Porches save money and energy, add fun

Yesteryear's sun porch may well become the energy-efficient room addition you've been seeking. For, if the exposure is right, a glass-walled porch becomes a natural solar "collector," and its proclivity for greenery and casual furniture makes it the ideal, year-round "everything room" for the

But it takes planning to convert an open porch into an inviting indoor space, so here, from the Tile Council of America, are some tips and tactics.

•The energy efficiency aspect works well only if the porch faces the quadrant from southeast to southwest. And, naturally the sun must have free passage into the new room.

Deciduous trees that provide summer shade are usually fine, but make sure that their branches don't obstruct too much winter sun.

•The best porch rooms feature floors that provide good thermal storage, and one excellent combination is concrete and ceramic tile.

The heavy quarry tile types and pavers are great choices for such floors. They will store the sun's heat during the day and release it gradually to keep the room warm after the sun has gone. During the summer months these floors can also collect the night breezes to help cool the room.

·Ceramic tile looks and easy care, suit this room which is likely to bec one of the most active in the house. Tile glass-walled rooms that seem to ring in

of the living area. Batts or blankets of fiber glass insulation with a vapor barrier can easily be installed between the floor joists by stapling wire mesh or chicken wire to the joists and then sliding the insulation on top of the wire, The vapor barrier should face up toward the floor. Defense No. 4: Joist

Band An important area that is often overlooked because of its out-of-theway location is the joist band - that space between the top of the basement wall and the floor joist above.
