'Cat invasion' upsets neighbors

By LYNN JOFFE

Springfield may soon see an ordinance limiting the amount of felines allowed in a home after residents approached the Township Committee in a plea for aid in what was described as an overwhelming situation Tuesday night.

According to South Springfield Avenue residents Charles and Jerry Beyer, some 20 cats owned by next-door neighbor Philip Wertz swarmed their home daily and litter their grounds.

"It looks like there are about a dozen new cats a month," Mr. Beyer said, "we worked hard to get rid of the old ones - what do we have to do to get a cat ordinance? These cats are ruining my property. We've been going through this for six years."

According to him, the Board of Health has been called in on the matter. "They've tried everything with this man," Beyer said.

"At one time there were 40 or 50 cats living there. The judge was up there and wouldn't even go in the place," Beyer said.

According to his wife, "When we first moved in, seven years ago, he would open the garage door and, literally, 100 cats would run out." Mrs. Beyer said many of the cats are "deformed" due to "inbreeding."

"This man is no animal lover. The cats live in the garage. It smells - it's never cleaned. There's cat litter all around the house."

"People are afraid. I love my home. I love living in Springfield. But he's throwing garbage in our yard. I walked out of my house and couldn't believe the things he said to me," she said.

Committeeman Philip Feintuch told the Beyers, "We were not aware of the situation with the cats - the Township is involved in litigation (with Wertz) concerning dogs. We will investigate and if necessary we will pass an appropriate ordinance."

In other business, former Board of Education Attorney Seymour Margulies, of Jersey City firm Margulies, Margulies and Wind, was unanimously authorized to represent Republican members of the Township Committee in a legal battle with the owners of East Coast Condo Tech, Inc., and Troy Ltd. Township Attorney Jay L. Kloud will represent the Township.

Mayor Bill Ruocco, Feintuch, and Joanne Tedesco were charged with fulfilling "campaign promises" after the committee's unanimous vote to approve a rollback of tenants' tax surcharges to the 1972 base. Feintuch previously had called the legal attack "specious."

The committee introduced an ordinance to change the parking restrictions in Springfield Center. This after Morris Avenue merchants implored the committee to help their businesses thrive by increasing the hours of permitted on-street parking and by allowing parking along the westbound lane. To date, parking is prohibited between the hours of 4:30 p.m. on weekdays and Saturdays, and 2:30 p.m. on Sundays. If the ordinance is approved by the State, the weekend parking restrictions would be removed and weekday restrictions would be changed to 7-9 a.m. and 4-6 p.m.

Committeeman Stanley Kaish said the committee felt "adequate safety" would be maintained with limited parking hours.

Sculpting classes buoy summer

By LYNN JOFFE

Chipping away at work is nothing new to Westfield artist Gladys Reimers who is currently conducting free classes in stone, clay, wire and styrofoam sculpture at the Springfield Pool. Residents lucky enough to have made the registration deadline.

Reimers and her husband of 40 years, Fred, conduct the weekly classes in which 20 students work strenuously to complete their artistic creations courtesy of the Township Committee.

According to Mayor Bill Ruocco, the class is funded by the Springfield pool and is no cost to local taxpayers as the pool is "self-sufficient." Describing the program as "constructive play," Ruocco said it was designed to uplift the cultural aspect of the pool.

"I'm energetic and high-spirited Reimers said, "Too many people think they can't do anything artistic. I really feel that everybody has something in which they can create. Everybody might be better at something, but everybody can do it. Most students come to the class and say 'I'm just afraid of death to try. I know I can't make anything' - the results are amazing. Quite a few of my students have gotten awards in shows."

Reimers has worked at her craft for some 14 years after an eye disorder forced her to leave her trade as designer-illustrator for an art which required less eye strain. "It became so involved in sculpture that I never even tried to go back to silverplating. I enjoy sculpture much more," she said, and added much of her work is done in "marble," the harder stones, "wood, and metal."

Currently, the artist is busily involved in sculpting a series of animals in danger of extinction. Dedicated to this project, Reimers already has completed a sea lion, polar bear, nighthawk, pelican, white whale, kangaroo, armadillo, seal pup, falcon, tree frog, otter and koala bear, and is now working on another life-size koala bear with cub.

"When I do animals, I try to do as much life study as I can. I'll go to the zoo or wherever I can find them. Then I work from photographs. I might spend hours and hours doing research - it's amazing how many things you learn."

"Animals are probably my favorite, but I also work in abstract and do quite a few figures," Reimers said.

According to her, a successful sculpture is not necessarily a question

'Basic Test' mastery exhibited at Dayton

Results of the New Jersey Minimum Basic Skills Test indicated "a very high level of mastery" on scores of 216 Jonathan Dayton Regional High School ninth graders, according to the district's Director of Pupil Personnel Services Dr. Francis X. Kenny.

The tests, administered statewide in March, are designed to measure students' competencies in reading and computational skills.

In the reading category, 97.2 percent of those tested met state standards, and 97.6 percent met the standards in mathematics. Students were required to score at least 75 percent correct answers on the reading test and 65 percent on the math test.

More than half of the Dayton freshman scored at or above 85 percent correct.

Three years later, during the 1982-83 school year, what is now the Union County Senior Citizens Studies Center, a unit of Union County College (UCC), was offering some 50 courses to more than 500 older adults in 15 Union County municipalities, including Union, Linden, Springfield, Mountaintide and Winfield.

In 1983-84, the program may not exist. The state, which was to have reimbursed the college this year for the program, has cut off almost all funding for the program, as a result, the college had to allocate about $50,000 to pay the costs incurred over the past year.

But, according to Prof. Oscar Fishtein of Plainfield, who taught the first classes and is director of the senior center, the college does not have the funds to continue supporting the classes in the future.

Under the new state funding program, the number of senior citizens who can take the classes is limited to 1 percent of the total school population, or about 30, according to Roy Smith of the Union County College (UCC) public information department.

The seniors enrolled under this program also are required to take at least two courses and are fitted into regularly-scheduled classes only on a "seat available basis."

Classes conducted solely for senior citizens no longer are funded by the state.

But rather than discontinue the program for all but 95 people, Fishtein has launched a campaign to raise funds to subsidize the free tuition courses for senior citizens.

"We have one of the largest and one of the broadest higher educational programs for senior citizens in the state. Our goal now is to maintain the program at its current level at least," Fishtein said.

"It is our intention and desire to maintain a senior citizens program despite the loss of state funds which had served to underwrite part of the program in the past," he added.

Among the courses offered during the 1982-83 school year were: humanities, abnormal psychology, drawing, themes in literature, New Jersey government, the American experience in the 20th century, contemporary American issues, painting, best sellers, art ap-

Weiss hearing petition

A petition of relief calling for a "stay" of all Board of Education actions concerning redistricting and the closing and selling of Walton School was scheduled to be heard 1:30 p.m. yesterday in the Newark Office of Administrative Law, 185 Washington St., before Judge Stephen Weiss, according to John Holtz, public information officer for the Office of Administrative Law in Trenton.

Included in the verified petition of relief was a call to discount the votes of board members Louis Monaco and Development Corp. of Union

Union Township Committeeman E. James Bobette, senior citizens commissioner, said: "I am joining with Prof. Fishtein, director of the program, in trying to seek alternative funding. Many of the participants have pledged money." The Township Committee and Board of Education have pledged continuing "in-kind" support for the program and during the summer I shall be seeking grant funds toward the $20,000 goal.

About 200 of the 500 senior citizens in the program are from Union Township and 12 classes are held in Union. Each class costs approximately $1,000; of this amount, $600 is for salaries and the remainder for administrative and other purposes.

According to Fishtein, it is the 200 Union Township senior citizens who are the leaders of the senior group. The president, Curt Silliane, secretary, Catherine Baggio, and treasurer, Anthony Paglia, all are from Union.

All checks should be made out to Senior Citizens Studies Center, Union County College, and sent to Fishtein's attention at UCC, 1033 Springfield Ave., Cranford, 07016. The deadline for contributions for the 1983-84 school year is Aug. 1.

Here we go again

Last week, Assembly Democrats unveiled their latest version of a "fair" redistricting plan. It was exactly what anyone could have predicted. Designed to meet the Supreme Court mandate of population equality, it makes a few cuts here, adds a few patches there — and leaves the state with the same mismatched districts that it had last year.

Congressman James Courter's sprawling 12th District becomes even more sprawling, and the few eastern Union County suburban communities that are tacked onto it are even more swamped than before by the district's generally rural character.

But perhaps one of the neatest maneuvers in this redistricting is what has happened to Linden. To appreciate it, one must go back to last year and the creation of the infamous 7th, or Fishhook, District — so named because of its shape. In the opinion of most political observers, the district was created specifically for Democrat Adam Levin, who ran for Congress against Republican Matthew Rinaldo in 1982. Rinaldo had been considered virtually unbeatable in the 12th District, which he represented until last year. Shuffled out of that district — and into the 7th, he still rolled up a victory. Now, with this newest map, heavily-Democratic Linden is piled into the 7th, stacking the deck against him still more.

Of course it's highly unlikely that this, or any other plan drawn up by the Democratic Legislature, will win the approval of Governor Thomas Kean, a Republican.

Waiting till next year to redistrict, however, is no solution. Either we'll still have a Democratic Legislature, with a continued stalemate, or we'll have a Republican Legislature, and get a GOP gerrymander to replace the Democratic one.

We repeat what we've said before: the only fair way of redistricting is by way of a bipartisan commission which will consider not only population equality but also the characteristics of the communities that are thrown together.

Refinance mortgage? It could save dollars

Given an opportunity to invest a few thousand dollars now and save tens of thousands of dollars later, most people would give the matter serious thought. If you are holding a mortgage assumed a year or two ago, when interest rates were as high as 18 percent, you have this opportunity to save dollars down the road.

Refinancing your high-interest mortgage now that interest rates are down to 13 percent and lower may be a prudent move. The New Jersey Society of Certified Public Accountants (CPAs). Although it will not be cost-free, you could save thousands of dollars over the life of your mortgage.

The Federal Housing Administration estimates that as many as 40 percent of its recent mortgage applications have come from homeowners who want to refinance mortgages. The Federal Home Loan Bank Board, which keeps tabs on mortgages financed through the country's savings and loan associations, notes that the monthly volume of loan closings for refinancing grew from $32 billion in September 1982 to more than $2 billion in March 1983.

To decide if refinancing is worthwhile, calculate all the costs and savings you expect, both immediate and long-term. Before you go through this arithmetic, keep in mind it's only useful if you plan to live in your home for at least two or three years, CPAs say.

In general, refinancing is a smart financial move if the difference between your current interest rate and a new one amounts to 2 percent or more. To be safe, CPAs and lenders recommend a spread of 3 percentage points. Refinancing your mortgage actually means getting a new mortgage, CPAs point out. That's true even if you refinance with the same lender.

Because it is now, you are subject to various closing fees — a new appraisal, title search or update, bank attorney charges, and the expense of a new credit investigation — fees that could total between $500 and $600.

However, closing fees the second time around are usually lower. It should also be easier to connect your bank or lender to give you a new mortgage, because you have an established paying record. In addition, a lender may be more willing to refinance because it will not have to tie up any new money on the deal. If you are holding a mortgage assumed a year or two ago, when interest rates were as high as 18 percent, you have this opportunity to save dollars down the road.

Refinancing your mortgage may also affect other planning, CPAs note. Naturally, interest paid on a mortgage is tax-deductible, so when you settle on the lower monthly payments, remember your interest deductions for future years will also be lower. Prepayment penalties and points are deductible the year you pay them.

Of course, you can shop around for a new mortgage just as you would shop around for any deal. Try to negotiate with your bank or other lender, CPAs suggest.

When calculating the savings from refinancing a mortgage, do not overlook how much interest you could have earned on an investment of what you spend on fees and penalties. Then decide if the deal is worthwhile; chances are refinancing will be the way to go.

Where to put waste facility still a question

By DAVID F. MOORE
Various aspects of our hazardous waste situation continue to dominate the front pages of our newspapers, and I guess such will remain the case. The best news is that the New Jersey Hazardous Waste Facility Siting Commission is doggedly moving ahead in its job of establishing criteria for what kind of hazardous waste facility goes where.

I've written about this before, and so have a lot of other persons. But I was stopped short in my tracks recently when an old friend in southern New Jersey wrote me a note, in effect, that if I did a better job of explaining what these various facilities really are, maybe fewer people would be alarmed about their potential locations, in terms of proximity to their own homes.

She's right, of course, and I quickly wrote her to explain myself more fully. The problem I've attacked is that, while everybody agrees on the need for disposal facilities, nobody wants them too close to home. That's what's kept the Siting Commission busy explaining its proposed siting criteria at a lengthy series of hearings.

Public is 'fed up' with auto insurance costs

By ASSEMBLYMAN EDWARD GILL (R-21st District)

My recent mail and telephone calls have been heavy in the area of auto insurance, education and solid waste disposal. By far the loudest cries have been on auto insurance — so we will devote this column to this very controversial subject.

In the last few weeks, New Jersey's automobile insurance problems are finally getting the attention they have deserved. The insurance-busting public is now being heard. My constituents are writing to me, the media, their agents and their insurance companies. They are telling in clear terms that they are fed up with the cost of a system they barely understand. They see themselves as helpless pawns caught in a vast, complex struggle involving economic, international and political business, professional and political groups. As a legislator, I have seldom dealt with a more complex problem, but I know if we are to be honest with ourselves and our constituents, we must meet this issue head on.

Why auto insurance costs so much: The principal reason New Jersey's auto cost more to insure than any other state lies in the laws and regulations unique to this state. The same insurance companies insure the same kinds of drivers and automobiles in other states for much less money, and they make a profit. Here they lose money and some have left the state, causing the New Jersey driver to search for coverage anywhere he can find it. New Jersey also has more claims per 100 cars insured, and they cost more to settle than those of most states.

Now, just over 10 years later, we have the highest cost insurance system in the country. In spite of the mandatory law, about 600,000 drivers are driving without insurance and about 1.4 million of the 4.5 million cars registered are not insured in the assigned risk plan. Small wonder the public is confused and frustrated over auto insurance.

How to reduce costs: There is much to be done to put the system back in balance. We can move to reduce benefits and, therefore, costs. We can attempt to contain costs directly through control of the vendors involved in selling their services. Doctors, hospitals, lawyers, insurance salesmen and therapists are some whose incomes rely on the auto liability and no-fault insurance packages. There are some who claim that these special interests have made unconscionably high income and profits from the New Jersey automobile insurance programs. Generally speaking, if these professionals have the public's interest at heart, they must agree to stop blaming each other for the high costs and work together to stabilize or reduce costs.

Bodily injury: The system should make people whole. It should not provide windfalls at public expense. We can limit the no-fault payout by requiring a limited benefit such as $50,000, or by providing for deductibles or co-insurance features. Many people already have group insurance and don't need duplicate no-fault insurance. If we provide options to the public and require the insurers to offer higher limits, we at least put some flexibility into the system.

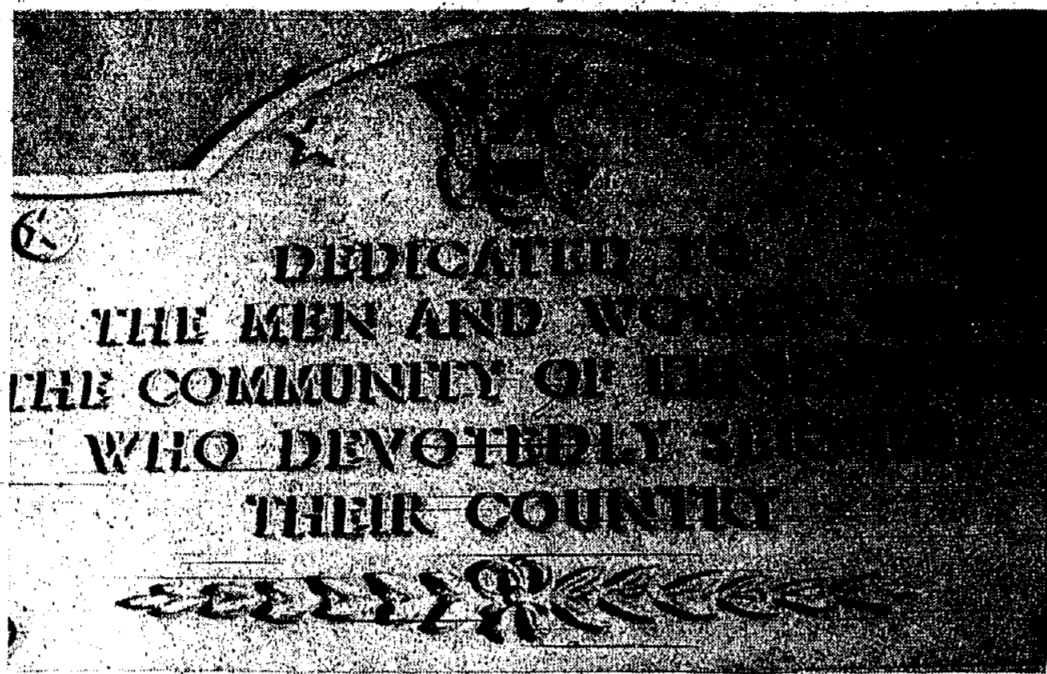

Some current suggestions and bills call for controlling doctor's fees and hospital charges, as well as what insurance companies, agents, lawyers and therapists can charge. I am reluctant to create boards of panels to set fees for doctors, lawyers, or anyone else. I hope a better way to control costs would be through more flexible laws that require lower limits, fewer controls on participants, and more choices to the purchaser.

Key is threshold: Over the years, many of the possible solutions I have mentioned have been discussed, and some could have been instituted, but we in selling their services. Doctors, hospitals, lawyers, insurance salesmen and therapists are some whose incomes rely on the auto liability and no-fault insurance packages. There are some who claim that these special interests have made unconscionably high income and profits from the New Jersey automobile insurance programs. Generally speaking, if these professionals have the public's interest at heart, they must agree to stop blaming each other for the high costs and work together to stabilize or reduce costs.

Property damage: Property damage coverage is also a major component of the premium dollar. Although collision and comprehensive are not required by law, anyone who finances a car must usually buy these coverages — and together with property damage liability, they consume much of the total dollars in the system. We can't legislate changes in auto design, competition in auto parts or lower repair labor rates. Some of these items must be dealt with at the federal level. Others are functions of inflation and competition. We can and have dealt with licensing of body shops, auto theft, fraud and salvage titles. This is positive action toward stabilizing or reducing auto insurance.

Summary: Clearly, the subject has been discussed, reviewed and researched to death. There is clear precedent to follow from the success of other states. There is strong evidence that pressure is mounting for the legislature to either correct the situation or face the consequences. What we do need now is bipartisan effort by legislators of good will who see the public need and are capable of rising above private interests. I think there are enough such bills in the pipeline on both sides of the aisle to get the job done.

Correct Scene answers to 12. Other correct answers came from Bertha of Springfield and Judy Butler of Union. The latter wrote that, though she passes it on the way to and from work every day, "I just noticed it the other day."

standpoint of society's best interests is the facility which would recycle hazardous waste into something useful. It's been truly said that a pollutant is merely a resource which is in the wrong place. This idea should be pursued even if it's not financially profitable from the marketplace standpoint of its products.

Two leaders in the facility race are incinerators and chemical neutralization plants. The incinerator, if it burns hot enough, long enough and has the best kind of air pollution control, is just fine. But requires boiler fuel frequently to achieve the right temperatures, and while it can generate steam, it destroys instead of recycles.

I've written about this before, and so have a lot of other persons. But I was stopped short in my tracks recently when an old friend in southern New Jersey wrote me a note, in effect, that if I did a better job of explaining what these various facilities really are, maybe fewer people would be alarmed about their potential locations, in terms of proximity to their own homes.

Property damage: Property damage coverage is also a major component of the premium dollar. Although collision and comprehensive are not required by law, anyone who finances a car must usually buy these coverages — and together with property damage liability, they consume much of the total dollars in the system. We can't legislate changes in auto design, competition in auto parts or lower repair labor rates. Some of these items must be dealt with at the federal level. Others are functions of inflation and competition. We can and have dealt with licensing of body shops, auto theft, fraud and salvage titles. This is positive action toward stabilizing or reducing auto insurance.

Summary: Clearly, the subject has been discussed, reviewed and researched to death. There is clear precedent to follow from the success of other states. There is strong evidence that pressure is mounting for the legislature to either correct the situation or face the consequences. What we do need now is bipartisan effort by legislators of good will who see the public need and are capable of rising above private interests. I think there are enough such bills in the pipeline on both sides of the aisle to get the job done.

People in wheelchairs, who all too often find public transportation barred to them, can now ride some of the buses rolling along the streets and highways of New Jersey.

NJ Transit, the state public transportation agency, has 27 lift-equipped buses in service on 70 routes. But the handicapped aren't making full use of them.

The buses "aren't getting sufficient use," Anthony L. Grazio of NJ Transit conceded. He theorized that some wheelchair-bound people feel "more secure" in vehicles operated by private organizations, who can give them individual attention. Many of these vehicles also come from NJ Transit, which provides free station wagons, vans and mini-buses, and without lifts, to non-profit organizations for transporting the elderly and the handicapped.

On the NJ Transit buses, the drivers will activate the lift device — a platform for those in wheelchairs, on crutches or with walkers. Those using the lift should stay at least three feet back from the curb to leave space for the platform, which extends about 18 inches over the curb. Once they roll their chair onto the lift, lock the brakes and grasp the handrails, a safety barrier is automatically activated to keep the chair from rolling off. When the lift platform is even with the platform of the bus, the wheelchair can be unlocked and moved into the bus.

On the left side of the bus is an area designated for wheelchairs, equipped with a device to hold the chair in place and a fold-down seat for other passengers when it is not being used by the handicapped.

Since their primary responsibility is to operate the buses, drivers are not allowed to get off to offer assistance.

However, once the person is on the bus, the driver will help secure the wheelchair in place, NJ Transit reported.

The buses also can "kneel" — that is, the front can be lowered six inches to street or curb level — to make getting on easier for those who have trouble climbing onto the high first step.

In an effort to make more people aware of the availability of the buses, and to encourage those in wheelchairs to use them, NJ Transit last week offered free rides to the handicapped.

The week-long promotion was in the nature of a celebration for the state agency; it was held to underscore the fact that all of the 271 Grumman "Flexibles" Advanced Design Buses purchased by NJ Transit in 1981 which are equipped with lifts are now in service.

The first lift-equipped buses were put into use on 10 lines in Essex County in May 1982. By November of last year, 26 lines — most of them in Essex but some also in Union County — had the vehicles. In May of this year, the service was extended to South Jersey, and now all of the buses are in use.

"We are extremely elated over the implementation of accessible bus service for handicapped riders on all of the 271 lift-equipped buses that operate in the state," said Jerome C. Krumo, executive director of NJ Transit.

"When we initially placed the new Grumman transit buses in service, we promised handicapped people and persons confined to wheelchairs that NJ Transit would provide them with regular route service. I am pleased that we have fulfilled that pledge 100 percent," he added.

The routes to which the buses are assigned were selected on the basis of a survey made by an NJ Transit Special Transit Services Citizens Advisory Committee and staff of the state agency.

They include the No. 8 Morris Avenue line; the No. 14 Clinton Place line; the No. 25 Springfield Avenue line; the No. 28 Roselle Park line; the No. 39/49 Harrison-Union line, and the No. 49 Union line.

Other Northern New Jersey routes served by NJ Transit lift-equipped buses are: 1 Newark; 5 Kinney - Newark; 6 16th Street - Cross-town; 7 Jackson - Hudson County, Jersey City and Hoboken; 9 Newark Avenue - Jersey City; 11 Newark - Willowbrook; 14 Broad; 14 Greenville - Jersey City and Bayonne; 20 Orange Cross-town; 21 Orange; 21 West New York - Hudson County; 24 Orange - Elizabeth; 27 Mt. Courter: Increases in defense will raise expenditures in N.J.

UNION—Military construction appropriations and other bills for the 1984 Department of Defense (DoD) budget contain an increase of $10.6 million over the last year (of New Jersey, according to Rep. Jim Courter (R-21st District). The state's only member of the Armed Services Committee in either House or Senate.

"In fiscal year 1983, New Jersey received $17.2 million of the $7 billion construction budget. The 1984 appropriation of $7.05 billion earmarks $24.18 million for projects throughout the state — an increase of 63 percent from last year," he said.

"I would like to see New Jersey become one of the top 30 states to receive federal defense dollars," he said. "We need funds to help to ensure that our state gets its fair share," Courter said.

Army installations in New Jersey include Fort Dix in Wrightstown, Fort Monmouth in Eatontown, Ft. Belknap in Dover, and Military Sealift Command in Bayonne. Naval stations are Lehighurst Naval Air Station, Earle Naval Weapons Station in Middletown, and the Jet Propulsion Test Facility in Trenton. McGuire Air Force Base is located in Pointe-aux-Indes. In addition, several dozen National Guard armories throughout the state.

Other funds include $2.04 million for a Navy combat system site and housing facility at Fort Dix; $475,000 for remodeling of the Zalkofsky naval engineer center and an additional $3.72 million for personnel housing. Atlantic City's Air National Guard is allocated $2.8 million to upgrade its administrative and medical facilities, while the Woodbury National Guard Army will use $1.3 million for expansion of existing facilities.

Sandmeier students help 2 good causes

By LYNN JOFFE
SPRINGFIELD—Sandmeier School teacher Annette Lacioppa and her fourth grade class proved once again the old adage that a little education goes a long way. Lacioppa taught her class the importance of community awareness and problem solving by way of a recent spelling contest fundraiser. The students and teacher accumulated $7.50 and donated that money to the Springfield Police Reserve and the Save a Life Committee. Included in a letter Lacioppa sent to John Cotage, coordinator of the Springfield Office of Emergency Management, was the importance of such education to school age youngsters. "The following donation is made on behalf of my fourth grade class at Sandmeier School. The children earned part of the money on a spelling activity and I supplied the matching funds. The purpose was to increase their awareness of community problems and to participate, even in a small way, toward the solution of those problems."

Threat of AIDS is cited by Gill

UNION—Citing the growing concern over AIDS (Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome) as a threat to the entire population, Assemblyman Edward K. Gill (R-District 21) has introduced legislation that would create a separate criminal offense for a person who donates blood knowing he is infected with a communicable disease. This legislation would cover all diseases capable of being transmitted through blood transfusions. "I know that the people of New Jersey are just as concerned as the people of New York, where most of the reported cases have occurred," said Gill. "Recently AIDS has been identified in children and other adults that do not fall under the four cited classifications in the adult population of homosexuals, drug users, Italian immigrants and hemophiliacs," he added. "Until such time as the cause of some of these diseases can be isolated, we need to take this step to protect our citizens," concluded Gill.

Water Company receives a safety award

SPRINGFIELD—Commonwealth Water Company, a 128-employee operation providing potable water service to 65,000 customers in North Jersey communities, including Springfield, has been recognized by the National Safety Council with a second place award among all water utilities nationwide for its outstanding employee safety record, the company announced recently.

The employee safety record consisted of "0" disabling work related accidents, out of 262,976 man-hours worked from April 21, 1981 through Dec. 31, 1982. Commenting on the award, Jack H. King, vice president of Commonwealth noted: "The employee safety programs are important for the welfare of the employee and the customer as well. Our employees hold down insurance premiums for the company, and ultimately, the customer. Commonwealth participates in and provides a comprehensive employee safety training and instruction program which includes safety tagline talks and defensive driving courses.

An estimated savings of $20,000 resulted from the perfect 1981 safety record. The dollar cost of an accident above and beyond is figured on the basis of direct costs, like medical expenses and wage replacement. It also includes hidden costs associated with production slowdowns or stoppages resulting from the accident.

"Our employees deserve the credit for taking the extra step to be sure that when working, safety is the key note," The work to be done is on a section of King said, "The credit goes to these men and women who serve the public 24 hours a day, often in extreme weather conditions. We hope our customers will feel equally proud of the accomplishment of these individuals."

Springfield Legion geared for title run

With the holiday tournaments out of the way, the Springfield American Legion baseball team has entered the stretch drive in its bid to win the Union County League championship and gain a berth in the state tournament.

"Our priority all season has been the county," said Springfield coach Harry Weierman. "The winner of the league gets an automatic spot in the state tournament. The second through fifth place teams participate in a playoff to determine who is the league's other representative in the state tournament. Obviously, we would prefer to win the league outright."

With the regular season heading down the stretch, Weierman feels good about his team's chances.

One of the league's all time winning pitchers, John J. Ehrhardt (7-4), hurled three complete game wins to lead the TV men back into the chase. The highlight was a five hit shutout over Mill-Spring in a 4-0 win. John M. Ehrhardt and Vinnie Cocchia combined for five hits with the Township.

Custom Floors won a 6-5 thriller over Sha Hercol. Veterans Dave Cohen and Steve Grau. Dave Miniman and Joey DeCarlo, who had two hits each.

Essemplare was also outstanding in centerfield. With Springfield clinging to a one-run lead in the fourth inning, Essemplare threw out a runner trying to score from second on a single. And in the fifth inning, he made a spectacular running catch of a long fly in right center, then whirled around and doubled a runner off first base.

Bob Dempster, Bob Conte, Kevin Lalar and Jamey Ehrhardt combined for 10 hits in a 12-7 victory over the Knights of Columbus with Ehrhardt hitting his fourth home run.

There's no sound of running feet

By LYNN JOFFE
The center is filled with colorful posters, happy faces and a staff that uses the latest teaching techniques. Laughter resounds through the building.

Anyone visiting the school might pause, expecting to hear the cheerful clatter of feet running through the hallways. But it's a different sound that echoes from the linoleum floor.

The facility is the United Cerebral Palsy League of Union County, located at 373 Clermont Terrace in Union. The sound in the hallways is the sound of crutches.

According to Dr. David Spelkoman, executive director, the center serves clients with a wide range of handicaps including physical and orthopedic disabilities, emotional problems, mental retardation and neurological impairments.

"Our programs include an infant stimulation program for children from a few months to three years of age, developmental classes for children from three to five years of age, a school which has been approved by State Board of Education for children from five to 20 years of age, and a work activity training center for adults from 18 through late adulthood," Spelkoman said.

"In addition, our programs offer medical, therapeutic and social services including physical, occupational and speech therapy to meet the special needs of our clients," he said.

Among the offerings is the "respite care" program, which offers clients and their families weekends apart to relax and function separately, giving patients a chance to develop their living skills. Two to three multiply-handicapped persons are served per weekend — in all, about 120 persons per year. "We have consistently had very favorable reactions to that program," Spelkoman said. He added, "We try to make this a fun/learning situation."

Clients at the center are physically disabled. Wheelchairs, crutches, and walkers abound. Some wear special foam headgear, resembling a wrestler's, to protect them from falls or injuries caused by seizures.

Individual treatment plans are developed to target the special needs of each participant. Often these include feelings of inferiority, and the center works to battle those misconceptions. "We stress the concepts of dignity and self-worth. A feeling of accomplishment goes a long way," Spelkoman said.

The center has not only professional therapists, social workers, volunteers and interns, but also a clinic staffed by a pediatric neurologist, physiatrist, registered nurse and other medical consultants. A "workshop" room in which repairs and corrections are made on equipment is located on the premises.

In addition, the center offers a relatively new program entitled "Camp Summershine" which provides recreational and camping experiences to the multiply-handicapped of Union County. It is designed to reinforce skills emphasized during the school year. Activities include arts and crafts, nature

Alumni gift used for computer

Kean College of New Jersey has acquired a Prime 2250 mini-computer, using a $30,000 gift from the Alumni Association, under a special program made available by Prime Computer to four-year institutions of higher education.

Kean college initiated courses in computer science in 1964 beginning with 11 math majors. This year the college will serve more than 1100 full and part-time computer science majors. There are approximately 1800 students taking computer courses and another 300 are waiting for admission.

Since 1973, when Kean first awarded seven bachelor of science degrees in computer science, the demand for space in computer courses has exploded. About 27 adjunct instructors, many of them from a dozen Fortune 500 companies, are required to help with the class load in addition to the 17 full-time faculty members in the Department of Mathematics/Computer Science.

Students for the computer courses come to Kean from two-year and four-year colleges in New Jersey and from other states as well as entering freshmen. Another kind of computer student is one who already holds a degree. According to Dr. Regina Garb of Bloomfield, who heads Kean's computer program: "We have had a growing number of post baccalaureate students. Their undergraduate majors include psychology, biology, management science, mathematics and allied health. They are coming to obtain an additional competency in computer science at the baccalaureate level."

Kean offers a bachelor of science degree in computer science and a bachelor of science degree in computer science technology. Some

A "work activity training center" program serves the center's adult clients, who are unemployable in the outside workforce. It gives them the opportunity to develop vocational skills under the supervision of a workshop director, production supervisor and workshop assistant. The program, conducted weekdays from 9 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., provides sheltered employment opportunities such as light assembly, collating and packaging, and prime manufacturing including horticulture, weaving and woodwork, Spelman said. Specially designed equipment is used and vocational tasks are carefully designed to fit the individual abilities and limitations of each handicapped client, he added. In addition to vocational development, the work activity training center has programs to enhance growth and development in the areas of language development; gross and fine motor skills; social and emotional development; adult education; activities of daily living; development of hobbies and leisure time activities.

Using vans equipped with electronic lifts, the center provides round-trip transportation for clients attending the programs.

The United Cerebral Palsy League of Union County, a non-profit organization, was founded in 1948, when it was housed in Elizabeth. The barrier-free Clermont Terrace building, which opened in 1974, currently houses all of the league's operations.

Additional information concerning any aspect of the programs offered may be obtained by calling the center at 854-5800.

Needy will get $198,000 in aid

A plan developed by the Emergency Food and Shelter Local Board of Union County will provide more than $198,000 in food and shelter for needy county residents who meet specific guidelines.

The National Emergency Food and Shelter Local Board of Union County was headed by Barbara Brande, executive director of Catholic Community Services, and made up of representatives from the United Way of Union County, the Salvation Army, the American Red Cross and the Council of Jewish Federations.

The agencies receiving funds are the Flynn Fellowship Houses, Elizabeth; YWCA of Eastern Union County, Elizabeth; Salvation Army, Elizabeth and Plainfield Corps; American Red Cross, Eastern Union County, Plainfield and Westfield chapters; Jewish Family Service, Elizabeth; United Way of Union County; Association for Retarded Citizens, Plainfield, and Catholic Community Services, Linden.

CERTIFICATE AWARD—Mary Meier, left, director of blood services for the American Red Cross, Eastern County Division, presents award to Sister Regina Martin, principal of Mother Seton Regional High School, Clark, at the fourth annual blood drive held at the school, while Red Cross volunteer Lisa Haarn of Union looks on. The presentation was for students and faculty members for their generous volunteer support in helping to meet the blood needs of the community.

Genevieve P. Di Venuto, chairwoman of the Red Cross emergency disaster fund raising project, this week repeated her appeal to all residents of Eastern Union County to send a donation to the Red Cross Chapter in Elizabeth. She added "heartfelt thanks to those who have already sent their generous dollars to help."

The National Red Cross has exhausted its disaster funds because of the tremendous number of disasters occurring throughout the country, said Di Venuto. "We are all aware of the fires, floods, earthquakes, mud slides, tornadoes and other devastation of land and homes throughout our nation. It should be our concern as good neighbors, and it is the concern of the American Red Cross to provide help to those in need," she said.

"Your local chapter is assessed over $23,000 to be sent to National Red Cross to help continue National Disaster Services and to replenish its 'reserve for disasters," she explained. "We need the National Red Cross." Di Venuto said, "We can handle most local disasters, but a severe disaster in any state needs sophisticated equipment, a tremendous amount of money, blood donations, and numerous staff and volunteer services. Only National Red Cross can supply needs. Red Cross services are free, so we must receive in order to give."

"The National Red Cross stays on the job long after agencies have left the scene, assisting the victims of any disaster with supplies, food, clothing and other necessities, to include the operation of mass shelters," she added. "Disaster can strike any one of us in our area. It may have already happened to your friends or relatives. Please, mail your contribution to Eastern Union County Chapter, American Red Cross, 203 West Jersey Street, Elizabeth, N.J. 07202. We will welcome any contribution, as large or as small as your means will permit."

Union College history to be published in fall

"New Jersey's Union College," a history of the Cranford-based two-year institution, will be published by Fairleigh Dickinson University Press, Rutherford, Madison, Teaneck, it was announced by Dr. Saul Orkin, president of Union County College.

The history of Union College, which was founded on October 16, 1933, as a federally-funded junior college, was written by Dr. Donald R. Raichle of Springfield, a professor of history at Kean College of New Jersey, Union.

The 259-page book will be published to coincide with the college's 50th anniversary celebration, which will open in October, Orkin said.

The book will be published by Fairleigh Dickinson University Press in conjunction with Associated University Presses, London and Toronto.

"New Jersey's Union College" was commissioned by Union County College under a grant from the Union College Foundation, Orkin reported.

The history traces the college's development from its origin as a public institution, to a private institution, to a semi-public and back to a public institution. The college was founded with Emergency Relief Funds to provide employment for out-of-work professors and higher education for recent high school graduates who could not afford to go to college. When federal funds ran out in 1938, the college reorganized as an independent institution under the jurisdiction of a board of trustees comprised of community leaders and local educators.

The college remained independent until 1969, when it began providing higher education services under contract with the Union County Coordinating Agency for Higher Education. On Aug. 17, 1962, Union College and Union County Technical Institute, Scotch Plains, merged to become Union County College.

In its 50-year history, the college has had four homes: Abraham Clark High School, Roselle, where evening classes were offered from 1933 to 1942; a home on East Third Street in Roselle for day classes in 1941; the old Grant School, Springfield Avenue and Holly Street, Cranford, in 1942, and the present 48-acre campus off Springfield Avenue, Cranford, opposite Nonamegan Park, along with the 40-acre campus in Scotch Plains which is shared with the Union County Vocational Center. In addition, the college operates an Urban Educational Center at 10 Butler St., Elizabeth, which houses the Institute for Intensive English, a program of English for speakers of other languages, and the Employment Skills Center.

Raichle, a resident of Springfield, has been associated with Kean College since 1951. In 1980, he wrote a history of Kean College entitled "From a Normal Beginning — The Origins of Kean College" to coincide with the institution's 125th anniversary.

Raichle holds a bachelor of arts degree from the College of the City of New York (now City University), as well as a master of arts and a doctoral degree from Columbia University, New York. He served as assistant to the New Jersey chancellor for higher education from 1967 to 1969.

Students trained as paramedics

Nearly 150 students have been trained as paramedics since September through a special program offered this year by Union County College in Cranford. A second class of 66 students enrolled in the program completed its studies recently.

The college has been conducting the paramedic training program with Memorial General Hospital, Union, since last fall, after they jointly were designated as one of four paramedical training sites in New Jersey by the state Department of Health. Those who finish the 220-hour program become eligible to sit for a New Jersey state examination which, if completed successfully, allows

County 4-H Fair being planned

Union County 4-H and the Union County Department of Parks and Recreation are working on plans for the annual 4-H Fair to be held Sunday, Sept. 11, at the Trailside Nature and Science Center, Coles Avenue and New Providence Road, Mountainside.

Martha Hewitt, county 4-H agent, appealed for volunteers to assist in both the preparation for the event and the fair itself.

Scout groups, clubs, civic organizations, senior citizens and individuals can help, she said. They can call her at 233-9366. A full-day of free activities, exhibits, contests and displays for the entire family is planned. There will be entertainment for adults and children; refreshments will be available, and a dog show, petting zoo and pony rides are planned.

them to be certified as paramedics — professionals who perform life-saving techniques in emergency situations.

Tonnie Shelton of Summit, coordinator of the paramedic program at Union County College, said the college has educated 141 students in paramedic programs.

"That's more than anyone's ever done in New Jersey," Shelton pointed out. In addition to Union County College's program, others are being conducted at Ocean County College, Camden County College, and the New Jersey College of Medicine and Dentistry, but all have lower enrollments than Union County College has experienced in the first year of offering the program, Shelton said.

"I think the numbers we've experienced enrolling in these two classes since last September proves that ours is a significant and reliable program."

The college plans to offer the course again in September, she said.

Those who enroll in the paramedic program are sponsored by hospitals from Northern and Central New Jersey. The students include rescue squad members, police, firemen, and hospital personnel. Students, in addition to performing the 220 hours of classwork, must also perform 400 hours of clinical work at any of 18 hospitals in Union, Middlesex, Somerset, Morris, Essex, Hudson, Bergen and Passaic Counties affiliated with the Union County College program.

Hospitals affiliated with the paramedic program are: Union County — Memorial General in Union, Muhlenberg in Plainfield, Overlook in Summit, Railway Hospital, and St. Elizabeth Hospital in Elizabeth; Bergen County — Hackensack Medical Center, Englewood Hospital, Holy Name Hospital in Teaneck, and Valley Hospital in Ridgewood; Essex County — St. Barnabas Hospital in Livingston, University Hospital in Newark, and Mountsinai Hospital in Montclair; Hudson County — Jersey City Medical Center; Morris County — Morristown Hospital; Passaic County — Greater Paterson Hospital in Wayne; Middlesex County — Middlesex General Hospital in New Brunswick; and Somerset County — Somerset Medical Center in Somerville.

Persons interested in applying for the September program must have a minimum of one year's experience as an emergency medical technician, and must have obtained a grade of 75 or better in their EMT course, according to Shelton. They may contact any hospital with a mobile emergency unit to apply for the next course.

250 hear report on AIDS

Information concerning AIDS (Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome) was presented to more than 250 medical and nursing personnel at a symposium held recently at Elizabeth General Medical Center.

Speakers from Sloan Kettering Institute included Bijan Safai, M.D., chief of dermatology; John Gold, M.D., associate director of special microbiology labs; and Benjamin Kozins, M.D., head of lymphocytic surface marker labs. An introduction to the symposium was given by Leon G. Smith, M.D., chief of infectious diseases, Saint Michael's Hospital.

According to the physicians, medical science has never before seen a syndrome like AIDS, which has affected homosexual males, hemophiliacs, drug users, Haitian immigrants and most recently, children. AIDS has been identified as a condition in which the disease fighting system breaks down and leaves the body vulnerable to a variety of fatal infections. At present, there is no specific treatment for AIDS, which is transmitted sexually, by contaminated syringes, and by transfer of blood products. Early recognition of AIDS, especially however, may help in preventing major complications and in controlling the gradual spread of this disorder.

According to Dr. Safai, "Patients with AIDS gradually waste away, becoming more and more vulnerable to disease." He added, "The pathetic thing about AIDS is that we are helpless. So far, every patient with AIDS has died within two years, despite our best efforts."

The physicians traced AIDS to cases appearing in Eastern Europe in 1972, and later in Africa. Only now, however, is there a world-wide epidemic, involving 19 nations in addition to the United States, they explained. Nationally, the number of AIDS cases has grown from 159 cases in November 1981 to over 1,500 cases at present. The heaviest concentration of reported AIDS victims is in California, New York, Florida and New Jersey. According to Dr. Gold, "There are five new cases being diagnosed each day; by the end of the year this figure will probably double."

"The epidemic is probably much bigger than we now realize," explained Dr. Safai, who added, "We have only seen the tip of the iceberg."

Treatment of AIDS is difficult because of the many infections which result from the breakdown of the body's disease fighting abilities. These infections are caused by organisms that do not ordinarily cause disease in humans. AIDS may cause unusual tumors, especially Kaposi's Sarcoma, which attack the skin.

"The epidemic of AIDS has not been around long enough for us to have sufficient data to enable us to treat it," explained Dr. Gold, who added, "The great epidemics of history have taken care of themselves — they run their course and then disappear. There is the possibility — and the hope — that AIDS may just go away by itself."

According to Kurosh Sharif, M.D., director of continuing medical education at Elizabeth General Medical Center, individuals who are at risk of contracting AIDS are intravenous drug users, homosexual or bisexual males with multiple partners, people who have emigrated from Haiti, and people who have had intimate contact with AIDS victims. "Although a small number of people in each of these groups have developed AIDS, nevertheless, these groups are at a higher risk than the general population," he explained.

Symptoms of AIDS include swollen glands, unexpected weight loss, unexplained fever, cough or diarrhea, and bumps or bruises that are unexplained and do not go away. According to Dr. Sharif, "These symptoms are very general, and may be associated with many conditions other than AIDS. It is still important, however, to have any of the above symptoms checked out by a doctor."

Also approved by the New Jersey Board of Higher Education and by the state Department of Environmental Protection. Those enrolled take 40 liberal arts and sciences credits in courses offered at Union County College as well as 36 credits in professional radiography courses conducted at the hospitals.

Reaccreditation awarded to radiography program

The radiography program at Muhlenberg's School of Radiography, Plainfield, N.J., has been reapproved by the American Society of Radiologic Technologists and the American College of Radiology. The program, offered through Muhlenberg's School of Radiography, won reaccreditation based on a recommendation by the Joint Review Committee on Education in Radiologic Technology. The Joint Review Committee is sponsored by the American Society of Radiologic Technologists and the American College of Radiology.

Both programs were begun last fall and have reached their maximum enrollment both this year and last. Those who complete course requirements receive both an associate in science degree conferred by Union County College and a diploma awarded by the respective hospitals.

"We're very proud of the fact that we're the first amplified radiography program in the state of New Jersey (along with Elizabeth General Medical Center) and that we've won reaccreditation," Susan Fialer of Jersey City, also approved by the New Jersey Board of Higher Education and by the state Department of Environmental Protection. Those enrolled take 40 liberal arts and sciences credits in courses offered at Union County College as well as 36 credits in professional radiography courses conducted at the hospitals.

Pick of the LPs: "Tired of Being a Nice Guy," by Gene Dunlap (Capitol Records).

Any artist who not only plays drums, keyboards, guitar, bass and synthesizer, but produces and composes as well, is one artist who means business. Gene Dunlap is an artist who must really mean business—because, on this, his third Capitol release, he expands those talents of his even further by exercising his ample vocal abilities.

Born in Detroit, Dunlap was signed to Capitol in 1981 after recording and touring extensively with native jazz guitarist Earl Klugh, whom Dunlap has known since their adolescence together in the Motor City. In fact, Dunlap's first Capitol release, "It's Just How I Feel," includes a song by Klugh along with two of Dunlap's original compositions. Dunlap not only lay down guitar and drum tracks on his debut, but also produced the LP, which entered the Top 40 on the soul charts and spawned the two singles, "Before You Break My Heart" and "Rock Radio."

Before signing with Capitol, Dunlap also played drums for two years behind the late Grant Green and performed with Roy Ayers on three of his Ubiquity albums. Dunlap's superb percussive skills inspired by a father who played drums in the Army, are highlighted on the single, "Something Inside My Head," from his second Capitol album, "Party in Me."

Now, with his third LP, Dunlap is hoping to create somewhat of an alter-ego. "I'm tired of the word, 'nice,'" he says. "I'm tired of being a nice guy who does nice music."

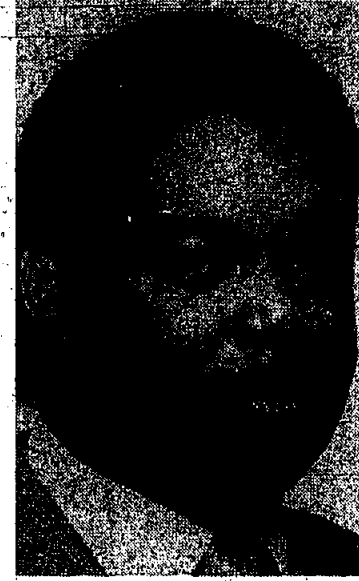

According to Dunlap, the R&B-jazz approach used on his previous two discs was not producing the result he desired. Having co-written seven of the eight tunes on the new pop-flavored LP, as well as cutting lead vocals on four tracks, Dunlap now believes that control is the key factor.

"The first time I walked into a studio, I was 15; it scared me to death," he recalls. "The engineer asked me where the other musicians were, and I said I was going to play all the instruments. We started laying down the drum tracks and by the time we finished everything, I ended up recording my first original, 'Superlick.' I'd come in there to record a completely different song, but after I got the hang of things, I figured I'd make up my own."

Dunlap plays synthesizer on most of the cuts off "Tired of Being a Nice Guy," and percussion on all. The funky guitar solo that enhances the tune, "Anything You Want," also belongs to Dunlap. Needless to say, he also produced this disc, choosing to flavor it with more dance-oriented rhythms than are on his previous recordings.

On the first single, "When You're Hot," Ray Parker Jr. of Raydio fame helps to lay on the heat with some mean-sounding guitar licks which also surface on the cut, "Seems You've Been With Me."

Although this is the first of Dunlap's releases featuring his own smooth lead vocals, he also enlists the talents of Phillippe Wynne, former lead singer of the Spinners, and Mickle Roquemore, a fellow native of Detroit.
