He discusses ways of saving money on materials, tools and equipment, offers tips, techniques and methods used in home care; repair and improvement, and gives advice on ow to purchase materials and services. The aim of the program, he says, is to convince homeowners that the trick for keeping a house in good working order is regular "This means checking up regularly on those parts of the house that are liable to get out of good working order," he says. "If you wait until something goes wrong, it will take you longer, and cost you more to fix." The content of the radio show is aimed at answering numerous questions in the minds of homeowners, particularly, "What is it. How it and How do I know if it's done well?' Listeners can obtain a "prescription" for house problems by writing the "doctor" in care of the local station for a script of each show and a detailed house maintenance checklist. Mrs. Wilson plans to involve students in practical politics

Betty Wilson, Democratic candidate for the State Assembly from District 22, said this week that she expects her term in the assembly to provide opportunities for practical political and government experience for her students.

Mrs. Wilson teaches history and political science at Gov. Livingston Regional High School in Berkeley Heights. She was elected in 1971 to a three-year term on the Berkeley Heights Township Committee, providing the first Democratic majority in the history of that town's governing body.
"When I am in the State Assembly I expect to WASHINGTON, D.C.—Rep. Matthew J. Rinaldo (R-12th Dist-N.J.) has joined more than a score of colleagues in calling for a White House Conference on Education. Pointing out that the most recent White ducation over the past 18 years and a thorough examination of the structure, purposes and needs of our system is long overdue." The Union County Congressman and fellow members of the House on both sides of the sisle have co-sponsored legislation calling for a White House Conference on Education in 1975. "In particular," he said, "we should look at the structure and performance of education in light of the ever-accelerating pace of social and technological change. The needs of the final quarter of this century almost certainly cannot be met by institutions designed to fulfill the requirements of the third quarter.

"Almost uniquely in education, change must be strongly rooted in public understanding and support. A White House Conference on Education, patterned after the one held in 1955, would help enlist that support."

The 1855 meeting, he noted, involved 1,500 local and state conferences in which hearly one million persons took part. Delegates from each conference then met in Washington, where every state and territory was involved.

"The citizen interest and participation thus generated continued in many states, including New Jersey, and resulted in important advances in education," he said. 'I believe we could realize similar benefits from another conference two years hence."

XXIV-World Scout Conference, Feist said: "We hope to teach boys that the American environment is interdependent with the global environment, and that the nations of the world are very closely interrelated through natura resource production and needs. we depend greatly on many other nations for those resources we cannot produce for our-selves." He then added: "Use of our natural vironment and the global environment has an impact on us."

Feist, a New Jersey businessman, pointe provement projects were being planned through which Scout units may earn money. He said that these would involve massiv collections of paper, glass and metal for recycling, and also projects related to wildlife habitat improvement. These activities, he explained, would be tied in directly with ces), the BSA's ongoing conservation and nvironmental program.

He noted that scouts would be encouraged to make contributions to the World Friendship Fund, which was founded by the BSA after World War II, to provide equipment and literature for units in war-torn Europe In this

In outlining the objectives of Project SOAR, Feist remarked, that concern with the world's environment was one of the cornerstones of the SOAR program when it began in 1970, and in that connection, he quoted from the official SOAR booklet which was published in 1969: merica and will involve America's resources But the American environment is part of the terdependent. > Here at BBD, we don't know of another major American manufacturer that offers a choice like this. Why does Amana offer such a choice? From what Amana tells us, it has to do with the uncompromising way they do business. Amana won't compromise on quality, dependability and value...and they don't think you should have to compromise when it comes to selecting exactly the refrigerator that suits you best. Some people swear that a bottom freezer pike...so Amana makes a great 20.1 cubic foot model. Others think the modern looks, vast capacity and convenient storage features of a side by side model make it their best choice...and with Amana they've got 9 to choose from. Still others feel the traditional top freezer refrigerator combines all the features they want most ... and they choose from three different capacities in five models. when they choose Amana.. All of them offer Amana's unique features like a meat keeper that's actually a "refrigerator-within-a-refrigerator" ... a special high umidity vegetable compartment...2 independent temperature controls...and an automatic ice maker that you can add now.

or later. And, each of them is built with a century-old tradition of fine craftsmanship...each backed by the
