NATIVES RETURN

Now is the time for the annual round trip of boys and girls from those rustic retreats known as summer camps.

The youngsters come back each year, shortly before the swallows make the round trip to Capistrano, with a rich and varied assortment of sunbats, mosquito bites, poison ivy, socks that belong in Babylon (but we presume) and pets, dead and alive.

Frogs are currently quite popular, and the most popular breed of all is the couch-dwelling beach-hopper, which can survive only in the cushions of a living room sofa.

Another current favorite is the bathtub snapper. This is a large and particularly vicious turtle that is happy only in the tub, which then becomes unavailable for family cleaning purposes.

Grasshoppers are small and light and easy to bring home in an old peanut butter jar. Once they are home, however, they must be set free immediately. They usually live into 30-year locusts and devour all the shrubs in the front yard. For some reason, they show little interest in the weeds in the back yard.

Snakes are also easy to transport. They are good garden pots, devouring insects and mice and other unwelcome guests. They have only one bad habit. They get lost.

A lost snake usually heads for a dark, warm, quiet place where he can ponder the meaning of life. Typical dark, warm, quiet places are clothes closets or the back of bookshelves.

A lady of the house groping for her last year's plaid skirt is not likely to be pleased when she is greeted instead by a friendly, hungry garter snake in the grass skirts.

Other popular pets, depending on the location of the camp, utilized, are gila monsters, salamanders, baby skunks, tame tortoises, wild pollywogs, sick horned toads, pregnant field mice and psychotropic chipmunks.

Still, we must agree that our younger generation has both a conscience and a sense of family loyalty.

Give the average 10-year-old an either-or choice between his beloved teddy and his mother, and he will think long and hard before he starts to help Mom pack.

LIBRARY

Polar challenge

The Springfield Public Library lists the following titles among the recent acquisitions:

TRAVEL
"Across the Top of the World," by Wally Herbert. This book is subtitled "The Last Great Journey on Earth," and proves to be a deeply stirring account of the greatest polar journey ever undertaken. The author and three companions made the incredible trip from Point Barrow, Alaska, to Spitzbergen, by way of the North Pole, in a truly magnificent challenge to human endurance.

POLITICS
"To the Victor," by Martin and Susan Tabin. The authors' premise is that the mismanagement of American politics is not idealism, concern for the common good nor respect for the law of the land, but is patronage, jobs, money and favors. This book is a study of the patronage system in city and state politics, as detailed in Congressional records and the president. It claims to be a unique and indispensable guide to how American politics really works and why we have the kind of government we do.

EDUCATION
"Lenny's Grandchildren," by Kitty D. Weaver. In an extraordinary new program of Soviet preschool education, the Soviet government has provided an educational system that deals fully with this critical period in a child's life. This is a comprehensive look at a way of life that is also a harbinger of the future of the Soviet Union and of ourselves.

ADVENTURE
"Blue Meridian, the Search for the Great White Shark," by Peter Mathiesen. "Blue Meridian" is a vivid, fresh re-reading of human beings in conflict, and of acute observations of natural history in exotic areas of the world. It is a delightful book, easy to read.

JUVENILE
"Edgar Allan," by John Neufeld. A novel about a good man and a good deed that brought a family together and finally found the bitter knowledge that good intentions are not enough. Honest, vivid and moving, "Edgar Allan" is a story of the relationships within a family and a community, and the conflict that can arise between private ideals and the world in which we live.

"The Sunbird Treasury," by Carl Spangberg. This newly designed and freshly illustrated volume brings together all of the books for young people of our country's greatest writers. It is a delightful book, easy to read.

Legislators urge care in ecological statutes

Assemblymen Henry F. Canan and Thomas J. Higgins of Elizabeth this week urged "caution" concerning the way ecological measures are drafted in the State Legislature.

"Although most of these legislative proposals seem reasonable and necessary, we must be careful in our zeal to make progress in this vitally important area that we perform our constitutional duties by protecting all sectors of the economy."

The scope of these endeavors must be nationwide and, thus, the role of our federal government must be greatly enlarged if meaningful environmental progress is to be made.

They also pointed out that there is now considerable doubt as to the effectiveness of an individual state approach to our nation's problems of pollution, sewage and solid waste disposal.

Better bluegrass bred at Rutgers

NEW YORK. A cross between Kentucky bluegrass and Canada bluegrass can yield the best qualities of both, a Rutgers turf breeder said this week at an American Society of Agronomy meeting in the Slater Hill.

Michael Dale, a research assistant in the Rutgers College of Agriculture and Environmental Science, described his efforts toward a bluegrass hybrid with the good appearance of the Kentucky bluegrass plus the hardiness of the Canadian.

Dale noted that improved knowledge of genetics and plant reproduction had made possible the hybridization of two separate species.

MEATY, BEEFY FLAVOR. Stephen S. Chang, professor of food science at the Rutgers College of Agriculture and Environmental Science, watches his research assistant, Sherman S. Lin, adjust the connections of an elaborate distillation apparatus used in separating the volatile flavor compounds from cooked meat. Dr. Chang hopes to find exactly what compounds make a steak taste the way it does.

Steak's good; but what does it mean? More to taste than a good cook, says Prof

The flavor of good steak may seem one of life's simpler pleasures but in reality it's a highly complex puzzle with more than 100 pieces.

Food scientist at Rutgers is trying to identify the pieces, then put them back together again. So far he's found 100 separate compounds in the flavor of boiled beef.

Another possible benefit is the creation of synthetic or partially synthetic meat products. The taste of meat has been traditionally preferred over cereals, though animal protein is not necessary for good nutrition.

Dr. Chang believes there are over 100 compounds in cooked beef flavor, with still others added by charcoal broiling. So far he's identified 40, including hydrocarbons, alcohols, esters, ethers, aldehydes, sulphur compounds, and various ring compounds.

The infrared spectrum of the compound actually a kind of fingerprint, is just like the infrared of a person. We have the infrared in our office by noon on Friday.

The grant will be matched by part of a $550,000 state-aid training appropriation in the department's 1972 fiscal year budget. The program, which began its fourth year of operation on July 1, offers more than 100 different educational and training activities through 12 major projects.

State reports huge auto toll in county during '60s

During the period from 1960 to 1968, the last year for which complete statistics are available, there were 116,388 traffic accidents in Union County which produced 906 deaths and 79,825 injuries.

"These figures were included in a special report—Highway Safety in New Jersey—released this week by the New Jersey Citizens Highway Committee. The NJCHC figures also showed that the 119,368 accidents, 372 were fatal, 49,652 produced injuries, and 60,044 produced some form of property damage.

The Citizens Highway Committee report indicated that New Jersey, with the highest vehicle density per mile-of any state in the nation, has a road safety program which is characterized by "chaos, confusion and congestion."

The NJCHC found that "safety" just doesn't have status in New Jersey. New Jersey's traffic safety record is not so good as to be proud of, nor so bad as to be condemned. The report said that the state does relatively little to upgrade its safety standards, and too few cars.

The report, prepared by the NJCHC's Subcommittee on Highway Safety and Traffic Engineering, said that the state's safety effort "has been severely handicapped by the lack of efficient, centralized management. Those public officials and agencies specifically given the decision-making power relating to highway safety were placed far too low a priority in the government's budget."

The report was particularly critical of the fact that until now the state has been unable to provide up-to-date statistics on accident rates and economic loss, "although some effort now is being made for this purpose."

The report also noted that although the state last year for which significant county-by-county accident analyses are available is 1968, the records for the previous two years are available only for the county of Hudson County, which in the period from 1960 to 1968 totaled $1,400,000, according to William St. George, chairman of the Subcommittee on Highway Safety and Traffic Engineering. St. George, who is vice-president of sales for Goodall Construction Materials, Inc., of Morristown, said that for this same 1960-68 period, the number of vehicle miles traveled annually in all New Jersey roads increased by 50 percent while estimated economic loss averaged by "roughly" 18 percent.

Infants assigned their numbers

About 300,000 children a year now get Social Security cards before they're six years old, according to Ralph W. Jones, Social Security district manager in Elizabeth.

"About 25,000 infants a year are issued Social Security numbers before they're a year old," Jones said. "The numbers are often used on bank accounts and stock certificates in a child's name," he said.

"Contributions to Social Security from covered earnings build a young worker's protection against loss of earnings in case of severe and prolonged disability as well as for retirement," Jones said. "Also, a worker's family can count on survivors insurance if he dies prematurely."

Painting wins award

An oil painting by Mrs. Laurence G. Holland of Cranford received the special $200 Purchase Award presented by the Borough of Stone Harbor at its annual art show recently. The painting, entitled "Tides of March," depicted the storming of the beaches which devastated the Jersey coast in March 1962.

Jobs shortage alters education pattern in area

The national economy is affecting the higher education picture in the Union County area, according to Fred Lang, director of the State College's College Information Center on Wednesday.

Prof. Lang, basing his comments on inquiries from visitors to the College Information Center during its fourth annual tour of Union County communities, said rising costs and a poor job market have created new higher educational patterns in Union County.

There have been more inquiries about graduate school programs than in previous years, Prof. Lang noted. Many of these inquiries, he said, were from recent college graduates who have not found satisfactory employment and see graduate school as the best alternative to unemployment or under-employment.

It has also noted more requests for information about transferring from one college to another. The majority of these, he said, are from students attending out-of-state colleges who, faced with tuition increases, must drop out of school or transfer to in-state colleges where tuition and living costs are lower.

The increasing cost of attending college away from home, Prof. Lang said, is also reflected in a greater interest in two-year community colleges.

Many teachers have visited the Center, he said, seeking employment at Union College, reflecting the very poor job market for teachers.

The teacher-based information and counseling service, sponsored by Union County, a grant from Humble Oil and Refining Company and Enjay Chemical Company, both of Linden, has visited 11 Union County communities since it started this year's tour. It has been well-received, attracting over 2,500 visitors representing all age groups and social-economic levels.

Prof. Lang said it is an informal atmosphere. A high school student can come in and talk about expected expenses and look over easily to a high school guidance teacher who might want to know why he'd be out of school.

Parents are also more relaxed, knowing that their own lack of knowledge or education will not reflect on their children's image at school.

Other special groups that have taken advantage of the services provided by the College Information Center are recent immigrants to the U.S. who seek help in having foreign educational credentials translated and proper licensing, and a number of inquiries about how to obtain a real estate license, he said.

Scouting for members Truck goes where boys are

After a week of operation, the Union Council Scoutmobile has brought into the scouting area more than 70 youngsters who might not otherwise have been introduced to scouting.

Union Council Southern District Scout Executive David Stanley said the truck serves Union, Rahway, Linden, Roselle, Roselle Park, Cranford, Clark, Kenilworth and Elizabeth.

Parents are also more relaxed, knowing that their own lack of knowledge or education will not reflect on their children's image at school.

Back-to-school list: include health exam

Although it's only mid-August, the parents of September school children should be aware that school health exams are being scheduled.

One of the special hazards to which school age youngsters are exposed is streptococcal infection, which usually precedes rheumatic fever.

Parents and teachers are urged to look for those danger signals: poor appetite, loss of sleep, pale and fatigued, frequent colds and sore throats, unexplained fevers, swollen glands, pains in arms, legs and joints, unusual behavior and personality changes, and a fall in school work by a "good student."

Tuition rebate available for community workers

State and local government employees and community workers engaged in full-time community improvement or urban development jobs are eligible to receive partial tuition rebates from the State Department of Community Affairs for successfully completing college courses related to their jobs.

Community Affairs Commissioner Edmund T. Hume said the department is now accepting applications for its 1971-72 Tuition Assistance Program, which is part of a larger Community Development Training program administered by the Department's Division of Local Government Services.

The comprehensive training program is designed to update, improve and enlarge the knowledge and technical skills of state, local and county government employees and community workers involved in combating urban blight. It is financed through $16,000 in state funds under Title VIII of the federal Housing Act of 1964 and part of a $200,000 state training appropriation in the Department's 1972 fiscal year budget.

Under the tuition assistance program, any state or local government employee and community development worker who enrolls in a credit-granting course related to his job and receives an accredited institution may be eligible for partial financial assistance. Upon successful completion of the course, the employee will be reimbursed for 80 percent of the course costs up to a maximum of $300 a semester.

FOR PROVISIONS of the federal program, individuals employed in the fields of education, fire service, health and law enforcement, including the court system, are not eligible for the program. Any other community development employees, whether professional, technical or administrative, may apply.

Individuals enrolled for two consecutive semesters may receive up to $500 for combined tuition costs, but they will not be eligible for further assistance until two more consecutive semesters have lapsed.

Hume said a total of $200,000 in tuition assistance funds will be available for both the fall and spring semesters, covering a minimum of 66 employees during the 1971-72 academic year.

Applications for the fall semester, beginning in September, must be received by Oct. 1 and will be handled on a first-come, first-served basis.

THE TUITION PROGRAM was begun in 1969 for Community Affairs Department employees, but later was expanded to include other state employees and local government and nonprofit agency personnel, Hume said. More than 200 persons have participated in the program since its inception.

Persons interested in obtaining an application for the Tuition Assistance Program should contact "Recruitment, Training and Intern Unit," New Jersey Department of Community Affairs, P. O. Box 2788, Trenton, 08625; or call (609) 325-6444.

Action delayed on Colonial ter. parking ban

Committee can't reach agreement

Caprio, Planer stress traffic safety problem

By JANICE ADLER
The Township Committee Tuesday postponed action regarding the parking ban on Colonial Terrace approved earlier this summer. Some 30 citizens were present.

The committee held a public hearing on both sides of the street during business hours. Residents had complained that the street was closed by people from the office building at the corner. However, at the last meeting a group of residents had appeared to rescind the ban because they felt they were inconvenienced. The committee on Aug. 18 had indicated it would soon remove the ban at Tuesday's meeting.

Action was postponed Tuesday because committee members Baynam, Forbes, who was present at the hearing, and Robert Planer, who were absent at the last meeting, did not declare that the committee did what it thought the residents of Colonial Terrace wanted. After the ban was passed the people resented the matter and wanted it lifted because of inconvenience, he added.

During the public session, several residents of Colonial Terrace discussed the problem. Mrs. Paul Pydar of 27 Colonial Ter. said that she felt the attention is getting "ridiculous." She noted that the situation is having the school bus shut off from the street and the school bus shut off from the street and the school bus shut off from the street.

Caprio, speaking for the planer and Planer, commented that a safety problem would still exist if the ban was lifted. Rescinding the ban in full-retire would be "improper" to the resolution and its intent, he added.
