontested races. While Viglianti garnered 410 votes, 416 registered Republicans supported Romak.

Candidates for both the Republican and Democratic Union County Committee slates ran uncontested.

Woman in battle to save island

By TIMOTHY OWENS

A Springfield Township woman's effort to block the removal of an island in Sayre's Pond at Watchung Reservation may have been unsuccessful, but it has not deterred her from bringing attention to the way regulations designed to protect the environment can be twisted around to do just the opposite.

Fifty-six-year-old Eleanor Gural. whose family has owned land near the pond on the southeastern edge of the reservation since she was a child, was temporarily successful in preventing Interstate 78 project construction workers from removing the small island on May 23 by wading out to the island and holding a sit-in. The next day, however, when she repeated the tactic, she was dragged back to shore and arrested for trespassing.

In the few hours that she was fowl adopted it and greenery started to grow."

The pond is not visible from the Gural home, mainly because of the high retaining wall that was erected to dam the pond and serve as a soundproof barrier for the highway noise. However, the Gurals also own the Savre Homestead across the highway which overlooks the pond.

What once was a scenic view from the homestead, one of the oldest homes in the township, has been disrupted by the wall. Gural had hoped that trees would have grown on the island and covered the wall.

"The wall is ugly as anything," she remarked, "but it is better than nothing. If the island had been there, the wall would have been hidden.

According to Gural, state Department of Transportation officials told her that the island had to be removed because state regulations require that the pond be restored to its original conditon. She is bemused by this rationale.

useless because the next heavy rain would wash it out again.

"I would like enough fuss to be made so that the state has to think not twice, but 100 times before they use a rule like that to defeat its purpose," said Gural. She said that she is considering writing letters to the state Department of Environmental Protection and Historical Preservation Agency to achieve this end.

Gural has been opposed to the I-78 project from the beginning and it is not hard to understand why. Her family owned a cottage near the pond where she grew up. It was demolished more than a dozen years ago to make way for the highway. The Gurals bought their home near the pond in 1960 and raised their family. For the Gural children, the pond was a recreation area and a site of natural beauty.

Once the plans for I-78 were finalized. the state began condemmation proceedings against a portion of the Gural property as the construction date neared. The proceedings have since become what Gural described as "a legal tangle," with an unsettled condemnation suit which has left property boundaries unclear and has yet to result in any payment from the state to the Gurals for their property.

director of Environmental Engineering and Freeholder Charlotte DeFilippo came to the pond to discuss what they charged was the state's silt pollution of Sayre's and Bryant ponds and Lake Surprise in the Watchung Reservation because of the construction.

"Marsh said that his understanding was that the state was going to leave the island there. It never occurred to us that they were taking it away." Gural said. "Considering that we know this lake better than anybody, it seemed to me that we would be involved in a decision like that."

On May 23, Gural looked outside and saw that the construction crew was preparing a crane to dig out the island. She called both the DOT's onsite office and office in Trenton and the DEP to state her objections to the removal. She was told that it was too late to do anything "We never got anybody who could do something about it. She then made her decision to wade out to the island and block the work. She was successful on the first day as after about three-and-a-half hours, the construction crew gave up for the day. On May 24 Gural once again went out to the island, and after an hour, State Police rowed out to the island in a boat and dragged her back to shore. She was taken by police to the Somerville State Police Barracks, charged with criminal trespassing, and returned home. By that time, the island was all but gone.

composed of outstanding musicians from schools belonging to the Morris/-Union Consortium.

Performing in the band will be eighth graders Matt Swarts and Steven Dorlen, seventh grader Michael Shapiro, and fifth grader Scott Meissner on trumpets. Flute players include eighth graders NaRee Chung and Gwen Thompson, as well as seventh grader Liia Raamot. Seventh graders Andrew Fowler and Carroll Grillo will play the clarinet.

In the orchestra will be eighth grade flutists Linda Groiss and Anne Hollister and fifth grader David Hollister on the French horn.

The students were recommended for the program by Deerfield instrumental music teacher Charles Guinta and selected by a special concert committee.

Sunday's unified concert will have an unusual opportunity to experience performing with a large orchestra or band.

Conductors for the concert will be Mary Skweres of the New Providence School District, orchestra; Ron Brown, Springfield Public Schools, band; and John Iatesta, Chatham Township Schools, stage band. The students have been preparing with their conductors for the performance in rehearsals since March.

The public is invited to attend.

detained, the workers had removed all but a small portion of the island. Now, nearly two weeks later, all that remains is a small vestige of the island under very shallow water and a massive pile of black dirt on the bank of what once was a 3-acre pond.

"All-they have done is scrape off the useful area of the island," she said Monday in an interview at the pond about 100 yards from her home. In between the house and the pond is a high retaining wall and what eventually will be the six-lane interstate highway. The Gural home is located between Skylark Drive and the highway project. The island formed one year ago after pilings were driven into the soil for a retaining wall and forced mud up from the pond bottom. Initially, Mrs. Gural was disturbed that the pond, which had already been reduced by almost half by the highway construction, was suffering further damage.

"At first it appeared to be an ugly mud slick," Gural recollected. "But I was surprised by how quickly water Noting that the regulations designed to protect the beauty of natural areas that are affected by construction were adopted at the urgings of environmentalists such as herself, Gural views the DOT's action as retaliatory in nature. 'The state created a "natural' area apparently by mistake and then took it away, she contended.

"The DOT was just getting even with environmentalists by using environmental regulations against environmentalists," she said.

Furthermore, she contended. because only the top part of the island was dug out, the pond is not in the same state it was when construction started. The pond is much shallower where the island once was.

Achievement award initiated in memory of school librarian

A new achievement award honoring the memory of Susan Collier has been announced and will be given for the first time this year at the eighth grade graduation on June 20. The award will recognize the graduate who has shown the most improvement.

Collier served as librarian in the Mountainside schools for more than 20 years. In that capacity she was able to offer encouragement and support to all students. She found particular satisfaction in helping those who continued to put forth their best effort, even though they didn't always make top grades. The award recognizes students who work to the best of their ability.

This is a community sponsored award and has been approved by the Mountainside Board of Education. Everyone who wishes to participate may make a contribution. Checks should be made payable to the Susan Collier Memorial Fund, and may be sent to Sandy Burdge, 312 Old Tote Road; Bobbie Weeks, 257 Meeting House Lane; or Jeanne Wilhelms, 1501 Fox Trail. This will be a fitting tribute worthy of an outstanding teacher.

cost of the premium. Jersey's auto "insurance

In selecting the higher threshold, policy holders cannot institute legal action against another party in the event of an accident unless death, disfigurement or permanent injury occurs, or the total amount of physical damages totals $1,500. Previously, accident victims could take a case to court for any incident involving more than $200 in damages, including fractures-which have now been excluded from the new threshold option.

Merin claimed that by selecting the higher threshold, and thereby reducing the probability of an accident ending up in litigation, New Jersey motorists can save anywhere from $16 to $40 per policy. The savings for Union County policy holders ranges from a minimum of $20 to $40.

A second option offered under the new laws enables car owners to take a higher deductible in the Personal Injury Protection (PIP) portion of the policy.

 For those who are already covered by a comprehensive medical plan, through an employer for instance, it may be advisable to chose a higher PIP deductible and file smaller injury claims under the general medical policy. Some 90 percent of all New Jersey residents have some form of medical insurance, according to state figures

Three deductible plans are offered under the new PIP regulations: $500, $1,000 or $2,500. Also, whereas before, in the case of an accident involving a family the deductible had to be met for each individual injured before PIP would go into effect, now only one deductible must be met for coverage to go into effect for the entire family.

For those with Medicare coverage. Merin suggested chosing the $2,000 deductible and filing smaller claims with Medicare. Under a recent federal court ruling. Medicare is now responsible for honoring claims in nofault accidents.

The state also suggests that those with alternative excess medical coverage should consider taking the option of dropping the PIP excess medical coverage and saving $17 on their premium. Excess medical coverage includes survivor's benefits, death benefits, caretaker provisions and wage compensation-security which may already be afforded those with alternative excess medical protection.

Consumers can expect to save up to a total of $40 on the average PIP rate of $135, depending on which medical coverage options they select.

A third option which Merin strongly advised consumers to consider is chosing a higher deductible on the physical damage portion of the policy, once again resulting in a savings on the premium

Merin explained that consumers can save "well over $100 on average" by raising the traditional deductible for physical damage from $200 and $50 for comprehensive coverage (fire, theft and vandalism protection) to $500 in either case.

"Most car owners don't file small claims, such as fender benders or small dents with their insurance company out of fear that their rates will go up and yet still end up paying the higher premium year after year to get the low deductible," according to Merin. 'What you're doing is buying extra coverage that you won't really use. So why take the low deductible when you can save a good portion on your physical damage premium?

One of the primary changes in the new auto insurance laws, according to Merin, is that policy holders with a good driving record will no longer be penalized by having to assume a share of the costs of providing coverage for "bad drivers.

Whereas in the past, individuals with a good driving record were forced to pay an average of $70 per year to help subsidize insurance coverage for individuals with frequent or serious driving infractions, the new laws place the financial responsibility solely on those with poor driving records.

Drivers with six points of their license, or who've been convicted for speeding, reckless or drunken driving, will now be hit with a surcharge of up to $1,000 a year for three years on their insurance policies. This amount must be paid in addition to the cost of the premium.

In the past, Merin explained, the inavailability of auto insurance on the open market forced many good drivers who could not obtain coverage elsewhere to be grouped into the insurers' Assigned Risk Plan (ARP). The cost of a premium under the ARP charged good drivers at a rate comparable to that of bad drivers.

"The old system was ridiculous." Merin said. "Since nobody could get insurance on the open market in New Jersey, insurers simply stuck new policy applicants into the ARP. We found that out of 1.44 million drivers in. the ARP-which is supposed to be the pool for bad drivers-some 1.2 million actually had good driving records."

Trenton meeting set next week as new solid waste crisis looms

Union County legislators are scheduled to meet with Gov. Thomas Kean and state Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) officials early next week in an attempt to stave off the imminent shutdown of the Middlesex County landfill used by most of the county's municipalities - the second garbage crisis in the area in recent months.

The threatened closing comes on the heels of the shutdown of the Hackensack Meadowlands landfill site used by Union Township, Springfield and Essex County municipalities. That closing left those communities with uncollected garbage standing on their streets for a day until another, more distant, site at the meadowlands was opened.

Assemblyman Edward Gill said he hopes the governor and the DEP will agree to a temporary extension for the Industrial Land Reclaiming (ILR) landfill in Edison, which is now scheduled to close on June 23.

Solid waste from most county municipalities - including Roselle, Roselle Park, Mountainside and Kenilworth - is trucked there, Joe Kazar, the county's solid waste coorindator, noted.

If the extension is denied, they will be forced to send their garbage to Ocean County - a round trip of an additional 60 miles that could result in doubling the present transportation costs, Kazar said.

The situation could be complicated by a strike, according to Edward M. Cornell Jr., executive director of the Waste Management Association (WMA). He told a packed house at a special meeting of the Board of Freeholders last week that WMA members had not reached a contract agreement with Teamsters Local 945, whose current pact expires June 30.

There is another immediate problem posed by the prospect of having to ship solid wastes the extra miles to Ocean County, Gill said: "They don't have the trucks to haul the stuff" that distance.

As a result, the county has no option but to go "hat in hand" to the governor and DEP to ask for a grace period on the ILR closing.

The extension would give the county time to begin putting a solid waste management plan of its own into effect, Gill said, noting that the authorities have long known they would have to take such action.

But Mayor Livio Mancino of Kenilworth, one of a large contingent of officials at the freeholders meeting last week, complained that the notice of plans for the ILR closing was insufficient.

Garland Boothe, a Westfield coun-

that "on the short-term basis, it is impractical, exorbitantly expensive and unrealistic to atempt to change overnight a half-century practice of taking solid waste into Middlesex County." He blamed the DEP for "inaction" on an expansion request that would permit the ILR landfill to remain open.

As an alternative for the long run, negotiations are under way for a Rahway location for a resource recovery plant, Kazar pointed out. The site is on Route 1, bounded by the Rahway River, just east of Lawrence Street. "Part of the reason we selected this site is its location on a major highway," he said.

County officials hope to acquire the land and select a private company to build and run the plant by the end of the year, according to Kazar. The target date for putting resource recovery into operation would then be 1988.

Through "mass burning," the plant would generate steam to produce electricity, which would be sold to Public Service Electric and Gas Co.

Municipalities await rebates on recycling

All but five of Union County's 21 municipalities have applied to the state for recycling rebates for 1983.

The exceptions are Springfield, Mountainside, Clark, Winfield and Rahway, which have no current recycling programs.

The 16 other communities are awaiting state validation of their applications for the rebates, which are paid out of a fund built up from a landfill surcharge of 12 cents per cubic yard, according to Joan Buhrendorf, the county's recycling coordinator.

All municipalities must pay this surcharge, she explained. They can apply for rebates not only for materials collected by the town itself but also for those collected by private businesses and civic organizations, she pointed

In Union County, recycling programs vary from town to town.

Three municipalities have mandatory source separation: Linden and Kenilworth, which require residents to separate newspapers from other materials put out for the garbage collector, and Roselle Park, which requires glass to be separated from other garbage.

Some communities have recycling

Source separation - separating out glass, aluminum and other recyclable materials before the garbage is collected from the home or business is "consistent" with the county's solid waste management plan, Kazar said.

However, the plant would be equipped to handle all types of wastes from throughout the county, even if there were no source separation.

Union and Springfield, which now send ship their garbage to the meadowlands, will be able to use the plant if they so choose, Gill said. He predicted that, by the time it is built, it will be the most economical option.

State Senator Raymond Lesniak, speaking at the freeholders' meeting last week, said a goal of 25 percent has been set for recycling municipal wastes. This, however, does not meet today's needs, he said.

The governor has proposed raising $25 million a year by taxes to meet new needs, Lesniak said. But the state senator suggested, instead, taking $200 million from surplus and placing it in a special solid waste disposal fund.

groups who collect recyclable

materials; still others have other groups that conduct ecology projects. A wide variety of materials comes under the rebate program, from newspapers to used motor oil. Even food renderings (fat cut off from meats) from supermarkets and restaurants can be counted, Buhrendorf said. Some materials included in the rebate applications are even more unexpected, she added; for example, Union Township is applying for credit for asphalt used in road work done by the state Department of Transportation.

Rebates are paid at a rate of $8.08 per ton in the first year that a municipality participates. After that, the formula changes, with the community required to show an increasing tonnage each year in order to remain eligible, she said.

One of the five communities which did not apply this year, Springfield, did earn a rebate in 1983 for recycling done in 1982, Buhrendorf said.

She reported that the rebates paid out by the state to Union County municipalities last year on the basis of 1982 tonnage included:

Union, $19,536.74; Linden, $1,194.85;

Q. Can some types of food cause decay?

A. Sugar contained in some foods is a primary cause of tooth decay, but the combination of sugar and plaque is deadly. Plaque plus sugar equals acid which eats away at tooth enamel. The first twenty minutes after eating surgary food is when the greatest damage occurs, and the longer the sugar remains in the mouth the more likely decay. Some of the worst offenders are candy, cookies, ice cream, jams, and soft drinks. Good substitutes are, cheese, nuts, sunflower seeds, and fruit juices.

Trenton meeting set next week as new solid waste crisis looms

Union County legislators are scheduled to meet with Gov. Thomas Kean and state Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) officials early next week in an attempt to stave off the imminent shutdown of the Middlesex County landfill used by most of the county's municipalities - the second garbage crisis in the area in recent months.

The threatened closing comes on the heels of the shutdown of the Hackensack Meadowlands landfill site used by Union Township, Springfield and Essex County municipalities. That closing left those communities with uncollected garbage standing on their streets for a day until another, more distant, site at the meadowlands was opened.

Assemblyman Edward Gill said he hopes the governor and the DEP will agree to a temporary extension for the Industrial Land Reclaiming (ILR) landfill in Edison, which is now scheduled to close on June 23.

Solid waste from most county municipalities - including Roselle, Roselle Park, Mountainside and Kenilworth — is trucked there, Joe Kazar, the county's solid waste coorindator, noted.

If the extension is denied, they will be forced to send their garbage to Ocean County - a round trip of an additional 60 miles that could result in doubling the present transportation costs, Kazar said.

The situation could be complicated by a strike, according to Edward M. Cornell Jr., executive director of the Waste Management Association (WMA). He told a packed house at a special meeting of the Board of Freeholders last week that WMA members had not reached a contract agreement with Teamsters Local 945, whose current pact expires June 30.

There is another immediate problem posed by the prospect of having to ship solid wastes the extra miles to Ocean County, Gill said: "They don't have the trucks to haul the stuff" that distance.

As a result, the county has no option but to go "hat in hand" to the governor and DEP to ask for a grace period on the ILR closing.

The extension would give the county time to begin putting a solid waste management plan of its own into effect, Gill said, noting that the autherities have long known they would have to take such action.

But Mayor Livio Mancino of Kenilworth, one of a large contingent of officials at the freeholders meeting last week, complained that the notice of plans for the ILR closing was insufficient

that "on the short-term basis, it is impractical, exorbitantly expensive and unrealistic to atempt to change overnight a half-century practice of taking solid waste into Middlesex County." He blamed the DEP for "inaction" on an expansion request that would permit the ILR landfill to remain open.

As an alternative for the long run, negotiations are under way for a Rahway location for a resource recovery plant, Kazar pointed out. The site is on Route 1, bounded by the Rahway River, just east of Lawrence Street. "Part of the reason we selected this site is its location on a major highway," he said.

County officials hope to acquire the land and select a private company to build and run the plant by the end of the year, according to Kazar. The target date for putting resource recovery into operation would then be 1988.

Through "mass burning," the plant would generate steam to produce electricity, which would be sold to Public Service Electric and Gas Co.

Source separation - separating out glass, aluminum and other recyclable materials before the garbage is collected from the home or business is "consistent" with the county's solid waste management plan, Kazar said.

However, the plant would be equipped to handle all types of wastes from throughout the county, even if there were no source separation.

Union and Springfield, which now send ship their garbage to the meadowlands, will be able to use the plant if they so choose, Gill said. He predicted that, by the time it is built, it will be the most economical option.

State Senator Raymond Lesniak, speaking at the freeholders' meeting last week, said a goal of 25 percent has been set for recycling municipal wastes. This, however, does not meet today's needs, he said.

The governor has proposed raising $25 million a year by taxes to meet new needs, Lesniak said. But the state senator suggested, instead, taking $200 million from surplus and placing it in a special solid waste disposal fund.

Municipalities await rebates on recycling

All but five of Union County's 21 municipalities have applied to the state for recycling rebates for 1983.

The exceptions are Springfield, Mountainside, Clark, Winfield and Rahway, which have no current recycling programs.

The 16 other communities are awaiting state validation of their applications for the rebates, which are paid out of a fund built up from a landfill surcharge of 12 cents per cubic yard, according to Joan Buhrendorf, the county's recycling coordinator.

All municipalities must pay this surcharge, she explained. They can apply for rebates not only for materials collected by the town itself but also for those collected by private businesses and civic organizations, she pointed out

In Union County, recycling programs vary from town to town.

Three municipalities have mandatory source separation: Linden and Kenilworth, which require residents to separate newspapers from other materials put out for the garbage collector, and Roselle Park, which requires glass to be separated from other garbage.

Some communities have recycling drop-off centers that are open several times a month; others have Boy Scout groups who collect recyclable materials; still others have other groups that conduct ecology projects.

A wide variety of materials comes under the rebate program, from newspapers to used motor oil. Even food renderings (fat cut off from meats) from supermarkets and restaurants can be counted, Buhrendorf said. Some materials included in the rebate applications are even more unexpected, she added; for example, Union Township is applying for credit for asphalt used in road work done by the state Department of Transportation.

Rebates are paid at a rate of $8.08 per ton in the first year that a municipality participates. After that, the formula changes, with the community required to show an increasing tonnage each year in order to remain eligible, she said

One of the five communities which did not apply this year, Springfield, did earn a rebate in 1983 for recycling done in 1982, Buhrendorf said.

She reported that the rebates paid out by the state to Union County municipalities last year on the basis of 1982 tonnage included :

Union, $19,536.74; Linden, $1,194.85; Roselle Park, $4,918.59; Springfield, $5,294.07, and Kenilworth, $1,447.57.

Dayton singers honored, year-end concert tonight The chorale members are Steve

The Jonathan Dayton Regional High School Chorale was the recipient of a bronze medal for its performance at the recent Montreal Music Festival in Montreal, Canada. The festival is one of many competitions conducted under the auspices of the International Musical Festivals organization, whose purpose is to encourage and support high performance standards by nonprofessional musical groups.

In its performance, the Dayton Chorale, under the direction of Brenda Kay, performed "Begone Dull Care" by Gordon Jacobs, Alleluia from Bach's "Motet VI" and Scarletti's "Exultate Deo" for a panel of highly qualified judges. Other groups participating in Montreal included students from Long Island, New York, Massachusetts, and Connecticut.

Drivers told of safety steps by St. James

With the advent of warmer weather, more students are walking to and from school. Anticipating this extra pedestrian activity, St. James School has made an effort to make the area around the school safe for walkers and drivers alike.

-Traffic cones are placed across two of the three driveways during recess times. Drivers with school/church business may gain access to the buildings by using the third driveway on the Principal's Office side of the school.

Parents are urged to use entrance and exit lanes as well as to observe speed zone and drop-off/pick-up areas of the lot.

NAACP plans 'diamond' fete

The Tri-City Branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) will hold a "Diamond Jubilee Freedom Fund Banquet'' June 17, at 5 p.m., at the Town and Campus Banquet Center, 1040 Morris Ave., Union.

Joe L. Clark, the principal of the Eastside High School, Paterson, will be the guest speaker.

Tickets, which are $25 each, may be obtained by calling 688-5643 or 379-5189.

Two quit posts on zoning unit

SPRINGFIELD-Resignations of two Zoning Board of Adjustment members were recently received by the Springfield Towhship Committee.

Robert Haarsgaard, a regular member of the board, resigned after more than one year's service. Donald Halbsgut, an alternate member who was appointed the first of this year, also resigned.

Mayor Philip Feintuch said the replacements for the two members will be announced at the next township committee meeting Tuesday.

SPRINGFIELD-Students from the James Caldwell School presented their annual Spring Concert on May 22 in the school gym, with the celebrated theme of "Miss Liberty."

Prior to the concert, the Caldwell PTA held a short business meeting at which officers for the 1984-85 school year were elected. Marilyn DeTone will serve as president, Doreen Franko,

Burglar hits 'watchless' neighborhood

SPRINGFIELD-A Benjamin Drive residence was reported burglarized sometime between Saturday night and Sunday, the third of such home burglaries reported in the last two weeks, according to Springfield police reports.

Police said access was gained to the house through a rear, sliding door. The other burglarized homes, located on Lvons Place and Milltown Road, were also broken into through the rear of the house

Two attempted burglaries, on Sycamore Terrace and Short Hills Avenue, were also reported in the twoweek period.

Patrolman George Hildner of the Springfield Crime Prevention Unit said the homes the burglars hit, were not "Crime Watch" areas.

Hildner said that no homeowners from Benjamin Drive, a fairly new development in town, had contacted him, until now, to establish a crime watch patrol.

He recommends that all blocks establish such a patrol where a crime watch sign could be posted. The sign displays an eye, which symbolizes to prospective intruders that residents 'keep an eye'' on neighboring homes. He also suggests that residents contact him for a "home security check." Hildner appraises the homes

SUGAR AND PLAQUE STRIKE BACK

Q. Can some types of food cause decay?

A. Sugar contained in some foods is a primary cause of tooth decay, but the combination of sugar and plaque is deadly. Plaque plus sugar equals acid which eats away at tooth enamel. The first twenty minutes after eating surgary food is when the greatest damage occurs, and the longer the sugar remains in the mouth the more likely decay. Some of the worst offenders are candy. cookies, ice cream, jams, and soft drinks. Good substitutes are, cheese, nuts, sunflower seeds. and fruit juices.

Regional BOE okays summer school staff

By VICKI VREELAND KENILWORTH—With the end of the school year just around the corner, the Regional Board of Education approved summer teaching personnel, vocational coordinators and guidance counselors at Tuesday night's board meeting in the David Brearley Regional High School, Kenilworth.

The summer school program will run from July 2 to August 3. Summer classes will be offered at the David Brearley High School only, with the exception of Driver Education classes, which will be available at all four regional schools.

The board also moved to employ students as clerical or custodial assistants during the summer months at a rate of $3.35 per hour.

Also approved for the 1984-85 school year were student teachers, substitute teachers, and extracurricular activity assignments for teachers.

On recommendation from Superintendent Dr. Donald Merachnik, the board voted to submit a proposal for funding of a $71,230 grant to the New Jersey State Department of Education for a project entitled "Transistional Work Experience for Classified High School Students."

The project, developed by Dr. Frank Kenny, dinector of pupil personnel services, would permit the establishment of an in-school business, run by special education students, to subcontract projects from local industry.

Designed to run for three years, the project would employ 25 of the students currently enrolled in two special education programs at the Arthur L. Johnson Regional High School. If the program is successful, it will be opened to other district students in the second and third years.

The $71,230 grant, if received, will fund the first year of the program. The board anticipates that additional requests for funding will be made for the remaining two years.

The David Brearely Marching Band will participate in the New Jersey State Elks Parade this weekend in Wildwood. The band will represent the high school and the Union Elks Lodge //1583.

The David Brearley choral group recently returned from the Bermuda Music Festival where they received both silver and bronze medals for their perfomances.

Benjamin Jones, assistant principal at the Governor Livingston Regional High School, gave a presentation on the capabilities of the regional district's cable television studio.

Presently, the district has one studio which is housed in Governor Livingston. A curriculum plan to utilize the equipment for students has been developed, and is expected to come before the board for approval this month.

Jones said that workshops have been conducted in three of the high schools to introduce interested students and teachers to the cable studio. A workshop will soon be conducted in the Jonathan Dayton Regional High School. According to Jones, the Livingston studio includes an uplink, in addition to being hooked up to Suburban Cablevision. An uplink allows a signal to be directed out, as well as receiving the cable.

The Livingston station will also broadcast to the townships of Springfield, Mountainside and Berkeley Heights.

Jones suggested that the district should purchase two additional studios. The cost of the portable studio equipment in Governor Livingston was approximately $28,000, according to Jones. It was estimated that over a three-year period, the cost of additional studios would run about $300,000.

The board requested Jones to submit a report on the approximate costs.

Jones said the school's cable station is representative of our current videooriented society. "It is one more tangible skill the students could pick up while in high school," he said.

Riffer teaching guitar program

MOUNTAINSIDE—William Riffer of Mountainside will teach a summer guitar program for students enrolled in junior high school through college beginning Friday at Drew University, Madis'on.

Two, four-week sessions are scheduled for June 1-29 and July 1-29, with classes meeting twice weekly on the 186-acre Drew campus. Instruction will emphasize several styles of music for guitar, with special attention on music fundamentals and proper technique. Special classes are available in improvisation.

Riffel, a l'ecturer in music, holds a bachelor's degree in philosophy and English from Montclair State (1980) and a master's degree in guitar performance from Rutgers University (1982). He has studied at the Manhattan School of Music.

Registration is now underway. For more information call Riffel at (201) 233-8659 or (201)233-4781

Mayor's home damaged in incidents of vandalism

KENILWORTH—Three incidences of vandalism were reported at Mayor Livio Mancino's home on North 24th Street on both Saturday and Monday nights, police said.

Mayor Mancino told police he heard a disturbance on his lawn shortly after midnight Saturday. Upon investigating, he found a front, 30 x 14 in. window had been broken and a pile of debris was left on his lawn.

According to police reports, the mayor felt that the vandalism was related to Tuesday's primary election, and asked police for special patrols of his home.

Sometime after midnight Monday, a car drove over Mancino's lawn. A police officer discovered the tire tracks about 6:30 a.m. Tuesday morning. Police also discovered tire tracks on the lawn of Borough Hall approximately 3 a.m. Tuesday.

A Middlesex man was arrested about 9 p.m. Friday night after being involved in an argument at a Lincoln Drive residence. Paul Weaver, 35, was charged with two counts of disorderly conduct, three counts of simple assault, including assualt on a police officer, obstructing justice, and resisting arrest.

Judge Aldan Markson set Weaver's bail at $2,000.

Vandalism/was also reported at the Commonwealth Department Store, Boulevard, when a large firecracker was thrown into the entranceway of the store, shattering surrounding glass windows. The firecracker was set off about 7 p.m. Sunday.

A gun shot was reported also the Zanzibar Tavern, South 31st Street, about 3:30 a.m. Sunday. The tavern owner told police he thought the noise was a firecracker, but the following morning discovered a whole in the wall. Police also removed a bullet shell.

The night before, two Cranford men had been assualted in the parking lot of the tavern, however, police said the men refused to sign complaints.

A Faitoute Avenue resident discovered a glass vile and shattered glass on the side of her pool, about 6:30 p.m Sunday. The resident told police that she believed chemicals had been poured into the pool. Police contacted the health inspector to take samples of the water, but the results are not yet known.

Schering-Plough names new pharmacy director

KENILWORTH-Jack Robbins, Ph.D., has been appointed Director of Pharmacy Affairs, Schering Laboratories, Schering-Plough Corp., Kenilworth.

In his new position, Robbins will be responsible for Schering Laboratories' wide-ranging educational and professional service programs dedicated to the advancement of pharmacy. These activities include support for Schering pharmacy seminars, pharmacy student summer internship and pharmacy faculty visitation programs, and the annual Schering Report on various aspects of the practice of pharmacy

"Robbins' appointment underscores Schering's tradition of commitment to the advancement of the profession of pharmacy," said Frank DiLascia, vicepresident - industry affairs and institutional sales. "With his experience and education," he added, "Robbins is eminently qualified to strengthen and expand Schering's pharmacy affairs program."

In announcing the appointment, DiLascia noted that Robbins played a major role in the development of the Schering Report, which each year surveys some new aspect of pharmacy and its relationship with consumers and other health care professions. "As director of pharmacy affairs," DiLascia continued, "Robbins will help to further familiarize pharmacists with Schering's new Ask Your Pharmacist public service program, which is designed to encourage consumers to direct their questions on medications to their pharmacists."

Time to separate

When New York was in the throes of one of its garbage collection strikes, some wag suggested that city folks simply gift wrap their garbage and put it on the back seats of their cars; someone would be sure to steal it.

Here in Union County, it's not a strike that is causing our problem with solid waste. It's finding a safe, affordable long-term means for disposing of it. Despite the worries that so many have about the crime rate, there aren't enough thieves around to steal all those huge amounts of garbage that we accumulate every day.

Resource recovery plants that turn garbage into energy will probably have to be the eventual solution. Expensive as they are, they still seem to be the most practical answer in the long run.

But that solution is years away. In the meantime, there is an initial step that we can take: source separation.

That means, simply, separating recyclable materials such as newspapers and glass from other items at the source — the home or the business place — before putting out the garbage cans for collection.

Sorting the garbage may be something of a nuisance. It is, however, a nuisance that's becoming more and more necessary as nearby landfills reach capacity and costs of trucking solid wastes soar.

To encourage source separation at the local level, the state is offering municipalities rebates for recycling materials collected within their boundaries. For the most part, they amount to just a few thousand dollars. But even the smallest rebate is bound to ease the load on the local taxpayer somewhat.

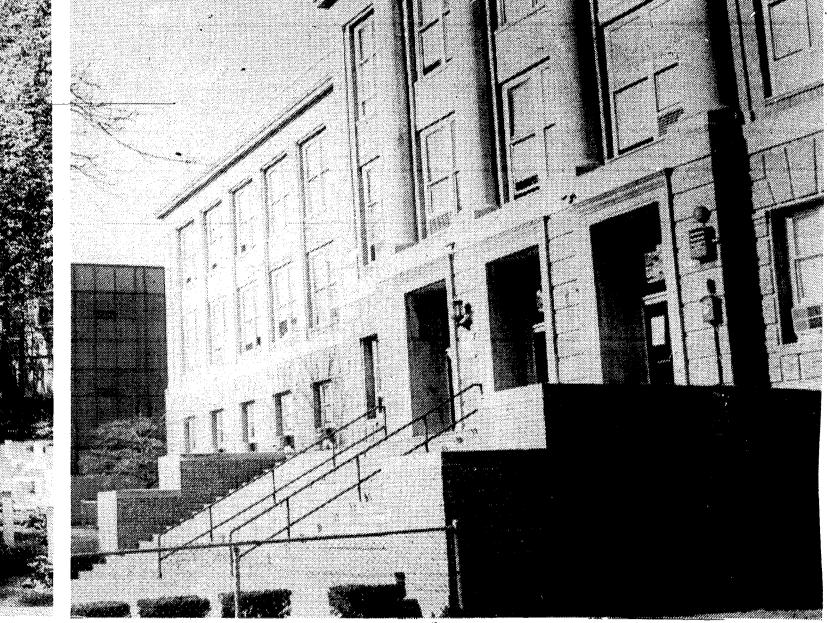

There is another cost factor that must be considered: the cost to future generations as natural resources dwindle and the little vacant land that's left is turned into mountains of garbage that pollute our soil and water supply.

Many communities already have municipallysponsored or municipally-supported projects that include drop-off points for recyclable materials and collections conducted by private clubs and organizations.

What do you want to go to one of those things for?" grunted my friend, Judy. "Everyone just sits around, looks over everybody else, finds out who has but they never remember my name. My high school years had been happy ones but spent on the fringe of events, not really as a member of that special popular group.

Although it was early when we arrived at the restaurant, a huge swirl of celebrants were already milling in the foyer. There were two women on the reception committee who greeted me. They had been class leaders, cheerleading captains and honor students. But time had diminished the sparkle in their eyes and eyen carefully

The most enjoyable conversations were with my "buddies." I was always the one to whom they came for advice when they needed a date; when they wanted to know how to act with a girl; when they wanted to patch up a romance. If they only knew how often I ached for them to ask me for a date instead of aiding them in their search for a cute girl. What a delight to share the same easy camaraderie with them again. Eddie - I remember the gaudy rhinestone earrings and enameled pins snitched from his mother's jewelry box he brought me when he stopped to call on our way to school all during fourth grade. As a child, his eyes were hard, a reflection of the disruptive, unloving home life he endured. It upset me to see the same hardness was still there. But, as he explained with insight, he had put most obstacles in his own way and had learned to barrel through or climb over them. Now a successful businessman with a family, he was the one person I most enjoyed meeting again. Our long talk reassured me that he had come to terms with himself and life and the hardness in his eyes still belied the gentleness underneath as it always had.

Dinner was finished and evening started to drag. After the usual "How you doing? How many kids? Where are you living? Doesn't everyone look great" - unless there were special memories to bind you - that was the end of the conversation and it was time to move on.

It is time for the other communities in the county to follow suit. Simply mandating source separation, however, will not be enough. It will take a continuing effort to make it work - effort by municipal officials and civic-minded organizations to educate the people, and to keep reminding them, that recycling is wise, both economically and ecologically.

I hadn't thought of it that way --- only as a chance to see how far we had traveled over the years. Sure, it could be scary to realize how much time had passed, but it was a perfect chance to stop and reassess what we had done with our lives. I'm sure to many tonight, my husband's job in sales, my secretarial postion and our middle-income, routine life in the suburbs seems boring and stifling.

But I know over the years my family has worked hard and grown together into a solid, loving unit - not an easy accomplishment in today's society. The love my husband and I have for each other grows stronger each year: we are best friends.

With a smile, I roll over to sleep peacefully, satisfied that I'm a "successful' graduate.

Computers needed

Heard it through the grapevine, and we know how strong that is! Microcomputers for business education will not be allowed by Mr. Joseph Malt, principal of David Brearley High School in Kenilworth, because supposedly, there is no space, no available room. Now really! Anne Romano, principal of Dayton in Springfield, has also been known to say that she will not allow the microcomputers at her school either. She is said to have stated she needs more time to study the matter. Thus, only two schools in the Regional district will have the microcomputers, and these are Arthur Johnson in Clark and Governor Livingston in Berkeley Hieghts.

Again, students in Kenilworth (Mountainside and Springfield) will be slighted, because administrators lack initiative to do their job. It might require a little thought and effort to figure out where they should be put. In this modern age, when typing classes are already filled for the coming fall term at Brearley, microcomputers would serve as a modern way for students to learn keyboard and advance into the future. Apparently, adminstrators at both schools are still living in the past.

Hard decisions needed in solid waste crisis By GOV. TOM KEAN

New Jersey report

I am sure it must sometimes seem that the news coming out of Trenton is an almost unbroken stream of warnings about crises and catastrophes about to befall us. There is danger in this, since when disaster is forestalled there is a tendency to suspect the politicians of crying wolf.

any number of areas, particularly the environment, New Jersey's leadership has, for years, had its head in the sand. It is only in the past two years that we have finally begun serious and meaningful work on cleaning up the cankers of toxic waste dumps that blot our landscape an threaten our water supplies. In this area the progress has been impressive. New Jersey leads the nation in toxic waste clean-up. With the help of the federal Superfund and our own Hazardous Waste Spill Fund, we are making substantial progress.

There is another area, however, where past neglect is not simply threatening to overtake us, it is upon us today, and in the next few years will _affect every single resident of our state in the most direct way: the pocketbook.

That problem can be described in a single, ugly, word: garbage.

We Americans produce garbage at an alarming rate. But our willingness to produce it has not been matched by our willingness to do what is necessary to dispose of it.

In New Jersey we produce about 10 million tons per year. That's about 1.3 tons for every man, woman and child in the state! We are forced by United. States Supreme Court mandate to accept another two million tons each year from haulers in New York and Pennsylvania.

For the past 10 years New Jersey's leadership has lacked the will to face up to this crisis and the hard decisions needed to come to grips with it And now, the crisis warned of for 10 years is here: We are running out of landfill space.

New Jersey has about 120 landfills, but about 20 of them accommodate 90 percent of our garbage. Many of the largest landfills are approaching, or have reached their capacity. This year, it is likely that landfill closings will force more than 1,000 garbage trucks per day to seek new places to empty their loads.

The immediate negative impact of such action is two-fold: increased costs are generated by forcing haulers to find new, more distant, landfill destinations; and those jurisdictions with remaining landfill space will have that space used up more quickly as they are required to accept more garbage from outside their own district.

The impact of all this, of course, eventually falls on the shoulders of the individual home owner or renter. Regardless of whether garbage is hauled by a municipality or a private carrier, the extra costs associated with traveling further with each load and the increased dumping fees that are likely to be found at the new landfill destinations inevitably come directly back to the individual family, either through increased taxes to pay for municipal hauling, or increased fees charged by private carriers.

Beyond this immediate problem lies the worse, and inevitable one: What happens when there is no landfill space left at all?

New landfills are extremely difficult to site. No one wants them in their town or their county. And, beyond this, the threat of groundwater contamination forecloses many other possible sites.

To ignore this problem any longer will only create bigger and bigger problems for all involved. Even now, the cost of solving this problem will be enormous. To ignore it further will make that cost impossible to bear. It is clear that we must not only find new ways to dispose of our garbage, but that we must find ways to cut down on the volume to be disposed of.

To address this crisis, my administration has introduced legislation to create a new set of incentives for all those involved in the garbage disposal field to work actively to tackle this problem.

Make no mistake. There is no cheap solution to this dilemma. But I believe the proposals I will outline here will best serve the long term interest of every resident of this state. It is the first serious attack to be made on the problem in 10 years.

If we are to reduce the volume of garbage we produce, it is clear that we must move into the field of resource recovery. The recovery process, recycling, if you will, has had difficulty, gaining wide acceptance in the past because the return was too small to justify the very substantial investment needed to get into the field.

But now that reduction in the volume of garbage or be disposed of will produce its own financial reward, I believe resource recovery can work.

Resource recovery dumping, or tipping fees, tend to be higher than landfill fees, particularly in the early vears of operation, because of the high start-up cost of recovery operations.

To deal with this problem the legislation now under consideration in the General Assembly under the sponsorship of Assemblyman Harry A. McEnroe (D-Essex) would create a Resource Recovery Investment Tax to be levied on the owner or operation of every landfill. The tax would start at $1 a ton and increase gradually to as high as $10, depending on the action by the solid waste district in which the landfill is located.

There are 22 solid waste management districts in New Jersey, and each would receive the revenues realized from this tax in their district. The money would go into a Resource Recovery Investment Fund, and could be used by the district to finance the construction or operation of a resource recovery program.

Because some districts with existing landfill space must accept garbage from outside their boundaries, they will be forced to use up their landfills more quickly than if disposal were limited to their district. To address this inequity, the bill would levy an additional bonus surcharge of 75 cents per ton on out-ofdistrict waste, with that money going into the Resource Recovery Investment Fund of the receiving district.

Some districts have failed to meet their obligations for disposing of their own waste, preferring to send their garbage into other counties rather than create their own facilities or enter into inter-district agreements.

Under the terms of this bill, districts that fail to make a good faith effort to meet their obligations would be charged an additional surcharge of up to $1.50 a ton, with that money going to the district that is forced to accept the extra garbage. The bill would also allow the Department of Environmental Protection to assume administration of the district's Resource Recovery Fund and withhold other monies that would normally go to the district.

Together with other changes in existing solid waste laws, this bill should make it attractive for every county to begin addressing, seriously, the problems of dealing with our growing volume of solid waste.

Certainly, the program will increase costs for every person who puts a garbage can out at the curb. But to allow the problem to slip further away from us would only mean far, far greater costs in the very near future.

Yet, the warnings must be issued. In

Board OKs teacher assignments

By VICKI VREELAND

SPRINGFIELD-The Springfield Board of Education approved teacher assignments for the 1984-85 school year at a meeting held May 30, after dissenting discussion, from both the board and the public, on the hiring of a Reading-Language Arts coordinator.

Parents voiced concern over the projected class sizes in the two James Caldwell School kindergartens and the second grade in Sandmeier School. The kindergarten classes in the Caldwell School are projected at 19 and 20 students. The second grade in Sandmeier School will be divided into two classes of 20 and 21 students each.

Superintendent Dr. Fred Baruchin said that although the class sizes may be larger than past years, in comparison with other district's, they are still smaller.

The administrative counsel had recommended to the board the hiring of a Reading-Language Arts Coordinator to assume supervision of the district's reading program in grades K through four.

George Gomes, board member, stated, "We do not need a coordinator of reading for a K to four district. State law does not require a coordinator until the children are in grade three."

Gomes, and fellow minority members, Louis Monaco and Joseph Pepe, contended that the coordinator position would be better used as a classroom teacher in one of the Caldwell kindergarten or the Sandmeier secondgrade classes.

Library column

Monaco said the district, "had enough administrators.'

According to Baruchin, language arts, "is an area of major emphasis in the district, the state and the country." Baruchin said this year, a teacher volunteered to serve as coordinator, and, "there was a more coordinated emphasis on composition. We are looking forward to developing the whole Language Arts program."

The board approved the 1984-85 teaching assignments with the inclusion of the Language Arts Coordinator, in a 5-3 vote. The original motion was amended to establish that the coordinator would offer support service to classroom teachers three days a week, and serve as coordinator. for two.

Board President Barbara Adler commented, "We want to use the experts we have on staff for daily contact with the children.'

Baruchin said that the teaching assignments are, "as close to being final as they can come," but added that there are always last minute changes due to children moving in and out of the district and teachers who resign.

In other business, a motion introduced by Board Member Lee Eisen to dismiss certain pending litigation in Superior Court was approved 5-4.

Eisen's motion authorized Warren Kaps, board attorney, to take action to dismiss the counter cross-claims filed by the former board against board members Barbara Adler, Ken Faigenbaum, and Stuart Applebaum. The claims, filed in Superior Court, charged the former minority members with "malicious abuse of process," and violation of board policy. They were filed after the named board members initiated litigation against the board for unlawful actions in the sale of the Edward Walton School.

The motion also called for former board members Eileen Dahmen and Elizabeth Simpson-Fritzen to be formally removed from the litigation.

Kaps said that he found the charges against the board members to be "without merit." He added that the state Supreme Court had previously ruled that there is no such claim as "malicious abuse of process."

On the motion to dismiss the claims, Monaco voted no, Gomes abstained because he said the board attorney, Warren Kaps, had already begun to initiate the motion in court. Pietro Petino did not vote because he wanted to know who wrote the motion and questioned Kaps's hourly fee. Pepe said he would not cast his vote until Petino's questions were answered.

The bylaws regulating board meetings state that a board member, at the time of a vote, must immediately cast his vote, and then may qualify it with a statement.

Eisen stated that he was the maker of the motion, however, he was assisted by Kaps.

In response to Gomes's charge that the board attorney had already instituted the motion, Adler said that Kaps's action was necessary because the board did not meet as planned the wook boforo

A special meeting for the discussion of legal matters was scheduled May 22. According to Adler, only four members attended, which did not constitute a quorum, and the meeting had to be cancelled. In attendance were Dr. Richard Luciani, Lee Eisen, Ken Faigenbaum, and Adler. She also said that other board members indicated to her that they did not attend the meeting intentionally Kaps, whose hourly fee has not been approved by the board yet, explained the board would be billed at varying rates, depending on who in his firm actually performed the legal service.

Kaps said the charge for work done by a paralegal is $35 per hour, junior attorneys, $75 to $120 per hour, and his fee per hour is $150. Adler said the board will be approving the fees, "as soon as possible.'

In other business, the board awarded an electrical bid for a lighting project in the Florence Gaudineer School to the Edison Contracting Company, Inc., Edison, for $61,448.

Six bids received for the reroofing of the Gaudineer School were rejected. Lee Eisen, chairman of the Buildings and Grounds Committee, said the committee, "would like to see them come in lower.'

The board also approved a motion to petition the state for permission to use six rooms which were termed "substandard" in a state monitoring team visit. The rooms have been used in the district for a number of years for small classes.

Complaints dismissed

Complaints against individual members of the Springfield Board of Education, filed by the former board majority, were dismissed in Superior Court Friday by Judge Milton Feller

The complaints had charged board members Barbara Adler, Ken Faigenbaum, Stuart Applebaum with violation of state school board policy and "malicious abuse of process." They were filed after the board members had iniated litigation against the board for violations of bidding procedures in the contract for the sale of the Edward Walton School.

Adler was represented by Seymour Magnifiance a Jersey

City attorney, and Faigenbaum and Applebaum were represented by Yale Greenspoon of a Maplewood law firm.

Eileen Dahemn, a former board member, was also named in the suit, but has been formally removed as was Elizabeth Simpson-Fritzen.

The board must now decide by resolution whether they will continue to challenge the contract for the Walton School or agree to the purchase.

A special meeting prior to last night's conference meeting was scheduled to decide how to direct Warren Kaps, board attorney, to act in legal proceedings.

Books cover stormy weather, stormy life

BY ROSE P. SIMON The following are reviews of books currently available at the Springfield Public Library. NATURAL CALAMITIES

"The Weather is Front Page News," by Ti Sanders.

Beyond a period of a few days, it is not always possible for weather people to forecast accurately, even though technology has provided them with improved instruments. Nature, after all, is the major force with which man must contend, and it is therefore necessary to study past weather patterns so that we may be better prepared for some of nature's calamities.

A goodly number of highlights from concludes with words of warning, and the meteorological records of the past 130 years has been assembled by Sanders. He has included heat waves and cold waves, hurricanes and tornadoes, blizzards and flash floods ---many of them disastrous old-fashioned winters (1855-1856-1857) which brought tremendous snowfalls, treacherous blizzards, and brutally cold weather all along the Eastern seaboard, the coldest of the 19th century. The waters between Nantucket and Cape Cod were sealed off solidly for a month. Yet more storms were to come. These were "two phenomenal winters." Sanders reports on other historic winter events, and lists winter storm safety rules.

The author covers tornadoes (most prevalent in April, May, June) which are virtually impossible to predict, but lives can be saved if some safety tips are followed. He describes a disastrous Massachusetts flood (1874), the Johnstown flood (1889), and the great Mississippi flood of 1927. Droughts and heat waves have had their impact on our country. For these also, safety rules are suggested. Hurricanes, gales, and memorable ship disasters conclude this unusual history of our weather. This book is liberally illustrated.

GENIUS IN HIS TIME ''William Saroyan,'' by Aram Saroyan.

Although he became an international literary celebrity in 1934 at the age of 26, William Saroyan, by the time of his death in 1981, was a reclusive, eccentric individual, unknown to most in his neighborhood as a prize-winning novelist and playwright. His son essayist, poet and author of this biography - wishes to present a true portrait of his father as a writer and as a man, influenced by his physical and psychological make-up in conjuction with his early experience. For example, before he was 3, Saroyan experienced the untimely death of his immigrant, Armenian father. This was followed by his placement in an orphanage with his three older siblings. Later, as a boy in Fresno, in a fatherless home provided by his mother, he was known to be lively, intelligent, and imaginative, Prompted by a strong desire to write, he left grammer school, learned typing and shorthhand, and embarked on his career. His characters were "seen through the eyes of a child," and his work was re-animated by "his own frozen interior - caused by the trauma of his father's death.

In 1934, after writing "The Man on the Flying Trapeze'', he became a phenomen — the literary equivalent of a movie star Up to 1943 he produced his most memorable work, including some 500 stories. Later he wrote prizewinning plays: "My Heart's In The Highlands," and "The Time of your Life." His marriage, induction into the Army during his middle years, seemed to precipitate a midlife crisis. He continued to produce novels, memoirs, etc. during his stormy marriage and divorce. He was ill-suited or family life. His addiction to gambling, narcissistic personality disorder and erratic behavior removed him from his friends and even his children. His estate was left o the William Saroyan Foundation to perpetuate his own name.

To spark interest in the equipment and the whole field of telecommunications, the Brearley teacher conducted two-day workshops at the Arthur L. A workshop will also be held at the Johnson Dayton Regional High School in Springfield, Within the four-period session, students were instructed on the capabilities and potentials of a portable video system and given "hands-on" experience shooting film.

The portable color television studio is similar to TV-3's traveling equipment, an audio-mixer and sync generator. Plays, sports events and a myriad of other school activities could be taped by interested students, the teacher noted. Television monitors, in place in the school's Instructional Media Centers, would enable broadcasting among the schools. The studio already has educational access to TV-34. The portable system is available for use by any of the four high schools as is the studio at Governor Livingston.

Governor proclaims next week as state Medical Record Week

Gov. Thomas H. Kean has proclaimed the week of June 10 to 16, as Medical Record Week in New Jersey. This represents the seventh consecutive year that the honor has been bestowed on the Medical Record Association of New Jersey (MRANJ).

A personal health history card will be given to patients at New Jersey hospitals in June. The Medical Record Association of New Jersey developed the card to commemorate its 50th anniversary. The cards will be distributed during Medical Record Week. Patients can record pertinent facts about their medical history on the wallet-sized card, such as dates of hospitalization, operations and allergies. The card is helpful when a patient moves, sees a new physician or has a medical emergency.

New code proposed at amusement park

UNION-In the wake of the Great Adventure fire that claimed eight lives, State Senator C. Louis Bassano said he will introduce legislation establishing safety and building code requirements for amusement attractions like the Haunted Castle.

Bassano, who toured the site of the fire with other members of the Senate Law, Public Safety and Defense Committee, said changes in state laws are necessary to ensure that such a tragedy is never repeated.

"So many of the laws dealing with structures like the Haunted Castle are hopelessly outmoded, dating back to the turn of the century. These laws are insufficient to guarantee that these amusements have proper equipment,' he said. "In addition, the state uniform construction code does not specifically address building requirements for these kinds of structures. As a result, there is much confusion over exactly what safety features are required in amusement attractions. This confusion must end."

The legislation Bassano is proposing would require amusement attractions to be constructed with fireproof or fire retardent materials, and have fire safety equipment such as sprinklers, smoke detectors and emergency lights.

"There is no doubt in my mind that lives could have been saved if the Haunted Castle at Great Adventure had these safety features," he said.

Bassano also announced that he will introduce legislation requiring annual inspections of all amusement attractions by the Department of Community Affairs, to make sure that they

MENTAL HEALTH PRESIDENT AND HONOREE-Dennis Smith of Springfield, right, president of the Mental Health Association of Essex County, reviews plans for "A Fair Night in June" with Angelo Cali, an active mental health volunteer who will be honored at the June 16 event in Roseland.

MHA to honor volunteer

SPRINGFIELD—The Mental Health Association of Essex County will honor Angelo R. Cali of South Orange, an active mental health volunteer, at a special event June 16, it was announced by Dennis Smith of Springfield, MHA president.

An honorary committee headed by Gov. Thomas Kean has been named for the event, "A Fair Night in June," to be held at 101 Eisenhower Parkway, Roseland. Other public figures serving on the committee are Sen. Bill Bradley, Reps. Joseph Minish and Peter Rodino, and Essex County Executive Peter Shapiro.

The 15th in a series of fund-raising events will benefit the association's program to prevent mental illness and improve the care and treatment of the mentally ill.

Smith pointed out "Behind one out of every three doctors in America is someone with some form of mental illness. Mental illness sends more peopl to hospitals than cancer, lung and heart disease combined. The event will help us particularly to expand our programs which serve the families of the mentally ill."

Cali is a member of the MHA board of directors and served as president for three years. He was a member of the Mental Health Association in New Jersey's board of directors and was president of the board of directors of the Montclair State College Develpment Fund. A graduate of Montclair State, he was recently awarded an honorary doctorate by the college. Cali also served as a member of the South Orange-Maplewood Adult School Board.

Joseph Garibaldi 3d of West Orange. MHA vice president, and Charles Filippo of Florham Park, MHA director, are co-chairmen, and Rose Cali of Montclair, coordinator. Smith said an outdoor tent will house games and carts containing an array of food. Entertainment will include mimes, jugglers and dancers.

The informal affair, will begin with cocktails at 7 p.m. and will include the gourmet buffet dinner by Inns' Caterers, Morristown, and dancing to Marty Ames Orchestra. Reservations may be made at the MHA office, 424 Main St., East Orange.

Surviving are his wife, Loretta; three brothers, Nicholas, George, and Frank.

Robert R. Cushman ordination slated in Mountainside Chapel

Robert R. Cushman of Westfield will be ordained into Christian ministry by the church board of Mountainside Gospel Chapel Sunday at 6 p.m. The ceremony, open to the public, will be followed by a reception. The ordination will be the first to be conducted at the church in its 163-year history. Founded in 1821, Mountainside Chapel was the first religious institution in Mountainside and the first Sunday School in Westfield.

The Rev. Matthew E. Garippa, pastor of Mountainside Chapel, will lead the service with the charge to the candidate. Guest speakers will include John Hoopingarner, president of the church board's executive committee. Keynote speaker will be Ronald H Rynd, Northern New Jersey Regional representative for Christian Service Brigade and professor of Christian education for academic dean at Northern Baptist School of Religion, Newark.

Cushman, who was recommended for ordination following examination on May 22 by an Ordination Council consisting of pastors of area churches, is a full-time minister of Christian education in Mountainside Chapel. His duties include the overseeing of all Christian education programs, such as junior and senior high school, college and career, youth and adult Sunday School and Boys Brigade groups,

Food donated to families by congregation

Members of Temple Sha'arey Shalom, Springfield, have been donating food to families "that are experiencing hardships," it was announced. Recently, food baskets were given to the Union County Board of Social Services, that selected the recipients from the families applying for help.

Mary Loyd of the Union County Board reported in a letter to John Schlager, who is chairman of the social action committee in Temple Sha'arey Shalom, that "the Union County Board of Social Services would like to extend its appreciation to the member of Temple Sha'arey Shalom, for a food basket that was donated. It is nice to know that people are willing to share in these troubled economic times. The food was given to two families that were victimized by fire which destroyed all of their belongings."

The temple "has continued the effort by asking for and receiving contributions in a bood basket located in the temple facilities," says Schlager.

Pastor Spinney-is one of 14 courchplanting pastors in the denomination's Church Extension Department, whose primary duty is to establish and aid in the organization and development of new churches. Its office is in Plainfield, and exisiting area Bible Fellowship churches include congregations in Irvington and Newark.

Mr. Spinney, originally from Worcester, Mass., came to the Union County area in 1983. He was licensed under the denomination last November. The pastor, who resides in Hillside, is employed as the center supervisor of the Roselle Park Skill Development Center, an adult activity center of the Union County Association for Retarded Citizens on Westfield Avenue, Roselle Park.

Pastor Spinney's goals

How often do youngsters at the age of 12 make up their minds to become rabbis and to pursue their goals to their ultimate professions?

At least one youngster realized her dream. She is Rabbi Jody Cohen-Gavarian, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cohen of Springfield. She was ordained a reformed rabbi on May 27 by Dr. Alfred Gottschalk, president of Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion, in ceremonies in Temple Emanu-El, New York City. And she was honored Friday evening in her home congregation, Temple Sha'arey Shalom, Springfield. She also is a married woman, and the mother of a 6month old son, Amitai Cohen-Gavarian. In addition, she will assume her duties as an assistant rabbi in Congregation Beth Israel in West Hartford, Conn.

"When I was 12," says Rabbi Cohen-Gavarian, ''I knew this is what I wanted 🧖 to do --- what I would do. And this was a time when there were few, if any, women rabbis. It was really something I was very much interested in.

"What influenced me tremendously was the fact that my parents had joined Temple Sha'arey Shalom. They were very active members of a young congregation. I was very influenced by that particular congregation because it had a very strong foundation in social activity, justice, equality in Jewish values and Jewish rights and rituals. It had (still has) a very strong liberal tradition. And in those days, my family was active in the temple and at home in the celebration of the holidays and the weekly Shabbot.

"I was one of the few students who enjoyed religious school and to speak and understand the language of the Jewish people," the rabbi admits. "It was so ancient and revived in modern context. Why, the language of the Bible is the language of the country of Israel. People speak to you in Hebrew, and yell at you (especially the taxi drivers) in Hebrew. It's not just a Biblical language, but a spoken language.

"We have a very rich, wealthy heritage," she continues. "You want to learn more about it. The tragic events,' she says referring to the Holocaust, "made me want to learn more about my heritage. It has prevailed that through the years, our work is not yet complete. There are so many Jews who are not yet free to practice 'Tikkon Olam' which means 'to improve the world.' This applies particularly to the Soviet and Ethiopian Jews."

Born Jody Cohen in Springfield, the young rabbi was graduated from Jonathan Dayton Regional High School in Springfield in 1972. "I was an exchange student in 1971 in Durhan, South Africa." She was graduated from Mt. Holyoke College in 1976 and attended the Georgetown University School of Foreign Service, Washington,  $\Box$ , C. During her junior year at Georgetown, she "worked and traveled for-a few months. After I was graduated from Mt. Holyoke, I worked for a year with a public interest law firm, then I went on tour to South Africa. Then I went to Israel to live on a kibbutz called Cabri for one year. It was there I met my future husband. We were married in 1981. His name is Jimmy Cohen-Gavarian, and he is a student in electrical engineering.

Another great influence in her life, admits the rabbi, was the fact that "I went to two colleges that were predominantly non-Jewish. As a result, people there were always asking me questions about Judaism. I had to go back and do some studying, and I realized that there was much to learn and to teach. My major interest is to teach, and the world of a rabbi is to teach!

And so, Jody Cohen became a rabbinical student at Hebrew Union College, which she attended for six years. During that time, she was a student rabbi in Temple Beth Shalom, Toms River, and the Kingsbridge Home and Hospital for the Aged in The Bronx. She also served as a teacher and youth group advisor and led two NFTY summer tours to Israel.

"Two years ago," Rabbi Cohen-Gavarian recalls, "there was an Orthodox synagogue in Toms River, which was losing the older people...they were dying or moving away. The younger people there wanted to preserve the synagogue, and so they changed it to a reform temple, and they asked for student rabbis. Another woman and I, who were attending

The congregation of Temple Sha'arey Goldstein, Robin Bartel, Carol Wilchins, Louise Gedal, Karen Schutz, Lynn Keitz, Lois Fishbein and Frieda Horowitz. The board of trustees will Temple Youth Group tomorrow at 8;30 Krop, Caren Afflitto, Rena, Graham, Andrea Schwartz and Megan Pindyck. Concluding the evening's installation will be the officers of the Temple's

Hebrew Union College, got the jobs as student rabbis by way of a lottery there. The other student, now Rabbi Stacy Osfner of New York, who will be an assistant rabbi in a congregation in St. Paul, Minn., and I decided to split the job, to share it, actually. We worked alternate weekends. It was a unique experience," the rabbi exclaims. "We proved that women can work together, and as a result, more than tripled the membership to a point where they now have an ordained rabbi in the temple who also lives in the community.'

Rabbi Cohen-Gavarian and 18 other classmates completed five years of graduate work at the New York School of Hebrew Union College. Dr. Gottschalk, presiding at ceremonies marking the close of the 109th academic year of the college, also invested seven graduating students as cantors.

Years ago, the profession of rabbi was exclusively male. "In my graduating class in New York," says Rabbi Cohen-Gavarian, "this is the first time there were more women than men. Eleven women and eight men were ordained on the campus.

"I am very committed to the ideals of the practicing of the reformed movement because I have always been a member of 'Klal Israel.' I see myself very much as a reformed Jew, as a leader in the reformed Jewish community

"As a rabbi, I think it is still a new idea. Also, I am one of six women in my class who has a little baby. Now women, who are mothers and rabbis, make it a little difficult for the congregation to get used to. But we are equally qualified even though it is more challenging and more difficult because people see how hard it is for a woman in the rabbinical world."

The rabbi's parents are especially proud of their children; the rabbi, and her brother. Steven Cohen, 28, who lives in Oregon, and her sister, Amy, 24, who is a law student at Pace University Law School. "And we are proud of our parents, too," she says. "We're all professionals in our careers, our longtime goals.

"I feel very fortunate that I am able to do what I want to do. The people in Toms River had stopped thinking of us as women rabbis - they just thought of us as rabbis.'

When Rabbi Cohen-Gavarian begins her rabbinate in Congregation Beth Israel in West Hartford, Conn., "I'm going to be the first woman in this capacity in the congregation. And I will be able to do the work I've been trained for in these past five years. I feel very strongly about this.

"My husband will continue his studies in Connecticut. He'll be very committed in the next few years. He's going to be assuming a major responsibility for child care. At least, for baby Amitai Cohen-Gavarian!''

Dayton wins goĺf crown in MVC play

With a score eight strokes better than its nearest rival, Jonathan Dayton's golf team won its first Mountain Valley Conference championship Monday at the lower course of the Baltusrol Golf Club in Springfield.

Dayton's four-player team carded a 344 total to take the crown. Of the 11 teams in the tourney, New Providence finished second with a 352 followed by Ridge's 360.

Dayton was led by Jim Bennett, the individual winner with a 40-41-81. He edged out New Providence's Rick Dutenhofer by one stroke who had a 37-45-82.

Three tied for third at 83. Dayton's Mike Tomko carded 40

Back nine ready at Oak Ridge

Oak Ridge Golf Course in Clark has opened its back nine holes for play seven days a week from 7:15 a.m. to 8 p.m. Golf carts are available for all players.

The front nine holes are presently closed to allow for the construction of new tees and the installation of a new irrigation system. Similar work was completed at Ash Brook Golf Course in Scotch Plains.

According to Charles Sigmund, Jr., assistant director of the Union County Department of Parks and Recreation, the project is scheduled to be completed in early July.

Union County Girls Softball Tournament, sponsored by the Union County Department of Parks and Recreation, will be held starting this weekend and will continue through next weekend at Warinanco Park. There will be three divisions: grades four to six, grades seven to nine and grades 10 to 12. Individual trophies will be awarded to members of the winning team in each division.

The irrigation system at Oak Ridge is being installed by the National Irrigation_Company_of Roosevelt,_at_a_ cost of approximately $251,000. The new tees are being installed by the Union Paving Company at a cost of approximately $151,000.

Speer attains place in meet

While Dayton's team wasn't represented as a whole in Friday and Saturday's boys' state Group 2 track and field championships at Rutgers South Plainfield.

Dayton girls in Meet of Champs

While the team finished third overall, there were some outstanding individual performances by Jonathan Dayton's girls in Friday and Saturday's 14th state group track and field championships at Rutgers Stadium in Piscataway.

It was the "Tracey and Mary Pat Show" in several Group 2 events as Tracey Biber and Mary Pat Parducci of Dayton paced the field. Dayton's Kathy Drummond's performance was also good enough to be among the top five finishers in the discus event. The performance by the three guaranteed them spots in yesterday's Meet of Champions in South Plainfield.

Biber finished first in the 1,600-meter run beating out her nearest competitor by more than three seconds. Biber beat Madison Borough's Sarah Kitchell with a mark of 5:12.9 to Kitchell's 5:16.5. Parducci's mark of 5:22.8 was good enough for fourth place in the 1,600 meter-event

In the 3,200-meter run, it was Parducci's turn. She took first with a time of 11:04.8, more than seven seconds ahead of Caldwell's Madeline Nagy's mark of 11:11.8. Biber took third with a time of 11:14.6

Biber's time in the 1,600 meters and Parducci's mark in the 3,200 both set new Dayton records.

Drummond, who broke the Dayton school record for the discus throw last week with a toss of 121-7, slipped a bit in the state group champs meet. Her throw of 111-11, however was good enough for fourth place. Monmouth's Audra Corson led the field with a throw of 128-1," a new record, breaking the old mark of 124-8.

In additon to yesterday's individual championship meet, Parducci, Biber and Drummond have been invited to the Silver East Invitational on Sunday in Plainfield. The event draws the top track and field talents from all over the U.S., particularly from the Northeast.

Five other members of the team also competed - Amy Kiell in the high and long jump, Nancy Gaglio in the inadiate hurdlas Karon Wnok in the high jump, Sandy Brenner in the 400 meters, and Gaglio, Kiell, Brenner and Ann Marie Cocchia in the mile relay.

The team finished third overall with 19 points behind Newark Central's 42 and Monmouth Regional's 35.

Coach William Jones was proud of his team's showing.

"These were the most points we've ever scored in a group championship meet," Jones said. Noting that Dayton also lost to Newark Central in last weekend's group meet in Mendham, "We kind of felt good about coming in third in the state for our group. Central only had three kids, but they took seven events.

Top teams in adult league showdown

Ehrhardt TV (6-0) and Masco Sports (5-1) widened their division leading margins in Springfield adult softball league play and now face a crucial showdown next week at the Pool field.

Ehrhardt TV swept three straight to remain the league's only unbeaten team, although they received a major scare from the Bombers (3-3). Trailing 13-8 going into the bottom of the seventh, the TV men staged a stunning rally to tie the game at 13-13 winning it in the eighth on John M. Ehrhardt's two-run blast to left center. Rob Dempster, Jamey Ehrhardt, who earlier had blasted his fourth home run of the year, Tim Black, George Jorda, Fred Bayer and John Cocchia provided the key hits in the seventh inning rally. The Bombers were led by Jeff Kronert's three hits and Dave Mitchell, who hit his second homer in the sixth.

Earlier, unbeaten John J. Ehrhardt, veteran-right-hander-(6-0), shut-down Shallcross/Creative (3-3) on a sevenhit, complete game effort. Larry Zavodny, with a single, double and a triple and John Cocchia, with a solo blast, led Ehrhardt. Lou Gizzi and Kyle Hudgins laced two hits each in a losing effort

Jamey Ehrhardt, with two circuit blasts, and Tom Ehrhardt, with a double and a triple, led the TV men to a 9-2 win over the Knights of Columbus (0-6). Paul Tarashub, Bob Vargo, Jim Maltunas and Tom DePoortere hit and hurled eight scoreless innings of brilliant relief to pace Masco to a 14-5, come-from-behind win over Cardinal's Garden Center (3-3). Tom Graziano, with two hits including a first-inning home run, and Ed Graziano, Tom Wisniewski, Harry Kolb and Gary Fox with nine hits between them, led Masco. Hot-hitting veteran, Rich Johnson, had a perfect four-for-four night for Cardinal's while Joe Ragucci and Ron De Santis added two hits each.

.Cardinal's survived a late score from the Knights of Columbus and held on to win 10-7 behind veteran Tom Burke's eight hitter, P.J. Burns lofted his first homer of the year to right. Rich Johnson, Jerry Ragonese and Tom Burke added two hits each. Bob Vargo and Mark Marcellano stroked two hits each for the Knights.

The Bombers staged a four-run rally in the last of the sixth to defeat M&M Automotive 6=5 John Kronert, who had a three-for-three night, Guy Seal, Jeff Kronert and Bob Janukowicz, who delivered the winning hit, led the rally to back Rob Hydock's nine-hitter. Losing pitcher Hesh Cohen was brilliant for five innings, backed by a diving catch by Dave Strohmeyer in left field. Cohen, Strohmeyer, Bill Bohrod and Eric Wasserman had two hits each for M&M.

Cardinal's Garden Center staged a three-run rally in the last of the seventh to edge Shallcross/Creative 7-6. John Evan Wasserman's hit in the top of the eighth drove home Dave Strohmeyer to lead M&M Automotive to its first victory in a wild 15-14 win over the Knights of Columbus. Rob Bohrod, Stu Falkin and Steve Max were the big bats for M&M. Paul Tarashub, Mike Ward and Chris Mardony paced the Knights.

Pete Pepe drilled a big three-run homer over the 241 sign in right and added two other hits to lead the Spirit of '76 Inn to a 14-8 win over Shallcross/-Creative. Art Kopac laced two hits to lead Shallcross.

The League's top hitters are: Joe Policastro, .727; Dave Shulman, .700; Hesh Cohen, .600; Darren Young, .588 Mike Ward, .585; Tom Graziano, .571; Lou Gizzi, .533; Rich Johnson, .529; and Stu Falkin, .526. Several are tied at .500

Hurler's debut was a success

Sharon Kutsop, ace of the Jonathan Dayton High School girls softball team, made a successful debut Sunday in her first game for the Linden Arians.

Kutsop threw a three-hit shutout to lead the Arians (2-0) to victory over the Colonia Crusaders 5-0 in a Garden State Women's Softball League game in Colonia.

Kutsop struck out two and walked none. She also excelled at the plate. driving in two runs with a single in the seventh.

Mountainside Little Leaguers break mold

The American League Division of the Mountainside Little League finally broke the mold of every previous game having been a tie or decided by one run, as the front-running Astros rallied to defeat the Indians 7-4.

The Astros got one RBI each from Katherine Wyckoff, Jacob Chung, Matt Cook, Brent Rusche, Greg Weiss, Jim Forker and Ron Heymann to back up strong relief pitching by Mike Yurochko and Matt Cook. Ben Schneider sparkled in the field for the Astros. Jami Urban, Ryan Davis, Tony Kaspereen and Brian Kulbar were the hitters for the Indians with B.J. Davis hurling a perfect stint in relief.

The Astros then withstood a lateinning rally to top the Phillies 5-3. Brent Rusche and Katherine Wyckoff each had run-producing doubles with Greg Weiss and Matt Cook each picking up RBI-singles. The relief duo of Mike Yurochko and Cook again hurled effectively for the Astros. For the Phillies, Jim Boyd parked a three-run homer with Teddy Sadtler, Anthony Capriglione and Matt Bonaventura also hitting effectively.

The Phillies engaged in a long-ball

Adam Targum singled in the tying run and scored the winner on a two-out triple by Ryan Driscoll. Scott Driscoll and Jason Davis shared pitching honors for the Brewers with fine fielding support from Amy Jarabek and Chris Sanchez. John Rau and Jimmy Hurley were the run-producers for the Yankees with Ken Colodne and Kari Gerhardt making their presence known on defense

In Major League play, the Braves held off the Twins 8-7, to remain undefeated. The Braves picked up three runs late in the game on consecutive singles by David Stankiewicz, Chris Maresca, Romel Sanchez and Chris Chiavarelli. Brian Carson and Jeff Davis sparkled in the fireman role for the Braves while catcher Andrew Gallagher and outfielder Adam Ritterbush and Rafael Qunitana starred in the field. Grayson Murray had three RBI for the Twins and Dan Chung two with Jay Geraghty and Jim Alder each making fine defensive plays in the outfield

The Cubs extended the Mets to extra innings, before bowing 8-7 on a two-out steal of home by Richard Roche. Roche, Dal Torborg, Eric Rauschenberger and Tom Cukier were the heavy hitters for the Mets. Leftfielder Al Gittrich, rightfielder Steve Bunin, and catcher Richard Antonacci also starred for the Mets, but it was Rauschenberger's four innings of scoreless relief hurling which turned the tide. Chris O'Toole, Ryan Pimental, Scott Boyd, and Scott Marinelli wielded the timber for the Cubs with infielders John glovework.

Hurley, Peter Sempepos, and Chad Oberhauser keeping the Cubs in the game with several fielding gems.

Down to their last out, and facing a 3run deficit with only one man on base, the Orioles parlayed a single by Kevin Delaney, a walk to Brian Delaney, and a double by Glen Miske followed by a throwing error into three runs, transforming an almost certain 6-3 defeat to the Cubs into a 6-6 tie in the top of the sixth inning.

After reliever Miske shut the door on the Cubs in the bottom of the sixth, Oriole bats, held silent for most of the game by a fine Cubs defense, erupted for five runs. A hard-hit grounder by Brandon Rusche and bunt by George Serio triggered the rally. Miske again struck out the side in the bottom of the seventh.

After starting pitchers Ian Sharkey of the Cubs and Brian Delaney of the Orioles waged a brillian pitchers duel for four-and-a-half innings, the Cubs walked their way to five runs to erase a 3-1 deficit. John Hurley, who sparked his team with three line-drive hits for the day, had the only Cub hit during that outburst.

Glen Miske blasted a pair of tapemeasure home runs, and Mike Servello went three-for-three, plus two walks and a sacrifice, to power the Orioles to a 21-9 decision over the Twins. Brian Delaney added four hits, and Jimmy Higgins two for the winners.

After yielding a leadoff single and then a walk, Oriole starter Brian Delaney retired the next six batters in order, the last four coming on strike outs. Mike Spagnola pitched the next three innings to gain the win, with Kevin Delaney hurling his first full inning in the sixth.

After throwing 12 straight hitless innings, Mike Spagnola saw the Twins Danny Chung break the string with a single in the third inning. Grayson Murray had the only other Twins hit.

Members of the Deerfield School böys' varsity baseball team in Mountainside are looking for two more wins to finish out a strong season. They boast a record of seven wins and one loss thus far, according to Coach Ed Sjonell, who has high praise for the team's effort.

"We have good players and they're putting forth their all," said Sjonell, 'but the real key is that this is a team that works well together."

The team has defeated Berkeley Heights, Stirling, Orange Avenue School from- Cranford, Garwood, Winfield, Wardlaw, and Clark's Kumpf ''B'' team

Its one loss was a close one, 3-2, to Cranford's Hillside Avenue team.

Pitcher John Saraka has posted three of the Deerfield wins, and also has contributed seven hits, two of them for extra bases, for a 199 batting avorate

After the first eight games, Jeff Stoffer leads the team in batting with a .526 average. He has 10 hits, has scored eight runs, and has stolen 15 bases.

With 13 hits, Steven Kolton has a .482 average and has scored six runs. Kevin Rogers is batting .417 with five hits and eight runs scored. He has hit three home runs, which Sjonell thinks may be a school record. Kolton, Saraka and Roger each have eight RBI to their credit.

Other strong contributors have been Craig Carson, who has stolen 14 bases and scored nine runs, and Peter Kozubal, who has scored eight runs. Batting over .300 have been Tom Logio, .354; Frank Tennaro, .357; and Mike Sabatino, .333.

Kozubal and Jamie Downey have even pitched two winning games

Ironson to be inducted into Rutgers Hall Sunday

A Springfield resident who made his mark as a hard-hitting outfielder for the university's baseball team will be among the first 10 inductees into the Rutgers-Newark Athletic Hall of Fame Sunday.
