Congressman Matthew Rinaldo

The re-establishment of the Security and Terrorism Subcommittee in the Senate under the chairmanship of Sen. Jeremiah Denton of Alabama, a former prisoner of war in Vietnam, has alerted some civil libertarians who remember the operations of the old Un-American Activities Committee. It was the most controversial committee of Congress in the past half century as it delved into allegations of Communist infiltration into government, the film industry, the Army and the State Department, including the Alger Hiss case of the late 1940s.

However, there is a basic difference in the timing of the newly created Security and Terrorism Subcommittee and the old committee. An epidemic of international terrorism, kidnappings of Americans, political assassinations, acts of violence against world leaders, and the fear that small groups of terrorists may "manufacture" a small nuclear device have created a new climate of intelligence. A major purpose of the committee will be to examine the extent of the international terrorist threat and its implications for the United States.

For starters, the new committee should review the National Advisory Commission report on Domestic and International Terrorism. It is a textbook study of domestic and international violence and political terrorism. This report, the Justice Department took a twelve-member committee headed by Gov. Brendan T. Byrne two years to complete.

Because Americans depend on technology for essential services, the United States is particularly vulnerable to disruption on a wide scale. The Northeast power blackout of 1965 and the New York City telephone exchange fire typify the potential targets. So far, terrorists have not taken advantage of these vulnerabilities, but it is evident that it would be possible to disrupt our society by using conventional means.

Another more alarming threat is the proliferation of nuclear weapons. There have been a number of incidents in the United States in which nuclear materials were stolen from hospitals and research laboratories. None of the thefts have been weapons.

grade material or of other materials in an amount that would present a significant danger to large segments of the population. But several unsuccessful attempts to kill President Ford in Europe have been reported.

Two years after a plastic bomb exploded in a locker at LaGuardia Airport, killing several people, the FBI revealed that it is now possible for terrorists to pack a small nuclear device in a suitcase. The reprocessing of nuclear fuel makes it much more difficult to control the supply of plutonium for these homemade bombs.

Intelligence experts warn that it is only a matter of time before some radical group makes the attempt to kidnap a city or a nation hostage in a game of nuclear blackmail. Throughout America, there are some 30 terrorist groups of varying sizes who form the infrastructure of international terrorism. They know each other well, and they have plans and execute operations jointly.

The Justice Department report states the problem in very language: "When you consider the abundance of small groups of well-trained zealots, their use of sophisticated weaponry, and the ease with which they could cause governments, we are forced to ponder the future with alarm."

If a major incident does take place, it is crucial that government meet the public that reasonable and thoughtful action has been taken. Preparedness to meet a crisis must be established on a national level, and it is essential that it would be possible to disrupt our society by using conventional means.

Assemblyman Charles Hardwick

As the applause subsides from all the recent graduation ceremonies, I'd like to congratulate all those who have earned diplomas from high schools and colleges in the area but in particular I'd like to single out the vocational school graduates.

I've gained new understanding and respect for vocational education in my recent fight to resolve the financial difficulties of Union County Technical Institute. As part of that ongoing experience, I had the opportunity to speak at a student rally at UCTI and more recently to give the commencement address to the Union County Vocational Center graduating class.

In my research it became evident that vocational graduates have an impressive record of sustained achievement. In a study completed in 1979 which followed the careers of 1,000 from Middlesex County Vocational and Technical School, the study found that 86 percent of the students were still enjoying their work. Two-thirds of them rated job satisfaction very high.

Compared with the needs of our state and changing technology, I don't think the government has provided the funding needed for vocational education. Changing technology requires new and additional programs to prepare students for tomorrow. And this takes money. Because a sound vocational education is a life-long benefit, it is a good investment. It is the state's taxpayers and merit support but the public and private sectors.

Vocational education provides practical preparation for life that not only helps the graduates, but improves society as a whole. Vocational graduates deserve to be saluted for their foresight and determination to work hard which clearly reaffirms that the American work ethic is still very much alive today!

You probably won't print this since your aim is more an "Amusepaper" than a "Newspaper," but then again, maybe you'll surprise me. I dare you!

Page Four How come you...?

BOB BAXTER
Don't you sometimes feel that things never go right for you? It's like when the Lord passed out the fishes, I got a bone in my throat? Why always me?
How come:
—A sandwich always tastes better when it's out diagonally instead of in half?
—You always get the peanut butter on before you put on the jelly?
—When the president speaks for an hour or television, it takes an another hour or two to explain what he said?
—April 15 comes around so fast, when you have to pay your taxes?
—When your wife tells you that you are going to have steak and mushrooms for dinner, you have to work overtime, and don't get home until midnight?
—The roast burns when your mother-in-law is coming to dinner for the very first time?
—When is your turn to call the bingo numbers, you have a sore throat?
—When you lock your keys in your car, you will hear the constant wailing of a policeman, but when you go one mile over the speed limit, you run into a police parade?
—You need a haircut the day they come to take the class picture?
—The phone always rings when you party and you are going to serve macaroni and cheese, you don't find out until everyone is at the table, that you are out of macaroni?
—The fuse blows out at 10 o'clock Saturday, and the hardware store doesn't open until Monday morning?
—When you go to buy a new pair of shoes, you wear the socks with the hole in the toe?
—When Reggie hits a homer to the left field stands, your sitting in right field stands?
—When the whole team is playing baseball, your sitting on the bench?
—Your glasses are the darkest when you have to read fine print?
—When you get the buy of a lifetime, your out of checks?
—The day after you sell that stock you were losing money on for years, it goes up, 12 points?
—Your dog gets the telex that the Sheriff Lobo is still on television?
—You're the only one who doesn't give a hoot about who shot J.R.?
—The girl with the long blond hair you just made a pass at is a boy?
—You're the only one in school who doesn't mind the squeak of the chalk on the blackboard?
—Well, I suppose that's enough how come, but I have just one more.
—A writer doesn't know when to end his column?

Consumer news

By ADAM K. LEVIN
N.J. Division of Consumer Affairs Director
Mention the word mortgage these days and it is usually coupled with another word. The phrase most commonly heard is "the mortgage mess." High interest rates and the advent of complicated innovative financing arrangements for home buyers have consumers perplexed and confused. The bottom line for many people is that the American dream of owning a home is slipping out of the reach of many probably most people.
This is a tragedy of unprecedented proportion in our economy. In addition to the devastating impact this has on individual families, this development will have long-term effects on the buying habits and life styles of many consumers. We are rapidly changing from a nation of home owners to a nation of renters.
The fact remains, however, that for some people the creative financing arrangements have appeared to keep the mortgage business and home-building industry alive do present certain opportunities.
Generally, there are three types of mortgages which are being offered across the country now: the negotiable rate mortgage, the shared appreciation mortgage and the graduated payment mortgage. Each three variations could combine with other financing plans to create a complex package.
The negotiable rate mortgage is often referred to as a "roll over mortgage." In essence, it requires that you and your lender agree on a new interest rate at a fixed period, usually every three, four or five years. The negotiable rate, of course, would be based on current interest rates at the time of the re-negotiation.
The advantage for the consumer who holds a roll over mortgage is that the bank cannot back out if the interest rates are lower than when you first negotiated the loan. On the other hand, the consumer is free to shop around for a better deal at the end of the fixed period and to pay off the loan without penalty. The disadvantage, of course, is that the consumer may end up paying an even higher interest rate if prevailing market conditions result in higher interest rates. In that case, it would probably be impossible for a consumer to find a better deal since most lenders would be offering loans at relatively higher rates.
Shared appreciation mortgages, in essence, give your lender a piece of the action as if you increase in your home's value. The bank really becomes your partner in the ownership of your home and, depending on the terms of the loan, recoup up to 40 percent of any increase in value at the time the home is resold. Obviously, this kind of arrangement is of the greatest benefit to the consumer who is not looking to buy up when it comes time for resale. For this reason, persons who do not plan to resell their home until they retire may be interested in this kind of loan, inasmuch as retiring persons often move into smaller homes once the children have left the nest.
The graduated payment mortgage is most attractive to young people who are starting a steady growth in their real earnings. The initial payments on the loan are small and get progressively larger over time. It should be pointed out, however, that a graduated payment mortgage could mean trouble if your earnings growth does not substantially outpace inflation. A 30 percent rate every year when inflation is running at about the same rate may not leave enough cushion to absorb the increased graduated payments when they come due.
The creative financing plans have been designed with two goals in mind: First, to permit some people to afford houses even at the current high interest rates. Second, to permit lenders to contend with the long-term financial effect of continued inflation in housing.

A 'frank' pot luck feast can be easy to prepare

Colorful expressions and everyday sayings are as much a part of the American lifestyle as the hot dog. And, that is a term with many meanings. A dog not only has the literal meaning of frankfurter, but through the years has taken on other connotations as well. It can be used as an exclamation of surprise or delight and enthusiasm or it can be used to describe the "hot spot" or person with good fortune and great ability.

Similarly, other expressions such as "apple pie" order, which is derived from a New England woman who meticulously placed her apples in a pie crust, and "in the soup" which indicated embarrassment, disappointment and essentially "out of luck" have filtered into common usage.

"Pot luck" is another of these colorful American expressions. It was first used to describe food prepared solely for the family but later came to mean food dropped by unannounced, but the expression "to take pot luck" also is used with the connotation to accept whatever event or consequence happens. The term is a further used to describe a dish of food and in which all share.

What nicer, more economical way to entertain at home during the winter months which begin a new year. For many families, making pot luck meals is the answer to inexpensive entertaining.

The host or hostess has the prerogative to request guests to bring either a certain type of food such as vegetable or meat, or can base requests around a central theme, such as Italian, Greek, Mexican or Indian food. The meal also can be comprised of different casseroles served hot with a crisp salad prepared by the business and accompanied by hot fresh bread prepared by one of the guests. Whatever the menu choice, guests are made to feel an integral part of the dining experience and for them, too, the fun is relatively inexpensive.

Bringing a pot luck dinner to a new neighbor's home is a nice way of saying "hello and welcome" from others in the community. It is a thoughtful way of welcoming home the new neighbor or a simple gesture which will let a few days. School PTA groups and other parent committees can be invited to partake in pot luck meals as an inexpensive means of holding meetings or fund raising events.

Entertainment this week

Hazel O'Connor speaks of film, albums debuts

Pick of the Week—"Sons and Lovers" by Hazel O'Connor (A&M SP-4852).
Those privileged enough to read Hazel O'Connor's diary see lines such as "So I finally have my attic in Old America, even gone so far as to paint a picture," or "Back in France, living in Paris at the home of lady film star doing street theater." Then there's the classic line, "Today I leave for West Africa to see a man about a dog."
One could go on about Hazel O'Connor's diary in Japan, being bombed (literally) in Beirut on her birthday and trekking across the Sahara with some friends and a monkey named "Lucky." But the real interesting diary entry refers to being approached after a show with her name and getting an offer in addition for the lead role in a major film.

Murder drama continues run

The second offering of the New Jersey Theatre Ensemble's summer season at Kean College of New Jersey, Union, is "The Murder of My Sister," a murder mystery written by Milan Stitt. The play, directed by Michael Rice, will run through July 25.

Dance for singles

The Fort Lee Chapter of Bnai Zion will sponsor a dance for singles on Saturday, July 11, at the Fort Lee Jewish Center, 1449 Anderson Ave. A catered coffee hour will be featured, and there will be continuous dancing.
