Artist 'masters' more than painting

By BEA SMITH

seamstress, housewife and mother must certainly be stimulating. At least it is for Italian-born Nina Tamburro, her husband, Joseph, and their two daughters, Marina, 17, and Gerarda, 14, all of whom reside on Coolidge Street in Irvington, "I can do it all at the same time," she said. "Paint, sculpt, sew, clean the house and cook! If I gotta paint, I paint, then sew, cook, clean, do everything in one time. I find time to do it all — all the time.'

Nina, an internationallyknown artist, who has received numerous awards for her paintings and portraits and who has had exhibitions in London, Paris, Rome, Quebec City, Canada. New York and in New Jersey, in Millburn, at the Paper Mill Playhouse, and at the Garden State Art Center, has been in this country for 22 years.

However, when she speaks, one feels one is listening to the great Italian actress Anna Mangani. Her voice is low and sultry and boasts of a heavily-spiced Italian accent that is attractive, amusing, fascinating.

The former Nina Di Giaimo, the artist hails from the Province of Santa Maria di Castellabate, Salerno, Italy. Her husband, who was born in the Ironbound section of Newark, accompanies Nina on interviews — when he isn't working in the mailroom of the Morristown Daily Record. Joseph serves as "interpreter," and last week, during a visit to this newspaper office, the Tamburros talked about many things, including Nina's notification that day from London that she had won first prize, a golden medal, for her show in July at the National Gallery in London.

"Oh," she shrugged, waving her delicatelyfamous hands, "I don't get a water color painting and too excited. I think it is a great honor, but I have received lots of prizes. I don't think I will go to London this time to get this prize. They will send it to me.'

Her modesty may be Nina's secret to her success. 'In addition to her paintings, many of which she gives away to family members and friends as presents, she works out of her home as a dress designer and seamstress. Her talents come so naturally to her, that one tends to forget how unique she really is.

Nina started painting at the age of seven in her hometown of Santa Maria di Castellabate.

"My father was a fisherman, and we lived in a small fishing village. I would go out to paint landscapes, the fishing boats, the fishermen, my father, too. My parents encouraged me, but I had one sister and five brothers — one died — one is now a professional soccer player, Luigi Di Giaimo, just like Pele of Brazil, whom I also painted. I met Pele, by the way, and he autographed my painting of him."

Nina explained that "my father, the fisherman, he couldn't afford to send me to school, so I did dressmaking for the men and women in my village...for the baroness, and for the princess, and for the countessa, I made the nightgown, dress, everything by hand."

"For dressmaking, I go to school in my village," she recalled. "I was about 13, but I was so young," she laughed, "that instead of teaching me, they send me out. They say, 'go to the store for spaghetti,' until, finally, my mother, she says, 'Stay home!' And my mother stay home, too, to help me. She make me cut patterns for me and for my sister. In the summer time, I go to...you know, the school with nuns...convent school, yes? There, I learn to cut dress. At 13 years old, already I do."

When she was 15, Nina did won first prize at the University of Salerno. Since then, "everytime I do a show, I give away paintings, to relatives and friends. Some I save, but some I give away as presents." She grinned, "I keep working, do the show, then give away.'

She even donated a painting, "The Catacombs," to the Immaculate Heart of Mary Church in the Ironbound section of Newark. "I did it for the church as a donation," she said.

Nina mused, "In Italy, when I was a girl, I had a friend at the university. She couldn't paint, but all the students were supposed to do a show. I done for her, and it won first prize. Nobody believed her that she painted those pictures."

When Nina first came to this country in 1964, she said, "I come to visit with relatives, and I like it so much here, I decided to say. Two years later, she was introduced to Joseph by a friend. They were married 20 years ago and have lived in Irvington ever since.

Joseph explained that Nina is popular both here and in Europe. "Last year," he one to two weeks, sometimes said, "she received a silver medal from London, and the year before a bronze medal. second prize, from Paris."

'I have been invited to a lot of places in Europe, in Canada, too," Nina added.
"About every two years we go to Europe. The whole family...every place I go, they come with me. They don't miss nothing."

Daughter, Marina, who has studied languages, and daughter, Gerardo, who is "interested in art — a little bit," both attend Mother Seton High School in Clark. "They are both good girls, and they help me when I need them."

Nina, who has created "a few hundred paintings," also has displayed her work on Channel 58 Auction, at the Lynn Kottler Galleries in New York City and with Mayor Edward Koch in New York City. She is listed in. Foundation for the Advancement of Artists.

'I do sculpture for myself, not too much, but I want to start to do it again. It takes me two days to do scenery. People, it takes more time, more, too. The soccer player, Pele, you know, that took a lot of time. The paint had to dry, then do again."

Among some of her most popular paintings, said Nina Tamburro, are "The Wailing Wall," which she painted in Jerusalem; "Mother and Child," "The Marina Piccola," a painting of Santa Maria Di Castellabate in Salerno; "The Last Supper," and "Pele," the retired soccer player. "He is champion of the world," she added.

What kind of advice would Nina give an aspiring artist. "I tell him to do portait and scenery. If an artist don't know how to do people, he is not really an artist." As an afterthought, she smiled, "I'd tell him to go to art school. Even if I didn't go."

When this reporter expressed an additional interest in her work, Nina Tamburro said in her husky Magnani voice, "Come to my house. I will make you a good Italian supper. You like spaghetti? After you eat, you can look at my work.

"Yes?"

ARTIST AT HOME—Internationally known painter, Nina Tamburro of Irvington, concentrates on a landscape painting at her home in Irvington.

Biography is a fine portrait of Hudson

Despite what Sara Davidson says about Rock Hudson's desire in his last weeks to unveil his very private life to a hand-rubbing, mouth-watering public, one finds it difficult to believe that the actor was ever well enough to make such a request. It's harder to believe that he had the strength to sign a written request even if funds realized from a biography written by Davidson, and supposedly, as she claims, Rock Hudson, would be donated to "Rock Hudson AIDS Research Foundation." Really, it is her word against his, and he died on Oct. 2,

Davidson has had published in her book, "Rock Hudson - His Story," a written request signed by the actor authorizing her to write the book. The request was dated Sept. 5, 1985, less than a month before he died. According to some reliable sources, ever since Hudson was brought back from his final treatments in France, he was too ill even to recognize anyone, including his best friends. Still, in her acknowledgements, Davidson credits Hudson's closest friends, Mark Miller, who also served as his secretary, Miller's lifelong lover, George Nader, and Tom Clark, Hudson's lover and stalwart friend, with collaboration.

The book, with a copyright by the foundation, was published this year by William Morrow and Company Inc., New York City. Despite protests, "Rock Hudson - His Story" is a fine tribute to the man who gave the movie public - and later the stage and television public — more than 36 years of good entertainment. It also offers wonderful photographs of the many faces of the man who was born Roy Scherer Jr. on Nov. 17, 1925, in Winnetka, Ill., and who changed his name to Roy Fitzgerald, when his mother's -second husband adopted the lad.

It seems that what Davidson has done to give an accurate portrait of the enigmatic person, the superstar, who was the lovable Rock Hudson that we knew, off and on screen, was to use as her outline an extensive, very personal - and rare - interview Hudson gave on Aug. 24, 1983, to Professor Ronald L. Davis. She quotes liberally from the text and occasionally offers excerpts from it. The professor teaches at Southern Methodist University. The interview, one of hundreds of interviews in the university's Oral History Collection on the Performing Arts, apparently is a lengthy work of Hudson's feelings and thoughts, and served Davidson well. She also utilized Rock's mother's 30-year-scrapbook and accounts from letters and personal experiences of Rock's acquaintances.

The result is an impressive documentary, well-researched, finely written, interestingly told.

Davidson begins her book with Hudson's final days in his home, "The Castle," in Beverly Hills, and the people who stayed with him to the end - Miller, Člark, estranged from Hudson, but reunited with him at the end, James Wright, the faithful English butler, and Marc Christian, another former lover, who resided in the house because Rock, weary of him, but too ill to care, obviously, never did have the guts to kick him out.

Davidson then tells of young Roy's uneven childhood, his continued attachment to his multi-married mother, his early years in the Navy and his homosexual attractions there. Even then, Hudson, tall, handsome, macho, never affected feminine ways, which made it difficult for his unsuspecting public to believe and accept the fact that the man was gay. He managed to defy every concept that a man must have some effeminate qualities to be a homosexual. An unusual hobby, however, was his addiction to needlework as a form of relaxation. He took it with him wherever he went. But then, how many men in this world also are addicted to this

His friends, of course, knew. So did the studio, Universal-International, where he was under contract. The studio had made him a star, and when his stardom was threatened by his strong sexual appetites and his promiscuous activities, the studio destroyed another actor's career in exchange for discretion. Eventually, members of the news media discovered his secret. All managed to keep it "a well-known secret," as Rock did. even after his strange, brief, rather rocky marriage to Phyllis Gates in 1955. He was a very private person, and early on, as his career grew, he managed to keep his personal life separate and apart from his public

On the shelf

It was only after a rather unfortunate incident involving Jim

Nabors that news of the actor's sexual preferences leaked out. The public may have been stunned by the news, but nevertheless, obviously and surprisingly, accepted it because it enjoyed Rock's talents and abilities on screen.

Hudson continued to do some really fine work on the screen. He was versatile enough to play comedy with wonderful conviction and made some memorable films with Doris Day, beginning with the classic, "Pillow Talk." Day had become a very special friend to Rock. They complemented each other on screen and off, and she remained his friend to the end. Elizabeth Taylor, an even stronger friend, with whom he starred in the unforgettable drama, "Giant," held benefit events to raise money for acquired immune deficiency syndrome. She visited him during his last weeks in the hospital and at home.

Rock's reactions to his huge success were interesting to note. He accepted his success with mixed emotions - first, casually, then, humbly, then proudly, then with an uncontrollable exhilaration!

Davidson, in her accurate account of the actor and the man, is to be commended. She's an interesting writer, her dialogue is exceptional, and her biography reads like a

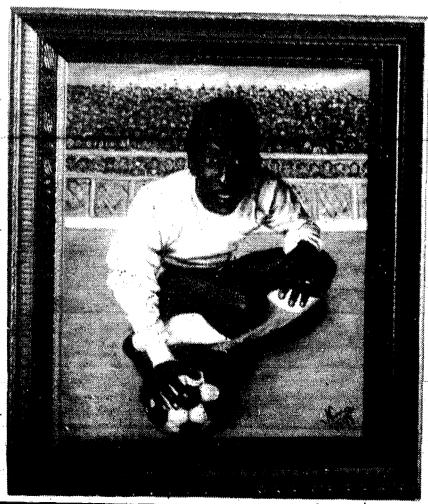

Whether or not Rock wanted to peel off his protective armor in quite this fashion, one will never know. But if it had to be done, then certainly, he could entrust Sara Davidson to do it.

Firewood buying hints

With fall well under way, it is once again that time of year - time for all those fireplace and woodstove owners to make sure they have enough firewood for the coming winter.

Although this task should ideally have been completed by now, there are always reasons for delay.

And while many hardy souls will now make the time to go out and find, cut, and haul their own firewood, others will decide to purchase theirs instead. Rutgers Cooperative Extension lists several points to remember when buying firewood.

First, New Jersey has designated the standard cord or some fraction thereof as the unit of measure for firewood. A standard cord of wood is a stack of wood 4 feet by 4 feet by 8 feet. A pickup truck can contain from less than one-fifth to slightly more than one-half a cord, depending on size and bed design.

Next, species should be considered. The denser hardwoods such as oak and hickory are usually preferred, but remember that all wood will burn.

Expect to pay a little more for oak or conversely, a little less for "mixed hardwoods."

Another factor affecting firewood price is whether the wood is 'seasoned'' or not; that is, whether it is "dry" or "wet." Again, expect to pay more for seasoned wood. Cracks or "checks" on the ends of the logs are signs of drying and, therefore, seasoned wood.

Early intervention at Children's Liz Albert of West Orange has been named a social worker with the Early Intervention Program at Children's Specialized Hospital.

The Early Intervention Program provides early identification, assessment and intervention for children up to 3 years of age who have disabling conditions, developmental delays, or both. It promotes social, cognitive, language and physical development using the skills of an interdisciplinary team, and provides medical management of the child's disabling condition, parent training, and support.

The new social worker received a master's degree in social work in 1983 from Catholic University, Washington, D.C. She earned a bachelor of arts in social work from George Washington University, Washington, D.C., in 1981. She comes to Children's Specialized Hospital from the United Cerebral Palsy Center in Brooklyn where, for over one year, she was a social worker providing case management for families of children in the program.

Earlier she worked for one year as assistant director of the Washington and Maryland program for the B'nai B'rith Youth Organization and prior to that served the Maryland Department of Social Services by working with the natural parents of children who were in foster care because of abuse and neglect. She successfully reunited parents with their children through resolving financial and housing problems and teaching parenting skills.

While a student at Catholic University she ran a program helping physically disabled and mentally retarded children in Arlington, Va.

Blood shortage is critical

Blood supplies at New Jersey Blood Services have dropped to a little over a day's supply for the 65 hospitals it serves. However, this supply is unbalanced with more than half of the units Type A. Type O and Type B, which are much more needed, have been in short supply for several weeks.

The shortage has forced a cut back on blood deliveries to hospitals by more than 50 percent in most cases. This means that a hospital's request for 10 units of blood is cut to five. Regional hospitals have been forced to postpone certain elective surgeries as a result.

There are several reasons why this blood emergency has occurred. One factor has been the cumulative effect of blood testing. The blood is tested fo HTVL-III, an indicator of the AIDS virus, Non-A and Non-B hepatitis and syphilis. Because of these tests the blood supply is safer than ever before, but less blood is available for transfusion as more units are excluded from the donor pool.

A decline in the red cells that NJBS receives from European sources has also contributed to the current shortage. The Greater New York Blood Program, the parent organization of NJBS, receives approximately one third of its supply from Europe. These sources have reported that increased need for blood in their own hospitals has forced them to cut shipments.

Directed donations, in which a person donates blood for a specific person in need at that time, have also cut into the community blood supply.

However, the prime cause of this and any other blood shortage is not enough donors! A continuous supply of blood is needed. In New Jersey at least 300 pints of blood are needed daily.

Anyone 17 years of age and not over 65 who weighs a minimum of 110 pounds and is in good health is eligible to give blood.

For information on where to donate blood, contact a local Red Cross chapter or call New Jersey Blood Services at 828-9101.

It's time for flu prevention

This is the time to begin thinking about flu prevention. Influenza, or the flu, is a contagious respiratory disease caused by a virus. Although it is termed a respiratory disease, it affects the whole body. Flu symptoms include fever, chills, weakness, loss of appetite and aching of the head, back, arms and legs.

According to the American Lung Association of Central New-Jersey, the Christmas Seal People, the flu can be a lifethreatening illness for people in the high risk group. This high risk group — for flu — consists of those over 65, people with chronic lung diseases such as asthma, emphysema, tuberculosis or chronic bronchitis and people with heart disease, anemia, diabetes or other chronic diseases. The advice for this group is to consult with your physician about the possibility of receiving the flu vaccine.

... In addition to those-in the-high risk group, people in "essential service" jobs should also check with their physician about administration of the vaccine. Essential service positions include hospital personnel, fire fighters and police officers.

More information on influenza can be obtained by writing to the Lung Association at 206 Westfield Ave., Clark, N.J., 07066.

Irvington heralds growth

Despite the fact that 1986 was not a very good year for hositals everywhere, the Foundation for Hospital and Health Systems, of which Irvington General Hospital is a part, neither retrenched nor stayed still.

Louis A. Ditzel Jr., president and chief executive officer, says, "In a year that saw many hospitals forced to contemplate the closing of floors, beds and even services, Irvington General, through the faith and determination of its board of trustees and management, continued to expand and improve its ability to care for the health of its patients and its community."

Ditzel says that a full body C.T. scanner is now fully operational, and that "a long needed renovation program is moving rapidly along with close to $1 million worth of new radiology equipment in place. Irvington General Hospital is anxiously preparing for a spring 1988 grand opening of a modern, fully equipped state-of-the-art hospital."

Ditzel says that the Foundation for Hospital and Health Systems is anticipating several "new and exciting humanitarian projects in the coming year involving abused children and the home-bound elderly."

Air Force seeks nurse recruits

Nursing is a profession that offers more than ample opportunity for employment and a particularly attractive nursing program can be found in the United States Air Force, says Major Bruce Weber, Air Force nurse recruitment officer.

The Air Force is looking for registered nurses who possess a bachelor's degree in nursing or allied health science field to become commissioned Air Force Nurse Officers for the purpose of providing high quality health care. The Air Force has openings in a variety of clinical settings for nurses with hospital experience.

There is currently a special need for nurses who also have experience in operating room, anesthesia, nurse practioner programs and other clinical specialties.

Air Force Nurses are commissioned either as second or first lieutenants, based on their education. Their initial obligation is three years and all nurses are given a base of assignment before taking the oath of office. After commissioning, they attend a two-week medical service officer orientation course at Sheppard Air Force Base, near Wichita Falls, Tex.

More information is available by calling Major Weber, 1-800-USA-USAF.

and made the best of it.

In 1983, a train ended the phase of David's life that was filled with love of racing cars, motorcycles and sky-diving and forced him into a fight for survival.

Emergency room doctors offered scant hope. Severe head injuries, internal abdominal injuries, two punctured lungs, a fractured leg and arm, all of his ribs broken. Thirty-three days of coma followed — several times David lapsed into cardiac arrest. Operations to correct paralysis came next.

Physicians held out little expectation for rehabilitation but they misjudged David's tenacity. His family arranged for his admission to the Robert Wood Johnson Jr. Rehabilitation Institute at John F. Kennedy Medical Center in Edison, New Jersey, and David's long battle back began.

needs of the head injured such as confusion, agitation, shortened attention span, inability to concentrate.

Then, physical therapists worked with David to help him relearn how to use long dormant muscles. Occupational therapists worked with David to help him relearn both skills and how to work with other people. Job counselors discussed what future occupations were possible given limitations caused by the accident while David got his feet wet by working at the Johnson Institute as a volunteer file clerk.

That David has come so far is a tribute to his own capacity to fight and, as he says, to the staff of the Johnson Rehabilitation Institute: "They really, really care about you. They make you work and they don't let you give up."

Stress threatens senior population

Stress is a part of everyone's daily life.

"We often sit tense and think tense without even realizing it. But managing stress properly can mean the difference between a life of challenge and excitement and one filled with illness and disease," says Visiting Nurse and Health Services' Lorraine Kowalski.

For today's seniors citizens, stress can be a motivating factor in achieving goals, fulfilling dreams and adding interest to retirement years. But health care professionals warn, excessive stress over a long period of time becomes distress and may create health problems for older adults such as hypertension, ulcers and diabetes.

"It's the way in which seniors react to stress in their lives that leads to harmful effects on their health," says Kowalski, health educator with the Visiting Nurse and Health Services, who presents programs in stress management to seniors in Union County.

"Some people blow up under stress, while others suppress and hold in their reactions, allowing it to build up and never deal with it. Because of reactions like these, seniors are more likely to suffer from colds, infections, or exacerbations of arthritis and hypertension," says Kowalski.

c According to the VNHS health educator, excessive stress can cause older adults to stop eating, socializing with family and friends, and even create symptoms of many illnesses. Stressful events for seniors include such things as children moving away from home, the death of a tamily member of friend, the loss of mobility, and in some cases severe boredom.

"It's important for them (seniors) to help each other, use available resources and not feel as if they have to tackle every problem alone," explains Kowalski. "There was one elderly man in my program who was having trouble with his divorced son who was an alcoholic. But he wouldn't discuss it with anyone and was ready to explode."

Through the 'Stress Management' program seniors learn to indentify the source of stress in their lives and how to deal with it through coping mechanisms. While stress is a normal part of life, learning to make it work for you and not against you can help keep you healthy — both emotionally and physically.

VNHS offers a variety of health education programs, geared to specific age groups, which focus on disease prevention, life style changes and developing healthy new habits. Presentations are available for schools, civic groups and community organizations. For more information on "stress management" and other community health education programs, contact the Visiting Nurse and Health Services at 352-5694.

Overlook laboratory earns accreditation

The Overlook Hospital Laboratory has been awarded a two-year accreditation by the College of American Pathologists based on results of a recent onsite inspection.

The inspection process, one of the most rigorous a laboratory can undergo, requires up to a year of advance preparation by the laboratory staff. Inspectors examine the records and quality. controls of the laboratory for the two years preceding the inspection. They look at the education and qualifications of staff members, adequacy of the facilities and equipment, safety measures, and laboratory management to determine how well the facility meets the needs of its patients.

Dr. Anthony Marchand, Overlook's chief of laboratory services, was informed of this national recognition by Dr. John K. Duckworth.

"Overlook has a top-notch laboratory staff with excellent training and experience. Our goal has been and will continue to be accurate testing in a timely fashion in order to provide Overlook patients with the highest quality medical care in the state," says Marchand.

Health care for homeless provided by St. Elizabeth's

St. Joseph's Social Service Center and St. Elizabeth Hospital have teamed up to bring free health care services to the homeless and poor people of the Elizabethport Area.

Known as Health Check-Up, the project is a unique outreach program of the hospital's Dorothy B. Hersh Clinic. It is believed to be the first program of its kind in New Jersey, and perhaps in the eastern region.

Sister Jacinta Fernandes, director of St. Joseph's Social Service Center, is pleased to be able to sponsor this health care program. "This will be an important addition to the list of available services for the homeless and the poor in Elizabeth," she says.

Each week, on Monday and Thursday from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m., medical staff members from St. Elizabeth Hospital are on-site at St. Joseph's, which is located on Division Street in Elizabeth, to perform check-ups for the homeless. The medical staff includes a doctor, a nurse and a social worker. Each hospital employee is donating his or her time to the program, and is utilized on a rotating basis.

Following the physical, anyone with a chronic health problem is referred to the hospital's clinic. In addition, the homeless are able to use the clinic or emergency room at St. Elizabeth Hospital whenever Health Check-Up is not in operation. Catholic Community Services will provide transportation for the homeless to the clinic.

Sister Jacinta estimates that there are as many as 700 homeless people in Elizabeth — half of whom are children — and that approximately 50 people are being added to that number each month. She believes that at least half of the homeless will take advantage of this opportunity

"There are numerous health problems among the homeless," Sister Jacinta says.

"These people do not go for medical help because they do not have the money to pay for these services, and they do not have medical coverage."

Sister Elizabeth Ann Maloney, executive director of St. Elizabeth Hospital, calls the program "a vital and necessary service which fills a tremendous void in health care for the poor people in our community."

Health Check-Up went into operation on Oct. 27 following months of preparation. Joan Wheeler, director of nursing at St. Elizabeth Hospital, explains, "Because this is the first time that a hospital has had such a program, it took several months to finalize the details. The planning required the cooperation of St. Joseph's and many departments at the hospital, including maintenance, housekeeping and administration."

Sister Elizabeth says, Health Check-Up further demonstrates the commitment of service to Elizabeth that the Sisters of Charity of St. Elizabeth and the hospital have maintained for many years. We anticipate that this cooperative program will be a tremendous success. We hope that it will also increase awareness of the plight of the homeless in Elizabeth and encourage more organizations to help."

Sister Jacinta also states that a prescription fund has been established to provide necessary medication to the homeless. The initial donation to the fund was provided by the Employee Recreation Fund at St. Elizabeth Hospital.

For more information about Health Check-Up, contact St. Joseph's at 352-2989 or 352-2966, or St. Elizabeth Hospital at 527-5133.
