VISIT WASHINGTON—Gene Deutch of Mountaineer and his son, Jon, were among 1400 New Jerseyans who journeyed together recently by special train to Washington, D.C. to meet and dine with the state's Congressional delegation.

The reception, conducted each year by the New Jersey State Chamber of Commerce, enables leaders of business and government to confer informally on issues of mutual concern.

DiFrancesco chides 'free rides'

"I'm sure you've heard of the expression, 'there's no such thing as a free lunch.' But you may be surprised to learn that there is such a thing as a free ride on New Jersey trains for over 1,000 state employees.

Last week, Governor Kean signed an executive order ordering a new policy to be formulated on the use of rail passes. The Governor said that in the future the passes only will be used for state business.

I believe the Legislature should go one step further and abolish the rail pass system as the Governor recommended. Legislation already has been introduced by Senator John Ewing, R-Somers.

Home again

Sheree Hawks kisses her son Jason on arriving at Newark Airport after a trip home from California made possible by funds raised by students, faculty and administrators at Kean College, Union. Injured in an auto accident that left him semi-comatose, the six-year-old required nine airline seats on the flight home for himself, a nurse and equipment. When his mother asked for help to meet the expenses of the trip, the people at the college responded. On his return, Jason was admitted to Children's Specialized Hospital, Mountaineer. They give 'just a little extra love'

By ELIZABETH SEP
 Her belief that many young people "need just a little extra love and attention to keep them from going wrong" has led Phyllis Carson of Linden to eight years of service as one of Union County's Volunteers in Probation.

Carson is one of 375 Union County residents who give up a few hours of their time each week to meet with some juvenile who has gotten into trouble with the law for the first time.

Although it is the largest volunteer group in the state, the Union County organization still needs more helping hands.

The Volunteers in Probation training program will begin its 40th session on March 7 in the sixth floor conference room of the Union County Court House at Elizabethtown Plaza, Elizabeth. The training sessions will continue on each of four following Mondays: March 14, 21, 28 and April 4.

Those who volunteer are required to attend all of the training sessions in order to be graduated with the class.

Volunteers are taught counseling and listening techniques, role playing and psycho-drama, according to Dr. Faye Granberry, director of the Volunteers in Probation Division.

Once graduated from training, each volunteer is "carefully matched" with a juvenile who shares the same interests. "The volunteers talk about the case, and we ask them if they're willing to take it. Then we contact the family and give them just the volunteer's name," Granberry said.

"Then a meeting is set up, usually in the juvenile's home," she said. After the first encounter, the volunteer can arrange to meet the juvenile in other places, such as a library or a park.

"Sometimes the volunteers take them roller skating or out to lunch. Sometimes they just take a walk," Granberry said.

The 375 Union County residents who are volunteers "are from all walks of life," Granberry said. "We have everything from judges and lawyers to people without high school diplomas. Each one has something special to offer those kids," she said.

Carson said that she decided to volunteer after she read an article about the program in 1975. "I felt that this was something I could be keenly interested in, because I firmly believed that many young people need just a little extra love and attention to keep them from going wrong," Carson said.

"During the years that followed after my training period, I have gone through probation of six months or more with over a dozen youngsters from ages 10 through 17, both boys and girls, from every ethnic background," she said.

"Only one did not respond as I had hoped he would. All the others have left the probation system with their lives in order, and with no other offenses on their record," Carson said.

"Needless to say, this has been one of the most satisfying things that I have ever done," Carson said.

A volunteer for two and a half years, Charles Danziger of Springfield said that his service "has been a humbling experience."

"Our professional staff is dedicated, competent and kind.

They treat each youngster on probation as someone precious, in his or her own way. On the few occasions when I've attended court, I've been favorably impressed by the judges' compassion and flexibility coupled with an appropriate degree of toughness," Danziger said.

"As a volunteer probation counselor, I know the person on a one-to-one basis. I know who he is and what he's doing. I meet his family, and we become friends. Both of us benefit from the relationship," he said.

"Almost anyone can be caught breaking the law sometime," Danziger said. Granberry said that she knows of instances when volunteers attended the weddings of juveniles whom they had helped. "Some of our volunteers have had babies named after them," she said. "Although the court assignment to the juvenile is only six months, we try to encourage them to remain friends," Granberry said.

Mayor Anthony E. Russo of Union is asking citizens "to make a positive contribution to troubled youths and their families" by volunteering.

"An economy beset by unemployment can cause enough family anxiety to bring a youngster into conflict with the law. As the economic pressures on families increase and human services are cut, much of the stability and support necessary for a healthy adolescence are removed and as a result some teenagers drift into delinquent behavior," Russo said.

"Often this guidance and support means the difference between a youngster falling into the tough criminal justice system or succeeding in life," he added.

"We in Union County are fortunate to have a state and nationally recognized program such as this available to us," he said. "It is unique in that it provides counseling, tutoring, special interest and group work through trained volunteers to a most valuable segment of our society, the young."

Those who wish to volunteer must be at least 18 years old. Further information about the program may be obtained by dialing Granberry at 353-0500.

Donations bring Jason home

College shows that it has a heart

Kean College of New Jersey in Union is more than an institute of learning; it has a heart.

When the Kean College of New Jersey learned that Kean, aged 6, was hospitalized and his injured child home from California, the college responded with a campus-wide fund-raising drive.

Professors Donald Lumsden and Freda Remmers, along with their students, coordinated the effort.

Gardening programs scheduled at school

Two free workshops for the home horticulturist will be conducted at Union County College in Cranford in mid-March, according to Dr. Frank Deo, dean of the Division of Continuing Education.

Home Vegetable Gardening will be the topic on March 17 and Spring Lawn Maintenance will be the focus of the second two-hour workshop on March 18. Both workshops will be held from 10 a.m. to noon in the Campus Center auditorium.

The home gardener will be instructed on starting plants indoors, recommended varieties for this area, insect and disease control, mulching, irrigation and other aspects of growing vegetables successfully. Stephen Bachelder, Union County agricultural agent, will be the speaker.

In the lawn maintenance course, subjects to be discussed will include lime, fertilizer, control of pre-emergence crabgrass, weeds, lawn insects and diseases, spring seeding, height or cut, and similar lawn care topics. Dr. Henry W. Indyk, extension specialist in turf-grass management, Cook College, Rutgers University, and Bachelder will conduct the workshop.

Children's Weight Loss Clinic in Union

UNION — Do you have a child who is overweight? Perhaps you are aware of the health problems sometimes face difficulties relating to their classroom, participating in sports and activities and wearing the type of clothing worn by their friends.

The Children's Weight Loss Clinic is a professionally staffed program with a new approach to weight control for children 7 to 12. It provides an educational setting for the family and child, stressing physical fitness and Administrators, faculty, staff and students all donated funds to help Jason bring his son, Jason, back to New Jersey.

The six-year old boy suffered severe head injuries, leaving him semi-comatose, and his mother received a broken leg in an automobile accident.

Hawkins, a student of Dr. Lumsden, professor of speech/hearing/reading, contacted him for help when she found that it would cost almost $3,000 for air fare to bring her son home. The boy needed nine airline seats to accommodate him, a nurse and equipment.

Newark Mayor Kenneth Gibson helped speed the process by reserving the airline seats on his personal credit card. He will be reimbursed by funds raised by the college and Newark city employees.

Jason arrived home recently to a waiting crowd of family and friends. The Squires First Aid Squad of Kean College donated its ambulance to transport Jason to the Children's Specialized Hospital in Mountainside, where the boy was admitted to the head trauma unit.

According to medical authorities, Jason is making good progress. He recognized his mother and tried to speak to her. However, he still has a long slow road back to complete health.

Funds are still being collected to help Hawkins and her young son. All donations should go to the "Bring Jason Home Fund," c/o Dr. Lumsden, Kean College of New Jersey, Morris Avenue, Union 07083.

County called 'hot spot'

Coordination urged in battle against cancer

By ADA BERTINER
 Union County remains one of the "hot spots" in the state for cancer. That point is made in a newly-released study by the Union County Health Officers Association which emphasizes the need for coordinated educational efforts and other programs.

Undertaken with a federal grant obtained by the association under the leadership of Health Officer Dennis SanFilippo of Union, a former president, the research program focused on how local health officers, hospitals, physicians and consumer groups in the county can "identify localized health threats and act against them," the report noted.

"Union County Health Officers have been aware how poor communication on cancer prevention is a common problem statewide. We have therefore taken the lead to remove this problem by providing pertinent information and management systems for cancer prevention in Union County," he added.

Two years ago, the county health officers, acting under a contract with the state Department of Health, began a project with three goals: 1. to identify persons at risk for oral, breast, colon, rectal and cervical cancers; 2. to develop systems to assess individuals; and 3. to recommend a model plan for community action to identify these cancers.

"Previous studies indicated that New Jersey, particularly the counties in the Northeast Corridor (Essex, Union, Middlesex) had high mortality rates for cancer," the report from the health officers said. "Because of these high mortality rates of cancer, and because this area is one of the most industrialized and densely populated sections in the nation, the term 'Cancer Alley' was coined for this geographic portion of New Jersey. Because of the scope of the problem, the health officers "took the initiative" by attempting local action in the areas of communication, identification of individuals with a high risk for cancers and coordination of health services, the report said.

The major findings, according to the report are:

- "Cancers, particularly breast and colo-rectal cancers, remain problems in Union County." In the past few years, the percentage of cancer deaths in the county has been running ahead of state figures. In 1980, 23.2 percent of all deaths in the county were caused by cancer; in the state, the figure was 22 percent.

- Union County residents, for the most part, use local hospitals for cancer care. In 1979, Union County had the highest rate of admissions to local hospitals for cancer care among any of the 11 northeastern counties in the state.

In the past two decades, "there has been increasing evidence that a major fraction (perhaps 50-80 percent) of fatal cancer cases are preventable. Environmental factors, such as diet, smoking, and alcohol consumption, are among the most common causes of cancer. From 1960 to 1979, the incidence of cancer in the county increased 50 percent. The report said.

Describing the county as a "hot spot" for cancer, the report stated that Union County must do better than the state in cancer prevention. It urged that local health officers in Union County are gathering needed information on the needs, the resources, and the gaps in the health care system, and plan to meet them. Union County now has cancer reviewers and consumers' committees. A plan of action, with guidelines and strategies based on implementation, is needed to local cancer problems.

The county organization this year is headed by Health Officer Robert M. Sherr of Westfield.

Divorce will be discussed

Problems related to divorce and ways to handle them will be examined in a "Family and Divorce Workshop" sponsored by Family Service Association of Summit, Inc. on March 11 and 12.

The workshop, the third to be presented by Family Service, is designed for divorcing parents and their children ages 5 through 17.

The program, based on the model developed by the Menninger Foundation, aims at helping parents and children face a bewildering array of tasks.

Children will participate in drama and art projects through which they can express feelings of loss, sadness, anger and confusion which they may be feeling but which they are unable to express verbally.

While the children are in sessions, their parents will meet in special sessions, cooperative parenting groups of parents will meet with staff members to specifically address the issues of divorce.

COLLEGE GIFT—Dr. Saul Orkin, Union County College president, will receive a check for $3,600 contributed as an unrestricted educational grant by the Sears-Roebuck Foundation, from R. H. Millard, foundation representative. The gift will be used for scholarships for students at the college. The grant was part of $2,500,000 allocated by the foundation for educational activities.

$3,600 gift goes to UCC

Union County College in Cranford is the recipient of a $3,600 grant from the Sears-Roebuck Foundation. Union County has been included in the Sears-Roebuck Foundation grants program since its inception in 1982.

The unrestricted gift was presented to Dr. Saul Orkin, UCC president, by Sears representatives R. H. Millard, at recent ceremonies conducted at the Cranford campus.

"We are pleased to receive one of the grants distributed by the Sears-Roebuck Foundation to colleges and universities," Orkin said. "It commends the foundation for its continued commitment to higher education. It represents a vote of confidence in the youth of our nation."

The grant will be used to provide scholarships in qualified students in Union County College. The grant is part of $2,500,000 expended in 1982 by the foundation.

Chiffon to cotton: bride has a wide choice in gowns

Why does a woman go through such trouble to find the perfect wedding gown? After all, it's a dress she'll wear only once. But that "once" is one of the most important days in her life and she'll want to look her finest.

Cara's Brides Shop

You are cordially invited to view our beautiful summer and early fall collection. Our prices will please you.

Sale now in progress on discontinued styles for all seasons.

Here are some tips to help the bride-to-be sort through the possibilities and find a dress that's right for her.

Narrow your choice before you actually set foot in a store. First, ask your self how formal your wedding will be and rule out any dresses that don't match in style.

One way to tell whether a dress is formal is by the fabric. For example, gossamer chiffon might be appropriate for a dinner dance reception while cotton eyelet is pretty at an afternoon garden reception. Other clues: a lot of lace or pearls and a long train in formal, while a simpler design and very short train is less so.

Finally, consider the actual specifics of style—neckline, waistline, sleeve shape and length, and color. (There's white, ivory, and new pastels, such as soft pink, peach, and aqua, along or combined with white.)

Start to actually shop at least six months before your wedding. Most wedding dresses are special ordered and take a couple of months between order and delivery. And you'll need time for alterations.

Plan ahead so you'll shop prepared. Wear the right underclothes, such as a good bra and long slip. Take along shoes with heels in the height you'll be wearing on your wedding day.

When you do find the dress, be certain the store consultant takes down all your measurements. Also make sure she includes the date you'll need the dress on your sales slip. This could be up to a full month before your wedding.

before your wedding. If you want a full-length or a full-length portrait in the newspaper.

Once the store does notify you that you should make an appointment for a fitting, don't delay. Again, bring the right shoes and underclothes.

Take your time and check the dress in a full-length mirror that lets you see from all angles. Here's what to look for: Is the hem just right? Is there a chance you'll trip on it? Does the skirt fall gracefully with the lining lying flat? Are any buttons sewn securely and to a straight line?

Tradition still counts for weddings

For many couples, the wedding is a time to honor tradition. The bride's gown, the ceremony, the reception—all are part of a long history of customs that have shaped the way we celebrate the union of two hearts.

One of the most important traditions is the bride's gown. For centuries, brides have worn white dresses, a symbol of purity and innocence. Today, brides still choose white dresses, though some opt for more modern styles like lace or tulle.

Another tradition is the ceremony itself. Many couples still opt for a traditional church wedding, complete with a priest and a hymn. Others prefer a more secular ceremony, perhaps in a garden or a hall.

Finally, the reception is a time for celebration. Traditionally, the bride and groom sit at the head of the table, and guests are invited to dance and enjoy the food. Today, receptions are often held in grand ballrooms or outdoor venues, and the menu is more varied than ever.

While tradition is important, many couples also want to incorporate modern touches into their wedding. This might mean choosing a non-traditional venue, like a beach or a vineyard, or opting for a more contemporary ceremony.

Some couples also choose to personalize their wedding in other ways. They might write their own vows, or have a special song played at the ceremony. These touches can make the wedding a truly unique and memorable event.

In the end, the most important thing is that the wedding is a celebration of love. Whether it's a traditional church wedding or a modern, personalized affair, the day is meant to be a joyous occasion for everyone involved.

Men's wedding attire is changing

There are some significant changes taking place in men's wedding attire, according to the American Formalwear Association.

Two strong influences have made their marks on the dress of grooms, groomsmen, ushers, best men and fathers of the brides. One is the general array of materials that has permeated the styling of much of mens wear during the last 18 months.

That look is typical of the Astaire and Bogart era and it derives from films like Chariots of Fire and TV shows as Brighthead revisited.

The other is the clothes worn at the "Wedding of the Century," that of Prince Charles and Lady Diana.

The costumes worn in the movie and the ultra-smart outfits worn at the royal wedding have rekindled an admiration for the traditional splendor of the more staid, yet distinctively handsome, dress of those who strictly clove to the hard and fast rules that were once universally observed.

Daytime formalwear in the traditional manner calls for the groom, the best man, the father of the bride and the ushers to wear cutaway (tail) coats. These may be oxford gray worn with striped trousers and a vest that either matches the coat or is in a light shade of gray.

The shirt is white and wing-collared and the tie is an ascot that is either modestly striped or finely checked.

Traditional mores for a semi-formal daytime wedding find the groom and all other participating men wearing "strollers" which are oxford gray coats cut the same as suit coats. These are worn with striped trousers and with a vest that either matches the coat or is in a lighter shade of gray.

The shirt has a pleated bosom and a red collar and the tie is a four-in-hand in either modest gray stripes or in a fine check.

Evening weddings (those held after 6 p.m.) find a marked difference in the "clothes" worn by the traditional group but not much variation in the outfits worn by the contemporary crowd.

A traditional formal evening ceremony finds the groom, the best man, the father of the bride and the ushers all in black full dress outfits. These consist of a black tuxedo worn with matching trousers.

Gift-buying is not a piece of cake

Buying wedding gifts used to be a piece of cake. All new brides needed the basics, from linens to food staples. Typically, a bride went directly from her parents' home to live with her husband. She had no occasion to stock up on household goods in between.

But today a bride has often spent time living on her own. Whether she had her own apartment or shared a place with friends, she's acquired many of the items that once made logical wedding gifts. What she wants now is the icing on the cake—gifts that are classy and out of the ordinary.

Unusual kitchen gifts are among the easiest and often the most welcome ways to indulge a bride or groom. It's hard to buy a good set of towels if you don't know the color of a couple's bathroom or silk sheets if no one can remember the size of their bed. But everyone knows they have to eat, and most couples choose cooking over take-out, fast foods or frozen dinners.

If you haven't shopped for cookware in a while, you may be surprised to find it can do more than just heat an evening meal. Cookware with nonstick surface, for example, cleans quickly and easily, without scrubbing. And because oil and butter is not necessary to keep food from sticking to the cookware's surface, caloric intake is also reduced.

Here are some gift ideas that can spice up a couple's basic cookware collection.

If the newlyweds enjoy experimenting with new ways of cooking, treat them to an electronic wok.

If they both work and need to cook several days of meals at once—or if they frequently entertain large groups of people—consider an 11-inch fryer that can cook big batches of chicken.

What about a dutch oven that roasts, braises and fries for up to 12 people or a jumbo fryer that can handle pork chops for eight? Don't forget the nonstick lasagna pans that also serve as a dessert pan.

When a big Sunday brunch is your favorite couple's idea of wedded bliss, an electric griddle is a good choice for hot cakes and sausages that sizzle. Waffle makers with nonstick surface can also produce sandwiches and even giant Italian cookies called pizzelles.

For those who consider rainy weekends an excuse for baking binges, gift wrap cookie sheets, regular or miniature cake pans, mini-muffin pans, tart pans and tube cake pans.

Do the bride and groom like to go camping? Pots with collapsible handles are made for people who can't gear.

Open casting slated for 'Cukoo's Nest'

An open casting call has been announced for "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest" by the Revelers of Rahway, in residence at the El Bodegon Restaurant, 169 West Main St., Rahway, Feb. 26 and Feb. 27 from 1 to 3 p.m. in the Revelers Theater.

Tony Betta of Irvington will serve as director. Betta has directed and performed in the Whole Theater, Cafe Theater and with the Revelers.

Luke-warm comedy stars Dudley Moore

By REA SMITH

Marshall Brickman, who has written a number of scripts for Woody Allen movies, wrote the screenplay for the lukewarm comedy "Lovesick," now playing at the El Bodegon Cinema, Union. He also directed the film. A reviewer has to wonder if Brickman had Woody in mind when he wrote this one (did Woody seriously turn it down?). The funny and not-so-funny one line gags uttered by the stars of "Lovesick," Dudley Moore and Elizabeth McGovern, and other members of the cast, remind us if they should be coming out of the mouth of Allen and Diane Keaton.

The story about a pint-sized psychiatrist (Moore), who falls for one of his patients (McGovern), never really goes off the ground. Despite the fact that it has the potential for a very funny movie, somehow, the scenes fall short of an hilarious comedy.

Moore, who happens to be a very funny guy, does the best he can with a mediocre script. You would think he had enough of spying on the tall and beautiful girl of his dreams in "10," not in the least, because he's doing the same thing with another tall and rather weirdly-made-up girl (McGovern) in "Lovesick."

Those scenes are still comical and evoke a healthy laugh from the audience, but they are too few and far between.

Fortunately, the other members of the cast are excellent, and there are some funny moments with Sir Alec Guinness, who plays Sigmund Freud, who follows Moore around in his imagination, discussing Moore's cases and Moore's own problems. When Moore mentions one of his oversexed patients, who had uttered a Freudian slip, Guinness asks with a straight face, "What's a Freudian slip?"

The featured players, Renee Taylor, Gene Saks, Christine Baranski, Lester Rawlins, Keith Broadhurst and David Strathairn, give the picture its substance, and the stars in stellar roles, Alan King, Selma Diamond and Wallace Shawn, offer Brickman more than he deserves.

McGovern, a fairly new performer (her only real contribution to motion pictures was a featured role in "Ordinary People"), is dull and emotionless, and one wonders what Moore finds in her that is important enough to foul up his life's work.

It is unfortunate that just as "Lovesick" looks as if it's ready to show some substance, it ends.

And a movie viewer (sitting next to this critic), who was just settling in to enjoy the movie, looked around and said with a puzzled cry, "That's it?"

Winter concert is planned for March 5 night

Charlotte Philley, soprano, will be starred in the winter concert of the Suburban-Symphony Society of New Jersey March 5 at 8 p.m. in the Orange Avenue School, Cranford. The orchestra will be directed by Ira Kraemer, music director, and will perform the "Roman Carnival Overture" by Berlioz, the "Overture to Verdi's 'I Vespri Siciliani'" and Dvorak's "Symphony No. 8 in G Major."

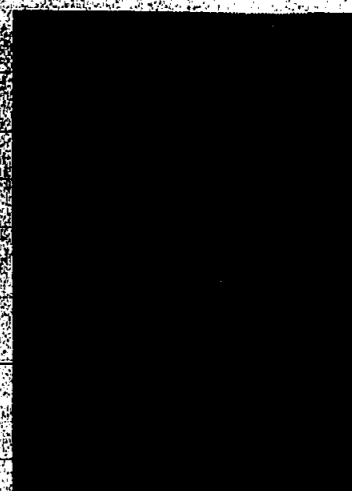

Philley's performance on March 5 will include arias from Mozart's "The Abduction From the Seraglio," Verdi's "Traviata," "Carpentier's 'L'utile, Delibe's 'Lakme'" and Rossini's "The Barber of Seville."

The society, in cooperation with the Union County College, Cranford, will present its second recital of its "Prelude" series Feb. 26 at 8 p.m. in the college auditorium. Also featured will be Eugene Philley, pianist, Roxanne Onori, mezzo-soprano, and the Suburban Symphony's string quartet. A film about opera will be shown.

The "Prelude" concerts are free to the public, and additional information can be obtained by calling 272-9159.

The final concert of the season will be held April 30 when the orchestra will join with the Scioa Cantorum of Plainfield in a performance of Carl Orff's oratoria, "Carmina Burana."

Ticket information can be obtained by calling 272-0742.

'MASS APPEAL' STARS—Shaun Cassidy, left, and Milo O'Shea dispute religious ideas in play at Paper Mill Playhouse, Millburn, directed by veteran actress, Geraldine Fitzgerald. Play will end April 6.

'Mass Appeal' mixes water and oil at Mill

By EYNN JOFFE

"Mass Appeal," the latest stage vehicle at the Paper Mill Playhouse, Millburn, may not be appealing to those of us who wish to believe in the sanctity of our religious leaders. Still, the raw, sometimes hurtful, truths are told in a quasi-humorous way by the two-player cast.

Brave to actor Milo O'Shea, who portrays the congregation-seeking wino, Father Tim Farley. (He recreates his Broadway role.) O'Shea's stage presence is strong, perhaps too strong for fellow actor Shaun Cassidy to shine on his own. Cassidy seems limp and lost on the stage; his best efforts involve scenes of anger.

Cassidy, who hails from a show business family (mother, Shirley Jones, and father, Jack Cassidy), plays Mark Dolson, a disillusioned young man, who wants nothing more than to join the priesthood to somehow free himself of painful family memories. His biggest character flaw, in this case, is his honesty.

When the two meet, we know fireworks will soon follow. Farley is a crowd pleaser, spouting "song and dance theology." Dolson notes, still, the older priest is master at his game. He likens the first symptom of a falling sermon to "the Nielsen ratings," always preaching what he knows will rank high in the parish popularity polls.

In his quest to teach Dolson the ropes, Farley devises a four part lesson system. "Hit me with a tragedy," he tells the younger man. "I'll tell you the rest of the story."

The simple and stupid warning that the first symptom of a falling sermon is the dreaded congregation cough.

The mixture of water and oil brings together a fragile friendship, culminating in a superb performance by Farley, who, breaking down, confesses his life's truths to the boy. "There are hints of hell on earth," he tells Dolson. "It's a painfully real soliloquy." Dolson relates the boiling death of his "beautiful tropical fish" and likens the congregation to them, silently screaming in their agony. "I drowned out what I didn't want to hear, so now I'm back listening to the screams of angels."

The irony in his attempt to join the priesthood in juxtaposition with the humorous vices of the successful priest, Farley, threatens the lad's stay at the St. Francis Seminary. In a final attempt to survive in the parish, Dolson appears before the church congregation to offer a bit of what he has learned from Farley's lessons.

The show, written by Bill C. Davis and directed by famed actress Geraldine Fitzgerald, who made her directorial debut in the Broadway production of "Mass Appeal," has lots of chuckles but few really hearty laughs. "When questioning the essence of our religious beliefs and the facade presented in "Mass Appeal," perhaps many of us need to find a deeper humor.

Pick of the week: "Electricity," by the Yates Brothers and Sisters (MCA Records). The Yates Brothers and Sisters are pure "Electricity," and it's causing one wonderful rhythmic musical current everywhere. "Electricity" also is the title (and first single) from this young, energetic group's debut album on MCA Records.

The Northern California-based YBS is comprised of three brothers, Anthony and Vincent, who are twins, and Pete, and their five cousins, the sisters, Regina and Tammy Combs. The amazing thing about the group is not the length of time they've been together but their ages since most of them are still in their teens.

The Yates brothers have been playing together for more than a decade; they were joined by their singing cousins eight years ago. It's been a long road but the desire and drive that united them as a family have likewise spurred them to musical achievements.

YBS is first and foremost a family. But its members also are five extremely different individuals, and the blend of their distinct personalities makes the group a dynamic unit.

Anthony has been playing guitar since age nine. His primary interest is music, and he wrote half of the songs on their previous album on Arista.

Vincent has been playing drums for as many years as his brother played guitar. Self-taught. Vince began thumping on boxes before he got his first kit.

Pete is the group charmer. He's an all-American boy who loves people. As a bassist, Pete has been compared to premier player, Larry Graham.

Regina is the group jester and flirt. As the other members of YBS, she began singing in church. It was instantaneous love for Regina, and she became devoted to music ever since.

Tammy Combs is the quietest member of YBS although she shares lead vocals.

Spring concert rehearsals set

The Central Art Society of New Jersey, Inc., has started rehearsals for its annual Spring concert in the First Baptist Church, 170 Elm St., Westfield.

The group is seeking new members, interested in singing choral masterpieces. Additional weekly rehearsals Tuesdays at 8 p.m. and audition for membership. Evelyn Blecke, director, will be accompanied by Annette White.

The chorus will present a program of Italian composers May 21.

Additional information can be obtained by calling 270-7071.

Play will star Irene Worth

Irene Worth will star in "Homage to James Joyce" and "Virginia Woolfe" After 100 Years" at Seton Hall University, South Orange, Monday at 8 p.m. Part of the university's Poetry-in-the-Round series, the reading will be held in the Theater-in-the-Round in the Bishop Dougherty Student Center.

Worth's performance in the series will be followed by Joyce Carol Oates, winner of the National Book Award for fiction, who will read from her new collection of poems, "Invisible Woman," March 24 at 8 p.m.

Tickets may be purchased by calling 761-0161.

Heart Association plans benefit show

A benefit performance of "Tom Sawyer" will be presented by the Stamford State Ballet for the American Heart Association, Metropolitan Chapter, April 23 at 8 p.m. in Montclair High School, 100 Chestnut St., Montclair. It was announced by Ronald J. Mount, Heart Fund chairman.

Additional information can be obtained by calling 789-3088 or 429-0804.

Guide to Good Dining

COMFORTABLE DINING—sets the scene where customers enjoy cocktails, lunch and dinner at Sneaky's, 424 Morris Ave., Springfield. Home-made pasta and fresh fish are featured daily.

The cuisine is tops ..and so is the staff

By GAIL CASALE

Dining at its finest begins at Sneaky's, the place where first-rate international cuisine, cordial service and a friendly atmosphere come together for a thoroughly enjoyable experience.

Located at 424 Morris Ave., Springfield, Sneaky's is two months old. Owner Peter Lyons, manager Kitty Fitzke and Carol the head waitress own Sneaky's. The restaurant establishment that conveys an adult, sophisticated atmosphere.

Sneaky's contemporary design is composed of mirrors and plants reminiscent of the California/Arizona environment. The look is basic and refined with small intimate dining rooms accented by subdued lighting.

Wash-466-Sneaky's is any week-day from 5 to 7 p.m. and join the sociable group of people gathered around the bar relishing their favorite cocktail and complimentary hors d'oeuvres served during the Happy Hour.

Sneaky's prides itself on serving only the freshest ingredients in all foods. Some house specialties include fresh fish, burgers ground-daily and eight distinct kinds of home-made pasta enhanced by the finest peccorino romano cheese imported from Italy. The restaurant also specializes in a variety of unique international sauces made from scratch daily.

The real reward lies in the delicious taste of the dishes prepared by chefs Louis Cardaci and Jonathan Vos. Begin with Sneaky's fresh pasta salad containing 25 ingredients. Among them are fusilli (a spiral shaped type of pasta) and 10 fresh vegetables topped with vinaigrette dressing.

We sampled several specials offered that day, each highly recommended. The capparelli with Espanole sauce, composed of round pufflike macaroni laced with a tangy brown sauce, was especially delicious. The pasta is light and melts in your mouth.

Shrimp Vesuvio on angel hair (fine linguini), is appropriately named after the chef, John Vesio, who mastered the dish. The preparation gives a new twist to shrimp scampi.

Add a little romance to your dinner with Sneaky's "pasta for lovers," heart shaped pasta called tortellini. Added ingredients are tomato sauce, spinach, prosciutto and parmesan cheese. It's simply superb.

Several different fresh fish (including extra large shrimp) and pasta dishes are featured on the menu daily, allowing Sneaky's diners to try something new on each visit to the restaurant.

When it comes to eating, my one weakness is dessert. Sampling various kinds is always a worthwhile venture. French fried ice cream made from Haagen Daza ice cream, combined with strawberries and whipped cream, is a hot/cold treat not to be missed.

Complement your meal with a choice from Sneaky's fine wine and champagne lists. Sneaky's stocks some of the best champagnes, like Korbel and Dom Perignon.

Adjacent to the dining area, there's even a Champagne room open Wednesday through Saturday evenings from 8 p.m. to 1:30 a.m. where champagne is served in buckets along the bar. There's a dance floor and a D.J. too.

Businessman's lunch is served with specials varying daily. A variety of sandwiches, refreshing salads and fresh soup of the day are offered also at lunch.

Sneaky's is open daily from 11:30 until 2 a.m.; major credit cards are accepted. Facilities are available for parties up to 50 people.

Adding to the efficient operation, Sneaky's houses a computer system that allows the server to punch out customers' orders which are then fed into another computer in the kitchen, thereby expediting the arrival of the meal to the customer's table.

There's always a supervisor on hand to assure quality service. When you visit the restaurant, say hello to Kitty, fondly known as the "heart-beat of Sneaky's," the lady who keeps it together along with the rest of the crew.

Juveniles in trouble getting ACCESS to help

At a time when juvenile crime is on the increase, court calendars are peaking and family break-ups are becoming more common, the Union County Department of Human Resources has established a resource to assist youth and families in crisis.

Called Project ACCESS, Adolescent Crisis Counseling and Emergency Special Services, it is based at the Union County Youth Service Bureau, 635 East St. Georges Ave., Roselle. The telephone number is 245-1230.

Project ACCESS is being funded as a demonstration model by New Jersey State Law Enforcement Planning Agency (SLPEA), which for six consecutive years funded the county's Youth Service Bureau. Project ACCESS is a 24-hour-a-day, seven-day-a-week family crisis counseling service. As of September 1983, all counties in New Jersey will be mandated to have a crisis intervention unit, and Union County's Project ACCESS is being regarded as a model.

Initially, Project ACCESS will be dealing with the following six towns within Union County: Rutledge, Plainfield, Union, Hillside, Roselle and Linden; it will accept referrals beginning in March. The project will become actively involved with the community in the near future.

Project ACCESS will be staffed by five people — three project administrators, Karen DeAngelis, and two crisis counselors. The project is a crisis counseling unit that will be available 24 hours a day. At the time of the crisis, the project will address the adolescent's crisis. This service will be offered in the acute stages of crisis, prior to judicial intervention. The purpose of intervening at the time of crisis is to deal with the immediate behavior with it in present and to "introduce" services when the family is most amenable to outside intervention.

At the outset, Project ACCESS will receive referrals from the police juvenile aid bureau in each of the initial six towns. The juvenile officers will refer families where the adolescent child is in danger of having an incurable criminal record signed against him or her. They will also be able to refer runaways and other homeless youth. Eventually it is hoped that adolescents or families themselves will call before actually reaching the point where a crisis necessitates police/judicial involvement, thus reducing the number of teenagers entering the juvenile justice system. The project thus expects to reduce the number of referrals to the J.I.N.S. (Juveniles in Need of Supervision) Shelter and also hopes to develop stronger functioning family units through counseling, supportive services, and follow-up contact.

A major thrust of Project ACCESS is to intervene in such a way as to avoid the removal of the adolescent from the home. Should placement become necessary, the project will continue to provide family counseling and crisis intervention. When all other resources have been exhausted, the project will refer the adolescent to the appropriate placement agency. During that time, the placement, as well as the family, will be required to become involved in intensive family counseling on a short-term basis to mediate and resolve the crisis issue. The ultimate goal is to return the adolescent to the home and define other family issues that need to be resolved, with referrals to the appropriate community agency.

The host home network is a significant and needed component of Project ACCESS, DeAngelis said. "If you or anyone you know is interested in becoming a host home volunteer, please inquire by contacting Project ACCESS at 245-1230. The counselors are available to make presentations to community, church or social organizations in order to heighten awareness of the project, increase community awareness of the existing problems, and resources available, and of course recruit host home volunteers."

"With a concerted effort and involvement of community, police, volunteers, and other service agencies, Project ACCESS can make a real, readily accessible, valuable and important resource to those in need, as well as reduce the number of juveniles inappropriately involved in the juvenile system," DeAngelis emphasized.
