The Last Word In Testing Is Usually 'Maybe'

It is only when the findings of tests are unkind to other observations that testing can be most helpful, Dr. Robert M. Meehl says. He is a leading authority on the use of tests in the home and school environments. He says that the results of tests must be weighed in the light of other observations to establish a final estimate of the child.

Two types of tests are administered in Springfield schools each year, intelligence or capacity tests and achievement tests. Intelligence tests, which measure the child's ability to learn, are given in the third, fifth and seventh grades.

Each classroom, Dr. Meehl went on to say, "However, grouping must be flexible and not static. We aim for the best instruction for each child at each moment, and a child is moved in accordance with his ability."

"I have promised to omit needless mention of money from this pulpit, but I feel duty bound, in passing, to touch on our overdue gas bill!"

It is this comparison which spots the "under-achievers." Teachers and principals can learn discrepancies exist from interpretation of the tests.

Use of the tests and their application in Springfield serve several purposes, according to Dr. Meehl. They help identify students with superior talent or low ability along with other data.

Another important use of the tests is to assist the administration in making adjustments for the individual child. The following questions arise, explained Dr. Meehl:

THE TEST RESULTS help the school administration group the children for a realistic level of instruction in each classroom.

Dr. Meehl pointed out that the children in the Springfield school system test above the national norm in every basic skill area, as might be expected from their parents' educational background.

When the intelligence tests are scored in Springfield the findings include both a verbal and a non-verbal score. Many systems use just the total IQ score, which Dr. Meehl said may be misleading.

"WE SEE OUR PROGRAM as above average," he explained. "Our diagnostic assessments are superior to most school systems in diagnosing the learning disabilities for each of the children."

He emphasized, "We are continually revising and evaluating our testing practices in order to have a dynamic testing program and to keep up with the times."

HEALTH LEAGUE? FEW PEOPLE KNOW THAT IT EXISTS

The difficulties of keeping the public informed were brought home to the members of the Junior Board of Directors of the Union County Tuberculosis and Health League this week, in a survey conducted in the area.

Only 66 out of 147 people gave the correct answer when asked if there was a League in the area.

Approximately the same number of correct answers were given by males and females queried. Adults and students also had similar percentages.

Plans Revealed To Curb Floods On The Elizabeth

WASHINGTON — Rep. Florence P. Dwyer (R-8th Dist., N.J.) has announced that the Army Corps of Engineers has approved a recommendation for a flood control project along the Elizabeth River between North ave. Union, and the mouth of the river in Elizabeth at the Arthur Kill. The project depends on local cooperation.

The federal share of the project was estimated at $10.07 million and the non-federal share at $2.1 million. Mrs. Dwyer said flooding in the river causes average annual damage of $405,308, mainly to the Arthur Kill and North ave. Union.

N.J. State Highway Department Criticized On Its Rt. 278 Plans

Rep. Florence P. Dwyer (R-8th) told Union County Freeholders and township officials that she would try to arrange a meeting with a state, federal and local officials on proposed Rt. 278 through Union County.

Mrs. Dwyer met with officials in Elizabeth on Saturday and it was agreed to seek greater cooperation and coordination among local officials and between local, state and federal governments in dealing with problems of mutual concern.

She also promised to explore ways to require earlier consultation with local communities and give them a "more effective voice in highway planning."

Mrs. Dwyer's office said that among alternatives to the "beasts stroke" alignment of Rt. 278 proposed by the State, considerable support was expressed by Mayor Warren C. Stadden of Roselle, for relocating the highway along the Elizabeth River from Union to Elizabeth.

and urged municipal and county officials to agree on a single plan and "join forces to fight for its adoption."

In her opening remarks, Mrs. Dwyer suggested that a number of problems in Union County, including highways, were made unnecessarily complicated by the lack of adequate planning and coordination both in the county and in the wider region.

FAMILY LIFE TODAY By PHYLIS GREER of Rutgers—the State University Specialist in Human Relations

WHERE TO PLAY Tom, age 14, slouches against the wall of the corner drugstore waiting for "the gang." He wonders what they can do for excitement but he's sure they'll think of something. They always do. Tom thinks maybe they'll hitchhike—over to the river for a swim and then ride the nearest house or store for food. Youngsters of Tom's age always have to be doing something. The community that provides facilities for young people will be a strong influence on their lives. If there's a place to swim nearby, Tom won't have to disobey his parents and hitchhike. He won't have to swim in water that is polluted by waste or where there are no lifeguards. Tom would really rather play ball. But where? The school grounds are closed. There is a small park, but the police chase away kids who play ball. There is one lot that's good for ball playing, but the owner objects violently because of windows broken in the past. What can youngsters do in such a community without getting into trouble? Young people seek excitement and activity. The community should provide resources for recreational activities: swimming pools, playgrounds, libraries, etc. If it does, this community will be providing the world of tomorrow with young people who have grown and developed into good citizens.

Power Company Plans Expansion

To keep ahead of the increasing demand for electricity, Jersey Central Power and Light Company-New Jersey Power and Light Company will spend more than $60 million in 1965 for new and expanded power facilities. It was announced this week by William H. McElwain, president of the companies.

The budget for 1965 is 20 percent higher than last year's and reflects the continued industrial, residential and commercial growth of the companies' service area and increased customer use of electricity. An additional $136 million has been budgeted through 1967, McElwain continued.

"In this day and age, we cannot have growth without electricity. Our product must be available to the customer when it is needed," he said.

The greatest percentage of the 1965 budget will be spent in the generating field. More than $30 million has been allocated for new generating facilities, and $32,000 for improvements to existing generating stations.

In Pre-Revolutionary House, His Dream Is Freedom For All

By BEA SMITH

Springfield is very well known for its own "Man for All Seasons" — or better still, a "man for all centuries — past, present and future."

The man is Norman Banner, and he works for a laundry firm in Summit, the Cole Sweet-Kloen Laundry, where he is a laundry engineer, fireman and washer ("when the sinks do not work"). He is a World War II veteran, a layman in the Springfield Emanuel Methodist Church and a member of the Municipal Human Rights Commission.

Banner lives at 231 S. Springfield ave., in the oldest house in town (built in 1744) and guides himself by the texts of "Heritage," "Continuity," "Bill of Rights" and the "Golden Rule."

In contrast to his rugged height, the square, determined features of his face and his thick, work-worn hands, he has a quiet ministerial voice and a mild manner.

Banner, who lived in Springfield for the past 22 years, has a deep-rooted fondness for the town. His maternal grandfather, William Painter, an English stone mason, had, according to Banner, built "most of the houses in Springfield and Summit," and the "seven wooden bridges — from which the area got its original name of Seven Bridges rd. In fact, he built most of the original bridges on the road."

HE ALSO BUILT the stone house across from the old post office, where we lived when I was a youngster. I remember one day when we were cleaning it out and I had found some cannon balls. I was just a kid then. I didn't know what they were, so I threw them in the cesspool. I can't remember," he chuckled, "whether or not I was punished for it. But I probably was."

Living in an old house, therefore, was old hat to Banner. He bought the house on S. Springfield ave. two months ago because "the house we lived in before was in the way of Rt. 78. Everywhere we looked, we saw houses being torn down."

"I didn't want to move out of Springfield, particularly because I was quite well tied in — in the Methodist Church."

"We're four in the family — my mother, Mrs. Elsie Banner, my sister, Dorothy Banner, my wife, Virginia, and I. And we seem to need a lot of room. My sister has a Hammond organ, for example, and that takes up plenty of room on its own. It's when we saw this house, my mother fell for it right away. It seemed to suit us perfectly."

"One section of the house," Banner continued, "was built in 1744 by Anthony and Abigail Swain. Then they added on 16 ft. in 1778. It has quite a history."

"THE BRITISH had used it for food storage — the whole area was farmland, and they were well-supplied with fruit and vegetables. I guess that's why it was one of the few houses that was never burned down."

"I believe its former owner spent $15,000 restoring it. Since we've moved in, we've had the house open to the public once. It's amazing how much curiosity and interest it draws from the public. Children came in to write essays and compositions on the house, and most came out with top honors."

Banner explained that the floor is "the original floor of 1744. I took the paint off and just used water. It brought out the real color."

"There are three fireplaces. Over one, there was a rifle, but the owner took it when she moved away. So I looked around and found one which was made in 1750, and replaced the original rifle. The fireplaces are made of soapstone base. In the newer section, the fireplace is Belgian marble."

"We furnished the house mostly in French Provincial. And we have a picture on the wall of George Washington when he was about 30 years old. That came with the house."

"WE HAVE A KITCHEN, an enormous closet (which we had converted from an original ice house), a dining room, a living room, a music room, a library, four bedrooms and four bathrooms — with closets all over the place — big enough to walk in. The light fixtures are original, but they've been electrified."

"We also had the original plans for the house. The staircases were made of mahogany, and we had a mill on the back of the house. It used to be that an old tunnel went through there. Well, we've removed it."

"MORE MORE MORE — with all new plumbing, bathrooms, hot water heat."

"We've spent quite a bit on the house. The squirrels had chewed off the shingles on the roof and thrown them down the chimney. That actually started a fire. So we had to put a new roof on the chimney. Outside of that, the house is in excellent condition."

"Oh, yes," he said in retrospect, "the floors in the old section were in bad shape. I had to get some wood for them from New York State and Pennsylvania."

"I also molded plaster in the ceilings. In the new sections, the ceilings are higher. It's a good old house," Banner stated proudly.

THE OLD AND THE NEW — Norman Banner, who lives in the oldest house in Springfield, at 231 S. Springfield ave., (built in 1744 by Anthony and Abigail Swain), turns old-fashioned candles on by way of modern electricity. Fireplaces in background (one of them in the house) is made of soapstone base, and rifle above fireplace, which Banner purchased, was made in 1750. House was open to the public several weeks ago.

work in the displaced persons' camps in Czechoslovakia and Poland. This is what got me interested in church."

"I had never really taken it seriously before, but suddenly I realized the gift we have here — freedom of religion. I get awfully emotional when I think of some of those camps, especially when my assignments were to clean out the incinerators."

BANNER PAUSED and drew a deep, painful sigh. It sounded almost like a gasp. Several moments passed before he continued his story.

Red Cross

corp. chairman announced the addition of two new volunteer drivers. Mrs. Theodore Heyman, 102 Edgewood ave., and Mrs. Jules Terry, 27 Shelley rd., were both tested and have since given active service as qualified drivers. Ten Motor Corp. drivers made 20 trips, covering 372 miles for a total of 4734 volunteer hours during January.

Trips were made to Grange, Offordville and Overlook hospitals and one trip to a doctor's office for therapy. Drivers included Louise Cunningham, Edna Edwards, Hess Kuten, Alice Weinstein, Annala Terry, Gwen Clickinger, Jean Beech, Gloria Sherman, Margaret Mende and Sue Kallen.

Mrs. Oliver O. Deano Jr., chairman of volunteers, announced that over 30 new volunteers had responded to the Chapter's recent appeal for additional Red Cross workers.

Many of the volunteers responded to the call for aid issued through the Springfield Leader, she said, and others were recruited through the efforts of the joint PTA Council of Springfield. Mrs. Deano expressed appreciation to both the Leader and the PTAs and to the new volunteers for their response.

Most of the volunteers expressed a desire to serve as clerical or office assistants. Several signed up as motor corp. drivers and have yet to be tested and qualified. Others volunteered for the bloodmobile, and three for hospital service.

Additional workers are needed for chapter commitments to the East Orange Veterans and Runnells hospitals and for the canteen service.

It was further noted that as yet several of the PTSs had not completed processing of the response to their appeals, and that these volunteers, therefore, had yet to be contacted.

"Under military law," he said, "we set up a government again — first in the British sector and then in Bavaria."

"The work was considered essential for a while. I seemed to be so out of place with my four-months' training, and the 70th's three-years-of-training. The average man was 39 years old — and I was just a youngster."

"We used the SS troops' jet plane plants as displaced camps for the SS troops. We traveled quite a bit — covered most of the countries. The best part of my three years in the Army was a visit to Switzerland. I'd always wanted to go there."

Banner started a war veteran to his old job at the laundry. He had left — a mere boy — and returned — an old man — to last him a lifetime. He turned to the church with a desperate zeal and an insatiable hunger.

"I was the original lay leader at Springfield Methodist. I had since served as president of the Methodist Men for six years. I was also on the board of trustees — vice-president. I'm on almost every committee, have to go to all conference meetings."

"WE'RE THINKING of an expansion program. Looks as if we're going to do big things, but they will take a lot of work. And I don't spend all of my time with church activities. I use the rest of it up with the new Human Rights Commission. I'm an appointed member. We're just getting oriented."

"Human rights," Banner declared, "concerns everybody and everything. It's a very broad area."

"Maybe my activities in the church and with the Human Rights Commission take up most of my free time."

"My family understands, and I don't mind it in the least."

"You see," he smiled, "our main interest is keeping the community in harmony. We feel we have to walk that middle of the line — to see that all rights are guaranteed."

BORN IN SUMMIT, Banner attended public schools there. I went to work in 1929 in Louvis' Candy Co. in Summit. Some time after that, I changed jobs and went to work for the laundry in Summit. I've been there ever since. I was delegated for a time by going in the Army.

"I'd had a heart ailment and was staying in the state during the duration of my term in the Army. I was in about four months, but somehow, I guess the papers got crossed, and the next thing I knew, I was going overseas with the 79th Infantry Division. We landed at Normandy on Omaha Beach.

Our outfit fought right up to the Rhine River. The division won four major battle stars, plus military and distinguished service awards. We started out with about 140 men. Out of the original 140, there were 34 men left.

Then we were given a rocket launching book, and we had 24 hours to learn the entire text. The military government sent most of us to

USED AT OVERLOOK HOSPITAL.

Frozen Scalpel Advances Eye Surgery

An advanced new field of frozen surgery, swift and far safer for the patient, was used for the first time to remove cataracts from three patients at Overlook Hospital last week.

In a brief half-hour a new "scalpel-of-ice" brought bright new vision to the clouded eyes of these cataract sufferers.

The technique involves freezing the lens of the eye with a styllet or probe that has been electrically cooled to 23 degrees below zero. The cataract lens and its surrounding capsule, adhere strongly to the frozen tips of the probe, which then simply lifts it out.

According to Dr. Arnold L. Rose of Summit, ophthalmologist who performed the cryosurgery, as it is technically called, this method has less danger of capsule rupture and reduces complications to other portions of the eye.

"In other methods, the cataract is extracted by means of suction equipment or grasping the lens with an instrument. With cryosurgery, once the electrode adheres to the lens it can't break away as it sometimes does with suction. Particularly with dislocated lens, the older methods are not so effective," Dr. Rose explained.

Pioneering work in cryosurgery was performed by Dr. Irving S. Cooper of New York about three years ago when he began using the cryoprobe to relieve Parkinsonian tremor.

The idea for cryosurgery came to Dr. Cooper from a carbon dioxide bottle-opener given him by his wife, which he experimented with by freezing small spots on the palm of his hand.

Equally interesting, the idea of using cryosurgery on cataracts came to an ophthalmologist who happened to pick up a popular magazine containing a story on Parkinsonism work one evening while waiting for his wife to dress for a dinner party. He was no longer interested in the dinner party by the time she emerged. He contacted Dr. Cooper the next day, learned the technique and began experimenting with the method that is now well established.

Use of the cryoprobe, as the instrument is called, has broadening into many fields: welding detached retinas, biopsies of eye tumors, tonsillectomies, prostatitis, rectal carcinoma, to name a few. Cryosurgery today is considered a major frontier of medicine.

Group Will Protest Soviet Anti-Semitism

A delegation of Springfield high school and college students will board buses for New York City at 9:15 a.m. Monday in the parking lot at Temple Sharey Shalom to join a youth protest demonstration against Soviet anti-Semitism. They will be joined by a delegation led by Rev. Elmer Williams of the First Baptist Church of Vauxhall in Union.

Rabbi Israel S. Dresner, spiritual leader of the congregation, will be chairman of the rally. He is one of three chairmen of the New Jersey Youth Conference on Soviet Jewry, sponsors of the rally.

The demonstration will begin at 11 a.m. with the rally in Sutton Place Synagogue, 221 East 51st St. between 2nd and 3rd avenues. The young people will march through the streets of New York to the United Nations Plaza eight blocks away to conduct an outdoor demonstration, which will consist of picketing, prayers and singing.

The rally will be addressed by New Jersey Sen. Clifford Case and singing star Theodore Bikel, who is national vice-president of the American Jewish Congress.

Also included among the speakers at the rally will be Michael Kraemer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Kraemer of 67 Garden oval, Springfield. He is a senior at Jonathan Dayton Regional High School and president of the New Jersey Federation of Temple Youth, which includes youth groups of 51 reform temples in the state. His twin brother, Lance, is president of the Temple Sharey Shalom youth group and will be in charge of the trip into New York.

The demonstration will end at 1:15 p.m. and buses will return to Springfield at about 2:30 p.m. Rabbi Dresner has urged all young people, Jew and Christian, white and black, to participate in the demonstration.

WATER for BETTER LIVING

Confidence! Every good salesman knows that the mark of a good product or service is the customer's confidence in it. For example, how many times have you turned on your faucet in the dark of night and taken a drink of water? That's confidence. How many times have you stepped into your shower and turned the spigot without thinking that perhaps the water wouldn't flow? You know it would . . . and that's confidence. In fact, how many times do you use water during the day without giving a thought to its purity, clarity, and abundance? That's confidence of the highest order. All good manufacturers and salesmen spend endless hours building confidence in their product. We value highly your confidence in our product.
