Community Update

No more pickups

As of June 15, the Township of Springfield will no longer pick up or be responsible for the disposal of grass clippings. Residents can make arrangements now for private removal or take the Township Committee's advice to "cut it and leave it."

Officials commended

Officials at the Rahway Valley Sewerage Authority have commended the township of Springfield for agreeing to perform repair work on the local sanitary sewers, which will result in significant dollar savings for Springfield residents. "By committing to these repairs, Springfield has demonstrated a willingness to maintain its own infrastructure, which will reduce costs for the township and improve the operations of RVSA," said Allan Chin of Westfield, RVSA chairman. Springfield is repairing a section of sewer line that is responsible for much of the township's excess flow, or the amount of waste water that is sent to RVSA from the township.

"We're basically catching up on maintaining a system that has been somewhat neglected," said Bruce Bergen, attorney for Springfield. "We've committed to additional work by July 1995 after this current repair is completed, and when that's finished, we will have significantly improved many of the system's serious problems." RVSA Vice Chairman Ralph DeVino, Springfield's representative to the authority, noted the savings to the township. "Each RVSA member town is charged for the amount of water they send to the plant. If a town exceeds its limits, it is charged accordingly," he said. "By repairing the leaks in the sewers, and reducing the amount of rainwater and other sources of groundwater that enter the system, we'll significantly reduce the amount of water we send, which will save money for the township, and ultimately the residents of Springfield."

RVSA's treatment facilities service more than 250,000 residents, as well as more than 2,500 industrial and commercial customers. Member municipalities are Clark, Cranford, Garwood, Kenilworth, Rahway, Roselle Park, Springfield, Westfield, and Woodbridge. The facilities also serve Winfield, Mountfield, and parts of Scotch Plains.

'Living End' is topic

Stanley Elkin's 1979 novel "The Living End" will be the focus of the next book discussion at the Springfield Public Library, June 7 in the children's room at 7:30 p.m. Although relatively unknown to the public, Elkin has published nine novels, five short story collections, and a collection of essays during the past 30 years. His work has won critical acclaim from fellow writers such as John Irving, John Updike and Paul Theroux.

Hamor, often black humor, appears in his writing and is prominent in "The Living End," a fantasy about the afterlife — in heaven and hell — of a liquor store owner and the thieves who hold him up. The discussion is free and open to the public. It is the last meeting of the 1993-94 year, but a new series will begin in the fall. Essentially, each of the participating school districts with facilities for

Committee postpones adoption of budget

By Mark Devaney
Staff Writer

The Township Committee postponed the adoption of its $15 million 1994 municipal budget Tuesday, after several residents approached the governing body and expressed their concerns about the spending plan.

Mayor Marcia Foman said the budget would be adopted on June 7. Several Springfield residents raised objections to many of the items appearing on the proposed budget, and based on their input, the budget still may undergo further deliberation. "Many of the things that were brought up by Mr. Berliner, Mr. Coan, and Mr. Niobart have got to be listened to and reviewed by the Township Committee before the budget is passed," said Commissioner Harry Pappas. To Pappas, the recommendations made by resident Paul Berliner were impressive.

Berliner, as well as the other citizens who spoke during the hearing, scrutinized each item in the budget, which was printed in the May 19 Leader. He discussed in great detail "where I see excess in the budget." The first area Berliner mentioned was the Rent Leveling Board. "I was one of the original founders of the Rent Leveling Board 22 years ago. I was president and secretary and I didn't get paid." He estimated that the board rarely meets these days and that most of its duties can now be performed by other committees, yet the board will cost taxpayers $7,500 this year. Berliner then asked, "Why do we need a Rent Leveling Board?"

Berliner's next target was the Group Health Insurance portion of the budget, which totals $1.5 million. He pointed out that a census of municipal employees should be taken to determine several factors. Such a study might yield cost saving information such as eligibility for Medicare instead of township coverage through Cigna, instances of spousal coverage, and cases in which employees may have a second job which also offers coverage.

Berliner also questioned the cost of a Planning Board, $25,000, and the salaries of part-time employees, $57,000. The latter is composed of a zoning inspector, an electrical inspector, and a plumbing inspector. "Can we not lower their salaries?" asked Berliner.

Residents target pool memberships

By Mark Devaney
Staff Writer

Springfield residents voiced their distress over the issuance of free memberships to the community pool during a budget meeting Tuesday.

Although comments were supposed to be restricted to the budget, the Township Committee entertained questions about the pool. The facility represents $207,500 worth of Springfield's expenditures. Several residents wondered if free passes and free memberships decreased the revenue generated from the pool.

Mayor Marcia Foman said, "There are very few who take advantage" of the free membership which is bestowed upon township employees. "They do not create any difficulty in the financing of the pool," she said.

Employees who were resident, Richard Coan, who claimed that part-time employees in Springfield have been receiving medical coverage, which includes some Township Committee members. Additionally, Coan requested a salary freeze and a hiring cap for public workers for the next three years. Most of the committee members showed their support for that idea.

Committee member Jo Ann Holmes added that eliminating "free rides is still not going to reduce the pool fee."

Resident Robert Hamilton was the first to express his dissatisfaction over the fact that he and other citizens have to pay the pool fee while others are granted free membership. Renee Berliner also voiced her opinion against free passes. "I don't need your free passes," she said. "I'm paying for someone else's past and I really resent it." Irving Niobart suggested that free memberships be limited to township employees who perform "critical care" functions within the community, rather than clerks or bookkeepers.

Committee member Herbert Slade reiterated the mayor's point that the pool did not affect the budget significantly. "It's not an anxiety problem. It's a point of view problem," said Slade.

But Coan's main point involved the increase in taxes for Springfield in 1992. "A 17 point increase in the rate is a lot of money, particularly for citizens on fixed income." All those who attended wanted an explanation for what they perceived to be a drastic tax hike.

Committee member Jeffrey Katz reminded the audience that in 1991, due to a state decision involving surp-plus funds, Springfield residents enjoyed a 21 point tax reduction. Now citizens are paying the price for that massive tax break, he said.

Pappas explained that as soon as the mayor's office, he had asked of the town's accountants, "How many towns will the mandatory increase be over the next 3 years?" Their answer, 45 points. It was then decided by the

Township pays tribute to nation's fallen heroes

By Gloria Smith
Correspondent

Ever since the centennial, Harvey Briggs has been celebrating Memorial Day in Springfield following a tradition established by his family. Springfield takes pride in celebrating Memorial Day since this was the site of the "Battle of Springfield," where Colonists and the army of General George Washington defended the town from the British and the Hessian Troops. Many of those fallen are still buried in the town cemeteries.

"I was first a CD man and then I became a volunteer firefighter," said war veteran Briggs, 76, who has been taking an active part in Springfield's Memorial Day celebrations since 1950. Briggs is a member of one of the oldest families in Springfield, the second to arrive here from Newark and Irvington. Like Briggs, others were present among hundreds, including Captain Ethel Smith, a nurse during WWII, and Herb Quinton, a member of the Coast Guard in World War II.

Springfield paid tribute to its fallen heroes Monday during Memorial Day ceremonies along Mountain Avenue. The township honored veterans from every war including World War I, World War II, Korean War, Viet Nam War, Persian Gulf War and other conflicts, in which "American soldiers have volunteered or have been called to serve. Parade volunteer Ronnie Swin told Boys Scout Troop 73, "C'mon, boys, clap when you see these veterans. You could have been marching in Hitler's goose-step if it weren't for them."

Memorial Day ceremonies took place at the newly established Veterans Memorial Park, located on Mountain Avenue and Shippicke Road, with a 21-gun salute to fallen heroes, the signing of the day, by Chris Treglio, a local high school graduate from Jonathan Dayton High School. Parents and their children, young and old, holding American flags stood by to watch as the Emerald Society's marching band gave start to the parade, which stretched along Mountain Avenue from Edward V.

Walters School to the municipal building. Marchers represented the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the American Legion, Vietnam veterans, members of the V.F.W., volunteer and career Fire Department, Jewish War Veterans, Little League, and the Boy Scouts.

The Memorial Day celebration came on the heels of the town's most elaborate 200th anniversary celebration just two weeks ago. Captain Marcel Campion, volunteer firefighter and president of the Volunteer Fire Department, said "that was a big bash. Today we're having a link-back." The ladies from the Senior Citizens Group backed Campion's claim. They were still reminiscing about the munitions that came with their brilliant and colorful costumes. Faith Geitz, Helen Kleinwagner and Ruth Lang were all long year the real or catch the fun.

The parade concluded with a wreath laying ceremony on the grounds of the municipal building, where Mayor Marcia Foman led both celebrations. "Two weeks ago, we celebrated Springfield's 200th anniversary. We extend that tribute to all who have fought for our country." Resident Michelle Duetkin and her two children, Rachel, 7, and Sunny, 11/12, said she always brings her children to Memorial Day celebrations to remind them that many people gave up their lives so the nation could live free.

Local school board targets dissolution study

By Mark Devaney
Staff Writer

The Springfield Board of Education is in the process of studying the findings of a Deloitte & Touche report detailing the financial and educational feasibility of Springfield operating its own Pre-K to 12 school district.

The report was commissioned by five of the towns comprising the regional high school district, and year long research findings present several scenarios in the existing educational structure. Essentially, each of the participating school districts with facilities for high schools will become autonomous and the existing regional school board system will be dissolved. Springfield students would attend Jonathan Dayton High School, Berkeley Heights students would attend Delaware & Torchio Livingston High School, Clark students would attend Arthur L. Johnson High School, and Kenilworth students would return to David Brentley High School.

The two municipalities without facilities, Mountbarnie and Garwood, would have to choose from the many options Deloitte & Touche has presented. Mountbarnie would send its students to Governor Livingston, while Garwood has not yet indicated its decision.

A feasibility study was commissioned by Springfield based on a preliminary report by Deloitte & Touche indicating that the district's educational programs could be enhanced without additional expenditures. Ruth Britton, vice president of the board and chairperson of the board committee overseeing the study, said, "The feasibility study shows significant educational advantages, one of which is the increased articulation between the middle and high school and the continuation of the innovative programs established in the elementary district."

Britton elaborated upon the issue of articulation and said, "Our administrators and teachers work hard to develop and evaluate curricula that meet the educational needs of our children and the expectations of our community. While attempts have been made at articulation with the regional high school, our students have been limited by the educational programs available at the high school level."

Britton spoke for all Springfield Board of Education members when she expressed the concerted wish for dissolution. "The regional high school provides adequate education for its students. Springfield has always been supportive and proud of the education in its K-8 district. The community expects and demands from the local board that it provide an excellent education."

Deloitte & Touche has enumerated the following items its advantages in its report: The Springfield community can customize the educational program to suit the needs of the resident

St. James student takes first in poster contest

By Dennis McCarthy Managing Editor

Springfield's Saint James Catholic School keeps on ranking out the winners in Sony Electronics' Cop's annual "Earth Day Can Make a Difference" poster contest.

Sixth-grader Jessica Hartmann is the 1994 first-place winner of the national competition with her suggestions to "plant a tree, conserve energy, clean up" and "walk" instead of driving in your car.

Last year, St. James sixth-grader Jennifer Saracino received honorable mention in the contest, which allows competition in two age groups.

Hartmann said she would like to see the world's first living with her artwork: "I would want to keep it a part of my life because it may take me some time," she said.

Correction: An article titled "Council approves $6.5M spending plan" in the May 19 edition of the Echo should have stated that Democratic Club President Louis Thomas objected $359,000 group insurance plan for municipal employees.

County college marks graduation with theme of 60th anniversary

Using a 60th anniversary theme as a backdrop, Thomas H. Brown, president of Union County College, urged some 1,000 graduates May 26 at the college's commencement ceremonies to "remember all those who cared and continue to care" and carry over a similar commitment to UCC as they pursue new endeavors.

"Anniversaries link the past and the future," Brown said in his keynote address, noting that this year's commencement has special significance because it marks the college's diamond jubilee.

He cited the development of the Cooperative Program in Professional Nursing with Elizabeth General Medical Center School of Nursing and the Mountbatten Regional Medical Center School of Nursing as examples of the college's commitment to service.

"Today, Union County and its half-million residents have been greatly enriched by those who launched their educational careers at Union County College," said Brown.

He reminded all the graduates of their obligation to support the college in appropriate ways, including making annual contributions to the Annual Giving Campaign, and to remember those who cared and continue to care.

Post Office settles with Union Post

By Tom Canavan Editor in Chief
Despite two decisions to revoke the second-class mailing permit of the Union Post and evidence that the Post misrepresented its circulation figures in an attempt to secure those privileges, an attorney for the U.S. Postal Service agreed to allow the publication to keep its second-class mailing privileges.

Top athletes

Governor Livingston Regional High School students Alyssa Polychronopoulos and D. Ryan Smith were honored as the outstanding Scholar-Athletes at the school for 1993-94 during the Union County Interscholastic Athletic Conference's 17th annual scholar-athlete dinner.

HUD seeks to reaffirm goal of home ownership
The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development is seeking to reaffirm the goal of home ownership by making the Federal Housing Administration's single-family mortgage insurance program more accessible and available according to Nicholas P. Restina, HUD's assistant secretary for housing and the FHA commissioner during a forum at the National Association of Realtors' Midyear Legislative Conference and Trade Exposition. More than 6,000 realtors and guests including Myles J. Hergen, president of the Greater Eastern Union County Board of Realtors attended the conference from April 22 to 27.
