

The entertaining side of the campaign

By David M. Maxfield Smithsonian News Service

"Senate Candidates Rush to Television to Define Their Images," a headline in one newspaper announced in July as the 1986 election campaigns began heating up. In their haste, the candidates more and more seem to be bypassing, such memorable traditions as town-square rallies and handouts of buttons, banners and ribbons once prized by American voters.

As one political historian puts it, "In the privacy of our respective living rooms, there is no contagious enthusiasm compelling us to demonstrate our political loyalties to each other with insignia of various sorts."

And yet the shift from street parade to TV sceen can be overstated, say the members of a research team at the Smithsonian's National Museum of American History in Washington, D.C. The staff is examining the role campaign devices play in the political process. "This stuff has been relegated to the back seat," Larry Bird, a member of the team, acknowledges. But "if a candidate doesn't have some of these things, then, in the voter's mind, he or she is not a candidate, does not exist. 'Where's the campaign?' everyone asks."

The Smithsonian collection of campaign memorabilia — at best count, in the neighborhood of 60,000 objects — represents the "selling" of federal candidates from Washington to Reagan. The specimens range from rare, hand-painted banners, sets of china, torches, coins and "curiosities" to T-shirts and videotapes. There are samples of simple, massproduced lapel button pins — KEEP COOLIDGE; there are the "unusual" items hairbrushes and electric bow ties bearing the names of favorite sons, and there are one-of-akind specimens, among them the ostrich egg political shrine crafted in the '50s by on of Adlai Stevenson's ardent admirers.

Historians and others have written extensively

ELECTION YEAR campaign objects have included bumper stickers, hats, buttons, medals, pins, bandannas, coins, T-shirts, videotapes and board games. about campaigning, of course, but "the idea of analyzing political campaign objects as devices for the marketing of ideas and candidates has, so far as we know, never been tested systematically," project director Dr. Keith Melder explains. Adds Edith Mayo,, another team member: "With objects, you see repeated slogans, repeated visual devices. More than with documents, you see what was reaching the public."

Building an image for a candidate was as important in George Washington's day as it is now. Just the methods of communicatin have changed. "Campaigns will take whatever forms are popular and adapt them for political ends," Bird says. "The question is the same in the 1980s as in the 1940s: "What's effective?"

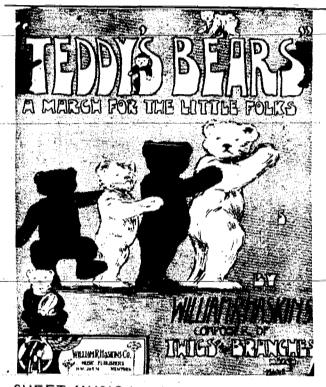

CERAMIC OBJECTS were especially popular in 19th century campaigns. In 1848, Zachary Taylor, 'Old Rough and Ready,' appeared on delicate housewares.

Long before television, campaign managers and "media" experts, including writers and artists, experimented with various ways to present their candidates to the public. From the first, campaigns had a military bearing, though sometimes candidates' records were embellished almost beyond recognition. Some images grew out of the personalities of the contenders: Lincoln the "railslitter" was contrived at the 1980 Illinois Republican Convention but was based on Abe's frontier past.

These images were reflected by various objects that often signaled the opinions and qualities voters wanted in their leaders. Objects "created a bond between the candidate and his supporters, and gave his cause social credibility," Melder says.

At no time was this more true than during the 1896 skirmish between William Jennings Bryan — a crusader for the common man, a foe of the gold and monopoly — and William McKinley, a crusader for conservatism, the protective tariff and sound money. To Melder, the campaign was a "hard-fought, expensive, unprecedented image contest."

With the nation in the most severe depression to date, the obvious issue was prosperity and how to regain it. The McKinley camp vehemently preached that leaving the gold standard would guarantee financial ruin, to which Bryan, electrifying the public, declared: "You shall not crucify mankind upon a cross of gold."

The intensity of rhetoric was matched by a voter's need for something to show his loyalty to McKinley or Bryan. "Eventually," notes Fred Voss, a historian at the Smithsonian's National Portrait Gallery, "the trove of mementos for 1896 contained one of the richest assortments of partisan sundries ever to come out of a presidential race."

Whatever the occasion, there was, or so it seemed, a McKinley or Bryan item: Bathers could wash with soap endorsed by either candidate. Republican children could play with McKinley dolls. Their Democratic playmates could blow "free silver" whistles. Ashtrays and cigar holders, walking sticks and watches were but a few products of human activity that didn't escape political partisanship.

It is not unknown for a candidate's image to be crafted — and successfully at that — out of a campaign mix-up. Such was the case in the 1840 contest between Willaim Henry Harrison ("Tippecanoe and Tyler Too") and Martin Van Buren. Harrison, a Whig, came from aristocratic Ohio roots, but a Democratic newspaper suggested that the candidate could best serve his country by retiring to a cabin back home.

thing from sheet music to cider barrels, giving Harrison an image of humble, down-home origin. Clearly, the campaign had struck the public's love of the "common touch" that threads through later presidencies of Lincoln, haberdasher Harry Truman, peanut farmer Jimmy Carter and, surprisingly perhaps; Ronald Reagan, a man often photographed on horseback or splitting wood at his mountaintop ranch.

Political historians consider the 1840 contest "the first media campaign," and for good reason. An outpouring of manufactured keepsakes made possible by the steam of the Industrial Revolution assured that each candidate would have a supply of snuff boxes, kerchiefs and ceramics for his supporters. The campaign broke other ground. The distribution aeross the nation of the likeness of Harrison on ribbons and other devices marked one of the first times voters could Campaigns, of course, are never all sweetness and baby-kissing. Vilification has its own long tradition. As early as 1828, Andrew Jackson, the great populist, was hit with accusations of being a would-be emperor, a murderer, duelist and adulterer, among other things. His opponent, John Quincy Adams, was written off by many as an effete snob. In the media extravaganza of 1840, the Harrison forces, having made hay of their critics' sniping, made sure that Van Buren was down and out by "suggesting" that he was a corseted, luxury-lover who used French perfume and dined at the White Houe on goldplated tableware -all that during the depression of 1837.

Surviving political memorabilia often has special value in that the objects show graphically why a campaign went awry. Voss points to the 1856 campaign of John G. Fremont, who had won fame as an explorer of the American West. The new Republican Party's first can-see how their candidate looked - no small matter then or now.

In the 1830s and '40s, many items such as plates, spoons and pitchers were produced with women in mind. Though they were not enfranchised, women had considerable indirect and informal influence in the political process in those days. "Women," Mayo explains, "were considered mothers of the Republic," and the objects were associated with the Victorian cult of the home - a refuge, a place of sanctity. But the paradox," Mayo points out, "was that these items were mass produced.

of the television age. The Republicans, Bird explains, best understood and utilized the vast communication changes taking place.

Bird shows a visitor a brochure from Ike's camp. It bears large black-and-white photographs and terse captions. If the resemblance to a TV spot is somehow missed, a line of type on the cover advises: "Reading time — 40 seconds." A second brochure, a Stevenson ad, looks dated for its time. "It borders," Bird says, "on the visual, but there is a lot of print compared to the Copublican ad.

Whether the campaign devices come in the form of buttons or the latest 20-second TV spots, the Smithsonian political historians agree_that_they_surely_add to the spirit and color that has long been part of American campaigns. Savs Melder: "It seems to me that the serious study of politics has tended to overlook the entertainment side of it. The show-putting on a display to hold the crowd is as old as Greek civilization."

Children and TV topic

By BETH GIORDANO and FRAN SULLIVAN

Q. In a recent column you said 20 hours a week in front of the TV was too much for kids. We agree, and so do a lot of other mothers.

We think it's important for your readers to know that in early October some children's TV characters Sesame Street, Capt. Kangaroo and others — met with lawmakers in Washington DC to get a campaign going to make televison more relevant to children. The week of Oct. 6 was proclaimed "National Children's Television Awareness Week" and the goal was to get children to stop watching violent and overtly commerical shows.

N.J. Senator Frank Lautenberg and Representative Tim Wirth of Colorado introduced the Children's Television Education Act which would require broadcast and cable TV stations to carry a minimum of seven hours a week of educational or informative children's programming. I'm sure your' interested readers could write to Sen. Lautenberg for more information or simply to voice their support. Mr. M.L. and Mrs. R.T.H.

Comment-Lots of activity took place that week. We understand public service announcements were made on television, educational pamphlets designed to educate both parents and children were distributed heavily, and a number of governors signed proclamations. One lawmaker was quoted as saying by the time the average child has been graduated from high school, he or she has watched the equivalent of seven years of television. Pretty scary.

Q. A friend of mine told me the latest literacy study tells us that 95 out of 100 young American adults can 'read as well as the average fourth-grader. Is this true?

John L. A. Yes. We're preparing a column on the topic of literacy for publication in upcoming weeks. Watch for it.

UCC sets Statue celebration

The actual birthday of the Statue of Liberty falls at the end of October. To commemorate this moment in history, Union County College is sponsoring a day-long Ellis Island Centennial Celebration on Saturday, Oct. 25, at its Cranford Campus.

The celebration will feature a conference entitled "Literature and the Immigrant Experience'' which will explore the role that literature has played in reflecting the dreams, successes and frustrations of the many immigrants who have come to America. This event, which will begin at 9 a.m. and end at 8:30 p.m., will include workshops, panels, photo and art exhibits, and films, as well as a reading by well-known athor Rosa Guy.

The International Cultural Exchange group at the College will sponsor multi cultural entertainment, a festival of favorite foods, and an array of international costumes and crafts.

The community at large as well as students and staff at Union County College are invited to participate in the conference which will begin with coffee and registration at the Campus Center at 9 a.m., followed by a welcome address by Dr. Derek N. Nunney of Summit, UCC president. The keynote address entitled "The Literatures of America," will be delivered by Dr. Arnold Rampersad, professor of English at Rutgers University.

Concurrent sessions on a number of topics will follow from 10:45 a.m. to 12:15 p.m. These will include two workshops: "Count These Women

Dundee film sets record at the box office

By MARK HAVILAND A New York photojournalist heads off to the wilds of Australia to meet a local legend who has survived a fierce battle with a crocodile, and who calls himself "Crocodile Dundee."

The film of the same name, currently playing in local theaters, is one of the best films of the year, due considerably to the instantly likable Australian television and film personality, Paul Hogan, who plays the title character. You will leave the theater wanting to imitate his dry wit and Australian accent. The two funny scenes in the commercials for the film are similar to many more such moments of wit that stretch from the beginning to the end of this Australian-made film. The journalist, played by New York stage actress Linda Kozlowski. finds that Dundee is much more human than his legends would suggest. Just as she adjusts to unusual Australian people and the country's wilderness, so Dundee must learn to adjust to the strange people and urban wilderness of New York City when she brings him back to his first trip to America and big cities.

This film is setting box office records in Australia, and is doing so again in this country. "Crocodile Dundee" has outpaced the so-called Hollywood blockbusters of the past year, and it deserves to do so, because it is a consistently better film.

ARIES (3/21-4/20) Partnerships and relationships now command all of your attention. Financial issues will play a key role and you're likely to experience some very mixed feelings during this week. Later, your tolerance is put to the test, but ultimately others' decisions and actions are necessary at this time.

TAURUS (4/21-5/21) Romantic, social and recreational interests dominate this period. Amorous feelings are easily aroused and mutually reciprocated. You're the object of someones affections right now. Later, temptations arise, secret affairs are highlighteo and personal going-ons offer food for thought.

GEMINI (5/22-6/21) Career, health and dependants interests are intensified all during this week, and some tension in any of these areas is probable for many. Later, keep emotional reactions in check, schedule medical appointments if necessary and end of the week rewards may change your immediate perspective.

CANCER (6/22-7/23) Important financial considerations are likely during this period. You are easily agitated and trivial disputes are the end result. Romantic desires may be frustrated because of your own inner turmoil. Old or unfinished business must be attended to once and for all, unusual occurences arise.

LEO (7/24-8/23) This is a favorable period to resolve long standing emotional dilemmas, your own perception is heightened and this clearly gives you the edge. Later, residence or living arrangements dominate your thoughts. Your own priorities are changing and perseverance and tact yield you results now.

VIRGO (8/24-9/23) Activities revolve around friends, loved ones and co-workers early in the week. Keep financial planning realistic and learn to splurge on yourself once in a while. Later in the week expect to be extra busy. Home front activities are favored and news or messages complete the week

LIBRA (9/24-10/23) This is a good period to reorganize your affairs, devote time to think and plan and clear away unfinished business. Avoid commiting to new ventures at this time; leisure activities are favored. Later in the week, you feel introspective, don't fight it as much activity unfolds in weeks ahead.

SCORPIO (10/24-11/22) This is a favorable period to see and be seen. Share your opinions and ideas and take the lead in all matters that are important to you. Your tactics are changing....others are noticing. Later in the week, dealings with elders or supervisors are highlighted and new, opportunities as well

SAGITTARIUS (11/23-12/21) There's a lot going on behind the scenes these days! You may be feeling moody and out of touch and important relationships suffer under the strain. Later, old anxieties creep up on you, self esteem wavers and your personal energy level may be low. You must get to the root of personal issues.

CAPRICORN (12/22-1/20) Remain alert to all going-ons in employment matters, specifically involving co-workers. Romantic, creative and children's interests are highlighted and gains in any of these areas is evident. Later, you receive a helping hand and anothers views offer you valuable insight; take advantage.

AQUARIUS (1/21-2/19) The disquieting period begun several months ago reaches a climax during this week. Personal commitments and obligations are sorted out and one way or another decisions are reached. Later, you feel more energetic, less burdened and more inclined to push forward than to linger in the past.

PISCES (2/20-3/20) Its's more important to respect your limitations now than to test your capabilities. Money matters continue to be a dominant theme for many and other resources could provoke conflicts. Later in the week, drifting off in your own little world may help to resolve pending issues and decisions.

Leaf compost is not normally considered a fertilizer because it is too low in nutrients. But this dark, crumbly material with an earthy odor is valuable for improving the physical, chemical and biological properties of the soil.

Most New Jersey soils need an increase of ½ to 1 percent in organic matter. Sandy soils, such as loamy sands, and soils with very high clay content are improved most. Organic matter influences the physical condition, water-holding capacity, and temperature of the soil, and especially affects the soil bacterial processes which help make mineral salts available to plants.

Among the specific benefits derived from adding leaf compost of New Jersey soils are:

-Drought damage to plants is reduced because of increased waterholding capacity of the soils.

Soils are easier to cultivate. -Very small amounts of the 16 essential elements needed for plant growth are supplied. -Adverse effects of excessive

Irish night set

The Mother Seton Parent Guild on Valley Road in Clark will sponsor its annual Irish night tomorrow at 9:30. Richie O'Shea and the Frank Keegan Band will be featured. As an added attraction, Irish dancers will perform. Tickets, which will be sold in advance, may be obtained by contacting Mr. and Mrs. Savarese at 241-1809 or 382-1952.

alkalinity, acidity, or overfertilization are reduced by the added buffering of the soil.

-The cation exchange capacity of soils is increased, enabling the soils to hold more plant nutrients for longer periods.

Garden spots

-Decomposition of the organic matter produces organic acids which combine with iron and aluminum ions, thereby reducing their potential toxicity to plants. This also makes more phosphorus available for plants because free iron and aluminum can tie up the phosphates.

-The added organic matter provides a food source for desirable soil microorganisms:

-When incorporated into the soil or used in a mulch, 1/16- to 1/8 inch thick, compost helps seeds to generate.

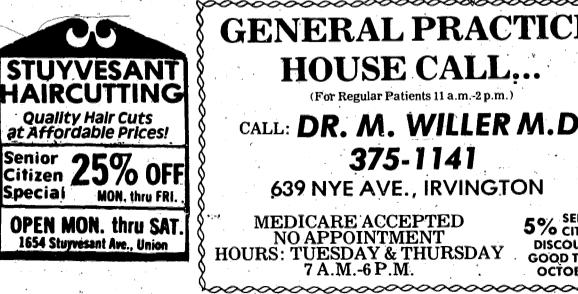

A good rate of organic matter to work into most New Jersey cultivated soils is 25 to 50 bushels of leaf compost per 1,000 square feet of area, which is equivalent to a 3/8 to 3/4 inch depth of leaf compost. It should be uniformly spread over the soil surface and mixed into the top six to eight inches of soil.

Two free leaflets are available, "Backyard Leaf Composting" and "Using Leaf Compost," by contacting the Union County Cooperative Extension Service, 300 North Ave., Westfield.

Burnette discusses his music By MILT HAMMER

Pick of the LPs, "Soldier of Love," by Billy Burnette (Curb MCA Records)

The first verse of "Little Bit of Them in Me," the closing song of Billy Burnette's new album, "Soldier of Love," talks about the music of his childhood and how the people and emotions of our past are eternally present within us. In Burnette's case, music was virtually unavoidable. The son of Dorsey Burnette and nephew of Johnny, his past reverberates with some of the sweetest music of the American heartland. Billy's father and uncle carved a permanent niche for themselves in the history of pop music with a series of rockabilly records whose influence has been pervasive for two decades. Billy's music exhibits the same virtues -economy, clarity, emotional directness and polished craftsmanship — in an utterly modern setting.

"I call this album 'high tech "We said Burnette. county. recorded in Nashville but mixed at the Record Plant in New York. But those kinda categories don't really mean much. A lot of what they call country music today was rock and roll when my old man was doing it."

zillions of 'em. But once you learn a few licks and get the bug (see "Guitar Bug" from his previous MCA LP), you can't put it down. I haven't really stopped playing since." One of the earliest songs he learned, the Lennon-McCartney's classic, "I've Just Seen A Face," opens side two of his new album. "I have always loved that song," he said with a wide grin, "and from what we can tell, amazingly enough,

"Looks Like It's Going to Rain Today" to the punch of "What A Perfect Way," "Soldier of Love" displays all of Burnette's multiple strengths. "Let's Take a Drive" is a classic celebration of the open road that would bring a smile to the face of his rockabilly forebears while "Blonde Ambition" is as entertaining as its title.

Burnette, who was nominated as "Best New Country Vocalist" last year's Country Music Awards, says 'there's more southerness to this album than my last. It musta been all that catfish and all those froglegs I ate as we cut it." Whatever the explanation, "Soldier of Love" has all the warmth of an Alabama breeze and the fun of a night on the town. It is an exciting new work from an important and growing artist

Most of "Soldier of Love" was written by Burnette and producer David Malloy with various other collaborators. Malloy has made a considerable mark in recent years for his work with Eddie Rabbitt, Dolly Parton, Kenny Rogers and Roseann Cash. It took the pair about a month to prepare the material before cutting with an ace session band: Paul Leim on drums, Michael Lawler on keyboards, Bill Jo Walker on guitars, Spady Brannan on bass and Burnette himself adding acoustic guitar. The result is an engaging, effervescent album with a wide musical and emotional range. From the delicate melancholy of in the front yard go on and on. The decision as to whether a yard sign will go up is yours. Yard signs are not appropriate or necessary for marketing all homes and in all locations. However they do have some positive elements when it comes to marketing your home. For example:

1. When a prospect makes an inquiry in response to a sign, he or she has already approved the location.

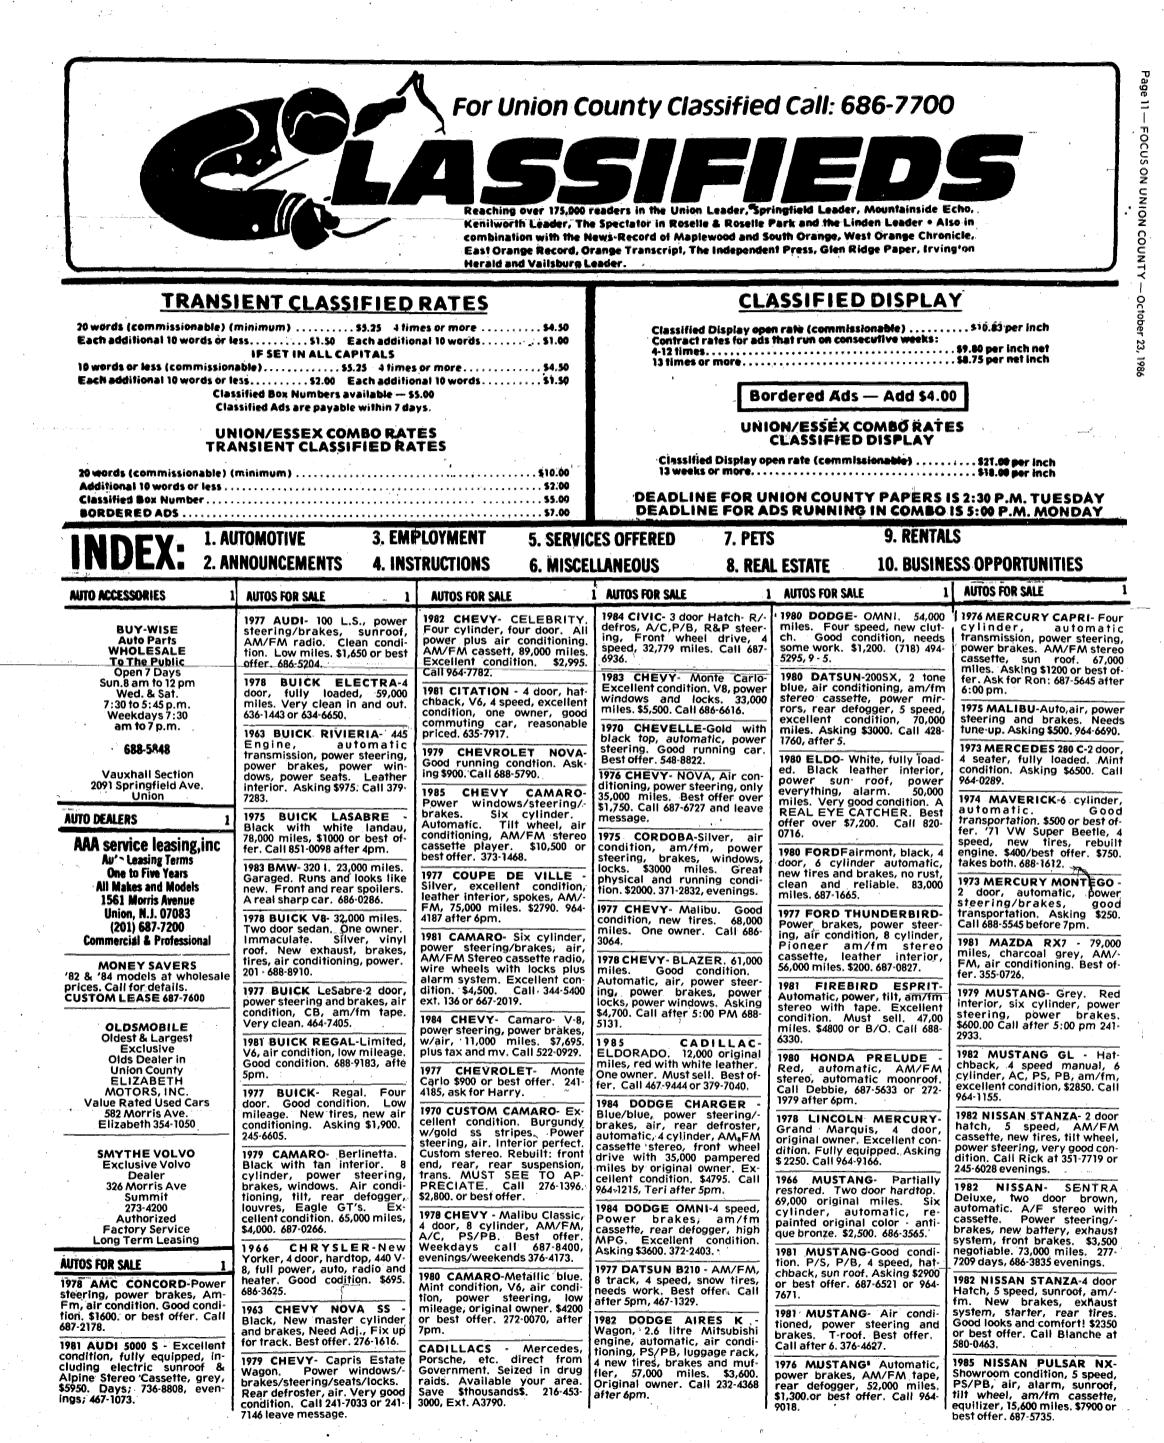

2. The prospect calling in response to a yard sign has already seen part of the grounds and exterior of the house and is calling for more information.

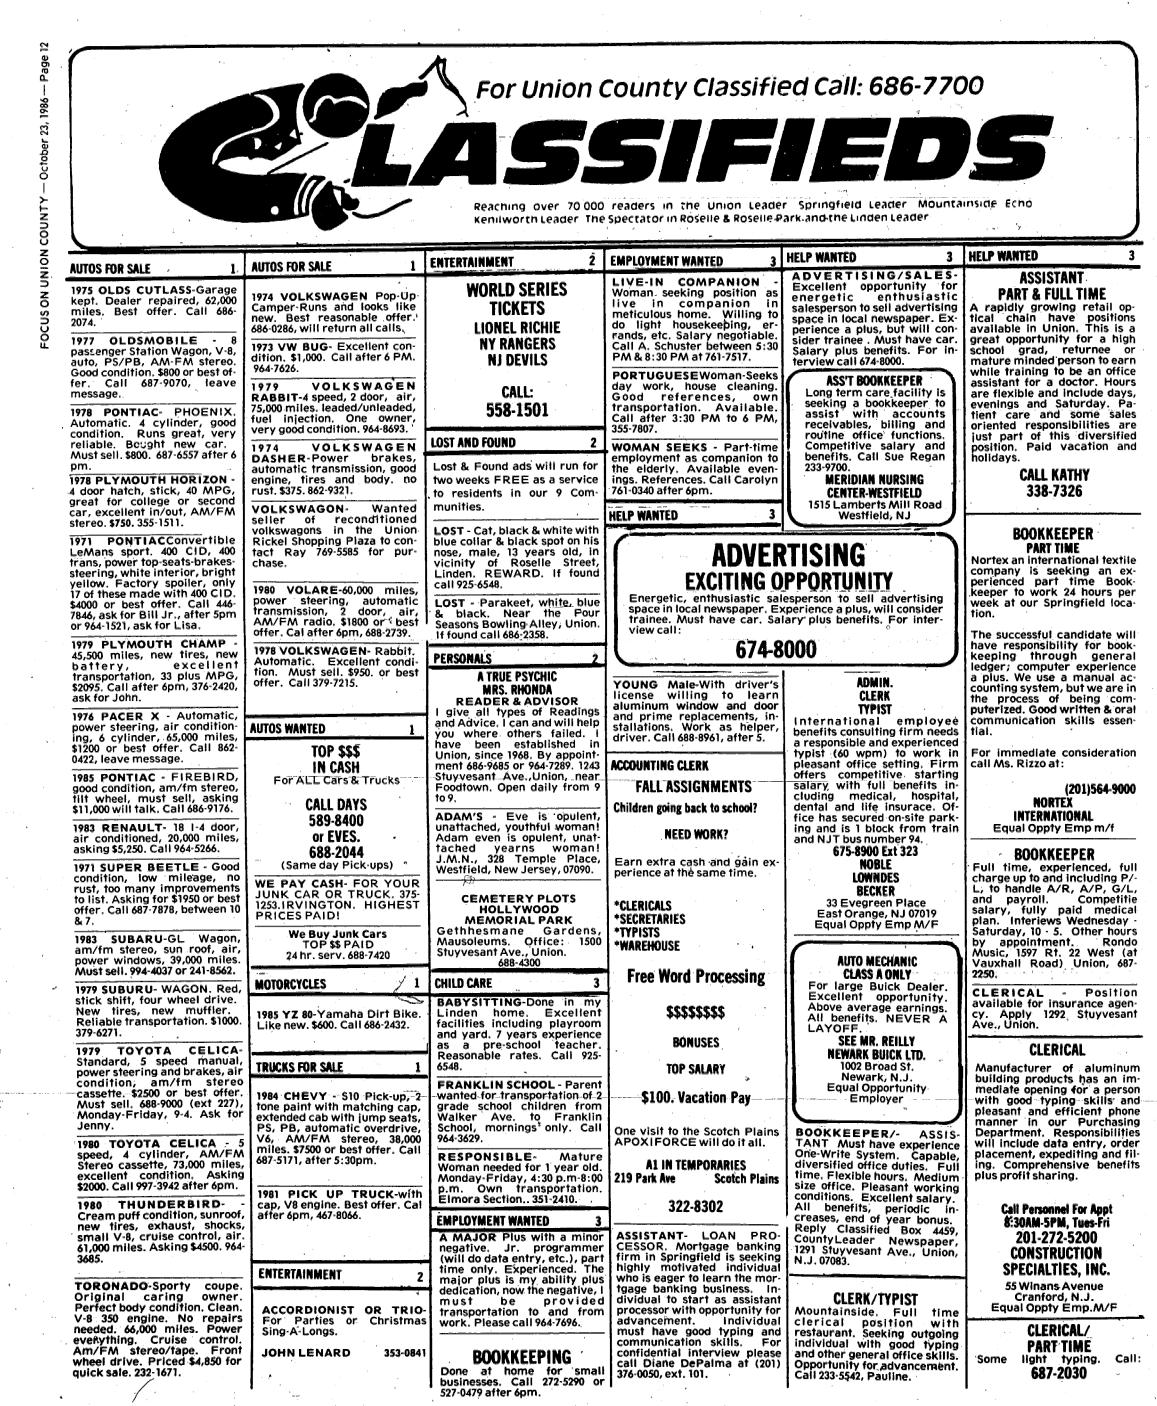

By Jordan Baris

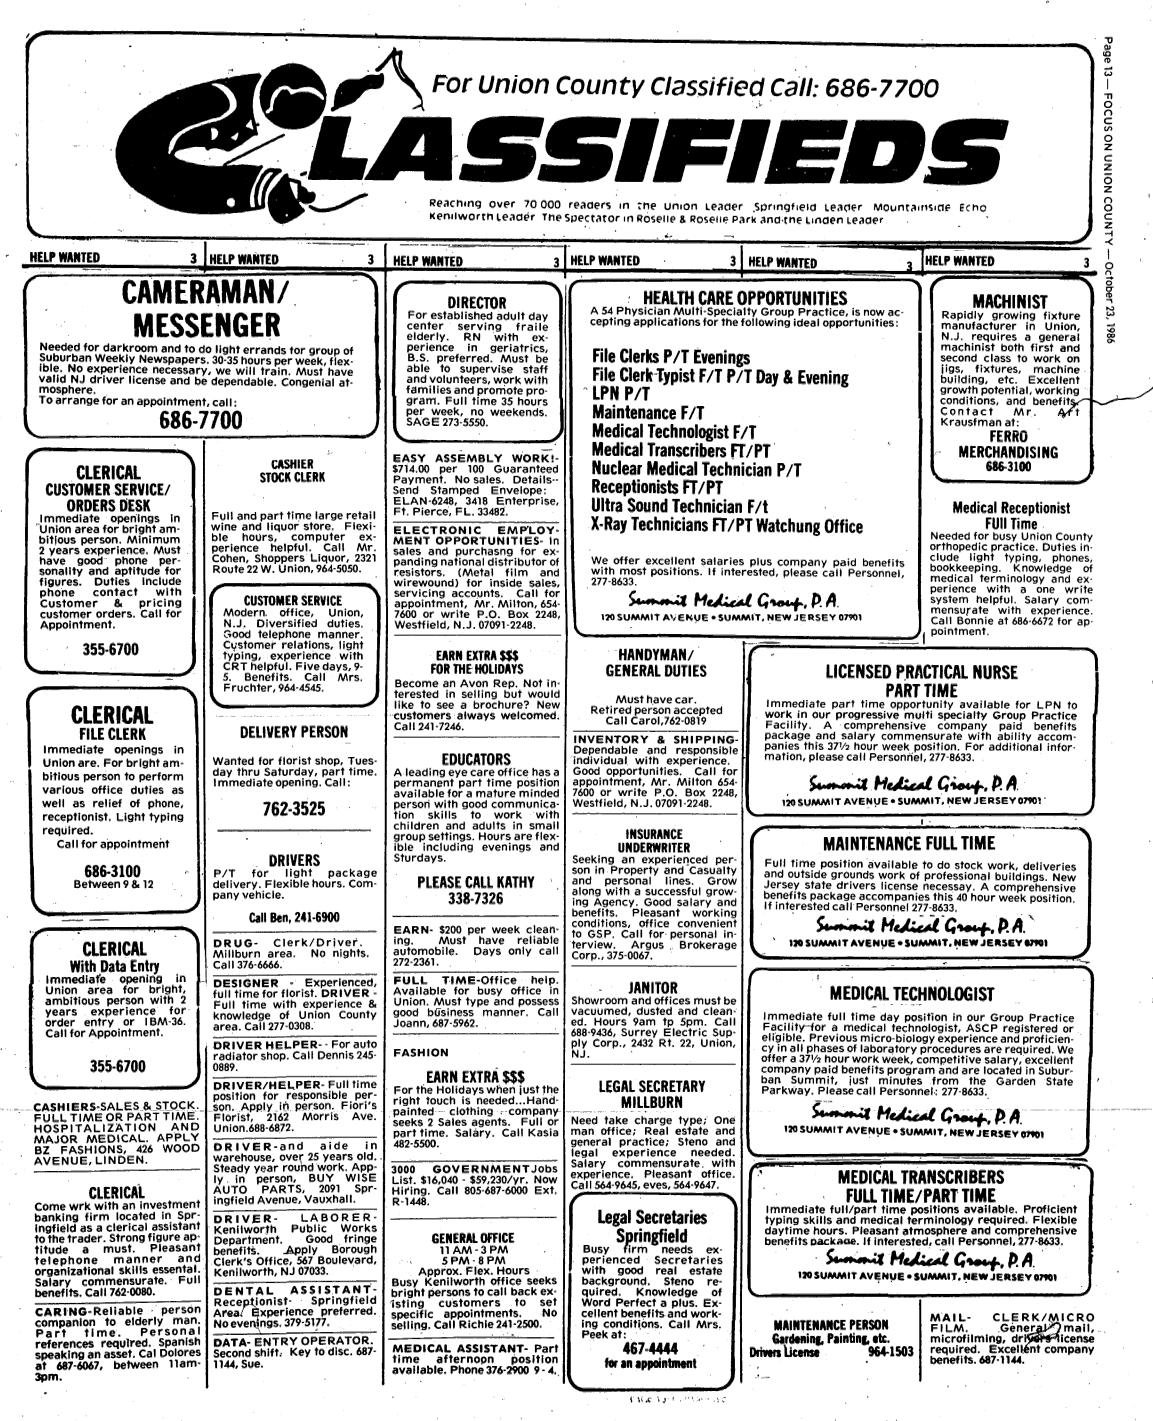

3. A yard sign has advertising endurance. It stays up until the property is sold. A newspaper ad loses its impact in one day.

4. The Realtor's name_and phone on the sign will direct all inquiries in that direction-not to you.

Listen to your Realtor's input when it comes time to decide on the use of a yard sign. It could make a positive contribution to your sales effort.

Stable gas prices a surprise

Stable gasoline prices in recent months come as a happy surprise to many pundits who expect the worst. Supply and demand are credited with the accomplishment, gas consumption having been somewhat lower than anticipated while the fuel stockpile remains healthy.

More efficient vehicles have been a big factor in reducing the drain on our resources. Thanks to state-ofthe-art technology, today's car typically gets about twice the mileage per gallon compared to its predecessors of a decade ago.

While high-tech systems have helped ease the demand at the gas pumps, they have, on the other hand, created a real challenge for the technicians in the service shops, says Car Care Council. To meet technical requirements of the repair industry, mechanics bythe tens of thousands are attending educational clinics to remain up-todate on these state-of-the-art vehicles.

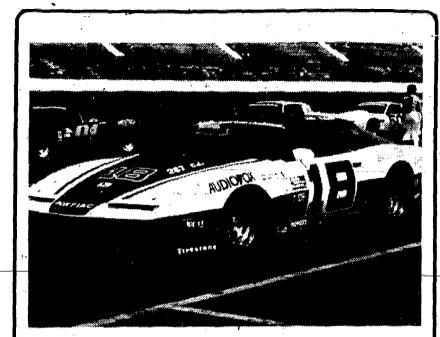

Further, they are signing up in record numbers for ASE certification tests, according to National Institute for Automotive Service Excellence (ASE).

"When your customer comes in for service," ASE President Ron Weiner tells members of the service trade, "you better know your way around these cumputerized engines and the diagnostic equipment they require.

"And while these new cars may run further between fill-ups and service, we must emphasize to owners that they'll have to pay more attention to maintenance services when they are needed. The truth is, it's a small price to pay for the use of safer, more fuel-efficient cars that produce far less air pollution.

"The car owner who delays periodic maintenance, finally being forced into crisis repairs, is the one who pays most dearly for automotive service," he says.

To help understand your car and what should be checked, Car Care Council offes a pamphlet, "How to Find Your Way Under the Hood Around the Car." Send 25 cents and a stamped, self-addressed, businesssized envelope to Car Check, 600 Renaissance Center, Detroit, MI 48243.

WINNER— Michael Clasulli of Maxon Pontiac-Honda in Union placed fifth in the Columbus Ford 500-Kelly American Challenge Division on Oct. 4 in his race car 'Maxon.' Clasulli ranks in 10th place in the National Point Standings. The final race of the division is Oct. 26.

It's time to care for cooling system

If you've found it necessary to add coolant to your car's cooling system lately, consider yourself lucky. At least you're given fair warning of bigger trouble to come if you don't take care of things now.

Car Care Council emphasizes that cooling system failure often strikes without subtle warning signs.

A bad radiator hose, for example, may not begin leaking until...suddenly, it's too late. It ruptures and all the anti-freeze/coolant quickly is gone. Unless the engine is shut off at once, major damage is almost certain.

The best way to avoid cooling system trouble is to have the system flushed, checked - over visually, pressure tested and all marginal belts and hoses replaced. Typical belt and hose life is three to four years.

The condition of anti-freeze is important and it should be replaced as part of seasonal cooling system service. Finally, says Car Care Council, do not assume your cooling system is functioning just fine because the engine warning light does not go on.

A loose or defective radiator pressure cap or one of the wrong type for your car can permit antifreeze/coolant to boil over without triggering the light.

Coolant also might boil away if its level is low or if the incorrect mixture of water and anti-freeze (Ethylene Glycol) is used.

Light trucks fill station wagon void

The most popular cars in America today are light trucks, filling the void left by the demise of the big suburban station wagon, and answering the commercial need for economical, utilitarian vehicles.

A goodly number of those light trucks are powered by diesel engines, an option favored by buyers looking for power, durability and 25 to 50 percent better mileage.

Some commercial fleet orders are coming in at better than 50 percent diesel, a testimonial to the diesel engine's competitive price and traditional low operating cost.

Diesel powered vehicles with 100,000 miles on the odometer are not uncommon, and some have gone 200,000 miles.

Diesel engines require less maintenance because there are no spark plugs, distributor points or condensers. It is important, however, to use good quality fuel and oil to protect the diesel engine's precision components from water or debris in the fuel.

Diesel fuel/water separators, available at most auto supply stores, help prevent a buildup of water in diesel fuel. Water carries contaminants such as rust and dirt that-can ruin vital engine parts. The most common cause of fuel problems is water, which is the only fuel property the vehicle owner can control.

Spliced into the fuel line before the fuel heater, the water separator removes water from the fuel line by gravity. The best water separators include a dashboard indicator that signals a buildup of water in the unit. A drain valve allows easy purging of collected water.

Winterizing your diesel-powered light truck can improve its cold weather performance and fuel economy, according to Standayne Diesel Systems, the leading U.S. manufacturer of diesel fuel injection components.

Add-on fuel heaters, also available at most auto supply stores, can help prevent hard starting and rough diesel engine performance in cold weather.

Diesel fuel contains a waxy substance that can crystallize when temperatures fall below 30 degrees F (1 degree C). These crystals can block fuel lines, clog fuel filters and impair engine performance. In some cases, excessive fuel "waxing" can stop an engine completely.

Diesel fuel heaters help prevent fuel waxing. The most widely available models are electrically powered by the vehicle's battery and automatically begin to heat fuel when the ignition is on. The unit automatically shuts off when fuel is warmed sufficiently.

The in-line fuel heater is easily spliced into a fuel line, and requires one simple electrical connection.

Many diesel-powered light trucks have, as standard equipment, fuel heaters and water

Lung group offers brochure

In recognition of National Car Care Month, the American Lung Association of Central New Jersey is offering a free brochure entitled Car Care and Clean Air during October.

There will also be a car sticker and a simple test to determine if leaded gas has been used in a car that requires unleaded fuel. "These materials are a part of our efforts to improve the quality of the air we breathe," says Dr. Brian J. Collins, president of the Lung Association.

Statistics indicate that automobile usage has increased three-fold in the last 30 years.

"This increase has resulted in higher levels in the air," says Dr. Collins. "The brochure describes the health effects of the emissions and makes recommendations to car owners about maintaining their cars to minimize the pollution."

The pamphlet warns against tampering with emission control equipment and using leaded gas when a car calls for unleaded fuel. To receive a copy of this informative brochure and sticker, write to the Lung Association at 206 Westfield Ave., Clark, .07066.

Car care is a long way from cranking

Remember when cars had to be primed to get them started in the morning? A little gas was squirted into priming cups, one per cylinder. Remember retarding the spark with a hand lever before starting?

If you can answer yes to the above, you probably remember too, the thousand-mile grease job and oil change. There was no such thing as an oil filter to replace, of course; just change the oil.

Keeping the engine "in tune" had to be a regular procedure if the engine was to start without excessive cranking. Remember cranking?

We've come a long way since that nostalgic era, says Car Care Council.

Nevertheless, many components will retain their essential roles in most automotive engines for a long time to come. The spark plug, for example, continues as the most frequently replaced part in a tuneup.

The distributor cap and rotor today are replaced as frequently as they were 10 years ago. The air filter, in fact, has increased in replacement frequency. And nearly half the cars on our nation's highways still have conventional distributor points and cóndenser, thereby requiring more frequent tune-up service.

Advancements –in technology, including electronic ignition, computerized engine controls and unleaded gasoline have resulted in longer maintenance intervals on some parts and systems.

People who do an unusual amount of stop-and-go driving, or whose trips average under 10 miles, may fall into the "severe service" category. This kind of driving, combined with extreme weather conditions and/or trailer towing, may-call-for-more-frequent_servicing of the car. Check the owner's manual, suggests Car Care Council, pointing out that extended maintenance is not for everyone Service techniques are changing, too. The traditional tune-up has evolved into a procedure described as an engine performance analysis.

What's the difference? Instead of routinely replacing things like the points, condenser and plugs, the technician must make a thorough diagnosis of what's causing hard starting, poor performance, reduced fuel economy or increased emissions. He can no longer replace some parts and make a few simple adjustments to get the engine running like new.

If you're experiencing engine problems, you may or may not need servicing of one of the sub-systems. The ignition system, the fuel system and the emission control systems must all work in close harmony with one another. That's where accurate diagnosis comes in.

What also will help is your ability to communicate with your mechanic so he can isolate and diagnose a specific problem. Give him as many details as possible.

For instance, if the engine hesitates, when does it happen? When the engine is cold? When it's warmed up? When accelerating? Tell him if you hear any noises. And try to describe the noises. Is there a pop, bang, rattle, ping or whirr?

Oil change easy at quick lube center

The oil change squeeze is coming to an end. Drivers no longer have to schedule ahead at Joe's garage and leave the car all day in order to get a routine 15-minute job done.

The fast and convenient "quick lube" centers, springing up almost everywhere, now provide the service on the run.

And none too soon! Over the past decade, oil change has been increasingly hard to get. The old standby, the full service gas station, is becoming more and more independent and less interested in a routine job with little profit.

It's not the mechanic's fault, however. Service stations are actually getting rarer. Many stations have closed down or turned into gasonly retail outlets, throwing the drivers onto the already overworked stations still in operation.

Look at the figures. From 1972, the beginning of the oil crisis, to last year, the number of cars in the U.S. increased from 102 million to 133 million. In the same period, however, the number of service stations to serve these cars decreased from 226,000 to 130,000. A quick calculation shows that the average number of cars served by each station more than doubled from 451 in 1973 to over 1,000 last year. No wonder there's a time crunch.

Yet the oil must be changed -- and frequently — if the family bus is to keep running in top condition!

Many drivers take the do-ityourself option and change their own oil. For others, however, changing oil can be messy and time consuming, and best left to a professional. But where to find a professional?

Today's answer to that question is the quick lube center, the newest and fastest growing addition to the automobile after care business.

Quick lube stores have been around for over a decade in some Western communities, but they're brand new in many parts of the Midwest and the Atlantic, Pacific and Gulf Coasts.

Typically, the quick lube offers convenient drive-through service, giving you an oil change, new oil filter and chassis lube in 10 minutes or less, while you wait.

No appointment is necessary and, because the shop specializes in lubrication, it does its work efficiently and well.

Oil and lube aren't the only services offered. Jiffy Lube, the largest of the quick lube chains, gives a full check of engine fluids - transmission, brake, steering, differential, even windshield washer ---- tops them off if they're low, all in the same 10-minute time period.

The attendants even wash the windows, vacuum the interior, and check tire pressure, at no extra price.

The result is that drivers who've tried quick lube service once are generally hooked.

Some major areas are still without any quick lube centers, and a great many have only a few to serve the average family's 1.5 cars. However, new centers are opening almost daily. If there isn't one near you now, be patient - there will be soon!

SPAPERS Fall Car Care — October 23, 1980

Jumpstarting a vehicle requires know-how

The automobile battery need not be a source of anxiety. Knowledge of simple and safe steps for jump-starting the battery is essential for motorists concerned about winter car care.

Several precautionary measures should be followed when jump-starting a battery. Position vehicles so that they do not touch each other. Check to see that both batteries are the same voltage.

Turn off both vehicles' engines. Set the parking brakes on each vehicle. Place automatic transmission in park, standard transmission in neutral.

Be sure vent caps are tight and level. Place a damp cloth over the vents of both batteries. With safety precautions taken care of, the stalled battery is ready for jump-starting.

1. Connect positive booster cable to positive post of dead battery. (The positive post is wired to the starter or solenoid.)

.2. Connect other end of same cable to same marked post (positive) of booster battery.

3. Connect second booster cable (negative) to other post of booster battery. 4. Make final booster cable connection on engine block of stalled vehicle away from battery.

5. Start the booster vehicle and let it run for a few minutes.

6. Start the disabled vehicle, then remove cables in reverse order of connection.

Further safety precautions should be followed when working on or in the vicinity of the automobile.

--Whenever you work near a battery, protect your eyes with safety goggles.

-Never light a match or smoke when working under the hood of a car.

-Be careful that metallic objects such as tools do not fall on battery terminals. This could cause sparks, leading to a battery explosion.

-Never lean over the battery during the charging, testing or jumpstarting.

Steps for jump-starting the automobile battery and tips for ensuring optimum service, safety concerns and precautions, understanding how the battery operates, battery service and useful terminology are included in "Take Charge - Know Your Battery," a safety guide produced by the Battery Council International (BCI).

Developed to assist average consumers with little automotive knowledge, the brochure covers important aspects of battery safety in a concise, easyto-understand format.

To obtain a copy of the brochure, send a self-addressed, stamped, legal size envelope to: "Take Charge — Know Your Battery," Battery Council International, 111 East Wacker Drive, Chicago, IL. 60601.

Night driving requires efficient lights

Auto headlights serve two vital safety functions for night driving. They allow motorists to see...and to be seen.

More than 60 percent of all automobile accidents occur at night, even though most travel takes place during the day.

g

Fall

According to The Injury Fact Book (co-authored by Susan T. Baker of the Johns Hopkins School of Public Health and Brian O'Neil of the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety), nearly 40 percent occur between 10 p.m. and 4 a.m. Further, one third of all highway fatalities happen between 6 p.m. Friday and 6 a.m. Saturday.

These frightening statistics underscore the importance of your car's greatest nighttime safety feature - efficient and welladjusted headlights.

A motorist can put more light on the road by using the latest headlight technology from General Electric halogen headlamps. These lamps are twice as bright as conventional headlamps and deliver a distinctively whiter light, enabling the driver to see 25 percent farther down the road.

Halogen headlamps come in all the popular headlamp sizes and may be easily substituted for conventional headlamps. If you have a burned-out headlight, or if your headlights are more than three years old, consider replacing the entire set with halogen lamps and then check to see if they are correctly aimed.

Improperly adjusted headlights, halogen or conventional, can be as much of a safety hazard as those that don't work at all. For example, headlights that are aimed just onehalf degree too low will reduce seeing distance by 50 percent! Headlamps set a full degree too low cut the seeing distance by 75 percent. Headlights that are directed too high are also less effective and can "blind" oncoming drivers.

Headlight adjustment is an easy task that requires only 35-40 feet of flat (or constantly sloping) driveway in front of a garage door or wall.

At dusk, shine your low beams onto a garage door or wall two or three feet away

-Make horizontal marks on the top edges of the bright spot on the door. (Use a soft pencil or tape.)

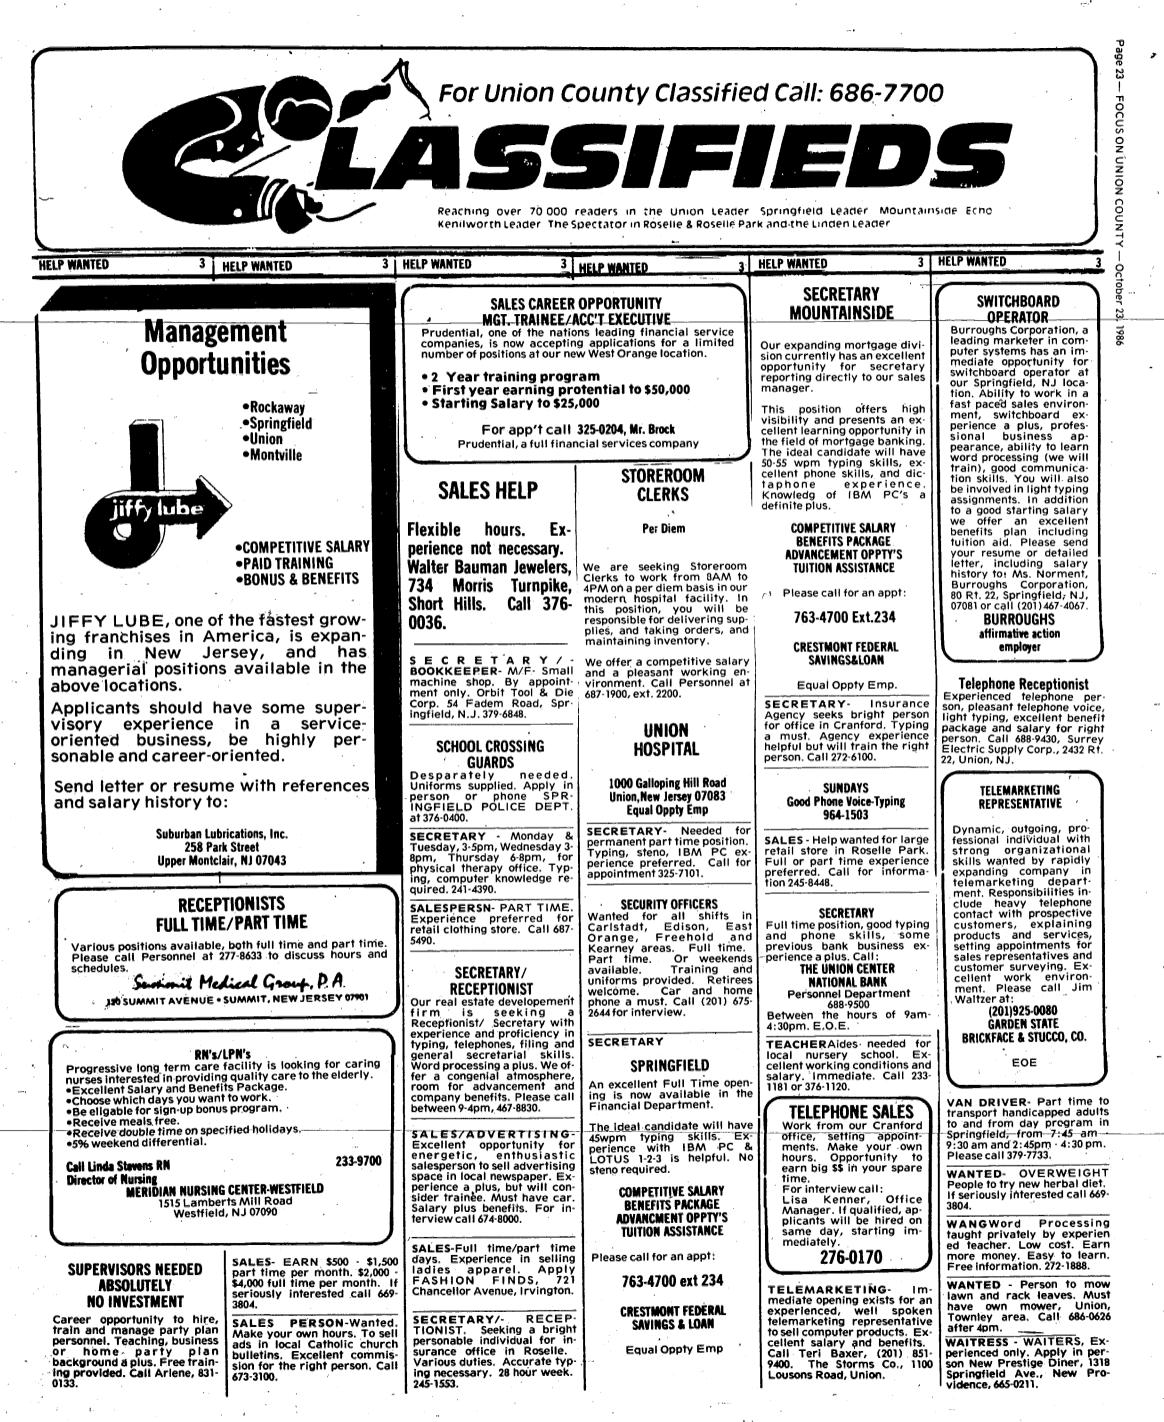

-Move the car about 25 feet straight back from the garage door or wall. The top of the low beams should shine no higher than the marks on the door or wall.

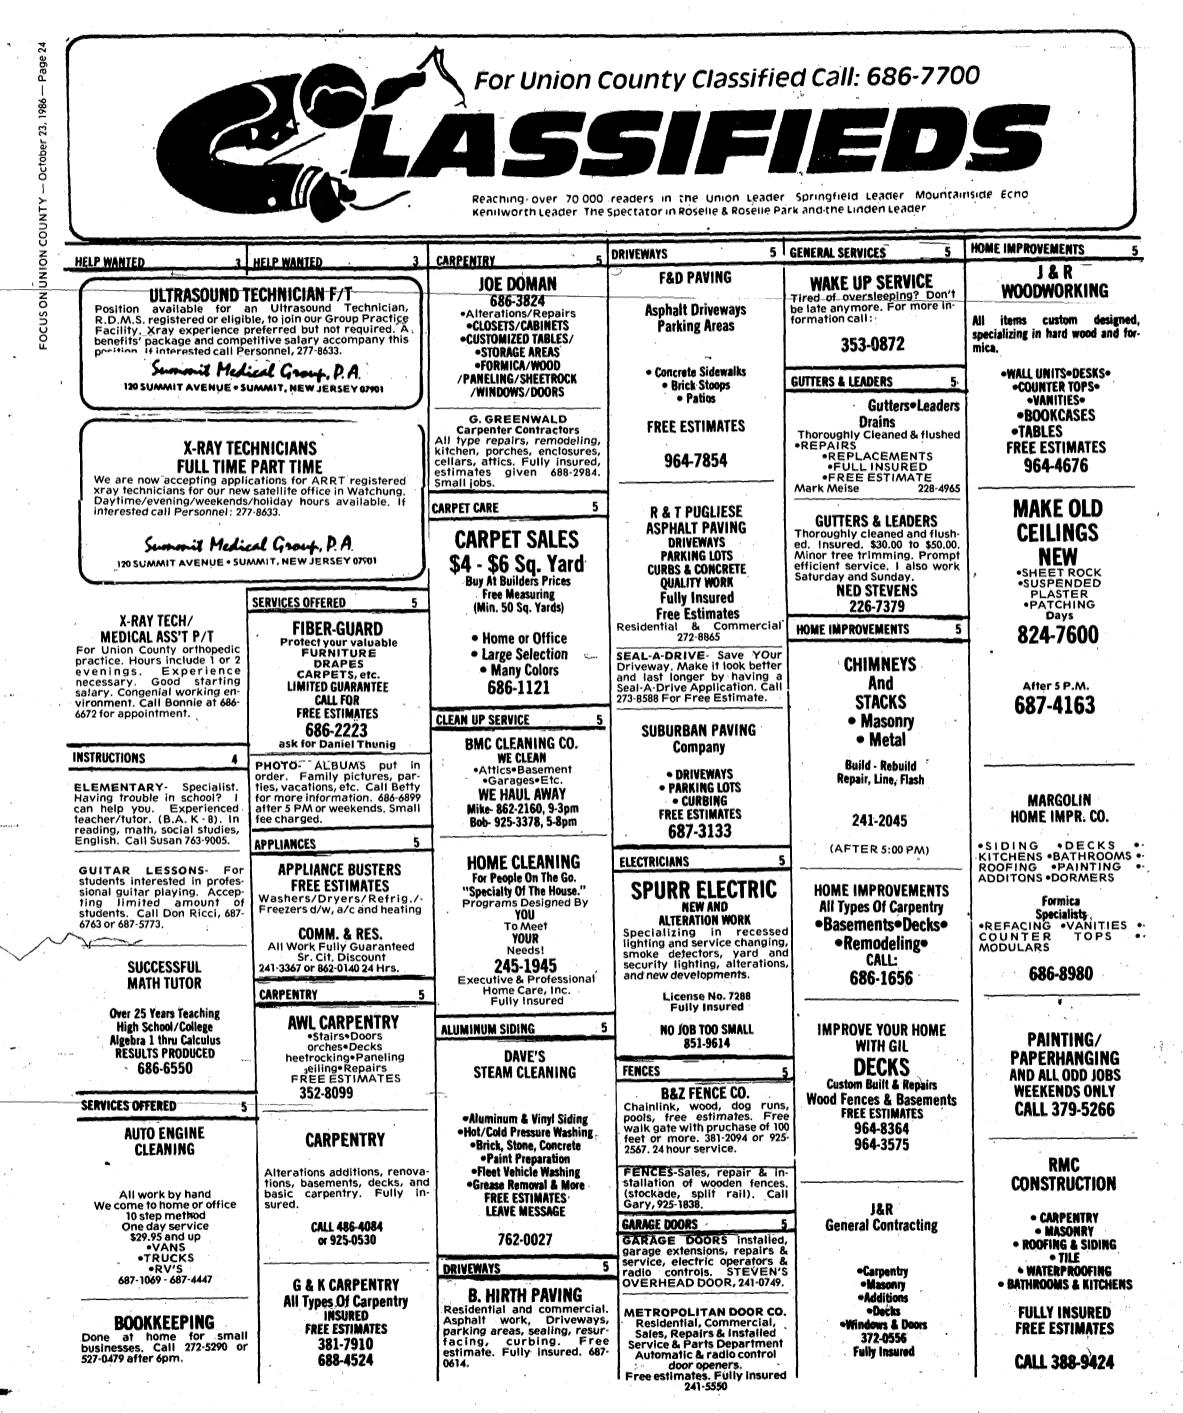

–Make the necessary adjustments. On most cars, each headlight has two screws that move the beam up or down and left or right. These are visible without removing any hardware.

-If your car has two headlights, the high beams are automatically aimed when you adjust the low beams. If the car has four headlights, adjust the low beams first (the outer or upper of the sets). Then adjust the high beams so that the centers of those beams are at the top edge of the low beams.

This "garage door" method of aiming headlights is only a rough check and should not substitute for a headlight aiming by professionals with accurate equipment.
