Council hires planner

By PAUL PEYTON

The borough council Tuesday approved the hiring of a consultant to function as a professional planner for the district at a cost of $80 per hour.

According to Mayor Bruce Geiger, the position is being formed to give the borough a "projection of the future of Mountainside" as it pertains to the state's affordable housing for low to middle income families as well as the future development plans for review by the Rahway Valley Sewerage Authority.

Geiger said the planner. John

Lynch, would also be able to give an explanation to the borough regarding what impact the proposed widening of Route 22 from four lanes to six lanes would have on the community.

The mayor said that the planner would give the borough professional representation on the sewerage authority which the borough is seeking. He said this would be done so Moutainside can "continue development and be treated on an equal basis by all the other communities on the authority."

In connection with the affordable housing, Geiger said the borough has been given a quota of 198 low to middle income housing units.

"It's important that we approach this in a very professional manner with the best advice we can get so that we can decide what would be the most prudent course for the council to take," said Geiger.

amilies as well as the future evelopment plans for review by the tahway Valley Sewerage Authority.

Geiger said the planner, John that the council President Robert Viglianti, who presented the resolution, said it was important that the council approve the hiring of the planner because of the state mandate for the affordable housing.

"The planner will assist the borough in coming up with a reasonable way for Mountainside to comply with a state mandate," said Viglianti.

In a related topic the board approved an ordinance implementing a ban on development that would create more than 2,000 gallons of severage for a period of 90 days sewerage for a period of 90 days.

According to Councilman Robert

Wyckoff, this ordinance comes as an agreement between the governing body of Cranford and the borough to try and work out problems the two have.

In other business the council approved a resolution "establishing smoking regulations in borough owned buildings."

The resolution, presented due to new state regulations, bans smoking in areas of the buildings which have access to the public, according to Councilman Bart Barre.

Borough administrator James Roberts said that summonses will be issued by the Health Department.

The council also approved the first reading of an ordinance regulating the placement of newsracks on sidewalks and other public areas of the borough.

Viglianti said that those newspapers placed in the borough were contacted and gave imput along with the council in the rewriting of the ordinance. He said that the proposed law does not interfere with first amendment rights.

'Missing link' finally opened

By MARK YABLONSKY

After more than 20 years of delay, the long-awaited opening of Interstate Highway 78 took place last week with elected and highway officials issuing words of praise for the 63-mile project that now spans virtually the entire width of northern New Jersey.

Led by Governor Thomas Kean, the official opening of the 5.5-mile "missing link" through the northern tip of the Watchung Reservation was held in Summit near the Glenside Avenue exit in the eastbound lane.

"Today certainly is a day for us to celebrate here in Union County." said Senator Louis Bassano of the 21st district. "It was first talked about in 1950 and today it's become a reality. Governor, thank you for your commitment. We certainly appreciate it."

Considered an offshoot of the Interstate and Defense Highway System, construction of I-78 began in the early 1950s at Philipsburg, while construction from the east got under way later. By 1965, the state had acquired all the land it wanted for the highway's path, with the exception of the 5.5-mile parkland stretch. Although land belonging to the now-defunct Union County Park Commission in Springfield had been condemned, the state did not do likewise in the case of the reservation, Federal Highway Administration area engineer Richard Kraeuter said.

By the time the necessary land in the reservation had been acquired by the state in early 1972, earlier congressional legislation mandating major federally funded projects to be accompanied by detailed environmental impact statements had taken effect. Upset that the proposed path of the "missing link" would cut the parkland in half and destroy surrounding wildlife, local environmental groups stepped forward and began a series of legal challenges that were not resolved until late 1981, when the final environmental impact statement had been issued by the state Department of Transportation (DOT).

Among the concessions achieved by the environmentalists were the depression of the roadway well below parkland ground level, installation of retaining walls to mitigate highway noise to nearby residents, and a smaller amount of acreage taken for construction. Instead of receiving some 140 acres, the DOT took only half that much, and on the northern fringe of the reservation, rather than closer to the center, as had originally been planned.

Kean praised New Jersey as a place where both progress and the environment could be attained simultaneously.

"This road has more environmental safeguards built into it than any other road ever built in the state of New Jersey, and that's good," stated Kean at the ribbon-cutting ceremony. "In New Jersey, we can have progress and a better life. We can and we will have it both ways in the state of New Jersey. Achieving it wasn't easy, but we did it"

"Among the legislative delegations, I live closer to this highway than anyone else," agreed Assemblyman Bob Franks of New Providence. "I think by and large we have struck an equitable balance between our need to improve our transportation network, yet protect our environmental quality."

But others say the fewer entrances and exits on the roadway present a problem for local police and first aid squads in determining local jurisdiction in the event of an accident. More opponents claim the highway is a problem to local communities, such as Springfield and Berkeley Heights.

"I continue to be very upset about what the highway will do to us," stated Springfield Township Committeeman Stanley Kaish the night before the opening. "I travel every morning on it to go to Newark and it doesn't go any place. God help us when it does go someplace."

Career 'built' on architecture

By CHERYL SUESKIND

According to Mountainside artist-author Harry Devlin, Victorian architecture "deals with people, literature, and the Gothic experience."

Devlin should know. He has devoted a large portion of his diverse career to "architecturally inspired" writings and paintings. Nineteen of his oil paintings can be viewed at his exhibit, "To Grandfather's House We Go," opening Monday at the Schering-Plough Executive Offices in Madison.

Most of the paintings in the show are of Victorian buildings in New Jersey. Victorian architecture is his specialty. "In the past I was looking for specific architectural forms, now I was looking for asthetic consideration," Devlin says of the houses featured in his upcoming exhibit.

New Jersey is an architectural crossroads, he explains. Craftsmen moved to this country from France and England, and adapted their architecture to fit the skills and materials here. Styles from New York and Philadelphia moved and merged in New Jersey.

The artist has worked with many different art forms throughout his career. He was graduated from Syracuse University in 1939 with a degree in art. After college, he was an illustrator for Life magazine. This led to his becoming a Navy Intelligence artist during World War II. He became interested in architecture while in the Navy, and started to educate himself about it. He also became aware of cartooning—"as a fine shorthand way of getting across an idea," through his association with Hank Ketcham, writer of Dennis the Menace.

Devlin was the editorial cartoonist for Colliers magazine for eight years, and wrote a nationally syndicated cartoon strip, "Ragg Mopp." He also did most of the Tel-News illustrations for Bell Telephone.

Over the years, he has been the author of several books. He has written and illustrated three architectural books: "What Kind of House Is That?" a children's picture book, and "To Grandfather's House We Go," based on the paintings in his upcoming show. The third, "Portraits of American Architecture, Nineteenth Century Monuments to a Romantic Mood," will be out in May. Devlin has illustrated the Cranberry series of children's books, written by his author-artist wife, Wende. Devlin sees writing as an adjunct to painting, and that a background, not only talent, is necessary to

He has produced three films with New Jersey Public Broadcasting titled "Fare Thee Well Old House." "To-Grandfather's-House-We-Go" also-was-made into a one-hour documentary.

For the past 20 years, he has devoted most of his time to his paintings. He resides in a New Jersey Vernacular house in Mountainside, where he has lived for 37 years. He has seven children, six of whom followed in their parents' footsteps pursuing careers in the arts.

Throughout his career, Devlin has been very active in promoting the arts. He is the former vice chairman of the New Jersey State Council on the Arts, chairman of the Grants Committee, president of the National Cartonist Society, and serves on the New Jersey Committee for the Humanities. He was one of the founders of the Rutgers University Advisory Council on Children's Literature, and was instrumental in having a grant established for the Rutgers collection of Children's Art and Literature at the Voorhees-Zimmerli Gallery. A member of the New Jersey Advertising and Literary Halls of Fame, Devlin also lectured at Union College.

Devlin and his wife were recipients of the Arendts Award, Syracuse University's highest alumni award, for their cumulative work. He was awarded an honorary doctorate of humanities from Kean College last year.

Salaries OK'd for authorities

By MARK HAVILAND

At the behest of several Rahway officials, the Union County Board of Freeholders amended a resolution last week to lengthen the terms of Union County Utilities Authorities members from Rahway, where the planned resource recovery center will be built.

Salaries were also set for the nine members of the authority, which was formulated by the county to oversee the development and operation of the $139 million waste-to-energy plant, which has a targeted completion time between 1989 and 1990. Members will be paid a maximum of $4,000 annually, while the chairman of the authority will receive up to $5,000.

Three of the authority's nine members are from Rahway. Freeholder James Fulcomer, who is also a member of the city council, will serve a one-year term, and Rahway business administrator Joseph Hartnett and Harvey Williams were named to five-year terms. Hartnett and Williams were originally appointed to two-year terms.

The other six members of the authority are Kenneth MacRitchie of Westfield and Blanche Banasiak of Elizabeth, who will serve two-year terms; John Buecheler of Plainfield and Richard Hatfield of Scotch Plains, for three-year terms, and Frank P. Capone of Linden and Louis Santaga of Hillside, four-year terms.

Rahway Councilman Max Shield had warned the board that if it did not allow the Rahway members terms longer than two years the city might rescind its agreement to have the facility in Rahway and the county might have to "shop around and find another city to host it."

Freeholder G. Richard Malgran explained that every member of the authority would probably serve at least five years as required by law.

"The only reason the terms are staggered in the initial resolution is so that the entire board won't come up for re-election at one time," Malgran said.

"This board has the interests of the county and city of Rahway at heart," Malgran added.

Both resolutions passed by a 3-2 vote, with one abstention. The two Democratic members of the board, Brian Fahey and Michael Lapolla, voted against the resolutions designating the membership of the authority and determining their salaries.

"The names that appear on this agenda were never discussed," Lapolla alleged during the meeting. "What we get predominantly are very loyal Republicans."

Fahey and Lapolla also objected to the appointment of Fulcomer to a term on the Utilities Authority, while he is also serving as a freeholder and Rahway city councilman. Lapolla suggested this might pose a conflict of interest and would serve to put the county and Rahway in a "precarious position."

"I am seriously contemplating a legal challenge," Lapolla said. "There's an inherent conflict here and I think the board is making a major mistake."

Deputy County Counsel Gerald

O'Dwyer implied there would be no conflict in the appointment of Fulcomer. "The statute provides that a member of the freeholder board can be appointed to the plained that the selection was on the basis of the lower "life costs" of the proposals for the 20 years of operation offered two firms. The costs are $88, for Research Cottrell and $99, board can be appointed to the authority," he said.

Freeholder William Eldridge, a Republican, spoke out in favor of Fulcomer's appointment. "Mr. Fulcomer has done an awful lot of work in this area over the years, I think his experience would serve the Utilities Authority well," Eldridge

At the end of a closed session, the board also voted to authorize preliminary simultaneous negotiations with two firms out of a potential four vendors to develop a contract to build and operate the resource recovery facility.

Upon the advice of its financial advisor, the county also elected to rely on public ownership over private ownership of the facility. Fulcomer cited greater power over environmental concerns and greater public bargaining power over negotiations—when the facility's contract is up for renewal in 20 years.

"This is an important decision in the progress of our selection process for a vendor," said Fulcomer, who was sponsor of the resolution. "Not only are we adhering to our schedule to complete the facility by 1990, but with a little luck and much hard work, negotiations for a vendor may be completed by Dec. 1, a month ahead of schedule."

The two firms selected were Research Cottrell, Inc., of Branchburg and Ogden-Martin Systems, Inc., of Paramus. Fulcomer explained that the selection was made on the basis of the lower "life cycle costs" of the proposals for the first 20 years of operation offered by the two firms. The costs are $88,675,000 for Research Cottrell and $99,755,000

'big hit' with kids Volunteer makes a

Mountainside's Children's Specialized Hospital has volunteers in all shapes and sizes. One, in particular, has big dreams to go with his bulging biceps.

Roland Stanzione is a handsome bodybuilder who has worked at perfecting a muscular physique, an articulate speaking delivery, and a trained singing voice. He aspires to become a big star in show business - in his words, "... a young Frank Sinatra with the Elvis look.

Stanzione hopes to make the upcoming New Jersey Male America contest a major stepping stone on his road to success.

Even if he doesn't win, Stanzione is'a champ in the eyes of the patients at Children's Specialized Hospital where he is a volunteer in the Recreation Therapy Program.

Stanzione gets a great amount of satisfaction in his volunteer work with the children because he feels he's giving back some of the care and encouragement he received following surgery a few years ago.

"The same knee was operated on twice and I had to come through hours and hours of therapy to walk," he recalls. His therapy was performed at a hospital in New York City and he required the same kind of encouragement and motivation from the personnel there which he at Children's Specialized now. Stanzione also has a special reason for choosing Children's offers to the challenged youngsters

Specialized as the beneficiary of his volunteer energies. His father, who died in 1972, had Scleriderma, an incurable disease, and was given therapy on an outpatient basis at Children's Specialized for four

"His last years were much happier because of the things he experienced there," said Stanzione. 'He didn't have money to pay for his treatment, but the management people here worked things out. I am grateful for that and feel privileged to give something back," remarked Stanzione.

"When I think that I can actually ease some child's pain by contribution of my time, well, it makes me feel like I've done something worthwhile," he observed. "The youngsters are survivors; time invested in their futures is time well spent."

Stanzione presently works as a liability adjustor with a supermarket firm and is enrolled in a master's degree program at Kean College in management systems. "just in case Hollywood doesn't work out," he explained.

Recreation Director Andrew Chasanoff says, "the children like having Roland on hand helping them participate in various games and in helping them have fun. His concern for them and sincerity really show."

Chasanoff described the volunteer as both strong and gentle, sensitive and forceful.

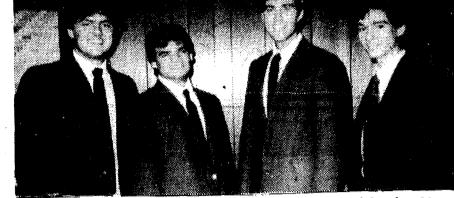

The director said Stanzione's personality helps him fit in with the basic purpose of Children's Specialized recreational activities. 'to make skill development fun for the youngsters. That way they'll develop some lifelong activities that will help them be more self-reliant."

Chasanoff said he hopes someone like Stanzione can encourage other young men to spend time volunteering at the hospital as well.

Stanzione thinks he can do that, especially if he wins the pageant. "I hope that I can be a positive example for younger men," he says. "There are many young men who may be physically healthy but are confused emotionally. They need good role models and to develop the kind of strength and self-esteem that develops a desire to help others."

The earnest Stanzione wants, not only in his upcoming pageant, but in everything he does, "to represent the contemporary man. One who maintains a sense of self worth and influence while being flexible, observant, communicative, and strong. I also hope to bring out sensitivity to show that it's not unmasculine; that a man can be tender and express different emotions at appropriate times."

Win or lose in September, Roland Stanzione and the disabled children he shares his energies with are coming up big winners.

New Jersey Assemblyman Bob Franks recently was named Legislator of the Year by the National Republican Legislators Association (NRLA). Franks was selected from more than 3,000 republican state legislators in the United States to receive this award.

Presenting the award was Secretary of Labor and former RNC Chairman William E. Brock. According to Brock, Franks was selected based upon his proven leadership and dedication to the republican party. "Assemblyman Bob Franks has set an example of quality leadership for republicans at all levels of government and has shown a tremendous amount of dedication to his constituents as well as the entire state of New Jersey."

According to NRLA President, New York Senator Hugh T. Farley, "Each year the NRLA honors and pays tribute to ten legislators who have been chosen by their peers for outstanding leadership and exemplary performance in their respective offices. Assemblyman Franks is most deserving of this special recognition and honor."

Franks is currently serving his seventh year in the state legislature and has worked to create a climate for economic growth in New Jersey. Republicans in the Assembly unanimously chose Franks for the major leadership post of Conference Chairman.

This is the story of the evolution of the Atomic Bomb, the creation of the Atomic Energy Commission (AEC), the above-ground Testing Program (1957-1963), and their impact on the citizens of Nevada, Utah and Arizona. These people are subject to the winds blowing eastward from California and Las Vegas downwinders. Ball explains how they are affected politically, legally, medically, and ethically.

When the residents of Nevada first learned about the operations at the Test Site, they approved heartily, for these were the religious, patriotic Mormons-always loyal to the government. But when a marked increase in cases of cancer and leukemia in animals and humans appeared, the Downwinders began to question the Testing Program and the possible effects of radio-active fall-out. The AEC and the government physicians denied that harmful results existed. Some doctors and citizens were accused of being unpatriotic (Nuclear supremacy had to be maintained). Protests were However, as cancer incidents increased, so did citizen media protests. By 1978, there was some-Congressional action, and by 1979 it was revealed (through the Freedm of Information Act) "their government had lied to them and failed to protect them from the dangers of nuclear fall-out." (Workers in government labs had had protection all along). But it was not easy to file a legal brief proving that the cancer was absolutely the result of nuclear fall-out—as for example, an obvious car injury. Therefore many claims were filed; few resulted in compensation.

Bitterness and anger still surround the problems of the Downwinders. The author criticizes the Congresses, recent Presidents, even the Environmentalists and other pressure groups which have been negligent in working for justifiable compensation for deaths. The picture for the future looks bleak, especially since the present administration is determined to cut costs. After all, people are expendable.

Editorial

An invitation

An editorial, according to Webster, is "a newspaper or magazine article that gives the opinion of the editors or publishers."

Unlike the other pages in this paper, Page 4, the "editorial page," is devoted exclusively to opinion — those of this newspaper and its editors and those of the reader. The rest of the newspaper deals with information submitted by readers and original stories written by members of our staff who attend municipal and school board meetings and attempt to "cover" a beat. Many times, our reporters hit a brick wall when dealing with municipal government.

On Aug. 7, the Echo ran an editorial which has provoked a response from Council President Robert Viglianti, whose guest column appears elsewhere on this page this week.

We have declined the councilman's offer to buy an ad in the paper each month "correcting the reporting errors that occur." Instead, we invite him to use the free space on this, our "opinion" page, to write guest columns on a regular basis — expressing his feelings on borough business, and for that matter, on our reporting of that business.

Perhaps this way, the residents of Mountainside, who have been subjected to so much "misreporting" by the members of our staff, will finally find out what's going on in their hometown.

But the councilman had better be prepared to hit some roadblocks in his quest for all the facts — the whole truth. If he takes us up on our offer to write a borough column, perhaps he will learn what we have to deal with. How can a reporter get the whole story when no one is willing to speak for the record? When "no comment" is the answer to a question? When "don't quote me" precedes the whole explanation?

"You don't need to know that" is another familiar response.

Viglianti, in particular, is a difficult person to reach during the day when our reporters are often seeking his comments on borough business. In fact, one of our reporters was told that he does not wish to be contacted at his place of business.

If he is so eager to assure that our reporters obtain the truth, why isn't he more readily available to answer our questions?

While this space is usually set aside for opinion, we would like to set the record straight on several of Viglianti's statements and answer several of his questions.

Yes, the author of the editorial which appeared here Aug. 7 is a taxpayer residing in Mountainside. She has attended meetings in the borough for the past six months. The assignment of this particular reporter came after much consideration. We finally decided a resident of the town might better be able to make some headway with town officials who have been uncoopertive in the past. The residency of a particular reporter, however, is not a factor in his assignment.

Our reporters, and admittedly there have been several assigned to Mountainside, have hit the Mountainside brick wall on several occasions. It is not the most treasured "beat."

Mountainside municipal government officials have a reputation for being uncooperative. None of our reporters, we have been told, measure up to what the council expects. Does the council expect a pat on the back for everything it does? Are there no controversial issues in Mountainside? Is it not, as the councilman himself states, the job of the "Echo" to be a neutral professonal reporting the facts? This neutral professional also has the right — and obligation as a third party — to express an opinion — especially if it serves the people of the community.

As to our assignment of part-time reporters, even students: all newpapers employ stringers to cover municipal meetings on an irregular basis when we have conflicting meetings. Does Councilman Viglianti think Mountainside is the only town being covered? No matter whom we assign to cover the borough, the council has complained.

As to the Della Serra matter, after a description of the events leading up to the outcome of the case, Viglianti concludes, "...the borough decided not to appeal." After spending $150,000 to "protect the interests of the citizens," the council appears to have "given up." Why? Could they not substantiate the borough's charges? Surely there was enough money left to bring the case to a final conclusion. Was it factual information that was lacking?

Viglianti's suggestion that our editorial was written in an attempt to sell more papers is ridiculous. The editorial was written to present an opinion on what we see as an excessive amount of money being spent on legal fees in the borough. We are not trying to discredit anyone. A difference of opinion such as his — is welcome. Except for his statement, we have received no other letters — for or against our stand. Does this mean the residents of Mountainside don't care how much is being spent on legal fees? Or, do they support our opinion? Again, we welcome response.

The editorial page of this newspaper is reserved for our readers. We invite anyone, resident or municipal servant, to contribute to it. You have the right to your opinion. But we have a right to ours, whether you agree with us or not.

Councilman raps Echo editorial

By ROBERT F. VIGLIANTI Borough of Mountainside Council President

Congratulations to the staff and editors of the Mountainside Echo. I didn't believe it possible but the editorial of Aug. 7 hit a new high in misreporting, omitting information and misleading the public under the guise of an editorial

For years I have been amazed to read reports in the Echo which in no way represented what occurred at the meeting being reported. In some instances I've wondered if the "reporter" may have mixed up communities and was actually reporting a meeting that happened somewhere else.

The level of Echo reporting at one time became so inaccurate that I resorted to providing written copies of my reports to the "reporter." hoping that some similarity be reported to our residents. It should also be pointed out that for the most part these "reporters" from the Echo have been either stringers (part-time reporters) or students. I can't remember the last time Mountainside had a permanent reporter who through longevity developed an understanding of Mountainside. I would also like to point out the lack of professionalism that existed during various hearings when the "reporter" from the Echo deliberately sat with, joked with and criticized with those who did not agree with the council during the hearings. Is not a reporter supposed to be a neutral professional whose job it is to report the facts?

When speaking to the many "reporters" from the Echo over the years, I was told that the Echo didn't bring in enough money for the paper to send an experienced permanent reporter to cover our community. Thus the paper would assign its lowest paid "reporter" to cover Mountainside, yet with these "accurate facts" the Echo editorial professes to be blessed with wisdom, integrity and sound judgement in the running of Mountainside.

I question all of these and so may a vast majority of our community,which may account for the horribly low amount of residents who buy and read this "paper." In explanation as to why this is the "official paper" of Mountainside, it lies in the fact that the Echo has found a loophole in the law that states if a presence of a newspaper is in a community, then that paper should be the official paper. Well fellow residents, the "Echo's presence" may be found in that broken down mail box that sits (on its last leg) in front of Barrett and Crain's office on Mountain

We have seen in the past the editors of the Echo endorse candidates for office both for the Board of Education and Borough Council with little or no investigation of their community involvement, nor what they represent.

I firmly believe in the First Amendment and I believe that the right, when used by the press responsibly, has been one of the main reasons why America is as great as it is today. I also believe that a newspaper may use the protection of the First Amendment for other reasons than the presenting of the truth.

Returning to the editorial of Aug. 7. "Lawsuits Prove Costly," I would like to expand on the three areas discussed and, hopefully, once and for all put to rest these questions of the council spending money on lawsuits or attorneys. Please remember that each member of council is a taxpayer in Mountainside. Are the editors of the Echo? Please also remember that we work for the residents and that our meetings are open and we will always answer your questions.

council with its criticism of the Della Serra matter. The Echo states, "unofficial estimates put the cost to the taxpayers somewhere in the neighborhood of $400,000." First of all this amount is grossly incorrect and if the Echo really cared or had any professionalism they would be able to obtain the correct figure since it is public record. In fact, the "reporter" called the Borough Administrator on Aug. 12, five days after the editorial, and asked for the amount of legal fees spent on the

The Echo first attacks the borough

Della Serra case. The actual figure the responsibility under the direct for services rendered since 1981 is $149.371,81.

However "$400,000" sounds good and allows them (the Echo) to profess that they are the flagbearers of the borough. Has the Echo ever asked the question as to why this case escalated to such proportions? Has the Echo ever asked about the moral issues that the council was, and is, faced with? Has the Echo ever understood that permitting the cost of a trial or hearing to determine if a person is correctly charged or not for a wrong no matter how severe, was not the intent of the Constitution?

The fact of the matter is that in 1981 Sergeant Della Serra was indicted by a Union County Grand Jury. He later received pre-trial intervention. In 1982, the Borough Governing Body found him guilty of twenty-four of thirty administrative charges and ordered his dismissal. The Sergeant appealed to the Superior Court which determined the borough had not conducted its decision-making in accordance with the Open Public Meetings Act. The Appellate Division unanimously upheld the borough's position. The New Jersey Supreme Court refused to hear the Sergeant's appeal. The Sergeant's appeal then returned to the Superior Court where a judge confirmed the guilty findings in most of the charges, but reduced the penalty from dismissal to a sixmonth suspension and fine. Sergeant Della Serra then appealed to the Appellate Division to recover funds when he was dismissed without pay while under critical indictment in 1981. The Court decided he was entitled to back-pay and the borough decided not to appeal.

From this brief history it should be apparent that the borough acted to protect the integrity and professionalism of its government. Most of the legal expenses were the result of appeas filed by Sergeant Della Serra. He, of course, has a right to protest his position legally. The borough has an obligation to protect the interests of its citizens. Therefore, is the Echo professing that if the borough believes an employee steals from the borough, or doesn't perform his or her duties, or does any other act that may not be in the best interest of our community that the borough council should do absolutely nothing because it may incur legal costs?

Addressing item number two in the "editorial," the Echo is now criticizing the borough council for. "...now shouldering legal fees to defend its position..." Let's set the record straight here and now. This action is not being done by the borough council. If you recall, your own reporting of the state law places control of the Fire Department which determined to deny an application for membership in the department for what they considered to be good and sufficient reason. The individual involved has chosen the legal route. The borough and Fire Department are responding to protect the interests of the community. Then why does the Echo criticize the borough council? Perhaps in an attempt to sell more papers? Perhaps in an attempt to discredit council? What reason?

The last subject that this "editorial" has seen fit to attack is the Mountainside Borough Council's decision to appropriate $78,000 for legal and engineering services to assist us in protecting Mountainside interests in obtaining present and future sewer needs. Your main concern seems to be that we have suggested or advised future councils to allocate budget money from the 1987 budget to continue this professional assistance. This fact is correct. However, do you, through your "reporter" who was at the meeting, understand why So important is this issue to the Borough of Mountainside that the Borough Administrator, through the request of council, made sure your reporter would be at this special meeting. Nothing was being withheld. If you were to read your article, "Borough Council Challenges RVSA's Conduct," you will find only one error in reporting. The rest of this article fully and clearly explains Mountainside's concern, needs and why the council acted as it did. Knowing this, how could you arrive at your conclusion? Perhaps in an attempt to sell more papers? Perhaps in an attempt to discredit council? What reason?

I would like to point out that I have been serving this borough for over nineteen years. I have been a member of council for over eight years. There have been many occasions where my "blood has boiled" over the editorial and misreporting that has occurred in the "Echo." So concerned am I that the residents who read your paper (I understand less than 300 homes have delivery) get the true facts that I am considering buying an ad in your paper and each month correcting the reporting errors that occur. Will the paper be willing to sell me such space?

"Mountainside Echo," our residents, your professionalism and the First Amendment morally, if not legally, deserve the truth provided in a professional manner. They do not need nor deserve self-serving points of view or distorted halftruths. As always, I will be happy to sit with any professional member of your staff to discuss Mountainside.

Freeholders urge PA to reconsider RTI lease

Members of the Union County Board of Freeholders voted last week to continue urging the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey to reconsider the lease it has signed with a Rockaway Township firm slated to build a food irradiation plant.

The freeholder vote came after a ruling by a federal judge that the county's nuclear free zone ordinance is unconstitutional and cannot be used to block the plant's construction.

Freeholder William Eldridge of Berkeley Heights clarified the context of the board's vote at the Aug. 14 board meeting.

"We did not vote tonight to urge the Port Authority to terminate its lease. We asked them to reconsider the lease in light of the circumstances," Eldridge said.

The Port Authority owns the land off Kapkowski Road in Elizabeth, and adjacent to Newark Airport and signed a lease for Radiation Technology, Inc. (RTI) to build a food irradiation plant there. On Oct. 30, 1985, the freeholder board passed the nuclear free zone ordinance, which prohibits the production, storage, and transportation of nuclear materials within the county.

When the Union County Board of Freeholders attempted to block the plant's construction, claiming it would violate the nuclear free zone ordinance, RTI filed suit on May 29 in Federal court.

U.S. District Judge John Bissell concurred with objections raised by the irradiation firm, and ruled that the nuclear free zone ordinance was unconstitutional, and that state counties and communities have no power to regulate nuclear facilities, which is under federal jurisdiction.

"The Port Authority will continue with the review process relating to RTI's plans and drawings for the facility and intends to proceed in accordance with the signed lease agreement which requires that RTI comply with all applicable laws, rules and regulations governing the construction and operation of the proposed facility at the industrial park," officials of the Port Authority were quoted in a statement released last week.

Freeholder Michael Lapolla contended at the board meeting that the Port Authority had expressed reluctance to have a tenant like RTI at its industrial park. The proposed facility poses a "threat to the health, safety and welfare of citizens" in the area, Lapolla stated.

"I don't know who's doing their choreography these days, but I hope they would reconsider," Lapolla said, referring to the Port Authority.

Freeholder James Fulcomer said,

"I think if they're acting in good faith, they should act positively. It's also going to discourage many potential industries from moving into that area.''

An area of the industrial park apart from the site of the planned RTI facility is a former landfill, now covered over, and contaminated with the highly toxic chemical, PCB. The Nuclear Regulatory Commission has suspended the license of RTI's Rockaway Township facility twice in the past year because of safety violations.

Scotch Plains resident Ken Terry, one of the members of the Nuclear Free Zone Advisory Committee that drafted the county's ordinance, thanked the freeholder board for their support and asked them not to eliminate the ordinance or get discouraged because of the federal

"It appears that their public statements are no pretense," Terry said, referring to the P.A. "They consider their lease a legally binding contract.'

"I still think the concept of a nuclear free zone ordinance is a valid one," Terry added.

Terry suggested several options the county could research as alternative methods to stop the plant. For example, the county could research and release an environmental impact statement, and request a temporary restraining order, Terry explained. The county could also use zoning rules or a licensing ordinance that would prohibit the formation of the plant.

The food irradiation company contended in its lawsuit that the Port Authority expressed interest in having RTI as a client in November 1984, and that the two private corporations entered into a lease on Sept. 11, 1985. RTI argued in the suit that the signing of the lease agreement predated the passage of the county ordinance.

The company also argued the ordinance was unenforceable, and represented "an unwarranted, invalid exercise of Union County's police powers," because of the doctrine of pre-emption by arious provisions of the federal Atomic Energy Act of 1954.

"Union County's attempt to preclude the operation of the commercial services irradiators within Union County by means of enactment of the ordinance conflicts with the federal regulatory scheme set forth in the AEA, unlawfully intrudes into an area occupied by a pervasive system of Federal regulation," the lawsuit contended.

Pat LaQuardia knows the mets and bolts of the automotive repair business so well that he wrote a thesis on its "mimber one problem"automobile service training.

That thesis helped Pat win a master of science degree from the New Jersey Institute of Technology to go with earlier degrees from Fairleigh Dickinson University, Union County

College and Brookdale Community College. Pat's expertise combines a large portion of old-school smarts with now-school study. From his late father, Vito P., he acquired skills in Electric Inc., was started in East Orange in 1951, was moved to Morris Avenue in Union in 1972, and became established since 1972, carries on the tradition of his automotive diagnostics expert father, solving electrical problems for car dealers from all over the East coast. The company, a member of the Union Township Chamber of Commerce since auto-electronics. The business, Vite's Auto-

1977, is celebrating its 10th anniversary at the Stryvesant Avenue location in August. LaQuaglia's work on his thesis put him in touch with the heavyweights of the business-Ford, Chrysler, the U.S. Department of Labor, various automotive associations, and Motor Age Magazine. He brought forth a written work that provides an everview of automotive service training, recommendations for training in the 1980's, groblems and solutions in training, and recruitment and business management.

The thesis emphasizes the need to keep up to date with new systems and concepts as they are added to the market, says LaQuaglia, who found that hard work and study combine well to make the autometive service business hum along Elizabethtown service people and meter readers wear uniforms of dark blue pants and light blue shirts that have an Elizabethtown Gas patch on the pocket area, Richel said. While the utility's service representatives do not wear their identification badges on their uniforms as do its meter readers.

Cancer study is set Sept. 1

Over the past four years, Union County residences have participated in the largest nation wide Cancer Prevention Study II (CPS II) in the United States, for the American Cancer Society. The purpose of CPS II is to provide clues as to what in their lifestyles may cause - or prevent - cancer.

The second follow-up to this study will begin Sept. 1 to check up on the participants' present status. This will range from whether they are alive and well, moved away, if they have contracted cancer, or died. However, the Union County Unit of the American Cancer Society needs volunteers to collect this information in order for this study to be successful.

The original Cancer Prevention Study was initiated in 1959, which linked cigarette smoking to cancer and led to the Surgeon General's warning on cigarette packages and in advertising. The present study, which began Sept. 1, 1982, seeks to determine the elements in a person's diet, occupational exposure and local environment that may cause or the development of cancer. Questions deal with the use of cigarettes, alcohol, saccharin and food additives.

"With this information it will improve our ability to identify those factors that increase a person's chance to getting cancer, those that carry little or no risk and those that actually may help prevent cancer," it was announced.

It also was announced that "if you would like to become a volunteer, or would like more information about CPS II call your local American Cancer Society at 354-7373."

Bassano sponsors prison bill

Legislation requiring state prisons to provide mental health services for inmates is now on Gov. Thomas Kean's desk, it has been reported. The Senate recently concurred with minor amendments to the bill made by the assembly.

The bill's sponsor, Sen. C. Louis Bassano, said, "At this time, we have no idea how many inmates are suffering from severe mental illness because they get lost in the huge bureaucratic prison system.

"Left untreated, these prisoners may eventually end up back on the streets, suffering from the same mental illness ... that could have contributed to their criminal activity in the first place. We have accomplished nothing.

Bassano, (R-Union) said, "One aspect of my bill calls for the identification of prisoners with mental health problems when they are admitted to prison. The prisoners would then be evaluated and provided with the appropriate treatment. Without proper treatment, mentally-ill prisoners can be disruptive and, in some extreme

CCP seeks donations for program

Donations of art supplies and canned foods are being sought by the Union County Community Companions Program (CCP) to assist in training mentally-ill persons in daily living skills. The CCP is a volunteer advocacy program of the Mental Health Association designed to offer friendship and emotional support to those who have psychiatric problems.

The donations are needed for the two groups which have been formed to instruct and guide mentally-ill persons in bettering themselves. One group will be a cooking class offering instruction on Menu Planning and Basic Meal Cooking. The second will be an Art and Recreation group involving drawing, painting, arts and crafts and other leisure time activities. Both will be run by volunteers of CCP.

In order for these groups to operate, CCP needs the public's help. It was announced that anyone interested in donating art supplies (crayons, paints, brushes and games) and/or canned foods can call 753-9721 or the Mental Health Association at 272-0302.

Hayes named tennis coach

Dave Hayes of Cranford has been named coach of the Union County College women's tennis team.

Hayes also coaches the men's tennis and men's basketball teams at Union County College.

The women's tennis team will move its season to the fall, after not fielding a team last spring. The change to the fall schedule was the result of a rule change by the Region XIX, National Junior College Athletic Association (NJCAA).

Hayes guided the college men's tennis team, which had one woman player, to a 5-5 record last season. The men's basketball team posted an 11-19 mark

The Owls will open the fall campaign on Sept. 16 in Toms River against Ocean County College. The UCC squad will only play three of its eight matches at home this season. Union will be home on Sept. 20 against Gloucester County College; on Sept. 24 against Middlesex County College, and on October 2 against Somerset County College.

Two local students honored

Two area students are among eight honored as scholar-athletes by Union County College, according to the school's director of athletics, Irwin Phillips.

Those honored were Kim Kinal of Roselle and Traci Karr of Union. Kinal was a member of both the women's basketball and cross country teams. The business administration major's academic achievements earned her a nomination to Who's Who In Junior Colleges.

Union's Karr also was a two-sport athlete. As a member of the cross country team she went to the national cross country championships in 1984. Karr also played for the Owl's women's basketball squad, and like Kinal, her academic performance earned her a nomination to Who's Who In Junior
