LWV Lists Goals For Master Plan To Be Presented

The League of Women Voters of Springfield at its unit meetings last week voted and passed upon a list of suggested objectives for Springfield's Master Plan, Mrs. Sydney Miller and Mrs. Leonard Kriegerman, co-chairmen of the local committee, indicated that these objectives will be used as a yardstick by which to measure the master plan for Springfield.

This plan is expected to be released by the Planning Board in the very near future.

The following is the list of League-approved objectives:

Residential Development: "To preserve the town's present residential character and thereby protect the town's chief asset; its reputation as a highly desirable place in which to live."

On Commerce: "To stimulate the activity and growth of local business but at the same time to contain it substantially within its present boundaries—to provide for adequate vehicular access, adequate parking and adequate loading and unloading facilities and adequate pedestrian facilities; and otherwise to encourage the development within the business district of some of the functional and aesthetic qualities of modern outlying shopping centers."

Industrial Development: "To foster the economic health of existing industries and to attract additional small, clean, quiet industries and research organizations, but to contain such development substantially within the limits of areas presently zoned for such purposes."

Traffic Control: "To control through traffic, to relieve intra-town traffic, to relieve traffic congestion in the business district and certain residential areas and to coordinate the town's street pattern with surrounding highway construction, present and proposed."

Parking: "To provide for the development of off-street parking for shoppers, businessmen and commuters sufficient to meet the needs of the town's ever-increasing automobile population."

Redevelopment: "To predict the need for the redevelopment of individual buildings and groups of buildings as they become obsolete, to pinpoint properties which may require redevelopment."

HIGHWAY AGENCY UNABLE TO SELL 4 LOCAL HOUSES

Even the tempting offer of a one-story house with a two-car garage and a three-tier chicken coop couldn't bring any bids Tuesday as the State Highway Department vainly tried to sell four vacant houses in Springfield.

The houses, which would have to be moved, are at 32, 34 and 78 Main st. and 38 Tompkins lane, the latter being complete with chicken coop. The state will now seek bids to have the buildings demolished.

Path For Rt. 278 Seen As Veering Farther To West

There was a strong indication this week that proposed Rt. 1-278 would swing west of Springfield, Roselle, Roselle Park, Kenilworth and Union and settle in the Plainfield area.

The indication was given by State Highway Commissioner Dwight R.G. Palmer, according to Fred C. Colucci, of Roselle Park, chairman of a protest and information meeting scheduled for last night at the Aldene School in Roselle Park.

Colucci said Palmer had called him after an invitation to appear at the meeting, and had asserted that a continuing study of road conditions and highway plans indicated that Roselle, Roselle Park, Kenilworth and Springfield would be missed by the proposed spur between Rt. 78 and the Goethals Bridge.

The highway "most likely would be west, in the Plainfield area," Colucci quoted the State Highway Commissioner as saying.

Palmer did not mention Union Township in the conversation, but Colucci agreed with an assertion that the highway would be west of Springfield.

Red Cross Drive Launched, Seeks Funds, Members

Volunteers To Raise $6,000 In Township To Support Chapter

The 1965 Springfield Red Cross campaign for members and funds began officially on Monday as area captains and neighborhood solicitors set out to ring every doorbell in town.

Under the leadership of Claire Dannheimer, the neighborhood workers and the business and professional campaigners are aiming at a goal of $6,000.

"Township cooperation and generous financial contributions, are essential if we are to reach the goal and meet the costs of operation of our volunteer work."

Major William P. Koons gave official endorsement to the drive with a proclamation designating March as Red Cross Month in Springfield, and calling for community support.

"Join up—join in" is the Red Cross campaign slogan, Miss Dannheimer declared. She added that the phrase is a particularly apt one for the local drive, because, "when we join up with our financial contribution we not only become members of Red Cross, but join in and become identified with each individual act of service the Red Cross performs here in Springfield and anywhere in the world it is needed."

Area captains, besides those announced last week, include Mrs. Charles Sasse, Area 7; Mrs. Muriel Morchower, Area 6; and Mrs. Robert G. Laurencelle, chapter chairman, Area 8.

Mayor's Proclamation:

In his proclamation, Mayor Koons noted that "for 83 years, the American Red Cross has been officially on the job as part of the worldwide movement of Red Cross, meeting human needs and converting human sympathy, kindness and the desire to help others into practical volunteer neighborhood assistance."

"Its primary responsibilities—services to the Armed Forces and to victims of disasters—have been assigned to the Red Cross by the U. S. government, to be carried out for and in the name of the American people."

"These basic responsibilities in response to community needs are the responsibility of every citizen."

Blood Bank Asks: Bare Your Arms, Share Civic Duty

More blood donors are needed for the March 16 bloodmobile visit of the Springfield blood program if it is to be a success, according to an announcement this week from Mrs. Daniel D. Kalem, chairman. She said that donor appointments can be made by calling the Springfield Red Cross at DR 6-1878, or one of the participating groups. Groups include Red Cross Community Group, the PTAs, Temple Beth Ahm, Temple Shalom, Springfield Fire Department, the Presbyterian Church, St. James Church and Saks 5th Avenue.

The bloodmobile visit is scheduled from 1-6:30 p.m. on Tuesday, March 16, at the Holy Cross Lutheran Church on Mountain ave.

The donor requirements, according to Mrs. Kalem, are:

1. Anyone in good health, between the ages of 18-50, may give blood.
2. Donors between the ages of 18-21 need the written consent of their parents or guardian, unless they are married or in the armed services.
3. Donors must weigh 110 pounds or over.
4. Persons with a history of infectious hepatitis may give blood if two years have elapsed since recovery.
5. Persons with a history of malaria may give blood if six months have elapsed since an attack of anti-malaria therapy.
6. Blood from categories 4 and 5 is not used as whole blood but processed for life saving derivatives. Full blood credits are received, however.
7. No one should give blood more than five times a year, and eight weeks must elapse between donations.
8. If anyone has donated to the Springfield blood program or some other agency of the New York Regional Red Cross blood program before, he is advised to bring his donor certificate.
9. If anyone has received any medication by injection or an oral vaccine, he must wait 24 hours before donating.
10. Any person who has a late afternoon appointment should try to take a little "coffee break" in mid-afternoon, it is advised.
11. Said Mrs. Kalem: "It is hoped that the March 16 bloodmobile visit to Springfield will supply sufficient credits to meet the needs of the township for the year."
12. There will be a second visit, however, on Saturday, April 3, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at St. James Church for those who, because of a cold or some other reason, cannot make the March donation date.
13. Township cooperation and a good turnout of donors will enable participating groups and the Community Red Cross group to have enough blood credits to protect Springfield when emergencies arise and lifesaving blood is required.
14. "You never know when a..."

1,000 RESIDENTS SIGN STATEMENT ON FAIR HOUSING

The Springfield Fair Housing Committee's "good neighbor" pledge drive culminates today with the appearance of a full-page advertisement in the Leader. "We set out with a goal of 500 signatures, said a committee spokesman, "and we received over 1,000. Equally significant, the percentage results in Springfield were considerably better than in any of our neighboring communities, despite the fact that bad weather and a lack of time made it possible for us to cover only a small portion of the town."

He added, "The overwhelming majority of Springfield residents apparently are willing to judge their neighbors not on the basis of race, religion or national origin but rather as it should be on the basis of merit." The advertisement appears on Page 14.

During the past 23 years the show has grown to the point that two complete floors are now required to house the displays which will be brought to Springfield by antique dealers throughout the Eastern States. There will be old glass, antique clocks and traditional pieces, as well as collector's items.

Other features returning from past years will include the exhibition of old and recent American coins, arranged to include...

Mexican Student Visits Township, Attends Regional

Jorge Meixnerio, a 20-year-old student from the Universidad Benito Juarez de Oaxaca, Mexico, is attending Jonathan Dayton Regional High School in Springfield from Feb. 21 to next Thursday under the auspices of the New York Herald Tribune World Youth Forum.

Jeff Katz, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Katz, a senior student at Dayton, has been the host student for the Forum delegate in Springfield. The Herald Tribune World Youth Forum since its inception in 1947 has provided a rare international experience for 575 student delegates of secondary school age from 81 countries, and for thousands of people whose lives they have touched.

Students from countries throughout the world visit the U. S., while American students travel abroad for Forum programs which include home stays, school visits, seminars, and public discussions. Participants represent the "best" within each country—has to offer, and they take with them a personal understanding of the history, customs, social, economic and political concerns of their countries. Forum delegates are in turn exposed to the life and thought of the countries they visit.

Robert F. LaVanture, principal of Dayton Regional, said that "Dayton is privileged to be selected as one of the host schools for a Forum delegate this year. We feel that we have a very fine school which is giving Jorge a good example of a comprehensive American high school in action."

"Last year we had Michael Wamulwah of Kenya, Africa, as the delegate, and I think everyone profited by the experience."

Mrs. Jean Cassamano of the Dayton social studies department is in charge of arrangements for the stay of the Forum delegate.

REV. BRUCE EVANS

On one of the walls in the office of Rev. Bruce Evans, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church in Springfield, hangs a large, glass-framed scroll — an award bestowed upon the clergyman in 1962.

It reads: "Springfield Lodge No. 2093, B'nai B'rith, June 10, 1963. Father of the Year, 1962. To Rev. Bruce Evans — for his devotion to family and community — his religious belief and acceptance of all obligations for the benefit of his fellow man. Raymond Kravetz, president. Leonard Golden, committee chairman."

Mr. Evans, a large, modest man, who has been extremely and quietly active in the Springfield community for the past 18 years — he shuns publicity — disclosed that he considers the B'nai B'rith citation one of his valuable possessions, one that brings him pride and joy.

"It's a tribute, really, to the congregation here," he said, "sharing two mugs of coffee with a visitor in his office at the Parish House on Main st. 'A tribute really,'" he repeated, "in the practical application of the sense of brotherhood."

Mr. Evans also was referring, in part, to his association with both synagogues in town — Temple Beth Ahm and Temple Sharey Shalom, and with the Greek Orthodox Church.

"WHENEVER OUR congregation has seen a need, it has met it — and there was not a lot of fanfare and fuss and outside publicity."

"So — some time ago, when a group from Temple Beth Ahm requested the use of our building here at the parish, as a temporary house to worship God — until their building was completed, we were honored to have them. I sat in on their services. I still do once in a while. I even preached to the Jewish congregation."

"The Methodist Church held services here for a while. Then Temple Sharey Shalom started here and remained until their house of worship was completed."

"The Greek Orthodox Church held a couple of meetings here. The congregation will be building its own church in Westfield soon."

"The Lions' Club held its annual meeting here to aid the blind."

"AS YOU CAN SEE," the minister said, with reverence and modesty, "we have tried to serve the community — not to be a church for ourselves. It is an indication of the special feeling of our congregation."

Born in Ebensburg, Pa. ("Western Pennsylvania, east of Pittsburgh"), a Welsh community "in the soft coal region," Mr. Evans explained that he was educated there.

"I went to Washington and Jefferson College in Washington, Pa., and worked during the summer in the coal mines. I worked in the holler house," he recalled, "and one of my jobs was to check the methane gas constantly. This is a coal gas which would accumulate in the mines. The slightest spark could cause an explosion."

"Years ago, they used to make the canary test. What they'd do," he mused, "would be to take a canary into the mine, and if the canary died, that would mean that there was too much gas in the mines. 'Whenever I go back for a visit,'" Mr. Evans said, "I see all the modern changes that have been made since I was a boy. Everything is mechanized today."

HIS GRANDEATER was a coal miner, Mr. Evans explained, "but my father was a lawyer, and a most active church member. I was going to be a lawyer, too. I studied law. You know," he smiled, "one of the first things a lawyer does is to search titles."

"But then I realized that it was more important to try to help people before they got into trouble instead of after they do. The only answer was to become a minister. 'A minister is a minister,'" Mr. Evans theorized, "because he wouldn't be happy doing anything else. Then there's the technicality — a call of God. In Biblical times, you fought it — until you realized that you wouldn't really be happy doing anything else."

Mr. Evans then went to Princeton Theological Seminary. "I was a student minister there. I helped to organize the Townley Presbyterian Church in Union. 'Now that Townley's present minister has left,'" he explained, "I have been asked to serve the congregation as moderator."

Mr. Evans received further education at the University of Illinois. "I worked with the Westminster Foundation for College Studies."

DURING WORLD WAR II, he served three years in the U. S. Navy (the Seabees) as a chaplain and lieutenant . . . two years of which were spent in the South Pacific. I cannot even look at pictures of the South Pacific today without remembering the terrible war there."

Report From Trenton

By State Senator Nelson F. Stimler (R-14)

Many readers have written to me this past week, anxious to learn more about our state's budget. In my last "Report" I examined current budget procedures and discussed the possibility of calling for new measures which would give the public more of a voice in shaping New Jersey's budget.

As our budgets have increased over the years, it is interesting to note that a large percentage of these increases have gone toward state aid to counties, municipalities and school districts. "State Aid" now represents about 43 per cent of budget allocations. Other areas of spending were (1964-65) — 11 per cent for Capital Construction and 48 per cent for "General State Operations."

Where does the money come from to support these expenditures?

There are approximately 30 different kinds of taxes levied in New Jersey, not counting Federal taxation. Some of these are levied by the Legislature and the others by county or municipal governments and school districts.

THE MAIN SOURCES OF STATE INCOME ARE: MOTOR VEHICLE FEES; MOTOR VEHICLE LICENSES; CIGARETTE TAX; ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGES TAX; and PARIMUTUEL BETTING TAX.

BUSINESS TAXES: Ordinary corporations pay tax on net worth and taxes on net income. Insurance companies pay a tax on premiums for policies sold in the state. Companies doing banking or financial business are taxed on their net worth, but these proceeds are paid to counties and municipalities in which the companies are located rather than to the state treasury.

INHERITANCE TAX: This tax begins at 1 per cent on small estates and can go as high as 18 per cent. It varies considerably in its provisions from year to year.

RAILROAD TAXES: Railroad property is taxed according to "Class" Railroad Income is also taxable, but in recent years this has provided little if any revenue.

MISCELLANEOUS TAXES: Several other minor taxes include fees and taxes on highway billboards, a tax on junkyards, and special taxes collected by various agencies such as burning and fishing licenses which help to pay the cost of operating these departments.

There are other sources of state revenue, although those mentioned above represent the largest money getters. New Jersey receives dividends on funds which it has invested in many ways. Fees paid by patients in state institutions and students in state colleges are also sources of revenue. Another major source is the Federal Government which contributes to highways, education, health and assistance programs.

As you can see, the state collects money in many ways, but there are equally as many ways in which it can spend it. As New Jersey grows physically (and financially), state government will be called upon to appropriate more and more budget dollars. As more moneys are raised, each tax-paying citizen will make more of a contribution toward running his state.

I repeat again, it is my opinion that when you contribute to anything you should demand to know where your contribution is headed. Current budget procedure does not guarantee this "Right to Know." Tax dollars are allocated and passed on in secret session. I feel this should not be the case.

Letters To The Editor

Letters to the Editor must be submitted no later than Monday of the week they are to appear. They should not exceed 200 words in length. All letters must be signed. Writers name will NOT be withheld if the letter is of political nature. Name will be withheld upon request from non-political letters. The Leader reserves the right to edit or reject any letter.

LAUDS RED CROSS With the Red Cross starting its campaign in March for life-giving blood and financial assistance, I would like to relate to the people of Springfield by experience with this wonderful organization here in Springfield. I hope that my story will stimulate the willingness to give, so that this chapter can remain here in Springfield. I therefore, with your permission, like to write this letter to the people of Springfield.

I happened in August 1964, while working at my job when suddenly I began to bleed internally. I was rushed to the hospital and my only salvation was life-giving plasma. My wife was told that transfusions would be administered until the bleeding stopped for me.

Luckily for me, through the willingness of others to give an hour of their time and a pint of blood, the hospital had enough plasma in their blood bank to help me immediately. My wife was then told to contact relatives; friends and anyone else who could help with replacing this plasma.

At this time the Red Cross in Springfield was contacted. Prior to this I was never affiliated with the Red Cross and did not even know anyone in the Red Cross. It took 20 pints of plasma to stop the hemorrhage, and I am proud and pleased to say that the Red Cross replaced 17 of the 20 pints used for me.

I am only one of many people the Red Cross here in Springfield helps during the year. I say from personal experience, please, when the bloodmobile arrives here in town, you who are strong and healthy enough to give roll up your sleeves and give so this chapter can go on helping the people of Springfield as they so generously helped me.

THOMAS A. GURRERA 108 Kipling Ave.

ON SCHOOLS, PRAYERS

I am compelled to write in reply to two letters published in the Feb. 25 issue of the Leader, on the assumption that both were prompted by my letter of two weeks ago. I use the word "assumption" since both letters, apparently missed the point of my letter by about as much as the writers, and seemingly hundreds of others, have missed, misused or preferred not to understand the content of the U. S. Supreme Court decision on prayer and Bible reading in the public schools.

Mr. Wright, for instance, has gone to some length to explain as I read it the difference between a private and a public flagpole, and what may rightfully be thereon. Of course, our previous Constitution allows for display on a private flagpole whatever flag, pennant or banner we may choose.

My point in commenting on the American Legion display. Mr. Wright, was to suggest that (1) deeds are preferable to penance if this is truly "One Nation Under God," and (2) these penance represent not a recognition of God's omnipotence, but rather a dissent to the Supreme Court's verdict in a nebulous espousal of Him. There are moments of doubt that we are a people under God, when one considers some of the applications of His teachings.

Mr. Elvin objects to the denial to school children of joint recitation of prayer to Almighty God. Dr. George Buttrick, a Presbyterian minister and leading authority on the subject of prayer, says: "Prayer is a personal (repeat, personal) conversation between a Thou, with a capital 'T,' and a thou, with a small 't'."

I have heard it said that true prayer is about 90 percent listening and only 10 percent speaking.

Now, where Mr. Elvin, or anyone else for that matter, gets the notion that the Supreme Court has banned God from our schools is beyond my mortal comprehension. In the first place, it is not God that is at issue, but God who professes belief in a God who created the universe and all that is therein, to suggest that nine men in Washington could wipe Him away from our educational system?

Mr. Elvin also quotes the First Amendment to the Constitution that "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof." But he does not mention that in this same venerable document, the Supreme Court is charged with interpreting its provisions. In no respect is any child, in any public school anywhere in these 50 states, denied the opportunity to pray by the Supreme Court's decision. How can anyone be prevented from praying if he feels the need? It is simply, utterly, humbly impossible.

Only God can forgive a prayer, and sometimes I am amazed that He hasn't, in view of some of the ugly words and actions of some of the Supreme Court's justices. The Supreme Court has simply decreed that a child's religious faith shall be a personal experience, and that no public authority shall require him to participate in any religious exercise. I would have it no other way.

Mr. Elvin's implications that the Supreme Court is pro-communist by that it is unpatriotic and to protest an unpopular decision, are utterly absurd. The labels "communist" or "unpatriotic," applied to any person or group without anything more than personal disagreement as a basis, recall the ugliness of the bygone, unlamented era of McCarthyism.

In closing, permit me a few lines from Justice William O. Douglas: "There is no room in this great and good American Constitution for all the diversities the Creator has produced in man. Our Constitution and Bill of Rights were, indeed, written to accommodate each and every individual, regardless of color, 'national origin' or creed."

DONALD W. ROSSELET 18 Henshaw Ave.

Practice Makes More Nearly Perfect

This is intended to be a Brotherhood Year editorial. Brotherhood was observed last week with special prayers, sermons and speeches in churches and synagogues, at meetings and banquets throughout the country. We now start 31 weeks when people will have an opportunity to fulfill their obligation as their brothers' keepers.

Over the past month, approximately 1,000 Springfield residents had the courage to do something. They signed their names to a pledge against racial prejudice in housing patterns, a pledge which appears with the names elsewhere in this issue.

The 1,000 names certainly represent a step forward in the community's progress toward emotional maturity. Each of us can take other steps in the 51 weeks to come. We can eliminate racial and other ethnic epithets from our conversation. We can drop the crutches of stereotyped judgments and develop a willingness to evaluate each man, each present or prospective neighbor, on his own merits. We can teach our children that God made all mankind in His own image.

Baseball teams are starting several weeks of spring practice before the opening of the official season. If we can devote 51 weeks of practice to what we preached last week, who knows, some day we might not even need a Brotherhood Week at all.

Propose Plan For Superior Students To Eliminate Guesswork In Skipping

Should a superior student "skip" a school grade? Parents, student and school often ponder this, weighing benefits against possible disadvantages. Now two Ridgewood school officials propose a 10-point plan for accelerating a student.

The plan is reported in the current issue of the NJEA Review, the journal for teachers published monthly by the New Jersey Education Association. Authors are Daniel Daly, principal of Ridgewood's Willard Elementary School, and Stanley Winters, Ridgewood school psychologist and secretary of the N. J. Association of School Psychologists.

Schools should skip a child on a trial basis, so he can return to his normal class without "loss of face" if he doesn't fill in.

During the last four years, the authors report, all of the children accelerated on the basis of their 10-point plan have succeeded academically and seem to be doing well in every other area.

The 10 standards are: 1. Academic Maturity. A student should be outstanding — able to do work several years above the level of the next higher grade — in all subject areas.

2. Intellectual Maturity. He should have "superior reasoning powers." On intellectual tests, his score should fall within the upper one per cent of the total population — 135 or above.

3. Physical Maturity. He should fit within the physical range of students in the higher grades. He need not be physically large; he may be average in size. But care should be taken not to accelerate an extremely small child. He should have the coordination and other physical skills to play adequately and "hold his own" with students in the higher grade.

4. Social Maturity. He should be friendly with children in higher grades and have similar interests.

5. Emotional Maturity. He should be persistent and want to learn. He should be able to withstand the frustration confronting most youngsters in difficult tasks.

6. Chronological Age. He should not be "particularly young" but in the middle or older end of the group.

7. Teacher Placement. The new teacher should be intellectually stimulating and sympathetic to gifted children. He should be placed with a fast-moving group, not a slow one, and the class should be small in size. The authors say, "It makes little sense to move a child from a fourth grade of 33 students to a fifth grade of 23. In the smaller class, it is possible that his present teacher will be able to meet more of his needs than the teacher with the larger class."

8. Parental Attitude. Parents should understand the reason for acceleration, and should be willing to help with the child's work.

9. Other children. Care should be taken that the skip does not affect other children in the family. "Imagine the difficulty," the authors caution, "if a girl is accelerated and placed in the same grade as her older brother."

10. Attendance. He should be healthy and have missed very little school.

"This procedure cuts down the possibility of making a wrong move and gives the extremely competent youngster a chance to use his capabilities to the fullest," say the authors.

Federal Aid To Schools — Question Is: How Much?

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Without predicting what this Congress will do, Changing Times forecasts that there will be federal aid to education. The big question before the 89th Congress seems to be one of how much there will be.

Repeating on "The Fight Over Federal Aid to Schools" in its February issue, the Kiplinger magazine suggests, "the arguments won't be as fiery as in the past." Many forms of federal aid are already on the books and more will probably come in the next few Congresses.

The question now being dealt with is whether more money would help and, if so, where the money comes from and who hands it out and to whom.

Arguments about federal control have just about had their day and aren't expected to influence debate much from now on. According to the Changing Times report, "there is already too much legislation on the books, too much local eagerness to get whatever federal aid is available and too much experience with it for the bugaboo of control to have much bite."

The segregation issue, too, has had its day. With the Civil Rights Act of 1964, segregation no longer has to be debated specifically in connection with federal aid to education, the magazine says.

Whether federal money could or should be used to help church-related schools continues to be one of the tough problems to solve. With arguments on either side of this constitutional issue, positions have become firm. Powerful advocates of general aid have stood ready to block any bill that included help to church schools. Catholic groups have been just as determined to stop any bill that left them out.

That's where the church issue — and for that matter the entire general aid to education issue — stood as the 89th Congress convened," says the magazine.

NSC Student Army Well Into Second Year Of Their Own War On Poverty

Students at Newark State College, Union, including 41 from this area, are well into the second year of their own war on poverty.

The student army, now well over 200 strong, according to a college spokesman, fights poverty of educational opportunity as tutors of disadvantaged children in surrounding school systems. The program amounts to close to 10 percent of the college's 2,374 student enrollment.

Students from the area who are acting as tutors are: Union: Mrs. Constance D'Alencandro, 841 Sheridan; Mrs. Ann Binaldi, 307 Roseland pl.; Mrs. Marilyn Joris, 450 Carpenter st., evening college tutors; and Alice Askew, 1228 Golf ter.; Donna Forte, 1428 Edmund ter.; Gerri Jaohim, 2351 Dunlake rd.; Lois Klehr, 380 Greenwood rd.; Alfred Landis, 1524 Grogan ave.; Mona Leibovitz, 989 Moessner ave.; Paula Nagel, 275 Salem rd.; Gene O'Connor, 1256 Glenn ave.; Melinda Petchosky, 1515 Brookside dr.; Linda Reiner, 432 Halstead rd.; Ellen Robinson, 317 Durham court; Linda Steinman, 1086 Battle Hill ter.; Nancy Stofik, 2775 Carol rd.; Ruth Ann Sturjevan, 34 Filbert lane, and Gail Von Der Heide, 905 Lakeside pl.

SPRINGFIELD: Mrs. Barbara Mercar, 53 Troy dr., evening college tutor; Janice Adler, 11 Berkeley rd.; Denise Behan, 106 Hawthorne ave.; Anita Diamond, 397 Meisel ave.; and Virginia Dooge, 483 Mountain ave.

Second ave., Roselle; Joseph Bivona, 517 W. 6th ave., Roselle; Robert Cooke, 81 Warren ave., Roselle Park; Kathy Gargano, 521 Amsterdam ave., Roselle Park; and Vivian Prosk of 534 W. MOUNTAINSIDE: Walter Brahm, 1285 Rt. 22.

Most of the volunteer army fight under the banner of "SCATE," which stands for "Student Committee for Advancement Through Education."

SCATE, organized and administered entirely by Newark State students, coordinates tutorial programs in both Elizabeth and Newark, the spokesman said.

In addition, the spokesman added, a special task force composed mostly of evening undergraduate students helps teachers with emotionally-disturbed, trainable, and home-making classes at Lincoln School in East Orange.

Children are selected for tutoring by child study experts in the school systems.

More happens between tutors and children than the communication of objective subject matter. Warm friendships are established. Dramatic increases in motivation, achievement and aspiration levels have been attributed to this friendship alone, a college official said.

SCATE, which has little cash available to devote to the tutoring program, has received cash contributions from several organizations and 860 books valued at $2,000 have been received from publishing firms that were contacted.

The faculty has been enthusiastic in its support of the program, the college said.

Professor Leo Elias of the Field Services Division coordinates the efforts of the evening graduate students and others, like Dr. Selma Wassermann and Professor Zella Fry, have donated books. On their own time, faculty members have given seminars designed to improve the tutoring efforts of the students.

"There's something in people that makes them want to help others, and if you give them a chance, they will," said Joseph Chrobok of Newark, SCATE co-chairman in summing up the goals of the program.

The World Of Outer Space

From the Sperry Memorial Observatory
Union Junior College, Cranford
BY DR. ARNOLD C. ASHCRAFT JR.
Amateur Astronomer, Inc.

Amateur Astronomers, Inc. When the most casual of sky watchers will be awed by the tall majestic and mighty hunter Orion. He slowly marches across our sky on winter nights. Those who know a little about this mighty hunter, with his bow and arrows at his side, will see his dog Sirius following faithfully behind him — the brightest star in our heavens. Venus and Jupiter are brighter, but of course they are planets like Earth rather than stars like our Sun and Sirius.

But try as they will, and even if they use binoculars or a small telescope, the sky watchers will be unable to see that the 452 Sirius has a little puppy with him — a constant companion. But what a puppy! We don't see him because Sirius is so blindingly bright. Sirius is 30 times as bright as the sun and its little companion is only 17500 as bright as the sun. It is like trying to see the face of the driver in an oncoming car with the high beam headlights shining in your eyes. But the little fellow is sturdy there.

This little star is known to scientists as Sirius B. You might think of the B as meaning baby, because as stars go, it is a baby. It is a little more than twice the diameter of earth, but perhaps 1/80 the diameter of our sun which itself is a little an ordinary size star. For example, the red giant star Antares is 460 times the size of our sun. But Sirius B, although very small, is far from ordinary. You may soon forget the above mentioned numbers about its size and brightness, but one or two of the unusual things about it you may never forget.

Sirius B is one of the less than 100 known so-called White Dwarfs which have been found among the millions of stars in the heavens. It is called white because its surface temperature is around 9,000-10,000 degrees centigrade, yet its internal temperature must reach perhaps 100 millions of degrees of temperature. It is believed to have once been a giant star, which over eons of years, successively burned up its metal content — first deuterium, then lithium, then beryllium, then boron and finally hydrogen — in a succession of long duration nuclear reactions, each one in turn raising the internal temperature to fantastically higher and higher levels.

The pressures developing from this evolution, over thousands of years, apparently reached the inconceivable level of around 70 thousands of tons to the square inch. At this level of pressure and temperature, the atomic structure of normal solid matter collapses into what is called a degenerate state. Some scientists believe that now, which are brilliant new stars which occasionally are seen among the stars, are white dwarfs which blow up in the process of becoming a white dwarf.

What happened to Sirius B at this point in its evolution as a star is utterly beyond comprehension. It became tremendously compact. Although slightly over twice the diameter of earth, and 10 times its volume, it weighs the fantastic amount of 200,000 times as much as the earth. In more comprehensible language, this means that a cubic foot of the "earth" on Sirius B would weigh 4700 tons. As one scientist expressed it, a thumbful would weigh over a ton! This is 18,000 times as heavy as lead!

Research By Dr. Lewis Upsets Theories

Research by Dr. Donald J. Lewis is a cause for controversy among some of his fellow scientists.

It all has to do with learning and a subsequent forgetting process by electroconvulsive shock. Dr. Lewis, Rutgers professor of psychology and chairman of the State University's Department of Psychology, is conducting a project in this field which seems to upset a theory accepted by some of his colleagues.

He is working with albino rats and an electroconvulsive shock technique similar to that used in the treatment of humans suffering from mental illness. A small dose of electricity is passed between two electrodes at either side of the subject's, or patient's, head. The subject responds with symptoms resembling an epileptic seizure.

It has been established that electroconvulsive shock given immediately after an animal has learned an experience causes retrograde amnesia, what has been just learned is forgotten.

The usual interpretation of such amnesia is that the neural trace of the learning has been destroyed; that a "storm" has been produced in the brain before one lesson has been consolidated.

Investigations attacks this interpretation.

His theory is that the consolidation is a learning experience and that what is learned through the shock, perhaps fear; replaces or blocks what has been previously learned.

PSYCHOLOGICAL STUDY — Dr. Donald J. Lewis, Rutgers professor of psychology, attaches electrodes to the ears of an albino rat before administering electroconvulsive shock. Dr. Lewis, conducting a study of retrograde amnesia caused by shock treatment, has his research project programmed in the complex equipment in the background.

Dr. Lewis explains with a simple illustration: "If you know one phone number, you are not likely to forget it. But, by learning two, three or more, the memory of one may be blocked by another."

He feels that his work, thus far, supports the theory. He has been engaged in this research for five years, the past two under a grant from the National Institute of Mental Health.

In his experiments, Dr. Lewis teaches rats identical lessons and then gives electroconvulsive shock under various controlled situations and notes the effect on learned behavior in relationship to the controlled factors, such as time and place. He has discovered, for example, that if the electroconvulsive shock is administered on the same site as the learning has occurred, there is a greater degree of retrograde amnesia than if the shock is given at a different site.

In another test, shock was given three days before the learning experience on the site where the learning was to take place. The animals who had received the shock had much more difficulty in learning than did animals without the shock experience, indicating that the memory of the shock and not an interruption of the brain's learning process was responsible for the animal's reduced learning ability.

Dr. Lewis is now investigating another possibility in this project — attempting to condition an animal for convulsion without the electric shock.

This approach brings to mind Pavlov's dogs who were conditioned to salivate at the sound of a bell. They were given food, which caused them to salivate, and a bell was sounded at the same time. Later, after a series of food-bell repetitions, the dogs would respond by salivating at the sound of the bell alone.

Dr. Lewis tells of similar conditioning that has been found in certain persons with epilepsy. Some epileptics can feel a seizure coming and have found methods of preventing it. A case given by Dr. Lewis is that of a person who found that by sniffing a bottle of jasmine he could prevent a seizure. Later, it was discovered that a similar bottle, but empty without the smell of jasmine, could be used by him with the same preventive effect. This has led Dr. Lewis to think that if a convulsive experience can be prevented through conditioning, perhaps one can be induced through the same method. If this is so, he may some day be able to produce an electroconvulsive response in his experimental animals with only the sound of a bell or the flash of a light.

County CD & DC Plans To Teach Radio Monitors

The Union County Civil Defense and Disaster Control will depend on the number of applicants from each municipality. The program will be held with the cooperation of the State Division of Civil Defense, Rutgers University Extension Division, and Eastern Training Center, Office of Civil Defense, Department of the Army.

As licensed shelters and monitor stations are established hundreds of monitors will be required. In addition to the courses for police and fire personnel, who are considered in a high priority category, courses will be established for other residents who wish to participate in the Civil Defense organization.

The courses will be held three times a week and include a total of 16 hours. Evening sessions will be organized if necessary. All instruments and equipment will be supplied by the Union County Civil Defense and Disaster Control. Certificates will be issued by the Division of Civil Defense, Department of Defense, to persons who complete the course. Applicants should register with the Union County Civil Defense and Disaster Control, Court House, Elizabeth.

ONLY A FEW RULES

Gay Ideas For Bridal Showers

By PAT SMYTH

Before the intended bride even starts to write her wedding invitations usually one of her bridesmaids or a close friend has been busy months before planning a shower.

Showers, which always call for presents from those invited, can be elaborate as the wedding itself or as simple as the hostess can afford. Nevertheless, a few rules of etiquette apply.

One, it is not the place of the bride's relatives to give a shower. That is the happy province of friends, the bridal party or relative of the prospective bridegroom.

Secondly, men should not be invited just as girls are not invited to a bachelor party. This is a time for girl talk and their presence may dampen the fun. However, the men may be invited back after the gift giving and games for refreshments.

The first thing the hostess should do is make a list of guests including only those women who also would be among the wedding guests. This may be done by obtaining the wedding list from the bride's mother. However, if the bride is planning a small wedding, inviting just the members of her and her fiancé's family, the hostess may include additional friends. If the bride has eloped, a friend, instead of giving a shower, could hold a housewarming party on the bride's return.

Next the invitations are written about three weeks in advance of the party. Checking first to make sure the date is convenient with the bride. Of course it is to be (hopefully) a surprise, check with her mother.

The invitations should also include the type of shower such as miscellaneous, linen, pantry, or personal. This should guarantee gifts that the bride can use and also help the guests in their selection.

For an added twist the hostess could select different hours of the day for each guest to buy for. For example gifts for 8 a.m. might include a brunch coat, breakfast set, coffee pot, toaster, or a box of food containing cereals, coffee, tea, and maybe a butter-dish. A guest appointed to buy for 4 p.m. could select a frilly apron, or tea set. In accordance with the "time shower" alarm clocks set to go off at different intervals during the party might be packed with the gifts. The bride would then have to hunt for the package with the ringing alarm.

For a pantry shower, the hostess may place the gifts in a decorated grocery cart, borrowed from a store, and wheel the cart out to the bride. For a miscellaneous shower a decorated umbrella could be placed in a central location with streamers attached leading to gifts in various rooms for which they are to be used. The bride would then have to follow each streamer to the gifts.

Decorations might include a wishing well holding the gifts, wedding bells or an umbrella under which the gifts are placed. Balloons, with numbers matching the various packages, may also be mixed among them requiring the bride to sit on them before opening the presents. A seat of honor for the bride, is usually a decorated chair. Another novel idea is composing a book of humorous magazine pictures and sayings relating to the bride's life up to the time of her marriage.

Games are also good for the occasion. A drawing for the prize may hold different conditions which are tested by the guests and identified. Or the girls can be blindfolded and asked to identify by touch household items. The one with the highest score gets the prize. Composing a love story may also be fun. The group is divided into teams of four. The first writes a few sentences on a courtship using real or fictitious names. She then folds her paper over and the others continue the story without knowing what has gone before. The four stories are then read aloud by the bride.

For a bride who will move away after her marriage a money shower might be appropriate. Bills are twisted into flowers with the giver's name inside and placed on an umbrella or made into a flower arrangement. Tea, sandwiches, cake, mints, coffee, tea, or punch are just a few things that may be served. Cellophane made into umbrellas with pipe cleaners for handles and filled with rice, make interesting favors. The color scheme could be all white or the shades selected by the bride for her wedding.

Know Your Government

From N. J. Taxpayers Association

Training Needed For $37 Billion Business — The growing importance — and complexity — of the local assessor's performance in property taxation is leading to greater emphasis on the need for well-trained personnel to administer the assessment of property with a true value, statewide, of more than $37 billion.

In a report recommending legislative attention to the problem in 1965, a special committee appointed by the State Tax Director to study the training of tax assessors in New Jersey commented: "Great strides have been made during the past decade in some phases of property tax administration. But, if the property tax is to remain as the primary source of state and local government revenues for New Jersey, it is of crucial importance that tax assessments be made by well-qualified persons. Probably no other single factor is so important in insuring that the burden of the tax is distributed equitably among the taxpayers of the State."

More than 900 assessors are employed by New Jersey's 587 municipalities. Some are appointed; some are elected. Some serve as one-man administrators; others on boards of assessment. Some are well-qualified assessors, largely on special background in the assessing field.

Lack of required training of assessors and certification of their professional abilities prior to appointment has long been disturbing to tax authorities, points out the New Jersey Taxpayers Association.

The Tax Director's special committee said that its year-long study confirmed the belief that present training programs for assessors, largely on a voluntary basis, "are not completely adequate to provide well-qualified assessors for all of New Jersey's taxing districts." As a starting point the Committee recommended expansion and state financing of training courses for assessors conducted since 1951 at Rutgers University. Requirements of specific qualifications and official state examination and certification of newly-named assessors, more adequate remuneration with pay scales left to local discretion, and a statutory provision for assessor or assessor-assessors were among other recommendations.

Proposing appointment, instead of election, of municipal tax assessors, the Committee said: "There is no reason to believe that the characteristics which contribute to a successful political campaign are the same qualifications needed to carry out the highly technical job of determining property value and administering an assessor's office."

The Committee suggested further study of proposals, such as creation of joint assessment districts and the elimination of residence requirements for assessors.

A Statement of the Clergy of Springfield
As preachers and teachers of the moral and religious principles embodied within the Judeo-Christian tradition, we are committed to the furtherance of brotherhood in our community. We feel strongly that our actions should be consonant with our beliefs and with our prayers. We would therefore call upon our respective constituencies and all other citizens of Springfield to eliminate all areas of bias and prejudice in our community wherever they exist—housing, employment or public accommodations. Prejudice toward any person based on race, religion or national origin is completely contrary to the religious principles we embrace. We offer our prayers, our hopes and our support for the realization of right relationships within our beloved community. "Behold how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity"—Psalm 133:1.

FAMILY LIFE TODAY

By PHYLLIS GREER
of Rutgers, The State University
Specialist in Human Relations

FAMILY CONFERENCES
"Let's get together for a conference," says a mother who has read that family conferences solve problems. What happens? Father is tired after working all day and wants to read the paper. One child refuses to stop building a garage. He has to be hauled into the room by force. Another child appears reluctantly clasping a comic book. The third protests violently because of homework.
Now that they are all gathered together, mother doesn't know where to start. The atmosphere is hostile, each person wants to be somewhere else.

including mother who wishes she hadn't suggested a conference in the first place.
The choice of a suitable time to meet, an interesting topic to discuss, and respect for each person's opinion make for successful meetings.
Another family manager better. They gather to plan their vacation. The youngsters enter heartily into the discussion and express their views freely. Parents and children listen to each other and respect each other's viewpoint even when in disagreement. The cost of various vacation plans are discussed and the advantages and disadvantages pointed out—sometimes by the parents, sometimes by the youngsters. Finally they reach a decision. Even though the decision is not exactly what some of the group wanted, they are all much better satisfied, because it is a group decision rather than an arbitrary one.

Ask Amy

BY AMY ADAMS

Dear Amy:
I can't find a drug store that has a small amount of... I'm rather easy to get along with, but there is one customer who is taking my patience to the limit. There is this one woman, with two children who comes in every day, just to get some... What these two children do to my place is a crime and a shame. Menus are either spattered with food or torn. The mirrors behind the booths are smeared from their sticky hands. They don't stop banging the door and let's not mention the floor.
Amy, how can I handle her without offending her? She still is a customer. Incidentally, her husband is a physician and a very nice guy. Should I tell him?

Dear Amy:
I wouldn't suggest you tell her husband. He probably can't stand it from their children. The only prescription for your dilemma is to tell HER in the nicest way you know how... but tell her. If she is offended (and she shouldn't be), so you lose her. You have little to lose. There are worse pills to swallow. She and her children need a doctor, but not the one they have.

Dear Amy:
A long time ago you printed a letter from a man named "Al" who owned a neighborhood grocery store. I wanted to put it out with your reply in rhyme to hang in my store for everyone to see, but the paper was thrown out before I got to it. Now things are so bad with my business, I want that letter very much. Would you please print it again for me?
Thank you kindly, Joe G.

Dear Amy:
I took quite a bit of looking but here it is.
"I own a small grocery in a new neighborhood. I try to carry a full line of meats, fish and poultry to accommodate my customers but I have a gripe. These people who shop in the big super-markets pay cash but they come in my store and expect me to give them credit. They know they can't get away with it in the big markets but they try to pull it on the little grocer who is struggling to make a living. I need the business but I also need the cash. If you agree with me, Amy, print this letter. All the small businessmen will thank you."
Al's Grocery

Dear Al:
"I do agree. And suggest the following slogan, prominently displayed in your store:
"If you like to find this store

Tips for Today's Homemaker

From MARY ARMSTRONG, County Home Economist

FEATURE EGGS IN COMING WEEKS
"A Bargain in Eggs," "Say Eggs Every Time," "Eggs Every Day," "Record Egg Supply." These were the titles of four releases coming over my desk this week. All suggest that eggs should be included in family menus at this time. Eggs are generally a nutritious and economical food. This is especially true now.

Eggs & Protein
Daily protein requirements have been established for various types of foods containing a worthwhile percentage of protein. The cost of one-third of this daily protein requirement (what might be served at one of three meals) has been listed as a basis of comparison with economy in mind.

Three Hahne Stores To Show Window Display Tomorrow On The Theme... 'World Day Of Prayer'

Hahne and Company will observe the World Day of Prayer tomorrow with an appropriate window display at all three stores—in Montclair, Newark and Westfield.

The window display in Montclair, Newark and Westfield will graphically portray the insignia—the Cross on the Globe of the World and the theme words for this year: "What Dost Thou Love—Require But To Do Justly... Love Mercy... Walk Humbly." Also included will be a listing of the participating churches in the community and the times of their services.

Sponsored by the United Church Women of the National Council of the Churches of Christ in the United States, the World Day of Prayer is observed each year on the first Friday in Lent. It started in 1887 with the vision and dedication of one woman, and has grown to involve millions of women around the world.

Special community services will be held at designated churches in more than 120 countries with basically the same service and theme without denominational, racial, national or cultural distinctions. Each year the service comes from a different part of the world.

Offerings from the special services in the U.S.A. will be used to finance inter-denominational World Day of Prayer projects which include: Helping to support 12 women's colleges in many areas of the world; provide attractive Christian literature for women and children in Asia, Africa and Latin America; Make possible special projects for 1965. One project is a ministry to rural women of the world. The World Day of Prayer gifts will provide help in their fight against malnutrition, poverty and ignorance.

The second project encompasses ventures in the 20th Century Christian community.

For the third and final year, this project will make possible community development in fringe communities where grants and Indian-Americans are settling. World Day of Prayer gifts will make possible training, materials and experimental projects leading toward a larger program to help the people help themselves.

Open Monday through Saturday 9:45 to 5:30—Wednesday nights till 9 P.M. at Hahne & Company in Westfield and Newark

P.S. Report Notes Sales Increases

Public Service Electric and Gas Company had a good year in 1964. Donald C. Lauck, president, disclosed in the annual report of the company just released to stockholders.

The number of holders of the company's stock at the end of 1964 rose to over 140,000 an increase of almost 5,000 as compared with a year earlier. The increase occurred for the most part after April 24, 1964, the effective date of the two-or-one common stock split which had been overwhelmingly approved four days earlier at the annual meeting of stockholders.

The report notes that new electric and gas rate schedules which became effective Sept. 30, following conferences initiated by the Board of Public Utility Commissioners of the state, will benefit customers by about $2,400,000 annually. According to the report, about 95 per cent of the company's electric customers and more than half of the gas customers share in the reduction in rates.

Commentary on a recent National Editorial Association Study Mission Around South America

By TRUDINA HOWARD

First of a Series

SOUTH AMERICA: OLE!

A wonderful way to start a trip around South America is to run into a former classmate the first day out and 1200 miles from home. With this kind of pleasant surprise at the beginning, any trip would be off to a good start and promise fair.

And this trip was just that. It was interesting, it was romantic, it was glamorous, it was wonderful.

The occasion was the 1965 National Editorial Study Mission which began this year at Miami in mid-January and went to Panama, Brazil, Argentina, Uruguay, Paraguay, Chile, Peru and Colombia. It was a four-week tour and 46 people were on it.

Study missions are run each year by the National Editorial Association whose headquarters are in Washington, D. C. Members of NEA are predominantly weekly newspapers with some dailies from all over the United States, and number approximately 6,500. It is the people whose newspapers belong to this organization who are eligible to buy tickets to the Study Missions. NEA makes all the arrangements for contacts with dignitaries, diplomats and officials of countries, and Travel Consultants, Inc., of Washington, D. C., makes all the arrangements for travel and sightseeing.

It is because of the work of people in both these organizations that we have deluxe accommodations as well as deluxe meetings. We have the best of two worlds. There is nothing like having a cocktail with a president of a country to make you feel a little pampered, and there is nothing like having a good room to make you feel better when you are far from home.

On this trip we met the president of every country except Uruguay and Chile, and the American ambassadors gave us almost every-where. Most of the parties were garden parties (since it was summer time down there) and with the South American moon all glorious hovering over us, the people all beautiful in party dress beside us, and the pulsating music of the country all around us — South America at those moments seemed as romantic and glamorous as the movies make it.

But it had its practical side, and that was interesting and rewarding to learn about.

GENERALLY SPEAKING South America is a much better neighbor — a much more simpatico neighbor — than we generally hear about. There is no great pro-communism and no great anti-United States-ism. The problem all over Latin America, however, seems to be inadequate press coverage. We know as little about what the Argentinians are doing through-out their country as the Argentinians know about what is being done all over this country. It is as unfair to say that because New York or Selma have certain occurrences that make screaming headlines that this is the temper of our entire country, as it would be to say that because some extremist is interviewed by a reporter in some South American country that this is the feeling of that entire country.

In every country we visited the officials of both the country itself, and the American embassy, said the same thing: "There is just not enough leg work, and there are not enough seasoned reporters. The news is not correct enough." They felt it was not done deliberately. There was also agreement that there was many a fine article, particularly in the magazines, and many a fine correspondent, but not enough of either one.

In a way it was rather heartening. It was nice to find the people friendly on being there. It was nice to find the situation better than presented — and not worse.

Of course, the latent problem always is that communism may gain a foothold. There is a mass of poor and underprivileged people in every Latin American country, and in the growing awareness of these people to their plight, even a small communist voice could gain support and stir up hatred or bitterness if no other voice was heard and no improvements were made.

But Cuba, strangely enough, seems to hold no charm for Latin Americans. There is almost a universal feeling in Latin America (Central and South American combined) about Cuba — distant. The Caribbean is not held in too high esteem by Latin Americans and they can barely be bothered to think about it. Besides, "Cuba has accomplished nothing," they say. The president of Panama put it succinctly when he said, "Undoubtedly Cuba is the grain of corn-in-the-shoe of every Latin American country."

ANOTHER THING all South American countries seem to have in common is a common inflation problem: namely inflation. In some of the countries the money value is so much there is a new exchange rate every day. This is quite a serious problem to the nations. For a visitor who has to try to interpret his own money to the foreign money, have the monetary unit change in every country and then have the value change within the country while he's there — it is a bit of a problem too. We had Balboa in Panama, cruzeiros in Brazil, (which varied the most — we got 1,800 cruzeiros to one dollar when we arrived and less than six days later, Argentina has pesos, Uruguay has pesos too but of different value than Argentinians, Paraguay has guarani, Chile has escudos, Peru has soles and Colombia has pesos again, but different in value again than the others.

At least in Brazil there is the consolation that you have a pocket full of large money. In exchange for ten dollars, for instance, you could get 18,000 cruzeiros. So you would have a pocket full of 1,000 and 3,000 and 5,000 notes. It made the man feel like sports. Silver is seldom used for it hardly counts.

All through South America there are Volkswagens and other foreign cars and all kinds of United States cars. Chevrolets seem to be the most predominant but they cost from $6,000 to $10,000 U. S. dollar value, depending on the country you're in. One man we met in Bogota, Colombia, had purchased a Falcon in Irvington and taken it with him to Colombia. After almost two years of use he expects to get from $6,000 to $7,000 (U. S. value) for it.

In Chile a 21-inch table model television set cost $1,000 U. S. value. Yet in a Buenos Aires super market I found a bottle of excellent champagne for 40 cents! But a can of Campbell's tomato soup in Uruguay was 70 cents. Meat generally is less pound than in the states, but in many places good cuts or inferior cuts all have the same price per pound. Vegetables and fruits are much the same here in price and kind, except there was one vegetable that I never had anywhere before. It was called "heart of palm" — and that's just what it was. Delicious too.

Lipstick, good old Revlon or Dior, was a familiar $1.10 even in Montevideo, Uruguay.

THE PEOPLE of South America are mainly of white European stock. There are a few Indians to be seen in the big cities, and just about no Negroes. Brazil is Portuguese speaking and the only one to be so. The others are all Spanish speaking, so Brazil is the oddman of the continent. Besides their Spanish overlay, Argentina is considered to be Italian, Uruguay all white European stock and no "natives," Paraguay largely German, Chile English and German, Peru Indian and Colombia the Spanish of Spanish. All South Americans, however, consider themselves "American" and they represent it when we in the United States absorb it completely.

All of South America was hot in January and February except in the altitudes. In sea-level cities the temperature ranged from 80 to 95 or more and in Bogota where it was 8,500 feet high — it was 60 at noon and sometimes went down to about 32 at night. And it does that ALL year. None of the cities get snow, even in June, July and August in WINTER.

This South American adventure started, as I said from Miami, where I ran into said classmate. It was quite wonderful for I had good company instead of being alone. The following day I met the Study Mission Group at the airport and after a briefing we left for the first stop which was Panama.

It was a two and a half hour flight by Braniff Jet to the canal zone, and — it "ain't necessarily so" what they say about Panama either.

Additional Rest, Picnic Areas To Be Placed Along Highways

Under a program approved by Governor Richard J. Hughes vacation-bound motorists driving across southern New Jersey toward the seashore this summer will find new "picnic and rest areas" along state highways.

The program, developed by State Highway Commissioner Dwight R. G. Palmer at the request of Governor Hughes, will add 14 new rest areas to the state's present 22 sites, mainly on the cross-state highways in southern New Jersey leading to seashore resorts.

Governor Hughes said the new stops are planned to give vacation-bound motorists an opportunity to "stretch" and picnic before reaching their destinations and are in keeping with President Johnson's interest in adequate rest areas and his over-all beautification of highways program.

The state's northern counties now have a total of 12 rest areas located along Rte. 22, 78, 46 and 80 leading to the Newark-New York area. A group of nine rest areas now serve southern New Jersey, with most of them clustered in the Camden-Bridgeton area.

According to the Highway Department's program the new rest areas will be located alongside the picnic tables.

The plan calls for one area to be opened on Rt. 68 between Bordenstown and Fort Dix, two along Route 70 and another on Rt. 72 in Burlington County.

An additional site in Camden County is to be located on Rt. 73 near Kresson, Atlantic County will have stopping points on Rt. 208 as well as Rts. 30, 40 and 60. Gloucester County's new rest area will be on Route 322 near Cecil and Salem County will get another site on Route 40 near Malaga.

Cumberland County will have two areas, one on Rt. 49 east of Bridgeton, the other on Route 47 near the Leesburg State Farm.

'BELL, BOOK AND CANDLE'

Witch's Brew At Paper Mill Doesn't Boil

By WILLIAM M. BRUCKER

On view at the Paper Mill Playhouse these weeks is the moderately interesting fantasy "Bell, Book and Candle" by John Van Druten, whose premise is that witches exist, and he, for one, is taking them seriously. In this play, at least, Yes, Marjorie, there are such things as witches. He has removed the pointed hat from his witches, dressed them in the manner of our day, and deposited them in a brownstone house in New York. From this vantage point they are active in spell casting, love falling and brew boiling.

There is a good deal of every day witch's shop talk and an observation on professional rivalry among them. It is almost too civilized to be so uncivilized. Except for the question as to whether a witch has the capacity to love, there is little else to the story.

Allen Sudden, looking a lot like the Master of Ceremonies in "Password" is an innocent tenant who is headed by a pretty landlady whose formula was prepared in a cauldron, and who binds a spell of love on him. As Shepard Henderson, he looked even more like the Master of Ceremonies in "Password."

Betty White is the sorceress landlady, Gillian Holroyd, and she does get a twinkle in her eye, especially as she conjures up a good curse. It is gratifying to note that there was not a broom in her shape apartment, and that there was no "kiss-for-they-home-made lotions and potions." Thank goodness, too, that her counterpart was off that black gown and dunder-kick. Witches can be wasplike and Betty White is that.

Nancy Cushman is Auntie Queen to Gillian and just as exuberant in her family work. Phillip Proctor is Nicky Holroyd, brother to Gillian, and a nifty young witch if there ever was one. He tends to be a ham, however, and certainly could have opened one of those doors with a few less flourishes. He did redeem himself with an afloat, stiff-dent kick back to close it. James-Coco as Sidney Red-litch, an author, has a good comic role and plays it to the audience's satisfaction all the way.

B'nai Israel PTA Will Hear Doctor

The PTA of Temple B'nai Israel Nursery School will meet Wednesday at 8:15 p.m. at the school, 1162 Stuyvesant ave., Irvington. Dr. Oscar Koppel, Irvington pediatrician, will be guest speaker.

Van Druten's witches rarely speak in cadence and nowhere do they raise the goose pimples like this Shakespearean recipe from Shakespeare's "Macbeth."

Fillet of a fenny snake
In the cauldron boil and bake
Eye of newt and toe of frog
Wool of bat and tongue of dog
Adder's fork and blind-worm's sting
Lizard's leg and howlet's wing
For a charm of powerful trouble
Like a hell-broth boil and bubble.
That's a recipe. That is not "Bell, Book and Candle."

There might have been better years to revive "Bell, Book and Candle", but this certainly isn't the one. What was intellectually macabre 15 years ago has become docile entertainment for our young. A mere witch is hardly terrifying or even bewitching to junior when he has taken advanced courses in assembling werewolves.

Potential Peace Corp Workers May Take Aptitude Tests March 13

Area residents will have an opportunity Saturday, March 13, to test their aptitudes by taking the Peace Corps placement examination at 8:30 a.m. in Room B-88, Federal Building, Newark.

Examinees must bring a completed Peace Corps questionnaire to the testing center unless one has already been submitted. Applicants do not have to register for the test ahead of time.

Peace Corps questionnaires can be obtained at all post offices. They are also available at college placement centers or in the offices of Peace Corps liaison personnel who are members of college staffs. They can also be obtained by writing Peace Corps, Washington, D.C.

There are two parts to the placement test: a general aptitude test (for which knowledge of a foreign language is not necessary). The test lasts for approximately an hour and one-half.

CENSUS BUREAU REPORT

Retail Sales For '63 In County Tabulated At $787.6 Millions

Union County's 4,873 retail establishments had $787.6 million in sales in 1963, an increase of 14 percent from 1958, the U. S. Bureau of the Census has just reported after tabulating data gathered from all firms in the 1963 census of business. Retail trade in the county meant jobs (exclusive of proprietors) for 25,514 men and women and a yearly payroll of $88.8 million.

In volume of business the county's food stores had sales of $176.0 million, a decrease of 6 percent from 1958. In other retail business the county's eating and drinking places had sales of $59.5 million, and gasoline service stations had sales of $30.6 million. Auto dealers and related trade establishments had sales of $150.0 million; general merchandise group stores had sales of $156.0 million; general hardware and farm equipment dealers had sales of $40.9 million.

The last previous business conducted by the Census Bureau, an agency of the U. S. Department of Commerce, was in 1958.

For the state as a whole, the Census Bureau reported 82,630 retail establishments with sales of $9,059.9 million, up 25 percent from 1958.

Census reports to be issued during the next few months will give state and county figures on wholesale and service trade, manufacturing and mineral industries.

Figures on number of establishments and sales volume for major types of retail establishments in each county are provided in the printed report: 1963 census and business, retail trade, New Jersey, available at $60 from Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D. C. 20402 and at U. S. Department of Commerce Field-offices.

Area Red Cross Chapter Now Eastern Union County Chapter

The Elizabethtown Chapter, American-National-Red-Cross, has officially changed its name to Eastern Union County Chapter. Wesley C. Eick, chapter chairman, announced this week.

The change became official when Edward Deutch, field representative of the national organization, presented a new charter to the chapter's board last night. The ceremony was held in the chapter headquarters, 203 W. Jersey st., Elizabeth.

According to the chapter's executive director, Miss Charlotte B.B. McCracken, the change is intended to identify the organization more closely with the region it serves. The area includes Elizabeth, Linden, Hillside, Roselle, Roselle Park, Union, and Westfield.

In discussing the change, Eick pointed out that Elizabethtown, founded in 1884, originally comprised a large area including all of the territory in which the chapter now functions. "But now," he said, "people tend to regard it as the old name for the City of Elizabeth."

Speaking at the event, Warren P. Sawyer, executive director of the United Fund of Eastern Union County, said "the new name is in line with designations for other area organizations such as the United Fund, The Community Welfare Council, Visiting Nurses Association, YMCA, Chamber of Commerce, and other groups in the district also use 'Eastern Union County' in their names."

Eick added that the action reflects a trend in chapter titles throughout the nation which indicates the area served rather than the principal municipality where it is headquartered.

The chapter chairman also observed that when Elizabethtown Chapter was founded in 1916, most of the region's population was concentrated in the City of Elizabeth, whereas now, according to latest estimates, Elizabeth's population of 109,820 is less than half of the total area population of 265,980.

Co-signers of the new charter from the American National Red Cross are President Lyndon B. Johnson, honorary chairman of Red Cross; E. Roland Harriman, chairman of its board of governors; General James F. Collins, president, and Harold M. Stair, secretary of the national organization's board of governors.

Suburban Symphony Joins National Group

The Suburban Symphony Society of New Jersey has been accepted for membership in the American Symphony Orchestra League. Mrs. Bernard Garlinger of Cranford, society president announced this week.

The society sponsors the 75-piece Suburban Symphony under the direction of Peter Szolc of Millburn. Rehearsals are held every Tuesday evening in the Cranford High School Auditorium.

Chapter Chairman Announces $143,000 Cancer Crusade Goal

Dr. Herbert W. Samenfild, Scotch Plains, chairman of the American Cancer Society's April Crusade in Union County, this week announced a goal of $143,000 for the crusade.

Dr. Samenfild and Mrs. Robert L. Heald, co-chairman, stressed an urgent need for funds to implement and expand cancer research projects and increase cancer control programs in the county and state.

Dr. Samenfild pointed out that the American Cancer Society is the only national organization fighting cancer through "balanced programs of research, education and service." Mrs. Heald added, "our crusade is both an educational and fund drive in which we hope to arouse the public to the warning signs of cancer and of the services offered to patients and the community by the American Cancer Society."

Dr. Samenfild said the society has a nationally coordinated research program that is supported with funds from chapters throughout the country. "During the past five years," he said, "this Union County Chapter has forwarded more than one-half million dollars."

In addition to providing free cancer screenings, sick room kits and transportation, the Union County Chapter also pays for medications for indigent patients and supports clinics for indigent patients at Elizabeth General Hospital, Muhlenberg Hospital and Overlook Hospital.

"One of the areas of the society's program in which I am most interested is education since it is my profession," said Dr. Samenfild, dean of students at Newark State College. "The society provides many cancer education programs in schools throughout the county and also sponsors education workshops for teachers to encourage the study of cancer in the schools." Cancer education films are also being provided to clubs and organizations in the county.

The American Cancer Society is also involved in professional education. Special films and booklets have been prepared and include the latest developments in cancer research. Many Union County nursing schools use these materials.

Dr. Samenfild said the $143,000 goal "may seem to be a large sum, but contrasted to the enormous need for cancer research, it is comparatively a small amount."

Minutemen Defeated By Nutley, Score Over Hillside PAL Team

The Springfield Minutemen traveled to Nutley to meet a Recreation Department basketball team from that town last Tuesday evening. The game was played on the Nutley High School basketball court, and the Minutemen dropped a 53-50 decision.

The Nutley forces took a large early lead in this game only to see a determined Springfield squad rally in the final period of play. The Minutemen tallied 26 points in the final period of the game, but time ran out as their effort drew close to success.

Tom Carroll and Joel Schwartz paced the Springfield team in this game. Carroll was effective throughout the game and closed with a game-high total of 18 points.

Close Games Mark Small-Stars' Action

The start of the play-offs in the Sandmeier Small Fry Basketball League last week produced upsets and closely contested ball games.

In another quarter-final game, the Rockets took a narrow 14-13 decision over the Comets.

"Considering the fact that I never directed traffic before and that this does happen to be an exceptionally busy street, busier than ever at that particular time... I was just there... I don't know whether I helped or hampered the traffic congestion, but I'm serving as chaplain of the Fire Department now — to a wonderful group of men."
"So perhaps I did a fairly good job. Anyway, the parade route gets a little longer each year, and the hills get a little steeper each year... but then, he confessed, "perhaps I'm getting a little slower each year."

"The reception of people by the church and the community has always been wonderful. When I try to analyze it, it is a liking for people — to work with-and- alongside of people."
"One of my pet projects," Mr. Evans said, "is head tables. It is one of the most anti-social customs. At receptions, for example, I'm usually seated at a head table — and I feel so out of it. What I'd really like to do is go into the crowd, sit with most of the people in the center of everything."
Mr. Evans started in Springfield, he said. "We were happy to be here. We put down our roots and said: 'It's home!' And it's been here ever since."
"One of the first things we had to do was to work for the community and set up a set of regulations — at that time — to devise some system."
"And this is where I met a lot of people outside of the church. From there stemmed an interest in the whole community and in every area."
Mr. Evans recalled his introduction to the Fire Department and his eventual appointment as its chaplain.

Harvard Quintet Gains First Spot In League Action
With one week remaining on the Recreation Department's Ivy League regular schedule, Harvard has moved into sole possession of first place. Three games are played each Saturday afternoon at the Regional High School gymnasium.
The big game last Saturday was the opening contest, pitting Cornell against Princeton. Cornell upset Princeton by the score of 22-20. This loss dropped Princeton from first place for the first time this season.
Joel Schwartz paced the Cornell victory as he hit for 33 points. Joel was particularly effective from the foul line late in the game to hold off the Princeton team. Danny D'Andrea with five points also played well for the winners. Ralph Losanno led the Princeton team as he scored 18 of the team's 20 points.
The second game of the afternoon last Saturday saw Columbia squeeze out a 28-27 verdict over Dartmouth. Dartmouth fell to its ninth loss of the season as a buzzer shot by Dave Margulies just fell off the rim.
Margulies, however, was effective for Dartmouth in this contest as he tallied a game-high of 10 points. Keith Brown with eight points also played well for Dartmouth. Bob Janukowicz with 10 points and much healthy rebounding paced the winning Columbia squad. Milt Pomp, who hit eight points, played a fine floor game for Columbia.
Harvard took the measure of Yale in the final game of the afternoon to move into sole possession of the league's top spot. The final score in this contest was Harvard, 37; and Yale, 17. Dennis Lester with 10 points and Steve Jupa with nine points were the pacemakers for Harvard. Tom Carroll and Jimmy Konnet each hit six points for Yale. Gary Haydu with five points rounded out the scoring for Yale.

REALTOR OF THE WEEK

Homeowners Have Tax Advantages, Notes Official Of R. Mangels & Co.

"With income tax time upon us again many a homeowner is thankful for certain tax advantages he enjoys," notes Frank P. Johnson, Secretary-Treasurer of R. Mangels & Co., realtors of Union.

"Non-homeowners may not be aware that real estate taxes and mortgage interest are deductible items on their Federal income tax. This is a saving not available to the taxpayer living in rented quarters," Johnson commented.

"In selling his home the owner may find it advantageous to buy another house rather than move into an apartment," said the realtor. "If a profit has been realized from the sale of his home, a capital gain tax must be paid. However, if an investor uses home of equal or greater value is purchased within one year, there is no tax liability," he explained. "In cases of new homes an 18 month period is allowed." Johnson added. Further exemptions are allowed to those over 55 years of age.

"Certain groups are eligible for savings on the level of main-tenal taxation," continued Johnson. "Veterans, for example, are entitled to a $50 exemption on local property taxes." "Although," he added, "this is not an automatic allowance. The veteran must file an application with his local tax assessor. The ex-serviceman must show by his honorable discharge papers that he served on active duty during time of hostilities. In World War I from April 8, 1917 to Nov. 11, 1918; World War II, Dec. 7, 1941-Sept. 2, 1945; and for the Korean Conflict, from June 23, 1950 to July 27, 1953."

"The realtor pointed out that disabled veterans under certain circumstances may be completely exempt from property taxes. Senior citizens (over 65 years of age), too, may be entitled to an exemption of $30 a year on their real estate taxes, he observed.

In all special cases, Johnson advised the property owner to consult with his realtor, accountant, or lawyer in learning how tax advantages can apply to his particular situation.

"Perhaps the greatest joy in home ownership is a definite tax advantage," he concluded. "It is building up one's equity in a real estate — your own home."

Georgian Arms Will Have Unique Climate Control

The 68 unit "Georgian Arms" fast garden-apartment project on Green St. near Rte. 1 and 9 Traffic Circle in Woodbridge, will have a unique Climate Control system.

Each of the 68 garden apartment units will have its own individual climate control from a new type of unit which was developed by the Climatrol Division of the Worthington Air Conditioning Company.

This is the first installation of the single packaged gas heating/electric cooling units to be installed in the State of New Jersey. According to the builder, Alfred Sanzari of Hackensack, the new 750 Climatrol units were selected as a luxury feature because they will permit tenants to regulate both summer and winter temperatures to suit their individual preferences.

The single packaged units, one for each of the 68 apartment units, use gas heating and electricity for cooling. The units are fitted into an exterior wall and eliminate the need for a chimney. A sealed combustion principle draws air for the furnace flames from the outdoors and returns it directly to the outdoors. Sanzari, a prominent developer of multi-family projects is President of the Northern New Jersey Home Builders Association. The Georgian Arms Project is comprised of seven buildings, featuring 3 1/2 and four room one bedroom units - renting for $120 to $130 per month.

WEEDER'S DIGEST
 By Your Rutgers Garden Reporter

EASY TO KILL A TREE
 It's easy to kill a tree, even when you don't mean to. A few bumps with the bulldozer during construction work, an extra couple of inches of soil piled over the roots, a change in drainage conditions, and your tree is on its way out.

Usually, by the time the tree shows signs that it has been mistreated, it's too late to save it.

Raising the grade is a sneaky way to kill a tree because earth fills change the air and water content of the soil and upset the normal function of soil organisms, or slow down the normal exchange of gases around the roots.

How Not To
 There are many ways to insure the life of a tree that's in the way of construction work. Some are simple, while others involve laying drainage tile or building a dry well around the trunk.

If your tree is worth the trouble and you're sure it will be an asset in the years ahead, then your extra work will be worth while.

It's a pretty big subject, really, as you can tell if you read the 26-page bulletin written by U.S. Department of Agriculture specialists to help anyone who wants to prevent damage to trees during construction work. Complete with photographs and diagrams to show how to build mechanical safeguards, Bulletin 285 is called "Protecting Trees Against Damage from Construction Work."

You may find it's worth the 15-cents the Superintendent of Documents, U. S. Printing Office, Washington, D. C., asks for it.

T.S. Eliot Play Listed For College Tonight

T.S. Eliot's play, "The Confidential Clerk," will be presented by the Heritage Players of New York City tonight at Newark State College in a timely tribute to Eliot who died in January.

The performance is set for 8 p.m. in the Little Theatre of the College Center. It is open to the public and admission is free.

The play will be done on a nearly bare stage, and the scene will be set by a narrator. Written in 1953, "The Confidential Clerk" presents the failures of natural relations—specifically those of parents—children, which lead to recognition of the need of the supernatural and of the need to distinguish between the divine and the human. People are shown trying to find the divine in the human and have it on their own terms.

The Heritage Players are a professional group in existence for 10 years. The actors are all veterans of Broadway, off-Broadway, and television work.

The group, under the direction of Thomas Luce Summa of New York City, has been recognized and lauded by such notable people as Mr. and Mrs. John Davis Lodge, the former governor of Connecticut and ambassador to Spain, and Mrs. Stephen Vincent Benet, with whom they consulted on the performance of "John Brown's Body."

Overlook Hospital Given $225,000

Overlook Hospital in Summit has received another major gift—the "Progress Program"—for a new wing with a $225,000 grant from the Lillia Babbitt Hyde Foundation of New York.

Robert W. Parsons of Summit, president of the Lillia Babbitt Hyde Foundation and a former trustee of Overlook, said:

"Overlook is an outstanding community hospital. The Summit-area is indeed fortunate to have such a progressive medical facility. The Lillia Babbitt Hyde Foundation has been actively associated with many of the outstanding medical centers in New York, so it is in a most advantageous position to evaluate the quality of hospital care at Overlook."

Theresa's Fund Hits $9,800

A $300 contribution from the Men's Club of Union High School this week brings the Theresa Gargalowitz Fund to $9,800. The Suburban Women's Club of Union last week donated $500 to the cause. This was erroneously reported as a contribution from another woman's club, according to Philip Portnoy, who heads the drive.

Theresa Gargalowitz is the 20-year-old Fairleigh Dickinson University sophomore from Union who was critically injured in an automobile accident last April when her car skidded in unused trolley tracks in Morris ave., Springfield, and struck a bus. She has been in a coma at Overlook Hospital since the accident. The fund was established to help her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Gargalowitz of 2530 Hawthorne ave., Union, with staggering hospital expenses.

Fifteen dollars was contributed in memory of Mrs. Julia Sikky from Mrs. John Popp of Mountainside. Alma Cox of Morristown, who is a regular contributor to the fund, sent another $10 donation. Contributions can be sent to The Theresa Gargalowitz Fund, Box 4, Union.
