Spotlight fades

The American people are slow to understand, or express concern, about widespread terrorism worldwide and have an often understandable difficulty comprehending what events or emotions precipitated the incident. Terrorism also garners the media spotlight for a short period, before fading from our TV screens, newspaper front pages or attention spans a few weeks later.

Last fall, when residents of our area and their relatives and friends embarked on the Achille Lauro cruise — and the luxury liner was subsequently hijacked and a passenger murdered — terrorism abruptly struck closer to home.

When Marilyn Klinghoffer, widow of Leon, the victim of the Achille Lauro hijackers, was buried in a Kenilworth cemetery last month, the focus on terrorism and its victims was again highlighted, only to dim again when the funeral was over.

But terrorism continues. The victims now are a small, apparently neglected group — the five Americans kidnapped by one of the Islamic Jihad, the so-called "Party of God," in war-torn Lebanon.

Four of the hostages — the Rev. Lawrence M. Jenko, a Roman Catholic priest; David P. Jacobsen, a director of the American University Hospital; Thomas M. Sutherland, the dean of agriculture at the American University, and Terry A. Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent for the Associated Press — are apparently still being held.

The Islamic Jihad has also taken responsibility for killing William Buckley, a political officer at the American Embassy in Beirut, though his body hasn't been found. A sixth American, Peter Kilburn, was the librarian at the American University when he disappeared in December 1984. No group has taken responsibility for his abduction.

While the hostages' fate remains a mystery, their names are all but forgotten except by their concerned families, relatives and friends. A vigil was held Sunday across from the White House by family members of one of the hostages in order that we don't forget our fellow countrymen.

What actions the U.S. government is taking to secure the release of the hostages is unclear. The typical answer from State Department officials is that they are engaged in quiet negotiations, and that to reveal the substance of the talks would jeopardize the situation.

In many instances, this might well be true. But we hope that such a standard response is never used to cover up inaction. Foreign bureaucrats often seem more concerned with the overall tone of relations between nations rather than the fate of specific individuals.

It is difficult to believe that if efforts to free the hostages are under way, that there is not some information, or even reassurances, that could be communicated to the American public and people with close ties to the hostages.

Foreign relations are too strongly ruled by the emphasis on image over substance, talk instead of progress. Neither the government nor the media should focus too strongly on one particular area of international conflict at the expense of other open and unresolved crises.

We cannot hold ourselves above other nations if we persist in forgetting about the fates of individuals.

As long as there is even one American held hostage, we all face the threat of losing our freedom.

Is there really a threat in Nicaragua?

Are the Soviet Union and Nicaragua militarily threatening our country? Admiral Gene LaRocque (ret.) spoke at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Church at a conference "Peace and Justice... What's the Connection?" He cited Soviet Premier Gorbachev's initiative in halting nuclear weapons expansion below and above ground as a step in the direction of a Comprehensive Test Ban. LaRocque urged the U.S. to match Gorbachev's initiative, which has been extended beyond the March 31 deadline. He also noted the $200 billion deficit which Gramm-Rudman is supposed to alleviate, as being largely incurred by unnecessary and wasteful spending for Pentagon projects of doubtful military value. He specifically mentioned the Strategic Defense Initiative and the Rapid Deployment Force, used in most instances for intervention abroad. "They are not our vital interests," he said. He denied that the Soviets presented a military threat and reasserted the U.S. forces in nearly all weapons systems. Sen. Edward Kennedy bore this out in debate with Casper Weinberger when he stated that he would not trade our military forces for theirs. If, indeed, we are superior and can afford to trade and negotiate with the Russians, why not negotiate in like manner with the Sandinista government in Nicaragua? Surely, we are not threatened militarily by Nicaragua. Why not abide by international law and negotiate differences through the Contadora process?

Why force confrontation when negotiations may prevent a horrible war in Central America such as was experienced in Vietnam? Furthermore, we

Sale of Conrail would be bad for state

By FRANK R. LAUTENBERG
When the government created Conrail in 1976 from the remains of Penn Central and five other bankrupt rail lines, freight rail service in the Northeast corridor was saved from certain demise. A decade later, Conrail is back on its feet. It is showing a profit. If it were returned to the private sector, but only to the right buyer at the right price...

So, for those of us in states which will have to live with the consequences of this decision, the debate is not-over philosophy or ideology. It is a debate over economics and the calculus of transportation in our region. We must choose, but choose wisely. A sale of Conrail to Norfolk Southern would be harmful to New Jersey's interests. For this reason, I oppose selling Conrail to Norfolk Southern.

The sale of Conrail to Norfolk Southern represents a merger that would result in the nation's largest railroad, reducing the total number of carriers on the East Coast from three to two. This is a matter of deep consequence to New Jersey, where Conrail is a vital link in our economy.

Since the creation of Conrail, New Jersey's economy badly. As a southern-based company, Norfolk Southern is likely to divert business from the ports of New York-New could use the $10 million — $4 million, approximately, to be coming from N.J. taxpayers — for our own inner city needs and the 6,000 persons who are reportedly homeless in Newark.

Writer hopes matter comes to close

I had chosen to remain silent, as my child's ravens on, but the phonetic sound of his prose comes across as a childish rage. Since we are all adults, it is time then to answer publicly, for to subjectively suggest that my credentials, or lack of them, are responsible for a missing charity date announcement is ludicrous.

I must ask this gentleman why he chooses to attack me personally and divert attention away from the issue of child molestation. The jury that will decide the case will not be comprised of experts, but rather ordinary people like myself. Apparently he leans toward experts to shift responsibilities of citizenship away from himself. I hope this matter comes to a rest with these comments, for it is a waste of my time!

significant in the world, is the jewel in the crown of the Conrail sale. Because Conrail has a near monopoly on rail service from the port of Norfolk to the Atlantic seaboard, it will benefit from $14 billion annually in economic activity; 150,000 jobs, 100,000 of them direct post industry jobs; $4.2 billion in wages and salaries and $2.3 billion in business income.

The sale of Conrail to Norfolk Southern threatens to harm our region's economy badly. As a southern-based company, Norfolk Southern is likely to divert business from the ports of New York-New Jersey and Philadelphia to southern ports, specifically the port of Norfolk, in which it has made major investments. I am not prepared to take that chance.

The Senate undertook to consider the legislation to sell Conrail without a full understanding of its effect on rail freight rates and competition between regions. It moved to sell Conrail as if Conrail were a loser and there was a crying need to get it off the federal dole. That is not the case. Congress should not be stampeded into taking an action that we could regret for years to come.

Faced with a non-profitable railroad in 1981, Congress directed the U.S. Department of Transportation to devise a plan to sell Conrail and exempted all bids from approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission. The ICC, which usually deals with such acquisitions, is an independent regulatory agency, buffered from political pressure. Moreover, it has the expertise, and personnel and procedures in place, to rule on the economic ramifications that accompany a merger the size of that contemplated in the Conrail sale.

Congress does not have the resources nor the expertise to adequately review a merger of this magnitude and complexity. Another unusual aspect of the proposed Conrail sale is its insulation from antitrust laws which Congress has set up to guard against abuse of monopoly power. During Senate consideration of the Conrail sale, I attempted to modify the legislation governing the sale by giving ports, cities and states subject to monopoly abuses the ability to seek relief in federal court. Unfortunately, this amendment was narrowly defeated.

The sale of Conrail to Norfolk Southern would be bad for New Jersey. It would likely result in increased rail freight rates for our shippers, a loss of jobs in our state, and diversion of traffic from our major ports. Other options for its sale should be considered. The Secretary of Transportation Dole should go back to the drawing board and send Congress a plan that our state and our region can live with.

For fifteen years residential tenants in New Jersey have had the option to a rent abatement or to a reimbursement for repairs needed to bring their premises to a safe type of ready occupancy in a commercial lease. This feature of the new law to provide all that is set forth in a lease, or all that is implied in such a rental agreement, may relieve the tenant of the obligation to pay the full contractual rent.

Patients learn basic skills

To a child, achieving independence, it's the little things that count—washing, getting dressed, going from home to school.

For the patient at Children's Specialized Hospital, however, these seemingly simple tasks can be formidable. The youngster may lack motor control, reach or strength, and in the case of head trauma victims, memory and concentration.

Working with each youngster for up to an hour each day, the staff, in conjunction with the family and therapists, develop individual training programs.

"We consider every type of activity the child will perform throughout the day," Boyan said. "They need to manage hygiene, grooming and dressing and feed themselves. If the child will attend

"Helping patients master basic skills is the charge of the Activities for Daily Living nursing staff, headed by Doreen Boyan.

"Our goal," Boyan said, "is to make our children as independent as possible, so that they can function at home and in the community. In fact, we start discharge planning from day one."

Toward this end, the nurses evaluate every in-patient to determine if their services are needed. In approximately half the cases, the answer is "yes."

The Activities for Daily Living staff is also available on a referral basis for outpatients.

extended handles, built-up toothbrushes, or range-of-motion dresser aids. "Known as 'pullers'—upside-down T-bars that pull sticks up until they are high enough for the child to reach. Boyan said, "We resort to those devices only when absolutely necessary. It's always better for the children to do things themselves."

Nothing is considered too trivial, Boyan said.

"If a teenage girl wants to be able to polish her nails or put a barrette in her hair, we'll help her with that. If it's important to her, it's important to us."

Very popular with patients is the staff's adaptive cooking course. With the help of tip-proof mixing bowls and spoons with specially designed grips, the youngsters master such delicacies as avocado cup appetizer, spare ribs and brownies—and enjoy socializing in the process.

At most other rehabilitative hospitals, teaching everyday skills is considered occupational therapy. The approach at Children's Specialized Hospital, however, has the advantage in that the nurses are aware of, and comfortable with, the medical aspects of each case.

Speaking of the impact the program has on young patients, Boyan said, "Some children may not be motivated at first. But as they progress, they see how worthwhile the goal is."

"We all get a real sense of satisfaction from knowing that the will lead relatively normal lives and add something to the community."

Temple program continuing

Food and clothing collections are continuing at Temple Sha'arey Shalom, Springfield, where earlier this month three years full of donations were collected for the St. Joseph's Social Service Center, Elizabethtown.

Temple Social Action Chairman John Schlinger said Temple personnel were available to accept donations daily.

Schlinger said the food donated helps to stock a food pantry at the St. Joseph's Social Service Center, which is planning to open a soup kitchen next month.

Schlinger said the Temple is considering "taking over responsibility" for running the kitchen when it opens.

Forum to examine breathing disorders

Help yourself to better breathing! That's the theme of a community forum which will be sponsored April 2, by the Union-based American Lung Association of New Jersey, "The Christmas Seal People" and Saint Barnabas Medical Center, Livingston. The forum, which is designed for the general public and patients with lung disease, will be held at 7:30 p.m. in the auditorium at Saint Barnabas Medical Center. Subject matter will focus on "treating lung disease," "smoking and its effect on the smoker and the non-smoker" and "the impact of air pollution including radon gas on the respiratory system." A four-member panel will discuss various aspects of the subject and answer written questions submitted from the audience. The panelists are Dr. Fred M. Jacobs, director of Pulmonary Services at Saint Barnabas Medical Center and Vice President of the New Jersey Thoracic Society, the medical branch of the American Lung Association of New Jersey; Dr. Lee B. Reichman, professor of Medicine, University of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey-New Jersey Medical School and president of the American Lung Association of New Jersey, and Linda Stansfield, consultant for "environmental air" at the American Lung Association of New Jersey. The forum is the first in a series of programs to be offered by Saint Barnabas Medical Center to increase public awareness about lung disease. The medical center recently opened a 28-bed respiratory care unit. The program is open to the general public and tickets are not required. Refreshments will be served and parking is free. Further information is available from the American Lung Association of New Jersey, 657-9240.

Food irradiation forum

An educational forum on food irradiation will be held today, at 8 p.m. at the YMHA, 501 Green Lane, Union, near Kent College. The event's co-sponsors are the YMHA and Citizens League of Elizabeth.

Panelists will include Dr. Walter Burnstein, a physician from Morris County; Ken Terry of Scotch Plains, the ex-chairman of the Nuclear Free Zone Advisory Committee of Union County; and Michael Diamond, a Westfield councilman and attorney. All three are opposed to the construction of a food irradiation plant in Elizabeth, which has also been

National group cites advertising firm

Gallagher Advertising of Westfield, a full-service advertising agency, has been awarded first place for a 140-page travel brochure by the National Tour Association. The firm, which is celebrating its 10th anniversary, was cited for "Outstanding Group-Tour Marketing."

Depositors to enjoy increase

Regular savings account interest rate ceiling on regular savings accounts, said Davis, "all our depositors who have a balance of $250 or more will be earning a higher rate of interest. The new rate will fluctuate depending upon the money market. With the elimination of the in-drawn fire from the Union County Board of Freeholders.

According to the sponsors, no executive of Radiation Technology Inc., the company that proposes to build the Elizabeth plant, would consent to come and present his point of view. If no proponents of food irradiation attend the forum, the moderator will read excerpts from literature that favors the technology.

Following the panel discussion, the public is invited to ask questions.

Rabbi alleges 'coverup' of kosher violations

By TIMOTHY OWENS
A prominent member of the nine-member "Kosher" Food Advisory Council, which helped the state draft regulations governing the sale of kosher foods, charged this week that the N.J. Division of Consumer Affairs was engaged in a "coverup" of possible fraud in the sale of such food.

Rabbi Pichus Teitz, spiritual leader of the Orthodox Jewish community in Elizabeth, said that the division is "minimizing, rather than maximizing" enforcement of the law.

James J. Barry, division director, strongly disagreed. "Our effort to enforce the law continues to go on, and if we find an instance of possible fraud, we are going to go after it without delay."

The controversy between the council and the division came to a head after state officials met earlier this month with representatives of the kosher food industry for nearly two hours and reached what Barry called "a verbal agreement" on standards for the identification of kosher foods. The director said that the agreement calls for an increase in the number of kosher plumbers, or tags, placed and kept on kosher poultry, to prevent fraudulent representation of non-kosher poultry as kosher. Kosher foods are often up to three times more expensive than non-kosher foods.

Teitz and members of the advisory council, noting that they have not met for at least six months, expressed their dismay that they were not consulted about the new agreement between the state and the kosher food industry representatives. Last week Teitz said of the agreement, "It's like telling the cat to watch the mouse."

"If I had had any idea that they would have reacted as they have to our effort to improve the quality of enforcement, I would have brought them in," Barry said of the advisory council. He added that he "welcomes their suggestions and recommendations."

"It seems to me that the people who are heading the commission," Teitz said of the division, "don't know their role." He added that "some division inspectors are done by people who don't know the law."

Teitz further alleged that the head of the division's kosher food enforcement arm, Howard Wigder, actually advised an unofficial liaison between a kosher butcher and the kosher food industry to reach a settlement. The case, one of the first fraud cases brought by the division, was settled before it was prosecuted in Union County Superior Court, Elizabeth.

Barry said the division's two full-time and one part-time inspectors, who are responsible for covering the entire state, "are out in the field all the time, with the exception of coming into the office to file their reports."

Teitz said that the rabbinic on the advisory council are on the verge of resigning their positions because they have "no confidence" in the ability of the division to enforce the kosher food law.

"I only wish that any religious leader in the state who wants to would bring their suggestions or concerns to my attention," said Barry. "I have not heard from Rabbi Teitz. I would welcome the opportunity to sit down and talk to them. I am going to suggest that they meet with me."

Schoolmates to gather

Oak Knoll School alumnae will gather at the Summit Hotel, 370 Springfield Ave., Summit Saturday, for their annual Alumnae Luncheon. Highlighting the luncheon, beginning at 11:30 a.m., will be the presentation of the first Distinguished Alumna Award. The award recognizes an alumna who has made significant contributions to Oak Knoll. According to Edie Sudner, Oak Knoll Alumnae Director, "the award honors dedication to Oak Knoll through a life which exemplifies the Holy Child Spirit."

A special feature of the luncheon will be the gathering together of the reunion classes to be honored. This year the classes to be recognized are 1951, '56, '61, '66, '51, '56, '61, '66, '71, '76 and '81.

Mary Lou Bolan Davis, class of 1960, chairwoman of the luncheon, said, "We are looking forward to seeking our friends and former teachers at the luncheon."

Proceeding the luncheon will be a coffee with Sister Cynthia Vives, headmistress of Oak Knoll. The coffee will be held in the stone manor house which is now the Convent Administration Building. The alumnae will tour the campus with a stop at the Oak Knoll Prospect Street Convent, which served as the School's Upper School in the '40s and '50s, where they will visit with sisters of the Holy Child.

FINANCE CONSERVATION MEASURES AT VERY LOW INTEREST RATES...

...AS LOW AS 0%

As part of our Conserve & Save Program, working with the New Jersey Board of Public Utilities and the New Jersey Department of Energy, we're making no-interest and low-interest loans available through participating banks for conservation improvement measures.

Any Elizabethtown Gas residential heating customer who owns the home may request financing for conservation improvement measures.

Customers with annual family incomes under $30,000 may qualify for financing for up to six years at no interest. Customers with annual family incomes over $30,000 may qualify for financing at 7.5 per cent interest for up to four years.

These loans range from $500 to $4000 and may be used for insulation, caulking, storm or thermal windows and doors, water heater wraps, furnace or water heater replacement, low-flow shower-heads, faucet aerators and others.

To be eligible, you must first have a Home Energy Savings Program energy audit to determine which conservation measures will be most effective in your home. The audit, valued at $70, costs you only $15.

Teen talent on tap at county festival

Union County College will be the host for the 1986 Union County Teen Arts Festival Monday when students from schools all over Union County will present their art and attend workshops with master artists.

Student painters, photographers and printmakers will exhibit works, while student performers in music, dance and theater will give presentations at the college's main campus in Cranford. Student film and video productions will be shown and creative writing will be presented live.

Professional artists, including several from Union County, will guide aspiring teens in workshops, master classes and critiquing sessions in all artistic disciplines.

Student artists, writers, and performers wishing to present their work or participate in workshops should speak with their teachers. The Union County Teen Arts Festival is open to any student in a school in Union County who will be 13 or older by May 27.

Teachers this year include:

Donald Lokuta of Union, a nationally known photographer, who will conduct a gallery "walk-and-talk" critique session for students and the public.

Bruce Hanson, an art teacher at Gaudineer Middle School, Springfield, who will conduct "hands-on" workshops in sculpture.

Laurie Abramson of Mountainside, a member of the Princeton Ballet and teacher at Rutgers University in New Brunswick, will critique performances and conduct a master class in dance.

Other local participants will come from David Brearley Regional High School, Kenilworth, where Nancy Baton, talented and gifted teacher, has three students preparing to participate in this year's festival: a visual artist, a dancer, and a writer.

Also, the Linden High School Vocational School and middle schools are preparing to send students in a variety of disciplines.

This year's Union County Teen Arts Festival is sponsored by the Office of Cultural and Heritage Affairs, Union County Department of Parks and Recreation, Union County College, the Cultural and Heritage Programs Advisory Board, Union County Board of Chosen Freeholders, the Summer Arts Institute and the New Jersey State Teen Arts Program in cooperation with the New Jersey State Council on the Arts.

Music workshops include Flute Clinic for beginners, intermediate and advanced students from classical to jazz; Vocal Music for Individuals, from voice production to fine points of singing, for beginners, intermediate and advanced; and Piano Master Class including performance, practice tips and master class.

"How Music Works," will focus on structures of music, what goes through a composer's mind, understanding the performance and learning to be an intelligent performer for solo and ensemble performers, any instrument, including voice; Music Composition and Jazz Improvisation will focus on characteristics, techniques, harmonic study and history of the art form.

Creative writing workshops include "From Memories To Manuscript," in which participants will turn memories and personal experiences into poems, stories and personal essays.

"From Improv To Script," which will study improvisation and everyday conversation as sources for playwriting.

"The Poem in Your Head," which will deal with how to get the ideas and images in the mind onto paper and organized into an effective poem.

"Feedback Seminar—Writing," which will be readings and critiques of previously submitted work.

Workshops dealing with film/video/media are as follows:

"Pre and Post Production for Film and Video," which will focus on how to plan and schedule shoots for best editing and final product.

"Make A Radio Spot," in which participants will create and produce a radio spot for broadcast.

"Make A TV Commercial," in which participants will create and produce a TV commercial for broadcast.

"Feedback Seminar—Film/Video," which will give students the opportunity to show their VHS cassette videotapes on film.

Visual arts and crafts workshops are:

"Let's Look—Paintings/Drawings/Prints"—A walking critique of student artwork on exhibit.

"Let's Look—Photography"—A walking critique of student photographs on exhibit.

"Let's Look—3 Dimensional"—A walking critique of student pieces in three dimensions on exhibit.

"Exploring Contemporary Water

Color"—Involvement in such techniques as resist, wet into wet, block out, etc.

Other workshops on the agenda are: "Life Drawing," "Doing Charcoal Portraits," and "Getting Into Sculpture."

Workshops in theater are:

"Improvisation For The Theater," in which students will join in theater games, then work to develop and rehearse a theater piece.

"How To Audition For Theater," which will include preparation and practice in audition techniques.

"Pantomime For The Actor," in which students will study a character's walk, movements, physical personality.

"Inside Puppetry," which will deal with how the puppet can uncover a person's creativity.

"Mime with Masks," which will include use of mask and make-up, exploring movement and non-verbal sound.

"Circus Techniques," including juggling, plate spinning, balancing, unicycle riding.

"Theatrical Clowning," which will focus on the clown on stage, comedy, improvisation, character development.

Dance workshops will include dance for beginners, an overview of contemporary dance and modern jazz, and a dance performance/master class which includes a critique and hands-on workshop.

Union County teen-agers with demonstrated talent in visual arts, crafts, dance, music, theater or writing who would like to spend the summer working with professional artists in their fields are encouraged to come to the Teen Arts Festival to meet professional artists who will teach at this year's Summer Arts Institute, according to William Higgins, director of the Union County Cultural and Heritage Department.

The Summer Arts Institute meets for five weeks every year to form an artists' community in which students work closely with professionals to sharpen their skills and produce new works of performing, visual and literary art.

Students for the program are hand-picked by the artists they will work with in a scouting process that includes interviews, critiquing sessions and workshops at county and state Teen Arts Festivals.

At the Union County Teen Arts Festival, staff members of the Summer Arts Institute will be on hand to talk and work with students who think they might be interested in attending this summer's SAI.

Those students entering 9th, 10th, 11th or 12th grades next September should apply through their school.

Teen Arts Festival coordinator or their art, music, English or physical education instructor to attend the Union County Teen Arts Festival.

Cancer unit grows on sale of daffodils

Union County will get its first touch of spring this week when the American Cancer Society sponsors its annual Daffodil Days Festival.

Thousands of fresh cut daffodils are being transported from the West Coast to Union County for sale.

According to Mitch Friedman, county crusade chairman, the Daffodil is the first flower of spring and symbolizes hope for the cancer patient.

"During Daffodil Days, March 18 through 27, volunteers from the Society will deliver orders, dress in costume for special 'Big Bird Bunch' deliveries, and sell flowers at selected locations.

The Union County Automobile Dealers Association is participating in the event for the third year.

On Saturday more than 30 dealers will donate $50 for every car they sell that day. "It is a nice gesture on the part of the car dealers to take part in this," said Friedman.

Students from Linden High School and Abraham Clark High School in Roselle will blanket the community with gorgeous bouquets of these symbolic flowers. "The student support is an important factor to the success of the event," said Friedman.

Seven area restaurants have joined Daffodil Days by agreeing to donate 10 percent of one day's proceeds to the American Cancer Society.

The organizers of the event hope to top last year's total of $25,000. All money raised will support lifesaving programs in patient service, public and professional education, and research.

A bunch of daffodils is available for $4. Larger orders are also welcome. Big Bird bunches of 50 daffodils are available for $60. Orders of $75 will be delivered.

Orders may be placed by calling the American Cancer Society at 354-7373.

DAFFODIL DAYS—Big Bird delivers golden daffodils to Carrie, Jennie, Amy and Joell Lipscher of Elizabethtown in support of the American Cancer Society's annual daffodil festival.

New 4-H club forming

Erika U. Fields, Union County 4-H Agent, has announced the re-organization of the Dungeons and Dragons 4-H Club, under the leadership of Joan Croul from Westfield who is seeking new members.

The group will meet every other Friday evening, 7:30 p.m. at the Union County Administration & gym will be part of every day.

"Marvelous Monday" will be the "Y" gift to all-boys and girls who are registered for any two other vacation program days. Cooking, crafts and swimming will highlight the easygoing activities at the Green Lane Harry Lebau Building.

Boys and girls will be able to see the night sky change at the Newark Museum's Planetarium show on Tuesday. The Museum's "Spring Festival" that day features films and crafts with a comet theme in addition to their annual talks.

Service Building, 300 North Avenue east in Westfield.

Registration for the vacation program, which will be accepted on a first-come, first-serve basis, must be placed with "Y" Youth Director Tammy Stecker by tomorrow.

Carla Morowitz, founder and owner of Montclair's Clay Cellar on Orange Road, will conduct a clay pottery workshop for children aged 6-12 at the Montclair Art Museum on Sunday between 2-4 p.m.

Each child will be given three pounds of clay—enough to create three pots—and learn the ropes of this ancient craft, traditional to almost every civilization since the beginning of time. They will have the opportunity to build pots from flat pieces, rolled coils and by the "pinch" method, then decorate the pots with their personal emblems and designs.

The workshop is limited to 12 children between 6 and 12. Parents are encouraged to attend with their children. Reservations should be made in advance by calling the Montclair Art Museum's Education Department, (201) 746-8556.

"Costumes and merrymaking" are holiday traditions to be carried on at the YM-YWHA Purim Carnival Sunday from 1 to 3 p.m.

Y staff members will be costumed in the spirit of the holiday, and all boys and girls who attend in costume will be invited to be part of the Purim parade. Souvenir color photos of the Esthers, Hamans and other creatively costumed revelers can be taken at the picture booth before, during or after enjoying the game and activity booths, pony rides and petting zoo.

Comic book show

The Springfield Comic Book and Collectibles Marketplace will be held on Sunday, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Springfield Holiday Inn, 304 Route 22 West in Springfield.

More information can be obtained by calling (201) 555-1848.

Thousands of old and new comic books, collectibles and science fiction material will be featured at the marketplace.

Collectors of all ages are invited to buy, sell and trade.

Book describes 'real cowboy'

By BEA SMITH
What was the American cowboy really like back in the late 1800s? How did his lifestyle affect his character and personality? How did he "test" about time in the saddle, practically around the clock?

Throughout the history of the movies, it seems cowboys nearly always have been glamorized. The movie-makers, such as John Ford, have made them tough, hard-smiling, one-or-two-gun slingers, all pretty much on the order of John Wayne, or Republic Pictures, in its heyday, gave us handsome singing cowboys in colorful costumes, such as Gene Autry and Roy Rogers.

But to know what the real cowboy was all about one is compelled to read the novel by Larry McMurtry another in "character and personality." These two take the cowboy and McMurtry's comprehensive readers on the long, dangerous cattle drive.

Among the cowboys on the cattle drive, (some of whom look to McCone and Call as father-figures), are Newt, a young, innocent cowboy on his first drive, and Jake Spoon, a large, handsome, weak-charactered cowboy to whom women are attracted. There are unforgettable characters, such as July Johnson, a bashful sheriff who is seeking his run-away wife; Lorenz, the good-hearted prostitute, who comes along on the drive; Elmira, the restless wife of July Johnson; Clara, a strong-minded, independent wife of a rancher, and Blue Duck, a sinister Indian renegade, whose reputation for slaughtering the white man follows him to his grave.

There are so many other characters, whose daily lives we follow with intrigue and interest, such as Pea Eye, Diah Saggert, Bollivar, Deeds, the O'Brien brothers from Ireland, who would soothe the cattle at night with their soft songs of love and home; Roscoe, Peach, Louisa, the wicked Suggs Brothers, nearly as treacherous as the Indians, Sooty and Po Campo.

McMurtry not only takes his crowd on an epic cattle drive, but he takes his readers along every dusty trail. He takes us across the burning desert with no food and little or no water; he showers us with freezing water in rainstorms that last for days; he pelts us with hailstones the size of baseballs; he feeds us burning hot Mexican beans with our beefsteaks, or stewed snakes or fried grasshoppers. He nearly throws us in angry rivers, shoots bullets and Indian arrows at us; some fatally hit the spot, and in romantic overtures, actual punctures us with the pain and sorrow of love, requited and unrequited.

"Lonesome Dove" comes around once in a lifetime. Readers, don't let it gallop past you.

Recipe file

CHEESE CAKE
3 (8 oz.) packages cream cheese
1 1/4 cups sugar
3 eggs
2 cups sour cream
1 tsp. vanilla

Individual Cheese Cakes: Use above recipe. Put one vanilla wafer into each baking cup. (Foil baking cups are sturdy and do not have to be placed in muffin tins; simply line them up on cookie sheets.) Bake at 350 degrees for 20-30 minutes.

In Mix Master, cream together the cream cheese and sugar; beat in eggs, one at a time; Blend in sour cream and vanilla. Beat until creamy and uniform.

Pour into a spring-form pan, which has been lined with a graham cracker crust or Zwickback crust. (It can be baked without a crust.) Bake at 350 degrees for one hour. Turn the oven off; leave in the oven for one more hour.

The above recipe was submitted by Kathy Beach of Union as printed in the Livingston School, Union, cookbook, "Cherished Recipes." Recipes for this column should be sent to Focus editor, P. O. Box 3109, Union, 07083.

Goulet works at UCC gallery

A new series of landscapes by painter Cie Goulet of New York City is on exhibition at the Union County College's Tommasio Art Gallery in Cranford. It was announced by Prof. Anthony Nicolli, gallery director.

Goulet is a "major artist" whose works are "quite painterly and fairly expressionist in their execution," according to Prof. Nicolli.

Another in a series of "top quality art exhibits" on display at the gallery for the public, the Goulet presentation of paintings and works on paper will be a "departure from the painter's previous works," Prof. Nicolli explained.

"These new works should be extremely painterly and bold in terms of color and visual character," Goulet "is known for her ability to capture the energy and moodiness in the landscape generated by weather and light and movement" in the artist's words. She finds geographical areas which are characterized by stormy and turbulent weather, such as the coasts of Brittany and Oregon, strong subject matter. Her works on paper are often references for larger paintings on canvas.

Represented by the Louis K. Meisel Gallery in New York City, Goulet's works have been exhibited around the country. She also has served as a visiting artist and guest lecturer at Portland Center for the Visual Arts, Portland Ore., Oregon State University and the Oregon Arts Commission.

Goulet, who was born in Los Angeles, Calif., is married and the mother of one child. She attended the San Francisco Art Institute and received a bachelor of science degree from the University of Oregon.

Recently, in addition to creating landscapes, she has participated in and produced documentaries in video through Young Filmmakers in New York City.

The Tommasio Art Gallery is open for viewing from 1 to 4 p.m. Monday through Saturday, and from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday. Free to the public, the gallery is located in the MacKay Library.

Concert set Good Friday

The 14th annual Good Friday Concert, sponsored by the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Church, Plainfield, for the benefit of Muhlenberg Hospital, will feature two works by Johannes Brahms, performed by a 25-piece choir, a 57-piece orchestra and two soloists. The concert will be held March 23 at 8:15 p.m. at the church.

"A German Requiem" (Ein Deutsches Requiem) will be the major piece of the evening. Raymond Leavelle, concert chairman, a member of the Muhlenberg Hospital board of governors and an elder of the church, has announced that proceeds from the event will be donated toward renovations in the Emergency Department at Muhlenberg Hospital, which treated 40,000 patients in 1985.

This year's concert will honor the more than 600 men and women of the Muhlenberg Hospital Auxiliary.

Tickets can be purchased at the church or at the door on the night of the concert. More information can be obtained by calling the hospital's community relations department at 688-2940 or the ticket chairman at 889-4020.
