and Garcia

Carnegie Hall bound

By BEA SMITH

Will success spoil two 12-year-old lads from Union? Not if the lads are Colin Simpson and Dale Garcia — even if they are PTSA first-place winners and scheduled to play a piano duo in an annual competition in Carnegie Hall in New York City on Nov. 13.

The youngsters, their families, friends, classmates — even their beloved piano teacher, Paul Koslowski, who made it all happen — may be somewhat awed at the idea of Colin and Dale performing in the prestigious site that is Carnegie Hall — but they all go about living their everyday lives in less than a stunned state of mind.

In fact, five of them visited this newspaper office recently in a normal state of mind to talk about it. Koslowski, a music teacher with the Linden school system, who has his own private practice of teaching music and who is a member of the Piano Teachers Society of America Inc., whose national headquarters are in Maplewood, led the group of four. They were Colin, and his mother, Lucille Simpson, a teacher at Holy Spirit School, whose husband is Colin Sr.; and Dale and his father, Antonio, a medical technician at Newark Beth Israel Hospital, whose wife is Zenaida.

"These are real talented kids," beams Koslowski. "Very few youngsters in this age group win PTSA first-place state awards. The competitions are held at Kean College in Union by the directors of the society, Gustave and Carol Ferri. Every spring they have various competitions. But this is one we all can be proud of," he says.

Colin, a husky youngster, who is going into seventh grade in Holy Spirit School, and who excels in sports activities, too, explains, in a remarkably calm voice, "It's a different experience. Something different than winning something in school. You know you put so much time in to do it — it just feels great. Really," he smiles, "it's a different experience. You feel that you really did something important and it took a lot of practice to do it. It made me proud, too."

His mother echoes, "You bet!"

Dale, a slim, friendly youngster, who is going into eighth grade, says, "I feel proud of myself for what I did. It's a good thing to do. I just feel proud."

His father echoes, "I do, too."

Koslowski, who has served as a music teacher at Linden High School for the past 19 years, and who has music degrees from Wilkes College, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., and Rutgers University, also is a member of the Adult Handbell Choir and director of the Teen Handbell Choir at First Baptist Church, Union. "They both worked very hard," he says, "together, and by themselves. They've shown a great deal of improvement by working toward the competition."

"At the PTSA recital, they knew they could only play once to be accepted by the PTSA. They worked well under stress. It had given them a reason to practice."

Dale's father explains, "They played not to please their teacher, but to please themselves." And Colin's mother agrees that "they both seem to perform well under pressure. They know they have to perform in public first before playing for the judge."

"Colin's technique has really progressed during the competition," adds his mother. "And the best part of it all is that they were both so pleased with their performance."

"We really nailed it," exclaims Koslowski. "The boys couldn't have played any better. It's even nicer when the judges think they did the best that they can do."

"I had been told that we would hear from the judges by phone the day after the recital," he says. "I didn't hear from them the next morning. In fact, I had to wait two more weeks. Then I got the call that they won!"

Colin's mother says, "Not every child gets to play in Carnegie Hall!"

How did they both become interested in piano?

"My mother played a little organ," says Colin proudly.

ly. "She tried to teach it to me when I was a little boy, but I was too young. Then I learned to play the piano. I went to the Millburn School of Music when I was 7 years old. But I only stayed six months. My aunt, Judy Brienza of Union, teaches with Paul, and she had asked Paul if he would teach me, and he said 'Yes.'" Colin has since performed in talent shows at the high school and in PTSA recitals. He is equally serious about his other interests and activities.

"I played soccer for the Union Lancers," says Colin. "I played on the team for three years to 1987. I also played for the Rebel Softball League for the Recruits in the Union Recreation League. I used to be involved in judo, and when I left, I left as a greenbelt. I attended the Cranford Judo-Karate School for about three years. I started when I was in the fourth grade."

"What do I want to be when I grow up?" he ponders. "Well," he says, rubbing his chin and looking very grown up, "I might teach music, you know, give piano lessons to help pay my way through college. Then I might study medicine or architecture. I'm really undecided," he muses.

Dale, who started studying the piano at the age of 6, was a third-place winner in the Russell E. Lanning Memorial solo piano competition in 1987. This year, he was a second-place winner and had performed in PTSA recitals for two years and in talent shows at the high school.

"When I was small," says Dale, "I played a lot on the piano, which my dad had gotten for me. And Paul has been teaching me ever since I was 6."

Other than music, Dale likes art. His father says that the youngster "won a safety poster contest for the AAA, the American Automobile Association. His poster was chosen out of 6,000. He also plays tennis and he swims."

"I don't know what I'm going to do when I'm grown up," says Dale. "I can't decide yet."

The magic word of Carnegie Hall still has an astounding effect on all five visitors.

Dale says, "I have watched somebody else play in Carnegie Hall. But just thinking about it, I feel kind of numb. It's such a big place...and all those people...Wow!"

Colin says, "It's scary. I'm nervous, too. Do you know what Carnegie Hall looks like? Wow!"

"Everybody knows about Carnegie Hall," says Colin's mother. "Why, my husband's family in England...in Berwick-on-Tweed...all know about Carnegie Hall."

"And even in the Orient," says Dale's father, "they all know about it. I'm originally from the Philippines, and there have been a lot of long distance calls. And there have been long distance calls from Canada, where my grandmother and grandfather live."

Colin's brother, Jamie, who is 8, "also takes piano lessons from Paul," says the young man. "He's going into the fourth grade at Holy Spirit."

"He passed the auditions," says Koslowski, "but after that he had to go to the doctor because his finger was broken. This year, however, he'll play for the PTSA in the Millburn recital."

Dale, who is an only child, says, "I hope to be a musician some day." And his father adds, "I want to hear it from him, not from us."

Colin's mother says, "I taught Dale in Holy Spirit in the fourth and sixth grades. Now I'm moving over to teach sixth, seventh and eighth grades there."

Dale's father says that perhaps the reason why Dale is so musically inclined is that it is in the family. "I have a sister who was offered a scholarship in Juilliard School of Music, the most prestigious in New York City. But she decided to get married instead. I play the piano, too. But I taught myself by ear. Lessons?," he grins. "I'm afraid it's too late."

"They're both great students, Colin and Dale," says Colin's mother. "And Paul just doesn't stop. He really takes an interest in them. He takes them to concerts...over and above his regular teaching classes. Even though Colin is interested in the music of today, he has started a classical music collection."

Dale's father agrees. "He works so well with them, he manages to get all the best that they have to give. He really imparts what he knows to his students. We are very lucky to have Paul for our children."

Koslowski admits that "I'm equally as happy to have them as students. They work very hard. And my students either like me and we get along...or they hate me."

Koslowski says he was "hired to teach the accordion and piano. I've had two great teachers, Ann Liva at Wilkes College, and Thomas Richner at Rutgers." In his private practice, which he has had for 22 years, he now has 11 students to whom he teaches instrumental music. "Some of my students have gone on to teaching music.

"I taught in Pennsylvania when I was in college." Koslowski and his wife, Victoria, have two children, Amy, 6, and Robert, 10 months old. "Amy's talented," he says, "but I don't want her to practice yet. She has a good memory, and she recognizes music when she hears it on television or radio."

As far as the accomplishments of Colin and Dale, Koslowski says, "This is a very exciting thing for me. Right now, they're too young to enter Talent Expo as a duet team in the state competition. But they will in the spring. They will be competing with 13- to 18-year-old students. These are the best I've had. It's most exciting."

In other music, Colin says, "I listen to just about everything." And Dale says, "I like modern music for dancing." His father says, "They're both very low-key." And Colin's mother says, "All my students from Holy Spirit had heard about Colin and Dale." Koslowski says, "They had competed in a talent show three years ago in the school. I got a lot of phone calls and some new, good students for the school. They're not as advanced as Colin or Dale, but hopefully, some day..."

"These are nice kids. They get along well and with everyone else as well. I pray for them to win. I asked the Lord, 'Let them win,' and I'm hopeful that they will. Carnegie Hall, here we come!"

'La Cage' to open

The Broadway musical, "La Cage aux Folles," will open the Paper Mill Playhouse's fall season Sept. 14 and run through Oct. 23 in Millburn. Lee Roy Reams, who plays Albin and Walter Charles, who plays Georges, star in the Tony Award-winning show with music and lyrics by Jerry Herman and book by Harvey Fierstein.

Reams recently received both Tony and Drama Desk nominations for his starring performance in "42nd Street." He also appeared on Broadway in "Applause" with Lauren Bacall and as "Lorelei" and in the revival of "Hello Dolly!" with Carol Channing. He recently appeared at the Playhouse in "Paper Mill Stars Salute the American Musical Theater."

Charles made his Broadway debut in "Grease" and stayed with the show for two years until Leonard Bernstein tapped him for "1600 Pennsylvania Avenue." He also played the title role in "Sweeney Todd" opposite Angela Lansbury in Los Angeles and in the Broadway production of "Cats." He won a Drama Critics Circle Award for his portrayal of Albin in the West Coast production of "La Cage aux Folles" opposite Gene Barry. Charles made his film debut in Blake Edwards' "A Fine Mess" and can be seen in "Fletch II" with Chevy Chase.

Sugar important to energy

By JOYCE YANOWITZ

When we refer to the word "sugar," it is usually the granulated kind found in the sugar bowl or the powdered form sprinkled on baked goods. This table sugar, or sucrose, is the standard against which we measure all others. It has 16 calories in a teaspoon, and is a composition of glucose and fructose. It is often labeled "empty" calories because it provides no nutrient other than carbohydrate. However, when the body receives too few carbohydrates and fats to meet its energy needs, it is forced to use protein from the diet for energy instead of for body maintenance.

To date, there is no substantiated scientific evidence that sugar is addictive or that the amount of sugar eaten early in life creates an increased desire for sweets during later years. Sugar is not a specific cause of obesity. The basic cause of overweight is an excess consumption of calories regardless of their source.

Are naturally occurring sugars better for you than processed sugars? The answer is no. The body does not discriminate among sources of sugar. It does not matter whether a sugar is added to a food or whether it is naturally occurring in a food. It is used by the body in the same way. Most uses for sugars in food processing are similar to uses in the home. Commercially, sugars are used mostly for their sweetening power — just as in the home. Sugar makes many foods more palatable. Sprinkled on grapefruit for example, it takes away the sour taste; stirred into chocolate it offsets the bitterness.

Sugars possess several other properties important both to industry and home use. One is the preservative effect, which is vital to retaining the quality of products, such as jams, syrups and candies. Sugars also serve as food for yeast and other fermenting agents in the making of breads, pickles and alcoholic beverages.

To sum it up, one may ask how much sugar is acceptable? The U.S. Dietary Goals suggest that refined sugars should constitute no more than 10 percent of the total calories you eat a day — that means 200 calories for a person who needs 2,000 calories a day. But you would be hard-pressed to figure out exactly how that translates is such a wide range of sugars now added to processed foods. Therefore, the USDA's Dietary Guidelines, which simply state, "avoid too much sugar," probably make the most sense. That means you should try to limit your intake of table sugar, other caloric sweeteners and foods typically termed sweets.

CAPTAIN'S GALLEY II, ship-shape in every way!

I've always heard that to join the navy you don't just, 'See the World,' you also eat very well. Captain's Galley II, at 250 Morris Ave. in Springfield, is a prime example of this adage, for to eat there is to experience a confirmation of this maxim. The food is 'Top of the Line'! Quality & value seem to be the guideposts. Reputation comes in here, also for to be a Captain's Galley II suggests there must be a Captain's Galley I, which there is at 75 Main St. in Madison.

The decor may not much resemble a ship's galley, however the quality of the food dispels any doubt. As you enter, the bar is on one side, the dining room on the other, with a wooden chair-height divider between and short red cafe curtains, stained glass panels hanging plants above the divider creating a warm & cozy atmosphere. The dining room is paneled in dark wood with booths on one side & tables on the other. Tiffany lampshades hang over all the tables adding to this effect.

Beginning with a friendly greeting from Connie, our charming & most accommodating waitress, to the exceptional hospitality of Mr. Lake, the owner, our evening at Captain's Galley II was an exceptional experience from start to finish. We certainly got off to an auspicious beginning as soon as Connie delivered our bread, hot pumpkin-ernickel with butter! To me, bread served warm shows the caring & thought which goes into the serving of a fine meal. It takes just a minute of time yet makes a lasting impression in the mind of this diner. My friend and I selected shrimp scampi & stuffed mushrooms for our appetizers. The scampi were tender & delicately flavored & the mushrooms were not only gigantic but stuffed to overflowing with the most wonderfully flavored crabmeat. They were excellent!

My friend chose Broiled Seafood, a combination of shrimp, scallops & flounder, marvelously flavored with a wine & garlic sauce. I selected one of their specialties, Prime Rib, which proved to be a spectacular choice. It was cooked perfectly to my specifications, medium rare & was so tender yet over one inch thick! Baked potato & a house salad were served along with the entrees.

While Mr. Lake was sitting & conversing with us, I first noticed their blackboard specials for the evening. Topping the list were soft shell crabs, a childhood favorite of mine. I mentioned this to Mr. Lake who soon after excused himself only to return a few minutes later with one large, superbly sauteed, soft shell crab! For me this was the piece de resistance. I have observed, over the years, how few restaurants really know how to properly prepare this dish. Captain's Galley has this down pat. It was excellent. My compliments to the chef.

As to the rest of the menu, appetizers range from $5.95 for Linguini with white clam sauce to clams on the half shell at $3.95. Entrees start at $10.95 for broiled filet of flounder to $17.95 for prime rib & lobster tail or crab. I could hardly believe it when Mr. Lake informed me that they serve a King size prime rib, larger than the regular cut I was served. I don't know who could finish anything that size.

A separate luncheon menu is also available offering cold & hot platters of seafood, chicken or steak, from $6.95 to $3.95. Hamburgers, triple decker as well as Deli sandwiches are all very reasonably priced from $3.25 to $4.75. Everything on their entire menu is available for take out.

Don't miss the boat, visit the Captain's Galley I or II soon. You will not be disappointed!

Horoscope

For week of August 25 through September 1

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You will manage to make yourself noticed quite favorably this week concerning your career. Bigwigs will be impressed and monetary rewards are sure to follow, if you play your cards right.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Those among you who dabble in the arts will find those pursuits favored this week. Any plans for travel are also favored in terms of romantic interludes and new opportunities.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) This is a good week to sit down and make plans to improve your domestic surrounds. A social invitation may link you up with someone you haven't seen in quite a while.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) While you may feel you're simply plodding along at work, you are really making quite steady headway. This will soon become clear to you, so just hand in there.

LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22) Something which has been in the back of your mind will suddenly take to the fore this week, leading you to quite a few surprising, innovative steps in your career and family life.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22) While you may feel that this is the time to just plunge in and make those repairs you've been contemplating on your home, you would be wise to consult with financial advisers first.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Your cerebral nature will need much nurturing this week, so indulge that taste for philosophy and introspection. The insights you gain will stand you in good stead in the weeks to come.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Someone close to you has been making some good points about what's been going on, but you've been too obtuse to really listen. Make an effort to understand what others are trying to tell you, and things will soon improve.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Those whom you've offended in the recent past are waiting for an apology. It's best to swallow your pride and give in, since you may find that there are areas you overlooked.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19) Stop dreaming about all those placed you'd love to visit and make some concrete plans. Travel is in your stars now, so take advantage of it and pack those suitcases.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18) A monetary matter which has been bothering you will be seen in a new light. This will bring you some relief and you'll be able to spend your energy on other things this week.

PISCES (Feb. 19 to March 20) Your conservative approach is just what is needed on the career front, but don't let added financial windfalls tempt you into a shopping spree. It's wise to invest right now.

Drama Club leader set

Marilyn Court of Linden has been elected president of the Cranford Dramatic Club, CDC, for the 1988-1990 term.

Court, who has been a member of CDC for 11 years, was named to the position at the club's annual closing meeting on June 26. In past terms she has served as CDC's production vice president, corresponding and recording secretary.

"I'm looking forward to serving CDC and I hope to be instrumental in increasing the community's awareness of the fine theater we offer," said Court. "Many people in the area don't know we exist, and I want to see that change. The CDC consists of an incredibly talented group of people, both on-stage and behind-the-scenes."

Court will be serving as president during a milestone season. "We're celebrating our 70th season during 1988-1989. The CDC is one of the oldest existing community theaters in New Jersey. That's quite an accomplishment."

In addition to her participation in CDC, Court is a teacher in the Roselle school system. She is also a member of the Paper Mill Playhouse Guild and an avid theatergoer.

The CDC opens the 1988 season with John Van Druten's family classic "I Remember Mama" on Oct. 7. The season continues with "A Bedful of Foreigners," "Dial M for Murder," and "Fiddler On the Roof." Discounted season subscription tickets are available for all four shows. Those who would like to receive a subscription ticket form or obtain further information on CDC may call the Box Office at 276-7611.

Teacher recruitment, retention is up

New Jersey offers several programs to recruit highly qualified new teachers and to recognize, reward and renew the talented educators already in our schools. Among them are grant and scholarship awards, financial incentives, professional recognition and renewal programs and opportunities to interact with education leaders. The following summaries include telephone numbers to call for further information.

Minimum Starting Salary: Requires public school districts to pay teachers at least $18,500 per year. Proposals are under discussion to raise minimum salary and provide bonuses to teachers in certain urban districts. Division of Finance, (609) 292-4421.

Governor's Teaching Scholars: Recruits highly qualified high school graduates to teaching by offering college loans of up to $7,500 a year. State will forgive the loans in return for teaching service in New Jersey public schools. Division of Educational Programs, (609) 292-6874.

Minority Teacher Program: Attracts promising minority high school juniors to teaching by providing academic enrichment at Jersey City State College and college loans of up to $7,500 a year, forgiven in return for teaching in New Jersey public schools. Office of Teacher Certification, (609) 588-3104.

Teacher Certification Reform: Helps ensure a continued supply of well-qualified teachers in several ways:

Allows qualified candidates who have not completed college teacher preparation programs to earn certification through an alternate route, called the Provisional Teacher Program;

Raises certification standards for all prospective teachers by emphasizing subject matter competency and greater rigor and consistency in traditional teacher preparation programs; requiring teaching candidates from both the traditional and provisional routes to hold bachelor's degrees in liberal arts, science or technology; and requiring all new teacher candidates to pass teacher competency tests before they can be certified.

Distinguished Teacher Candidate Awards: Recognizes 15 outstanding college seniors preparing for teaching careers through traditional college teacher preparation programs. Division of Teacher Preparation and Certification, (609) 984-1216.

Dodge Fellows: Awards 15 grants of up to $5,000 each to outstanding teacher candidates participating in the Provisional Teacher Program. Funded by Geraldine R. Dodge Foundation.

Division of Teacher Preparation and Certification, (609) 984-1216.

Governor's Teacher Grant Program: Awards grants of up to $15,000 each to teachers or groups of teachers who create new ways to enhance student learning so they can share their techniques with colleagues throughout the state. Division of General Academic Education, (609) 292-4461.

Governor's Teacher Recognition Program: Acknowledges outstanding teachers through: Governor's Teacher Recognition Grants: $1,000 grants awarded annually to honor more than

St. Joseph's is expanding

St. Joseph's School in Maplewood is expanding its pre-school program to meet the ever-changing needs of families, many of whom have mothers in the workforce. Parents will have more choices in the hours their 3- and 4-year-old children attend the pre-school and the type of program in which they participate.

In addition to a full-time day-care program and special pre-kindergarten program for precocious 4-year-olds, St. Joseph's will offer a half-day program for pre-schoolers, designed to meet the needs of parents who work part-time and children who are ready for pre-school but who may not be ready for a full-day program.

For the first time, parents can contract for a full year according to their needs, says Principal and Pre-school Directress Ellen Kaufmann. All programs can be tailored to fit parents' working schedules because extended care is available for an hourly fee.

This year will also see the pre-school's move from its current separate building into the main school building that houses children from kindergarten to eighth grade. The move will enable the preschoolers to move into the mainstream of the academic life of the school and use all facilities to their advantage. The younger children will be able to enjoy music, art, gym and library facilities, as well as the camaraderie that comes with being part of a school community.

As in previous years, the curriculum for preschoolers will also include such traditional subjects as language arts, math readiness, science, social studies and religion. The pre-school program also stresses considerable playtime with quality equipment.

The pre-schoolers will also go on numerous field trips. They will visit a pumpkin patch at Halloween time and the Paper Mill Playhouse during the Christmas season. A trip to Turtle Back Zoo is on tap for spring.

The pre-schoolers, along with all the other St. Joseph's students, will join in celebrating the 75th anniversary of the St. Joseph's parish in 1989. "The children will no doubt get caught up in the enthusiasm of the parishioners during the celebration," Kaufmann says.

Marking her sixth year as principal, Kaufmann notes many "good, progressive changes to the program and what it is offering the community." Kaufmann points to the cohesive feeling of the school community that lends itself to an easy transition as children move from grade to grade. Eighty percent of graduates go on to prep school, she says.

St. Joseph's School offers the only full-time gifted and talented program in the area, with French or Latin taught to gifted and junior-high students. The school, which stresses individualized instruction and small classes, has departmentalized upper grades and a computer lab, as well as a varied sports program.

St. Joseph's welcomes students from Summit, Springfield, Millburn, Short Hills, Livingston, South Orange, Maplewood, Union and surrounding areas. Parents seeking more information about the preschool or other programs can call Ellen Kaufmann at 761-4033.

The Rutgers Cooperative Extension of Union County has expanded its garden hotline hours. Union County residents can call to have their garden questions answered free of charge, thanks to efforts of our Master Gardening volunteers. The number to call to reach the hotline is 233-9366, 1-3 p.m. weekdays or 7-9 p.m. on Monday and Wednesday evenings.

SHOWCASE OF HOMIES

Condominiums' life-styles can attract buyers

Condominiums, and their maintenance-free lifestyles, have traditionally attracted singles and busy professionals who don't have the time or desire to mow lawns or shovel snow from their driveways. Just as often, individuals opt for a condo rather than a conventional home because of the price. But condos are not for everyone. The New Jersey Society of Certified Public Accountants (CPAs) advise prospective buyers of condominiums to review carefully the various pros and cons before leaping into a purchase.

In a condominium, you own an individual unit as well as a share of the development's common property and facilities, such as a swimming pool or tennis court. However, you generally do not own the property surrounding your home, and you may not even have final say on the look of your home's exterior.

Consider, too, that most condo owners not only have close neighbors but also have to abide by numerous community association rules. If you operate a business out of your home, make sure that the association permits such activity. Bylaws can also limit your ability to rent your home — a factor which can be of critical importance if the condo is a second home.

While operation and maintenance of the condo's common property are not the owner's concern, the fees for such services are. In some developments, monthly maintenance charges can run as high as several hundred dollars — in addition to mortgage payments. Ask the association about its priorities and future plans. You may not want to pay more maintenance fees in order to establish a fully staffed day care center, but if the rest of the association votes in favor of such a facility, you'll be obligated to pay your share.

For the most part, condominium owners get the same tax treatment as other homeowners. You are entitled to deduct mortgage interest, property taxes, and any casualty losses you may incur. In addition, all the rules relating to the sale of a principal residence apply to condominiums.

However, some special tax considerations exist solely for condo owners. Occasionally, you may deduct property taxes assessed on the development's common elements. When a share of your maintenance fees is used to pay taxes, for instance, you may be entitled to a deduction. Similarly, you can often deduct any mortgage interest on your share of common property, such as a social hall where residents gather.

If you do decide to buy a condo, remember that not all condos are equal. Your actual financial liability for a condo can vary greatly depending on several factors, the reserve fund being only one. When calculating the actual cost of a condo, you also need to determine the exact purpose of the monthly maintenance fees. Are security or other services, such as garbage collection, included? Are any major repairs pending? Remember that the amount of the fee can change from year to year, depending on circumstances.

CPAs say that if you are thinking about buying a condo, but plan to rent it out most of the time, remember that you may be able to take the numerous deductions available for owners of rental property. Since tax reform has made the rules for figuring these deductions more complicated than in the past, explore the consequences before signing a contract to purchase.
