Travel artifacts date to Middle Ages

By DAVID M. MAXFIELD
SMITHSONIAN NEWS SERVICE

"Carry-on" has become the travel catchword of the '80s. But what a change today's under-the-seat totes and synthetic satchels signal in the history of travel. Just consider this: In 1715, the third Earl of Burlington reportedly returned to England, after less than a year abroad, with 878 pieces of luggage!

In our own century, news photographs periodically pictured the Duke and Duchess of Windsor waiting on some dock beside a pile of 20 or 30 trunks, each reading, in beautiful white capital letters with serifs, THE DUKE OF WINDSOR. Their contemporary, playwright Noel Coward, once summed up changing travel styles in some telling dialogue: "How was your flight?" "Well," came the reply, "aeronautically, it was a great success. Socially, it left quite a bit to be desired."

As one wag points out, many species carry food for survival, but the human is the only animal that packs for a trip. And in a sense, to paraphrase the contemporary adage, "You are what you pack."

Whereas today's airline passenger often stores weeks' worth of travel needs in that collapsible carry-on, Victorians made do with a tally of trunks — not to mention birdcages, footrests, rugs, portable bathtubs, bedrolls, water bottles and food baskets aplenty.

"Luggage styles over the centuries have accurately expressed both changing social realities and changing modes of transportation," author/educator Paul Fussell comments. From these styles, he says, "a future archaeologist can infer something like the social history of the past two centuries."

Recently, in fact, the Cooper-Hewitt Museum, the Smithsonian's national museum of design in New York City, exhibited several hundred travel "artifacts" dating back to the Middle Ages. In the history of travel, Director Lisa Taylor says, such a study "has been strangely neglected."

Part of the reason, exhibit curator Deborah Shinn explains, is availability. "This project did require a lot of looking around," she says, since many travel items were never considered valuable and have simply vanished. "It was hard to find objects to illustrate early sea voyages," she notes, adding that even examples of once ubiquitous molded Samsonite in dreamed-for '50s hot pink now appear to be lost luggage.

But there were wonderful discoveries, many found in the collections of local historical societies. A conestoga wagon trunk made by Mark Cross about 1860 turned up, as did carpet bags, a portable sundial, a traveling inkstand owned by Charles Dickens, a traveling bed and a combined walking stick and violin. From our era came such eclectic specimens as a lunar sample container, a portable computer and a wicker picnic basket.

For sheer pizzazz, however, honors must go to the extraordinary collapsible tilbury carriage owned by a finicky woman who toured Persia early in the century. Except for the wheels, the whole thing fits snugly into three Chinese-red trunks.

Those were designed by Louis Vuitton, the prestige luggage-maker whose heirs sponsored the museum's exhibit and catalog. In that connection, the firm supplied a ransom of items fit for kings and mere mortals. Among the goods: luggage for a hot-air balloon (c. 1905); an astonishingly elegant traveling case crafted of snakeskin, sealskin, silver, brass and glass for the famed Polish pianist and statesman Ignace Paderewski, and a shoe trunk with slide-out, labeled drawers for 30 pairs of shoes.

Travelers come in many varieties: bindle-carrying hobos, campers bearing back-packs, astronauts swathed in life-sustaining space suits, high society members followed by monogrammed matched luggage and holiday-goers equipped with cameras and guidebooks. For nomads, travel is a way of life that has endured for millennia, while for emigrants, a single voyage can mean a fresh start. Yet it's hard to pin travelers down — to define them — since they may be on their way to work or headed for the moon.

British travel author H.G. Links points out that "traveling" in terms of sightseeing is a concept less than three centuries old. Before then, scarcely anyone took trips who did not have to do so. Ancient Romans journeyed widely on diplomatic missions and military campaigns. Medieval Christians made long pilgrimages from Europe to the Holy Land, and for political purposes. Renaissance princes frequently moved their courts from palace to palace.

The impulse to travel solely out of curiosity took hold only when 18th-century English gentlemen completed their educations with a "grand tour" on the continent. Leaving London in 1739, writer Horace Walpole and poet Thomas Gray followed their own tastes. "Except for pictures and statues," Walpole confessed, "we are not very fond of sights."

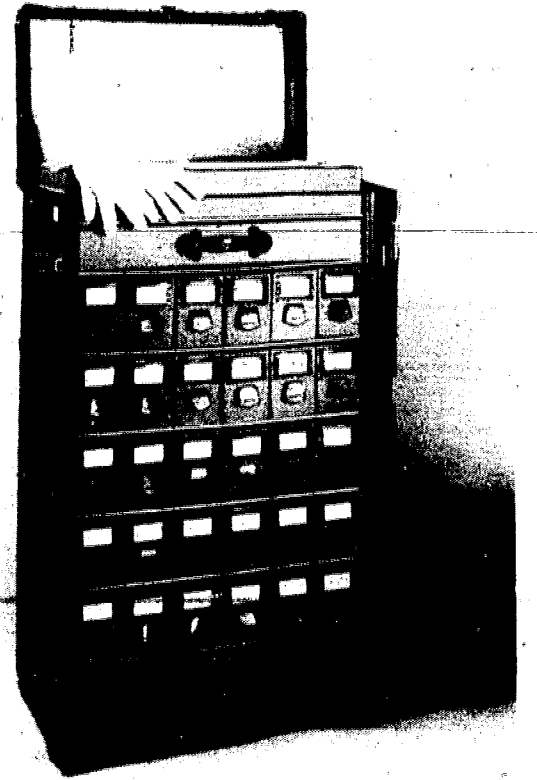

But what to pack? As one seasoned traveler, who acknowledges an addiction to browsing for luggage, remarks, "it is surprising how hard it is to decide what to pack and what to pack it in." Portability and protection, however, have always remained constants for people on the go. For centuries leather has been used because it is impervious to wind, rain and snow. But as the critic Brendan Gill recently noted in commenting on the "great revolution of our day — light luggage," leather "weighs almost as much empty as it does full." While fine cases of iron, leather and wood protected precious 15th-century books, today's business people carry their documents and yogurt containers in briefcases with individualized combination locks.

Changes in luggage design have come with the whims of fashion and advances in transportation technology. As curator Shinn observes, the advent of train travel in the 19th century altered earlier shapes that were crafted to fit the contours of horse-drawn coaches. Dome-topped trunks that deflected the elements when stacked on top of carriages gave way to large trunks with straight sides and metal reinforcing mounts that could be stacked in baggage cars. The heyday of oceanliner called for large steamer trunks designed to serve as closets or dressing tables or even as writing desks in passengers' staterooms.

The trend in luggage design since the early 1900s has "progressed" from heavy to lightweight, from complex to simple, from elegant to plain. There are many reasons for this, according to Fussell. Not long ago, the motto was "Dress Up." Even in second- and third-class hotels and pensions, everyone dressed for dinner. Women required dresses for sightseeing, afternoon dresses for tea and, of course, gowns for evening. Also to be packed,

Fussell adds, were "lots of beads, handbags, gloves, scarves, together with hats, hats, hats."

The trend now, as Fussell puts it, is to "conspicuously Dress Down," the change showing up in both men's and women's carry-ons. The collar case, a stiff-sided round box made to hold detachable shirt collars, and essential part of a gentleman's luggage early in the century, is now ancient history. Its place is taken by the backpack and the hanging garment bag, not as elegant perhaps, but well suited for today's informality and great change in travel customs. Bon Voyage!

Y seniors plan trip

A trip to Hyde Park to see the Vanderbilt mansion and FDR's home is being planned by the YM-YWHA Older Adult Department in Green Lane, Union, for Wednesday "at the height of the fall foliage season."

The full-day trip will include admissions, lunch, snack and transportation.

Reservations for this and other outings and extended trips can be made with Min Doughlen at 289-8112. A complete monthly schedule of clubs, classes, and trips is included in the senior newsletter, available by request at the Y or by calling 289-8112.

Rebecca's forecast

For week of Oct. 9 through Oct. 16

ARIES (3/21-4/20) Rather ho-hum trends prevail early in this period. Emphasis remains on key relationships and further stabilizing of those ties may be in order. Later, unsettling news may not be reliable, restricting financial trends of the past two years begin to recede and new avenues of employment emerge.

TAURUS (4/21-5/21) Visits with relatives or neighbors usher in this week. Social inclinations remain strong and group meetings or discussions are favored. Later, elders or those in authority may not be as supportive as you would like. Domestic relations see-saw and expect financial news to brighten weeks end.

GEMINI (5/22-6/21) Important breakthroughs are indicated, those at or from a distance assume importance. Seize new opportunities that come your way now. Later, side-step trivial disagreements. Team efforts are rewarded and travel plans are discussed. Important goings on revolve around family or work interests.

CANCER (6/22-7/23) Accent remains on home and career issues. Schedule changes in either area break monotony. Pay heed to rumors or gossip you overhear; reliability will be proven. Later in the week, creative expression is favored, private dilemmas are resolved and intuitive hunches give you an edge now.

LEO (7/24-8/23) Focus is on legal or financial development during this week. A change in residence may be contemplated by some and additions to the family circle are indicated for others. Later, money is spent on home improvements. Domestic relations need careful handling and school issues arise with children.

VIRGO (8/24-9/23) Your own irritability may trigger needless disputes early in the week, allow others to help you now. A more cooperative attitude is necessary now and in weeks ahead. Later, enjoy a break in your routine, visit with friends or loved ones and spruce up your appearance, polish your style.

LIBRA (9/24-10/23) Be mindful of the impression you make during this period, an extra measure of confidence may make it difficult for others to deal with you. Arrogance is never becoming! Later, extra thought on your part will boost finances, communications assume importance and perhaps offer benefits.

SCORPIO (10/24-11/22) Some personal achievement of satisfaction is indicated for many during this week. Smooth over domestic issues and tackle overdue repairs or fix-ups. Later in the week, rewards from past efforts begin to emerge, discussions with relatives or siblings and dealings with those from your past.

SAGITTARIUS (11/23-12/21) Be alert to problems with travel, correspondence or siblings interests early in the week. Mechanical breakdowns are possible and be extra careful if handling electrical or explosive items. Later, mixed aspects surround a family members decision and others' private indulgences may be harmful.

CAPRICORN (12/22-1/20) You're more convincing than ever during this period. Words and actions may be noted. Use extreme care in what you say or write. Later, you will be feeling worried over financial issues and less likely to spend, group or club involvement escalates and siblings actions touch your life.

AQUARIUS (1/21-2/19) Most will be feeling more optimistic and confident than in recent months, important financial transactions are indicated and dealings with elders or those in authority are highlighted. Later, accept social invitations, but remember to keep your reputation on the up and up or you lose out.

PISCES (2/20-3/20) Once again this period highlights interests related to people. Places or situations at a distance, in-laws assume importance for some and efforts from the past may yield rewards for many. Later, creative pursuits are favored and a new look or style begins to emerge, confidence is high.

Parents: read to youngsters

By BETH GIORDANO
and FRAN SULLIVAN

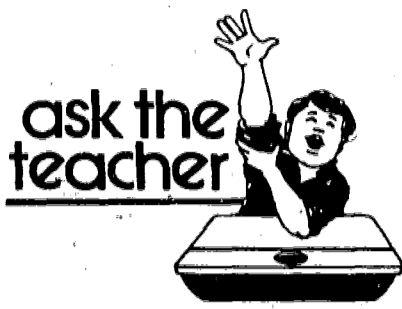

Q. You have often referred to the role of parents in their child's education. Quite honestly, all the parents I know want their kids to do well in school, but all they ever really do is help with the homework, and ask what the child did in school everyday. What things should parents be doing to help children get A's and eventually get accepted at good colleges?

MRS. L.G.

A. It's a mystery to us, as it is to most teachers, why so many parents truly believe that when they deposit their child in a school at age 5, he or she will come out at age 18 with a string of honors, all ready for Yale. Helping with homework, attending "Parent's Night" once a year and asking "What did you do in school today?" while rushing to get dinner together isn't going to do it. Neither will threats if marks are bad.

If you want to have smart children, here's a place to start: Read to them. If you can't, ask others to do it. When they know how to read, encourage them to read on their own — there's many ways you can accomplish this—ask your child's teacher or ask us. Meet with teachers if you can to make sure homework is being done. Give children space to work in, as well as materials, and tell them not once but a million times about the immense value you place on a good education.

Instill social skills like politeness, manners and sensitivity toward the feelings of others. Curtail TV and show them a new world by taking a ride to another environment on a Sunday. Listen to them and offer encouragement and praise so they'll develop confidence and self esteem.

Finally, set a super example. Please be aware that volumes have been written on this subject. In upcoming weeks we'll print a few excellent recommendations.

Q. My mother says my 8-year-old son watches too much TV. He watches after dinner, from around 5:30 till he goes to bed around 8 or 8:30. He does his homework when he gets home from school. Some shows are educational even the sitcoms nowadays. I think it's good for him to see these various situations. I think he learns a lot. TV isn't what it used to be years ago. What is your opinion?

RONIL.

A. If he watches TV from 5:30 to 8:30 on weeknights, that's 15 hours. If he watches five hours of cartoons or others shows on weekends, that's 20 hours a week altogether. And that's entirely too much.

Death teaches lesson in living to four boys

By MARK HAVILAND

Two popular talents have come together in director Rob Reiner's latest film, "Stand By Me," which is an adaptation of horror master Stephen King's novella "The Body."

The story is a notable departure for the modern master of unspeakable horror, and as King admits in a recent interview, it has a decidedly autobiographical angle to it.

Four 12-year-old boys, growing up in the 1950s, embark on an odyssey to find the body of another 12-year-old who has been struck by a train and killed. But their morbid quest for the body is not really the heart of the story.

Focus on film

Instead, it is the lessons they learn about life and death, growing up, and each other, that is the focal point.

One of the characters, Gordon LaChance, is an aspiring storyteller and he narrates their adventure from his perspective as an adult, a small part by actor Richard Dreyfuss.

The ensemble of four young actors are all excellent, displaying none of the phony cuteness that is typical of child and teen actors. There is also some excellent pop music tunes from the 1950s, which should bring back memories for some members of the audience. "Stand By Me" is one of the best films so far in a year with a lot of cinematic turkeys.

This film is rated R, mostly for language.

Computer Expo slated

If you're a chess buff, how would you like to play against a computer? Or watch two computers play chess against each other?

You can do both—and more—at the Campus Expo '86 at Union County College in Cranford, Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Whether experts or novices, visitors will have an opportunity to pit their skills against Sargon III or Psion Chess on a micro computer.

Dave Lazarus, a programmer/analyst in UCC's Computer Center, who holds a master's rating in the U.S. Chess Federation, will coordinate the "chess challenge" of people with and against computers. Players will be able to see the game on a screen in front of them in three-dimensional graphic displays. A number of multiple micro computers will be set up so that six to eight people may participate at the same time. Lazarus will be on hand all day to help visitors enjoy their favorite game with the added excitement of high technology equipment.

In addition to the challenge of computerized chess, the college's all-day event this year will feature numerous examples of how computers are used in the classroom in various curricula. Workshops, demonstrations by college faculty members and high school students, seminars, a computer flea market, commercial exhibits by more than 25 local computer firms, and a computer book sale are some of the many ongoing program events.

"We invite the entire Union County community to attend our Computer Expo '86 without charge as a community service," Dean Cynthia Niv of Springfield, Computer Expo chairwoman says. "We plan to provide a significant program for educators while informing the public of the impact computers are having on the delivery of education," the dean says.

Favors and refreshments will be available throughout the day.

Steel's latest novel a winning tale

By BEA SMITH

Millions of Danielle Steel readers will be delighted to know that the writer's latest book, "Wanderlust," is a winner.

This, Steel's 18th novel, was published this year by Delacorte Press, New York, and to a non-follower of Steel stories, the reviewer, nevertheless, feels that the book reaches over and beyond the stories in the soaps.

Unlike some of Steel's tomes, at least those that this reader has read, which vie for the drama in the afternoon and evening soap operas on television, "Wanderlust" is filled with interesting, but somehow two-dimensional people. There is Audrey Driscoll, a sensible, sensitive, unfulfilled woman, who, orphaned as a child, is forced to take care of an eccentric, selfish millionaire uncle, Edward Driscoll, who is 81 years old at the start of the story, and a beautiful, completely spoiled sister, Annabelle, with whom she lives in a huge house in San Francisco.

It seems that Audrey's parents were killed while traveling, and the girls' father, with his wanderlust, could never stay in one place long enough to relax. Now Audrey's grandfather, who loves to complain about his soft boiled eggs in the morning and politics — the setting is the early 1930s — is starting to worry about Audrey's restlessness. He fears that she has inherited a wanderlust from her father and will leave him as his son once did.

And she does. But not before her grandfather, her sister and her sister's new husband put her through the ringer. Ultimately, the long-suffering "old maid" takes off for a life of grand adventure. Aboard the luxurious Queen Mary bound for England, Audrey mingles with the high society international set of artists and expatriates. She is introduced to Charles Parker-Scott, a writer of international affairs, and before long, finds herself traveling with him on the Orient Express to China. Conflicts arise when he proposes to her, she turns him down because she still feels obligated to return to her selfish family.

The novel, if somewhat reminiscent of some of the better continuing stories on television, still has its many intrigues. It appears Steel knows the countries about which she writes, and she's a fine story teller. Her characters are appealing, if not wholly recognizable, for she does not delve too deeply into their souls. Still, they do make a reader care about what happens to them.

"Wanderlust" may not be one of Danielle Steel's greatest novels, but it has enough to keep plenty of women interested enough to wait for and wonder what the next one will be all about.

4-H clubs seeking new members

Erika U. Fields, County 4-H Agent, has announced the reorganization of the Dungeons and Dragons 4-H Club. Joan Crout, leader of the club, is seeking new members. The group will meet every Friday evening between 7:15 and 8:30 p.m. at the Cooperative Extension Office, 300 North Ave., East, Westfield.

Anyone between the ages of 12 to 18 interested in joining the club, can contact Molly B. Wells, 4-H program assistant, at 233-9366. The 4-H is the youth program of Rutgers Cooperative Extension. Its programs are open to all, it was announced.

The Union County 4-H Youth Development Program will be reorganizing the 4-H Small Animals Club this fall. The group will meet at the Union County Cooperative Extension Office.

Edward Wimbush, new small animals 4-H leader, is seeking members for his club. Boys and girls between 9 and 19 who own a small animal as a pet can join, he says.

He also says that teens who would enjoy the opportunity to meet other teens from all over New Jersey and to gain on-site experience in the area of Marine Science can attend the seventh annual 4-H Marine Science Weekend, tomorrow to Sunday at the New Jersey Marine Sciences Consortium, Route 9, Seaville.

Open to teens 14 to 19, seminars will include studying marine life in the salt marsh, surf, ocean and laboratory. Both plant and animal life will be studied and information on various topics will be discussed in marine science. Cost of the weekend is $55. Additional information and registration can be obtained by contacting Betty Jean Jesuncosky, County 4-H agent, Cooperative Extension Service, Dennisville Road, Route 657, Cape May Court House, N.J. Phone 609-465-5115.

NEW JERSEY 4-H LEADERS' FORUM held at Beemerville 4-H Camp in Sussex, was the site of the fourth annual 4-H Leaders' Forum.

Many 4-H leaders from the state attended last weekend's learning experience, including Arleen Rankin and Anne Glasser of Union County. The event was open to all New Jersey 4-H leaders, and two full scholarships were offered for each county, courtesy of the New Jersey 4-H Development Fund and the New Jersey Department of Agriculture.

The annual event is planned by volunteer 4-H leaders and sponsored by the Rutgers 4-H Youth Development Program in cooperation with the State 4-H Advisory Council.

Ballet starts series

The New Jersey Ballet will start the new dance session with plans to premiere two new works this month and in November, and another two in the spring. Carolyn Clark, executive artistic director of the company, has announced that she is discussing works with such choreographers as Robert North, Norbert Vesak, resident choreographer George Tomal and Agnes DeMille and plans to add two Balanchine ballets to the company repertoire.

Clark also has announced that Eleanor D'Antuono, international dance star and former American Ballet Theater principal dancer, will join New Jersey Ballet Co. staff and appear as guest artist in concerts during the season.

For its 1986-87 season, the ballet company will offer two subscription series, with six concerts at the John Harms Center, Englewood, and five concerts at the Wilkins Theater, Kean College of New Jersey, Union. The opening concert for the season will be Saturday at the John Harms Center and will premiere a new work, and the Kean College season will open Oct. 18.

A pre-holiday fund raiser, the company's third annual ball, will be held Nov. 22 at Beneficial Management headquarters in Peapack. The theme will be "Safari Night," and the event will be highlighted by a company performance and an auction of animal prints by wildlife artist Guy Coleach.

The ballet company's annual presentation of the "Nutcracker" will begin with performances at John Harms Center on Dec. 11, 12 and 13, and will open at the Paper Mill Playhouse, Millburn, the following week, Dec. 18 through Dec. 23, and again Dec. 26 to 28, with two performances daily. It will have a cast of more than 70 members and music by members of the New Jersey Symphony Orchestra.

Ticket information can be obtained by calling 567-5997, 527-2337 and 376-4343. Information about other performances can be obtained by calling the New Jersey Ballet Co. at 736-5940.

Foreign films planned

"Amacord," the first in a series of foreign films, all part of Union County College's Cultural Arts Festival, will be presented at the college tomorrow.

The films will be shown during this month, February and April on Friday evenings at 8 o'clock in the Campus Theater on the Cranford campus.

The showing of "Amacord," the Italian Academy Award-winner, based on Federico Fellini's recollections of his youth in pre-war

Italy, will initiate the Cultural Arts Festival's third "Foreign Film Festival" season. The story centers around a man who longs for the freedom of adulthood. Fellini celebrates the kinship that exists in his town, yet is aware of its shortcomings that paved the way for fascism.

"Autum Sonata," the Swedish film, directed by Ingmar Bergman, casts Liv Ullman and Ingrid Bergman as daughter and mother. The movie will be presented Oct. 17.

Initial concert

The Plainfield Symphony will present the first concert of the 1986-1987 season Saturday at 8 p.m. in the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Church under the baton of Maestro George Marriner Maull. Featured works this season will include Strauss' "The Emporer Waltz," Bizet's "Suite from Carmen," and Mussorgsky's "Pictures at an Exhibition."

Entering its 67th year, the Plainfield Symphony, is a group of 70 professional and non-professional musicians.

Additional information can be obtained by calling 561-5140, Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

'Voice' parts

Dean Hatlestad, president of The Masterwork Chorus, has announced openings for all voice parts for its fall season. The requirements are "an ability to stay on pitch, a blending voice, and some ability to read music."

Beginning its 32nd year, the chorus, under the direction of David Randolph, is rehearsing Beethoven's "C Major Mass" and Handel's greatest choral work, "Messiah."

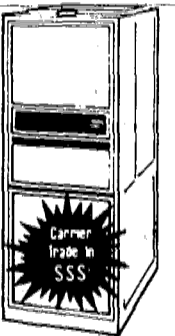

Rehearsals are held every Wednesday evening at 8 at Masterwork's headquarters on Main Street in Brookside.

Further information about rehearsals can be obtained by calling the Masterwork Music and Art Foundation at 543-3212.
