SECTION B

From The Editor's Notebook

By Tom Canavan
Editor in Chief

Vacation, August 1992: "Tom, they don't think she's going to make it through the night." It was a phone call from a family member alerting me, while I was away on vacation, that an aunt of ours, my godmother, was dying. So I gathered my belongings and left.

Vacation, July 1993: "Tom, I have to leave. My father is very sick." Those words came from a girlfriend of mine, while we were away on vacation, whose father was diagnosed with a serious illness. I gathered my belongings and left.

Vacation, July 1994: "Your mother is going into the hospital on Monday." I gathered my belongings from my overnight bag and put them back in the closet.

It's vacation time again, July 1995, and I'm asked by friends if I really want to go away. The joke is that every time I attempt to take a vacation, tragedy strikes and my week is cut short.

Well, I'm writing this column on Friday, wrapping up for the week and setting plans in motion at the work place to make sure things run smoothly during my absence, and I can't help but wonder who will take ill. You can't blame me for at least thinking about it — especially when friends remind you of the past.

But I'm on vacation. Four days, for that matter, by the time you read this column. And who knows what the week has brought?

Only good things, I assure you.

People look forward to vacations. It's a time to break away from the work place and forget about the crazy, daily activities that prompt you to do a nosedive into bed at the end of the day, but which somehow don't seem as bad when you look at them in retrospect at the end of the week.

Vacation time in the weekly newspaper business is wondering what a Tuesday night, our deadline night, is like. Does life really exist on a Tuesday night, or is it only for people who are accustomed to 9-5 days? Other than this year's Fourth of July, I can't remember the last time I had off on a Tuesday night.

I know I have plans already set for Tuesday night. I'm attending a Christmas in July party at a club near the beach where I'm staying for the week. I still may not remember what it's like, though, to be off on a Tuesday night.

In the newspaper industry, you truly can't get away from work, even if you're thousands of miles from the work place. No matter where you go or what you do, there's always a daily or weekly newspaper in the area to comb through to see how their editorial staffs perform, or how they layout their product. What kind of headlines do they use, and what kind of photo outline styles do they have? What are the differences in the overall typography? Can I implement this or that idea in our newspapers?

I guess the only way to avoid that is to stop reading newspapers, even for the short period of time, but,

Ruotolo realizes dream with center

It started with an idea. Now, the dream that Union County Prosecutor Andrew K. Ruotolo Jr. had to create a child advocacy center has come true.

It has come true with the help of a host of Union County government officials and employees, through the coordination of First Assistant Prosecutor Michael J. Lapolla.

And so, on Tuesday a building that once housed a law office at 123 Westfield Ave. in Elizabeth was opened as the Union County Child Advocacy Center. It will be a "safe haven" for child abuse victims and the site of many support services for the scarred children and their families.

Union County Freeholder Chairwoman Linda Di Giovanni joined Ruotolo and other dignitaries in cutting the ribbon to officially open the 3,300-square-foot building for business in ceremonies this week.

The building is being especially dedicated to the memory of Eileen Kelly Chrenka, who worked as confidential aide in the Prosecutor's Office and set a tone and spirit "that is reflected in the mission of the building," Ruotolo said the building was purchased last year for $187,000 from the proceeds of criminal activity and the freeholders provided $150,000 to renovate the structure.

Lapolla said the Child Abuse Unit, which currently includes three assistant prosecutors, six detectives and three support staff members, will be relocating from the first floor of the county administration building to the center. The "Land of Secrets," a child interview room which won a national award as the first of its kind, also will be recreated at the center.

Authority searching for operation head

By Michael Ketcham
Staff Writer

Joint Meeting's search for a new executive director is approaching its formative stages, as the sewerage authority seeks to plug the hole former executive director Michael Brinker left when he resigned Feb. 21.

Joint Meeting, which serves 11 member municipalities in Essex and Union counties, lost Brinker because of the uncertainty swirling around his job status. Rumors circulated for months that the Board of Commissioners was going to replace Brinker with a patronage appointment, so Brinker left the sewerage authority despite a board committee's recommendation he be retained.

Joint Meeting's board made A. Ralph LaMendola acting executive director March 7 by a 6-4 vote. LaMendola is performing all of Brinker's former duties — chief engineer, purchasing agent, chief financial officer and personnel director. Those duties, however, may be split when the board names Brinker's successor.

Joint Meeting board representatives Jerome Petti from Union, Ann Lord from Hillside, John McKeon from West Orange and Joel Weingarten from Millburn are working to establish a hiring criteria for Brinker's permanent replacement, and will discuss the matter at its July 20 regular meeting. A source close to the committee said it has been "predetermined" that Brian Christiansen, deputy executive director of the Union County Utilities Authority, could be named Brinker's successor. This source also placed Michael Duffy, the former director of Essex County Hospital, serving as Christiansen's assistant.

Lord, who chairs the committee, said there have been a "few names floating around," including Christiansen's. She called Christiansen a "very qualified" person who is doing "an excellent job" with the UCUA. If he applied for the post, Lord said, "I would definitely consider his application."

Calling the committee's search nationwide is "a little far fetched," Lord said. But if Christiansen keeps his name out of the running, Lord said the board will seek candidates who possess expertise "working with a large number of people," negotiating with unions, formulating a large budget and government experience.

"I really think it is a government agency," Lord said of Joint Meeting. Lord said "no names will be submitted" as candidates during the board's July 20 meeting, but she added when the time arrives to pick Brinker's replacement, she will only look at that candidate's qualifications.

"I'm not voting for someone I feel is not qualified," Lord said. The other three committee members also said they have not reached a point where they are ready to recommend a candidate. In fact, all committee members said they have not even requested resumes. Still, some concerns remain.

Camps to aid youth in journalism, theater

Two special camps to help young people develop their skills in theater and journalism will be offered during a two-week period from July 31 through Aug. 10 at Union County College.

As part of the Department of Continuing Education and Community Services' "College for Kids" non-credit offerings, young people ages 8 through 12 will be able to learn from "Theater Camp," while those in grades 6 through 12 will be able to participate in "NewsCamp '95." Both classes will run from 9 a.m. to noon on Mondays through Thursdays at the college's Cranford campus.

"Theater Camp" will provide instruction to develop students' natural acting abilities, while learning theater fundamentals. Participants will learn how to audition for a show, different styles of acting ranging from mime to monologue to dialogue to improvisation, movement and dance choreography. They also will learn how sets, sound, lights, costumes and makeup help enhance the actors' presence on stage. Participants will work directly with experienced actors and entertainers, with parents invited to a "camp revue" on the last day of the camp.

"NewsCamp '95" will enable students to hone their writing skills by using journalistic techniques. They will report, write and edit stories under the direction of an editor/writing coach and other journalism-trained teachers. A "press conference" will be conducted, and participants will conduct guest interviews. Selected stories from the class will be distributed to a local newspaper.

Those interested in more information should call (908) 709-7600.

Intern program is offered for law career candidates

The Union County Sheriff's Office will be offering a law enforcement intern program for college students.

The program is open to college juniors and seniors, or exceptional two-year college sophomores. Interns are recommended by their guidance counselors and reviewed by Lt. Vincent Detrollo, program director, Detective John Diorio, internship supervisor, and Debra Traficante, program secretary.

Interns seeking three college credits must work one full day per week for one semester.

Candidates should be interested in law enforcement, but all applicants are considered.

Anyone interested in obtaining information about the program should contact Debra Traficante at the sheriff's office by calling (908) 527-4957. Applications should be received by Sept. 5.

McClain demonstrated the completely refurbished Nova III Projector, which has been upgraded with a new Starball. This recently upgraded equipment is capable of showing 1,500 more stars than before, can produce pinpoint star images...far superior to the fuzzy stars that were seen at Trailside for the past 26 years that were produced by a flashlight bulb. Our galaxy can be viewed more accurately and the Milky Way is seen with more detail as viewed from dark country skies. Anyone wishing information on planetarium shows should call (908) 789-3670. Special shows can be arranged for parties, scouts and other groups.

Minorities gain officers' status

The Union County Advisory Board on the Status of Minorities has elected its slate of officers for 1995.

Re-elected to their third terms as officers of the board were the following: Jonny R. Rosser of Union, chairperson; Mattie J. Holloway of Hillside, vice chairperson and Shirley Palmer of Rahway, secretary.

The other members of the advisory board are Nelson Gonzalez, Louis Medina and John Donoso of Elizabeth, — the Rev. Theodore T. Gojins of Roselle and from Walter Williams of Hillside.

"I'd like to congratulate the new officers of the Advisory Board on the Status of Minorities," said Freeholder Walter McLeod, liaison to the advisory board. "The time that they donate from their own schedule to help others is valuable, and very much appreciated."

Established by the Freeholder Board in 1987, the county's Advisory Board on the Status of Minorities was created to explore and evaluate minority concerns within Union County, to provide information to the Freeholder Board relevant to the concerns of Union County's minorities and to review county policies and practices as they pertain to minority issues and employment. The advisory board's purpose is also to advise the freeholders on minority matters so that a review of county policies and practices as they relate to minority issues and concerns can continue in addition to providing the freeholders with recommendations so that they may be kept aware of and see to the implementation and continuation of the advisory board's objectives.

The advisory board's focus for this year will be on services for youth and senior citizens, affordable housing and the availability of community resources.

The advisory board meets on the second Monday of each month except for July and August at 6:30 p.m. in the Union County Administration Building in Elizabeth. Anyone who wants additional information should call (908) 527-4113.

Joint Meeting readies for new director

Weingarten said during the committee's June 29 meeting talks "sort of broke down" regarding the criteria candidates must meet to run the sewerage authority. Weingarten said he wants all candidates to possess the skills and experience that will ensure "the highest quality candidate pool." These candidates, he added, should have an educational background and job experience similar to the job duties the Joint Meeting post demands. But other members, he said, would like to see less stringent qualifications.

"I use the term vague because it's more general," Weingarten said of the criteria other committee members would like to put in place.

Weingarten said the committee will give the board information on the job criteria, advertising for the post, resume requests and interviews July 20.

"My assumption is there won't be an attempt to rush somebody in," he said. But if candidates can apply for the position under a loose criteria, Weingarten added, "It make be easier to make the argument that somebody can make it based on broad criteria."

McKeon said he thinks the committee's journey toward devising a criteria is going "fairly well." He characterized himself as "somewhat in the middle" of criteria debates that have Weingarten pitted against Lord and Petti. McKeon said any candidate's experience needs to be backed with professional credentials.

"I want to get as many names as we can, as opposed to being limited," he said of the candidates. McKeon did call the committee search one of potentially nationwide proportions, however, and added he will ultimately vote for "the most qualified candidate."

ren who have been burned, beaten or sexually abused," said the prosecutor. "If we can make the odyssey of the child victim less painful, we will have accomplished the mission we committed ourselves to years ago."

Ruotolo said the center was designed to meet the diverse and disparate needs of children, pointing out that his office is committed to a "multi-disciplinary" approach to the crime of child abuse wherein professionals representing the disciplines of law, law enforcement, social services, medicine and psychology come together to address each case.

MDT Coordinator John Marcantonio of the prosecutor's office is assigned to oversee these counseling, referral and other services for victims and their families. "Beside prosecuting the abuser, we also promote the mental and emotional healing that needs to begin while also working to prevent revictimization using legal, protective and health and human service provides," he said.

Andrew Ruotolo

The prosecutor's office teamed up with the Bayway Refinery Co. in September to sponsor a 1-mile family walk and 5K race to raise funds for toys and furnishings to make the center comfortable for children.

"The law enforcement profession, much like civilized society itself, is measured by its ability to protect those who are most vulnerable," Ruotolo said. "We have a responsibility, then, to empathize with children whose suffering exceeds anything in our experience — to provide them with strength, give them comfort and see that justice is done."

He said the center, created in response to the unfortunate growth in abuse cases, is the next step in providing services "so that the healing can begin."

Lapolla said that aside from the financial support and backing of the freeholders, the center also was the recipient of "in-kind" contributions from employees from the divisions of Buildings and Grounds, Parks and Recreation, Public Works and Voice and Print Communications.

Last year there were 129 separate child abuse investigations conducted by the unit, with six involving neglect and child endangering, 32 physical abuse files and 91 cases involving suspected sexual abuse.

National statistics reveal some two million youngsters are abused each year, and many more that are not even reported to authorities.

So while you're reading this column, I'll be the guy on a beach chair surrounded by as many newspapers as I can find along my brief journey, analyzing, reviewing and scrutinizing the product. But I'll be having a good time.

I'll also be the guy chasing the wind-blown newspapers across the sand and stepping over sunbathers who at that point would want to see me dead for interrupting their precious hours under the sun.

Perhaps that will be the tragedy that will befall me this year. I can live with that.

Maplewood Nursery in bloom

"It's more than just a nursery," says Wayne Maudsley, owner and proprietor of Maplewood Nursery in Springfield. "In addition to flowers, trees and shrubs, we also sell an entire array of lawn and garden care products, topsoil and mulches, and paving stones."

Maudsley, who is the third generation of nursery operators in his family, says business is as good as ever this season, and more and more people are coming to Maplewood Nursery, located at 160 Springfield Ave., for a variety of items to make their homes and yards look fresh.

Maplewood Nursery also carries at least nine different styles of paving stones from which to choose, and all are easy to install and reasonably priced.

Maudsley stays on top in the highly competitive nursery business by keeping prices low and selling products in bulk.

Another unique feature he offers is the sale of items in bulk, which drops the price considerably. "We can sell things by the cubic yard instead of the bag," he says. "Selling items by the truckload can mean big savings for the customer."

But before you pick up a rake or shovel, it may be a good idea to stop at the Maplewood Nursery and pick up a few hints from Wayne Maudsley, or call the nursery at 376-7698.

Fest's 'Julius Caesar:' Brutal and beautiful

By Lisa Ann Batitto
Arts and Entertainment Editor

Can Shakespeare be improved? After seeing the New Jersey Shakespeare Festival's current offering of "Julius Caesar," the answer is a triumphant yes.

Rather than sticking to the Bard's original story — which at times can be a laborious history lesson — director Dennis Delaney drew from Orson Welles' 1937 adaption and the result is a powerful, thought-provoking piece that transcends time.

Welles' trimmed 1,100 lines and 17 characters from the play, and it begins with Caesar's entrance into Rome and encounter with a soothsayer who warns him to "beware the Ides of March." The scene has an eerie feel as the faithful chant "Hail Caesar!" and give him a Nazi-like salute, while the surly guards sport red arm-bands. According to press reports, when Welles brought his version to the Mercury Theater on Broadway, he presented Caesar as a symbol for Mussolini and made the whole proceedings look like 1930s Europe. The setting still works well today and it manages to send shivers up the spine.

After the captivating opening,

the play follows the twists and turns leading up to the eventual killing of Caesar at the hands of people who believed he must be eliminated for the general good of the Romans. One of the conspirators is Brutus, a personal friend of Caesar, who chooses public responsibility over his love of the ruler. In the end, Brutus is haunted by his betrayal of his friend — literally, as Caesar's ghost appears to him — that he takes his own life.

There are no heroes or villains in Shakespeare's "Julius Caesar" and in this production, the audience still doesn't know for who to root. Is Caesar a tyrant or just a charismatic leader? Is Brutus noble or ambitious? The beauty of the play is that these questions aren't answered, which adds to its realism. After all, nothing in life is black and white.

The script also is buoyed by an outstanding cast. While all the performances are high-quality, some deserve a special mention.

As Mark Anthony — a man who had no hand in the death of Caesar yet benefits from his demise —

David Andrew Macdonald is a revelation. Tall and handsome with a presence that fills the stage, Macdonald expertly portrays all the nuances in his complex character — whether weeping at the funeral of Caesar or rallying his followers into murderous frenzy. He all but steals every scene he is in and he certainly has a bright future ahead of him. The Shakespeare festival should consider signing him up for a long-term contract.

Another cast stand-out is Matthew Boston as conspirator Casca. Boston has a great time with his character, infusing the lines with his own style of physical comedy. He cuts through the somberness of the play and gives it a much needed light touch.

Extra nods also go to Robin Chadwick, who makes a classy and commanding Julius Caesar; Robert Lupone as the tortured Marcus Brutus; and Alexis Brentani as Brutus' devoted wife, Portia.

A play can't get off the ground without the work of the backstage crew and it certainly rises to the task. The sets by Rob Odorisio and the costumes by Mary Paterson give it the proper tone, which is captured by Jeff Staehlin's moody sounds. People who were reluctant to see

David Andrew Macdonald, center, shows the mob the body of Caesar (Robin Chadwick) in the New Jersey Shakespeare Festival production of 'Julius Caesar.' Adapted by Orson Welles from Shakespeare's political tragedy, 'Julius Caesar' runs through July 22 at the Bowne Theater on the campus of Drew University in Madison. the NJSF version of "Julius Caesar" should toss aside any preconceived notions that it would be ponderous and dull. It does what theater should do: it tugs on the heartstrings and expands the mind. Go, and prepare to be dazzled.

"Julius Caesar" will be staged through July 22 at the Bowne Theater at Drew University, 36 Madison Ave., Madison. Performances are Tuesday through Saturday at 8 p.m.; Sunday at 7 p.m.; and Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday matinees at 2 p.m. Tickets are available by calling the box office at (201) 408-5600. Student rush tickets, which cost $7, are available 15 minutes prior to curtain time for all performances. A valid student ID must be shown at time of purchase.

need a stage manager.' It was a good opportunity to work at the Paper Mill," she said, "so, my husband, Glenn, who was interested in theater at that time and worked as a light designer, technician and electrician, took care of our son for 10 weeks. Glenn is a chef now and is currently trying to get into the restaurant industry."

Stage manager keeps the Paper Mill running smoothly

By Bea Smith
Staff Writer

Stage managing is one of the more difficult phases of the theater anywhere, and it takes a certain type of person to assume the responsibilities of the job. One must be addicted to detail, thoroughly knowledgeable in the technical aspects backstage, extremely patient and for the most part — serene — no matter what happens.

Many Broadway productions have men employed as stage managers, but women are coming into their own in that profession, and Lora K. Powell of West Orange, who is employed as a production stage manager by the Paper Mill Playhouse, Millburn, is an exceptional example.

For the past three years, Powell, who is not yet 30 years of age, stands beside her console backstage and her television monitor and wears a headset so she can communicate with the crew and technicians. That is called "calling the cues." But even before the show comes to the Paper Mill Playhouse, she has to be at the rehearsals that take place at the Wien Center in Manhattan, where most of the well-known Broadway shows rehearse. She is there rehearsing with cast and crew for two and one-half weeks, and then five days in Millburn before the opening of the show.

Lora K. Powell works the board backstage at the Paper Mill Playhouse in Millburn.

"That is what we call Tech Week," the youthful Powell, who gives every indication of serenity, said last Thursday at lunch at the F.M. Kirby Carriage House next door to the Paper Mill. That's when the cast meshes with set pieces that move and learn the lighting cues and costume changes.

"Stage managing," according to Meara Nigro, director of public relations at the Paper Mill, who accompanied Powell, "is analogous to the work of an airline traffic controller. Stage managers coordinate everything that happens on stage behind the scenes. Safety is involved, too. One has to watch out for everything."

"This show, 'The Secret Garden,' said Powell, "completes my third season with the Paper Mill although I did the show, 'Oklahoma,' four seasons ago. I had replaced the stage director, who had had to leave, and Robert Johanson asked me to come in as a resident."

Powell grinned. "It does require a cool head. But I've been stage managing professionally since I graduated from college, the University of Kansas in Lawrence. I grew up in St. Louis and moved to Wichita at the age of 11. I've always liked the theater. My parents always took me to the MUNY Opera and to other theatrical events, and I have always been interested in it. There was a summer stock theater called the Music Theater of Wichita, and I started as an apprentice, when I was in high school, working in the technical area with props and ended up coming back with them as the prop master, and ended up making the transition with them as a stage manager.

"It was great training, actually perfect training, for the Paper Mill," she declared, "because our schedule is so tight. I've always liked the theater, and I acted in high school, but once I got to college I didn't like the lack of control, such as auditioning and not getting the part or being cast in a role you didn't like."

She admitted that "I found I couldn't handle acting anymore, and started working as an assistant stage manager. I was really lucky to find an area that suited my demeanor. During college, my toss-up was technical theater or law. In law, you're always trying to make conflict. And I like to eliminate conflict. I like to help to make things run smoothly and to solve problems."

After college, Powell had spent two seasons as a stage manager at the South Coast Repertory in Costa Mesa, Calif., and stage managed an industrial for Wang Computers in San Diego, before becoming a production stage manager at the Music Theater of Wichita, where she met James Coco. Coco had worked for a number of years at the Paper Mill in various capacities, producing, acting and directing.

"I met Jamie in Wichita," said Powell. "He had been working with me and he liked my work as a stage manager. As director of 'Oklahoma' at the Paper Mill, he found that he did not have a stage manager. It was in the spring of 1992, and my son, Dylan, was three months old, and Jamie called me to say, 'We really

Powell said the family relocated to West Orange at that time. "West Orange met all of our needs," she said. "It takes less than 15 minutes to get to the Paper Mill and that allows me to go home to dinner and have extra time to spend with my son, who will be 4 years old in November. Do you know," she said proudly, "that he was the New Year's Eve baby at the Paper Mill's annual celebration last year? He looked so cute with the banner around him. Robert Johanson's nephew, Adam, was the original New Year's Eve baby, but he outgrew the role," Powell laughed.

In her complex job of stage managing, Powell said "I feel confident and that helps it make all the difference in the world. The crew here at the Paper Mill is so good. I never have to worry about what they are doing at any time," she declared, "'The Secret Garden' is a very technically demanding show. In the first 20 minutes, on a turntable stage, we do scene shift after scene shift after scene shift. There are about six different locations.

"Usually, a show starts slowly with just one scene. But we start out with both barrels," Powell grinned. "And Tech Week was very difficult. At dress rehearsal, our production assistant, Mimi Intagliata, sprained her ankle when her foot got caught in a piece of scenery off stage. But we have a good staff of assistants," she said confidently. "We have two assistant stage managers, one production assistant and one intern."

She explained that "today will be the first day that my assistant, Richard Rauscher, is going to work the cues for this show. I'll be there with the understudies. We always rehearse the understudies because you never know. I'm actively working with understudies in rehearsal for about eight hours a week, usually on Fridays."

Among her duties as stage manager, Powell said, "I make sure we're all set to open the house to the audience. Usually, we're ready to go, but it's always challenging. With a big stage, we seem to accomplish bigger shows. All the shows over the last three seasons have been different in scope. 'Forever Plaid' was small; 'Prisoner of Zenda' was big.

"And the turntable is a whole new element for me. I like the Paper Mill because we get such a variety of shows," she explained. "I particularly enjoy 'The Secret Garden' because I'm a gardener myself."

Powell said that "we will be doing a reading for the next season's production of 'Tomorrow the World.' It always amazes me that Broadway shows have months to tech and we have a total of three weeks from start to finish. There has

'Macbeth' comes to the Other Stage

The New Jersey Shakespeare Festival opens its Other Stage season with its third Shakespeare production of the season, "Macbeth." This timeless tale of madness and murder opens on Tuesday and runs through July 22 at Playwright's Theater of New Jersey on 33 Green Village Road in Madison. Performances are Tuesday-Saturday at 8:15 p.m. with Saturday matinees at 2:30 p.m.; tickets for all performances are $15. For reservations and additional information, call (201) 408-5600.

"Macbeth" will be directed by Ulla Neuberburg, whose approach to the play is to "put 'Macbeth' and his Lady in a larger political context, making the play a fable about the changes of power within a state by means of murder, intrigue and military force." This concentration on the text will be highlighted by a bold visual style and an original score by Ralph Denzer which will be performed live, each evening. "Macbeth" promises to be a thrilling evening of theater.

Neuberburg returns to the Other Stage to stage "Macbeth" after directing "Man to Man" last season. Before coming to New York, Neuberburg worked extensively in her native Germany, including five years at Theater Zerbrochene Fenster, Berlin's largest independent theater. A director, performer and designer, Neuberburg has toured extensively through England and Australia. Her most recent New York credits were directing Goethe's "Faust" for the Naja Faust Festival and appearing as Natasha in Richard Schechner's production of "Three Sisters" at La Mama.

"Macbeth" is played by Patrick Morris who joins the festival for his third summer after appearing in "The Comedy of Errors" on the Main Stage and "Measure for Measure" and "Man to Man" on the Other Stage. His New York credits include Goethe's "Faust" at Naja and "Henry VI" at the Joseph Papp Public Theater. Morris also works as an artist in residence in the New Jersey high school system.

Rebecca Ortese will portray Lady Macbeth after appearing opposite Patrick Morris in last season's "Man to Man," also on the Other Stage. Her New York and regional theater credits include: Sarah Brown in "Guys and Dolls," Nora in a "Doll's House" and Desiree in a "Little Night Music." On film, Ortese was seen in Carl Franklin's "One False Move," Sidney Lumet's "Power" and Brian DePalma's "Carlito's Way." She has won numerous awards for her commercial and voice-over work and is periodically seen in "All My Children."

Dan Berkey and Renee Bucciarelli portray Macduff and Lady Macduff. Berkey is a member of East Coast Artists in New York, where he has appeared in "Faustgastromome," "Amerika" and "The Three Sisters."

Bucciarelli has worked extensively in regional theaters and, in New York, with Theater for a New Audience where she has been seen in "Taming of the Shrew," "The Tempest," "Romeo and Juliet," and "A Midsummer Night's Dream." She also portrays Leah on the ABC's "Loving." Also appearing in "Macbeth" are Dennis Green, Bruce Turk, Norman Field, Ty Jones, David Mandel, James Christopher and Doug Webster.

The sets for "Macbeth" will be designed by visual artist Gail Rothchild, the costumes by Audrey Fisher, lights by Gary L. Marlin.

"Macbeth" performs Tuesday-Saturday evenings at 8:15 with matinees on Saturday at 2:30 p.m. The Other Stage is located at the Playwright's Theater of New Jersey, 33 Green Village Road in Madison. For tickets and information, call (201) 408-5600.

Liantonio's

You are sure to be delighted.

George Sanchez, maitre d' at Liantonio's Restaurant, and John V. Molle, chef, prepare to welcome diners to the Kenilworth restaurant.

The words Italian food conjure up a variety of images for people. Some people think of ravioli, others antipasto and still others veal marsala. Whatever this cuisine makes you think of, you are sure to find it at Liantonio's in Kenilworth.

This gem, conveniently located off Route 22, boasts one of the most extensive menus I have encountered. On my visit, the restaurant had a whopping 15 specials — which is more than some establishments offer on their standard menus.

My friend and I began our meals at Liantonio's with a hot appetizer selection. My friend chose the mozzarella en carrozza, which was served with marinara sauce and lemon butter. This is a favorite of his and he said it was one of the best he has had.

I had a difficult time picking between the stuffed artichokes or the special stuffed mushrooms, available with sausage, crabmeat or shrimp. I settled on the mushrooms stuffed with shrimp and was delighted with the flavorful presentation. Other meal starters on the regular menu are little neck clams on the half shell, baked eggplant rounds topped with ricotta and mozzarella cheese, pasta e fagioli and arugula salad.

For my main course, I also selected a special, mafalda — thin, lasagna-like noodles prepared with sun-dried tomatoes, rock shrimp and garlic. It was truly a unique and delicious dish and I urge anyone to order it if it is on the menu the night they dine there.

My friend was equally pleased with his choice of rigatoni vodka with snow peas. The light pink sauce was a perfect compliment to the homemade pasta.

Other items available for the main course are baked manicotti; rigatoni Liantonio's, tubular pasta with hot peppers and grilled sausage in marinara sauce; capellini with chicken in a light, creamy pesto sauce; broiled or Boston batter fried seafood combination; jumbo shrimp scampi, fraise, parmigiana or fra'diavolo; gianna, breaded veal cutlet sauteed in butter and topped with arugula and tomatoes in a balsamic vinegar dressing; and chicken parmigiana, fraise, marsala or tarragon. Each entree is accompanied by a fresh and colorful house salad and warm, crusty bread and the fish and meat dishes are served with pasta. The restaurant does not have a liquor license so patrons are invited to BYOB.

A meal wouldn't be complete without dessert and I ended mine with refreshing pineapple sorbet, served in its namesake's skin. My friend ordered the creamy, decadent tartufo. Other desserts are homemade cannoli and Italian cheesecake, and tiramisu.

Liantonio's, 625 North Michigan Ave., Kenilworth, is open Tuesday through Sunday. Live entertainment is provided on Friday and Saturday evenings beginning at 7 o'clock, and every Sunday is Pasta Night "Extravaganza." There is a separate menu for lunch, in addition to "businessman lunch specials," which for $6.95 includes soup or salad, and a choice of six entrees, such as a sausage and peppers sandwich. The restaurant provides catering on or off the premises, and a party room is available for up to 90 people. For more information call (908) 687-2266.

Majority of American children at risk from ozone air pollution

A report published by the American Lung Association estimates that 88,761 children 13 years of age or younger in New Jersey are potentially at risk for developing breathing disorders, such as asthma attacks, caused by ozone air pollution. Nationwide, 27.1 million children 13 years of age or younger are at risk.

"Danger Zones: Ozone Air Pollution and Our Children" estimates that 53.9 percent of America's children live in areas with unhealthy air, but are not protected by the current federal air quality standard for ozone or smog. According to the American Lung Association, recent research suggests that the current federal standard does not effectively protect the public's health. The report, published in the April 28 edition of "Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report," coincides with the American Lung Association's Clean Air Month which focuses attention on environmental issues and lung health.

"Our study dramatically illustrates a major health threat to America's children," said Dr. Irwin M. Berlin, president of the New Jersey Thoracic Society, medical section of the American Lung Association of New Jersey. "Unfortunately, while the Lung Association continues to fight for strict clean air standards to protect Americans' health, Congress is attempting to weaken — or to even destroy — those protections."

Currently pending in Congress are bills that would dramatically alter the Clean Air Act, the landmark law that guides this nation's campaign for cleaner air. One such bill would repeal the act entirely; others target specific sections of the act, such as calling for relaxed deadlines for states to meet clean air goals.

"Lung disease is the third leading cause of death in America and can have a devastating effect on children," he said. "Children's lungs are not just miniature versions of adult lungs. They are especially sensitive to infection and pollution. Their lungs are still growing, creating millions of air sacs throughout childhood. Early damage can have far-reaching consequences."

Children are especially vulnerable to the effects of ozone air pollution because of a number of factors, including their exposure to ozone and a variety of physiological factors. Ozone, the main component of smog, acts as a powerful respiratory irritant at the levels frequently found in most of the nation's urban areas during summer months. Symptoms include shortness of breath, chest pain when inhaling deeply, wheezing, and coughing.

The American Lung Association currently has litigation pending against the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency to strengthen the ozone standard. In 1993, the EPA reaffirmed the 0.12 parts per million standard, which is based entirely on scientific information published only through 1988. Numerous scientific studies published over the past seven years have linked ozone levels as low as 0.08 ppm to drops in lung function, respiratory symptoms, and increased hospital admissions and emergency department visits for respiratory problems.

Increasing attention is being paid to the fact that minority and poor populations are often disproportionately subjected to a variety of environmental health hazards. "Our most severe air pollution problems are typically found in urban metropolitan areas, which are often areas with a high percentage of minority populations," Berlin said. "We are continuing to fight for stricter air standards that would address the need for environmental justice and respond to the disproportionate health hazards faced by minority and poor populations throughout the country."

The "Danger Zones" report identifies the following at-risk groups of children:

- 50.8 percent — 19.1 million of white children aged 13 or under;
- 61.3 percent — 4.6 million of black children aged 13 or under;

- 28.9 percent — 160,149 of Eskimo or Aleut children aged 13 or under;
- 67.7 percent — 1.1 million of Asian or Pacific Islander aged 13 or under;
- 69.2 percent — 4.2 million of Hispanic children aged 13 or under; and;
- 21.8 percent — 1.4 million of children of other races aged 13 or under.

"Danger Zones" also estimates that 1.95 million of children with asthma under 18 years are at risk from ozone air pollution. More than 12.4 million Americans have asthma, including an estimated 4.2 million children under 18 years of age. Asthma is the leading serious chronic disease among children and causes more lost school days than any other chronic illness.

"Children with asthma are at special risk because their airways are hypersensitive to this potent lung irritant," Berlin said. "Asthma can kill. Parents and children can take some steps to remove asthma triggers from their home — pets, mold, secondhand smoke — but there isn't anything they can do to rid the air of ozone on smoggy days. To avoid it, they have to stay indoors."

Overall, the annual health costs of outdoor air pollution, including ozone, are estimated by the American Lung Association to be $50 billion.

"Danger Zones" does more than tell us numbers of people at risk from ozone," Berlin explained. "It forces us to face the reality that more than half our children may potentially become ill because our air standards are not strict enough. It's time to step up our fight on behalf of more than 27 million children!"

Expanded medical center opens

The St. Barnabas Health Care Medical Building, located at 1050 Galloping Hill Road, Union, which provides comprehensive outpatient services and brings new and expanded health care services to the community, opened in June.

Comprised of more than 36,000 square feet, the center includes a women and children's center; a cancer treatment center; a nine-station renal dialysis center; a satellite of the Joslin Diabetes Center at St. Barnabas, affiliated with the world renowned Boston Center; pediatric outpatient services; and a vascular laboratory.

The women and children's center includes a general pediatric practice which has served the community of Union for 23 years. The pediatric practice, which opened on July 1, consists of the following physicians: Dr. Milton Fischgrund, Dr. David J. Oxman, Dr. Elizabeth A. Panzer, and Dr. Norman W. Zagner. All are diplomates of the American Board of Pediatrics.

Two obstetrics-gynecology practices are also in the center. The Women's Health Care of Union practice includes: Dr. John F. Bonamo, Dr. Donald Chervenak, Dr. Thomas M. DeAngelis, and Dr. Robert G. O'Driscoll, all of whom are board certified; and Dr. Gerald Ciciola, who is board eligible.

The second practice, Association for Women's Health Care, includes: Dr. Richard L. Berman, Dr. Stephen Crane, Dr. Theodore Cohen, Dr. David Hollander, Dr. Mary Janeli, Dr. John A. Kindziarski, Dr. Lewis T. Ladocsi, Dr. Linda Louisi-Purdue, Dr. Michael C. Milano, Dr. Neil J. Russo, Dr. Anthony J. Quartell, and Zem Walk, M.D., all of whom are board certified.

A pediatric subspecialty group consisting of pediatric specialists from Children's Hospital and St. Barnabas Medical Center is also available. This subspecialty center will consolidate many specialties for which children previously had to visit several hospitals.

St. Barnabas Outpatient Centers provides mammography services, a cardiovascular laboratory, renal dialysis services and a satellite of the Joslin Diabetes Center. The Cancer Center is affiliated with Union Hospital and is under the direction of Fred Steinbaum, D.O., who has been caring for patients in the Union area for more than 20 years.

Additional physicians office will soon be announced.

CHIROPRACTIC FOR BETTER HEALTH

DR. DONALD ANTONELLI

A PAIN IN THE NECK

If you have pain in the neck, you may be astounded to find the source of the pain isn't really in your neck at all, but further down in your spinal column.

That's one reason why the doctor of chiropractic will examine your entire spine to find where the problem may be. When your spinal column is moving, either in physical activity such as walking or even when you're breathing, there is a synergistic action at work. In other words, the upper part of your spine is interacting with the lower part. An injury to your lower spine may be so slight that you're really not aware of it. But it may be putting unusual pressure on the upper part of your spine. That may be the cause of the neck pain.

Your spinal column, from top to bottom, should be properly aligned and in good working order for you to feel well. Any weakness may cause stress, discomfort, and pain, until it is returned to good working order. Hopefully, that pain in the neck can be relieved. It's certainly worth looking into.

July 16-22

ARIES — March 21/April 20

Don't let your recent successes result in complacency. Prosperity is a certainty for those who continuously seek to plan and think creatively. A moment of solitude and quiet provides a needed elixir for fraying nerves. A family member will reach an important milestone.

TAURUS — April 21/May 21

Add a little romance to your life in the next week or so. Don't be afraid to go out on a limb if necessary as taking a little risk could knock you out of the romantic doldrums. Take a second look at events or people that may not be what they appear. A work project goes smoothly.

GEMINI — May 22/June 21

A psychological bubble may be preventing you from pursuing that special goal. Burst the bubble and prevent intimidation from getting the best of you. A friend from out-of-town contacts you with special news. A love from your past may seek a reconciliation. Be cautious.

CANCER — June 22/July 22

Be objective. Being too quick to judge others, or yourself, may cause you to miss out on something important. Avoid turning a molehill of a problem into a mountain. Walking away from frustrations for a short period will put you in a better mood. Do something special for your partner.

LEO — July 23/August 23

Consider whether your current career path is in agreement with your long-term goals. Radical changes may not be ideal for most Leos, but consider whether you could gain from supplemental training. A friend may unexpectedly cancel plans in the coming week.

VIRGO — Aug 24/Sept 22

Avoid making high-risk investments this week. Financial decisions resulting in moderate gain and less risk will be more fruitful. Personal problems may manifest late in the week. Much can be learned from those who are old or wise. Be open to the suggestions of others.

LIBRA — Sept 23/Oct 23

A time of frivolity may have ended and you may experience some mid-life blues. Take heart, however, a sojourn over a long-weekend will be a much needed tonic. This is not the right time to attempt to turn a professional relationship into a personal one. Spend time with those you know and trust.

SCORPIO — Oct 24/Nov 22

Be careful not to jump the gun on an important decision regarding a new relationship. Financially, it would be a good idea to take a completely fresh approach to a situation, especially if you have not been able to make ends meet. Learn from the mistakes of others.

SAGITTARIUS — Nov 23/Dec 21

There may be some stormy seas at home in the coming week. Attempting to melt an iceberg by getting hot under the collar may be the wrong approach to quelling the storm. It is a good time for leisure travel. Consider easing nerves by taking a long weekend.

CAPRICORN — Dec 22/Jan 20

A feeling of sluggishness may keep you from doing what you want. An extra hour or so of sleep per night could remedy the situation. You may receive some surprising and welcome news; be wary and don't make any sudden changes. Gains may be made in financial matters.

AQUARIUS — Jan 21/Feb 18

A high demand may be placed on your creative talents during the coming week. Luckily, the timing will coincide with an imaginative peak. Ambitious movement could lead to big career gains. An unexpected and unusual invitation comes your way. Be sure to accept.

PISCES — Feb 19/March 20

Wine and roses may be saved for another week as work will be more of a priority. In fact, this could be a start of a long busy period so be at your productive best. You may have a difficult time being tolerant of those who cannot make up their mind. Patience is a virtue.

YOUR BIRTHDAY THIS WEEK

Long-term romance is in the stars. Don't be surprised to find yourself hopelessly lost in someone for the duration of the year and beyond. Existing romances will grow even stronger, especially if you are involved with a Libra. Intellectual matters will be of high priority this year. Productivity and creativity will be of utmost importance to your long-term gain. Be wise with spending matters as you may end up being wasteful if you are not careful. A new friend will get you out and about a bit more than you're used to. Effective time management will allow you to keep a balance between work and play.

Painter has show in Clark
 The Skulski Gallery of the Polish Cultural Foundation, Clark, is presenting the art exhibit of Rahway artist Gary Wirmik from Friday to Aug. 5. The opening and reception will take place on Friday at 8 p.m. Wirmik's paintings have an impressionist realistic feeling that reflects his life experiences while traveling to many world places including Europe, Scandinavia, Greece, Caribbean, Chile and Mexico. The artist has lived in Israel for four years, where he painted most of his watercolors while hitchhiking through the Golan Heights and Sinai desert. The artist paints all subjects and enjoys working in watercolor the most, though he has also done oils. His paintings are in private collections all over the world. Wirmik has been represented at Michael Hartnett's Art Studio Gallery in Rahway since 1987. He has participated in Merck Pharmaceutical's Visual Arts in 1992 exhibition. In 1990 he exhibited and won an award at the N.J. Watercolor Society's 48th annual Open Exhibition at Brookdale College in Lincroft. Before this the artist was in the Santa Barbara Arts Council show in California and from 1981 to 1982 was represented at the Watercolor Gallery in Berkeley, Calif. He received his art education at the Newark School of Fine and Industrial Arts and further at the School of Visual Arts and at the New School in New York City. The artist believes that the greatest gains in his art have been accumulated by life experiences by observing the paintings of artists he admires.

The Polish Cultural Foundation is located at 177 Broadway, Clark, Exit 135 from the Garden State Parkway. The Skulski Gallery is open to public during summer months on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday 10 a.m.-3 p.m. and 6-9 p.m., and on Friday 10 a.m.-3 p.m. For more information, contact Aleksandra Nowak at (908) 382-7197.

Art school offers workshops
 The du Cret School of Art and Design has announced a series of art workshops for the summer. The workshops, that will vary in length and starting dates, will be offered through Aug. 4 and will include offerings for artists of varied experience and levels from beginners to advanced. These workshops will be offered during the days and evenings.

The fine art enthusiast can choose from a wide range of workshops that include: basic or advanced drawing, watercolor, pastel, oil painting, outdoor landscape painting, and drawing the head and portraits.

For the commercial artist, there are workshops in airbrush, introduction to desktop design, introduction to Quark X-Press, package design and cartooning — comic book art.

Adult artist and art lovers can also take part in a series of one day gallery and museum trips to New York City.

Young artists and teens can learn and develop their art skills in classes designed especially for them. Separate classes will be offered for ages 6 to 10 and 11 to 15 years old.

The du Cret School of Art and Design is located at 1030 Central Ave. in one of Plainfield's historic districts. The school is approved by the State of New Jersey, Department of Education; an accredited member of the Career College Association; a member of the Private Career School Association of New Jersey and the International Council of Design Schools.

Paper Mill's backstage star

been an increasing number of women in New York as stage managers, but there has always been more men in that position than women. The women sometimes have a problem in gaining the respect of crews. But I was lucky," she declared, "because I come from a technical background and understand crews and get along better with them."

She mentioned "a young man who was a dancer in 'Oklahoma' will direct 'Dream Girls' next season here in Millburn. His name is Mark S. Hoebee. It's nice to have people moving up. I've been very lucky to find that the Paper Mill is able to employ me for a full year. I hope someday we will do something that ends up on Broadway."

Powell, a quietly determined young woman, is actually a star at the Paper Mill, even though the audience can't see her. But the actors and crew can and they truly believe that she is their star. A dependable, confident, serene, backstage star.

Company seeks singers

The Ridgewood Gilbert & Sullivan Opera Company is having auditions for new company members on July 30 and 31, and on Aug. 7. Tryouts will be from 7-10 p.m. on the second floor of the Community Church of Glen Rock, which is located on Rock Road. All are welcome, from "shower singers" wishing to be in the ensemble to those auditioning for a principle part. This is a repertory company, so once a singer has joined the ensemble, no further auditions will be required except for those wishing to audition for a role in a future production.

It is recommended that singers choose a song in English as a tryout piece, an accompanist will be provided. Those auditioning for a role may be asked to sing or read some music or dialogue from the show as well.

This Ridgewood-based group was founded in 1937 by Kay and Jack Edson and has produced two shows a year ever since. Rehearsals for the fall production of "Ruddigore" will start in the last week of August for a mid-November opening. For directions to the auditions or for any further information, call the company's business manager at (908) 488-2656.

Real Estate

New real estate regulation will benefit consumers

A recently-adopted New Jersey Real Estate Commission regulation, designed to inform the consumer as to whom a real estate professional represents in a residential real estate transaction, requires real estate licensees as of July 1 to disclose their agency or business relationships to consumers prior to discussing any material facts. The most integral part of this new regulation, the Consumer Information Statement, spells out in layperson terms the four possible business relationships a real estate professional can offer a New Jerseyan — seller's or landlord's agent; buyer's or tenant's agent; disclosed dual agent; and transaction broker.

"In the last few weeks we have taken all of the available steps we can to inform and educate our 38,000 members to this new regulation," said Carl DeMusz, NJAR President and broker-owner of DeMusz Real Estate in Cape

May. "As an organization, we will continue to work with the commission and our 28 local associations and boards of realtors actively promoting and endorsing ideas that have the best interests in mind of all the parties involved in property transactions," DeMusz said.

While the following definitions focus on seller and buyer relationships, the regulation also applies to landlords and tenants:

- The first business relationship, the seller's agent, works only for the seller. The agent has legal obligations and fiduciary duties to the seller. Seller's agents often work with buyers, but do not represent them. However, in dealing with buyers, agents must act honestly.
- The second business relationship, the buyer's agent, works only for the buyer. The agent has legal obligations and fiduciary duties to the buyer. Buyer's agents often work with sellers, but do not represent them. However, in dealing with sellers, agents must act honestly.

- The third business relationship is the disclosed dual agent where the licensee represents both the buyer and the seller in the same transaction. To do so, a licensee must obtain informed written consent from both parties who should understand the fiduciary duties under this type of relationship are limited.
- The final, and most unfamiliar business relationship, is the transaction broker. The transaction broker is not an agent. The transaction broker works with a buyer or seller — or both — in a transaction without representing either party. In other words, a transaction broker has no fiduciary obligations to either party and serves as a manager of the transaction.

NJAR mailed complimentary copies of a 30-minute video on the new agency disclosure law to more than 2,400 designated realtors statewide. The video was mailed along with a copy of the New Jersey Real Estate Commission regulation; two copies of the Consumer Information Statement — one with and one without the optional required language for acknowledgment of receipt of the CIS and the declaration of the type of business relationship a firm intends to have; sample questions and answers on the CIS and its use; copies of required clauses such as a brokerage agreement and offers/contracts of sale/leases and a copy of the National Association of Realtors' Loss Prevention Booklet No. 8, "Creating Office Policies on Agency."

In addition, NJAR is adding a 30-minute television program on agency disclosure to its library of "Real Estate Roundup" programs which air biweekly on the Cable Television Network. The agency disclosure show is scheduled to air at 1:30 p.m. the first and third Friday of September.

Agency adopts automated system

Automated prospect management systems will fundamentally change the way new home builders do business, according to Peter Cass, vice president in charge of Coldwell Banker Schlott's New Homes Division.

"Automated prospect management systems are already in operation at two of our new home projects," Cass said.

According to Cass, the new technology provides the basis for relationship marketing strategies that will benefit both the builder and the consumer.

It provides a data base of information that helps builders follow up on buyer inquiries and maintain communications with customers. It can help a buyer make decisions about custom features such as kitchen cabinets, and also generate a contract for the sale of the new home.

"Early measures have shown that builders with the technology gather more complete information, and implement more successful follow-up than traditional approaches have allowed," he said. "Consumers appreciate the attention of reliable, coordinated follow-up activities, and the fact that information, once provided, can be applied to all future paperwork."

Cass said the prospect management systems will also strengthen the structure of Coldwell Banker Schlott's New Homes Division as a pace setter in service to builders.

"It's good for everyone," Cass said. "We put the power of technology and information into the hands of builders who might otherwise have no access to such resources. We contribute to a more efficient, professional and attentive shopping experience for the consumer. And we develop a gold mine of statistical data that will constitute an unprecedented resource for helping builders plan future projects."

"These initial installations are part of an exciting trend toward increased efficiency and professionalism," Cass explained. "There's no turning back."

Coldwell Banker Schlott, with more than 100 offices, is the New York Metropolitan region of Coldwell Banker, the nation's largest real estate company, which includes more than 2,300 residential real estate offices and more than 55,000 sales associates in North America.
