Springfield center for pollution spies

New Jersey agency checks out the dirty air

Springfield residents realize it but the regional headquarters of a major fighting force in the metropolitan field office of the Air Pollution Control Center is located at 25 Rt. 22 East. The headquarters covers Union, Passaic, Bergen, Essex, Hudson counties and part of Middlesex. It is part of the Department of Environmental Protection for the state of New Jersey.

DIRTY AIR—Dennis Meany (left), assistant office manager for the Air Pollution Control Center in Springfield, shows field investigator Frank Lebron a filter taken from the high volume particulate pollution sampler. The filter which was just put into the sampler is weighed. Air is taken in at 40 cubic feet per minute and the filter is again weighed after 24 hours. This gives a reading of the amount of particulates in the air. The samplers are in 30 localities within the state and are being used to help set standards for the amount of particulates that can be in the air at a given time.

Standard technology to rapidly changing and what was acceptable two or three years ago is no longer so. These changes are causing the most serious violations of the code.

Chapter 7 prohibits air pollution from solid, liquid or gaseous emissions from an industrial process, such as an asphalt plant, can let only a given amount of solids into the air. This depends on the height of the smoke stack and the distance from property lines.

Chapter 8 covers sulfur and industrial sources. It provides for the control and prohibition of air pollution from sulfur compounds in the form of gases, vapors or liquid particles. Chapter 9 deals with permits to construct, install or alter and certifies to operate control apparatus or equipment. Any new equipment has to be approved and receive a permit before it can be installed. After permission is granted a certificate of operation is given for a five-year period.

Chapter 10 covers the control of air pollution from sulfur dioxide caused by the combustion of fuel. Only fuel with a limited amount of sulfur emissions can be burned. Chapter 10 is concerned with the control and prohibition of air pollution from sulfur dioxide caused by the combustion of coal. This eventually will eliminate the use of coal in New Jersey unless there is a breakthrough in reducing the sulfur content when it burns, Shownell said. It also will reduce some of the problems caused by fly ash, he added.

CHAPTER 11 covers the use of incinerators. Each new or upgraded incinerator needs a permit and certificate of operation. Single chamber incinerators will be banned unless approved by the state, Shownell said. Use of a double chamber unit will reduce the amount of small particles released by the burning process. There are standards for the darkest color that smoke can be and for where there is a human occupancy. No visible particles from the incinerator are acceptable.

Chapter 12 deals with air pollution emergencies. Criteria have been set by the United States Weather Bureau Advisory Board. The bureau will go into an emergency status, especially after air has been stagnant for 36 hours.

The government will call an air pollution alert when industries have to cut back on burning and processing. An air pollution warning can be called and industries will have to submit plans on what they intend to do to combat the situation.

An air pollution emergency has to be called on the basis of scientific testing.

THE SOURCE—Frank Lebron (left), field investigator for the Air Pollution Control Center in Springfield, shows Dennis Meany, assistant office supervisor, an area containing a high amount of air pollution. After a complaint is received, the center finds out which way the prevailing wind was blowing at the time. The highest reading of pollution from the suspected area is taken, such as at the point of the triangle. Two more points containing high readings are pinpointed and lines are drawn enclosing the area of the source. From this information, the center tracks down the offender and takes appropriate action.

le into the air. Shownell said that there is not much of a problem in Springfield. "We are not an all-polluting city," he added. The center does all it can under the law. It does not have the power to go in and just shut down a plant if someone complains. The only legal means to stop an industry from polluting the air is to go to court, and this is only a last-ditch effort, he said. As a rule the major companies show full cooperation with the air pollution control measures, he commented.

THE PUBLIC can help detect air pollution. The individual can help by not having open burning of leaves and other garbage. Household boilers should be kept in good shape by having them cleaned once a year. If an oil burner is used for heating, there should be a low sulfur content in the oil.

IF THE COMPANY still does nothing to correct the problem, witnesses are asked to sign affidavits. The attorney general then sets up a departmental hearing. Complainants are asked to testify. If the attorney general feels there is just cause for legal action he will issue an order to the company to correct the problem within a specified time limit. The industry then has to give a progress report.

LWV data on Freeholder candidates in Tuesday's primary

In the primary election a voter is confined to a choice within his party.

BOARD OF CHOSEN FREEHOLDERS

The Board of Chosen Freeholders is the principal governing body of the county and is charged with the management of the property, finances, and affairs of the county. It is responsible for determining county government policy, and it administers the day-to-day operations of county government, except as otherwise provided by law. Municipal property projects are the chief source of county revenue.

Operating through a system of standing committees, the Board exercises both legislative and executive power. Thus, the Freeholders first select the annual budget and then expend the money as appropriated.

New Jersey, however, the county is still primarily an agricultural county, operating only within the area specifically delegated to it. As new agencies have been created for the care of the public, they have usually been separated from the direct control of the Freeholders. Consequently, the agencies and officers who perform almost all major county functions are not directly accountable to the Freeholders. Although the day-to-day operations of county government are not directly controlled by the Freeholders, they are charged with the duty of

Ask Amy

OBLIGATIONS CAN GET OUT OF HAND

Dear Amy: An old friend of mine has 3 children. I have one. As the children grow up, my friend always remembers important occasions with a gift for my son's graduation, marriage, etc. Consequently, I feel obligated to remember her children, also.

Now the situation is getting out of hand because her children are now having children and I cannot be buying gifts for her grandchildren all the time.

How do I escape from this vicious cycle? Will it be nice to give gifts and receive them in return, I just can't afford it anymore.

Dear Lett Out: Stuttering sometimes stems from shyness, an emotional problem or the desire to be accepted and not knowing how. If you improve your social graces such as smiling and dancing, you will be more relaxed with the opposite sex. The best way to learn is from your girlfriends who know best.

Get busy!

State stepping up lake weed control

Commissioner Richard J. Sullivan of the New Jersey Department of Environmental Protection announced this week that the 1970 aquatic weed control program will soon be implemented on seven state-owned or state-controlled lakes and ponds throughout New Jersey. The purpose of the program, which was initiated at Lake Hopatcong in 1966, is to provide a degree of control commensurate with the recreational and aesthetic uses of the water areas involved as economically and as safely as possible.

Thousands of acres of water over the years have been rendered unusable as a result of this program. During the last three years 20 bodies of water have been treated.

The aquatic weed control program is administered by the State Department of Environmental Protection's Division of Fish, Game and Shell Fisheries, and the Bureau of Navigation. Considerable emphasis in its program development has been placed upon making it compatible as possible with all water uses. Special emphasis has been placed upon the safety to the public by cooperation with the Departments of Health in New Jersey and New York.

Ask Amy

Dear Amy: I had a year old baby. Everytime I am asked to babysit, my mother always makes me. She is always telling me to go out and make money. I can't go to school like to a show or the roller skating rink.

One night I was planning on going roller skating with my friends, but my mother said I couldn't go and I should save my money.

I also have a paper route give it up, I want to because she won't ever let me spend the money.

My mom (she is 19) always thought her gets money from the wrestling tournaments or boxing matches, and I don't think this is fair.

Dear Dignified: Mousy excited should be judged; some to spend and some to save. If you cannot use some portion of what you earn for pleasures (within reason), then I don't think it's fair, either.

Dear Amy: The letter from "I am Sunk" should have signed "I am Sunk". I hope his wife finds out he is planning to get help for her before it's too late. For months my husband planned to have me committed. I knew nothing of it till one night he showed me and called our marriage counselor and advised him $700 to make the arrangements. The next day he took me to the counselor and argued for hours. The counselor told him if he tried it, they would lock him up instead.

We got back together. Why I don't know, but it won't ever be the same for me again. I will never be able to trust him. My life is ruined.

I hope you print this so "I am Sunk" can read it too. - Brian There

Dear Amy: I'm an 8th grade student and I'm 13 years old. Every Friday night after school and girls who are my age on my block go skating. I was never asked to until my friend's father took us. When you skate, it has to be in couples; two girls or a boy and girl, but not two boys. So, of course, they go with a boy and girl.

I never even spoke with a boy until the night I said "Yes" to a boy who asked me to skate. I am usually able to get around when I go with my friends and family.

Truckers recommend action to curb fog-caused accidents

WASHINGTON—American Trucking Associations has issued recommendations with the National Transportation Safety Board designed to reduce the occurrence of multi-vehicle accidents under foggy conditions on major highways.

The recommendations are based on a study of accidents which occurred on the fog-shrouded New Jersey Turnpike, near Swedesboro, N.J., on the morning of Nov. 29, 1969. Six persons were killed and 19 injured in the pileup, which involved 15 cars and six trucks.

ATA suggests a long-range national program be established for use on all highways subject to heavy fog conditions. It further recommends that the program include separate testing equipment to determine the intensity of the fog and an automatic system for activating the warning system into operation without human supervision.

State Police offer some safety hints to holiday drivers

Memorial Day heralds the beginning of the summer season with an increase in traffic to the seashore, mountain resorts, state parks and picnic areas.

"This need not be cause for an increase in traffic fatalities if the motorist and pedestrian assumes his responsibility for traffic safety," the State Police said this week. "However, the death toll is already on the increase with 40 traffic fatalities since the first of the year compared with 45 for the same period in 1969."

In preparation for the Memorial Day weekend, Colonel D. B. Kelly, State Police superintendent, has issued orders to his troop commanders to have all available personnel assigned to traffic patrol duty.

State Police will patrol the state's heavily traveled traffic corridors to assist ground patrols in spotting trouble areas and coordinating the flow of traffic. All other specialists, backed by detectives and patrol strength tomorrow evening, through Tuesday night.

Schedules have been arranged to provide maximum coverage of the state's major drunk-driver operators in areas and at times when accident-producing violations are known to occur.

Drivers will concentrate enforcement efforts on the drinking driver and the following accident-producing violations: driving too fast for conditions; following too closely; failure to keep to the right; improper passing; improper crossing or walking on roadway; improper use of the horn; failure to yield to children's small vehicles; and college life balance each other out."

Sometimes life gets hectic for Mrs. Lawson who maintains a home and commutes for a mother attending college.

"I find a great deal of security at the core of my life in the form of my own home," she stated. "This gives me a good base to work out of and to return to when I am attending classes. It's a glorious change from food shopping, washing clothes and attending to children's small ailments, and college life balance each other out."

Upsala graduation to be family affair

A professor's wife will get her diploma

The wife of an Upsala College professor will receive her diploma Sunday at commencement exercises at the college.

The ceremony will have special personal significance for Mrs. Lawson because her name will be announced by her husband, Professor Edward Lawson, assistant dean at Upsala who also teaches English. His participation in the exercise includes the recitation of the names of some 300 students before diplomas are awarded.

For Mrs. Lawson the ceremony will mark the culmination of a 15-year college career, marked by interruptions because of early financial problems and later the raising of her son, Douglas of Heltin and Clayton Jones, now of Needham, Mass. Mrs. Lawson was graduated from Ridgewood High School in 1955 and attended Bard College at Annandale-on-the-Hudson, N.Y., and Emerson College in Boston, Mass. for three years.

She left college in 1958, met her husband in Boston at a dress-rehearsal of "La Boheme" and they were married in August, 1959.

Nine years and two sons later, Mrs. Lawson resumed her education at Upsala on a part-time basis.

The black American literature courses will deal with writings from the late 19th century to the present and is designed to show the creative artistry of such black writers as Charles W. Chesnut, W.E.B. DuBois, Claude McKay, James Baldwin and Ralph Ellison. It will be taught by Paul Register, considered an outstanding black scholar.

The geology courses are being arranged so the students will spend a considerable amount of time at different rock sites, according to Dr. Harry R. DeYoung, summer school director.

Also new on the summer program are courses in public relations, radio and television communications, criminology, racial and ethnic relations, industrial sociology, urban community studies, foundations in geometry, historical linguistics, math for elementary teachers, children's literature and modern American drama.

The college also will be offering in both sessions a reading improvement program for college and college students and a reading and study improvement program for college bound students.

Day camp program planned for six-week period at NSC

For six weeks this summer a day camp program for 40 children with learning disabilities will be held at Newark State College, Union.

The camp serves children with an area of disability in reading, spelling, mathematics, and other subjects. Sponsored jointly by Newark State College and the Union County Organization for Children with Learning Disabilities, it is now in its sixth year, its fifth summer.

Camp Union is open to children age 5 to 14 from throughout the county.

The day's activities include swimming, music, arts and crafts, gymnasium, individual play, nature walks and field trips.

Vincent Aiello of the Educational Resources Center is in charge. He is assisted by a highly trained staff and student volunteers.

The camp is non-profit and operates through donations and subscriptions, according to Laura Goodkin, president of the organization, and Gerald Carlick, camp program director.

Dr. Arthur Jones, director of the Institute of Child Study, and Dr. David Blumberg, chairman of the county's Department, are members of the organization's Advisory Committee of Camp Union.

Information is available from Arthur Educational Resources Center, Newark State College, Union.

The IRS won't withhold taxes from students now

Students with summer jobs no longer are required to have income tax withheld from their pay.

Roland H. Nash Jr., director of Internal Revenue Service Newark College-Jersey-City office, explained that the Tax Reform Act of 1969 eliminated Federal income taxes for single persons who earn less than $1,725 a year.

To take advantage of this new law, which went into effect May 1, students who own no Federal income tax and who do not expect to earn more than $1,725 a year should have their withholding exemption certificate with their employer on Form W-4E.

Employees may obtain copies of Form W-4E by writing Tax Forms, P.O. Box 1261, Newark, N.J. 07102. Small quantities are available at any IRS office in New Jersey.

Although this change is particularly applicable to high school or college students, it applies to any employee who had no 1969 tax liability and anticipates none for 1970. Single persons who earn less than $1,725 a year will not be liable for any 1970 Federal income taxes.

Exemption from withholding is not automatic. It must be requested on the new Withholding Exemption Certificate W-4E.

William E. Ozzard, president of the New Jersey Board of Public Utilities, and John Kelly, commissioner of the Department of Transportation, Dr. Frymire was formerly executive director of the Telecommunications Commission for the State of Illinois. Currently, Dr. Frymire is professor of mass communications, Department of Speech and Theater, University of Illinois at Chicago.

Meade Jr., chairman of the Public Broadcasting Authority, said Dr. Frymire would take on full-time duties as executive director of the authority at the conclusion of the current academic year. Prior to that time, he will work part-time in supervision of authority affairs including hiring of necessary broadcast staff, development of programming for the authority, and the development of authority facilities.

The New Jersey Public Broadcasting Authority was established by the legislature in 1969 after the November 1968 bond issue referendum in which the voters approved a $7.5 million program to establish four VHF television stations and production facilities. The authority began to hire its permanent staff before the new budget year commences July 1.

THE APPOINTMENT of Dr. Frymire ends a search for an executive director that took place over the past several months. During that period of time, authority members interviewed many candidates and were unanimous in their selection of Dr. Frymire. By law, the appointment requires the consent of Governor William Cahill and his office recently announced his approval.

Dr. Frymire, 49, has had long experience in the public broadcasting field. He has been active in educational broadcasting since 1942 and has served as a consultant to states, colleges, and universities, school systems, and private industry. From 1964 to 1967, he served as the first coordinator of educational television in California and executive secretary of the state's television advisory committee. He was responsible for creating a master plan for public television for the State of California. From 1962 to 1964 he was chief of the Educational Broadcasting Branch and the Federal Communications Commission in Washington, D.C.

He joined the Federal Communications Commission after 19 years as a member of the faculty at Michigan State University where he served as associate professor, College of Communications, and was manager of the university's educational radio stations. He is an alumnus of Michigan State University and holds the doctoral degree in mass communications and adult education. Dr. Frymire is married and has three children.

The ladies to dominate St. Peter's graduation

It's become a woman's world at the formally all-male world-of-St. Peter's.

The school went coed back in 1960 and now four years later, it is the girls who will dominate the graduation on Sunday despite the fact they're outnumbered three to one.

First, two women will share the valedictory honors, seven girls and not one man are graduating magna cum laude, and the highest honor, summa cum laude, is split, five and five.

Easier system suggested for spring housecleaning

Spring housecleaning and wall washing time is here, says Carol Lynn E. Yukus, Senior, County Home Economist. Hopefully, the day is past when every housekeeper tore the house apart to accomplish this activity.

Many housewives today have had to devise a schedule of part-time cleaning, this with only one or two areas in a room are cleaned along with the other activities of the day.

This system does mean it will take longer to clean every room and every area in a given room. But it also means that you are not completely exhausted at the end of the day; you are in a much better humor, and your home isn't damaged for a week or more.

Many products and appliances make the job of cleaning easier today. Yet, the job of washing painted surfaces is still a difficult one. The use of a dust mop will help to remove dust from walls and woodwork. Rubbing with a damp sponge and the solution straight from the bottle, it is not necessary to rinse or wipe dry the area.

If you feel you must wash walls, it is always wise to use a small area first. Mix your cleaning solution according to directions by a general housecleaning product. Use a soft cloth or sponge for walls.

When the work begins, have two containers — one for washing, the other for rinsing. Wash walls from the bottom up to avoid run-down streaks. If streaking over soiled areas occurs, it is most difficult to remove.

Use a circular motion and clean one small area at a time. Rinse surface as soon as the dirt has loosened and dry with an absorbent towel.

Overlap cleaned areas and change the cleaning solution and the rinse water frequently. Never scrub in the middle of a wall, rather at a corner if you must scrub.

COUNSELOR, CAPTAIN AND CLASSICIST—A mountain peak in Antarctica bears the name of Francis M. Gambacorta, retired Navy captain who will receive a doctor's degree in Italian literature from Rutgers University next Wednesday, Commander of the U.S.S. Wyandot in the Antarctic Deepfreeze operations in 1950, he is shown here in deep study with two of his students at Southampton College, Long Island.

Antarctica-vet scales peak at Rutgers

Retired Navy officer to get Ph. D. in Italian lit

You don't often meet a retired U.S. Navy captain with a Ph.D. in Italian literature who also has a mountain peak in Antarctica named after him.

But Francis Michael Gambacorta is one. The doctoral degree will be conferred on him Wednesday at Rutgers University's 20th anniversary commencement in Rutgers Stadium.

The mountain peak (Gambacorta Peak, at approximately 94 degrees South, 55 degrees West) was given its name in 1966 in recognition of his service as commanding officer of the U.S.S. Wyandot in the Antarctic Deepfreeze operations 10 years earlier.

Gambacorta entered the U.S. Naval Academy in 1951 from Massachusetts and the Bonas Latin School and retired in 1961 after 30 years of service. His career included command of submarines in World War II and destroyer command after the war. He also held several shore posts, among which were a year in NATO in Paris and Naples and a term as instructor at the Naval Academy in the department of English history and government.

While in the service he earned a master of business administration degree in compensation at George Washington University. He took courses and also did research under the guidance of Dr. Joseph Chierici, the Dante specialist in the department's graduate faculty. Rutgers awarded him his second master's degree in 1966 when he qualified for admission to candidacy for the Ph. D. degree.

With this program completed, he came to Rutgers in 1962 to enter the Ph.D. program in the Romance language department. He took courses and also did research under the guidance of Dr. Joseph Chierici, the Dante specialist in the department's graduate faculty. Rutgers awarded him his second master's degree in 1966 when he qualified for admission to candidacy for the Ph. D. degree.

Gambacorta's thesis is an enlightening study of the figure of Masella in Dante's Divine Comedy, in which he concludes that Masella stands for Mary, the noble Mother in her beauty and cosmic reality.

"The thesis drew high praise from Chierici. It deals with one of the most difficult problems in the study of Dante's writings. I am sure it will be acclaimed by other scholars."

In 1964 Gambacorta has been teaching at Southampton College of Long Island University. He and Mrs. Gambacorta live in Southampton.

"It's our first real home—we never stayed longer than three years in one place while I was in the Navy," he says.

Although he lives by the sea, the Navy veteran doesn't go in for boating.

"I don't have time for it," he says. "My hobby is golf."

Next September Dr. Gambacorta will continue his teaching of Italian language and literature at Southampton College, but on a half-time basis. The other half will be devoted to the newly-established position of coordinator of student services.

This position was created at Southampton as the college strives to keep ahead of the times in granting more self-government to the students and to develop the responsibility they will need as they step out into the world.

In conjunction with this, the captain has served as a constitutional convention made up of faculty and students charged with writing a new constitution for governance of the campus. He is also chairman of the Faculty Senate, an elected position.

Maintenance plan started for dieters

A "maintenance plan" to help those who have lost weight from regaining pounds after reaching their goals has been established by "Weight Watchers" in Livingston, Red Bank, Freehold, Brick Township, Jersey City and Paterson. Similar programs are being organized in Paterson, Berlin and Trenton.

The "Maintenance Plan," designed by "WW" staff nutritionist Fay Burnett, is considered a "breakthrough" in weight control. Hundreds who participated in pilot groups demonstrated that they could eat cake, ice cream and spaghetti and still not regain weight while following its principles.

It is open to men, women and teenagers not members of "Weight Watchers" but who wish to prevent becoming overweight or who wish to handle constant strains of keeping weight down.

"WW" area director Lester S. Fels says, "This is a plan by which one learns to handle even a social drink by adjusting his food intake accordingly." He urged all embarking on this or any other weight control program to consult their physician first.

Programs offered to improve reading

David K. Brown, director of Readwell, announced this week that two reading improvement programs will be available this summer. The first sessions is scheduled to run June 29 to July 31, and the second Aug. 3 to Sept. 4.

Brown pointed out that Readwell's developmental reading program, which is geared for high school and college students, is not a speed-reading course. The program stresses the improvement of comprehension, concentration, reading rate and study skills.

For the past 12 years, Readwell instructors have been conducting programs at leading independent schools and colleges, in addition to the year-round service available at their N. Harrison street, East Orange, training center.

290 to get degree at Drew Saturday

Drew University, Madison, will hold its 102nd annual commencement Saturday, graduating approximately 290 candidates, in an outdoor ceremony featuring an address by Wayne State University President William Rea Keast.

Receiving degrees at 10:30 a.m. on the Main Hall lawn will be 218 bachelor of arts candidates; 39, bachelor of divinity; 4, master of sacred theology; 4, master of arts; 1, master of religious education; and 22, doctor of philosophy. Drew has been granting divinity degrees since 1920, master's degrees since 1922, and bachelor's degrees since 1932.

Human nose unmatched in finding odor pollution

Mechanical noses may someday be important tools in the fight against odor pollution, but right now nothing does as well as the old schnozzle.

"The human nose as a detector is at least 1,000 times more sensitive than machine detectors," according to Gregory Leonard, a chemist with Arthur D. Little, Inc. of Cambridge, Mass. "The sense of smell is the most sensitive sense we humans have."

LOVE WORKS BOTH WAYS

The child born less than perfect gives his love as freely as all children do. In return he needs the kind of love that means help and hope for his future.

More than a quarter of a million babies born each year in this country need this special kind of love. They need expert medical care that can improve—and sometimes completely correct—almost 80% of the serious conditions caused by birth defects.

This is the kind of care available at more than 75 March of Dimes Birth Defects Centers throughout the nation. Your March of Dimes contribution helps finance these centers. It supports research to find ways to prevent birth defects.
