Narrow victory: Big changes

By JOHN A. GAVIN
 Although Philip Kurnos' victory last week for a seat on the Springfield Township Committee was a narrow triumph, the impact will lead to many changes in the business practices and philosophies of the town's governing body.

In an election that saw more than 53 percent of Springfield's 8,500 registered voters turn out at the polls, Kurnos, a Republican, defeated former Mayor William

William M. Welsch.

Last Tuesday, shortly after winning his first bid for elective office, Kurnos said, "The people who were in office before, just weren't doing the job. They were handling a multi-million dollar business like a mom and pop store."

In addition, Kurnos said that he felt many town residents were disillusioned with the way the garbage situation and wanted to see new leadership.

Obviously, the Republican committee members were delighted with his win and said that they looked forward to working with him when he joins the committee in January.

"Phil was an ideal candidate because he believed in some of the same things that Jo-Ann and I did," said Katz about Kurnos' victory. "He stressed issues like the need for bringing sound management practices to municipal government, the need for running this $8.5 million entity that we call the town of Springfield, as a business — a very important business."

Although Kurnos had no political experience, Katz said that he wasn't surprised with his victory. He added that many of the issues that Kurnos stressed were problems of concern of many residents in town.

"I think that what Phil hit on were the burning issues that bothered an awful lot of people," Katz said. "He really nailed it. He identified the issues and he brought them up to the public in a very honest kind of campaign. And people liked it and they responded to it."

Pieper was also delighted with Kurnos' win and said that he won a hard fought campaign. She also complimented him on his campaign and said that she is looking forward to working with him on the committee.

"I feel wonderful," said Pieper. "He deserved to win. He has so many wonderful ideas that are new and insightful."

Katz echoed those views and agreed that Kurnos was a well deserving winner. In addition, he attributed Kurnos' success with the special hard work he did in putting together an effective campaign.

"I attribute almost all of that to Phil. Besides being a very intelligent and very well-known member of the community — he was the originator of the Minuteman program, he coached for many years — he has a very wide circle of friends," said Katz. "Phil worked hard building himself up to speed to learn what municipal government is about."

"He identified the issues that affected the people and he cared about them," Katz continued. "I think that the reason that he ran was simply because it was time to become active because changes were needed."

Although Kurnos' victory is barely more than a week old, some of those changes are already evident. Even though he doesn't officially take office on the committee until January, Kurnos is already meeting with committee members to get an in-depth view of all the pertinent issues involved in town. In addition, the committee is gearing up to appoint new members to various committee boards that will become vacant in January.

For committee members, one of the issues that will take priority is the problem of high taxes. With a Republican majority, Pieper said that many of the ideas, that she and Katz had will now be implemented.

"We feel that we can make a substantial impact on taxes," Pieper said. "For one thing, there can be more effective use of municipal employees. Also, there is the problem of how we do our finances. We have to lighten up everything and get people involved."

BOE denies lease bid of care center

By MARK YABLONSKY
 The Springfield Board of Education, not wanting to enter into a long-term lease agreement, voted unanimously on Monday night not to accept a bid from the Summit Child Care Center that would have seen the non-profit organization occupy part of the vacant Walton School building for at least the following eight years.

With the return of the school to board control in May, the district has been seeking to rent out part of the building for a short time only, until the time when extra classroom space is needed. According to board officials and other district personnel, both ongoing and planned development — particularly in the southern end of town — is creating the need for more classroom facilities to accommodate an expected increase in student enrollment.

Fran Dorsky, a Springfield resident and executive vice president of the Summit Child Care Center's board of directors, explained her organization, while seeking a straight 10-year lease, was willing to settle for a six-year deal, allowing the board the option of exercising an additional two-year notice of termination. According to Dorsky, the organization was willing to pay $80,000 a year for eight of the school's 14 classrooms.

"The Child Care Center is very interested in coming to Springfield," said Dorsky, who told the board she was "saddened by valuable community assets being deteriorated" by vandalism, a problem that has plagued the vacant building. "But there's a catch to that. We have a limited budget and our revenue is limited. We desperately want to be here, but there's only so much we can pay. I hope that profit is not the only motive the board is looking at."

Board officials explained that approximately $50,000 would be needed to prepare the building for occupation, and that along with additional yearly operating costs, the district was looking at an annual "projected" profit of roughly $150,000. A sum board officials feared might not be enough in the event that further unforeseen costs should arise.

While acknowledging that cost factors were part of the reason for

Firefighters rescue women from house

By KEVIN BERRIGAN
 The Springfield Fire Department responded to a three-alarm blaze shortly before midnight on Oct. 30, after receiving a call from a woman claiming "she was on fire."

When firefighters arrived on the scene at 50 Kew Drive at about 11:50 p.m., they found the Cape Cod home engulfed in flames. A resident of the house was rescued by firefighters responding to the scene.

"We found the heaviest concentration of flames in the rear of the home. The kitchen door and rear windows were blown out and spewing huge amounts of flames," said Fire Chief Theodore Johnson. "According to fire officials, firefighters gained entry by breaching the front door of the home with an ax."

Once firefighters had a clear entrance into the home, Johnson said, firefighters Wayne Masiello, Kenneth Rau and volunteer firefighter Kevin Rothstein entered the dwelling with a fire hose in an attempt to extinguish the blaze.

The firefighters' task was further complicated by the amount of clutter and debris found inside the home.

"Apparently the resident was a person who liked to keep things. We found one bedroom cluttered with debris clear to the ceiling," Capt. Edward Cardinal said.

With little protection, firefighter Masiello left the hose and maneuvered through the house, where he found the lone resident, Angela Sbrigata, face down and unconscious in a center hallway," Johnson said.

With the assistance of Rau and Rothstein, Masiello removed the woman to safety.

Once outside, Rau administered resuscitation techniques on the scene after which he felt a slight pulse in the victim's neck and she began breathing.

"He promptly saved her life," Johnson said.

"All my men responded well. They did the very best under the worst circumstances," he added. "Sbrigata was transported to Overlook Hospital, Summit, by the Springfield First Aid Squad with partial third degree burns about her face and body."

She has since been transferred to St. Barnabas Burn Center, Livingston, where she remained in critical condition, until Nov. 9, when her condition was upgraded to satisfactory.

It took firefighters about an hour to extinguish the blaze.

Members of the Springfield Fire Department and the Union County Aeron Unit determined the fire started in a heating duct in the kitchen area cluttered with debris.

"The heating duct was cluttered with paper and cardboard," Johnson said, "which became brittle from the constant flow of heat inside the duct. It became so brittle and hot in there the paper just ignited."

According to fire officials, volunteer firefighter Bjorn Swanson suffered contusions to his left leg when he was propelled from a ladder while fighting the blaze.

Johnson said firefighters Rothstein, Rau and Masiello are being recommended for commendations for their heroic efforts.

Schaible Oil at issue — again

By JOHN A. GAVIN
 Once again, the question of how principals of Schaible Oil Company conduct their business was the center of concern at Tuesday night's Springfield Township Committee meeting.

In the public section of the meeting, Paul Condon, a long-time resident of Tooker Avenue, asked the board members for an answer to a question he asked last month. At that meeting, Condon, along with other residents Pat McKee and Francis Crockett, said that Schaible officials were exceeding the legal limit of refuse open on the streets as a whole.

Condon said that if there is an ordinance against such practices, summonses should be issued.

"This is the kind of thing that bothers me," said Condon. "If we have an ordinance, it should be enforced. If it's not being enforced, then it's somebody's fault."

"I'm not here to point fingers," he continued. "I'm here to tell the committee as a whole."

Committee member Jo-Ann Pieper assured Condon that she would get a definite answer from the building inspector on that specific ordinance. She said that she would give him an immediate answer.

In other action, committee members made the following moves:

- Approved an ordinance to rezone Mountain Avenue as a neighborhood commercial area instead of an industrial area.
- Approved the appointment of George Vetter as a fireman with the Springfield Fire Department.
- Approved the promotion of Probationary Officers William Wrisley and Christopher LaFragola to the rank of Patrolman 3rd Class with the Springfield Police Department.
- Approved the appointment of Leo Battinelli as a laborer with the Road Department.
- Approved the resignation of Kimberly A. Thompson as a clerk-typist in the Engineering Department.
- Approved the resignation of Mary Pala as a floater in the township office.
- Approved street lights for Hampshire Court.

Warning on leaves issued

The Springfield Police Department has issued a warning to residents to be aware of the leaves that have accumulated along the roadways.

Motorists should use extreme caution while driving to avoid slipping and sliding due to wet leaves.

When parking along curbs, drivers should avoid parking their automobiles on leaf piles because there is a chance that a catalytic converter could ignite the leaves.

Parents are requested to warn their children about the hazardous condition caused by playing or riding their bicycles in the leaves.

Editorial Aftermath

Dual office holding and excessive campaign spending may not have made headlines during the last campaign, but they are issues we believe should not be overlooked by voters.

While dual office holders seemed to do well on Election Day, we believe some questions need to be asked.

On the county level, for example, two of the candidates who were elected, Joseph Suliga of Linden and Jeff Maccarelli of Berkeley Heights, also serve on their municipal governing bodies. Another freeholder, Fahey, who won re-election to the county board just last year, ran for the state Assembly. One of his running mates, Russo, also serves on the Township Committee in Union and will probably serve as mayor next year. Over in the 20th District, Assemblyman George Hudak served as mayor of Linden and in Trenton at the same time several years ago.

Just how many hats can a politician wear at one time? And are they being fair to their constituents if they seek higher office after being elected, requiring a replacement to be appointed? While it doesn't sit right with us, it apparently had little effect on the outcome of Election '87. Only Fahey and Russo lost and theirs were uphill battles from the start.

Both Republicans and Democrats agreed on one thing this year - This was the most expensive legislative campaign to date - a fact alternately called "obscene" and "indecent" by state legislators. No one, however, has a solution - a sad situation considering the Assembly seats are up for election again in two years and the Senate posts are up for grabs in another four years.

One answer might be to extend the Assembly terms to four years to coincide with the expiration of the Senate seats. Add to that a gubernatorial race and candidates would only have to run campaigns - and raise money - every four years. This would solve the dilemma of "off-year" elections in which candidates apparently believe they need to spend a lot of money to make themselves more visible to their constituents. It might also reduce the influence of Political Action Committees, a concept that appears to be growing. In addition, elected officials would have more time to devote to legislating if they ran for office less often.

Candidates might also cut costs by returning to the old-fashioned campaign trail: going door-to-door, meeting voters and appearing at local functions. Spaghetti dinners and pancake breakfasts could replace champagne brunches and cocktail hours, some of which command $150 a head, as fund-raising affairs. Voters might better be served by candidates who spend more time getting to know their constituents and less time at high-priced parties raising campaign funds.

Finally, calling this year an "off-year" election seems to be totally off-base considering the amount of money that was spent and the time and effort exerted on campaigning. If this is an off-year for electing legislators, how much money will be spent in an "on-year" election? And how much more will the people of this state afford to give to political campaigns when they have to pay increasing costs for garbage disposal, insurance, education, and other mandatory costs?

On the bright side, at least New Jerseyans won't have to pick up the tab for a new baseball stadium.

Now that the "silly season" is over, we would like to share a few other thoughts with our readers. Most political observers would agree that the garbage disposal crisis and tax hikes greatly influenced the outcome of some of the races, specifically on the county level, where the Democrats swept the four contested seats. The issues also, in our opinion, contributed to some of the local races, specifically to the loss of Republican Diane Heelan in Union.

But the voters apparently did not carry over their dissatisfaction to the state level, where Democrats maintained control of the state Senate, but, while managing to pick up a few seats in the lower house, were unable to wrest control of the Assembly from the Republicans. In our coverage area, all nine incumbents were re-elected, with the three Democrats in the 20th District and the six Republicans in the 21st and 22nd districts easily outpolling the opposition.

While the garbage disposal crisis seemed to loom over the heads of most candidates running in the Nov. 3 election, the political "garbage" and mudslinging of the past years seemed to take a back seat in 1987, when few "bombs" were dropped.

From our point of view, the election policy instituted this year for our group of weekly newspapers seems to have succeeded in limiting the political propaganda pieces our readers were subjected to in past elections.

For the most part, candidates were cooperative and answered questions posed to them concisely - and on time. This gave our editorial staff more time to concentrate on what was being said in the responses instead of deciphering handwritten releases which in past campaigns often contained libelous statements that had to be researched or rewritten.

To set the record straight, it should be explained that personal observation, attention to political statements and past experience are used in making our endorsements during each election. We are not in the business of picking winners, as in a horse race. We give our opinion as to who the best candidate for the job is. This year the candidates we endorsed were elected in two-thirds of the races.

As we said in making our endorsements last month, sincerity and hard work are qualities we observed in abundance this year.

Locally, old-fashioned hard work is credited with the upset victory of Republican Phil Kurnos over veteran William Cleri in Springfield. The two basically agreed on most campaign issues, yet Kurnos was able to out the well-liked, more experienced Cleri.

On the county level, no one appeared to work harder than Surrogate Ann Conti of Mountainside, whose experience, visibility and rapport with her constituents made her an easy 2-1 winner over Susan Wiseman of Union, a virtual unknown who appeared to conduct a reluctant campaign.

Hard work also contributed greatly to the easy wins of C. Louis Bassano, Chuck Harbawick and Peter Genova to the state Legislature from the 21st District. Bassano, who, for the third time faced a formidable opponent in Anthony Russo, lost by only a few votes in their hometown of Union, which has traditionally turned out a pro-Russo vote.

Are you anticipating a sizable balloon payment on your mortgage, or trying to plan now for your child's college education? Perhaps you're retired and need regular income to pay monthly utility bills? Whatever the case may be, if you need to count on a certain amount of money at a certain time, the investment answer for you is traditional fixed-income securities.

These relatively safe investment instruments are "fixed" in nature, because their interest rate, interest payments and maturity date remain constant. In a word, fixed-income securities are predictable. An investment portfolio structured around these products can either provide a pre-determined sum of money at a particular date, or current income at regular intervals - but, not capital appreciation. People who invested in fixed-rate securities generally are not looking "to make money," but rather for higher returns than a passbook savings account will afford. Traditional fixed-income products include bonds - municipal, government, agency and corporate - in coupon or zero-coupon form, and certificates-of-deposit CDs. While coupon securities generally pay interest biannually, zero-coupon bonds are sold at a discount from face value, pay out no interest over their lifetime, letting the interest compound, and thus return face value at maturity. You can purchase bonds and CDs for short-term or long-term needs. All are liquid as they can easily be sold in the secondary market.

If you're concerned about preserving capital, or staggered by the price, or market value, of your securities is vulnerable to rising interest rates, and liquidating your holdings early. In other words, if interest rates rise after you buy a fixed-rate security

Finally, if you need the safety and liquidity of traditional fixed-income securities but find them just too limiting, you may want to consider fixed-income related products. Over the years more and more innovative features have been added to the traditional products and packages are being developed to give investors increased flexibility such as unit trusts, bond mutual funds, convertible bonds, and indexed CDs. Whether it's a lump sum at a specific date or a regular flow of stable income, your financial adviser can help you build a secure and predictable investment portfolio of fixed-income securities that will produce the results you need. Money management

Are you in over your head?

"Only a small amount a month on our easy plan." If you have succumbed to that seductive phrase only to learn that the payments are easy for them to receive, not for you to make, you may be one of an ever-growing group of Americans who take on more debt than they can afford.

But it doesn't have to be that way. According to the New Jersey Society of Certified Public Accountants, you can head off credit problems by identifying in advance just how much debt you can afford to take on. The first step you need to take is determining your "safe" level of debt. And the term "debt" includes not only credit cards, but all credit obligations except your mortgage.

For example, you would include any student loans, car payments, etc. For most people, the safe level is no more than 20 percent of monthly take-home pay. But even that may be too much. If your annual gross income is $20,000 or less, or you make $40,000 a year but have two or more children, you may not be able to handle above 15 percent.

It is important to emphasize that your take-home pay - not your gross pay, before deductions. Remember that if you are single, a $20,000 annual gross income after taxes, Social Security and other payroll deductions is probably about $14,500 or less in take-home pay. If you are already having trouble paying your bills each month, draw up a budget - an austerity budget - to see if you can squeeze more cash free to pay your obligations. If that's not enough, contact your creditors to see if you can work out an agreement: paying interest only for a few months for example. While this may seem intimidating, remember, your creditors want their money, and they may be willing to wait if you convince them you want to pay them.

However, there is always a chance that they won't listen to reason. If that is the case, you will probably need help from a credit counselor. There are almost 300 non-profit credit counseling services that belong to the National Foundation for Consumer Credit and can help you work out a payment plan with your creditors. The non-profit counselors charge only a nominal fee or, in some cases, no fee. For a directory, write to the NFCC at 2701 Georgia Ave., Suite 507, Silver Spring, Md. 20910.

Before things get that bad, CPAs advise you to take a close look at your credit levels. If your debt load is approaching 20 percent of your take-home pay, it may be time to cut back on your credit purchases.

Generally speaking

Fraud victims often rewarded

By CARY EDWARDS

New Jersey has a strong consumer fraud law that actually rewards individuals who prove in court that they were the victims of consumer fraud. The State Appellate Court ruled more than five years ago that businesses that were proven to have violated the Consumer-Fraud Act must pay consumers three times the amount lost through the deception and their legal expenses incurred trying to collect it. Despite this affirmation of the law, few New Jersey consumers or their lawyers seem to be aware of this provision.

Many of us believe that our state's legal protection against consumer fraud is the most comprehensive in the nation. The New Jersey Consumer Fraud Act was first enacted in 1960, and has been continually augmented and refined. The law broadly defines illegal practices to include the use of any unscrupulous commercial practice, deception, fraud, false pretenses, false promise, misrepresentation, or the knowing concealment, suppression, or omission of any material fact in connection with the sale or advertisement of any merchandise or real estate.

Enforcing the consumer fraud act under the Attorney General is the Division of Consumer Affairs, which is headed by Director James J. Barry Jr. There are also several specific deceptive sales practices that the law prohibits. Most of these, unfortunately, are all too familiar in the marketplace.

Have you ever received a "junk mail" advertising solicitation whose envelope looked just like it contained a tax refund, or a driver's license renewal, or a communication about your social security or veteran's benefits? It is, in fact, a violation of the Consumer Fraud Act for a person or business to operate under a name or in a manner that falsely implies they are a branch of government, or to use any seal, insignia, or envelope that simulates that of any government agency.

Notifying people that they have "won a prize" and requiring them to do something, such as spend money, to get it is a violation of the law. Several years ago New Jersey consumers were inundated with letters and postcards telling them they had won "valuable prizes" that would be presented to them when they traveled to real estate sales offices and listened to a sales pitch. This illegal practice was largely curtailed, but consumers should be aware that if they have been awarded a prize they cannot be made to do anything - such as make a payment or a purchase or submit to a sales pitch - in order to get it.

"Bait and switch" is an illegal sales practice. The advertisement of merchandise as part of a scheme not to sell the advertised item or service, or not to sell it at the advertised price, is known as "bait and switch." The consumer is baited, or brought in, by the ad promising a car or a swimming pool installation at a low price, then switched to a more expensive purchase when the salesperson says the advertised item is not available, or that the consumer would never be happy with such cheap, shoddy merchandise.

Advertisement of unassembled merchandise as assembled in a picture or illustration accompanying the ad is a violation. Consumers have learned that "easy assembly required" can mean hours of frustration to build a set of purchased parts into the desired item, but the law requires that they at least be forewarned.

Offering merchandise for sale without including a tag or label which shows the total selling price is not permitted.

There is no need for consumers to buy merchandise "blind" or to be sold merchandise at whatever price the merchant feels they will pay in this state.

Asking for contributions or selling goods or services under a false representation that charity will benefit is specifically outlawed. Any merchant who makes a sale by falsely claiming that the purchase profits go to a charity or non-profit organization must be dealt with to the full extent of the law. Such misrepresentations not only cheat consumers but they poison the atmosphere of goodwill that has made our citizens so generous with their less fortunate.

"Going out of business" sales cannot go on forever. The law prohibits any sale from consisting of more than one such sale in a 365-day period or for a period longer than 90 days.

Misrepresenting the identity of food in restaurant menus or advertisements is prohibited. Consumers who feel they have been the victims of any of these illegal practices should contact the Division of Consumer Affairs at 1100 Raymond Blvd., Room 405, Newark, NJ 07102; telephone numbers 686-3622 or (609) 787-2246, or visit their local Consumer Affairs Local Assistance Offices.

Support law that guarantees humane care

The decision of the New Jersey courts to allow the starvation and dehydration of Nancy Jobst is incomprehensible to me, since I witnessed the Morristown trial. As a registered nurse for over 25 years, I can say the court evidence overwhelmingly indicated that Nancy was not in a perianal vegetative state.

The testimony of one witness stands out clearly, Karen Diaz, a nursing aide testified about Nancy's reactions when she was showered. Stated Karen Diaz, "As soon as we wet her hair she lifts her head up so we can get underneath her because she leans to, I think it's the left side, and she knows we can't get under there. I assume she knows we can't because she automatically lifts her head up like that, so we can get all in the back there. That's not done by request, either. She just automatically does it."

The court testimony of Ms. Diaz appears to have received support from Nancy's mother, Mrs. Laird. The Courier News reported on October 16, 1985 that Nancy's family believed that she received excellent care at the Lincoln Park Nursing Home. Mrs. Laird was quoted as saying "They realize how much she loves having her hair washed."

Eminent neurologists, nurses, and other medical personnel testified that Nancy responded to people, to her surroundings, and to pain. The court chose to reject that testimony.

Assembly Bill A-2830 and Senate bill S-2645 guarantee the right of all patients to food and water. These bills should become law so that all N.J. patients will be assured of humane nursing care. At the present time death can be negotiated and even scheduled - it is open season.

Needs help for holiday toy drive

Help! I need help from all my friends and animal lovers. This will be my 23rd Christmas toy drive. I guess by now most of you know I go to places where nobody else likes to go. I go to the Juvenile Detention Centers of Union, Middlesex and Essex counties. I go to Juv. Battered Women and Children Shelters. I also visit "Aids" Children Wards and many hospitals in the area.

I do a little more than most toy drives. I give a party and entertain with my animals at each place I go. Most other toy drives just drop off the toys and go. To help, I can use new toys and games, candy, nuts, cookies and anything you might want to donate. Please call Frank at 486-1945; I will be happy to pick it up. I would be more than happy to appear with my Easter Dog Winner at any organization or school or club.

I would like to thank this newspaper for the space for this letter because without it I couldn't make hundreds of kids happy during the holiday season.

Officer is an expert witness

Springfield Police Officer Jeffrey Vreeland recently completed an intensive two-week course in traffic accident reconstruction and is now qualified to serve as an expert witness in the courtroom.

Sponsored by the New Jersey Automobile Club Foundation for Safety and instructed by members of the faculty of Northwestern University's Traffic Institute, Evanston, Ill., the course provides law enforcement officials with the mathematical, scientific and engineering principles needed to reconstruct actual traffic accidents.

Prior to participating in the Traffic Accident Reconstruction program, each police officer was required to complete a basic and advanced traffic accident investigation course, which involved actual evidence gathering and a written examination. The skills learned in these programs were applied to the reconstruction course.

"This is an outstanding training opportunity," said Vreeland. "The skills I have learned in all three programs will be of tremendous value to my department and the people we serve. Not only will we be better able to determine exactly how traffic accidents occur, but this information will enable us to help make our roadways safer for all citizens."

Nineteen police officers completed the Traffic Accident Reconstruction course conducted Sept. 21-30 at the Morris County Fire and Police Academy in Morris Plains.

Rinaldo wants EPA to draft in-flight aviation noise laws

Rep. Matthew J. Rinaldo said recently that a growing national problem of aircraft noise requires the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency to draft in-flight noise standards. Prior to a meeting Nov. 4 with officials of the General Accounting Office, which is undertaking a study of aircraft noise over northern and central New Jersey, Rinaldo said as many as 8 million people are adversely affected by the stress of aircraft noise. In New Jersey, according to the state Department of Environmental Protection, some 400,000 residents within a 40-mile radius of Newark Airport are subject to aircraft noise problems that adversely affect their health and tranquility, Rinaldo pointed out.

The New Jersey Congressman said that the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, which is supposed to advise the Federal Aviation Administration on aircraft noise problems, dropped its noise control program in 1974. The EPA cited budgetary restrictions and believed that the states should establish noise standards as the reasons for the program's termination. However, many states, including New Jersey, have not established such noise standards. "Because of the interstate nature of the airline industry, I believe it is time for the re-establishment of federal standards," Rinaldo said. "Restoring this responsibility to the EPA and setting in-flight standards for aircraft noise beyond the immediate vicinity of an airport should be among the steps taken to provide relief. The GAO's independent study should help to clarify federal responsibilities and tell us whether or not they have the technology to monitor aircraft noise at higher altitudes. A major concern is that noise-monitoring equipment cannot distinguish between aircraft noise and normal ground level background noise such as that generated by trucks," Rinaldo said. After a series of discussions since last April with FAA and Port Authority officials, Rinaldo said the promised studies of aircraft noise should not be misinterpreted as a solution. "Studies can pinpoint the problem and help the FAA and Port Authority determine if they can remedy this situation by altering the Expanded East Coast Plan traffic routes or taking other appropriate action. In the meantime," he added, "we also need to search for the long-range solutions. The same technology that produced powerful and noisy jet engines may offer the best hope of replacing the noisier jets with quieter engines in the next decade. "While the emphasis of jet aircraft manufacturers has been on producing fuel efficient, wide-bodied jets with powerful engine thrust to carry heavier loads, they have not devoted nearly as much attention to the problem of jet engine noise outside the plane cabin," Rinaldo charged. "The stage three jet engines, due to be introduced in the 1990s on more airline routes, have proven to be costly to purchase. We need both an economically and environmentally viable solution so that the thousands of jets purchased in the 1970s can be more rapidly replaced or retrofitted."

Rinaldo noted that the Airport and Airway Improvement Amendments of 1987, which recently passed the House with his support, contain funding earmarked for aircraft noise reduction. NASA, the Department of Defense, the Department of Transportation, and aircraft engine manufacturers will be conducting research into the development of quieter jet engines.

Program talks about Baby M

Communities-on-Cable's "90 Legal Minutes" show will examine the impact and the aftermath of the Baby M case when host Robert A. Bernstein, Esq., interviews Gary N. Skoloff, Esq., on Nov. 16, 23 and 30 at 7:30 p.m.; Nov. 17 and Dec. 1 at 8:30 p.m.; and Nov. 12, 19 and Dec. 3 at 8 p.m. Guest Skoloff represented the Sterns in the landmark Baby M case. He holds a law degree from Rutgers University. Skoloff states that surrogate parenting is becoming more of an alternative due to the fact that 15 percent of all married couples are infertile and fewer children are available for adoption. Skoloff states that the basic issue in the Baby M case was: "Is a surrogate parenting agreement valid and enforceable or is it contrary to public policy and unenforceable?" Skoloff emphasizes that the agreement was a very simple agreement between the Sterns and the Whiteheads.

The Baby M case was the first test case for surrogate parenting, since this was the first time the issue was debated in a heavy litigation court focus. Currently, three-fourths of the United States has state commissions looking into the statute on surrogate parenting, according to Skoloff. He emphasizes that this allows for the opportunity of giving the gift of life to another and there is also the economic factor to consider.

Spotlight on Union County

NEW HOME — Celebrants of ribbon-cutting ceremonies line up after the official opening of the newly restored Hamilton House as Resolve's new headquarters. The historic 237-year-old house was donated to the youth and family counseling service on condition that it be moved from its original location to its present site at 1830 East Front St., in Scotch Plains. From left: Alan Augustine, Union County Board of directors; Irene Schmidt, Scotch Plains mayor; Kim Cokolet, president of the board of directors; Nancy Pizzi, Resolve executive director and the Rev. James Dewart.

County's homeless increase

On Nov. 17 at 10 a.m., the Elizabeth Coalition to House the Homeless will hold a press conference to address the rising numbers of homeless families and individuals in Union County, and the specific needs of the homeless. This press conference is in honor of Housing Justice Week in New Jersey, a week in which educational events on homelessness and the housing crisis will be held statewide. The press conference will be held at the Elizabeth Coalition, 120 Division St., Elizabeth.

Speaking at the conference will be homeless families and individuals, as well as representatives from social service agencies and religious organizations in Union County serving the homeless. Local public officials have also been invited. The purpose of this conference is to educate the public and policy makers about the severe housing crisis and the devastating effects this crisis has on those who cannot secure decent, affordable housing. Discussion will focus on the particular problems in Union County, such as the lack of a shelter for homeless families.

Joan Driscoll-Kelly, director of the Elizabeth Coalition, says, "Housing Justice Week is an ideal time for the public to hear the personal stories of the homeless, and for public officials to renew efforts to address the needs of this growing population." She cites recent statistics, such as:

• half of the residents in shelters in New Jersey are wage earners, and are not receiving public assistance;

• 75 percent of the homeless in the state; and

• more than 60 percent of the homeless population are children.

For more information about the press conference of Housing Justice Week, interested persons may contact Gretel J. LaVieri at the Elizabeth Coalition, 352-2989, 352-2966.

Runnells marks 75th anniversary

The John E. Runnells Hospital of Union County, in Berkeley Heights, will hold a 75th anniversary dinner-dance at the Westwood, Garwood, tomorrow at 7:30 p.m., with cocktails at 6:30.

Alan M. Augustine, chairman of the Union County Board of Chosen Freeholders, says, "This dinner-dance and a 'Look at Runnells Hospital's Future' is a fitting tribute to this important milestone — 75 years of providing health care to Union County residents."

"The John E. Runnells Hospital has played a vital role as a health care facility in Union County, and the new hospital, which will be finished by mid-1989, will continue that tradition of health care excellence." Many current and former freeholders, local and state officials will attend. The public is invited to attend, and tickets will be available at the door, at a cost of $35 per ticket.

200 Club plans awards lunch

Tomorrow the 200 Club of Union County will hold its annual Valor Awards Luncheon at L'Affaire Restaurant in Mountainside. The guest speaker will be W. Gary Edwards, the New Jersey state attorney general.

A graduate of Seton Hall University with a business degree, he went on to Seton Hall's School of Law where he graduated in 1970 with his juris doctor degree. Prior to his appointment as attorney general, Edwards was elected to two terms as councilman and council president of the borough of Oakland.

In 1977, he was elected to the New Jersey General Assembly, and was twice re-elected, as well as being chosen by his colleagues to be assistant minority leader. From January 1982 to January 1986, Edwards served as Governor Thomas H. Kean's chief counsel. He was appointed attorney general on Jan. 21, 1988.

The 200 Club of Union County is a non-profit organization dedicated to providing aid and support to the survivors and dependents of those police and firefighters killed in the line of duty, and to award those members of the uniformed departments for their courage and valor above and beyond the call of duty.

Tickets are available by contacting the Union County Chamber of Commerce at 352-0900.

University starts academic search

The Johns Hopkins University has opened its annual talent search to identify seventh-graders with high verbal, mathematical, or general intellectual abilities. Youngsters are eligible to participate if they are seventh-grade students or, if in a higher grade, they were born after Dec. 31, 1974. They also must have scored in the 97th percentile or above on national norms of a standardized aptitude or achievement test in mathematics, verbal ability or total test-battery composite score. Principals and guidance coun-sors in schools throughout the search area have been provided with detailed information about the CTY Talent Search and with registration forms. Completed applications to the Talent Search must be mailed and postmarked no later than Nov. 18 in all states. A non-profit educational service, CTY uses College Board Scholastic Aptitude Test scores to identify academically talented youngsters. Youths identified for participation in the CTY program receive a general interpretation of their reasoning skills and suggestions for effective use of their abilities. They may apply for CTY advanced courses and for an unusual residential program offered by CTY in the East and West-Coasts each summer. Participation in these programs occasionally results in high college early. Qualified students unable to obtain the information and forms locally may write to CTY, The Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, Md. 21218, or they may telephone (301) 338-8427.

Info on shopper coupon use

For many people refunding has become a profitable home business which they can run from the kitchen table. Top refunders get back most of their grocery money each month. If their grocery bill is $500 and they receive $450 in refunds, that money is clear, and that's a nice little business! Manufacturers issue coupons in the hope of establishing regular customers for their products and would like to see them used. An astonishing fact is that, though $3-billion coupons and refunds are issued each year, only 5 percent of them are ever used. A consumer service group has obtained a special report that gives the inside tips on how to get more manufacturer coupons and refunds each week. The report also tells shoppers how to set themselves up to receive manufacturers' refund checks in the mail on a regular basis. Shoppers interested in receiving this report or more information about making money with these sample coupons should send a self-addressed stamped (long) envelope to Consumer Services, P.O. Box 1284, Central Ave., Scarsdale, N.Y. 10583-2844.

New law targets health clubs

The Division of Consumer Affairs is preparing to register an estimated 400 health club businesses by Dec. 10, when a new law goes into effect requiring clubs that sell long-term memberships to put security deposits to guarantee consumer refunds.

James J. Barry Jr., director of the division, says that his office has sent packets of registration materials to 353 businesses that may qualify as sellers of health club services as defined by the law, signed by Governor Thomas H. Kean on Aug. 12. Some of those contacted may not require registration, he says. The requirements do not apply to establishments that devote less than 40 percent of their space to physical fitness facilities or services, or to schools or nonprofit, religious, or community organizations.

Clubs that sell memberships for periods longer than three months will be required to post bonds or other security in order to provide funds for refunds to consumers if the facility closes or is otherwise unable to fulfill its contracts with members.

"The registration and bonding of health club businesses in New Jersey is an important step in consumer protection," says Attorney General Cary Edwards.

"This law provides remedies to address problems of high-pressure sales, unfulfilled membership contracts and fly-by-night operators that 'take the money and run.'"

The registration law allows consumers a three-day "cooling-off" period to cancel a contract for new or increased health club services, for any reason. In the past, consumers have been lured to spas with "free trial memberships" and then pressured into signing long-term contracts.

"Each facility selling memberships longer than three months will be required to file with the division a bond, letter of credit, cash or other security equal to 10 percent of the gross income for health club services for the club's last fiscal year. In any case, the security must not be less than $25,000 or more than $50,000. If memberships are sold prior to the opening of a club, the maximum $50,000 security deposit is required."

"Unfulfilled membership contracts from health clubs that suddenly close or that sold advance memberships and never opened, have cost New Jersey consumers hundreds of thousands of dollars," says Barry. "We have seen more than 40 health club businesses close, and several sell memberships but never open, over the past five years."

Attorney General Edwards cautions consumers against buying long-term memberships, since national surveys have indicated that the average health club patron only uses the facilities for a three-month period. The new law prohibits the

Bears settle for 14-14 tie with Manville

By MARK YABLONSKY
If you wish, Brearley fans, you may point to a well-known financial commercial about a glass being half-filled with water, and rationalize that Saturday afternoon's 14-14 tie between the Bears and Manville was, on an upbeat note, like the glass being half-full. But if you do, keep in mind that since the Brearley Regional coaching staff is composed of serious investors, they would regard that figurative glass as being half-empty. And so have their Manville counterparts.

On a day, then, when no one came away happy, both the still-undefeated Bears and 3-3-1 Mustangs settled for a 14-14 deadlock in a game that was admittedly sloppy, and marred by mistakes from both sides. Once again, the talented Bears were plagued by a mysterious, vexing inability to cash in on golden scoring opportunities that should have been enough to keep a pass-wild Manville team at bay. But not when the case a week earlier in a 14-6 victory over Middlesex, several untimely fumbles kept on ruining impressive drives, thus giving Manville a chance to stay in the game.

"I think you have to give them credit," said Bear skipper Bob Taylor, whose 6-0 team will have to beat a strong Arthur L. Johnson club on Saturday in Clark if it wants to draw the top seed in upcoming North Jersey, Group 1, Section 2 playoff action, for which Mountain Lakes and Cedar Grove have already clinched berths. "We got away with it last week, and you can't keep getting away from not scoring on the goal line.

repeated. "They're well-prepared and they did a nice job."
After finally halting a long, multi-play drive that consumed more than half of the second quarter, the Bears opened the scoring when Joe Capizzano, who ran for 184 yards in 21 carries, broke loose for a 70-yard touchdown run that, along with a Mike Vergara extra point, gave the Bears a 7-0 lead with 3:54 left to play in the first half. And then it started all over again.

After Mike Ramos recovered a Manville fumble on the ensuing kickoff, the Bears drove 20 yards in four plays, only to lose the ball at the Manville one when quarterback Gary Faucher and Mike Chalsenski failed to connect properly on a handoff from scrimmage. Still, there was time to correct that miscue, for on the next play, Ken Kinney recovered a fumble from Manville running back George Snook just 12 yards from play dirt with less than a minute remaining in the half.

But after two successive five-yard penalties ruined a first-and-goal situation from the one, the Bears again came away empty-handed when a 26-yard field goal try by Mike Vergara was blocked. And at the start of the third quarter, another Brearley drive ended when Faucher and Chalsenski experienced further trouble on a handoff, thus watching a first-and-goal opportunity at the 20 go up in smoke.
True to form, the Bears later came back to expand their lead to 14-6 when Capizzano capped — no pun intended — a 26-yard, eight-play drive with a seven-yard TD run just 3:06 away from the start of the final quarter.
And then Mustang quarterback Pat Brennan, who completed 10 of 17 passes for 157 yards, went to work in taking the team on an 11-play, 70-yard drive that ended when the sure-armed senior flipped a four-yard scoring pass to John Norz, that, along with a Brennan two-point conversion run, made it a 14-6 ballgame with 10:14 left to play.
Then, after one more Brearley fumble, the Mustangs scored in just three plays, with Brennan going deep down the left sideline for Dave Jablonski, who outraced a Brearley defender to complete a 40-yard scoring play. With the game now tied, placekicker Greg Kulikowski was short with his extra-point attempt. There was now just 6:32 left on the clock.

Brearley then proceeded to launch an impressive 10-play drive that ended when Faucher was intercepted at the Manville eight. Following that, the Mustangs scared the daylight out of the Bears by driving 68 yards in seven plays all the way to the Brearley 24. But after an incomplete pass, Brennan went for Jablonski in the end zone once again — only this time, Kinney stuck like glue to the hustling receiver and stopped away the near-completion at the last possible second.

Kinney saved the day again by intercepting Brennan on the following play, giving the Bears the ball at their own 26. After both teams were stopped on their last possession in the final 90 seconds of play, the clock finally ran out, leaving both teams with their first deadlock of the season.

and the final result was a wild mob scene with Dayton players reacting in utter joy, while the G.L. side of the field was etched in utter silence. Roman Mill scored two goals for the victors, while Peter Singer, Rahul Vinnaiya, Ryan Kravetz and Brad Egenberg added one apiece. Peter Kochanski scored the Timbers' only goal. Singer later scored two more in a 4-0 win over the Fury.
In other action, the 5-1 Aztecs held on to nip the Timbers in a much tighter game, with the first-place team holding on to capture a 4-3 win. Two goals by Danny Weiss and one

"I know Brearley's good, but I really thought we had the arsenal that we could beat 'em, so I'm really disappointed," said Manville coach Chris Gofishnik, who acknowledged that the tie had ended any hope of post-season play for his squad. "I think we both made mistakes. It was a sloppy game, but it was an entertaining game. I'm really proud of the way the kids fought and came back. We were able to do that. I can't remember the last time anyone was down to Kenilworth by 14 points and game back."
"It's a tough thing to put your finger on," replied Taylor, when asked whether or not the spirit of a previously vanquished foe was to blame for his team's maddening miscues. "At playoff time of year, you have to think about ties. You don't play for a tie, but it's better to tie than lose, strictly for positioning in playoffs. That's the only reason."
And perhaps that is why both teams will never look at a glass of water quite the same way again.

when halfback Ian Saffer, on a bizarre play, took a long cross kick from teammate Jordan Berman and nudged a high, leaping shot that just touched the inside part of the Dayton net, stunning both goalie Peter Sadin and the Bulldog squad, which had been hoping to record its 11th shutout of the season.
Upon entering a pair of 10-minute overtime sessions, things went further downhill for Dayton, which on at least two occasions, came within a whisker of being eliminated by the seventh-seeded Highlanders. Roughly halfway into the first overtime period, Sadin was called upon to make a key save when Reina's "head shot," so to speak, was targeted for the Dayton net from in-close. Less than two minutes later, a hard, booming shot from another G.L. player smashed into the crossbar, before bouncing away at a time when the chilled Bulldogs were bottled up in their own end, hoping to survive long enough for a shoot-out.
In the end, that's what happened

ONE-ON-ONE — Dayton's Craig Carson baffles with a Governor Livingston Regional player during the Bulldogs' 2-1 shootout victory last Friday afternoon in Springfield. Because of bad weather on Tuesday, the semifinal round game at home against Millburn was rescheduled for yesterday afternoon at 2 p.m.

'Dawgs fight off G.L., 2-1, in shootout

By MARK YABLONSKY
If anything, you might want to call last Friday's dramatic 2-1 overtime shootout against Governor Livingston Regional High the game in which the Bulldogs finally broke with the past, possibly even killing the wicked witch as well.
With memories of last year's 1-0 shootout loss to Whippany Park in state tournament play and this year's 1-0 shootout loss to Summit in Union County Tournament play still ringing about the second-seeded Dayton Regional boys' soccer team, despite being outplayed throughout the latter parts of the game, hung on gamely and defeated a scrappy Governor Livingston squad in the quarterfinal round of this year's North Jersey, Group 2, Section 2 playoffs, thus setting up a semifinal round contest with third-seeded Millburn, a game that was slated to take place on Tuesday afternoon in Springfield, but was moved back to yesterday at 2 p.m. instead, due to rain.

Dayton beats Parsippany Hills, 23-7

By MARK YABLONSKY
Benefiting from an evenly-balanced, solid rushing attack, the Jonathan Dayton Regional High football squad defeated Parsippany Hills, 23-7, last Saturday afternoon in a road contest that saw the Bulldogs improve their record to 3-4.

Dayton—Walsh, 4 run (Mike kick)

Running back William Lee, who led all rushers with 75 yards in nine carries, proved to be Dayton's chief sparkplug when he returned a first quarter kickoff—40 yards—to the Parsippany Troy Hills 45-yard line, just after the Vikings had gone ahead, 7-0, on a 15-yard run by Charlie Mound. Seven plays later, Lee scored from three yards out to tie the game, along with an extra point from Glenn Mike.
One quarter later, Greg Walsh, who set up Lee's score with a 25-yard run, recovered a fumble at the Viking 30. From there, it took Dayton seven plays to score, with Mike delivering a 30-yard field goal only 41 seconds before the end of the first half.
Lee continued to make big plays, with his 27-yard interception return on the first play of the final period, putting the Bulldogs at the Viking 11. Two plays later, Jeff Stoffer, who each from Jimmy Porter and Chris Jorda represented the winning club's scoring. Brad Mullman, Louis Reino and Michael Prashker tallied for the Timbers, who dropped to 2-4 on the season.

MAN IN THE MIDDLE — And this Saturday afternoon, that will probably be Brearley quarterback Gary Faucher, who will attempt to run against Arthur L. Johnson Regional, just as he has run against other opponents so far this season. The play-off-bound Bears will face a stiff challenge from the 6-1 Crusaders, who are in a must-win situation—as far as qualifying for the North Jersey, Group 2, Section 2 playoffs is concerned. The opening kickoff is slated for 1 p.m. in Clark.

World War II's shame... Internment — It did happen here

"The belief that we Americans are exceptional often fosters our freedom by allowing us to look complacently at evil-doing elsewhere and to insist that 'it can't happen here.' 'It did happen here' is a message that must be transmitted, not as an exercise in self-laceration but as an admonition for the future."

Report of the Commission on Wartime Relocation and Internment of Civilians.
Washington, D.C., June 1983
On the pages of "Our World," the Manzanar High School 1943-1944 yearbook, the team played touch football, as well as basketball and tennis. Boys wore canvas sweaters. Girls sported bobby socks. Couples danced to such popular Glenn Miller tunes of the day as "In the Mood," "String of Pearls" and "Don't Fence Me In."

In many ways, Manzanar was like any other American small town in 1943. There were schools, churches, fire and police departments, Boy Scout troops, softball leagues, movies and little theater companies. The world was at war, and many people hung American flags on their walls. Victory gardens flourished. And school children sang, "My country, 'tis of thee, sweet land of liberty."

But in Manzanar, 10,000 men, women and children lived inside a square mile surrounded by a barbed-wire wall, surveyed by a watchtower and patrolled by armed guards with orders to "shoot anyone who attempts to leave the center without a permit." A mother lived in constant fear: "I couldn't take my eyes off my children for even a moment so that they would not go outside the fence." Home for an entire family was a room in a barrack with tar paper-covered walls, no running water, a bare bulb overhead and gaps in the floor planks that let in creaking dust that seemed to swirl endlessly; Chiura Obama, a professional artist and a professor at the University of California, painted watercolors of the dust while in camp. "The desert dust storm! Barracks, rooms — everything, everywhere was spunk in darkness. But not so our hopes," he wrote in 1943.

Each family had a number. "2614, I think I still remember it," Sue Kanihara Embury says today. Everyone ate in mess halls, slept on straw-filled mattresses and lined up in open latrines. "We lined up for everything," Mine Okubo wrote.

Manzanar was one of 10 camps in desolate areas stretching from California desert to Arkansas swamp. They were built by the U.S. government in 1942 to imprison nearly 120,000 Americans of Japanese ancestry — two-thirds of them U.S. citizens.

On Feb. 19, 1942, 10 weeks after the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, President Franklin D. Roosevelt signed Executive Order 9066. It directed the secretary of war and his designated military commanders, whenever it was deemed necessary, or desirable, to prescribe military areas, "with respect to which, the right of any person to enter, remain in, or leave shall be subject to whatever restrictions the secretary of war or the appropriate military commander may impose in his discretion."

"We were shocked that the president would sign that," Mary Tsukamoto says. On March 21, Congress enacted a law providing penalties for violation of military orders.

In the months that followed, American citizens of Japanese descent were forbidden to live, work or travel on the West Coast. Both the Nisei, born in this country, and their immigrant parents — the Issei, who were prohibited by law from becoming citizens — had to leave longtime homes in weeks. After a brief period of "voluntary relocation," all West Coast Japanese Americans were removed by the Army, first to "assembly centers" — temporary quarters at racetracks and fairgrounds — and then to "relocation centers," the internment camps like Manzanar, where most were held for several years.

Not a single act of espionage or sabotage was ever proven against any Japanese-American. J. Edgar Hoover felt that security did not require mass evacuation. "I thought the Army was getting a bit hysterical," the FBI director opened in early 1942.

Forty years later, Personal Justice Denied, the 1982 investigative report of the presidentially appointed Commission on Wartime Relocation and Internment of Civilians, established by Congress in 1980, concluded: "In sum, Executive Order 9066 was not justified by military necessity, and the decisions that followed from it — exclusion, detention, the ending of detention and the ending of exclusion — were not founded upon military considerations. The broad historical causes that shaped these decisions were race prejudice, war hysteria and failure of political leadership... A grave personal injustice was done to the American citizens and resident aliens of Japanese ancestry who, without individual过错, or any probative evidence against them, were excluded, removed and detained by the United States during World War II."

at the Smithsonian's National Museum of American History. "A More Perfect Union" illustrates the ongoing constitutional process through the Japanese American experience during World War II. Tom Crouck, the exhibition's curator says, "Denied their constitutional rights, Japanese Americans have continued to seek redress. The story didn't end in 1945." The direc-

FAMILY — Deprived of basic constitutional rights and living under armed guard behind barbed wire, Japanese Americans in War Relocation Authority camps nevertheless attempted to create a community structure and to maintain traditional family values.

"I only saw my dad cry" three times," Rep. Norman Y. Mineta (D-Calif.) recalls. "On Dec. 7, 1941, when the Japanese bombed Pearl Harbor, when our family was put on a train to the Santa Anita assembly center, and when my mother died. The day we had to leave San Jose, where I was born, my dad got us together and said, 'I don't know what will happen to us, but always remember that 545 North Fifth St. is your home.'"

"The Nisei whose rights were violated afterwards thought of the whole experience as a bad dream," Mineta says. "They encapsulated those four years, stored them away and never wanted to talk about them." The congressman, who has two grown sons, credits the Sarcel — the third generation Americans — with bringing the story into the light. "The kids of the '60s kept pressing their parents, asking 'What happened?'"

Mineta, a repeat of the Smithsonian Institution, is pleased that many more people will learn what happened when they see "A More Perfect Union: Japanese Americans and the United States Constitution" — a new exhibition in commemoration of that document's bicentennial.

tor of the museum, Roger Kennedy, who had the idea for the exhibition, has said, "The reason for doing this kind of show is to make it clear that we don't always get it right, but we keep trying..."

"I realized our role as citizens of the U.S. was being placed in jeopardy by those who were in high positions making policy," Sen. Daniel K. Inouye (D-Hawaii) remembers. "I was only 18, but I understood the Constitution." Inouye and the overwhelming majority of Hawaiian Japanese Americans were not interned during the war — in spite of the fact that Hawaii had been the target of the Japanese attack. Gen. Delos Emmons, the commander of the Hawaiian Department, reassured the public: "...We must remember that this is America and we must do things the American Way. We must distinguish between loyalty and disloyalty among our people." On the other hand, as the exhibition reveals, Lt. Gen. John L. De Witt, the head of the Western Defense Command, explained to the press why he opposed allowing American soldiers of Japanese ancestry into exclusive West Coast areas. "A Jap is a Jap."

JAPANESE AMERICANS — sent to internment camps were allowed to take with them only what they could carry. Family pets were left behind.

At THE PAPER MILL — George Dvorsky and Donna Kane are starred in the musical show, "My One and Only." The show will run through Dec. 13.

Paper Mill 'sparkles' in 'My One and Only'

By BEA SMITH
 "My One and Only" Paper Mill Playhouse's second offering of the season, is a sparkling show. It sparkles with the music of George Gershwin and the lyrics by Ira Gershwin. It sparkles like the colorful sequence on Donna Kane's bathing suit. It sparkles from three-dimensional backdrops of stars in the night. And it sparkles as the spotlight shines on the tapping toes of most of the cast.

"My One and Only" is a fun show, bristling with everyone snags fingers, tap dances and sings to the memorable, enjoyable music of the Gershwins. For who can resist such exciting numbers as "Strike Up the Band," "S'Wonderful," "High Hat," "He Loves and She Loves" and the title song?

It brings to mind the atmosphere of a lengthy night club act, and this reviewer kept waiting for the waiter to come along to take an order throughout press night last Sunday.

With a book by Peter Stone and Timothy S. Mayer, the simple story, surrounded by the lively musical fare, has the usual boy meets girl, boy loses girl, boy recovers girl theme. In this case, it's George Dvorsky, in the role Tommy Tune played on Broadway, who plays Capt. Billy "Buck" Chandler, a handsome American aviator in the late 1920s, who takes a tumble over a lovely aquatic European star, played by Kane, who has the role created on Broadway by Twigg. The two are properly attuned and adequately suited to each other. They manage to sweep all obstacles aside, as they dance and prance throughout the play. One of their outstanding scenes is the one in which they dance in water, and leave it to the Paper Mill to provide the props and substance without accident.

 The last two "biggies" he's been involved with have been promotional and financial successes, but as competitive fights, they have left much to be desired. I'm talking about Spinks-Cooney, Tyson-Biggs. I, along with some other big-time writers, prognosticators, and so-called experts have been taken in by the hoopla and pre-fight hype and picked two losers.

I'm referring to the upcoming Tyson-Holmes rumble scheduled for late January of 1988. As of this moment it hasn't been decided where the fight will take place, but I'm betting on Trump getting it to Atlantic City. Mr. T. usually gets what he wants, and it is my understanding that at of right now he wants it.

Personally, I don't think Donald Trump is all that interested in boxing as a sport. He is interested, however, in anything that will draw national and international attention in the media, and championship fights, especially heavy-weight championship fights, fall into that category.

Donald Trump is first and foremost a "big" when it comes to competing in the national and international world of events and happenings. When he competes he wants to be No. 1, and will usually leave no stone unturned to achieve that goal. I'm not knocking it because that very competitiveness forces all the other national and international "egos" out there playing in his league to do better, and that's good for you and me.

This is not a cop-out, but if he doesn't get the Tyson-Holmes fight for "his city," it will only be because he decided the price was too high.

I think Donald Trump is too smart a businessman to keep backing and promoting mismatches. Tyson-Holmes might be just that, and if he doesn't bring this fight to Atlantic City, it might be that he's decided to be a bit more selective in lending his name and prestige to a big event regardless of the quality of the product.

Donald Trump more than anyone knows that a succession of inferior presentations, especially in the world of sports is bad business. It's simple arithmetic. The high rollers who pay for these special attractions will look around one day and there will be nobody of any importance watching them while they show off their "glitzy" friends and throw their megabucks over the gaming tables. I'm sure Mr. T. is familiar with the words of another sharp dude who understood human nature as well. To paraphrase his famous words, "You can fool some of the people some of the time, but you can't fool all of the people, all of the time."

You won't be fooled Nov. 13-15 because Donald O'Connor and Debbie Reynolds will be at Donald Trump's Plaza Theater. You'll get more than your money's worth with this duo. Talk about quality, "pros," and dice players. Debbie and Donald are at the head of the class. They co-starred 35 years ago in "Singing

In The Rain." They're both winners, and as a matter of fact, I gave Debbie a "Tony Award" 15 years ago at Sardi's, she was starting in the revival of "Irene" and she got terrific reviews not only from me but everyone else in town. Debbie was out of town so her dear friend the late Patsy Kelly picked up the award presented by the late, great Earl Wilson. Don't miss this "40-it-all-duc." They sing, dance, act and wisecrack their way through a show that is simply great entertainment. It's what show business is all about.

Atlanta has a good thing going on "Monday's Big Hits" now through Dec. 28. Every Monday you will get bonus jackpots, Monday night football along with 25 cent draft beer and dollar hotdogs. That's right, slot players can "hit it once and get it twice" on all nickel, quarter, half-dollar and dollar slots including poker machines, excluding progressive machines.

Your Horoscope

For week of Nov. 12
ARIES (Mar. 21-Apr. 19) Discussions with higher-ups at work are very profitable this week. However, be sure not to take on more than you can handle regarding your responsibilities. Someone close to you has some good advice regarding a project.
TAURUS (Apr. 20-May 20) Although you may be planning to take a trip, make sure you're being realistic about the budget. Some luxury items you've included in your itinerary are just not affordable right now. Be realistic.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) These credit cards have really been burning a hole in your pocket and you've been unable in your handling of them. Now it's time to pay the piper. Look for ways you can save money.
CANCER (June 21-July 22) Something comes up in the middle of the week which will throw off your entire schedule. By Friday, however, you'll be able to get back on track. Spend the weekend tending to domestic chores.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Romance is in the air this week, especially if you are unattached. For those of you who are, you will experience a renewed surge of love and togetherness. You get much accomplished by the middle of the week, but will be less productive at week's end.
VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22) A surprise visit from a friend from far away is possible this week, but don't let it get you in an uproar. Enjoy renewing this life and sharing news. You will be tempted to overspend this weekend, so keep a tight rein on your wallet.
LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) A new and exciting interest will enter your life this week sparking your creative juices. As a result of your more relaxed and happy state due to this, you will find yourself able to make that decision you've put off for so long.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Your communication skills are at their sharpest this week, enabling you to express your point of view clearly and without abrasiveness. Others are spared by your ideas and will be more than happy to cooperate with your plans.

Old real estate 'hatches' newer opportunities

A formerly abandoned Marx Toy Company building in Girard, Pa. now houses a number of small industries. In Minneapolis, Minn., an old high school provides office and laboratory space for nearly 100 businesses.

In the October issue of Real Estate Today, the official publication of the National Association of Realtors, David L. Millstein and John J. Hopkins explain how once dormant properties became steady producers, as business incubators in "Hatching Opportunities." Millstein is chairman of the accounting firm Coopers & Lybrand's National Real Estate Industry Group and a tax partner. Hopkins is a tax partner specializing in real estate and partnership taxation with that firm.

The authors define business incubators as facilities that house a number of new and developing businesses under one roof where rents are deliberately kept low to accommodate the start-up businesses.

"Local developers are establishing such business facilities throughout the country, especially in urban areas needing economic revitalization. More than 200 incubators nationwide are providing a boost to communities with depressed job markets and property values."

Entrepreneurs need inexpensive office, research and manufacturing space. The incubator concept helps meet that need while enabling real estate professionals to attract buyers or lessees.

Millstein and Hopkins describe the typical incubator set-up, where tenants share services and equipment, such as secretarial, custodial, and security services, automated office equipment and communications systems. Some sponsors also underwrite the services of legal, accounting, marketing and financial professionals for the tenant's benefit.

The Pennsylvania State University Institute of Public Administration reports that the success rate of fledgling businesses using the incubator concept can be as high as 80 percent, giving them a distinct advantage over other companies in their start-up years. As a result, these enterprises create local jobs, spur neighborhood improvement and foster economic development.

An incubator's tenant base may include it may concentrate on a particular industry, such as high tech, retail, business services, or light assembly, or it may even focus on a type of entrepreneur, such as an incubator in Greenville, Miss., offering retail and office space to low-income women entrepreneurs. Economic needs and resources of the area help determine the base. For example, incubators located near universities may have many science and technology-oriented tenants. An incubator in a traditional manufacturing area might attract light assembly companies or other industrial businesses.

"Real estate developers — along with local governments private corporations and universities — are among the leading sponsors of incubators," according to the authors. "Benefits for the developers range from rental income and appreciated values of previously dormant properties to rehabilitation tax incentives. Real estate developers have major advantages over others entering the incubator field, including familiarity with building and renovation costs and market rates for many services. Also, they have established contacts in the engineering, designing, building and banking fields."

State builders group publishes a radon guide

The New Jersey Builders Association has distributed an interim guide detailing radon reduction methods in new construction to all of its builder members.

"The NJBA is committed to building radon-safe homes while at the same time maintaining cost-efficient construction," says Robert Adamo, NJBA president. "Toward that end, we are working closely with the Environmental Protection Agency and the National Association of Home Builders Research Center in developing this guide."

The guide, "Radon Reduction in New Construction — An Interim Guide," was developed through a joint effort involving the USEPA, the NAHB Research Center and the NJBA through its Radon Task Force. In it, the following three principles are recommended for all new home designs in radon-prone areas: minimize pathways for soil gas to enter; maintain a neutral pressure differential between indoors and out; and facilitate radon removal after completion of the home if prevention techniques prove to be inadequate.

Also recommended is that, prior to building a radon-resistant home, a builder determine, to the best degree possible, the potential for radon problems at the building site. Factors to be considered are whether or not existing homes in the same geologic area have had elevated radon levels, whether the soil and underlying rock contain above-average concentrations of uranium or radium and whether the source of water to the site is going to be an on-site well where excessive levels of radon have been detected in nearby wells in the same geologic areas.

Builders who wish to obtain a copy of the guide are encouraged to call the New Jersey Builders Association at 609-275-8888.

Field tests are currently under way in New Jersey to gather data for research into radon safe new construction. After completion of these tests, the results and recommendations will be published in a more detailed "Technical Guidance" manual to expand and revise the interim guide.

The NJBA says that builders are needed to participate in these radon field tests being conducted by the National Association of Home Builders Research Center in cooperation with the New Jersey Builders Association at 609-275-8888.

"We are looking for any builder who is constructing single-family detached homes in the northern half of the state in the same proximity to existing homes who have experienced elevated levels of radon," explains Adamo.

Builders who are constructing homes in previously-determined high radon areas and who are building at least eight homes scheduled to be constructed this fall are asked to call John Spears, project manager at the NAHB Research Center at 1-800-638-8556 if they would like to participate in the study. In return for being willing to participate in the study and cooperating with the Research Center, builders will receive a free site analysis for radon; a free engineering plan for a radon mitigation system; and a free series of follow-up measurements after construction is complete.

The study is being sponsored by the New Jersey Builders Radon Advisory Group a partnership of public and private organizations committed to addressing concerns with radon. The group is funded in part with a $140,000 contract with the New Jersey DCA to the NAHB Research Center, with further funding forthcoming from the US EPA and the New Jersey Builders Association.

The New Jersey Builders Association represents close to 3000 member firms in the state and employs over 200,000 in New Jersey. The NJBA is a member of the NAHB and has nine local affiliated home builders association in New Jersey.

Survey views market

American consumers remain optimistic about the housing market despite increased mortgage rates, fewer housing starts, and the volatility of financial markets, a Gallup survey conducted for the Century 21 Real Estate Corp. reports.

Of the national sample of 1,026 adults surveyed this summer, 60 percent say that now is a good time to purchase a home. In New York and New England, 56 percent and 61 percent, respectively of those surveyed, responded favorably.

Among respondents, the people most likely to purchase a home—those between the ages of 30-49 with incomes of $25,000 or more—were the most optimistic. Least optimistic were those over 65.

"These findings support the continued stability of the real estate market through the coming year," says Carolyn Weber, vice president, Century 21 of the Northeast.

Weber says, "Appreciation has stabilized in the Northeast but remains healthy; moderate growth in real estate sales activity continues."

An analysis of closed transactions reports by Century 21 of the Northeast in Connecticut, New Jersey, Rhode Island, New York and Long Island parallels the Gallup Survey results. Prices were 19 percent higher during the first six months of 1987 than the previous year. Total sales volume was up as well by 35 percent.

In keeping with their bright outlook, more respondents say they would prefer to invest in real estate than in any other type of investment, including stocks, money market funds, tax-exempt government bonds, and gold or other commodities.

More than half those interviewed anticipate that both mortgage interest rates and home prices will increase over the next few years. Fifty-seven percent of the national sample expect interest rates to increase during the next 12 months; 78 percent of those with an opinion believe home prices in their area will rise in the next few years.

Historic rehabs tops in real estate investing

Smart rehabilitation of historic properties continues to rank as a top real estate investment. According to industry experts, the key to a sound return is knowing what and when to buy, and what can be done with it.

A seminar showing step-by-step planning of historic rehabilitation projects recently was presented to members of the National Association of Realtors and the National Trust for Historic Preservation.

Architect William MacRostie, president of Heritage Consulting in Washington, told program participants that investment opportunities for urban rehabilitations are based on the appreciation potential fueled by the migration of "yuppies" back to downtown areas.

"Timing is everything," MacRostie said, identifying four "neighborhood transition stages" during which an investor might profit from a rehabilitation project. During the bottom-out "blitz" stage, risk is highest, property is cheapest, financing opportunities are smallest, and profit potential is strongest. "You may not be able to bring up the rest of the block. At this stage, your profit is going to come solely from what you do to the place, nothing else," he said.

During the early stages of transition, a structure's architecture has the greatest significance, he noted. "Make sure the property has peak characteristics. It's the only thing that will make people want to live or work there in the beginning," he said.

The "second wave" stage is usually the one that appeals to most investors, outside of the gutless ones, he said. The profit potential is a bit lower, because the start of other rehabilitation projects has raised property prices. But, risk is lower, and financing is more available.

During the "safe child" and "establishment" stages, risk is lowest, MacRostie said. Property values have soared, financing is easy to find, and tenants are drawn by the location, rather than the property.

The profit potential, much lower than in the earlier stages, depends on traditional forces that affect real estate values, such as the economy of the locality.

"An advantage of rehabilitating a building that is structurally sound over building from scratch is the lower overall construction costs resulting from the shorter-term construction loans. A disadvantage is the lack of energy efficiency in older buildings that could cause higher operating costs than those for new ones," MacRostie said.

"Another major drawback is unpredictability of costs. You've got to get a handle on your costs early on," MacRostie cautioned.

He cautioned against using contractors, architects and other professionals inexperienced in rehabilitation. "You don't want to be making mistakes with these people. If they are surprised at something, (adversely affecting the project), you don't need them," he said. MacRostie also advised heading off potential problems through advance discussions with local building inspectors and state and national historic preservation officials.

The lower tax credit percentages mandated by the Tax Reform Act of 1986 have reduced some rehabilitation incentives, MacRostie noted. The credit equals 20 percent (formerly 25 percent) of the cost of rehabilitating properties built before 1936 that are certified as historical by the National Park Service. Individual properties may be certified, as well as those contributing to the character of the certified historical districts in which they are located. Rehabilitation costs must exceed the property's basis (purchase price plus certain improvement costs). The credit, which can be used to lower federal income tax owed, applies to makeovers of commercial, industrial or residential rental properties; no owner-occupied residences qualify. A 10 percent tax credit (formerly 15 and 20 percent) is allowed for rehabilitation of non-certified commercial or industrial properties; like certified ones, they must be built before 1936.

Historic certification by the federal government requires a minimum 90-day process in which a two-part application is first reviewed by the applicable state historic preservation office, and then is forwarded to the National Park Service, a division of the U.S. Department of Interior. In the first part, the applicant explains why the property itself should be deemed historical or why it should be included as part of the historical district. In the second part, the rehabilitation work is detailed.

Of the four types of property renovations — restoration, rehabilitation, remodeling, and reconstruction — restoration is the most costly. It requires firm documentation of the original work and returning the structure to that condition. Rehabilitation permits the owner to make the property useful through repair with new materials, while preserving its historical integrity.
