Kids cook up special recipes

There might be a surprised father when he wakes up to a breakfast on his special day Sunday. That is if Gregory Trein decides to make his specialty — pancakes.

Gregory's "Pancake," calls for eight eggs, two cups of milk, four spoons of "powder" and eight pieces of butter.

"Put the eggs in the bowl first. Mix them with a spoon for one minute. Put the powder in next and mix it. Put the butter on the spoon next and throw it in. Then put in the milk. Mix it up again for another minute. Put it all in a pan with a spoon and put it in the oven (not real hot) for 12 hours. Take a fork and put it on the plate. Then you just eat it!"

Gregory's "recipe" is one of a collection assembled by Joann McGann's kindergarten class at the St. James School. Each of the 23 students in the class dictated one recipe to be included in the collection, which was sent to the mother of each child.

Michael DeCaro has a recipe for macaroni, he thinks a lot of people will enjoy. It calls for 90 pounds of macaroni, cooked in 20 gallons of water, to be topped with 30 gallons of sauce.

"Put the water in like a frying pan but bigger," the recipe tells you. "Put it on the stove. Just, like, pour in the macaroni. Cook about six hours. Pour that thing out and then like it comes out. Put it in a large bowl. Take a spoon and put the sauce on. Then, you eat!"

Kimberly Williams' chocolate chip cookies recipe calls for a mixture of nine chocolate chips, seven squares of chocolate, three sticks of butter, six cups of sugar and three raisins to be cooked at four degrees for two hours.

"Yummy, yummy to the tummy," it concludes.

A good meatloaf, prepared the way Alexa House likes it, needs 21 pieces of meat, nine spoons of garlic salt, two gallons of salt, one gallon of seasoning, three gallons of pepper, four bread crumbs and two eggs.

Three thin balls of hamburger meat baked in a "very hot" oven for a half hour, served on a roll with catsup, make Jason Scrimizzi's ideal hamburger.

"I like them best at Burger King, though," Scrimizzi concludes.

In serving spaghetti by the Brian Benedict method, it is important to remove the spaghetti from the pot with gloves after boiling it for 40 minutes. It's topped with sauce cooked for "say, eight minutes."

Natalie Guarino's fish should be cooked "on one side only" for three hours, while you must "lick the spoon and bowl" for Elizabeth Truszkowski's cupcakes.

For Erika Bezak's banana cake, you need five spoons of vanilla, two bananas and 12 plain nuts.

"Mix it all up," says Erika's recipe. "Put it in a hard pan. The foil goes on top. Put it in the oven. Make it hot, so if you touch it you'll burn yourself. When the oven bell rings, take it out. Then you leave it in the freezer for two days. Then you go to a house and have a birthday party!"

Chicken, as prepared by Christine Gaffey, should be placed in a pot with pepper and salt and cooked at a temperature of four degrees.

'Clean up, or else!'

Town issues directive to housing developer

By KENNETH SCHANKLER
Developer Frank Racioppi has been directed to complete "immediately" the cleanup of the area surrounding the Princess Estates development in Springfield or face losing part of his $126,000 performance bond.

Township Attorney Anthony D'Alessio sent a letter directing Racioppi that refuse be removed and fences be installed around a nearby retention basin and between the development and some neighboring factories.

The letter, D'Alessio said at Tuesday's meeting of the Township Committee, told Racioppi to complete the work or the township would have the work done on its own with Racioppi being billed for the cost.

"What's to stop us from calling the fence contractor and having him start tomorrow?" Mayor Edward Fanning said.

Residents of the 3-year-old development, which was completed in January, appeared before the Township Committee Tuesday to express their concern that debris left by the builder in the New Brook Lane area represented a potentially dangerous situation, since there are a number of small children who play in the area.

The residents had asked Racioppi to clean up the area and install the fences. Workers were at the site during the latter part of last week and the early part of this week removing sewer pipes that were blocking off New Brook. A gate was supposed to be installed to stop high-speed traffic from using the street.

"The street is now wide open so people just come shooting right through there," New Brook Lane resident Ned Sambur said, noting that no signs warning motorists that children play in the area have been posted by Racioppi.

The catch basin, meanwhile, was overgrown with weeds that had not been removed as promised by Racioppi, he said.

"It's still a disaster for all intents and purposes," Sambur said.

The workers had also not removed gravel and other refuse that lined the sides of the roadway, Sambur said. "People are just fed up with the situation."

Another New Brook Lane resident had complained that the refuse made the area "look like a bomb hit it over there."

Sambur, meanwhile, expressed hope that the work would be completed soon and that Racioppi would be able to meet the conditions of his performance bond.

Board sets assault hearing

By KENNETH SCHANKLER
The Springfield Board of Education will hold a hearing July 8 in an attempt to close a case of an alleged assault by two teachers against a student in February.

"We certainly hope we're going to conclude it," said Yale Greenspoon, board attorney.

The hearing date was set Tuesday after the board rescinded a resolution requiring Joseph Blanda and JoAnn Pieper, teachers at the Florence Gaudineer school, to submit statements to the board. The resolution was approved by the board last month.

Blanda and Pieper had been charged with assaulting a sixth-grade Gaudineer student Feb. 5, but the charges were dropped when Donald Rinaldi, attorney for the plaintiff, failed to appear in court April 15.

Stephen Klausner, current attorney for the teachers, obtained a restraining order in U.S. District Court Monday prohibiting the board from seeking statements from Blanda and Pieper or from taking punitive action against them for failing to give statements to the board.

Klausner had argued that the resolution requiring statements be given to the board was in violation of the teachers' rights.

As a result, the board voted to rescind its resolution. Greenspoon said Klausner had agreed to have the restraining order rescinded in return so that the hearing may be held and the matter cleared up "for once and for all."

In another matter, the board voted

Tuesday to accept specifications for a number of capital outlay projects and begin advertising for bids.

At present, according to Board Secretary Dr. Leonard DiGiovanni, the board plans to spend approximately $100,000 on the project.

That figure includes $27,500 for plumbing repairs, $19,000 for electrical work, $35,000 for a playground at the James Caldwell School, $10,000 for a handicapped access ramp, toilet and other facilities at Caldwell and $20,000 for mechanized air exchange equipment to be installed at the Thelma L. Sandmeter School.

"These are all just gross estimates," DiGiovanni said. "We will only know what the cost will be when the bids come in."

The board also approved a $28,000 expenditure for a new school bus. Of that amount, approximately $19,600 or 70 percent will be returned to the district by the state after two years, according to DiGiovanni.

Squad seeks teens' help

The Springfield First Aid Squad is again conducting a membership drive to recruit members for its Cadet Corp.

Boys and girls between 16 and 18 may join the squad as a cadet member and be trained in all aspects of first aid and to ride with a regular crew during certain hours. Training will continue over the summer at the squad house. First aid squad members will be available next week in the cafeteria of Jonathan Dayton High School with applications and ready to answer questions.

Applications may also be obtained in the high school office, or by calling Betty Babiarz, 379-6215, or Jackie Herzlinger, 376-6560.

Flight path impact seen to be minimal

By ELIZABETH SEP

The increased use of a runway at Newark Airport, which calls for airliners to take a flight path over the township, should not have much of an effect on Springfield.

That was the conclusion after Township Mayor Ed Fanning and representatives from Hillside and Union took to the air May 31 to examine what impact the increased use of Newark International Airport's Runway 11-29 would have on their communities.

The helicopter trip was arranged by Assemblyman Peter Genova, who is also a Union Township committee member, and the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey, which operates the airport.

Taking the flight with Port Authority personnel and Genova were Mayor Fanning, Hillside Mayor Louis A. Santagata, and Union Township Administrator Thomas J. Strapp.

Genova said he was contacted by the Port Authority in late April about its plans to increase the use of Runway 11-29 during the summer months and peak hours. The Port Authority cited the pattern of mounting delays at the airport last summer as the reason for using the runway.

Local airport officials recognized the Port Authority's Administration (FAA) as a major body serving the New Jersey area and the other by airports around the country, according to Port Authority officials.

They said that an action would be taken to increase the level of activity at the airport. The proposed and approved use of Runway 11-29 would increase the level of activity at the airport.

of departures and arrivals, they said.

The airport also reported a 36 percent surge in air passenger traffic in 1984 — which equates to 6 million more passengers than in 1983. This increase in passengers, according to airport officials, has had significant economic effects.

About 6,000 new jobs were created at the airport, an increase of more than 70 percent.

The growth of employment opportunities will continue, the Port Authority said, with the continued growth of air passengers and traffic. At least $400 million in development through 1990, and projected increases in air cargo tonnage.

A study conducted by the FAA, Port Authority and the airlines at the Newark airport indicated that the most effective and readily available action to take to relieve the growing congestion would be to uncouple the east-west Runway 11-29 from the north-south Runway 4R-22L.

Runway 11 had been used only for scheduled airline flights under certain weather conditions, they said.

"Although use of this runway will probably always remain a small proportion of airport landings, increased air traffic over the affected communities will certainly be perceived as an inconvenience," the FAA said.

These taking the flight, the FAA said, and a half hour after the flight, Genova said, during their meeting with representatives of the Hillside and Union townships.

Runway 11 has incoming flights will reduce the number of airplanes awaiting landing approval at Newark. The problem may be in the future, as the airport continues to grow, there are more airplanes waiting for takeoff.

11 would be used only for smaller aircraft, such as private planes, 727's and 737's, Genova said.

Genova said that he and local officials traced the glide path of Runway 11 by helicopter, traveling eight miles west and then turning back. The path generally follows Routes 24 and 78.

The change will have little effect on Springfield, according to Genova, who said that the glide path crosses over the northern section of the Baltusrol Country Club at an altitude of 1,450 feet. The golf course is about seven miles from the airport.

In Union, the path crosses over the intersection of Vauxhall Road and Burnet Avenue at an altitude of about 1,300 feet, Genova said, and dips to about 1,100 feet near Tuscan Dairy, Genova said.

"Hillside seems to be the most affected," Genova said, adding that aircraft fly at an altitude of about 750 feet over that township.

Genova said that Hillside officials are even more concerned about the use of Runway 29, which would mean that aircraft would fly at low altitudes over residential areas at times.

Hillside is affected both ways, Union and Springfield are not," the assemblyman added.

These taking the flight, the FAA said, and a half hour after the flight, Genova said, during their meeting with representatives of the Hillside and Union townships.

representatives that an airport

hottline could be set up enabling the township to contact the airport with severe complaints about air traffic.

Citizens would be able to call their municipal building to register the complaint and town officials would call the airport, Genova said.

The assemblyman said that "both sides understand the other's problems," but added that he has some concerns about additional use of the runway. Genova said the airport was unable to provide information, such as the number of flights to be expected during summer months and peak hours. Genova said that they did say that from May 14 to 30, the runway was used 25 times.

The airport was also unable to provide information about decibel sound measuring levels and could not guarantee it could take any noise abatement measures.

Genova said that he was not sure what action could be taken to prevent the airport's action, should it be determined that the runway has a great negative impact on the towns involved. However, he said that meeting with Port Authority and airport officials "is a step in the right direction."

"We do have an understanding of each other's problems, but I represent the people, not the FAA. It's something we're going to have to look at when the change takes place this summer. They are our neighbors and we have to look at it."

Springfield Mayor Ed Fanning said a similar problem may be in the future, as the airport continues to grow, there are more airplanes waiting for takeoff.

Pair arrested for possession of alcohol

Two Mountaintop residents have been charged on several alcohol-related counts, having been arrested at a function at Jonathan Dayton High School June 6, according to Springfield police.

Police said John Daniel Connolly, 20, and George Curt Graham, 19, both of Mountaintop, were arrested for allegedly consuming beer at the event.

Connolly was charged with unauthorized possession of an alcoholic beverage, resisting arrest and disorderly conduct, while Graham was charged with unauthorized possession of alcohol.

Sgt. William Chisholm made the arrests.

Both subjects were released on their own recognizance, police said.

The apparent theft of a Tandy portable computer is under police investigation. Police said the computer Tandy model number 200 bearing serial number 84120061, was taken between 2:30 and 3:30 p.m. Friday from the Radio Shack store on Route 22. The store manager, police said, reported that one customer was in the store at that time. The computer was discovered missing a short time after the customer left the premises, police said.

Patrolman Ernest Vardalis is investigating a series of other thefts.

A garage at a Ruby Street residence was entered by smashing a side window sometime between 9 p.m. May 30 and 6 a.m. Friday. The items taken include a 13-inch black and white television, a hand drill set, a hedge cutter and a saber saw. Patrolman Scott Brokaw responded to the call.

Two cars, one belonging to a Scotch Plains woman and the other owned by a Baltusport Way resident, were burglarized at the Baltusport Way address. Missing from the Scotch Plains woman's car was a stereo worth $500.

The other car, from which a cassette tape and a pair of ski goggles were taken, was entered by prying open a passenger side door.

Patrolman John Trampler is investigating.

Police are investigating the apparent theft of construction supplies from a site at 247 Morris Ave.

Police said the items, belonging to

Dayton French Club had busy year

The French Club at Jonathan Dayton Regional High School, Springfield, has just completed an exciting and busy year.

Its first activity was a Trivial Pursuit competition; all questions made up by the two French Club advisors, Madame Levy and Mademoiselle Fahrman, were related to French vocabulary, grammar, history, cooking and culture. The "Red Team" won.

To further the students' appreciation of the French culture, the club went to see the witty play, "Cyrano de Bergerac," by French author Edmond Rostand, performed by the Royal Shakespeare Company. The members enjoyed the memorable performance, full of panache, of Derek Jacobi. In early March, during Foreign Language Week, the French Club joined the other foreign language clubs for an evening celebration of music and food.

Their last outing was a memorable culinary demonstration and sit-down luncheon at Jacques' Restaurant, South Plainfield.

bad, the streets of the development have not been dedicated by the town. Non-dedicated streets are not required to be plowed by the township after it snows, Sambur said, adding that the township committee has been very cooperative in the matter.

Bringing the situation to the attention of the township committee, Sambur said, is the residents' way of making sure the situation is taken care of satisfactorily.

"I just hope they do everything they said they were going to do," Sambur said, referring to Racioppo's clean-up effort.

In other business, the committee also gave final approval to the salary ordinance covering the new police contract. The contract gives township police officers 7 percent annual raises retroactive to January of this year and 7 percent in 1986.

A second ordinance, prohibiting alcohol from being served to minors at parties and in homes by adults, was also given final approval.

The committee also awarded a $38,800 contract to Ranning Roofing of Wayne for a new gym roof at the former Raymond Chisholm school. The school will be used for a teen center where roofing and other repairs are completed.

Letter protests Reagan visit

A Springfield native was the co-author of a petition at the University of Maryland protesting President Ronald Reagan's recent visit to a German cemetery in Bitburg.

Sanford D. Horn, a University of Maryland freshman majoring in government and politics, co-wrote a letter to the White House which accompanied the petition protesting the presidential visit. The petition was signed by more than 450 university students.

Horn said he wrote to Reagan in protest of "his going to a military cemetery for SS soldiers who were dedicated to systematically killing 6 million Jews. If he wants to visit a German cemetery where ordinary people are buried, that's fine."

Horn said Jewish reaction to the Bitburg visit is comparable to how many blacks would react if Reagan had planned to lay a wreath at a cemetery where Ku Klux Klan members were buried.

"It's not a political issue, it's a social issue," Horn said. "It's important to let (Reagan) know the people are against it."

Horn, a graduate of Jonathan Dayton Regional High School, is the son of Herbert and Marilyn Horn of Lynn Drive, Springfield.

A true reform

Trying to unravel all the details of President Ronald Reagan's tax reform package is a bit like trying to understand the myriad of variables that make up the economy. The president's ambitious and historic proposal, referred to frequently as the Reagan tax simplification plan, is anything but simple.

Part of the difficulty in understanding its impact is that an objective evaluation of the Reagan plan's implications defies a basic attempt to weigh pluses and minuses. There are at least some aspects of the proposal with which almost everyone will find fault, but it should be kept in mind that the Reagan measure tries to deal with the inequities of the present tax system and the need to generate additional revenue created by the ballooning federal deficit.

For starters, the new plan would eliminate or curtail 65 categories of preferential taxes, certainly a change for the better. It would reduce the number of rate categories for individual taxpayers from the present 14 to three. Part of the plan also calls for simplifying the system so that IRS computers, working with information supplied by employers, banks and investment managers, would automatically calculate many Americans' tax bills, freeing them from the burden of filling their own returns. Federal projections estimate the new plan would reduce taxes for 58.1 percent of all American families, increase taxes for 20.7 percent and leave the tax load for 21.2 percent virtually unchanged.

Indeed, there are some tradeoffs that are unappealing to most of the middle class. Mortgage interest deductions would be retained for a principal residence, but limited on second and third homes. Charitable contributions would still be deductible, but only for those who itemize deductions. Medical expenses would continue to be deductible, beyond 5 percent of a wage earner's income, though employees would be responsible for paying taxes on some work-related benefits. But by and large, most middle-class citizens would end up paying slightly less or roughly the same as under the current system.

The single biggest revenue-raiser in the tax plan, elimination of the investment tax credit (a move which could generate an additional $37 billion by 1990), reflects an overall attempt to make businesses and corporations share a more equitable tax burden. This too is admirable. The eligibility of capital-gains income for tax shelters would be severely tightened; income currently deducted by businesses which use depreciation allowances would be subject to tax; disparate tax rates for different industries would be made more uniform; and deductions for business lunches would be curtailed slightly, while tax consideration for business entertaining beyond the dining table would be eliminated almost completely.

The most controversial aspect of the Reagan proposal, the elimination of state and local tax deductions, is one change that is difficult to justify and potentially dangerous to implement. While this proposal alone would generate an additional $33 billion in federal revenue in 1987, taxpayers in a handful of states, including New Jersey and New York, would be hit hardest, and could end up paying several hundred if not thousands more in taxes. The Reagan administration's justification for this measure, that the federal government should not continue to subsidize excessive state spending, is hard to support when the federal government is increasingly turning over responsibility for innumerable programs, including education and human services, to the states.

Still, it's important to remember that the Reagan plan is only a proposal and is subject to change. It's up to our elected representatives in Congress to devise a tax package that will refine the inadequacies of the present system and help our country pull itself out of the economic danger posed by the multi-billion dollar deficit. The president has at least gotten the ball rolling. While there are certainly some faults and inequities in the proposal, at the very least, the president's tax reform legislation provides a foundation for improving the present system.

Society very much dependent on farmer

By MARTY NOVICH

Editor's note: The following is the last of a three-part series on the problems of the American farmer and their effect on feeding the world.

I have tried to explain the problems of the American farmer in this essay and hope to resolve how the farmer's problems are our problems. As sophisticated as we think we are, we are still very much dependent on the farmer. He feeds us by his efforts and allows us to have the time to work at our jobs instead of subsisting on what we grow ourselves. He is the founder of the feast. He provides the food that is printed on the menu in the fashionable restaurant.

Marty Novich, who works with a New York City commodities firm, has lived in Springfield for 25 years.

Eating is a ceremony for most of us. We gladly pay the price for the service, the atmosphere, the elegance of a restaurant, while the man or woman who planted the seed and nurtured the seed to a full-grown vegetable or fruit, or raised the chicken, or the steer or caught the fish that provides our meal is either dismissed from our minds or thought of as unimportant.

Sen. Ray Lesniak of New Jersey's 20th district, doesn't feel that the food the farmer grows is unimportant. He has introduced legislation in Trenton that has caused an uproar among the chemical manufacturers, state officials of the Department of Environmental Protection, and farmers themselves. Lesniak has sponsored a multi-purpose bill to better control pesticides in the state.

He asked Mr. Lesniak if all pesticides were biodegradable, his answer, "They all have different properties there are different times for the chemical effects to go away." Lesniak claims, however, that the federal agency who tests these pesticides does not do a thorough enough job, that a question remains as to their effects on humans. He cited me a case in Florida where a pesticide was banned by the same government agency that originally allowed its use after it was found to have carcinogenic properties.

York, Robert Rawls of Atlanta, Ga., who even though he is a big-time magazine editor now, remembers growing up on his father's farm; Benton Musslewhite of Houston, another farmboy who is a top-flight attorney and was part of the team that successfully won a huge award from the mammoth chemical companies in the Agent Orange case for the affected Vietnam GIs; and my special thanks to Sen. Ray Lesniak, who is valiantly taking on the lobbyists, the chemical manufacturing organizations and others, trying to protect the population of New Jersey.

By this time, I hope I have convinced all of you that we are much more than just a society divided into information services and industrial production. We are, much more because we all have to eat, and we had better take more of a personal interest in who grows our food and how they do it.

Letters to the editor

Anniversary of 'landmark' decision noted

June 7 was the 20th anniversary of one of the most important and far-reaching decisions the United States Supreme Court has ever made. The landmark Griswold v. Connecticut, handed down in 1965, legalized the use of birth control for married couples. It also laid the foundation for nearly 20 subsequent Supreme Court decisions that expanded reproductive freedom for all Americans.

In 1965, women in Connecticut and 28 other states were barred by law from using contraceptives, and physicians were subject to arrest for prescribing them. Outraged by these restrictive laws, Estelle Griswold, the courageous executive director of Planned Parenthood of Connecticut, challenged them all the way to the Supreme Court and won.

Estelle Griswold's victory has touched the lives of nearly all Americans. The freedom to use contraceptives has been a contributing factor to the dramatic decline in the numbers of women dying in child birth, babies dying in infancy, and unwanted and mistimed births, as well as to a decrease in the American fertility rate. It also is largely responsible for the increased number of career and child bearing options available to women.

However, 20 years of legal contraception have not solved all the problems related to fertility. Many challenges remain that demand our attention: American women still experience more than 3 million unintended pregnancies each year; during the last 20 years, the U.S. has not developed or marketed one new birth control method; and the U.S. is the only developed country where teen pregnancy has been increasing in recent years.

Despite the widespread public support and demonstrated benefits of contraception, many people still lack access to contraceptive services. Title X of the Public Health Service Act, the federal family planning program, provides services to nearly 5 million American women, but it is threatened by the Reagan administration's current efforts to eliminate it and by the efforts of anti-choice groups who seek to prevent the availability of birth control services as well as abortion.

The Griswold v. Connecticut decision was a legal milestone which laid the foundation for both the individual right to privacy in childbearing decisions and for profound changes that have improved the health and well being of tens of millions of Americans and their families. We will continue to struggle to maintain the right of women to control their own fertility and urge readers to contact their legislators and enlist their support for the continuation of family planning funding.

Week-long winter recess supported

An open letter to school communities of Mountaineer, Springfield and Kenilworth: Have you heard that you lost your traditional week's mid-winter vacation for the 1985-86 Regional High School year? Are you aware that the Regional Board of Education justifies discontinuing it with the statement that the local communities asked to eliminate it?

When this move was made by the regional board in December and gone along with by the Mountaineer board the following month, a sizeable portion of the Mountaineer school community was disappointed and disturbed.

To find out how the bulk of Mountaineer parents felt, our PTA conducted a survey, which verified that our school community does indeed prefer the full week. The Gaudinier School PTA in Springfield also took a poll and found the same decided preference for the full week. The results of the poll at Jonathan Dayton were even more overwhelmingly in favor of the full week versus the two days.

Mountaineer parents spoke up and went to our local board of education with objective statistics indicating strong preference for the full week. Our local board responded to the community preference and has restored the full week mid-winter vacation for 1985-86.

The regional board of education says it is the local school communities that want just the two days. Our polls in two of the six constituent towns say just the opposite.

How does your school community feel? If you do not find out, let your local board of education and the regional board know, you may never see that full week again.

And to the Mountaineer Board of Education members, all those Mountaineer parents who worked for restoration of the mid-winter week to the 1985-86 school calendar would like to express formally and publicly their appreciation of the way in which you handled our recent request.

Naturally, we are pleased with the outcome. However, more basic and far-reaching than that, we are pleased with the professional and open-minded posture of the board during the proceedings. You have impressed numerous people in the community with the way in which you acknowledged the community input we provided and the way in which you responded to it - with deliberate and an obvious, most commendable willingness to listen.

Promoting such good will, in an area where the board could be flexible and chose to be, certainly enhances its stature in the eyes of the school community.

It is bound to engender an increased tendency on the part of its constituents to see the board's viewpoint in other matters less open to flexibility, as it has striven in this matter to see ours.

YOUNG POETS SALUTE DAD

Since Father's Day is approaching, it would be nice to share with your readers these wonderful poems my children wrote about their father, Bob House:

Getting to root of PD

BY ROSE P. SIMON
The following is a review of a book currently available at the Springfield Public Library.

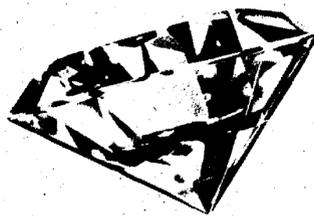

GUM DISEASE PREVENTION "Ignore Your Teeth and They'll Go Away," by Sheldon B. Snydney, D.D.S.

An assistant clinical professor of periodontics, Snydney has provided us with an overview of the most common adult disease - PD, periodontal disease, or the deterioration of the tissues surrounding and supporting the teeth. Periodontal disease creates pockets of infection between the gums and the teeth - leading to receding gums, pyorrhea, later abscess and tooth extraction. In childhood, a milder condition known as gingivitis may occur, often leading, if neglected, to the more serious periodontitis. Knowledge about the anatomy and structure of the gums and teeth is essential for the prevention of PD. You will learn how PD is diagnosed, how a course of treatment is planned, the various approaches of treatment (if required), and surgery (if indicated). There is a section on oral hygiene, stressing bacterial plaque. The author hopes that the goal of his book will be the prevention of PD for his readers.

Snydney reviews the history of PD from the time of the early Egyptians to the present, the structure of the mouth, the steps in the evolution of PD. He discusses also, some related dental procedures: replacements, splinting, orthodontics, endodontics (root canal), and implants. Illustrations are included.

Cooperman describes plans

Commissioner of Education Saul Cooperman has outlined the State Department of Education's comprehensive plan to help local educators prepare their students for the rigor of the new High School Proficiency Test (HSPT).

Speaking at a public meeting of the state Board of Education, Dr. Cooperman said, "Without question, the HSPT is more difficult and could result in failure rates that are initially higher than those of the Minimum Basic Skills test — the previous high school graduation exam."

"We must move up to a more difficult test," the commissioner said. "Employers and educators have been telling us that too many of our graduates lack the basic skills they need to succeed on the job or in college. That is why we have developed a test that requires our students to cope with 'real life' tasks as writing coherently, interpreting written material and solving multiple-step math problems. Since the HSPT demands that students demonstrate these skills, it's one of the chief tools we're using to raise academic standards in the state."

"The Department of Education is committed to raising standards and to helping the local districts get their students ready for this more challenging test," Cooperman added.

"We are developing intensive programs and specific materials to help districts improve their students' reading, writing and math skills. Just as important, we are helping districts meet the higher standards of the HSPT by improving student attendance, reducing disruptive behavior, strengthening job training programs and dealing effectively with the problems of high school dropouts.

"The department is doing its part," Cooperman said. "Now it's up to local districts, parents and students to do theirs."

Harriet Doss Willis, director of the department's Urban Initiative, discussed efforts to improve student attendance. Pointing out that "students must come to class in order to learn and prepare for the HSPT," Doss Willis cited components of several experimental projects, such as computerized attendance systems, community outreach programs, counseling and incentive pilot programs. Successful programs, Doss Willis said, will be studied so that useful results can be made available to districts throughout the state.

Nothing that "students must have a safe and orderly environment to maximize their ability to learn," Richard DiPatri, special assistant to the commissioner, described publications demonstrating projects and grant programs the department is developing to help districts improve student discipline.

Joel Bloom, assistant commissioner, Division of General Academic Education, and Sylvia Roberts, director, Division of Compensatory/Bilingual Education, outlined programs and services being offered to help local educators help their students improve in reading, writing and mathematics. Bloom and Roberts indicated that the department is: helping school districts align their curricula to match the skills the HSPT tests; supplying publications for students and teachers; providing both test-specific and general training for educators; and developing special and pilot projects designed to improve a variety of student abilities.

Gordon Ascher, assistant commissioner, Division of Vocational Education, said the department "is making efforts to use vocational programs to increase the 'holding power' of schools." According to Ascher, "Vocational education is a good way to motivate many students to stay in school, so they can improve their basic skills, pass the HSPT and get their diplomas."

Barry Semple, director, Division of Adult Education, addressed the question of the HSPT and student dropouts. "The department and the adult education community have an obligation to provide a safety net, or a second chance, for dropouts," he said.

Semple indicated that the department has developed several pilot programs to increase dropouts' employability as well as their chances to earn Graduate Equivalency Diplomas. Results of these programs, he said, can be used to help districts throughout the state improve their services to young dropouts.

New Jersey hospitals show efficiency

New Jersey hospitals are efficient, according to a new study released by the New Jersey Hospital Association. The study, entitled "Hospital Statistics: Focus on New Jersey," uses data from the American Hospital Association and the Health Care Financing Administration to compare the New Jersey track record to that in the Northeast and the rest of the nation over a five-year period (1978-1982).

As a measure of efficiency, New Jersey hospital revenues per adjusted admission were $386 below the national average and $623 below the Northeast average. "This means that patients in New Jersey paid $386 less per hospital stay than did the average patient in the rest of the country, and $623 less than four hospitals in the Northeast," said Louis P. Scibetta, FACHA, president of the association.

"New Jersey ranked the lowest out of 50 states, plus the District of Columbia, in the rate of increase in expenses per adjusted admission for the four years ending 1983—the most recent year for which data is available. The state now ranks 22nd in terms of the cost of hospital care."

"The performance by New Jersey hospitals is particularly impressive when you consider that New Jersey's per capita personal income, an indication of the cost of living here, is the fourth highest in the nation," Scibetta said. "In other words, the cost of hospital care is not a major cause for New Jersey's high cost of living."

Cost of care has been an issue of particular concern to the federal government, which funds the Medicare program. About 40 percent of all hospital patients in New Jersey are participants in this program.

Based on data from the Health Care Financing Administration, the increase in Medicare charges in New Jersey hospitals continues to be the lowest in the nation for the period of 1980 to 1983.

New Jersey has the second oldest Medicare population in the nation—exceeded only by Florida. Those 65 and older are admitted to hospitals three times as often as those 65 and over.

"One might expect the Medicare charges to be increasing dramatically, but this has not occurred in New Jersey. Our state was once again lowest in the nation in rate of increase for Medicare charges," said the NJHA president.

The length of hospital stay for all patients has decreased in New Jersey, including Medicare patients.

School target of new lawsuit

By KENNETH SCHANKLER
The deed to the Walton School property has become the focus of a new lawsuit involving the sale of the building.

At the crux of the matter is a condition in the deed to the Walton School property in Springfield which prohibits its use for anything other than public purposes.

"It's a restriction in the deed," said Township Attorney Anthony D'Alesio, who will represent the Township Committee in a suit filed against it by the Springfield Board of Education.

The suit, filed Monday in Superior Court by the school board, is an attempt to bring "very important issues" into the case involving the school board and Greensprings Estates, which has been in litigation for over a year.

"Unless the proposed amended proceedings are allowed," the complaint reads, "the major and important concerns and issues will never be heard on their merits unless a new litigation is instituted."

The suit alleges that when the township's 1977 zoning ordinance was invalidated in a 1980 court case, the subdivision ordinance that was a part of that ordinance was also invalidated. The zoning ordinance was later corrected to the court's satisfaction, but, the complaint reads, the subdivision ordinance was never properly re-amended.

Therefore, the suit reads, the initial sale was never valid.

"The property was originally turned over to the school board by the Township Committee in 1969," D'Alesio said, "with the condition that it not be used for anything other than public purposes."

"However," the board voted to sell the property to Greensprings Estates, a development corporation owned by Frank Racioppo for $1,055,000.

Racioppo purchased the property with the intention of building a minor subdivision, but in April 1984, a local resident, Dr. Barry Malzmann, filed suit against Greensprings Estates and the township Planning Board to deny the subdivision use.

The current school board charged that the land was not subdivided at the time the decision to sell was made.

In addition, the board has charged that the former school board acted unlawfully by allowing Greensprings Estates to sell the property on conditions differing from those up for public bid.

The case is scheduled to be heard June 21.

Young writers' work is published

Two Springfield students have had their work published in "The Young Writers' Annual," a collection of writing by students in grades one through eight.

Elizabeth Cross, a second grader at the Thelma A. Sandreier School, wrote a story entitled "The Outer Space Girl and Her Unicorn." A poem, "My Mother," was contributed by Joshua Jay Zaitz, a member of the first grade class at the James Caldwell School.

The selections were among 120 chosen from over 2,000 samples submitted from nearly 500 schools nation-wide.

"I love my mother," reads Joshua's poem. "My mother has blond hair. My mother loves me. My mother is pretty. My mother is helpful."

Elizabeth's story tells of an unusual night time encounter in her backyard.

"One night while I was sleeping, a strange noise woke me up. I went outside and saw a spaceship in my back yard. A beautiful girl and a white unicorn came out of the spaceship. We said hello to each other. She told me her name was Gigi and asked me to show her around my neighborhood. We got on the unicorn and rode to my school. The unicorn's name was Starlight. When we got to the school, she asked me what I do there. I told her I learn to read and write and play with my friends. Next, I took her to my church and told her it was where I pray. Gigi told me her world is very different. She didn't go to school or church. She told me that my world was the best she ever visited. We rode back to my home, and I gave her cookies and milk. She loved it! Then I had to say goodbye to my new friend. Gigi said she would always remember me and the wonderful place where I live."

Comparing municipal bonds

By GUS GIVINKOS
Certified Financial Planner

There are two major varieties of municipal bonds available, one with a splendid reputation and the other with a somewhat tarnished reputation. The first type is called the general-obligations bond. In our trade, it is referred to as the G.O. bond.

In a G.O. municipal bond, the full taxing power of that particular town or city or state stands behind the bond. If the bond ever gets into trouble on either its principal or interest, the citizenry of that town or city or state will be taxed to pay for both the interest and principal.

The ability to levy or tax is an exceedingly powerful weapon, such that, next to U.S. government bonds, general-obligation municipal bonds have been historically the safest place one can put money.

The other type of municipal bond is called the revenue bond. In revenue municipal bonds, the money raised from the sale is used to build a special project such as a sewage system or a stadium. The income that the project earns is used to pay the interest and principal on the bonds.

If the project were to fail, however, the citizenry would normally not be responsible; only the specific project would be responsible.

The New Jersey Sports and Exposition Authority not long ago floated some revenue municipal bonds to build the Meadowlands sports complex. Individuals who use the Meadowlands pay for the use of the facilities.

If the Meadowlands sports complex were to fail, however, the citizens of New Jersey would not be responsible because they are revenue bonds. Only the Meadowlands sports complex would be responsible.

If you were looking at one particular town or state or city that had both general-obligation and revenue bonds outstanding, on which of these bonds would you expect the highest yield? The revenue bonds. Why? Greater risk.

Recently, because of the problems that New York City had, there was a depression in the entire municipal bond market, so that a popular approach to municipal bond investment has been the insured municipal unit trusts — tax-free and insured.

In addition, these trusts can be purchased in $1,000 units allowing the small investor to participate in the municipal bond market.

Municipal bonds have historically been the province of investors in the higher tax brackets. Let me give an illustration of that. Take two investors: A and B. Let's assume both have $10,000 to put into bonds.

Mr. A decides that he likes AT&T Corporate bonds. Let's say they are paying 12 percent. So in a year's time, Mr. A receives $1,200.

Let's assume that Mr. A is in the 50 percent tax bracket. If that is true, then on April 15 Uncle Sam will take $600 in income tax, leaving A with a net, in-pocket, spendable sum of $600.

Now B, on the other hand, takes his $10,000 and decides to buy a municipal bond paying 9 percent. So he receives how much interest? $900.

Let's assume that B is also in a 50 percent tax bracket, so in April Uncle Sam takes how much in income tax? Nothing, leaving B a net, in-pocket, spendable sum of $900.

So in this case we have to say we would much rather be Mr. B than Mr. A. Although Mr. B's yield was actually less than Mr. A's, this disparity, incidentally, is rather normal. Usually a municipal bond will pay 2 to 3 percent less than a comparable corporate bond.

THIS WEEK IN BUSINESS

Poll shows employment increase

A new national opinion poll indicates that sales and marketing employment in the Mid-Atlantic region, including Northern New Jersey, will increase slightly during the last half of 1985.

The survey, conducted by Sales Consultants International, Inc., the country's largest search firm of sales and marketing professionals, asked more than 1,300 executives in companies across the country to project their hiring plans for the next six months.

A total of 40.2 percent of those surveyed in the Mid-Atlantic area indicated they were planning to expand their sales and marketing staffs during the next six months.

Another 46.6 percent in the region said they would maintain present staff levels and 13.2 percent planned staff reductions. This is a 5.5 point increase from the last six months of last year.

By comparison, 42.1 percent of those polled throughout the country were planning to increase staff size; 47 percent said they would maintain staff size; and 10.7 percent indicated possible staff reductions.

Remus Klimski of Sales Consultants of Union feels that these projections are healthy and indicative of sales management's approach to long-term planning.

"This area is parallel to national projections and the increase for future staff hires seems to balance off the lower trends in this region experienced previously."

This survey is the 15th in an ongoing series of polls conducted on behalf of Sales Consultants International by Consumer Pulse of Cleveland.

For further information, call Klimski at 964-6500.

County directory available

Copies of the updated 1985 Union County Government Directory, listing offices, departments and officials, is now available to the general public, announced Louis J. Coletti, County Manager.

"This year's directory features the new county logo in blue on a gray background, designed and compiled by the Union County Office of Public Information," said G. Richard Malgron, chairman of the Union County Board of Chosen Freeholders.

Directories can be obtained at every municipal building and main library branch in Union County's 21 municipalities. Copies are also available by visiting the Office of Public Information, third floor of the Union County Administration Building, Elizabethtown Plaza, Elizabeth, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday-Friday.

Due to budgetary restrictions this year, directories cannot be sent through the mail to citizens, but ample supplies will be available at the local libraries and municipal buildings, officials stated.

"Among the features of the 1985 Directory are photos of county buildings utilized by the public, the county's organizational chart and directions to the Courthouse Complex in Elizabeth from major arteries," Coletti said. "In addition, photos and biographies of our five Constitutional officers are also included for the first time this year."

"We encourage all those who live, work and do business in Union County to obtain a copy of this valuable reference guide to county government offices and services," Malgron urged. "We believe that good government is based on an informed public. We've provided the proper information, now it's up to the residents to learn all they can about their county and its functions."

Vietnam vet memorial supported

Assemblyman Peter Genova, R-22, has introduced a bill that would appropriate funds to establish a memorial at the Garden State Arts Center honoring New Jersey's Vietnam veterans.

The bill is identical to a Senate measure, S-2578, sponsored by Sen. Peter Garibaldi, which is supported by veterans groups.

"Our nation finally is giving Vietnam veterans the credit they deserve for defending this country during difficult times," said Genova. "A permanent tribute to the courage and determination of those who were sent to fight in that conflict is long overdue."

The legislation calls for a competition to determine the design of the memorial, according to Genova.

The bill would provide $100,000 to construct the memorial at the Garden State Arts Center in Holmdel, Monmouth County. The site of the memorial would be subject to the approval of the New Jersey Highway Authority, which would assist the New Jersey Vietnam Veterans Memorial Association and the New Jersey Arts Council in the establishment of the monument.

Majors, Arians impress in early going

The Linden Majors and Arians, the city's two women's fast-pitch softball teams, got their seasons off the ground last week in impressive fashion.

SPORTS

The Majors, who opened the campaign late last month by finishing third in the Philadelphia Invitational, raised their record to 3-0 overall by taking two games from the Tooton VIP's, then splitting a pair with the Allentown (Pa.) Patriots and sweeping the Brooklyn Dreams before getting trounced out of a twinbill with the always tough Raybestos Brackettes.

Friday, the Majors rolled to a 13-3 victory as Luna had four hits, including a homer and triple, and Kalsiak had two hits and three RBIs to back the pitching of Smith, who also homered to aid her own cause.

In the second game, an 8-0 shutout win, Kalsiak fired a two-hitter and Smith will not be available this weekend, so the pitching will be handled by Kalsiak, Bonnie Black and Diane Fulham. The Majors will also face the Budweiser Belles in Parsippany in a doubleheader next Wednesday.

YOUTHFUL JUMPER—Mark Viegas takes his turn at trying to clear the bar in the high jump at last week's Union grade school track meets. Viegas failed to place in the event. CARDINALS 11, REDS 4. The J.M.M. Foundation Cardinals defeated the Union Center National Bank Reds behind the two-hit, eight-strikeout pitching of Brian Testa. Red hitters were Tim Dubrow and Robert Shupansky. Cards hitters were Scott Hoffman, Justin Steele, Mike Cirelli and Shaun Murray.

By RAE HUTTON

It's been around for centuries, but has turned up in the American home only in recent years.

It's been alternately described as "devilishly delicious," versatile and bland.

On top of that, it's inexpensive, won't harm your health and it's low in calories.

Tofu — it's pronounced like "go to," resembles a creamy white brick of custard and takes on the flavor and appearance of any product with which it's mixed.

And even though many people don't know what it is or what to do with it, chances are most people have sampled it when eating at a Chinese or Japanese restaurant, or, most recently, at ice cream parlors serving tofutti.

But just what is tofu?

Tofu is soybean curd, used by the Chinese for thousands of years, and now acknowledged world-wide as a healthful source of cholesterol-free protein.

It is soft and cheese-like and is made from coagulated soybean milk that has been the main source of protein in the Orient for centuries. It is coagulated with nigari — minerals extracted from sea water — or calcium sulfate, a naturally occurring mineral, in a process similar to cheese-making. Just as cheese is made from milk, tofu, is made from the milk of soybeans. Soy sauce also comes from the soybean.

Tofu comes in two consistencies, firm and soft, and the two styles can be interchanged in any recipe except those calling for blending in a blender. Soft tofu must be used in any recipe calling for blending or whipping.

Bland in taste, tofu takes on the flavor of any herbs and spices mixed with it, making it the

See Page 2 for recipes on preparing tofu in the home. Additional recipes and information are available from New England Soy Dairy, 305 Wells St., Greenfield, Ma., 01301 or the Union County Cooperative Extension Service, 300 North Ave., East, Westfield, which provided the recipes accompanying this article. A self-addressed stamped envelope should accompany the requests.

ideal food extender without changing the flavor or character of the meat or cheese dish in which it is used.

So what's so good about it?

Although it's rich in protein, tofu must be mixed with either whole grains, wheat germ, seeds, nuts, milk products or animal proteins to be a complete protein. It's a good source of calcium and, because it is derived from vegetables, it is cholesterol-free. Tofu contains no additives, artificial flavors, colors or preservatives, is low in sodium and, for the weight conscious, it's low in calories. Tofu has fewer than 100 calories per 3½ ounce brick with only about two grams of carbohydrates. In addition, it's easy to digest.

One of the best things about tofu is its price. A pound of tofu costs about one-third of the price of boned chicken breasts, while its protein quality is about equal to it.

How can tofu be used?

Tofu can be used in so many ways that there are tofu recipes for breakfast, lunch, dinner and for everything from soup to nuts.

Tofu can be found in the fresh food section of most supermarkets as well as in the frozen section where tofu pops, desserts, low-calorie tofu and tofutti are becoming popular.

When buying tofu, look for an expiration date on the label. It is as perishable as cottage cheese and should be as fresh as possible when used. Unused tofu may be stored in fresh water in a covered container in the refrigerator for up to 10 days. It also can be frozen, but its consistency will be changed from soft and creamy to chewy and meaty. After being frozen, tofu soaks up marinades and sauces more readily, but it is no longer suitable for blending and whipping and may be slightly yellow in color.

It can be used as the main source of protein in a meal or combined with meats and cheese as a protein extender. It can be diced for use in soups and casseroles, put in during the last 10

Among the day's highlights will be the wedding at 4 p.m. West Orange Mayor Samuel Spina will perform the nuptials joining Eunice and Clive in matrimony. The bride will be given away by Jim Ownby, founder and chairperson of The Good Bears of the World.

Other bear events scheduled for Sunday are:

County Beekeepers Society will display a live working beehive.

Tofu — from soup to nuts

minutes of cooking, just to absorb the flavor and aroma. It can be blended to make sauces and dressings and whirled into mayonnaise, sour cream or a cream cheese substitute, substantially cutting down on the caloric value. It also can be scrambled like eggs, added to salads, whipped into a quiche or lasagna, fried, baked, sautéed, boiled or marinated.

For real tofu enthusiasts, it can be eaten raw, dipped in another soybean derivative, soy sauce.

While many people think of tofu as an "exotic oriental food," it is becoming more popular as a dessert, particularly since it is low in calories. Most ice cream lovers would have trouble telling it apart from the real thing—even though tofu has about half the calories of ice cream. Since it has no taste or smell, only natural ingredients like real fruit and nuts are used to create a variety of flavors. Since it is lactose-free, the 30 million Americans intolerant of milk have an alternative.

Precooked, tofu keeps forever, making it the ideal accompaniment or a backpacking or camping trip. Here's how to precook tofu:

Heat 1/2 cup oil until hot. Crumble one pound of tofu into the oil and fry until brown, stirring constantly.

Cook for about five minutes and then drain off excess oil. When the tofu is cool, store it in an airtight container.

Rebecca's forecast

For week of June 13 to June 20
ARIES (3/21-4/20) This is a good week to make headway in resolving an ongoing family or employment dilemma. Others may unknowingly help you by providing crucial insight. Listen... really listen. Later, you may encounter troublesome situations while traveling, and look for an unswinging in domestic matters.
TAURUS (4/21-5/21) Some early confusion could cloud your judgments early in this week, especially where health, job or dependents' interests are concerned. Communications will assume unusual importance. Be careful in all financial transactions and expect your own popularity to escalate in weeks ahead.
GEMINI (5/22-6/21) Your apt to encounter work or health problems before this week is over. Co-workers can be irksome and a stand off now may leave you the loser. Keep this in mind. Later, look forward to bright new beginnings in many matters; obstacles are removed and you are able to help yourself.
CANCER (6/22-7/22) Private or personal problems may crowd your thoughts early in this week and many will be unsure of their standing within important alliances. LIBRA (9/24-10/23) The week ahead promises to be important, even memorable for some. You may be in the limelight as never before! Career, community and property matters will be top priority; expect the unexpected! Later, you surmount an obstacle. Heed your intuition and know you can promote your own ambitions now.

SCORPIO (10/24-11/22) You may feel as though you're on the defensive early in the week. Realize that your natural suspicious nature may be the culprit! Indicators point to real estate industry expansion

A number of leading indicators point to continued gains in the real estate and housing sectors of the nation's economy, according to the president of Weichert, Realtors. "Interest rates, inflation, housing supply and demand-all indicate that the second half of 1985 will be a very good time to enter the real estate marketplace, either as a homebuyer, seller, or investor," said James M. Weichert, head of the real estate firm. "Affordable interest rates, accessible mortgage money, and pent-up demand have created the most active marketplace in recent history."

Other real estate investment opportunities that look promising this year include land and property investments in booming suburban communities, farmland, and commercial property in mid-size malls and mini-warehouses. "We see the balance of 1985 as a good time to enter just about all avenues of the real estate market," said Weichert. Weichert, Realtors has 100 sales offices located throughout New Jersey, Rockland and Westchester counties in New York, southern Connecticut, and eastern Pennsylvania. Corporate headquarters are located in Morristown, New Jersey.

Chapter honors restorations
Peter Campbell of Union, president of the Northern New Jersey Chapter of the Victorian Society in America, announced that the chapter again will honor outstanding examples of historic preservation of 19th century buildings whose preservation resulted from years of tender care rather than conscious restoration. Last year's winners included a 1892 shingled-style residence in Montclair, a Colonial Revival office building, and Eleanor S. Webster of Glen Ridge for her work to research and document the town's historic district.
