Water table rises, floods

By DOMINICK CRINGOLI JR.
With basement knee-deep in water, property values waning and electricity bills on the increase, several residents are up in arms about a ground water flooding problem affecting three township streets.

The flooding resulted from the Elizabethtown Water Company's decision early this year to shut off two major well fields which run beneath homes on Alvin Terrace, and Marlon and Warner avenues. Ironically Springfield residents are serviced by the New Jersey American Water Company, not Elizabethtown.

At a recent Township Committee meeting, Richard Bell and Joe Martin, neighbors from Alvin Terrace, requested the township's backing with regard to legal action against Elizabethtown.

Township Attorney Jay Kloud originally said the town would have no legal standing as a party to the suit, since no township-owned land was affected. Hence, the homeowners would have to bring suit privately.

However, the township does own and maintain a small park at the end of Alvin Terrace to Martin's house. Kloud and Mayor Jeffrey Katz, also an attorney, determined that if the town could prove that its ability to maintain the park is being restricted by the ground water problem, Springfield may have standing as a party to the suit.

"If the town has a reasonable chance of victory and if we really can't use our land, we may choose to become a party," confirmed Katz.

"There is no question that when something like this happens it will affect a large number of people: the question is, is there a remedy?" Mayor Katz said.

"There is a paucity of case law on this," Katz said.

Using an analogy, Katz cited the difficulty which may be encountered if a legal remedy is sought against Elizabethtown for shutting off the wells.

"I can recall when PSE&G shut off one of their generators in the middle of the winter. Now, fish had been congregating in the water beneath the generator because of its slightly warmer temperature," said Katz.

"But when the generator was shut off in the winter and many fish froze and died, PSE&G was not held responsible because it was deemed a natural consequence," the mayor concluded.

"Such may be the case with Elizabethtown," he said.

Notwithstanding, it would be difficult to argue that the residents have not been wronged by Elizabethtown's decision, and that their plight does not exceed that of fish.

The excess water in the basement, besides being inconvenient and damaging to belongings, brings with it a dampness and moldiness that pervades the entire house.

Residents have also complained that the sump pumps in the basement now operate 24 hours a day, leaving their meter electric bills. The water is pumped out into the street by way of pipes from the collar.

Julie Bell, among others, complained about the "anoying" sounds of gushing water which she says she must listen to all night long. Bell reports that the noise disrupts the suburban tranquility she has paid high property taxes to enjoy.

"I have a sinus problem, and this moldiness and dampness is not helping matters any," she lamented.

Madeline Lancaster, who is 83-years-old and lives across the street from the Bells, said she lost the sale of her home because of the ground water problem.

All arrangements were secured for her relocation in a Freehold nursing home at the time.

"I had the house sold, the contract was all settled. But when the couple

Accused murderer indicted

By DOMINICK CRINGOLI JR.
Springfield resident Rolando Marcelo, accused of killing his mother, brother and two others in a shocking Memorial Day massacre, was indicted by a Union County grand jury July 7.

The Great Place resident and summa cum laude graduate of Yale University was charged with four counts of murder, as well as with the attempted murder of a fifth person. He was indicted on 10 counts altogether.

Assistant Union County Prosecutor Dave Hancock said he has not yet decided whether to pursue the death penalty against Marcelo, but that the decision, one way or the other, will be handed down during the suspect's arraignment, scheduled for Aug. 21.

The killing spree began May 29 when Marcelo allegedly stabbed his mother, Anita Marcelo, 51, and brother Raymond, 21, with a 10-foot knife in their home.

Police say he then chased his friend Nelson Pavia of Union, who had arrived for a visit, into a neighbor's backyard. It was there that Marcelo stabbed him to death, according to Police Chief William E. Chisholm.

Marcelo, according to police, subsequently began running wildly about the Great Place and Park Lane neighborhoods, stabbing people indiscriminately while dozens of neighbors, who had gathered for a block party, watched.

Marcelo allegedly killed neighbor Mark Dennis, 35, the father of three children, and seriously wounded another neighbor, Richard Hartmann, who was stabbed 10 times but survived. A motive for the slayings has still not been determined, officials said.

After the stabbings, Marcelo fled in the family car and was captured in Bodminster after a high-speed car chase involving several state and local police units on Routes 22, 287 and 78, said Chisholm.

Marcelo had recently diagnosed his training to be a New York City investment banker after being diagnosed with Epstein-Barr virus, a form of depression.

Three days after incident, Marcelo was reported to have sufficed with five corrections officers at the Union County Jail, following what could have been a suicide attempt. He was subsequently transferred from the jail to the state Forensic Psychiatric Hospital in Ewing Township.

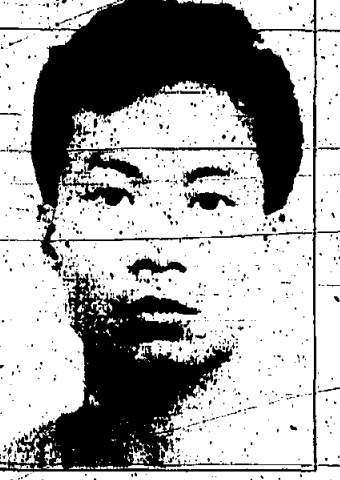

It was lawyer in the allocation after refusing to take down sheets and towels which he had hung up on the bars of his cell to secure privacy.

Corrections officers entering the cell encountered Marcelo's skills in Shotokan karate when they tried to remove the sheets, jail officials said.

Forensic Psychiatric Hospital is the most intensively supervised of the state's mental facilities. Ninety percent of its residents are inmates who have either been convicted of committing a violent crime or accused of committing a violent crime and are deemed incompetent to stand trial by a state court judge, said Forensic spokesman Laurie Facinotusa.

Union County Public Defender Jim Kerwick, who is representing Marcelo, estimated that the trial is at least six months away if Hancock does not seek the death penalty, and even longer if the prosecution makes a capital case.

"Based on the knowledge I have received from talking to him," Kerwick said, "Forensic is the appropriate place for him at this time."

MURDER SUSPECT Rolando Marcelo as he appeared at the Union County Jail.

State smoke ban may calm unions

By DOMINICK CRINGOLI JR.
An "unfair labor practice" suit filed by two unions from the Union County Regional District in the state Public Employment Relations Commission may be dropped because of the regional district's ban on smoking in the light of the state statute.

Members of the Union County Federation of Teachers, UCFT, and the Union County Education Association, UCEA, had protested the regional district's unilateral ban on smoking, scheduled to go into effect Jan. 1, partly because they had no say in the matter.

"We are fighting for the right to negotiate," said UCFT attorney Paul Burns.

"However, the state statute preempts our negotiating," said Burns of the state law signed by Gov. Kean on June 14, which orders each Jersey board of education to "make and enforce regulations to the smoking of tobacco anywhere in its building except as part of classroom instruction or theatrical production."

The statute, which was passed by an overwhelming margin and becomes effective in December, would extend to all state public schools, including Jonathan Dayton Regional High School in Springfield.

MV agency debuts

By DOMINICK CRINGOLI JR.
After more than a year of anticipation, motorists can finally conduct their motor vehicle business in the new, comfortable and spacious motor vehicle agency located at Center Street.

Approved by the Planning Board in the early part of 1987, residents have anticipated relocation of the facility from its former spot on Morris Avenue for more than a year.

Once a small bowling alley consisting of four or five lanes, the building was converted to a doctor's office about 15 years ago before it was used for its present purposes.

The opening of this 5,600-square-foot agency meets the improved customer service standards outlined in our model agency master plan, and is another stride in our continuing efforts to make this the very best motor vehicle operation in the county," said state Division of Motor Vehicle Director Glenn R. Paulsen, who officiated at Monday's ribbon-cutting ceremony.

The old Springfield agency contained only 1,176 square feet. The extra space at the new facility is being used for more equipment, a modern waiting room for customers and a drive-testing area where motorists can take written and vision tests.

"The citizens of New Jersey pay approximately $50 million in fees to DMV each year and we spend only about $125 million to supply the services they pay for," Paulsen explained.

This new model agency is just another attempt by us to give Union County motorists what they pay for — the most effective, efficient, customer service-oriented Division of Motor Vehicles operation in the country," he emphasized.

Paulsen said the new office, which resembles the prototype model agencies located in Camden, Vineland, Salem, Edison, Lodi, Wayne, Oakland, Rahway, Newark, Bakers Basin, Washington and at the new Wayne, Depford and Trenton regional service centers, is the 15th model agency opened by DMV in the last year and a half.

The renovations to the newly-leased office will make the operation of the agency more efficient and functional.

Dancing the night away

Approximately 300 people joined together for the rumba, tango and boogie-woogie at Saturday night's pool hall commemorating the town's 26th anniversary.

Different age groups danced to music provided by Springfield's own Paul Anthony Diaz Johnny Entertainment, with sounds ranging from '60s psychodelia to the Mickey Mouse Club "Kow" it's time to say goodbye... theme.

The dance party is fast becoming a ritual in town after last year's dances drew large crowds.

No raises now

Two years ago, when the state government was feasting on a surplus of half a billion dollars or so, the 120 members of the Legislature voted themselves raises of $10,000 apiece, effective January 1990.

But since that time, state revenues haven't matched the optimistic projections of Gov. Thomas Kean's administration. Lawmakers this year were forced to chop spending by $200 million to $300 million just to help balance the budget.

Yet amid all this belt-tightening, the Legislature remains in line for the scheduled pay raise, which would hike each legislator's pay from $25,000 to $35,000.

Statehouse leaders are empowered to block the pay increases. But Sen. President John Russo, D-10, refuses to rule them out, and Assembly Speaker Chuck Hardwick, R-21, says the decision is up to whoever succeeds him in January.

Most of Trenton's legislators have significant alternate sources of income; lawmaking, for many of them, is a sideline. So how can they justify grabbing 40 percent raises for themselves while the rest of the state scrounges for pennies?

The increments ought to be delayed, and a statewide salary freeze maintained, until the surplus comes back for a return engagement.

Letters to the Editor

Editorial tried to smear me

To read your editorial of June 22 regarding my decision not to seek reelection to the Assembly this coming November, one would almost infer that a capital crime had been committed by me.

My final decision not to seek re-election to the seat which I presently hold in the General Assembly was not made until June 14 while I was on a business trip in Kansas City, Mo. Although there were rumors circulating in many communities that I might not be running, I had every intention of continuing to represent the 21st District in the Assembly up until June 14, eight days after the primary.

In your editorial, you attempted to smear my name by promoting my personal decision as a "sell" with Assembly Speaker Chuck Hardwick, then a candidate for governor, to allow him to return to the Assembly; you attempted to smear my name and that of my company by saying that "perhaps Genova's company prearranged for Genova to run what amounted to a proxy campaign for Hardwick"; you attempted to smear my name by making innuendos that my decision not to seek re-election was done behind closed doors; and regrettably, you never gave me the benefit of the doubt by taking my word and my vote alone that the decision which I made on June 14 was Peter Genova's decision, not that of me or Chuck Hardwick or the Republican Party, and most importantly, that this final decision was not made prior to the primary election, which took place on June 6.

What would your newspaper and other political opportunists have said if I decided to run this coming November, won the election, and then resigned my seat to fellow Republican who would not have to run until November 1990? You would have chastised me, and I certainly would have deserved it.

What would your newspaper and other political opportunists have said if I decided to resign from my Assembly seat today in order to allow a Republican candidate to fill my vacancy and serve during this present political campaign as an incumbent? You would have chastised me, and I certainly would have deserved it.

What wrong did I do, Mr. Editor? I am fulfilling my elected term until its expiration on Dec. 30. What is so wrong with that decision? It was my decision on June 14, it was Peter Genova's decision, not that of me or Chuck Hardwick or the Republican Party, and most importantly, that this final decision was not made prior to the primary election, which took place on June 6.

Trenton Report

Driver education courses needed

By PETER J. GENOVA, Assemblyman, 21st District: Driver education courses can be an important part of a high school student's curriculum. Yet every year the number of driver education programs in New Jersey's secondary schools decreases.

In a time when automobile insurance is so high, it would be a great benefit if more of our state's schools offered driver education courses.

Learning the rules of the road and driving courtesy should not be taken lightly. Driver education courses can play an important role in promoting safety and reducing the number of accidents and fatalities on our roadways.

Recognizing the need for more driver education programs, the Assembly recently introduced two bills designed to encourage secondary schools to offer driver education courses.

The Assembly action was taken in response to a recent report of the Highway Safety Conference of the New Jersey State Safety Council.

According to the report, secondary schools that offered free comprehensive driver education programs dropped from 96 percent to 40 percent during the past 13 years due to lack of funds.

The first bill, A-4107, which I am co-sponsoring, would establish a state-certified driver education program in New Jersey's secondary schools. This legislation would provide uniformity in both the curriculum and instructional materials used by schools that sponsor driver education courses.

Curriculum for the courses would be established by the state Board of Education in conjunction with the Division of Motor Vehicles and the Office of Highway Traffic Safety.

Public school districts and non-public secondary schools that comply with state guidelines and offer certified driver education courses would be eligible for funding from a State Driver Education Fund.

I have won two elections to the Union Township Committee, and I was successful three times while being elected to the state Assembly. Your sensationalism in reporting my decision not to seek re-election may have sold newspapers, but it discredits your own standing within your industry.

I leave a valued and joyful experience in public service with my head held high and the contentment of knowing full well that I have always acted in the best interest of my faithful and trusting constituents.

PETER J. GENOVA, Assemblyman, 21st District

Hardwick took out 'insurance policy' It appears that the well-traveled rumors regarding the return of Chuck Hardwick to the Assembly race in the 21st Legislative District are correct.

The Republican Party is poised to accept the resignation of Assemblyman Peter Genova, R-21, and name a replacement. Hardwick, the unsuccessful candidate for governor, will cash in this insurance policy and return to run for an Assembly seat.

This kind of gamesmanship demeans the election process and has been the subject of editorial criticism in your newspaper. The voters have a right to expect better.

JOHN MALONE, Union County Democratic Chairman

Genova worked hard as lawmaker For the last five-plus years, Peter Genova has represented the people of the 21st Legislative District in the New Jersey General Assembly. On behalf of the people of the 21st District, I want to publicly thank him for the fine job he did representing them.

The 30-odd bills that Peter had signed into law during the tender of his office improved the quality of life for all of us.

I am particularly aware of the time it takes to be an effective legislator. During the last five years, Peter's family and his social activities became secondary while he devoted time and effort to the work of the public.

Peter Genova will most definitely be missed by those of us who worked closely with him and recognize the enormous talent that he possesses.

In closing, I want to say "thank you" to Peter and wish him and his family the very best in years to come.

CLOUIS BASSANO, State Senator, 21st District

Death penalty is on books, so use it Is it time to surrender? Should we give up all hope? Or, to you think that as a society, we've had enough and are ready to fight back?

Well, in my opinion, it's time to band together and retrieve the life of safety the people of this country enjoyed long ago. Not only for ourselves, but for our children.

Do you know, that even though the death penalty is law in New Jersey, no one has been executed since the early '70s? What is the purpose of the law, then?

We have plenty of inmates on "death row," so what are we waiting for? Their 15th appeal?

It's a shame that crime has become so commonplace in our society, and a bigger shame that there's literally no punishment for those who choose to steal, maim and kill. Death row is a joke, and prison as a whole is laughable, too.

The point of punishment is to make someone regret his crime. As prison is today, we the taxpayers are paying for inmates to have recreation, education and, in all cases, maintain more rights than their victims. It has to stop.

We need to fix our congressmen's offices with letters of protest. We need to call them. We need to make ourselves heard. They need to know that unless they follow through on our wishes, they will not be re-elected.

As long as someone can be given a death penalty and then sit on "death row" for up to 15 years (at our expense), it will never be a deterrent. But if they are given one chance at appeal and, if they lose, be put to death right away, as a deterrent the death penalty will have more strength and merit. We have to put fear back into the law.

I want the streets to belong to the people again. I want my children to be safe and protected by our laws. I want to take the rights away from the mutants who maim and kill, and give them back to victims.

How about you? What do you want?

BOB MILICI, Roselle Park

Care about problems of disabled On Oct. 1, 1987, two things happened which profoundly affected my life. First, a good friend of mine became a paraplegic through no fault of his own.

While working, driving a truck, a tree fell on the cab. Secondly, my eyes were opened wide to the needs and concerns of the disabled. For six months, once a week, I visited my friend at Kessler Institute for Rehabilitation. What I saw there could be seen by everyone. These people were being re-taught how to care for themselves and how to get on with the rest of their lives with a disability.

I believe that every high school sophomore, thinking of getting a driver's license, should be required by the state of New Jersey to take a tour of a rehabilitation facility, and see for themselves what can happen when that great invention, the automobile, is taken for granted. Then, maybe, when they get behind the wheel with two or three or more drinks in them, or think of taking a "joy ride," they will think back and remember what they saw at the rehab facility.

My friend drives his car with hand controls. When he goes out to a public place or shopping area, one main problem always occurs. When he attempts to park in handicapped areas, many times he finds all the spaces filled. After checking these cars for either handicapped plates or placards, some are found to have neither.

Also, if you are driving a car with handicapped plates but the disabled person is not with you, you do have no legal right to use that space.

Currently, the fine for illegally parking in a handicapped space is $50, plus court costs. Legislation has been introduced in Trenton by Assemblyman Robert Franks, R-22, to double it to $100, plus court costs, plus 30 days of community service. There is a good chance that it will pass.

The general public is so unconcerned and uneducated in the problems of the disabled, and the drivers just don't care! All they look for is the closest parking spot to the store. If it is designated for the disabled, they think to themselves, "So what?"

Disabled people refuse to lock themselves away in their homes. They want to become part of the mainstream of society. It is up to the able-bodied to help make this possible.

A simple, caring thought when you are tempted to park in that handicapped space is a good way to start. Be glad you don't need that spot. Park in a regular spot and walk. It will do you a world of good.

Come on, get educated! Become aware and care!

Embattled county college president resigns

Union County College President Derek Nunney has resigned following allegations of financial mismanagement at New Jersey's pioneer two-year college.

The resignation, formally accepted by the college's boards of trustees and governors on Monday and effective Tuesday, ended a four-month standoff between Nunney and officials of the Cranford-based institution.

Nunney went on paid leave from his position in March, and since then the college boards had been attempting to negotiate a contract settlement with the president. Nunney had a $100,000-a-year contract, which extended through June 30, 1991.

Board of Trustees Chairman Frank Blatz Jr. declined to disclose details of the settlement.

Roy Smith, UCC's vice president of development, planning and public affairs, has been acting president since March.

Nunney, who previously had been president of Joliet Junior College in Illinois, came to UCC in 1984 and soon began supervising the expansion of operations at branch campuses in Elizabeth and Plainfield. Projects on those sites are expected to ultimately cost about $17 million for property acquisitions and renovations.

But ongoing capital improvements at the Cranford campus — including $4.7 million in construction contracts awarded earlier this month — combined with the branch-campus projects to exert pressures on the college budget during the 1988-89 school year.

Unfunded increases and $4-per-credit surcharge, intended to help defray the costs of the projects, prompted complaints from students. Faculty members also expressed concern over teaching positions which had gone unfilled and over the continuing uncertainty over the college's finances.

In February, both the student government and the faculty senate overwhelmingly passed resolutions of no confidence in Nunney.

Also, a report based on interviews with 50 to 60 members of the college community and compiled by a board of trustees subcommittee was said to be highly critical of Nunney's performance. However, the board has not disclosed that report's contents.

On March 15, Nunney requested and was granted a month's vacation, followed by a sabbatical leave through June 30, the end of the school year.

Nunney has repeatedly refused to publicly discuss his differences with UCC officials.

Last month, as the contract settlement talks dragged on, the college trustees voted to suspend the president.

County seeks $3M more for new jail

By MINDY ROSENTHAL: The Union County Board of Freeholders is expected tonight to allocate $3 million for a bond issue to complete the construction on the new county correctional facility.

According to county officials, the 520-bed jail, expected to be completed Aug. 8, will cost the county approximately $50 million. When construction began in 1985, the county budgeted $4,147 million for the project.

The county plans to use $300,000 of the additional funds to build a plaza that was not in the original architectural plans and to buy attic stock of jail equipment, according to officials.

According to county Treasurer Joseph Bove, $400,000 of the added expenditures are for overtime costs linked to a demonstration by International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers Local 675 in July 1987. Members of the union picketed the jail for 35 days because the county had hired a non-union electrical contracting firm, Fairfield Incorporated, of Vincennes, Pa., and Lititz, Pa.

Because of the delays, the jail had to be temporarily covered for winter protection, and this involved a lot of overtime compensation, said Bove.

The remaining money will be allocated to general construction costs, though not all of it will necessarily be spent, officials said.

According to Bove, the jail has been showing a deficit since last February. He said at that time that the Union County Improvement Authority (UCA), a non-profit organization in charge of financing the project, chose to invest surplus funds rather than pay off the deficit.

The UCA is currently claiming excess earnings of $1.5 million, which it has decided to put toward the jail's first lease payment.

Freeholders finally adopt budget

By MINDY ROSENTHAL: After months of delay, the Union County Board of Freeholders last Thursday adopted a $179.3 million budget for 1989.

The new budget will increase the county tax levy 13 percent and require county residents to raise $122.3 million in revenues. Each of the county's 21 towns will be charged a different rate pursuant to a statutory formula based on the municipality's real estate values.

The board's finance chairman, Freeholder Gerald Green, said the budget was, in part, passed so late in the year because the board was hoping the state would offer financial assistance to pay for increased welfare and court costs.

"We thought Trenton would take over some of the costs," said Green. "Law enforcement and welfare is killing us. We can no longer absorb it (the costs) and we can't cut any more," he added.

According to Freeholder Neil Cohen, 55 percent of the budget is allocated to state programs. Green added that the county's surplus is down from $7 million to $3 million.

Green said the finance committee took its job "very seriously" but because of the mandated cuts, he did not make any "unpleasant cuts."

Freeholder Chairman Brian Fahy stressed the finance committee's diligence and hard efforts to present a reasonable budget. He said that the committee had cut over $4 million from the executive budget, but was frustrated with extreme state-mandated welfare and judicial costs.

In addition, the county was hit with unexpected increases totaling $1.3 million for Blue Cross and Blue Shield of New Jersey Insurance Programs and in contributions to the Family Employees Retirement System, according to Green.

County Manager Joseph Martin commended the finance committee's revised budget. He said the budget was "substantially better" than his executive budget, because the committee had reduced the tax levy from $122.7 million to $122 million.

Because of the budget's late passage date, Cohen has recommended that the board extend the Aug. 1 county tax deadline two weeks. He said the extension should alleviate any problems the municipalities have paying the tax. The board is reviewing the recommendation.

The budget, featuring a new salary-and-wage line-item format, was passed 7-1. Freeholder James Welsh was the only board member to oppose it.

Welsh said he did not support the budget because he believed its combined format would cost the taxpayers more money than a traditional salary-and-wage budget.

"When the year is over, we're going to find this is a mistake, and in the end the taxpayers will suffer," he said.

Freeholder Paul O'Keefe, the only Republican on the Democratic-dominated board, was unable to attend the meeting due to prior speaking commitments.

In a memo to Green, O'Keefe said he supports the budget because it restored $400,000 of federal per-grouping funds to the Division of Human Services and allocated money to assure the implementation of the state affirmative action program, which was requested by resolution last February.

However, he did criticize the amount of money the freeholders spent on "self-promotion" through personal mailings. According to O'Keefe, postage costs have increased from $24,775 in 1988 to $32,500 in 1989.

He suggested a policy should be enacted to control the amount of individual personal mailings the freeholders could distribute on county money.

In addition, O'Keefe suggested that a resolution be passed requiring the freeholders to direct all legal inquiries through the county council. According to O'Keefe, the county spends approximately $50,000 a month on outside legal advice from private firms. He said this measure should help curtail expenditures.

The fiscal budget presents all of the administrative departments — except for the divisions of Corrections, Youth Services, Social Services and John E. Rumrill Hospital — under a new line-item format. This format lists all present county positions by their titles and salaries.

He added it would be very difficult to add additional staff or grant promotions under the line-item format if those hirings or promotions are not specifically allocated in the budget.

Child-care confab slated at Kean Business, industry and community representatives will attend a conference on the issues and potentials of industry-sponsored child care on Tuesday, July 18, at Kean College of New Jersey in Union.

According to Dr. Russ A. Mahan of Union, assistant professor of early childhood and conference coordinator, the invitational event is a planning session for a major countywide conference to be announced in the fall.

Michelle Lord of the Work and Family Life Studies Project of the Bank Street College, New York City, will deliver the keynote address at 9:30 a.m. in Downs Hall.

Industry representatives will be panelists on developmental and operational issues reflecting current experiences of firms in New Jersey.

Contenders set for climactic finish

By MARK YABLONSKY
By the time things wind down in American Legion baseball regular season activity next weekend, the overall picture in Union County should be a lot clearer, in terms of who's going on to post-season play and who isn't. Until then, the possibilities seem endless.

Yep, there's a real dogfight brewing in county play — again. Only this time, teams that normally would appear to be dead in the water can't yet be dismissed from the race. That's because several teams, both in and out of the CLN area, still have a few extra games to make up, courtesy of all the rain that rearranged the earlier portion of the schedule.

And anything can happen.

It's an extremely tough season because, at the beginning, everybody had their pitching spaced out in perspective," explained county league chairman Bob Catullo. "But now, everything is up in the air and because of the rainouts, we have to play every day. Anybody who gets hot and plays 750 ball will either make the (county) playoffs or get the automatic bid. This is a footrace down to the wire."

Indeed, had the season ended Monday, Elizabeth, Union and Roselle would have secured the top three spots in league play, and hence, automatic invitations to state tournament play. And Westfield had Springfield, both tied for fourth place, with 20 points, would have had home preliminary-round playoff games with Scotch Plains and Linden, respectively, in order to help decide the fourth and final county qualifier.

That may still happen. But before it does, consider this: Both Elizabeth and Union-tilted for first place with 26 points each, have yet to play one another. The same holds true for Springfield and Elizabeth. All of that will happen this week.

Roselle, it should be mentioned, appears to be in the best position of all, with 10 games yet to play, there's no way to downplay the sensational fielding play he made against Roselle in the top of the third inning. With one run already in and runners at second and third with two out, Mike Erickson whacked a grounder that was headed into right field, which almost certainly would have given the 22ers a 3-1 lead. But Costello, after smothering the ball with a diving stop, threw to first baseman Edgar Uiset from a near-prone position to save the day.

From that point on, winning pitcher Ron Fronsak didn't allow a hit the rest of the way; and in fact, retired the side in order in the fourth, fifth, and sixth innings. And what a performance from losing hurler Luke Mosonori!

Red Sox, Wings capture titles

The Elastic Stop Nui Red Sox and the Fernon Equipment Red Wings both capped fine seasons with championship trophies by winning the Union Little League town titles in the major and minor leagues, respectively.

In the major league contest, the Central League Champion Red Sox defeated the American League champion Union Elks Tigers by a 6-3 score. Nick Alberto was the hero to hit for Sean Perkins in the fifth inning and buried the Tigers' comeback efforts.

Brian Gilligan went the distance on the mound for the Tigers and took the loss, but pitched well in allowing just seven hits.

In the Minor League Championship, the Central League Champion Red Wings defeated the National League Champion Royals, 12-4. Bob Savastano went the distance for the Wings, facing just 24 batters and turning in 13, while scattering five hits and walking just one. Dan Meillo was outstanding defensively and led the way with his bat with two singles and a triple. Clark Lang added a single and a homer to add to the 13-hit Red Wing barrage.

For the Royals, Chris Riolo had a fine effort on the mound with his blazing fast ball, keeping many Red Wing hitters baffled. Walter Cord-to, Christian Talag and Jared Hayes all hit well but could not overcome the Red Wing lead.

TIGERS 14, CARDINALS 2

In a semi-final contest held earlier in the week, the Tigers advanced to the final game by defeating the M.M. Foundation Cardinals, 14-2. Brian Gilligan handled the mound chores and gave up just four hits, while striking out nine. But it was the fine defensive support he received, coupled with the relentless Tiger bats that won the game. Tony DiGiovanni was superb at shortstop, as was Dave Bastien in center and Brian Korn in right. Offensively, the big hitters were Korn, who had three hits including a double; Billy Hahn, with two doubles and a single; Gilligan, with two singles and a three-run homer; Bastien, with three hits; DiGiovanni with three RBI's on a double and a single; and finally, Matt Marshall, who delivered a booming three-run homer. Solo homers by both Rich Raymond and Steve Covino provided the scoring for the Cards.

Astros beat Orioles for title

The Astros captured the Mountain-Side American League playoff crown from the Orioles, 3-1, thanks to a long circuit clout by Brett Davis.

It was more strong pitching, such as by Dominic Marietta and Mike Lyster, which enabled the Astros to top the Yankees, 2-1, in the semifinals. Mike Fenton and Greg Iannelli had the RBI's for the victors, with second baseman Danielle Criscitello starting in the field. Mike Spolitis had a strong mound effort for the Yankees. The Yankee run came in on consecutive singles by Robbie Fergus, Brian Giljan and Jacob Mentlik.

The Orioles threatened in the third inning on consecutive singles by Chris McPherson, Ben Jacobs and Mike Lauricella, but a fine play by right fielder Alexander Ciasulli snuffed out the rally. The Orioles got on the board in their last at-bat, thanks to a long circuit clout by Brett Davis.

The Major League Braves got early two-hit, two-RBI performances from Shawn Frazier and Bob Gardella and held on to beat the Mets, 7-6, to capture the playoff championship. The Mets fought back from an early five-run deficit as Lee Beasley, Marvin Oskerson and Seth Weinglass led the way, but defensive gems by Brave leftfielder Ken Fisher and second baseman Jodi Mastellone kept the Mets at bay.

In the semifinals, the Braves got a late-inning home run from John Szymczak to tie the game, and single by Shawn Frazier to tie the game, and single by Shawn Frazier to tie the game, and single by Shawn Frazier to tie the game.

NORRIS CHEVROLET — Mitch Freedman and his partner, Jordan Lieberman, have got the right stuff at the right price. With 50 years of car sales in the family, they can't go wrong.

car dealer for you

When somebody buys a car, they want to buy it from a place that is local and from someone whom they can trust. "The 'someone' in this case is Norris Chevrolet and the place is, downtown Westfield.

For 53 years, they have been one of the area's most successful and competitive car dealers, and after six generations in the business, the Norris Chevrolet family is not about to break tradition.

"Our business philosophy has always been customer-oriented. We care as much about the customer after we sell the car as we do out in the showroom," says Mitch Freedman, one of the two partners who own and run the business at 209 Central Ave., Westfield.

Freedman and his partner and friend, Jordan Lieberman, do business in what they like to call a "suburban-like" manner.

"It makes a difference where people buy their cars," Freedman says. "We run this business in a small-town style — repeat business and word-of-mouth advertising. It has always worked well for us."

According to the owners, longevity in customer relationships "has remained consistent throughout the six decades of Norris Chevrolet operation."

"We have salesmen who have been working here for ages," Freedman says with a chuckle. "One of our men just sold a car to someone who turned out to be the great-grandchild of someone he sold a car to 30 years ago. Now that's a reputation!"

"The people of Norris Chevrolet don't rely on screaming their prices to attract customers. They get customers through sincerity and standing behind what they do.

"We don't rely on come-or-see-to-get-people-to-come-in," Freedman says. "We build confidence and sell cars at prices lower than the highway stores."

He says the prices at Norris Chevrolet are "very competitive — usually cheaper than the highway stores."

According to the Customer Satisfaction Index, a national "report card" sent to car dealers annually, based upon customer responses, Norris Chevrolet has been rated sixth in the nation.

"That's not how we rate ourselves, and that's not how Chevrolet rates us," Freedman says. "That's how the customers have rated us."

"It really doesn't surprise us that we have received such a high rating according to this new index. We've been doing business like this all along."

Norris Chevrolet has the cars customers want to buy, at prices they can afford, and from people they can trust. For all types of Chevys, and for a variety of new-line GEO imports, stop by Norris Chevrolet at 209 Central Ave., Westfield.

It's a business that's there for you, the customer.

Writer: lonely, unique

By FRANK J. KORN
"It is primarily a 'lonely craft,'" John Steinbeck used to say. "And it must be accepted as such. If you eliminate that 'loneliness' of approach you automatically eliminate some of the power of the effort."
Anyone who has done some writing can readily attest to Steinbeck's view. For there you sit — alone, all alone, struggling fiercely to put something worthwhile, something both substantive and interesting on the virgin sheet of legal paper before you. No one can help you.

WRITERS CONFER — Frank J. Korn, right, Kenilworth author and school educator, attends conference with a fellow writer, Henry Kissinger. Korn is on the staff of Irvington High School.

The loneliness can at times be excruciating, demoralizing, dispiriting. The work is terribly hard, often sheer agony. And the dreaded malady of Writer's Block can strike at any moment, its duration tormentingly uncertain. Every writer secretly worries, after completing a work, if he or she will ever write again. Then even after the manuscript is in the mail, the mortal fear of yet another loneliness-rejection slip can unnerve you.

"Why bother to write at all then and subject yourself to such agonizing?" the layman may ask.

James Michener once addressed the question this way: "I have always hated writing." Then after a pregnant pause he told the stunned interviewer: "But I have always loved having written." In short, Michener was saying, the agony, the loneliness, the insecurity are all well worth it in the name of what good writing truly constitutes.

Late in his life Renoir suffered from crippling arthritis. It was sheer torture for him to even lift a brush. Yet he went on painting — and groaning — creating indescribable beauty on canvas. When asked why he endured such searing pain when he was already recognized as one of art's immortals he responded stolidly: "The pain passes but the beauty remains."

Thus it is also with writers when they turn out a gripping novel, a fascinating biography, a brilliant essay, a delightful feature article: the loneliness, the drudgery, the pain has passed.

The verbal beauty shall remain for readers to behold and savor long years hence.

The writer writes to share with others an idea, a point of view, an experience, a hope, a dream which he or she may decide to convey literally or to couch in fiction.

The columnist Bob Green suggests that writers write to strike up a brief, if unseen, relationship with the reader, to provoke in that person a response — a smile, a laugh, a tear, a contempt, a moment of sweet nostalgia, or any other of the whole gamut of human emotions.

The frustrating aspect of this, however, as Green so astutely points out, is that writers are not there for the interaction and will never know whether their words pleased the readers they never met. A halfback hears the crowd scream its approval as soon as he takes off for the end zone. A singer hears the audience shout its pleasure at the very first notes of a favorite song. A comedian hears the laughter as soon as the pun-chline is delivered. The writer can only hope that the words got the laughter or tears he or she was after out there in an invisible — and inaudible — reading audience.

Such disadvantages go with the territory, writers conclude. So they are quick to realize that they must be just that much more unswervingly dedicated to their work. And dedicated they are. Writers have been known to log months, indeed years, in lonely library research. Genevieve Ryan spent one full decade roaming across Europe to gather material for his epic work on the invasion of Normandy, "The Longest Day."

So that he might more authentically discuss what Michelangelo endured for his art, Irving Stone moved himself and his family to northern Italy where he would toil backbreakingly for months on end as a stone cutter in the quarries of the Carrara Mountains. The fruit of his labors was, of course, the momentous historical novel, "The Agony and the Ecstasy." Will Durant gave over his entire adult life to the mindboggling goal of telling the complete story of civilization. For the later volumes in the best-selling series, he enlisted the aid of another outstanding writer and distinguished historian — his devoted wife, Ariel.

Writers, it seems, like to hobnob with their colleagues in the field in the hope that an ongoing exchange of ideas on their craft will help to improve their styles. Back in the 1920s, for example, there was along the banks of the Seine in Paris a thriving colony of expatriate authors. There you could find a balmy afternoon walking together in the Jardin du Luxembourg, or sitting at the sidewalk tables of a cheap bistrot, the likes of Ernest Hemingway, Gertrude Stein, F. Scott Fitzgerald, James Joyce et al. In Rome of the 60s, down in Piazza del Popolo at Caffè Canova on any given evening, you might bump into the leading Italian literati — Ignazio Silone, Carlo Levi, Alberto Moravia, Luigi Barzini among them. Today, in New York, Elaine's, at Second Avenue and 88th Street, an Upper East Side eatery, is the habitat of the Metropolitan area's manuscript crowd.

My own modest efforts with the written word have somehow brought me into contact with people far more accomplished than I, such as Mario Pei, "The Story of Language," and Michael Stern, "An American in Rome," from whom I received valuable counsel and plenty of encouragement when I was seeking a publisher for my first book, "Rome, The Enchanted City." I also have had the privilege of shooting the breeze about our craft with Theodore White, "The Making of the President," and David Halberstam, "The Best and the Brightest."

Recently, I have had the chance to pick the brains of writers Zbigniew Brzezinski and Henry Kissinger. Way back in 1968, an article I wrote about William F. Buckley resulted in an enduring friendship with him. A few months ago the dis-linguistic columnist and award-winning novelist returned the favor by writing the foreword to my coming book, "The Tiger Ran Red."

To their task writers bring a variety of approaches, strategies, and regimens. Buckley explained as to how when he is getting ready to produce yet another book, he likes to haul himself off to his chalet in the Swiss Alps. The breathtaking scenery, mixed with a little skiing, is just the right formula, he finds, to get his writing juices going. A fast worker, Buckley sets aside the two hours from 5 to 7 p.m. for his writing. Buckley credits his speed with the pen to the training he got in a brutally demanding course during his undergrad days at Yale.

The course, "Daily Themes," called for the student to grind out a 500-to-600 word piece of prose every day, except Sunday, throughout a 16-week semester.

Halberstam told me, one afternoon over a ham sandwich, that he sets himself a goal of 1,500 words a day when he's working on a book. When he runs into the "Block," he takes a break and entertains his little daughter. This quickly lifts his mood and cures the "Block."

Jim Bishop's quota was 2,000 words per diem. He would get up with the chickens and head straight for his desk. If he proved to be particularly prolific, he reached 3,000 words by 11 in the morning, he would treat himself to the rest of the day off.

If 11 at night rolled around and found him still short of his goal, he would keep at plugging. This was how he chose to discipline himself.

From a recent chat with Bill Buckley, I learned that the most ambitious daily word total was that of the 19th century British novelist Anthony Trollope. He set himself the awesome task of 250 words every 15 minutes for 3 1/2 hours. If he had not at the end of 15 minutes reached the required 250 words Trollope would simply "speed up" the next quarter-hour because he was most determined to turn out 3,500 words per daily work session.

Carl Sandburg would work at his desk from 8 a.m. to noon, not a minute more, nor less.

Agatha Christie would spend whole afternoons lying on a couch telling her story into a cassette recorder. Afterwards her secretary would transcribe it and Christie would proofread and polish it.

Hemingway discovered that he was most productive by starting before the dawn's early light and, strangely, on his feet. He wrote standing up, on a board spanning two filing cabinets. When he sat down the words stopped coming.

Jersey writers Paul Kitch and Joe Frelinghuysen, co-authors of "Keep Your Heart Running," like to loosen up the thought processes before sitting down at their word processors via a vigorous jog over the rolling terrain around Fair Hills. Then after a light breakfast of health food, they're ready to deal with rhetoric.

While work schedules and word quotas vary considerably, there are a few points on which all writers can agree. For one, they all insist that one writes best about that which he knows best and about which he feels passionately.

"If you're not passionately interested in your subject," they say, "you can't possibly expect your reader to be." Pearl Buck never sought to write about life in China, nor did Steinbeck set his novels in the Orient, nor did Hemingway write about making quiche.

Most writers are also in accord on the necessity of a work area with an environment conducive to writing. Author of the definitive work on Sahityana and of a most enjoyable personal memoir, "Witness To Change," my old friend Father Richard Butler pecks at his aged typewriter surrounded by his beloved private library. A window looks by affords plenty of natural light and a lovely glimpse out over the campus where he teaches. A bookish ambience, good lighting, a window with a pleasant view are ingredients enthusiastically endorsed by the entire writing community.

Through my exchanges with other authors, I have developed my own eclectic approach to the craft. First of all, I am primarily a cold weather writer. For some reason, my muse beckons me more frequently from November to April. When "the weather outside is frightful," as the Christmas song goes, the idea of toiling at my desk is more appealing or at least less appalling to me. Incidentally, as I pen these very lines, a chill December rain is drenching my tiny hamlet of Kenilworth. When the temperatures climb and the winds of golf begin to blow, my fancy lightly turns to thoughts of greens and fairways. If I do any warm weather writing at all, it is at a table out on the patio, with bird-feeding and the green splash of the little backyard fountain as a musical background.

When I am taking on a new book, I get to my writing den in the corner of our family room as early as my teaching commitments allow. With the heat turned off I sit there, swathed in blankets, gazed in sweat-soaked and spent, heavy-knit, navy blue cardigan sweater. Flanking me are floor-to-ceiling bookcases housing a thousand volumes.

A thermos of black coffee, along with legal pads and felt pens by the score perch within easy reach. The dog cuddles snugly at my feet, classical music plays softly, softly on the radio. Complete silence distracts me.

I can tell quickly whether the muse is nearby or out of town. On the days when the words just seem to boycott me, I pack up early—as early as one hour later. But on those happy and mysterious occasions, when the adrenalin is pumping and the phrases and sentences are flooding the paper, I slip into it for all it's worth, putting in as much as a 10-hour shift, which brings me past midnight into the wee hours. Only calls-of-nature, or the need to get up to get a word off starvation, my wife brings in an occasional snack and more black coffee.

Other burdens that writers must shoulder in the hope of turning out quality pieces of lucid prose are those of proofreading and rewriting. The proofreading must be a time comb effort in order to catch and to purge the inescapable first draft bugs such as ambiguity, triviality, clichés, and poor transitions. There are also the inevitable stretches of wordiness, or clutter as William Zinser characterizes them, that must be trimmed. After these matters are dealt with, the second draft, then the third and fourth, and sometimes several more await. For the secret to effective writing, if there is one, lies in rewriting.

When Hemingway was asked why he rewrote the last page to "A Farewell To Arms" 39 times, he remarked drily: "To get the words right."

To be sure, the writer's life is no bed of roses. The writer needs, in fact, to be somewhat masochistic, willing to submit to mind-numbing labor and much pain, to the pain of loneliness, of rejection-slips-of-writer's block, of rewriting and rewriting and rewriting in the quest of creating a verbal masterpiece. But in the end it all proves worth it, for "the pain passes and the beauty remains."

Frank J. Korn of Kenilworth is a professor of English. He also is a feature writer for numerous magazines and newspapers, and the author of five books.

FRIENDS AND WRITERS — Writer Frank J. Korn, right, is seen with an old friend, novelist-columnist William F. Buckley. Buckley wrote the foreword to Korn's book, "The Tiger Ran Red," which is scheduled for release this summer.

"Zebra," by Jack DeJohnette, MCA Records. This turntable treat is one disc you'll enjoy playing more than once.

Besides leading the vision group Special Edition, DeJohnette is an integral member of Keith Jarrett's "Standards Trio." Over the course of three decades he has collaborated with such essential jazzmen as John Coltrane, Thelonious Monk, Sonny Rollins, Miles Davis, Pat Metheny, Carlos Santana, Dave Holland, Herbie Hancock, John Anderson and Bobby McFerrin.

Given DeJohnette's multi-disciplinary pursuits, his newest MCA recording, "Zebra," may yet raise a few eyebrows. A career first, this eclectic soundtrack recording focuses his enormous talents entirely on the synthesizer. "Zebra" is a 40-minute musical montage that mirrors the highly graphic portrayal of nature's beauty as it manifests in the zebra. This powerful, innovative recording concept focuses on the myriad of patterns as they relate to music and space. "I wanted to use this opportunity," explained DeJohnette, "to experiment with a variety of different sounds that are possible through the use of electronics."

"Zebra's" video director, Tadayuki Naito, sought out DeJohnette to score his 40-minute visual tape-piece of zebra life in the African habitat. Jack, who had recently collaborated with Pat Metheny on the music to Landford Wilson's "Lemon Sky," has long been interested in the creation of soundtracks. From his spontaneously improvised performances for "Lemon Sky," an American Playhouse production, he developed an immediate affinity for "Zebra."

The video alone inspired "Noro," the provocative title and finale which features the characteristic brilliance of trumpeter Lester Bowie.

The dynamic "Jongo" reflects the African landscape. While "Kpolesso" is a slow haunting piece punctuated by Bowie's tremolos, "Aho" uses a polyrhythmic series of drum sounds and a flute-like tone to evoke the African countryside.

DeJohnette designed "Zebra" to function both as a feature work and a visual accompaniment, synthesizing elements from different genres beyond the traditional norm.

Tickets can be purchased at the door at the time of the concert. Further information may be obtained by calling the Rev. Nancy E. Forsberg, series coordinator, at the church office at 688-4333.

His repertoire will include selections by J.S. Bach, Leo Sowerby, Roland Diggle and Alexander Guilmant, as well as an original composition of his own, The Statue of Liberty Grand Centennial March.

The Waits Madrigal Ensemble, a chamber choral group of unaccompanied voices, was organized in the spring of 1979 and derived its name from the local village street singers of Medieval England. The performance will feature songs from Early American and Elizabethan periods up to modern, culminating in Karolita Thompson's "Alleluia."

Under the direction of George Henderson, organist/music director of Our Lady of the Valley Church, West Orange, the group is composed of Marilyn Speck and Linda Babbly-Speck, Eric Rothman and Henderson, Ignor, Mark Lanpariello and Bill Amulson, basses.

DeJohnette designed "Zebra" to function both as a feature work and a visual accompaniment, synthesizing elements from different genres beyond the traditional norm.

Horoscope

For week of July 13 through July 28

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A small disagreement could arise with a friend or mate over money matters, but otherwise your social interests are highlighted this week. This would be an excellent time to throw a party. You may, however, be a bit impressionable where romance is concerned.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Some business developments are quite positive for you, but an element of deception means you should be guarded and disemotional about your interests. In addition, you will receive favorable legal news. Try not to be cantankerous with relatives.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Be less critical of your mate this week. This weekend you'll want to spend some time alone to study a new business proposition. Beware of signals which might get crossed this time regarding an upcoming trip. Match costs regarding travel.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You're in a romantic mood this week and should plan something special for that very special someone in your life. Enjoy yourself this week, but do not let distractions interfere with what needs to be done on the homefront and on the job.

LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22) Beware of situations which may be a bit fuzzy now about a career concern. A fan invitation is coming your way. A home matter is brought to a successful conclusion when a family member meets you halfway. Care credit use this week.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22) Shopping is favored this week, but be discerning. You may feel somewhat inhibited this week and may have trouble expressing your true feelings to a loved one. This is the time, though, to take a chance and express your creative talents.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Good legal news looms in your immediate future. Now is the time to get out and socialize — don't be inhibited on the social scene. Try not to dwell on the past. You have a strong desire to please others, but remember to be true to yourself.

Pageant applications accepted

The New Jersey state director for the Mrs. America Pageant has started accepting applications for the 1990 year. The nationally televised ABC Special is viewed by millions. The state winner will go on to compete for the Mrs. America Crown.

National prizes include cash, a mink coat, 1990 automobile, television and personal appearance contract.

Women interested in entering must be at least 18 years old, married one full year, a resident of New Jersey for six months and a United States citizen, it was announced.

Now in its 14th year, the Mrs. America Pageant was created to recognize the "one person most discriminated against in all major beauty competitions — America's married women. As the only pageant exclusively devoted to our country's 54 million wives, it serves as a showcase for many of America's most glamorous women and focuses national attention on the versatility of the contemporary American wife.

SHOWCASE OF HOMES

Adjustable mortgage is favored

A dramatic jump in the number of home buyers using adjustable rate mortgage loans or ARMs to finance home purchases is reported by Chicago Title and Trust Co., the nation's leading insurer of property titles.

The company's 13th annual survey of recent home buyers, which tracks home buying trends in leading metropolitan housing markets nationwide, reveals that the percentage of buyers choosing ARMs jumped from 19.8 percent in 1987 to 41.8 percent last year.

In a year in which the average home price nationally was rising from $133,410 to $145,500, the average mortgage down payment dropped from 27.2 percent to 24 percent of the purchase price. The average mortgage length was 28.5 years, or about what it has been in recent years, said John Pfister, Chicago Title vice president and manager of market research.

Pfister says a number of explanations have been advanced to explain the growing attraction of ARMs at this stage of the real estate cycle. The Chicago Title study suggests that economic considerations probably head the list.

The percentage of buyers opting for adjustable rates in New York City, the nation's most expensive housing market, was lower than the average for the nation as a whole. In New York City, the percentage was 38.9 percent compared with 45.5 percent in Detroit, 44.2 percent in Philadelphia and 44 percent in Atlanta.

While the number of first-time buyers choosing ARMs was significantly higher last year, the Chicago Title study reveals that repeat buyers are more likely to elect this option than those buying for the first time.

SHOWCASE OF HOMES

First-time owners can buy townhouses

Many first-time buyers have felt hopeless over their "homelessness" in northern New Jersey — having a difficult time trying to save enough money for a down payment, and then struggling to afford huge monthly mortgage and tax payments.

Now first-time buyers in our area can realize their dreams of having a luxurious and spacious place that they can call their own — at a price that they can live with.

KES Development Corp. of Roselle is proud to offer Amsterdam Place, their new townhome enclave in a quiet area of Roselle, suburban Union County. Unlike other renovated local apartments being sold as condos, these three-story, two-bedroom, one-and-a-half-bath condominium town-homes are ideal for first-time buyers searching to get into the market as a homeowner because of their very affordable price and the outstanding value offered for the money.

According to Kent Smith of KES Development, young first-time buyers have especially been drawn to Amsterdam Place because of its strategic location only fifteen miles from New York City and other employment centers of northern New Jersey — allowing for an easy commute to work via convenient New Jersey Transit trains, with stations in Roselle Park, Linden or Cranford, as well as via highways like the Garden State Parkway, New Jersey Turnpike, Routes 78, 22, 1 and 9. All of these important roadways are within five miles of Amsterdam Place.

In our region, first-time buyers traditionally have had to settle for something less than what they had hoped for just to enjoy a home of their own. Not so at Amsterdam Place, where residents will enjoy numerous luxurious features and amenities incorporated into their townhomes at no extra cost. These include fireplaces, pass-throughs from the country kitchen to the large living room/dining room combination; CCA-treated all-weather wood decks perfect for warm weather entertaining; garages; a lower level extra room ideal for finishing; well-appointed country kitchens with premium appliance package including refrigerator, range with outside vented hood and dishwasher; powder room adjacent to the kitchen and living room; and some exterior property to enjoy. For more information or to arrange a visit, you can call KES Development in Roselle at 245-0480.
