Playgrounders keep their cool with crafts and contests

With the heat and humidity mounting all last week, boys and girls on Springfield playgrounds concentrated on crafts and arts and crafts projects.

The first event of the week was arts and crafts. The children had the choice of either making decorative plaques or pop-up stick boxes. Participants included Jonathan Schick, Porti, Beth and Barry Teitelbaum, David Brooks, Harold Levine, Renee Cuder and her cousin, Linda and Ann, Amy and Kelly Stewart and Brian and Steven Dahms.

In elimination rounds of four squares, Diane Blanda stole the lead with five games against Dave Zornach. Jonathan Schick took the lead in his category, winning three games against Renee Cuder's one.

On the basketball court, Diane Blanda and Steven Blinski scored victories. Diane won two games of O-U-T, while Steve beat David Gagliano 80 to 60 on one basketball.

On Friday the park opened with a bike and roller decorating contest with the children dressed to match their bikes. Jim Silverman and his sports bike won first place for the most original. Straight from 178 was Diane Blanda, winning most patriotic. Karen Wick rode off with the most colorful while Mark Baltrich won the most decorative person.

When the judging was over the children read themselves for the grand prize race. Both Teitelbaums pulled ahead of Harold Levine in the last 20 yards of the course, gaining first place when Harold skidded in the mud. Perri Teitelbaum won the older category in a close race against Jim Silverman.

A series of relay races was held on Monday. In the water polo relay, the object was to get the most points in 10 minutes. The team prepared for the race by practicing in the pool. The winning team consisted of Diane Blanda, Beth Teitelbaum, Jimmy Grier, Harold Levine and Jonathan Schick.

Both concentration and speed led Diane (the blonde) to take the lead in the relay. The relay race was a close race when Ricky Green scored the only point, giving Blinski, Teitelbaum, Renee Cuder and Steve Dahms the lead. REPORT CARDS

Last week's marathon session of the Regional High School District Board of Education designed for discussion of the proposed new grading policy was an interesting example of democracy at work.

Fortunately, whatever action ensued with all the complaints, confusion and misunderstandings generated, the final result is sure to leave no one fully satisfied.

While we are interested in all the effort that had gone into the report, we found more to ponder in what was not said and in the implications of what did happen.

One young citizen asked whether the exceedingly detailed grading plan is an accurate reflection of the board's goals and philosophy for the school district.

Sonya Dorsky of Springfield, education committee chairman, reluctantly but correctly ruled that the question was beyond the scope of the public hearing.

We feel, however, that somewhere, some day, the board members and the community should spend more time considering the purpose of secondary education in four high schools for six communities—and perhaps less effort on secondary grading.

The amount of time and energy expended each week debating the pass-fail option, designed to encourage young people to expand their horizons, illustrated the unhealthy attitude of competitiveness produced by highly competent professionals.

The unhealthy preoccupation with grades and class rank could also be blamed in large part on the colleges and their arbitrary procedures for nominating members of the educated elite.

Our professional educators, by and large, have been conditioned to believe in large part on the colleges and their arbitrary procedures for nominating members of the educated elite.

Our high schools are good by most objective standards, providing an exceptional education for the vast majority of our students.

More meetings like the one last week, as frustrating as it may be, are necessary to take part in, will help us all, as a community, to attain at least some of our goals, and to make this a better community where our hopes will be more nearly fulfilled.

Education board lists characteristics for gifted children and their teachers

(This is the first in a series of reports issued by the Springfield Board of Education setting forth guidelines for the selection of children who are academically gifted or creatively talented.)

A profile of gifted and talented will extend beyond the definition and criteria for selection. These children will walk and talk at an earlier age than other children as well as be more alert and learn more quickly. They exhibit a superior facility in language, conceptualization, socialization and productivity. Although their "gifted" or "talented" development may be average or above average, it often "lags" behind intellectual development, thereby creating some conflict within the child.

6. High retention rate—may dilute routine or dull, will relate former knowledge to newly acquired knowledge, demonstrate intellectual curiosity and imagination.

7. High degree of individualism—may appear as unusual, critical, rebellious.

8. Advanced vocabulary—may use highly imaginative and descriptive words orally and in written form.

9. Superior imagination skills—may generate to a high degree from varied experiences and exhibit a high level of verbal comprehension.

10. Highly accelerated reading ability—may seek out reference books, atlas, encyclopedias, dictionaries for recreational reading.

11. Social:

1. Above average self-reliance.
2. High level of maturity.
3. Preference for the company of older companions.
4. A self-viewpoint of self as well as others.
5. Easo of leadership.
6. Outgoing and friendly.
7. Well-developed sense of humor.

- GIFTED
1. A keen power of observation—may be social rejected because of tendency to look others on the defensive.
  2. An individual value system—may defend values from criticism, or may challenge values of others.
  3. An ability for abstract—logical, and scientific reasoning—may resist direction or limit detail.
  4. An aim for truth—may pursue an interest for a long period of time with intense concentration.
  5. A liking for consistency, system oriented—may invent own system of studying, caring for self and belongings, may take pains organizing.

- TALENTED
1. Fluency of imagination and expression from a given situation to more generalized ideas.
  2. Highly developed sensitivities in areas like movement, space, organization, symbols; awareness of emotional levels of interaction.
  3. A full range of imagination beyond the actual—often ventures into the unknown; expresses fantasy in specific forms of art, sculpture, dance etc.
  4. Assurance of self-expression.
  5. Ability to use tools immediately with confidence.
  6. High degree of self-identification—with subject matter and medium.
  7. Characteristic of the unknown.
  8. Unique personality.

Report from Washington

Every economic indicator including a slowdown in new unemployment claims, confirms that the nation is on the road to recovery. By late this year, the economy should be well on its way towards stability.

There are strong expectations of an increase in auto sales in the new model cars that promise to deliver more miles to the gallon and complete favorably with foreign made cars.

The recession has done anything, it is that the United States economy is strongly tied to the automobile.

Aided by the new Community Development Act and an estimated $10 billion in funds for housing mortgages, the housing industry is already showing some signs of improvement. The new mortgage protection bill will help the unemployed to hold on to their homes and encourage other buyers to seek 7.5 percent interest rates on new and old homes.

There has been a few areas of the economy that have been suffering out of the economic doldrums in the last two months. They include retail sales, restaurant and food production, public works contracts, stock market investments, bank savings—the annual of economic indicators. The dollar again helped. A four-pointed Ford administration wants to hold the federal deficit to $60 billion, far below expectations that it would reach $80 to $90 billion as stirring new inflation.

It is a tribute to President Ford's leadership, the restraint of organized labor and some hard-headed businessmen that the deficit has not been greatly responsible for the unemployment in the United States.

Senator Reports

The Department of Defense has under consideration proposals that could dramatically affect three of New Jersey's major industries.

Two internal Army reorganization proposals will affect the future of Picatinny Arsenal and Fort Monmouth. And a pending Army request for appropriations is the first step in what could be a long and difficult process.

With the impact of the Army's plans spread across the entire state, the congressional delegation in Washington is working to prevent any reduction in force levels at any of the installations. Although the tactics are relatively similar for Picatinny Arsenal and Fort Monmouth, we are following a different approach for Fort Dix.

Prices at Sunny Brook reduced on townhouses
Purchasers of two luxury bedroom homes with two baths, townhouse models at Sunny Brook in Lumberton, can take advantage of a price reduction of $10,000. The price on the Acclaimers is now $23,900, a reduction of $4,000. Purchasers of either Tudor-style homes can begin their residency at Sunny Brook this summer, Steinfeld said. And, on top of both the new low price and the tax credit which can mean as much as $2,250, buyers will receive a $1,000 credit on the mortgage interest. In addition, profit from sale of the buyer's present home is not taxable when used to purchase a home at Sunny Brook of equal or greater price.

Retirement communities spur Rep. Hughes' praise
"This is really God's country," exclaimed U.S. Congressman William J. Hughes recently after touring retirement communities in the New York State Park. Hughes, a member of the House of Representatives, is currently in committee to study the Medicare law so that the cost of prescription drugs would be largely covered by federal subsidy. "Also, I am strongly opposed to the provisions of the Social Security Act which would increase the cost of medicine and other items that senior citizens pay more heavily than other people," Hughes said.

School health programs get grade of 'F' in study by state medical college

State health education programs are not doing a job in reaching students to prevent illness, according to a study conducted at the New Jersey Medical School of the College of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey (CMDNJ).

After surveying selected but unidentified high schools in New Jersey, researchers from the CMDNJ-New Jersey Medical School's department of preventive medicine and community health under Donald B. Loria, M.D., professor and chairman, concluded that the students have an inadequate grasp of health information and prevention of disease.

Initial studies included testing ninth and 12th graders and demonstrated, according to Dr. Loria, that poor understanding of health problems improved little throughout the high school period.

The findings were reinforced by a second survey, which profiled the students' smoking and drinking habits—two major risk factors in several serious illnesses.

"Medical science has conclusive evidence that primary prevention in the school system, but certain risk factors like smoking, drinking, and secondary prevention, screening and early detection of certain diseases—such as cancer, diabetes and chronic lung disease—can significantly," Dr. Loria said. "But this knowledge is not reaching the public because of the failure of the school system."

He said that the logical place to begin this educational process is in the elementary school, where students are "falling miserably."

The studies showed that 69 percent of ninth grade students responding to a comprehensive questionnaire displayed a "poor knowledge" of health information as did 50 percent of 12th graders. Cancer, cardiovascular disease and mental health were areas in which all students did most poorly, although the older group was significantly more knowledgeable on human reproduction and venereal disease.

Results of the study of students smoking and drinking habits were equally disheartening. Dr. Loria said. Over a five-year period, little change was noted in the smoking habits of middle school students, while smoking among teenagers increased moderately. A marked increase in alcohol consumption was noted among all senior groups in the same period.

Radio volunteers sought by CD for emergency needs

Civil Defense Disaster Control is recruiting "amateur" radio operators to help in emergency situations. The Radio Amateur Emergency Service (RAES) is a volunteer organization of amateur radio operators who supplement CD communications systems in time of emergency.

"Natural or man-made disasters pose a constant threat to the public. When disaster strikes, normal communications systems are often down or damaged extensively. At these times, amateur radio operators must resort to emergency communications," said J. Morgan Van Hise, acting director of State CD.

Interested amateur radio operators are requested to contact local county C.D.C. officials or write: Lloyd H. Manahan, chairman, State CD-DC Communications Unit, Attention, 290 Seventh Ave., Asbury Park, NJ 07712.

"Communications is the key word for successful response to disaster," commented Van Hise.

Energy office to guard against retail gas hikes

F.E.A. Regional Administrator Alfred Kleinfeld announced this week an expanded retail compliance program for Region II designed to guard consumers against untoward retail gas price hikes during the peak summer retail gas season.

Region II (New York, New Jersey, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands) compliance officers have been ordered to begin immediate spot checks of dealer's prices, paying particular attention to retail compliance with price and octane pooling regulations. Kleinfeld said.

"We believe the majority of the stations intend to be in compliance with these regulations," Kleinfeld added. "But we wish to insure total compliance throughout."

The intensified F.E.A. monitoring program now underway also provides the opening of telephone hotline numbers around the country, seven of them in New York and New Jersey. The New Jersey number is 665-2211.

Office personnel, equipped with specific information, will be on hand Monday through Friday, from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., to deal directly with consumer complaints and answer questions on gasoline prices and supply.

To help alleviate the F.E.A. regulations, Region II will issue simplified instructions to more than 1,000 service station operators in the two states. The booklets are designed to help retailers compute their own maximum ceiling prices, and advise them on possible penalties if their price are found to be in excess of F.E.A. ceiling.

The booklets also explain price and octane pooling requirements in detail. Simply stated, price pooling is a system of pooling gasoline required to post on each pump, both the maximum permissible price and the octane number of the gasoline being sold from that pump.

For more information, call 665-2211, or write: F.E.A. Regional Office, 290 Seventh Ave., Asbury Park, N.J. 07712.

State test results: 'Springfield quite favorable'

Dr. Fred Baruchin, superintendent of the township's school system, this week released the analysis of the state educational tests given to Springfield youngsters in December 1974. Following is the school system's analysis of the tests.

Springfield Township Public School students compare quite favorably to students in comparable communities throughout New Jersey, according to the last round of State Educational Assessment Program results. The tests, designed to measure the achievement of pupils in reading and mathematics, were administered in December of the 1974-75 school year to local fourth and seventh graders.

The purpose of the testing was threefold: to aid local districts in progressing towards their educational goals; to provide information on the strengths and needs of respective students; and to make known to each student his mastery of the basic skills in reading and mathematics, and weaknesses in the respective grade levels and plans to be taken to correct deficiencies. The results of the state testing program constitute one phase of Springfield's educational management system, implemented in recent years to provide more definitive monitoring information on the individual progress of each student in basic skill learning.

The district is extremely satisfied with the strong performance of seventh graders in both reading and mathematics, and with fourth grade reading results. The results of the mathematics test at the fourth grade level were not comparable to other scores within the district. It may be understood that though this latter finding was somewhat lower than expectations, all test results generally exceeded

Recreation program for fall lined up
Ann Lisa prepares brochures for 14 courses

Springfield residents from pre-schoolers to senior citizens will have a chance to broaden their cultural and artistic experience this autumn thanks to the summer success of Ann Lisa, program coordinator of the Springfield Recreation Department.

Mrs. Lisa now is in the process of preparing brochures listing 14 courses, ranging from sculpture to climatology, and if the past is prologue, enrollments in all will be filled shortly after registrations begin next month. Nine of the courses are cosponsored by the Union County Regional Adult School, which has cooperated with the local Recreation Department for the past 10 years. Free classes all running for nine weeks, beginning the week of Sept. 22, will include: ceramics, Aug. 24, Mondays, starting Sept. 23; art, Aug. 28, Tuesdays, starting Sept. 30; modern dance, kindergarten and older, Wednesdays, starting Oct. 1 (enrollment at the Springfield School); sculpture, Thursdays, starting Oct. 2 (enrollment at Temple St. Elementary School); painting, Fridays, starting Oct. 4 (enrollment at Temple St. Elementary School); and a variety of other courses.

Mrs. Lisa, a recreation staff member for 10 years, also teaches an arts and crafts course to senior citizens Mondays from October to May, offering instruction in a variety of media.

Township children will be offered the following weekend classes, all but one of which are held at the Center:

Preschool rhythmic, ages 3-6, Mondays, starting Sept. 23; art, ages 6-8, Tuesdays, starting Sept. 30; modern dance, kindergarten

Residents protest blasting at quarry

A resolution opposing use of land on the Watchung Reservation for highway construction was approved Tuesday night by the Springfield Township Committee.

The township committee, which includes Mayor Nicholas DeMarco, also called for the "no-build" alternative to the controversial roadway, requesting the Union County Park Commission to reconsider its agreement of intent with DOT to allow placement of the road on parkland; and asks the Board of Freeholders and Union County Planning Board to change the zoning in the area to "no-build" plan.

Committee member Edward Stas Jr., in introducing the resolution, noted the portions of the highway already completed to the eastern and western borders of the park can still be re-routed to the Watchung Reservation, which would cost $1.2 million less than the proposed route through the reservation.

"The township committee has long been an advocate of the 'no-build' alternative to the controversial roadway, requesting the Union County Park Commission to reconsider its agreement of intent with DOT to allow placement of the road on parkland; and asks the Board of Freeholders and Union County Planning Board to change the zoning in the area to 'no-build' plan.
