

Tax savings to county's homeowners are pointed out by pro-reform group

Property owners in all 21 Union County municipalities would reap benefits in the form of actual property tax reductions under the reform recommendations of the State Tax Policy Committee, which have been proposed by Governor William T. Cahill, "according to people for Tax Reform, a statewide citizens committee devoted to the reform of New Jersey's antiquated and unjust tax structure."

The Governor's proposals now before the Legislature call for state financing of schools, welfare, county judicial and tax board costs with an income tax and statewide property tax of $1 per $100 of true value.

The proposed state income tax would replace the revenue lost through elimination of the local property tax for schools. But in most cases, property tax reductions would more than offset the income tax that would be paid.

A family of four living in Cranford in a $20,000 home and earning $10,000 will pay $56 in property taxes this year. If the Governor's proposals were to take effect in 1972, that family would pay $67 in property taxes, a reduction of $11, this family would pay a $100 state income tax for a net savings of $196.

2 churches to hold combined services in summer months

Members of the Springfield First Presbyterian Church and Springfield Emanuel United Methodist Church will unite for Sunday morning worship during July and August on the first Sunday in September commencing this weekend. Services in July will be held at the Methodist Church, Church Mall, at Academy Green, with the Rev. James Dewart, Methodist pastor, in charge.

Pastor Dewart announced that his sermon topic for the Independence Day weekend will be "For Love of Country," based on the story of the prophet Micah in 1 Kings 22. Micah is accused by Ahab of always predicting evil concerning his reign, but the prophet remains the true patriot even if it means his own death. This, Pastor Dewart said, is the guide for those who love their country today.

Special speakers have been arranged for the month of July, with Mr. Frank X. Coyne, pastor of St. James Roman Catholic Church, as the guest on July 7, and the Rev. Slegert Engle, Southern Baptist missionary, speaking on July 22. Mr. Engle is the son of Gerald and Gertrude Engle, members of the Methodist Church. Pastor Dewart will be available during July for the pastoral needs of Methodists and Presbyterians, with Dr. Bruce Evans of the Presbyterian Church in charge during the month of August. Presbyterians should contact their church office (378-4220), and Methodists theirs, in case of problems.

Unit seeking stamp books

Assuming project collecting trading stamps has been inaugurated by the Woman's Auxiliary of the Presbyterian Church, Division of NYU of the Synod of New Jersey.

The plan is designed to raise $10,000 to refurbish and furnish a room at Madison House as a library. Madison House is one of the two houses operated by the Synod of New Jersey for elderly men and women without regard to race or color. It has been in operation for almost two years, having succeeded the old home which had been located in a former fire station.

According to the program of the auxiliary, Mrs. Richard Hightberger, of Ramsey, trading stamps, a $100,000 unit of the United States and others—preferably by the book, should be turned in at the Presbyterian church to be sent to her. If every church will send in the equivalent of 30 books of stamps, the library will be complete.

All the present time, Mrs. Hightberger noted, there are plenty of books on hand, but no place to put them.

THE STATE WE'RE IN

By David F. Moore North Jersey Conservation Foundation

While statewide attention is riveted on New Jersey's tax structure and legislative action to let an income tax remove part of the municipal dependence on the hoary property tax, I have been intrigued by a conversation with a recent estate man who holds firm views about the need for tax relief in saving open space.

LIBRARY Ionesco in depth

By JOSEPH S. SIMON The Springfield Public Library lists the following titles among the books recently acquired:

A QUEST FOR TRUTH—"Present Past—Past Present," by Eugene Ionesco. Although he was born in Romania, this famous playwright has been living in France since he was 26 years old. His memoirs are, in the main, about his inner self, his opinions and his philosophy. He alludes only cursorily to his childhood in Romania and to his present family life. In his journal, we find him constantly changing from the past to the present, then reversing as he sketches in fragmentary lines and curves his search for truth.

THE CARIBBEAN Community, by Robert D. Craswell. For the purpose of his lengthy study, the high rise of the Caribbean community, there is detailed account of each geographic area, the history of its people, its institutions, its tendency toward modernity and nationalism, and its relationship to other regions and its relationship to the United States.

THE LIFE OF A FARMER, by Robert B. Dunning. Modeste Magny was one of the greatest chefs of Paris during the mid-19th century. This fame as a chef was the result of his own initiative and his own talent.

Words like "reform" and "restructuring" and "the best of the old as well as the best of the young."

Diets is himself one of the young who are bringing what he calls "pragmatic idealism" into politics. At 35, he is the second youngest county chairman in New Jersey. (Only 29-year-old Steve Richards, who heads the Morris County Democratic Party, is younger.)

A graduate of public schools in Jitawh, where he still makes his home, Diets received a bachelor of social science degree from Georgetown University in 1968 and from there into the Navy, serving as an operations officer on destroyer-type ships.

After receiving his discharge, he elected Rutgers Law School, where he is elected national chairman of the law students' national Democratic Party (a younger). "I was the first person on the law school dean to do the job," he said.

Looking beyond next November, he expressed confidence that in the future that Union County will be a swing state. "I'm not sure," he said, "but I think it will be a swing state."

At the 1966 State Constitutional Convention, where he was the youngest delegate, Diets served as chairman of the rules committee. He served as chief counsel to the committee.

Diets is also president of the county "Boy Scout" organization and chairman of the board of the Union County Chapter, National Foundation, March of Dimes.

Children's trips offer variety of summer fun

The Springfield Recreation Department this summer will sponsor four midweek bus-trips for playground children, aged six through 11. Playground leaders and Carol Dreyer, program coordinator, will supervise these outings. These trips have been popular with the children in the past, so some of the popular trips will be repeated and some new ones added.

The outings will start Wednesday with a trip to Wild West City in Wetmore. The bus will leave the Sarah Bailey Civic Center at 10 a.m. Children have been requested to bring back lunches. The fee will pay for the transportation and admission to the event. There are many free activities from the old west all day.

Since the children will be limited to one bus, the permission slips and money (no checks) should come in to the Civic Center as usual. The trip will be in the Recreation office.

The second trip will be Wednesday, July 19, to Old Town Trolley in Highlands, where there is a marine museum. On Aug. 2 they will go to the Environment Center in Bardonia, where the children will go on a hayride.

Children were requested to bring their lunch and pocket money. Permission slips and money for all trips should be in the Recreation office a week in advance of the trip, for children will be accepted on a first come basis.

Springfield's LWV clarifies position on political activity by board members

An announcement this week by the Springfield League of Women Voters declared that the National bylaws of the League of Women Voters state that the league shall not support or oppose any political party or candidate. This policy of non-partisanship has been possible wide public acceptance of League Voter Service information and guidance by LWV Board members.

The following constitute the non-partisanship policy governing the Springfield LWV Board members: 1. Run or hold public office; 2. Hold office in a political party organization; 3. Sign any issue-type petitions if they are against an official LWV position.

Moreover, it is the feeling of the boards of directors of the national and New Jersey leagues that as more and more women are recognized and rewarded for their own activities, the political activities of a board member's husband should not be considered to cast a partisan shadow on the league's non-partisanship image. Therefore, the national LWV Board members have recommended that a husband's political activity should have no bearing on his wife's activities on a local league board of directors.

The Springfield LWV concurs with this recommendation and no longer considers the husband's political activities as a factor in selecting its board members. However, the Springfield League will continue to maintain restrictions on the political activities of its Board members themselves.

As every school child knows, the American system of government is based on checks and balances. In the foreign policy area, this means that the Executive Branch negotiates treaties with other countries, and the treaty must be approved by the Senate.

Outlook for state: Fair
 21 shows on tap this summer

Come to the fair! It's easy and fun. To do in New Jersey, beginning this week with the opening of the first of 21 agricultural fairs scheduled for the 1972 season.

The initial event is the Great Monmouth Fair at Freehold Raceway, which began yesterday and will continue through Sunday. From then on, there will be at least one fair in the Garden State each week until the season winds up with the New Jersey State Fair, Sept. 8 through 17 at the Trenton Fairgrounds.

Exhibits of livestock, poultry, fruits and vegetables, flowers, clothing, foods, handicrafts, farm machinery and a host of commercial and other displays are the mainstay of the fairs. In addition, there are various kinds of contests, parades, shows and amusements.

Most fairs have special attractions for youngsters such as petting zoos and animal kindergartens, pony rides, games and contests.

Good food, usually prepared by local organizations, is another reason for the popularity of New Jersey's fairs, attended by more than one million people last year.

The complete schedule of agricultural fairs in the Garden State in 1972 is as follows:

- July 8-9, Union County 4-H Youth Fair, Scotch Plains.
- July 10-16, Cumberland County Fair, Millersville.
- July 13-15, Bergen County 4-H Fair, Van Saun County Park.

New Jersey's agricultural fairs offer fun for young and old alike and an opportunity to learn more about the rural areas of the state.

According to Warren B. Cook, secretary-treasurer of the Agricultural Fair Association of New Jersey and coordinator of fairs and shows for the State Department of Agriculture, these events offer a unique blend of entertainment and education not duplicated by any other kind of event.

Tenants ask tax reform for disabled

The president of the New Jersey Tenants Organization has urged Governor William T. Cahill to expand his tax reform proposals to that people with 100 percent disability can receive the same benefits as senior citizens on fixed incomes.

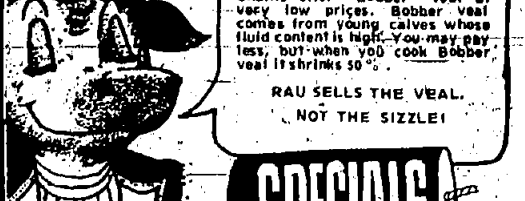

In a letter to Cahill, Martin Aranow said that "the disabled have no lobby and no direct voice in the government. They are in fixed incomes and at the mercy of an inflationary economy and soaring property taxes. These people need help and they should not be overlooked."

Aranow said that "the gains made by senior citizens are one of the highlights of the package that has been obscured by all this rhetoric regarding taxes."

Under the administration's tax reform proposals tenants and homeowners who are senior citizens will receive similar benefits. Currently, only the qualifying homeowner receives a 10 percent tax credit. The administration's proposals call for landlords to furnish tenants with statements that "tax is made up of showing exactly how much of property taxes."

Panic Button 197?

Our expanding population in America will reach 300 million by the year 2000. That means more electric generating stations must be built. In addition, we face an impending energy fuel crisis. If the completion of nuclear energy plants is delayed, we may someday deplete our supply of natural gas, coal, and oil, and dangerously curtail our electric power supplies.

What would be the consequences? Industry and business, without electricity, would slow down. Or shut-down. People would lose their jobs. Blackouts or brownouts would occur with alarming frequency. The sick in our hospitals would be endangered. Our vital recycling facilities would not do their job. Electricity might have to be rationed.

The next time you flick a light switch, give these consequences a thought. Consider this, too. It is public demand for electricity that makes more power plants necessary. And it is a combination of a fuel shortage and our environmental concern that makes it vital that those plants be nuclear-fueled.

Nuclear energy plants are our hope for cleaner skies and purer drinking water for cleaner streams and rivers... for more industry and business... for a better way of life... and our assurance that the light switch won't ever become a panic button.

Free! "Nuclear Energy. What is it all about?" PSEG booklet gives straightforward answers to the important questions on nuclear energy. Mail coupon today for your free copy.

Students from 199 colleges attend UC summer session

Those lazy, crazy, hazy days of summer "Nar" King Cole always loved will feel again this year for 1,400 students enrolled in the Summer Session at Union College.

But the experience of attending classes with students who represent 199 colleges and universities in 25 states, Washington, D.C., Italy, Canada, and Peru, as well as three graduate schools might compensate for any lost vacation time.

The record summer enrollment according to Dr. Bernard Solon, director of the summer session, includes 10 high school students who have been permitted for the first time to take college credit courses. Students from Columbia Law School and Fordham Law School are also enrolled.

As varied as the educational institutions, the students attend for all kinds of reasons for attending summer school, said Dr. Solon.

While there are still a number of students who enroll in summer courses to make up a falling grade, Dr. Solon explains almost three-fourths of the student body now cite other reasons for sitting in a classroom during the summer.

More students than ever want to "speed up" their college education or graduate with two degrees.

Other students want to lighten their course load during the regular academic year to improve their background in a certain area, to take a required course for job certification, or just "to learn."

Union College's regularly-enrolled students comprise about one-third of the summer student body with Union County Technical Institute, biology, engineering, physical

Dr. Warren H. Knicker, chairman of the executive committee of the American Cancer Society said this week in a statement warning county residents against overexposure to the sun in the summer months.

Premium rate hike set for Medicare insurance July 1

The basic premium rate for the medical insurance part of Medicare will increase from $5.80 to $5.90 a month beginning July 1, according to Ralph W. Jones, Social Security district manager in Elizabeth.

The medical insurance part of Medicare helps pay for doctor bills and a variety of other medical expenses for people 65 and over. The program is funded by individual premiums matched by the federal government.

The 20-cent increase in the premium in July compares to a 30-cent increase in 1971 and a 13-cent increase in 1970, Jones said.

"The low increase this year reflects savings in the administration of Medicare as well as lower anticipated medical costs because of the Price Commission's guidelines limiting physicians' fees increases to an average 2 1/2 percent a year," he said.

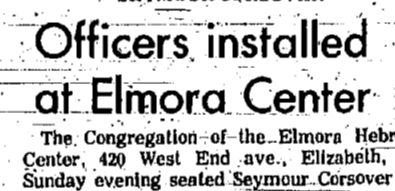

The Medicare law requires an annual review of the cost of the medical insurance program. The premium rate is adjusted to cover the estimated medical expenses of Medicare patients during the 12 months beginning July 1.

The cost of the program was $25 million under estimates made last year, Jones said. "Yet without the Price Commission limit on physicians' fees, it would have been necessary to increase the premium to at least $8 a month."

The medical insurance part of Medicare paid $2 billion in benefits on behalf of 9 1/2 million people in fiscal 1971. Almost everyone 65 and over is enrolled—about 22 million people, according to Jones.

The medical insurance supplements Medicare-Hospital Insurance, which is funded by Social Security contributions, and helps pay for hospital bills and certain follow-up care of people 65 and over.

Medicare is administered by the Social Security Administration of the U.S. Department of Health, Education, and Welfare.

'Volunteer' finds umpiring isn't easy

Erwin Falkenheim, a former staff member of this newspaper, is a freshman umpire in the Livingston Little League in Essex County. Following are some observations by his first year in "the blue."

Erwin Falkenheim, a former staff member of this newspaper, is a freshman umpire in the Livingston Little League in Essex County. Following are some observations by his first year in "the blue."

"That bounced in front of the plate. How can you call it a strike?"
"Time out. What's the rule on that play? I want to protest."
These are the sounds of the Little League sounds that keep echoing hours after a game's sounds a poor "volunteer" umpire hears the players, the coaches and managers, and those parents sitting in the stands who are the judge and jury of your actions.
Why does a suburban father give his time and efforts to help out in a Little League game? I thought I knew the answer.
"Way back in cold, snowy February, I struggled with my 7-year-old to sign him up for his first Little League season. I didn't really want to volunteer. A Little League official pinned me against a wall, put his hand on my throat and asked, with a smile on his lips, "Do you need umpires?"
"You got it, I gasped."
After four two-hour sessions at what's referred to as Umpire's School, I felt I was ready for anything. After all, hadn't I watched these big league umpires do their stuff on television? Nothing I did myself. The manager probably knew less about the rules than I do.
"I was all set. They gave me the shirt with 'Umpire' sewn on one sleeve, the official rule book which I read during coffee breaks at the office, a strike ball indicator, and a little blue beanie.
"If you're going to be an umpire, at least look like one," the umpire-in-chief said.
So, I bought a pair of dark blue trousers and black creased shoes out of my own pocket. My big day came.
"Falkenheim, you're behind the plate in the Hayes-Jays game. Get your equipment."
My heart began to beat faster. To get in condition, I took a longer than usual drive on my cigarette. I looked at my watch and noticed I was ten minutes late.
"Grab a face mask and chest protector, and trot out to the field—to the chasers of no one at bat."
"He was safe," yelled the parents of the team at bat.
"How could anybody see on my side, so the game continued."
"Everything was going along nicely until the top of the sixth. I was still calling them high and low. My glasses came off, however. I took off the mask, and now both managers were growling at me. At least they weren't yelling.
"But it was the calm before the storm.
"There was a man on third. The batter hit the ball right down the third-base line. In my judgment the ball hit the runner after the third baseman tried to make a play.
"I called it a fair ball.
"Out of the corner of my eye, I saw the defensive team's manager catapult from the dugout like a jet of a career.
"Interference, interference!" he yelled. "Interference, interference!"
The ball's demerit—the runner's out—he screamed into his ear.
"Discretion is the better part of valor, so I kept my mask and chest protector on."
"According to the rules, that's a fair ball." I yelled back, saying the official rule book at him.
"Lucky for me, I was the only one who had a rule book."
"The rule book interpretation says it's not interference," I said.
"Just mark the runner as if I protest the game," the manager said, faking his face, peering into the recesses of my mask.
The light was fading and I told him we'd better get the game going or the six innings would never be played.
"We're playing this game under protest," by said.
"So you're not?" I said. "A subsequent play was made and the rules say a protest must be lodged before another play is pitched."
"Murmuring under his breath, he walked back to the dugout.
"Right or wrong, the protest was thrown out after a somewhat heated argument behind the backstop bar the following Saturday, between the umpire-in-chief, the president of the league and a few kibitzers.
"I had the honor of umpiring in the first protested game of the season.
"I must have been on my mind when I was umpiring on the bases several days later.
"I gave the 'safe' sign, called the runner out, and we were off.
"He was out," yelled the parents of the opposing team.
"No protest here," I thought. This will be a breeze. It turned out to be more like a hurricane. How did I know that sometime else read the rule book?
"Play ball," I cried, in my most authoritative sounding voice.
I positioned myself behind the catcher the beat I could. The face mask obscured my vision somewhat.

It was about five minutes into the game when the murning started.
"He's calling them low."
"They're calling them high."
"Hey, ump! Get a new pair of glasses."
A runner on third dashed home on a hit ball. The pitcher folded the ball and threw it high, it tipped off the mask but his glasses went flying to the backstop. It was a close play. I squeaked.
"Safe!" I yelled.
"Safe?" yelled back the winning manager, who came storming out of the dugout.
"That's right. He was safe, and you didn't call time out," said I.
"He was out," yelled the parents of the opposing team.
"You're safe," Jack Conlon started this way?

Executive director appointed by Voluntary Action Center

William D. Stiefers of Berkeley Heights has been appointed executive director of the Union County Voluntary Action Center. Mrs. W. Putnam Livingston, VAC president, announced this week.

Stiefers, who holds degrees from Wake Forest College and Syracuse University, previously taught at the International School of Geneva, Switzerland and served as a psychiatric social worker at Fitzsimons General Hospital, Denver, Colo. While in Denver, he coordinated the Adult Education Program for the "Opportunities Industrialization Center."

The Voluntary Action Center recently received a $33,000 grant from the National Center for Voluntary Action to develop and execute training programs for volunteer workers in Union County and to further develop the grantsman program to search out governmental and foundation funds for local social service agencies.

The VAC offices are located together with the Union County Office at 691 Bayway Ave., Elizabeth, phone 353-7184.

Stiefers said, "The objective of the Union County Voluntary Action Center is to increase and improve volunteer service throughout Union County. The diverse population of the county will enable VAC to represent all people. Prospective volunteers will eventually be placed with local private and public social service agencies, as well as with VAC itself. We shall be working very closely with the agencies to understand their needs.

"This will also aid in the successful and satisfying placement of volunteers. Volunteering in this area has been an untapped resource. VAC's aim is to release this potential and to encourage utilization of it. Volunteering will give individuals an opportunity for self-growth and community service. It will give local agencies increased volunteer manpower to accomplish their goals. The result will be a better Union County—something we all want."
