Quarry issue still isn't dead in Springfield

By JOHN A. GAVIN Although the excavation equipment and buildozers have long been removed from the Houdaille Quarry, some local residents still feel uncasy about the tranquil mounds of red lay and piles of scattered rocks that cut into the oval groundwork. While ome observers may only look at the crust as hastily dumped gravel left over from the work on Interstate 78. others have a premonition that perhaps a bowl-shaped foundation has already been mounted for the

Although Springfield residents bitterly opposed construction of a 4,000 amphitheater when county officials first considered the proposal in 1982, the issue still isn't dead. On Wednesday at 8 p.m., an ad hoc task force will have an open public meeting at town hall to hear local residents voice their opinions about the proposed amphitheater. The task force, 11 local citizens appointed by the freeholders, will evaluate how the community feels about the issue before reporting back to the freeholders.

Marylin Schneider, who heads Springfield Citizens Organized to Protect-the Environment, said her organization was instrumental in putting pressure on public officials to halt those earlier plans, However, she said the problem is just as real now as it was when she first fought against the amphitheater:

It's like a monster." said Schneider about those plans. "It just keeps coming back. We can't get rid build an amphitheater in the 72 acre tract adjacent to the recently completed "missing link" of Interstate 78. The New Jersey Symphony Orchestra has made a pitch to become the sole operator of the arena pro-ducing 40 shows each season.

However, community residents are concerned about the influx of automobiles that would jam the streets for such performances.

It is important that everyone realize that it doesn't just affect us who live right near it, it will affect everyone," said Schneider. "Every road will be affected by the crowds that will come. If a referendum should pass, we may be faced with the problems that rock concerts cause at the Meadowlands."

In addition, Schneider said that the main thoroughfare to the quarry, Shunpike Road, also serves as the major artery to Overlook Hospital in. Summit. She predicted chaos.

"Can you imagine an ambulance getting stuck in amphitheater traffic because people are pouring in and; out?" asked Schneider, "Where is the ambulance to go? There is a hospital over there."

Another question raised is that since the arena would be owned by the county, the amphitheater would be obligated to serve as the host to all types of concerts and events.

Selma Prager, another SCOPE member said, "Once you have an amphitheater, you can't say no to a group...We can't say, 'No, we don't you because you are a rock band and not an orchestra.' Once it's there, it's too late to do anything about what it's going to be used for."

The county expects to receive the property from the state Department of Transportation, which purchased the quarry several years ago for the dumping of fill generated by con-struction of the interstate. The courty will get the quarry in excha for parklands turned over 16 the state to help facilitate the completion of the highway through the Watchung Reservation.

However, some residents are wondering why the property can't be left in its natural state. Since the tract was part of the reservation before its disruption for the highway, they say that putting it-back into its original state would be the logical solution.

"I think the main detriment is that gen space has been taken from the eservation and there was a promisein the environmental impact statement to replace that open space with comparable open space in the Hidden Valley area," said Jonathan Roth, who acts as counsel for SCOPE, "The idea is that you have to seek a certain balance between development and open space. because it's been proven time and time again that, psychologically, people need to see that kind of greenery and that kind of open

On Wednesday, the task force will be soliciting such comments and recommendations from the public on alternatives for the quarry site. Although the task force won't present its findings to the freeholders until November, SCOPE members een passing out flyers and making telephone calls to make sure ough local support is aroused to efeat the amphitheater plans,

"We're just very because there are powers-higher-up in the state that want the amphitheater here and they are press-ing people to push for it," said citizens of Springfield don't come out, who else is going to fight for them if they don't do it themselves?"

THE FORMER HOUIDAILLE QUARRY Is not a dead issue in Springfield, where many pride is are concerned that plans are under way to turn it into an amily philiheater for the New Jersey Symphony.

GT students show off work

Students enrolled in the Gifted and Talented program at Jonathan Dayton Regional High School recently displayed projects they completed during the 1998-97 academic year. The exposition, held May 27 at Arthur L. hnson Regional High School, Clark, featured projects by students from the four high schools which make up Regional.

School District No. 1. Dennis Fox, coordinator of Dayton's GT program, says the 8year-old program provides a selforganized course of study for students who are self-motivated and who are self-directed learners. He says 75 percent of the class time is devoted to individual projects in which the students develop on their own. According to Fox, when students enter the 10th grade they are given a test which measures their achievement level. Ninthgraders are given an IQ test. The 10th-grade test is evaluated, at which time the names of those. students who have tested high are. given to a GT review board. This board consists of three teachers who collect the data guidance counselors and any other staff personnel who can provide input on a student. After the list of students stands at about 40, questionnaires are sent to the teachers of those 10thprogram. Teachers are to indicate if a student has above average learning, technical or leadership skills.

Rather than testing, we lend to rely on information which is given first hand from teachers." says Fox. "The processing is not always perfect. Sometimes we get a kid in the program that just does not have the drive or initiative that we would like him to

Some students are not chosen the first time around because the board feels they are not fully ready for the program. These time in their junior year.

Fox says that although the IQs of GT students are above the average of those students in the regular class program, those classified as GT tend to have

"general intellectual ability."
The 1986-87 Dayton program has 28 students enrolled the largest number since the program began.

The 14 youngsters in Fox's class were asked to come up with an individual project which would lie completed on their own. ·Each student is required to hand in an outline on his project which indicates his field of study, project title, objectives, and his background, including knowledge and skills. The outline including preliminary work, schedule, culmination and an estimated completion date.

Each student is assigned a mentor in the field of study he has chosen. The mentor can be either a staff member or an outside source who provides answers to questions the student may have on the project.

John Benigno's project for the exposition was titled "The Development of the Creative Pro-It featured the development of his writing style.

'I tend to be very subjective, so-I try to keep a more objective side." he says.

Benigno, who could not come up with a mentor, admits his writing is hard for the average reader to understand. He says the GT program has provided him with an "incentive to work beyond what I could have accomplished otherwise."

Junior Anne Hollister com-pleted her project in the field of anthropology and archaeology. She studied how the atlati, a wooden tool used by Southwestern Indians, helped to improve the distance at which a spear may be thrown. Hollister was able to prove from her research, which included the construction of an atlati and spear, that when the atlatl was used the spear traveled 60 percent farther. Her mentor was a professor in anthropology at Seton Hall University. The project which people can probably best relate to was the assignment completed by junior Matt Zucker. He decided to construct a board game based on the television network rating system. He collected data from the Nielson . Ratings and on the history of some popular television programs.

Zucker also wrote a letter to Parker Brothers, a manufacturer of board games, on the types of formats they have used. He received a reply which helped him develop player instructions and rules. He says his instructions were twice as long as recommended by the company.

"Players are given a network and move shows into different time slots. It's very realistic. he says. "The Reagan era has pushed up the popularity of sitcoms as the Nielson ratings reflect,"

From his research Zucker determined that the television business is controlled by money.

Citizen irate over truck fumes pired term of Edward Olesky

By JOHN A. GAVIN

How safe are you in your home when you hear a diesel powered gasoline truck idling for 90 minutes next door? That was the question Francis Crosett asked town board members Tuesday night during the public-discussion-portion-of-the bimonthly municipal meeting.

Crosett, who lives adjacent to Schaible Oil Company, has raised this and similar questions to committee members during the last few weeks. He says he is not going to give up in his fight to have state Ornance No. 87-5 strictly enforced. "I'm gonna keep coming," said Crosett about his persistence on bringing up the issue at town meetings. 'How can I keep cool when I can see my life savings blow up in smoke."

The ordinance, passed last March, puts restrictions on exhaust emissions of idling diesel-powered engines. Consequently, Crosett contends that he has witnessed various violations of the ordinance while living next door to the oil company, Board members, however, were sympathetic of Crosett's complaints. Committeeman William Welsch said that since the ordinance is fairly new some law enforcement officials may be unaware of specific

Police checks for DWI said they chose Morris Avenue

By JOHN A. GAVIN

Anyone traveling on Morris or Mountain avenues late at night during the weekends, shouldn't be surprised if traffic is slower than usual.

The local police department is participating in the Driving While Under the Influence, D.W.I., Task Force Sobriety Check-Point program. The first roadblock was set up on the corner of Morris and Mountain avenues between 11:30 p.m. Saturday and 2:30 a.m. Sunday. During that period, 187 cars were stopped and the drivers were issued leaflets explaining the program and the need to adhere to D.W.I. laws:

"We set up the roadblock in an effort to reduce the incidents of drunken driving in the township and to educate the public on the hazards involved in drunken driving." said Sgt. Ivan Shapow, who is in charge of the project. The police department set up the road blocks in an effort to identify violators of drunken driving statutes and remove them from the roadways."

The roadblock led to the arrest of a Jersey City man who was found driving while under the influence of alcohol. Also, police say that a juvenile, was apprehended in an unrelated charge. Shapow and three police officers participated in the roadblock. Police

What a waste!

The volume of solid waste being produced in New Jersey could be substantially reduced if our state legislators would be a little more selective about the kinds of news releases they send to the media.

Since we don't have the space or desire to print every news release that comes into our office, much of it goes into the trash can. Since this is an election year, we expect to be inundated with all kinds of releases singing the praises of our state legislators. So far, we've received everything from a photograph of several of our representatives saluting the flag to a release announcing the birth of a certain assemblyman's first grandchild — complete with quotes from the new grandfather and a a fellow assemblyman who had introduced a resolution honoring grandpop.

What a waste of the taxpayers' mmoney! A resolution and a news release? A little levity at the statehouse might be needed to ease the tensions that must build during each session. But someone has gone a little too far — too much of a production over reproduction!

Speaking of waste, looks like government officials on both the state and local levels are batting zero with us this week. On the local level, Roselle officials remain adamant in their refusal to allow the Union County Utilities Authority to operate a regional recycling program-in the borough. The CUA is now suing Roselle in an attempt to overturn a new ordinance prohibiting such facilities in the borough. Just what we need — another round in court concerning the county's solid waste management plan. If officials at all levels of government would spend more time communicating reasonably with each other and less time in court, maybe both the recycling plan and the resource recovery facility in Rahway could get off the ground. Stop wasting time and money in court!

While local and county officials are having problems disposing of solid waste, state officials are in a quandary over the disposal of 15,000 drums of radium-contaminated soil dug up in Essex County four years ago.

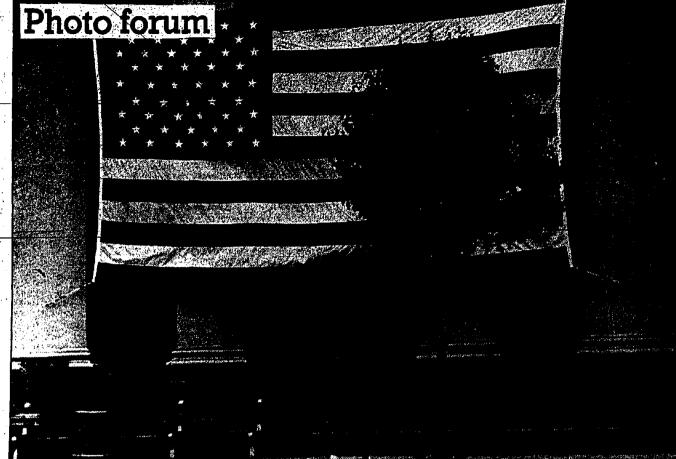

State Department of Environmental Protection Commissioner Richard T. Dewling came up with the brilliant plan to truck the hazardous material halfway across the state to a wildlife-preserve-in-Ocean County. Did he think Ocean County residents wouldn't notice? Did he think residents of Jackson were any less protective of their homes, their children, their lives than residents of Montclair or Vernon?-

Now an Ocean County Superior Court judge has issued an order blocking the dumping of the barrels at Colliers Mills Wildlife Preserve until he can rule on the situation June 15 the same day an isses County judge has set as the deadline for moving the radon out of his county. We're back in court again! The state DEP has already announced it will be unable to meet the Essex County-court order to move the barrels by Monday.

Amidst all the protests comes the news that radon experts say there are only two ways to deal with radon-contaminated soil: Dig it up or leave it and ventilate the house. State officials decided to dig up the soil in Essex County, displacing homeowners as they went along. Now, they say, they won't dig up any more soil. They'll ventilate instead. Good move, considering they've wasted four years trying to dispose of the 15,000 barrels they've already dug up. And now no one can be sure where that soil will ultimately end up. If both the Essex County and Ocean County judges rule against having the hazardous waste located in their areas, will the state cart it around until it finds a permanent home? Or will we have another gar-barge case similar to the Islip, Long Island,

Come on, guys - stop wasting precious time and money on court cases. With all the experts around, someone should be able to come up with a place to dispose of the soil. Try talking

Proclaim Liberty

Should we change Constitution?

Whenever internal pressures build up, and conflicts between different groups of Americans become acute, there bob to the surface those who want to change the Constitution They argue with some persuasiveness that a plan of govern-ment that was suitable for 3.8 million widely scattered inhabitants, most of them living on farms or plantations, cramps the activities of 230 million in a centralized, heavily industrialized society.

Some of the arguments for change are brought forward by minorities who want to legislate something before there is a public consensus on the issue. That is what happened with National Prohibition — the 18th endment (1919) — which was later repealed by the 21st Amendment (1933). There was then an enthusiasm to set a temperance such a discipline by law was lacking. Today a parallel scene is being set by those who want to get an purpose of anti-abortion legislation, or to prevent the legislature from appropriating funds above a certain

There are other amendments being brought forward, and these have to do with the frame of government itself. Admirers of foreign models, like the Nazis and the Communists, seldom get much following in America. Today the right-wing extremists are praising the "national heroes" John Poin-Secord for taking the same stand.

Or is it the same stand? Those who "took the Fifth" 35 years ago were for the most part private citizens. They were not in the same position of public trust as Vice Admiral Poindexter, Lt. Col. North and General Secord. The Fifth Amendment was without doubt shaped to guarantee the liberty, dignity, and privacy of citizens. But it was not intended to describe the limits and responsibilities of officers in the executive, legislative and judicial

Backs Bradley bid for Presidency

New Jersey voters should speak out in support of the possibility of a draft of U.S. Senator Bill Bradley by the Democrats to run for president. It has recently been suggested that America might be wonderfully served with the humble and diligent contribution of Senator Bill Bradley of New Jersey and Senator Sam Nunn of Georgia heading us back to a position of credibility and competence in this touchy world. I would be thrilled to see that ticket and hope my letter stimulates some of your readers to speak out

Congratulates students on conference

Recently. 279 New Jersey high school students visited Washington, D.C. to participate in the week-long government studies program conducted by the Close Up Foundation.

Students and their teachers followed a fast-paced schedule as they discussed current issues with members of their Congressional delegation; questioned Washington experts on domestic and foreign policy, and experienced the pulse of the nation's capital.

Participation was open to any student, regardless of grade point average, extracurricular activities, or physical handicap. As the Close Up Foundation's coordinator for New Jersey schools, I was impressed with the energy, enthusiasm and curiosity demonstrated by each of the participants.

To assure a mix of students from all income levels, fellowships for local chools were made possible through a grant from RJR Nabisco, Inc. and Sea-Land Corporation.

On behalf of the Close Up Foundation, I want to congratulate all of the New

Secondly, it said that I have taken a public position in support of the bill. I have not. As Speaker of the Assembly, I have publicly announced I will consider it for a vote by the full Assembly only after it has been passed by the appropriate Senate committees and adopted by the upper house.

I'm noting these points because it's important that for the public's benefit, published letters and statements accurately reflect the facts as well as the views of the respective candidates, and hopefully my opponent will follow

The Commission, which includes rnor Thomas Kean, members of his administration and Democratic and Republican representatives of the state legislature, unanimously approved the transfer, which, pending final approval by the Highway Authority, could become effective July 1.

The transfer involves the stretch of the parkway between Route 22 in Union and the Raritan River bridge in Middlesex County, nine miles of which are located in Union County. Two smaller sections in Ocean and Cape May counties are also included

The Union County section has been the target of complaints by area residents for several years concerning the litter and uncut grass along

Kenilworth loses '87 opener

Starting over can be tough enough without having to worry about facing one of the toughest foes in the eague. But that's what the Kenilworth American Legion baseball team had to put up with in its season opener on Monday night. which ended up being a 13-0 loss.

Simply put, the Post 470 club — which is rebounding after forfeiting much of its schedule during the past two years — was unlucky enough to draw Scotch Plains-Fanwood on opening night of the 1987 summer Legion campaign. Worse yet, Kenilworth was unfortunate enough throwing southpaw who did what he normally does best - strike people out with alarming frequency. With the first 10 outs he recorded coming by way of strikeout, Hyde, who has just completed reshman year at Rollins College in Winter Park, Florida, went on to pitch an overpowering two-hit shutout behind an overall total of 14 Plains. The game was halted after Kenilworth's turn at bat in the sixth evening in Kenllworth.

Offensively, Hyde's teammates driving losing pitcher John Zamboni from the mound in the midst of a five-run outburst in the second inning, the Post 209 club continued to hammer away at Pat Olenick, who allowed the final seven Scotch nings of work. Zamboni, a summer arrival from St Mary's of Elizabeth, gave up six hits and two walks in his

Torborg signs with Pirates

By MARK YABLONSKY

Doug Torborg of Mountainside, a
eft-handed pitcher who recently completed a four-year collegiate career with the University of North Carolina, was selected by the Pittburgh Pirates in last week's annual ton, Florida on Monday, in order to sign with the major league club.

The 6-foot-2, 180-pound southpaw is the eldest son of former major league catcher Jeff Torborg, who is claim enjoyed by the Chapel Hill-1963 graduate of Jonathan Dayton Regional High School, Torborg had been drafted by the Yankees that year as well, but opted to attend college instead, a choice his younger brother, Greg, also made last year when he, too, was drafted by the Bronx Bombers, but accepted a scholarship offer from Duke Univer-

DeMark makes NJAC team

Jill Demark of Springfield, who was a member of the Kean College softball team this past spring, was recently named to the New Jersey Athletic Conference's First Team All-Star squad.

Demark, who has just completed her junior year, was a key role in the success of the Lady Cougars, a 29-12 club that captured the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Association tournament last month.

A team co-captain, the outfielder's efforts saw ber named to the ECAC First Team as well.

"She was by far one of my outstanding players this year, and she really held the outfield together," said Kean softball coach Cyndi Gramlich-Covello. "She batted over .500 and she was a threat anytime she got on. She was just an all-around good player."

Rettino to appear on cable

Union High football coach Lou Rettino will be one of several local high school coaches to be interviewed as part of a feature highlighting local sports tonight at 7 p.m. on "Coca-Cola High School Sportsweek," a weekly show that is cablecast on MSG network.

The feature, which will salute all the men and women who have led their teams onto the playing fields, is a prelude to the National High School Athletic Coaches Association's National Coach of the Year-Award. The organization said that 15 coaches from the tri-state region are among those nominated for the award, which will be selected on

The program will also be re-aired tommorow night at 7:30 p.m.
