

Rutgers studies impact of lagoon developments

The environmental impact on New Jersey's coastal wetlands of lagoon developments—homes built along channels dredged into the shore—is under study by two Rutgers professors.

"We have completed a physical inventory of the 15,000 homes in these developments and distributed a questionnaire to a representative sample of owners," said George Niswand, assistant professor of environmental resources at the College of Agriculture and Environmental Science.

"Population pressures mean continuing demand for this type of home with immediate access to the water," Dr. Niswand said, "especially in Ocean County, where more than 50 percent of these developments are located."

"Replacing natural waterways and marshland with dredged lagoon systems affects circulation patterns. Water tends to stand in the lagoons and does not circulate readily. Thus pollution tends to be retained in the canals rather than being dispensed to Barnegat Bay and the ocean."

About one-third of the homes are not yet connected to a sewer system, and this aggravates pollution problems, Dr. Niswand noted.

"More than a third of the residents questioned mentioned pollution and sewage disposal as major difficulties," according to Calvin Stillman, professor of environmental resources at the college, "and 16 per cent mentioned population growth or overdevelopment."

"We were somewhat surprised, therefore, to find that only 5 percent said they planned to sell their homes, either in the near future or when their children grow up. Despite some grumbling, the great majority evidently consider their homes a good buy. They also seemed to feel that summer congestion, although objectionable, was still much less than in neighboring seaside resorts."

The questionnaire found that 72 per cent of families lived in the developments year-round and that 40 percent of the summer residents planned to live there permanently after retirement.

"Because of the large percentage of retirees, the typical resident tended to be older than average, with fewer children," Dr. Stillman said. "The median income, though, was placed at somewhere between $15,000 and $20,000. The majority had purchased their homes during the sixties."

As might be expected, the most popular recreational activities for both permanent and summer residents were swimming, motor boating, fishing, rest and relaxation, and crabbing and shellfishing.

"Our subjects' impressions were of a very pleasant life down there," Dr. Stillman summed up. "Yet there definitely are clouds on the horizon. Ocean County's population nearly doubled from 1960 to 1970, and only tight money in the mortgage market has slowed home building in the last couple of years. There are still large tracts of shore frontage with the potential for future development."

"Our research is continuing," Dr. Niswand said, "and eventually will include reports on water quality and marine life. But in the meantime we hope that action will continue through the political process to conserve much of New Jersey's wetlands for their environmental values."

Both researchers emphasized their desire to talk with interested persons in the shore communities where lagoon developments have been built.

4 new exhibitions open this month at Montclair Museum

Four new exhibitions scheduled to open at the Montclair Art Museum this month will continue through the holiday season—the Monotype, the Christmas Story in Art, the Beardsley Limerick and Contemporary Chinese Paintings by Chuang Cha.

"The Monotype: An Edition of One," opening Sunday, Dec. 3, shows a printing medium which produces only one transfer of an image, a "unique print." The medium is revealed through the work of four American artists: Maurice Prendergast, Abraham Walkowitz, Milton Avery, and Matt Phillips.

The art of the monotype has had many practitioners since the first known one was created in the 17th Century by Benedetto Castiglione, a Genoese etcher and painter. The artists represented in this exhibition were selected because they produced a considerable number of monotypes, not simply occasional works, and because, according to Matt Phillips who wrote the introduction to the catalogue, "they were all painters for whom monotypes were a direct outgrowth of their painterly style."

The exhibition is drawn from private collections in this country and is circulated through the Smithsonian Institution. It will remain on view through Jan. 7.

"The Christmas Story in Art," opening Dec. 10, is a display of early European altar paintings and sculptures from the Montclair Art Museum collections. Large Flemish, Ambrosian and Royal Bavarian tapestries hung on the gallery walls will complement the Nativity art. Medieval carols, Gregorian Christmas music sung by the King's College Choir, and other recordings will provide a background of Gothic and Renaissance music for the exhibition. "The Christmas Story" will remain on view through Jan. 21.

"The Beardsley Limerick," an exhibition organized by the Abby Aldrich Rockefeller Folk Art Collection in Hamdenburg, Va., opens Dec. 17 and continues through the end of the year. The works of an unknown 19th Century artist who has been named for his portrait of Mr. and Mrs. Elizabeth Barrett Browning, the "Contemporary Chinese Paintings" will be on view from Dec. 17 through Jan. 28. The paintings are the work of the young Chinese artist Chuang Cha, who is professor of art at Tsinghua University.

Bible Society sets exhibit of paintings

Watercolors by American artist Cecil Johnson will be exhibited at the American Bible Society, 180 Broadway, New York, from Dec. 11 through Jan. 10.

A wide variety of subjects is included in the show. One of the larger watercolors, "Honey," depicts a woman with a roof of nails. This small boat, which is the home of many fishermen and their families in the Far East, is typical of those which the Bible Society workers visit with the Scriptures.

Mrs. Johnson's watercolors will be on view in the second floor gallery of Bible House, New York headquarters of the non-profit American Bible Society.

It will be open to the public free of charge, Monday through Friday, except holidays, from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Spots open in Marines' reserve unit

New Jersey's largest Marine Corps Reserve unit, the 1st Motor Transport Battalion of Middletown, announced this week that it has openings for reservists. The unit offers learning how to be radio operators, electricians and auto mechanics.

Marine Corps training, depending on the course selected, is conducted at Camp Lejeune, N.C., Parris Island, S.C., or San Diego. The Reserve Center is located at 230 Mountain ave., Middletown. Information is available by calling 469-5227.

Most Marine Corps Reservists enter a six-month active duty program which takes them through the same boot camp, infantry training and specialty schools as regular Marines. Each summer the Marine Reservists test their readiness during two weeks summer camp. Once having completed the six month active duty program, Reservists attend scheduled drills one weekend each month for which they are paid.

Scripture goal

By 1980 half a billion copies of Scriptures will be needed to reach new readers, youth and non-readers among the world's population of 4,666,000,000 persons, according to the Rev. Warner A. Hulshamn, a deputy general secretary of the American Bible Society and a world service officer of the United Bible Societies.

EARLY COPY Publicity Chairman are urged to observe the Friday deadline for when their spots open. Include your name, address and phone number.

LOOKING AT LAGOONS — George Niswand, assistant professor of environmental resources at the Rutgers College of Agriculture and Environmental Science, points out the location of New Jersey's lagoon developments, built along channels dredged into the shoreline of Barnegat Bay and Little Egg Harbor. Niswand and Calvin Stillman (right) are investigating the ecological effects of these developments.

Booklet on holiday bird

It's time to talk turkey. The booklet also lists the internal temperature that a roast turkey is thoroughly cooked.

Must reading for anyone cooking a Christmas dinner is a booklet from the U.S. Department of Agriculture, available for 20 cents from Consumer Product Information, Washington, D.C. 20497.

In the how-to-buy section of the booklet, Agricultural Research Service specialists recommend turkeys marked "Fryer-roaster, young hen" or "tom" for roasting and advise the consumer to look for the official USDA inspection and grade mark on the poultry. A table shows the number of servings per pound from the various forms of turkey as well as from a pound of chicken, duckling and goose. Turkey like other poultry items is very perishable and needs care in storage, cooking and handling of leftovers. Detailed instructions are given for thawing frozen poultry in the refrigerator, in cold water or at room temperature. A frozen 23-pound turkey needs four days to thaw in a refrigerator before cooking for about seven hours.

To help take the guess work out of when the turkey is done, a table shows approximate roasting times for various sizes and forms of turkey and resolution.

Just a paper lioness Reporter joins a varsity workout

By KAREN STOLL

The 15 young women who make up the first girls' varsity basketball team formed at Jonathan Dayton Regional High School in Springfield only are not athletically skilled, but are also extremely charitable.

They recently allowed a 14th team "member" to spend the day with them. Their athletic ability was demonstrated during two hours of fast-paced drills and scrimmages. The girls' varsity basketball team, who collapsed on the floor after the first drill, were "helped" by their "volunteer" who was a member of the varsity team.

My little volunteer, I thought, would be a little easier, since the girls were only doing exercises. So I donned a pair of jeans, sneakers and my husband's sweatshirt (bearing a large red "O") and ventured into the girls' gym, only to be caught up in a thundering group beginning a five-lap run around the room, a very large room, indeed. I lagged along behind, and surprisingly, completed all the laps. But when I sank down on a mat to congratulate myself on my feat, my pride was soon deflated. As I sat there panting, the girls were already moving three and benches into place for the next exercise.

When the benches were set up, some girls began jumping over them, sideways, as easily as if they were stepping on them. One of the best times I was chosen for a basketball scrimmage. I got hit in the nose with the ball and had to be taken to the nurse's office.

Seminar to brief possible enemies in race for board

The Springfield Board of Education this week announced it will hold a meeting on "Understanding and Responsibility" next Thursday, Dec. 14, at 8 p.m. in the cafeteria of the Florence Gaudinier School. The meeting is planned to present to all those who are interested in running for election to the board the various aspects of board membership.

The items of three school board members explore this winter. Two of them, Ruth Weisman and Anton Campasella, have announced that they will not seek reelection. The third, Seymour Margulies, has indicated he has not reached a decision. Jan. 4 is the deadline for candidates to file petitions to run for the job.

In announcing the meeting, Mrs. Weisman, the board president, stated: "We are interested in encouraging candidates for election to the board. Because we believe that many people are not aware of the legal qualifications for board membership and are not familiar with the requirements for local participation on the board, we have scheduled this informational meeting for all those interested in seeking board membership."

The requirements set by law for candidates for election to the board are as follows:

1. A member of any board of education must be a citizen, a resident of the district for at least two years immediately preceding the election or appointment, and able to read and write.

2. A board member may not receive compensation for his services nor may he be interested directly or indirectly in any contract with or claim against the board.

"Beyond this, there are the requirements of a willingness to work hard, an availability for evening meetings, and a determination to spend decisions for the benefit of all the students of Springfield."

Gas tank leak is traced, explosion threat averted

Gasoline leaking from a tank in an Essex service station found its way into the sanitary sewer system in the industrial area of Springfield Tuesday morning, causing heavy fumes throughout the area and posing the danger of extensive explosions.

A fire department spokesman said a report was received at 8:30 a.m. from an employee of Riglow Components at 74 Diamond ave., complaining of a "very strong odor" in the building. Firemen reported to the scene and called in additional units, including volunteers, to investigate the potentially hazardous situation.

The spokesman said the firm used a detection meter which analyzes air fumes and indicates the possibility of explosion. He said all initial readings "were in the danger zone."

Most of the buildings in the area ceased operations because of the danger. Those which stayed open were told to shut off their electrical systems to lessen the danger of sparks igniting fumes; employees were also told to stop smoking. Exhaust fans were turned on to alleviate "the nauseating odor."

At first, it appeared the gasoline had flowed through a sewer tank line from Westfield, but investigation proved it to be confined to the Springfield district south of Rt. 22. It was eventually traced to a tank at the Essex station on Chandler road and S. Springfield avenue.

A fire department official said the tank had probably ruptured and the gasoline seeped in the sewer. He surmised the tank had been

Board will appoint citizen committees for 4 high schools

By ARNER GOLD

The Regional High School Board of Education Tuesday night approved a plan to name a citizens' advisory committee for each of its four high schools. At its meeting at Jonathan Dayton Regional High School, the board voted general approval for the plan while leaving specific implementation until after the first of the year.

The resolution, as presented by Soya Dorsky of Springfield, left details of naming the committees to be worked out separately for each of the four schools. Dr. Donald Marchant, superintendent of schools, told the board that the committee for the plan while leaving specific implementation until after the first of the year.

The board also reported that it will soon complete and make public individual "profiles" for the four schools, listing each school's makeup and the academic achievements of its graduates. A copy of the profiles is enclosed with each transcript of a student's record sent with a college entrance application.

Two of the three school board members whose terms expire this winter said that they could not yet state definitely whether or not they will seek reelection.

Natalie Waldt of Springfield, board president, said she will make her plans known within the next week. Dr. Minor C. K. Jones of Mountaineer commented that he is "considering" another term. John E. Casir of Garwood stated that he will seek reelection. Deadline for candidates to file petitions is Dec. 28.

PUBLIC SERVANTS

We note with great interest the article on the front page announcing that the Springfield Board of Education will hold a seminar next week to provide background information for all citizens interested in running for election in February as members of the board.

With three seats on the local board to be filled this winter, and one post on the Regional High School school board, anyone with convictions about the future of education in Springfield owes it to himself or herself and to his or her neighbors to consider entering the competition.

The job, on either board, calls for long hours, constant public criticism (sometimes verging on abuse) and an endless series of hard decisions about what is best for our young people. The pay is consistent and the responsibilities are limitless.

Still, service on a school board in Springfield is often habit-forming. And the community has been blessed with the consistently high quality of its board members.

As an environmentalist, sometimes I'm confused with the problem of being for something and against it at the same time. For example, I can be against the construction of a sewer line that runs in stream banks, but simultaneously be in favor of the sewer line itself because it will help solve the pollution problem in the stream.

The guidelines call for some strict construction procedures to minimize environmental impact. One section calls for the preparation of environmental plans and specifications by anybody who is planning to build a sewer line.

Such plans are designated "critical impact studies" and also include slopes of more than 15 percent, estuaries, natural or man-made subsurface drainage features, areas of high water tables, soils which are highly acidic or erodible, or which have adverse mineral conditions, and mature stands of native vegetation.

These critical impact areas are to be avoided, but in the event that a sewer can't be avoided, the contractor must do what he can to reduce its impact on the environment.

Pupils record adventures in the field Find Deserted Village filled with signs of life

The article which follows was written by James Greener, Shari Brown, Nancy Katz, John Nugent, Steven Kessler, Craig Clineker, Karen Goldberg, Lisa Rosen, Ellen Levine, Baina Herzoff, Michele Gist, Jill Brenner, Madelyn Modell and Stephen Klein, fifth graders at the Edward Walton School, Springfield, who recently went on a field trip to the deserted village in Berkeley Heights.

On a brisk Friday in November, Judith Isakson's, Eunice Samer's and William Vetter's fifth grade class left from the Edward Walton School. They were headed for the Hinton County Outdoor Education Center in Berkeley Heights. This was their first field trip of the year.

The emithology group first learned how to use binoculars by watching birds from the porch. They saw bluejays, a black-capped chickadee, a downy woodpecker and many others. In the field, John Ard spotted a red-tailed hawk with a six-foot wingspan. All together they spotted eight different birds.

During pond life, the boys and girls went to Hermit's Pond and, using nets, fished for water insects, small animals and plants. They learned that the pond is in a dead volcano. It never freezes because it is springfed and is not polluted.

In studying "Our Good Earth," Ellen Levine, Ronald Resnick, Stephen Klein, Alan Effron and Lesley Lefkowitz did the acid tests to find out what the soil was like. The soil samples turned different colors because of the layers and the places from which they were taken. The group learned that all of nature's natural litter is put back in the earth and reused over and over again.

Anna Neale's survival course for the classes was challenging. Each person had a chance to learn when to go on a hike, what to bring, how to make a shelter and how to make a fire, all of which made a fun-filled morning. They were told never to hike alone, to always tell someone where they are going and what time they would be back. Mrs. Neale showed the classes how to get water from a grapevine. She told them that if the vines have a milky liquid they shouldn't drink it. If it isn't milky they can drink it.

In building a fire, they had to clear out a spot, put logs 10 feet away from the middle, cross kneeling both ways and put tinder in the middle. Next, they built a shelter after finding a tree with V-shaped branches. Two teams took giant sticks and put them against the tree. When it was covered with leaves they had a very nice shelter.

This trip was arranged so the classes could learn what outdoor life is like. The leaders showed everyone how the animals get their food and shelter. Some of the groups learned how to care for themselves should they camp at some time. The trip was very educational for the students and teachers. All are looking forward to participating in different activities planned for their visit next spring.

Rt. 78 job bids sought

The N.J. Department of Transportation will receive bids Dec. 14 on a construction contract for Interstate Rt. 78 at the Newark Airport Interchange between the Waverly Viaduct and the New Jersey toll plaza.

The 1.2-mile contract will complete paving of the interchange roadways between the Waverly Viaduct and the Newark Airport Interchange. This will permit the New Jersey Turnpike Authority to open its new airport terminals by July 1 by providing direct connections between the Turnpike and the new airport facilities.

The work is part of the planned construction by the department to complete the huge network of highways at the interchange. Highways connecting the network include Route 78, U.S. 1 & 9, 21 and 22 and the New Jersey Turnpike. Construction on this contract will be staged so the first phase can be completed next summer.

The entire contract is scheduled for completion in October 1975. The state and federal governments, the New Jersey Turnpike Authority will participate in the cost.

The 178 portion of the work, representing about 87 percent of the cost, will be financed with 30 percent federal and 70 percent state funds. The Port Authority and the Turnpike Authority have become connections are needed to the new airport terminals, will share the remaining estimated 13 percent of the cost.

2 break-entries reported to police

Two break and entries were reported to Springfield police during the past week, one at a private residence and another at a building used by the Ballatour Golf Club.

Police said a resident of High Point drive notified them Saturday morning that sometime during the night her home had been broken into, entrance reportedly being gained by forcing open a rear door to a laundry room. Several articles of jewelry missing, but later said they had been found.

On Sunday, the assistant manager of Ballatour reported that a house at the end of Hillside avenue had been broken into, but he found nothing missing. Someone, however, did make off with a club, trap and apparently went for a joyride on the club grounds. The vehicle was later discovered stuck in a culvert, its windshield had been broken.

Ten persons who did appear received fines for a variety of violations. The highest penalty was a total of $100 for driving on Morris avenue, Springfield. His summons had been issued on Morris avenue for misuse of license plates and for being an unlicensed driver.

Vaughn of 44 Fieldstone dr., Springfield, who paid a fine of $30. A fine of $15 was given to Daniel C. McCallough of Summit for improper passing on Shunpike road.

In other court action, Edward M. Damino of Roselle Park was fined $25 for allowing an unlicensed driver to operate his car on Lawrenceville in Douglas. Farley of West Orange, charged with using loud and abusive language, paid $15.

Blacks, Irish only ones to fight back
Sociologist studies minority group reactions

Blacks and Irish had the same riot style at different times in U.S. history — a style strongly in contrast with that of any other minority group. And the sociologist who discovered this fact, James O'Keane, associate professor and department chairman at Drew University, Madison, thinks it may be a key to understanding and possibly preventing civil disorder arising from ethnic differences in the future.

JAMES O'KEANE

O'Keane sees clues to an explanation of the fact in the history and style of the riots as well as in socio-cultural parallels between Irish and black experience.

All items other than spot news should be in our office by noon on Friday.

School boards unit to meet Saturday, act on resolutions

Representatives of New Jersey's boards of education will consider nearly 30 resolutions that touch on a variety of issues confronting public education in the state at the semi-annual Delegates Meeting of the New Jersey School Boards Association on Saturday at the Bordentown Regional High School, Bordentown. One resolution calls for NSBA to support a program for the financial support of public education which includes such items as: 1) collection of property taxes on non-residential property, 2) a contribution by the state-owned land, buildings, and property, 3) contributions by quasi-public authorities on property held by the state, 4) distribution by the state of the above taxes and contributions to boards, 5) collection by boards of property taxes on residential property, and 6) equalization through additional state and federal aid to districts with special educational problems. Another seeks repeal of the legislation that allows school nurses holding a standard school nurse certificate to be paid according to the teachers' salary guide. Others ask the NSBA to seek legislation incorporating hazard in the formula for state transportation aid, to petition the Legislature to provide financial relief for school districts in which the government is permitting real and tax-free occupancy on federal property, and to develop another dual category for non-operating districts. Interim and final committee reports will be submitted by their chairmen in the areas of transportation, capital construction, special education, teacher tenure, educational finance, and rapidly growing school districts.

Emergency vehicle to help newborn arrives at Newark's Beth Israel

A flashing light atop a shiny, new ambulance marked the first day of the "Beth Israel Hanukkah" and "Newborn Emergency" for the parents of New Jersey infants as yet unborn. The $10,000 vehicle, a Newborn Emergency Transport, was donated to Newark Beth Israel Medical Center by the League for Children, Inc., an arm of the United Order of Fraternal Sisters, Fidelity-Holds No. 26. It will be used to transport sick infants to the Medical Center's half-million dollar newborn Special Care Unit from referring hospitals in seven counties. The decision to purchase the transport came about when officers of the service organization called at the Medical Center to make payment on a $1,000 grant for pediatric cardiology research and were taken on a tour of the modern neonatal unit which was officially opened on Oct. 1st. Lester M. Bornstein, executive director, and Dr. Ilana Zarufo, director of Neonatology, spoke of the hope that, before too long, an especially equipped transport for carrying critically ill infants could be purchased, noting that several times each week babies are referred to the unit. Bornstein also noted that such a vehicle could serve a dual purpose since it could be used to transport cancer patients to the Medical Center's Organ Preservation Laboratory from donor hospitals. The new ambulance contains a battery-powered transport laette, which maintains constant warmth during the period the infant is being moved from the mother's hospital to the seventh floor of Newark Beth Israel Medical Center.

Dr. Zarufo estimates that as many as 250 infants might be transported to the Medical Center in any one year. In most cases, these babies will need to be transported back to their "mother" hospitals once the life-threatening emergency is past. The transport was turned over to Bornstein, Dr. Zarufo and Dr. Jules Tittelbaum on the first day of Hanukkah, Friday, Dec. 1, by Mrs. Aaron Stein, president of Fidelity-Holds No. 26, Mrs. Herman Ritsack, president of the League for Children, and Mrs. Simon Shar, chairman of the league. Newark Beth Israel Medical Center, a voluntary, non-profit institution, is a member of the Jewish Community Council of Essex County, a beneficiary of the annual United Jewish Appeal campaign and a member agency of the United Way of Essex and West Hudson.

LIFE SAVING HANUKAH GIFT — Dr. Ilana Zarufo, director of neonatology at Newark Beth Israel Medical Center, is shown in the photo above explaining the procedure for moving a critically ill newborn infant to members of the Medical Center's safety and security division. The men will be on 24-hour alert to drive a Newborn Emergency Transport which was donated in honor of Hanukkah by the United Order of Fraternal Sisters, Fidelity-Holds No. 26, League for Children, Inc.

Infant mortality lowered Jersey men by maternal care project to hold mart and party

Newark, with one of the highest rates of infant mortality and morbidity in the country, has been given a chance for significant health and social gains through a federally-funded project. Maternal and Infant Care (MIC) located at 877 Broad St., deals with the prenatal and postnatal care of young women who are under 18 years old and considered high risk cases because of their youth. The project, with a staff of physicians and nurses, offers what amounts to a second home for young and usually frightened women deemed "trouble" by society. Through the health care of the project is delivery of healthy babies, the service includes health education and information stretching from mother and child care through family planning. All these areas are covered extensively, and young women who choose MIC discover that their new-found knowledge opens a brighter world to them. Legislation to fund Maternal and Infant Care Projects across the country was enacted by Congress in 1965, first implemented in 1967, and can be traced back to President John F. Kennedy's program to fight mental retardation. The Newark program was administered by the State Board of Health, but in July 1971 was transferred to the College of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey—Newark Medical School.

Homicide probes depend on science Experts conduct seminar for police in Linden

With landmark court rulings and new legal interpretations constantly influencing the mechanics of law enforcement, the emphasis of investigations has shifted to the scientific approach and accumulation of first-rate evidence. That was the thrust of the Second New Jersey Homicide Investigation Seminar conducted last week by the Prosecutor's Supervisory Section of the State's Criminal Justice Division. The five-day course was held at the Humble Oil and Refining Co., Linden, and attracted 270 police officers from throughout the northern New Jersey area. 2 of Union County's municipalities were represented, also on hand were officials from the Union County Prosecutor's Office and the State Police. On the seminar faculty were experts from various states, each specializing in a particular field. Clayton E. Cronin, project director, was asked about the location of the seminar and responded, "From where I now stand, more homicides are committed within a 25-mile radius than anywhere else in the state." Cronin is chief of the Prosecutor's Supervisory Section. Project Manager was Robert C. Ward, captain of county detectives for the County Prosecutor's Office. Coordinator was James F. Mulvihill, Deputy Attorney General from the Division of Criminal Justice.

The individual seminars covered a realm of topics: natural death with minor injuries, time of death, identification of human remains, dental identification, asphyxia (lack of oxygen), injury by gunfire, stabbing and cutting, blunt force injury, arson deaths and burned bodies, the battered child, narcolepsy and crime, the road traffic victim, sex crimes, forensic aspects of alcohol relating to crime, photography in crime investigation, collection and preservation of evidence, vehicle accidents (blisters and reddening) are prime considerations... the dimensions of the human skeleton do change during adult life, and using 14 anthropometric measurements, there is one chance in 80 million of finding an exactly identical person. The course ended with State Attorney General George F. Kugler Jr. making final remarks and presenting certificates to officers who completed the course. Others on hand were Union County Prosecutor Karl Aesch and Evan W. Johns of the Criminal Justice Division. Fred Westphal, Humble Refinery manager, welcomed the officers last week and Cronin cited the refinery for its facilities and efforts in making the seminar a success. The faculty included State Medical Examiner, Dr. Edwin H. Ahrens and such national authorities in the field of forensic medicine and the scientific investigation of crime as Dr. Werner U. Spitz, Chief Medical Examiner of Wayne County, Michigan; Dr. Patrick R. Beaman-Matthews, Major, M.C., U.S. Army, chief, Wound Ballistics Section, Forensic Sciences Division, Armed Forces Institute of Pathology; Dr. Peter Lipkovic, Assistant Medical Examiner of Maryland; Dr. Halbert E. Fillingim, Deputy Chief Medical Examiner of Philadelphia; Dr. Paul Schweda, toxicologist, Maryland; Dr. Irwin M. Sopher, Lt. Col. M.C., U.S. Army, Aerospace Pathology Branch, Armed Forces Institute of Pathology; Chief, Forensic Sciences Division, Armed Forces Institute of Pathology, Union County Captain Charles J. Stahl, III, U.S. Navy; Chief, Forensic Sciences Division, Armed Forces Institute of Pathology, Union County and Robert C. Ward, captain of county detectives, 600.

CRIME LAB — Examining equipment and facilities in the mobile county crime lab van are Clinton Cronin, left, chief of the Prosecutor's Supervisory Section, Division of Criminal Justice, and Robert C. Ward, captain of county detectives. Both men helped formulate the Homicide Investigation Seminar in Linden last week. Available to departments throughout the county, 24 hours every day, the lab gathers evidence and does minor testing at crime sites. Acquired in February, the lab has answered dozens of calls and been to 18 murders. The mobile lab is operated by the Union County Prosecutor's office.

UCTI registrar gained success as mother, too

Her Shirley Alper is an example of a woman fulfilling her own personal goals while raising a happy family. Mrs. Alper, who was recently appointed registrar at Union County Technical Institute, has previously earned two degrees and gained related experience while being a mother of three children.

In her new position as registrar, Mrs. Alper is responsible for keeping all official transcripts and files of students. She has enrolled in UCTI's business, engineering, and health fields. Mrs. Alper is a big job. Mrs. Alper is very excited about it. She is working with people on a one-to-one basis and this position provides the kind of flexibility where I can meet.

Thurs. day bridge offered at temple

American contract bridge players are held every Thursday at 8 p.m. at Temple Shalom, 50 Springfield Ave., Springfield, N.J. Mrs. Alper is the mother of three—a son, 21, at the University of Pennsylvania; a daughter, 16, at the Maryland Institute of Art, and another son, 12.

Mrs. Alper and her family enjoy the hectic pace and varied interests of each member of the family but at times do retreat to their hideaway—a house set "deep in the woods" of the Poconos. "Until recently, we didn't even have a phone. It was beautiful," Mrs. Alper commented.

Of Hog Wallow and 'craneberries'

Rutgers scientist studies Pine Barrens crop

From the bogs in the Pine Barrens to the Christmas dinner table on an early spring evening, the cranberry is a crop that is not aquatic plants, live underwater for at least a third of the year in New Jersey.

The berries here in New Jersey come from places with names like Hog Wallow, Double Trouble, Ugly Lake, Otter Pond and Friends. But the names have a backwoods sound to them, the growing of cranberries in 1972 is a complex and sophisticated affair.

A Rutgers scientist who loves the Pine Barrens and has spent a good many of his research years in the cranberry bogs explains why this crop for which New Jersey's production is third in the nation — is a little different from growing, say, potatoes.

He is Philip E. Marucci, research professor of entomology at the Rutgers College of Agriculture and Environmental Science, whose studies are conducted at the College's Cranberry and Blueberry Research Center at Owego.

Consider the diked bogs, the reservoir of floodwater, the intricate system of ditches, dams and sluice gates, Prof. Marucci suggests. Consider the frost warning systems which hopefully will lead a grower to the right time to harvest, say, potatoes.

One bit of assistance to the insects has come from the standard practice among cranberry growers of removing the floodwater briefly whenever the dissolved oxygen content of the water fell too low.

The idea was that the cranberry vines would be damaged if they didn't get a breath of air. Unfortunately, this gave the insects — a group of leafrollers called "fireworms" because of the way their ravages look — a needed breath of air also.

"It's dangerous work, too, getting out there on a frozen dike in midwinter to drain and reflood a bog," Prof. Marucci notes.

So the entomologist — and his principal technician, Harry J. Muller, decided to see just what would happen to both the cranberries and the fireworms if they were left under water that had very little oxygen.

On an experimental bog, they boxed in sections of flooded cranberry vines, along with the pictures of the bog.

East Winds, Rutgers research professor, has been helping get rid of cranberry insects by drawing them.

What they didn't expect was the lack of any damaging effects on the cranberries.

In the spring, the vines that had been enclosed blossomed out just as well as those on the open bog.

"The pale pink blossoms, in silhouette, have a long graceful curved shape that resembles the neck of a crane, and this has given rise to their name — 'cranberry,' later shortened to 'cranberry,'" Prof. Marucci explains.

"All the important cranberry insects have adapted to living under the winter floodwater," he points out. "That a few species of insects have been able to do this is a remarkable feat." Still, underwater survival isn't easy for insects. If there were a way to make it still harder, Prof. Marucci knew, it would cut down on the need for using pesticides in the summer — and that would be a bonus for the grower as well as for the environment.

HOW MUCH, DEPENDS ON WHEN YOU CALL.

Save by dialing!

Save more by dialing during bargain hours!

Save most by not calling person-to-person!

With dialing direct so easy and convenient, it makes sense to dial all calls yourself. Because the rates are always lower than for calls requiring the services of an operator, such as credit card, collect, third number billed, person-to-person, and coin-phone calls to other states.

There's also a low 1-minute rate on direct-dialed calls after 11 p.m. every night.

While we've only shown sample rates to other states, there are savings on direct-dialed calls within New Jersey, too. And additional savings during bargain calling times on New Jersey calls over 25 miles.

Direct dialing rates also apply to all calls made from areas where direct dialing facilities are not available.

Brigantine Inlet subject of university study

An environmental study is currently occupying the time of three Fairleigh-Dickinson University Florham-Madison campus students pioneering under the university's Public Administration Internship.

The three students — Anthony Charletta of Union, William Rittschot of South Berkeley Heights and Norman Van Broekhoven of Hamilton — are earth science majors working on specific projects under the New Jersey Brigantine Inlet Environmental Study for the N.J. Department of Environmental Protection's Bureau of Geology and Topography.

Under the direction of state geologist Dr. George Helms-Kin, the students are currently gathering data, using trends in past history, and will develop a report on their findings to ultimately aid in the prediction of the future of the inlet. The reports will be used by the Department of Environmental Protection for planning future development and/or conservation of the area.

Van Broekhoven and Rittschot will report on the development and predicted changes in the beach and dune area at Brigantine Inlet. Using navigation charts dating from the 1700's to the present, descriptions of the channel and beach characteristics abstracted from history books of the area, and vertical aerial photos from the 1960's to the present, the two students can observe changes in shape and size of the beach and channel with time.

Charletta is preparing a water current intensity survey of Brigantine Inlet involving the plotting of current intensity measurements from the surface to the bottom of several channels and using recent navigation charts to delineate areas of maximum erosion, sedimentation, sub-surface and sand transport.

THE STUDENTS ATTEND monthly meetings of the Water Resources Seminar and report regularly with Dr. Widmer and Dr. G. Boyer, assistant professors of earth sciences at the Florham-Madison campus. Dr. Justus and Dr. Boyer have both expressed enthusiasm for the internship in the fact that the students will be able to better determine their own research interests in the field of public administration.

Thursday-December 7, 1972 PSE&G requesting greater increases; PUC hearing today

The last of three hearings will be held this morning beginning at 10 at the Public Utilities Commission offices at 1100 Raymond Blvd., Newark, on an amended proposal by Public Service Electric and Gas Co. to further increase electric and gas rates for residential customers.

The hearings are being conducted on an amendment to a rate increase petition filed by Public Service on June 16, 1972. The amended rate proposal would represent an increase of 13 percent in electric rates and 15.5 percent in gas rates.

Sidney Kiken of the PUC is serving as hearing examiner at the hearings which were held Tuesday and yesterday. A PUC spokesman said a decision on the rate increase could not be expected until after Jan. 1, 1973. PSE&G Co. supplies gas service to Springfield, Newark and Irvington. It supplies electricity to Union, Roselle, Kean, Linden, Mountaineer, Newark and Irvington. Other electric and gas utility companies serving those communities are Elizabeth and Camden Gas Co. in Elizabeth and Jersey Central Power and Light Co. in Morristown.

According to a spokesman for the PUC, it is possible that rate increase proposals will be filed by those utility companies if the PSE&G Co. request is granted.

times and ended up with a sore ankle.
"ANOTHER EXERCISE drill was called the 'poor man's circuit,' and I know why. Sit-ups and squat-thrusters and jogging in place, at a rapid pace, make up this particular form of torture. This 'poor man' tried to keep pace with the count, but while everyone else was 'up' I was 'sitting.' They have another drill called the 'saddle run' in which they dribble the ball from foul line to end line, and end line to something else (I don't ask me what they're all called). That drill I didn't try, it looked easy enough, but I didn't want to learn how it got its name.
More dribbling followed and 14 bouncing balls were maneuvered forward and back and sideways at the direction of Miss Townsend, I did fairly well, for about five minutes. The others went on for hours and I retired to the locker room water fountain.
When I regained my breath, and my confidence, I sneaked back out, only to be confronted by a gym full of players loading basketballs high into the air—and catching them behind their backs. 'Try it—you can do it,' Miss Townsend urged, and I did, once. Too bad the photographer didn't catch the action of the ball bouncing off my head.
Luckily for me, the remainder of the drills were graded ones, with the girls competing against each other and I gallantly declined to foul up their scoring with my ineptness. The young athletes are surprisingly accurate in their shooting, and they seem to be formidable foes, and always ready for more drills. In fact, they have these rugged sessions nearly every day, and, according to Miss Townsend, there are no complaints.

"I THINK THE GIRLS are aware of the discipline required," she said. "They seem to understand they are part of a chain. If one girl does only nine sit-ups instead of 10, she weakens that chain. They all really do have that basic team spirit."
"Of course, they're not crazy about some of the drills I put them through," she continued, "but they are improving and that's the most important thing. These sessions are strenuous, and they're going to get more strenuous." (I'm glad I was sent to one of the earlier ones.)
Although some high schools have had varsity girls' teams for a number of years, this is the first such venture for the four Regional District schools. Following requests for these activities, questionnaires were sent to the students to discover the most popular sport. Basketball won.
"I believe we'll be going into another varsity sport next year," Miss Townsend said. "Gymnastics and tennis are second in popularity, and the choice will probably be between them."
Following scrimmages Dec. 9 at Roselle Park and Dec. 19 at Hillside Junior High in Newark, the team will begin regular season play with a 5:30 p.m. home game Jan. 4 against David Brearley of Kenilworth. Other teams on the schedule are Gov. Livingston of Berkeley Heights, Caldwell A. L. Johnson of Clark, West Orange, Summit and Verona.
"Some of the schools have had varsity teams for a while," Miss Townsend said, "but others are starting new. We'll be breaking in with our three sister Regional schools, so the teams will be pretty much on the same level."
She also stressed the fact that the girls have had experience in basketball through the intramural games of the Girls' Athletic Association. One thing will be totally new: they'll now be playing under the same rules as the boys. But Miss Townsend has enlisted the aid of Peter Soocas, driver's education teacher at Dayton and a basketball official, to explain the regulations to the players.
Student managers for the team are Chris Cavanaugh, Debbie Episcopo, Patty Brennan and Ray Stewart.
The energetic and capable players who'll be donning the royal blue and orange uniforms of Dayton are: Tami Bass, Carol Sullivan, Amy Dream Power.

Every person that lives has some kind of dream. The day he doesn't, he's dead. The ability to imagine is one of the most precious powers we have. Dreams change things. Some dreams may change your world. And some dreams may call for money.

U.S. Savings Bonds are the safe way to make sure none of your dreams come true. And they're easy to buy. Your bank sells 'em. Or, you can probably buy them through the Payroll Savings Plan where you work. Bonds build you a sizeable nest egg. While you build a dream.

Bond power: That's real dream power.

'The Godfather' is assigned to exclusive Ormont opening

'The Godfather,' Paramount Pictures' film version of Mario Puzo's novel, one of the top best-sellers of all time (with more than 500,000 hardcover and 10,000,000 paperback copies in print), will open an exclusive north Jersey engagement at the Ormont Theater, East Orange tomorrow.
The picture, which stars Marlon Brando in the title role (Don Vito Corleone), also features Al Pacino as Michael, James Caan as Sonny, Richard Castellano, Diane Keaton, Robert Duvall, John Marley, Sterling Hayden and Richard Conte.
Francis Ford Coppola served as director, and following a year of preparation, 'The Godfather' was adapted from a screenplay by Puzo and Coppola and photographed on location, in New York City, Sicily and in Hollywood. More than 120 locations in Manhattan, the Bronx, Brooklyn and Staten Island were utilized, including Radio City Music Hall, 40th Street, an ancient church on Mulberry street and an abandoned diner on Christopher street.
Two vocalists were assigned to make their screen bows in the film, Morgan King, a jazz stylist, and recording and nightclub singer, Al Martino. Italian film composer, Nino Rota created the music for 'The Godfather.'

'Scrooge' to play weekend matinees

Local theater managements have announced that 'Scrooge,' the Christmas story based on the Charles Dickens character, will play Saturday and Sunday matinees this week.
'Scrooge' will be shown at the Elmora Saturday and Sunday at 1:10 and 3:10, and Sunday at 2:10 p.m.; at the Jerry Lewis Cinema, Saturday and Sunday at 1:30 p.m.; at the Maplewood Theater at 1 and 3 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday; at the Mayfair Theater Saturday and Sunday at 1:15 p.m.; and at the Park Theater, Roselle Park, Saturday and Sunday at 2.
Cartoon features also will be shown at the above mentioned theaters.

'Gone With Wind' to open at Ormont

'Gone With Wind,' David O. Selznick's epic motion picture, which won numerous Oscars when it first released, will be brought to the screen tomorrow at the Tighe Theater in Westfield.
The picture, released through Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, which was based on Margaret Mitchell's sprawling Civil War novel, stars Clark Gable as the immortal Rhett ('Frankly, I don't give a damn, my dear') and Vivien Leigh as Scarlett ('I'll think about it tomorrow') O'Hara, Leslie Howard, Olivia de Havilland and Hattie McDaniel, all boasting of award-winning roles.
The picture, which has been re-processed for wide screen with stereophonic sound, provides an anti-war viewpoint with a pre-Die film.
It was photographed in color and directed by Victor Fleming.

Two X-rated pictures arrive at Fox in Union

'Two adult motion pictures, 'Love Under 17,' and 'The Sensuous Teenager,' opened yesterday at the Fox Theater, Route 22, Union.
'The Sensuous Teenager' was produced in Denmark.
Both pictures are rated X.

AFL dates to 1886

The American Federation of Labor was organized at a convention in Columbus, Ohio, in December, 1886, as a successor to the Federation of Organized Trades and Labor Unions. Other trade unions and city councils which had failed to gain autonomy within the ranks of the Knights of Labor also joined the AFL.

Sellers satire now on Elmora screen

'Where Does It Hurt?' a crudely funny satire about hospitals and doctors, starring Peter Sellers, opened yesterday at the Elmora Theater, Elizabeth, on a double bill with 'I Want What I Want.'
Filmed in color, 'Where Does It Hurt?' casts Sellers as a dignified philanthropic hospital administrator, Richard Gere and Jo Ann Pluhg have stellar roles. The picture was directed by Rod Amateau.
The associate feature at the Elmora is 'I Want What I Want,' a British picture concerning the plight of a transsexual in society. The picture has Ann Heywood playing the 'before,' 'during' and 'after.' Harry Andrews and Paul Rogers are featured.
Filmed in color, the movie was directed by John Dexter.

Capacity audience attracted to N.J. History Symposium

The New Jersey Historical Commission's fourth annual New Jersey History Symposium, 'New Jersey in the American Revolution' attracted a capacity audience of more than 400 at the State Museum auditorium, Trenton, last Saturday.
In the morning session Professor David A. Bernstein of California State University described the executive branch of government under the state's first governor, William Livingston, as it developed under conditions of revolution and invasion.
'Observing that the formal structure of government was crumbling ... Livingston, using methods similar to later war cabinet procedures, directed an informal shadow government based upon the delegated authority of the Council of Safety and the duties of the Privy Council,' Bernstein said.
Employing quantitative data on the inhabitants of six East Jersey towns, Dennis P. Ryan of New York University found strong evidence that Whigs were younger and poorer than the average population. They were also composed of the religious denominations actively opposed to the Church of England. Ryan found his model for the Whig 'profile' in the Anglican-British dispute, economic change and family tensions in East Jersey.
Peter T. Gathorn, M.D., of Neptune City, author of 'American Maps and Map Makers of the Revolution,' began the afternoon session by using contemporary maps to explain New Jersey's importance in the Revolutionary War.
'New Jersey was an area of great military importance,' he said, 'to that a large number of maps, some of unique quality and interest, were made by military cartographers on both sides and of different national origins and diverse backgrounds.'
