Womack, Young keep Union afloat

By MARK YABLONSKY

That Mike Womack and Jimmy Young are enjoying productive seasons for the Union High-Boys basketball team this winter is indisputable. But the funny thing is, both of them are also playing out-of-position.

—Out-of-position? In spite of the fact that Womack leads the team in rebounding at roughly an 11.7 clip, while Young's 20 points-per-game average is easily the team's best as well? And they're playing out-of-position? It's true.

The Farmers, you see, while not at all short in desire and hustle, are somewhat deficient this year when it comes to height, which in basketball, of course, usually means trouble. As a result, the 6-3, 190-pound Womack, who would be better suited as a forward, has had to move inside and play center instead. In turn, Young, whose excellent shooting ability makes him an obvious choice as a "number two" or shooting guard, has had to operate as a swingman — or small forward — to help fill the gap left by Womack's other responsibilities.

And so, both players have admirably made the switch to other spots, and have been highly successful, as their statistics would seem to indicate.

Particularly Womack, who has done what head coach Bill Hazleton has asked of him, and then some.

"Much real have anticipated," replied Hazleton when asked if he was pleased with Womack's work thus far. "Without Mike Right now, as far as our rebounding strength at all, other than Mike, that we can count on. But Mike has responded better than I could have expected. And he's our leading rebounder in the game."

Womack, it should be noted, is not only a newcomer at center, but a newcomer to Union as well, having just moved north from Tom's River in late September. Without doubt, his rebounding ability has enabled the Farmers to win four games, including a 69-47 upset over Hillside in the semifinal round of the recent Hillside Christmas Tournament, in which the Farmers finally fell to a dazzling, quicker team in Linden come the final round.

All in all, the soft-spoken Womack has had to face a variety of tough competition, including Linden's Reggie Jackson, who at 6-6, is one of the county's most talented rebounding centers. If only for his quickness and jumping ability alone. But the real test for Womack came when he went against massive Luther Wright, a 7-2, 210-pound power forward who weighs around 245 pounds and is, according to Hazleton, "a space-eater with a man's body."

And while Elizabeth won by a 72-41 margin, Womack got a crash course in dealing with giants.

"He learned very quickly how to use his body," Hazleton explained. "In order for a guy like Mike to play a guy of his size, he's got to learn to lean and use his body by exerting pressure on Wright, so Wright wouldn't shoot over him. It was a real difficult to guard him," recalled Hazleton, who scored nine points in that Jan. 7 contest. "It wasn't like he was an offensive threat, but he was there, I wasn't intimidated, but he was just a different way. I was just worried about getting rebounded. I figured, being that I had to box him out, I had to worry about more of my guys coming in and getting rebounded. He's strong."

Womack has had his share of big games for Union, including a 13-rebound effort in a 56-47 win over Kearny on Jan. 9. But the game he remembers best is the 72-52 defeat to Linden in the Hillside Tournament finale, and well he should, since his 10 points — was the game-high for Union that day, and second only to Linden's Corey Floyd, who netted 19.

"It was like really the first time I played a complete game," said Womack, who was one of two Union players named to the tournament's All-Star Team. "I still think we played our best in that tournament."

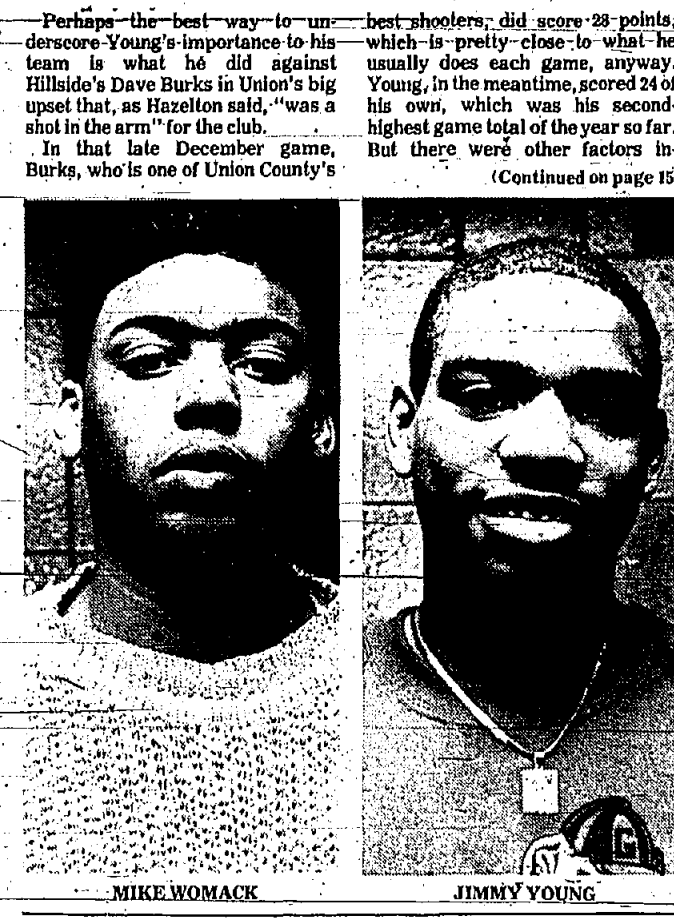

So did Young, who was Union's other representative on the seven-member All-Star Tournament squad.

Young, as every Union supporter knows, was a valuable member of the Union High football team that won its fourth consecutive state championship this past fall. A running back who gained over 1,000 yards, Young is quick and mobile, and that's only part of why Hazleton feels he is a "definite Division 1 collegiate prospect." In basketball as well as football.

And remember, Young, like Womack, is not playing in his natural position this season.

What is it that makes the 6-1, 170-pound junior so valuable?

"Well, he does everything," answered Hazleton, who called Young "the best shooter on the team, other than me," just before the start of the season. "He's playing out of position right now because if he decides he wants to play college basketball, he'll have to play guard instead of swingman. But he can do everything — shoot, rebound, handle. And when he's at the top of his game, he's as good as anyone around. A definite Division 1 prospect."

Womack, Young

voiced that didn't appear in the box score.

"Jimmy had certain instructions on how to play Burks," Hazleton emphasized. "Jimmy did exactly what he had to do and even though Burks got 29... we pretty much look Burks' effectiveness out of the game. He did everything we asked of him. We weren't supposed to win. That was our biggest game of the year. But Jimmy Young is also one of the nicest kids you'll ever want to meet."

"He can lead with his personality," continued the coach, who predicted that the junior "will probably be able to punch his ticket" next year, as far as collegiate athletic offers are concerned. "He's not a rah-rah type of kid, but he kind of leads. Just by his presence. And not to be corny or anything, but he probably best leads by example because he's not the rah-rah cheerleader type. But his teammates respect him because of his ability and his dedication."

Young is certainly not outspoken or highly talkative in nature, but he doesn't mind saying what the main ingredient for team cohesiveness is, even though the possibility remains that Union will not qualify for state playoff action next month.

"Nobody on the team is really giving up at all, and everybody is going out and trying harder," said Young, who remains uncommitted as to what sport he will pursue in college, although he does admit that football is "my first love."

Young, it should be mentioned, scored a career-high 36 points in a 69-54 win over Scotch Plains this past Friday.

Yes, height problems notwithstanding, there is no question that Womack and Young are the pillars of support every coach needs.

"Thank God that Womack is here because without him, our rebounding would be nil," concluded Hazleton, who will need the play and strength of his two standouts even more in upcoming Union County Tournament play next month. "And of course, every coach would like to have a Jimmy Young on his team because he's a very gifted athlete."

How To Take The Right Steps In Choosing A Health Plan.

The best way to evaluate a health plan is to experience it. So the Rutgers Community Health Plan—RCHP—invites you to follow these simple steps:

1. Call RCHP. Arrange for a guided tour of the nearest of our seven Health Centers located throughout Central and Northern New Jersey.
2. Take the tour. See why our locally-managed group-model HMO can give you better, more complete coverage—with no claim forms, little or no copayments and no deductibles.

Check out our modern medical facilities—with labs, x-ray facilities and most of the primary care services you and your family will ever need—all under one roof. Meet our professional staff and get a first-hand feeling for the quality of personal care our multi-specialty group practice provides, from internal medicine and pediatrics to orthopedics.

Hear how RCHP cares for you when you're well with routine exams and eye care, and with wellness programs like Weight-Aware and Smoking Cessation. And how we tie in with other specialty physician groups and the area's finest hospitals—the Medical Center at Princeton, Robert Wood Johnson University Hospital, St. Peter's Medical Center and the Overlook Hospital—to complement our own excellent care.

You'll find out what makes RCHP different. And better.

3. Make up your own mind. Take the first step today. Take a walk through our health plan. Call 1-800-233-RCHP.

There are RCHP Health Centers in New Brunswick, Somerset, Edison, Princeton, Lawrenceville, Union and Mountainside.

Actor loves 'Sarge' role in 'Blues'

SHOUTING SPREE — Barry Cullison, left, growls, roars and barks out orders to responsive Army rookie, Marc Filion, in Neil Simon's comedy, 'Blotki Blues,' at the Paper Mill Playhouse, now through Feb. 7.

PISTOL-PACKING SERGEANT — Barry Cullison, left, in drunken state, points pistol at Army-haling recruit played by Robert Cicchiri in Paper Mill Playhouse production of Simon's award-winning autobiographical play on Paper Mill stage.

By BY BEA SMITH
The reason Barry Cullison, the versatile actor, who plays the tough, foul-mouthed sergeant in "Blotki Blues" at the Paper Mill Playhouse, Millburn, is so good in the role is because he understudied it on Broadway and performed it during a summer tour.

"It's very interesting," says Cullison with a friendly chuckle, not at all like the frighteningly menacing character he plays on stage. "I understudied the role of Sgt. Merwin J. Toomey on Broadway. I enjoyed that, but I never got a chance to do it on Broadway. I finally left to go to the Syracuse Stage Co. to do 'Glorious Glorious' and after I left that play, I heard from my agent that they were doing 'Blotki Blues' on the straw hat circuit, so I submitted my picture and resume to the production company. I auditioned and, of course, I was wonderful," he teases.

Cullison should have been "wonderful" for all the times he dreamed of doing it on Broadway.

"I did the tour from Maine to Massachusetts to the Cape, and while I was rehearsing the part at the Minskoff Studios, Angelo Del Rossi, the producer at the Paper Mill Playhouse, came to see me. The Paper Mill director, John Going called Angelo over and said, 'Look at this.'

"Well, Angelo decided right then to put the play in this slot, and to have me play the sergeant."

Cullison explains that he could have had more background in the preparation of playing a soldier, but fate certainly has its twists and turns. "I always thought I would be a soldier, ever since I was a kid," he says seriously. "I always romanticized the idea of being a soldier. Actually, I always wanted to be in the Marines, but when I was faced with the Vietnam conflict and what it meant, I found it was a very painful decision to make. I didn't believe in what it stood for, and at that time, I realized it was a decision that I had to make. I was drafted five times. I failed a couple of physicals, but when they pushed me into the third phase, I let them know that I was a conscientious objector. Let the powers that be know that this was not the right thing to do. This country was so divided.

"When I failed my physical for the fifth time because of a hernia," says Cullison, "they more or less left me alone. It's interesting that I would end up playing the sergeant."

Cullison explains that he would have enthusiastically enlisted in the service if he had been young enough in World War II. "World War II was totally different. My father was in the service," he says proudly and mentions that even the Korean Conflict was different. "I play a tough sergeant in 'Blotki Blues,' but I do it for a reason. I have to let those guys know what they can do to survive when they're faced with a real conflict. There's a purpose behind it," he smiles.

"And playing it here at the Paper Mill is really great. I must admit," says Cullison, "that I'm very impressed with the whole complex. I haven't done much Broadway except for 'Bedroom Eyes' and in his first national tour, and off-Broadway in 'Cloud 9,' and I think that the Paper Mill is as good if not a better complex than Broadway. It rivals Broadway," he says. "I did not expect it to be so well-equipped. I would play the Paper Mill again in a second. I really do think they've gone about it in a very wise way."

Cullison, who was born in Vineland, N.J., says that until the age of 17, "we moved around quite a bit. We lived in Chicago for a while, and that was when I attended the Goodman School of Drama."

"I always wanted to be an actor," he says. "I don't know where it came from. My only exposure to acting was to go to the movies. So, that's when I decided to be an actor."

"My first stage appearance," he muses, "was when I was even younger. I was in the sixth grade, and we had a hypnotist to entertain us in school. I was hypnotized on stage in front of an audience. And that was the start of it."

"I was rather infatuated with the idea...I was certainly smitten

Manor hasn't been sold

Rumors that The Manor Restaurant in West Orange has been sold to make room for condominiums or an off-ice hotel complex, are being put to rest by the intervention of the law firm of Heck, Reichstein & Guidone of Montclair.

Challenger tunes

By MILT HAMMER
Pick of the New LP "Challenger," MCA Records.
"Challenger" — The Mission Continues — is a collection of pop songs with a very special purpose. MCA is releasing the LP in support of the Challenger Center for Space and Science Education, to be established on a non-profit basis by the families of the seven-member Challenger crew.

Recently the Challenger LP was premiered at a fund-raising dinner in Washington, D.C. Walter Cronkite served as host. In attendance were Vice President George Bush, House Speaker Jim Wright, astronaut Edwin E. Aldrin Jr., test pilot Chuck Yeager and "The Right Stuff" author, Tom Wolfe, among other celebrities.

The foundation supporting the Challenger Space and Science Education Center considers the LP a major part of its fund-raising campaign. A portion of the album's proceeds will be donated towards the establishment of the center in the Washington, D.C. area. The center is intended to provide a wide range of educational activities in key scientific areas. A "Space Life Station" — simulating a real-space station environment, will be among the facilities available.

The songs featured on the LP run the gamut from R and B to rock to country — but all carry a message of hope and idealism. John Denver's contribution, "Flying For Me," was specifically written as a tribute to the Challenger astronauts. The album also contains tracks by such artists as Patti LaBelle, "Oh, People"; Stevie Wonder, "Visions"; Aretha Franklin, "There's a Star for Everyone"; The Crusaders and Joe Cocker, "I'm So Glad I'm Standing Here Today"; Elton John, "Friends"; and Lee Greenwood, "God Bless the U.S.A."

The families of the Challenger astronauts have resolved that the dream of space exploration must remain alive. "Challenger — The Mission Continues" celebrates this noble cause with an all-star line-up of talent and uplifting songs.

Dukakis awarded for film work

Whole Theater producing artistic director Olympia Dukakis has won two Best Supporting Actress awards for her work in the recently released film, "Moonstruck." Both the National Board of Review and the Los Angeles Film Critics announced the selection of Dukakis in December. She plays the role of Rose Castorini, Cher's mother, in the film.

Whole Theater was host to the New Jersey premiere of "Moonstruck" Friday with a star-studded opening sponsored by Dukakis at the Clairidge Cinema in Montclair. The premiere was a benefit for Whole Theater's educational programming.

In 1986, after completing eight months in Mike Nichols' Broadway hit, "Social Security," with Marlo Thomas, Dukakis went into rehearsal for "The Sea Gull" at the Whole Theater. She then went into production for "Moonstruck."

Moliere's play staged

The celebration of the 15th anniversary season will continue at Whole Theater with Moliere's "The School For Wives" running through Sunday. Originally produced at Whole Theater in the 1976-77 season, Producing Artistic Director Olympia Dukakis is reviving the play. Following "The School For Wives," the season continues with "Tracers," directed by John DiFusco and featuring a score by Bruce Springsteen, Feb. 9 to 28 and "The Rose Tattoo," by Tennessee Williams with Olympia Dukakis and Anthony Pozini, March 8 to 27. Ticket information can be obtained by calling 744-2989.

Home show gets good ratings

Schlott Realtors Sunday Morning Home Show has proven especially popular since it changed time slots from 9 a.m. to 8:30 a.m. on Sunday mornings. The recent survey indicated that over half of the viewing audience for the television show was comprised of people between the ages of 25 and 39. Among them, half had graduated from college or had advanced degrees and earned an annual income of more than $30,000.

The result of "The Sunday Morning Home Show," is the overwhelmingly positive response from viewers. The show's viewers ranked Schlott Realtors higher than non-viewers on leadership, knowing their local community, and being able to get people the most for their money," stated Richard Schlott, president of Schlott Realtors. "We are able to show people the kind of informed, personalized service Schlott is noted for."

The show has commanded a steady viewing audience since its time change from 9 a.m. to 8:30 a.m. "We received many requests that the show be moved earlier so that people could get an early start on their real estate search," stated Schlott. "We have been very pleased with the ratings, which are between 2 and 2.5, and that is considered highly respectable for a Sunday morning show."

According to Schlott, the television show isn't just to sell houses. "We have found that viewers have a genuine interest in real estate and a real desire to learn more about it," Schlott said. "That's why, in addition to advertising homes, we keep viewers up to date on the current market trends and financing options."

SHOWCASE OF HOMES

American Dream still alive

Ninety-two percent of New Jerseyans say they prefer to own their own homes, while only 1-in-12 wants to rent. Fully eight out of 10 New Jersey residents prefer owning a single-family, detached home. These were two of the major conclusions from a recently conducted telephone poll by the Center for Public Interest Polling at the Eagleton Institute at Rutgers University.

The Eagleton poll also found that by overwhelming margins New Jerseyans prefer to live outside the cities. Over 80 percent of all those polled desired to live in a small town, suburb or rural area; and only 10 percent thought living in a city was very desirable. While older suburbs seemed more attractive than newer, all suburbs were found to be desirable.

Although New Jerseyans are clear about what they want, less than half, or 46 percent of those polled, were either "very" or "somewhat satisfied" with their future chances of finding "acceptable affordable housing in New Jersey."

The poll, conducted for the Foundation for the Preservation of the American Dream, is entitled

"Housing Preferences of New Jerseyans." All 21 of New Jersey counties were proportionately represented by an equal number of men and women totalling 800 respondents.

The Eagleton pollsters concluded from this data that, although not everyone who owns a single-family home is satisfied with his current housing, "the data does indicate that the 'dream' of owning a single-family detached home remains intact and is—in fact—a reality for a majority of New Jerseyans."

"The results of this poll are conclusive," says Gregory Poullet, chairman of the Foundation for the Preservation of the American Dream. "The American dream of home ownership is very much alive in New Jersey. Unfortunately, for many, the dream seems to be beyond their reach, beyond what they can afford. It is tragic, therefore, that our State Planning Commission is proposing policies that will reduce the supply of housing and will drive up its costs. Before the Commission pushes any more of its anti-growth proposals, it should read the results of this poll."
