Jack Goldman, co-owner of the Columbia Lumber property, unveils his new proposals for developing the land, while his architect addresses the Planning Board last week. The Columbia Lumber plans, which had included construction of a five-story building, were revised to feature several smaller buildings instead. Albert Court resident Hy Kuperstein looks on.

Residents voice complaints

By Jay Hochberg
Managing Editor

Dozens of residents of the streets near the Bojczek Stone property turned out to voice their opposition to what they said was the township's decision to build the majority of new housing units in their backyard.

While more than half of the nearly four-hour meeting was devoted to public input, fewer than a dozen had time to speak due to the length of some speakers' comments.

Delivering a seven-page speech, Martin Sherman, of 23 South Derby Road, blasted the Planning Board for what he perceived to be its indifference regarding the plight of those who live in the southwest portion of the township.

"The plan is supposed to be a Springfield Fair Share Plan, so that the town does its fair share," Sherman said. "But the only ones affected are the residents of South Derby Road, North Derby Road, Lehigh Avenue, Ann Place, Becker Road, Lyon Drive and Essex Road."

Sherman went on to question the Planning Board's decision to both change from the plan the swim club property, which just happens to be seen choice properties in town, and to change the Bojczek Stone land for development as a housing site, despite its economic unviability.

Subsequent speakers, saying they did not want to reiterate Sherman's points, continued to address the board with similar grievances.

"All my life I've lived in the dollar in the pocket. This town is not the same as when I grew up," said Barbara Wall of 37 South Derby Road, a Springfield resident of 43 years. "People are moving out of this town, not in."

Expressing his concern regarding Becker Road, Wall asked the Planning Board to offer a written guarantee that the small street would not be opened to through traffic.

"I really hope we're not wasting time playing games when you know what will be done anyway," she added. "If our questions aren't answered, it's going to get worse before it gets better."

Other residents said the already congested roads surrounding the Bojczek Stone land will become more dangerous for neighborhood children.

One resident of North Derby Road, who claimed to have gathered signatures on a petition to stop development of Bojczek Stone, said she feared her daughter would be run over by a car.

Debbie Schulman of 184 Lehigh Ave. said she too was afraid to let her children play outside.

"You don't care about what happens in our neighborhood," she added, complaining about what she said was the local government's reluctance to spread the planned housing units across the township.

New Columbia plan unveiled at meeting

By Jay Hochberg
Managing Editor

The dead came back to life last week when the Planning Board convened to discuss its options for meeting Springfield's affordable housing requirements.

Recently deleted from the Fair Share Housing Plan, the Columbia Lumber site was again added to the list of tracts the Planning Board will recommend for development as low- and moderate-income housing.

The addition will be balanced by the elimination of seven units that were to be included in a Regional Contributions Agreement with a nearby community, possibly Elizabeth or Plainfield.

Jack Goldman, co-owner of the property, addressed the board to propose modifications of his original plan. Saying that he — as a resident of Springfield — understood the township's reluctance to allow the construction of five-story buildings, Goldman presented a complete change of plan for the location.

"We are proposing to build 75 units of which 15 would be set aside for low- and moderate-income housing," he said, as his architect displayed the conceptual site plans of what would become Columbia Commons.

"This would be accomplished in three buildings of three stories each," he added. "That mix would consist of efficiencies, one, two and three-bedroom apartments, and the project would be built within the framework of Springfield's existing multi-family residential zone."

"We know that this project makes economical sense for us as owners, as well as helping the town meet its COAH (Commission on Affordable Housing) obligations," he continued. "Not to mention that it will turn a non-productive vacant piece of land into a tax raffle for the town."

Regarding other points critical to its acceptance as a suitable building site, Goldman and his architect told the board that any flood waters on the property would be contained in crawl spaces beneath the structures.

The site's location in a flood plain was considered a constraint to development, according to the Housing Element and Fair Share Plan.

To accommodate tenant parking, Goldman and his architect assured the board that between 131-141 parking spaces would be built.

Goldman's proposals, provoked mixed reactions among Planning Board members.

"Sooner or later, the court will step in if we're not having a family," said Rebecca Abbott-Douglas, the attorney who works with the Planning Board on COAH-related matters. "We have to be mindful that we can't keep ignoring the court's deadline because we come up with new ideas."

Echoing similar sentiments, Deputy Mayor Herbert Stone said he was against re-revising Columbia Commons to the Fair Share Housing Plan for fear of "spinning a can of worms."

"I can't see any reason to delay implementing the plan in its current form," he added. "Market forces will decide" Springfield's future housing construction.

Following Goldman's lead, a representative of the swim club property also recently deleted from the plan, addressed the board to propose that his tract be reinstated.

Saying that his original proposal to construct a five-story building on top of a two-level subterranean garage would be replaced with new plans for several shorter buildings, the representative asked the Planning Board to include his land in its final recommendations to the Township Committee.

Donors needed for blood supplies

By Cynthia Gordon
Staff Writer

Due to a national shortage of donors, blood supplies in New Jersey have reached a level considered by medical professionals to be dangerously low.

"We were unable to import blood from other states at the end of December and through most of January," said Judy Knecht, spokesperson for the North Jersey Blood Center. "We have to make do with what we can collect from the state."

The North Jersey Blood Center usually receives blood from across the country and distributes it to local area hospitals as it is needed.

"The amount of donors has been falling for the past few years. It's starting to pick up, but we're not getting what we should be," she said. Knecht attributed the drought to several causes.

"People don't donate as much during the holiday season," she said. "A lot of people have colds and flu during this season."

"The colleges are on winter break, and they don't gear up for blood drives until mid-January," she added. "Plus the high schools aren't running blood drives at this time."

Corporate restructuring is another factor at play in the blood drought, according to Maryann Wojcicki, manager of Blood Donor Services at Overlook Hospital.

"The blood centers rely on corporate donation sites," she said. "Because the companies are downsizing, the staff that remain can't leave as easily to donate blood."

To combat the situation, Wojcicki said, "We're trying to encourage employees to donate. We are also recruiting people who have donated within the past. We would love to have more donors."

President's Day lesson reflects new style of teaching history

By Cynthia B. Gordon
Staff Writer

While Union County children study the lives of George Washington and Abraham Lincoln, the lessons they are being taught this Presidents' Day season differ from those of the past.

"What we're doing is celebrating the entire month — Black History Month — along with the presidents' birthdays," said Principal Kenneth Bernabe of the Caldwell School in Springfield.

"We've had the students recognize the accomplishments of famous black Americans and the presidents through writings and compositions," he said.

According to Bernabe, teachings have changed directions in that leadership qualities of the presidents, rather than their personalities, are now emphasized.

"They are the pillars of American democracy because of their leadership," Bernabe continued. "We're trying to get more away from the personality, and teach kids why they are revered as they are. Today we are learning up close to find leaders. We are teaching the kids to look back into history to find out what a leader is."

Caldwell School second-grade teacher Joan Scelfo said, "We tie Lincoln into Martin Luther King Jr. because they have very similar philosophies. Lincoln didn't like to use war to achieve goals, and Martin Luther King Jr. felt the same way. They were both peaceful men."

"We try to give the children a little biography of the presidents and bring out the good qualities," she added.

Some of the people the children learn about are Martin Luther King Jr., George Washington, Carter, and Harriet Tubman among others in American history.

Bernabe also noted that they have timely displays throughout the school. In the library, there is a display about the presidents and famous black Americans.

"What is featured on in the library complements the classrooms," he added.

Highlighting is Caldwell School librarian Mary Ann Greulich, "the library is complementing with displays of Washington and Lincoln as well as famous black Americans."

"Students can ask questions and discover them," she said. "We're stressing that they were leaders, and what qualities make a leader."

"We don't talk about the myths really at all," she continued. "We highlight the important things that."

Regional to adjust for $800K cut in state aid

By Tom Canavan
Editor in Chief

When the Regional High School Board of Education voted its first budget session Monday night, members were forced to look at the spending plan as if they were to receive more than $800,000 less in state aid than they anticipated for the 1995-96 school year.

The Union County Regional High School District was one of some 70 school districts throughout the state whose state aid was reduced because they were charged with having excessive administrative costs.

The reduction in state aid is a way to penalize districts that have spent 30 percent above the average of administrative costs, as specified in Gov. Christine Whitman's budget message.

5-year-old makes motion picture acting debut

By Cynthia Gordon
Staff Writer

They say in Hollywood it's not what you know, it's who you know.

For five-year-old actor Ben Preston that holds especially true, because he's been able to fill in his Rolodex before he's even had a chance to learn the telephone numbers.

According to Susan Preston, Ben's mother, "It was a complete surprise."

A friend of hers, who works at a movie studio, had come to visit during the weekend, she explained. The friend saw Ben and thought he would be perfect for the film.

Ben's photograph was sent to the studio, where, according to Preston, "40 to 50 other children's photographs were submitted to the studio."

Six weeks later the Preston received a call saying that Ben was one of six children selected to audition for the role.

Ben's father, Daniel Preston, is a local doctor.

Five-year-old actor Ben Preston takes live with Robert Sean Leonard and Marcia Gay Harden. The three appear in the movie 'Safe Passage,' the story of a family bonding while waiting for news of a brother missing in the Persian Gulf War.

Augustine sponsors wheelchair protection law

The Assembly Commerce and Regulated Professions Committee released a bill sponsored by Assemblyman Alan M. Augustine that would ensure that the rights, safety and pocketbooks of consumers who purchase motorized wheelchairs are protected.

The legislation, bill A-460, would require manufacturers to provide consumers with a minimum one-year express warranty on any motorized wheelchair, accessory or motorized scooter furnished to consumers.

"While we live in an age where consumer protection laws accompany commerce at virtually every step, no such legal safeguards are in place for the purchase and use of motorized wheelchairs and associated devices," Augustine said. "Yet, because this equipment serves a vital public health function in enabling people with disabilities or temporary infirmities to have mobility, regulation is undeniably needed."

DiFrancesco supports budget amendment

Senate President Donald T. DiFrancesco, R-Union, is urging the United States Senate to move quickly to pass the proposed balanced budget amendment to the U.S. Constitution, and said New Jersey will be ready to be the first state to ratify the amendment.

In announcing the introduction of a state Senate concurrent resolution on Feb. 6, to ratify the federal proposal, DiFrancesco said, "New Jersey has been a national leader on a number of fiscal issues, including cutting taxes, so it is appropriate that we lead the way in ratifying an amendment that would require the federal government to balance their budget."

"In fact, I am fully prepared to schedule a session for the purpose of voting immediately following the U.S. Senate's passage of the balanced budget amendment," he added.

"We will, of course, be carefully watching the Senate action on this measure so that we can be certain of the exact language. However, I am confident that the final amendment passed by Congress will be from New Jersey's fiscal interests," he continued.

The Senate resolution provides for the ratification of the proposed amendment to require that the federal budget shall be balanced, except under certain circumstances, such as a "serious military threat to national security."

The major components of the bill would provide:

- Minimum one-year warranty protection to consumers on the purchase of any motorized wheelchair, whether obtained directly from the manufacturer or a dealer, such protection would be provided automatically even if the manufacturer, who would then be subject to penalty, fails to provide the required coverage.
- Legal recourse for consumers for any abridgment of the warranty and associated protection. The bill provides for the right of consumers to seek civil damages through private action or to bring their grievances to an informal dispute resolution process similar to that now provided under the state's new car "lemon law."
- A prohibition on the reselling or releasing of motorized wheelchairs that have been returned because of nonconformity to the warranty, unless full disclosure of the reasons for return is made to the prospective buyer or lessee.
- A requirement that the manufacturer or authorized dealer repair any defect or mechanical problem in the wheelchair during the minimum one-year warranty period. Failure to correct the problem in accordance with the warranty would entitle the consumer to a replacement motorized wheelchair or a full cash refund plus reimbursement of associated finance charges incurred by the consumer. Such vehicles range in price from $3,000 to $13,000.

A motorized wheelchair represents independence to many disabled people who might otherwise be confined or limited in mobility without them," Augustine said. "That's why it's vital that the law provide the fullest protection possible to consumers and ensure that the large expenditure made for such a purchase comes with peace of mind for those who rely on this equipment."

LET THE BIBLE SPEAK
1 Pet. 4:11

Our Purpose is to introduce readers to the one true New Testament church.

Jesus said, "I will build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." (Matt. 16:18)

The first church was established at Jerusalem AD. 33 (Acts 2:42, Col. 1:18, Rom. 16:25)

For example, ask yourself these questions:

- Who established my Church, Christ or Man?
- Where was my church established? Was it in Jerusalem or some other place?
- When was my church established? If it was after AD 33, it cannot be the true church.
- Finally, ask yourself what "name" does my church wear? If it is not the name of Christ how can it belong to Christ?

You can continue, however there is enough to help you see whether your church is of Christ or man. I believe you can see the difference if you have an open and receptive heart, and are seeking God.

In an effort to teach the profound truth from the word of God, we are offering a Free Bible Correspondence Course, and/or Basic Bible Studies at your convenience.

If you have a Bible question, please call (908) 964-6356.

Dumb and dumber, Springfield style

It shouldn't really be a surprise anymore, but politically correct people entrenched in the education establishment have won again — most recently in Springfield.

The Board of Education recently approved a new "multicultural" curriculum that, according to its goals, would use Springfield's children as "agents of social change" in their efforts at social engineering.

That such a proposal would be approved by a body that has no racial diversity is amusing in a whimsical way, but it is not the job of the Board of Education to entertain. Its function is to approve curricula that maintains the standards of excellence that have been the trademarks of the Springfield school system.

In this case, they've blown it.

The curriculum is designed for grades kindergarten to eight, but the authors also have taken the liberty of preparing for a time when they might be the governing body of Jonathan Dayton High School.

Their curriculum is titled "Guidelines for Education that is Multicultural." Again, the politically correct crowd has determined that only they have the moral and intellectual authority to define culture.

As they would like it, America is populated by many different peoples; at least the GEM curriculum points that out.

What is conspicuously absent in the curriculum is any mention of one American people — united by culture, among other forces.

Now, why would such a position be so alien to the authors of GEM? Isn't culture by its very nature already "multicultural?"

Open a dictionary of the English language and you may notice the thousands of words rooted in foreign languages.

American political thought is as based on Greek, Roman, British and French philosophies as it is on the Founding Fathers.

Is it the position of the Springfield Board of Education that America has no identifiable culture?

Among the gems of the GEM program are:

- Teaching that "there is strength in diversity" not unity.
- Redesigning "curricula to help all students acquire... a language variety."
- Analyzing "the concept of individualism in the context of race and ethnicity in the United States."
- Using the media as a source of educational materials.
- Establishing discriminatory policies to "recruit, hire, and retain racially/ethnically balanced school staff."

At a time when discussion of dumping affirmative action and other quota systems has become louder — even reaching Congress — should Springfield spend its money to perpetuate it, especially to employ teachers largely on the basis of their ethnicity, sexuality, etc.?

The GEM curricula also seeks to "enable students... to make appropriate responses" regarding sexual orientation.

What educational materials will be purchased with tax dollars to teach this aspect? What will happen to the student who rejects that re-education, based on religious beliefs or family values?

What is most insulting is the Board of Education's assumption that, for example, a Korean-American girl, who has been raised on a steady diet of Pizza Hut, MTV, teeny-bopper magazines and the like, shares more in common with her counterparts in Asia than she does with the boys and girls seated around her.

Insults of that variety quickly can become dangerous when that girl starts to believe the propaganda, joins others who have similar physical features, and asks that they receive special considerations and protections from society.

"Oh, I'm sorry," a student might argue, "but I don't see the point in studying the language of your ethnic, oppressive, scary" because I'm different from you people."

Sounds far fetched? That attitude has diminished class course on college campuses in recent years.

That phenomenon has been called the "Balkanization" of America, as it subjugates the rights of the individual to the demands of special interest groups. It is an effort on the part of government to divide and conquer the American citizenry by meting special considerations and protections to groups on the basis of their race, ethnicity, sexuality, etc.

For every minute our children are being politically re-educated, they are being robbed of time that should be spent on reading, writing and arithmetic. Does anybody remember that shift?

Generations ago, children learned syntax and other aspects of grammar by diagramming sentences. As that practice was swept aside, American children became more illiterate, and that unfortunate trend continues today as graduating classes include 18-year-olds who can barely complete the job application forms for the dead-end jobs to which they're limited.

Study after study on the progress of American students, as compared to those of other countries, reflect their shortcomings in mathematics and the sciences. The situation has reached the point where junior high school students in the United States rank below their peers in several Third World nations.

Is this the kind of diversity sought by our educators?

The economic burst that afforded busy boomers the luxuries of a suburban way of life was due in large part to the successes of an educated workforce. When experiments like GEM perpetuate the dumbing of America, the decline in the standard of living surely will follow.

Why must our children be subjected to one social experiment after another? And more importantly, why is the Board of Education rubber-stamping its approval of such proposals?

Have we all forgotten the failure of "new math?"

ACCIDENT AVENUES — Debris from an automobile accident on Jan. 5 remained curbside in front of 810 South Springfield Ave. Monday afternoon. The accident, involving two drivers from Westfield, occurred when one car was struck from behind while changing lanes on South Springfield Avenue where it intersects with Hillside Avenue. No injuries were reported. This collision was cited by a resident, speaking during last week's Planning Board meeting, as an example of the dangers heavy automobile traffic poses to neighborhood children.

The Fair Share Plan is anything but fair

The Township of Springfield's Housing, Elements and Fair Share Plans is unfair to the residents. It is expensive to help.

The plan is supposed to ensure that the town does its fair share. But the only residents affected are those of South Derby Road, North Derby Road, Lelak Avenue, Ann Place, Becker Road, Lynn Drive and Essex Road. Everyone in other areas has been shielded from their fair share.

Park Place — The current residents don't get it, unless they vote for it: a residential area off Tree Top Drive which is uniquely situated for development. It will never be needed for a school. It hasn't even been known for the last 50 years! As school property it has to have access for buses, parking, cars, and large numbers of people.

The Planning Board has been acting arbitrarily.

Two years ago, a street was found to be unacceptably because of "major access" limitations and "surrounding land uses."

Be Our Guest

By Marlin Sherman

That tract is the Bojczek Stone land. Nothing physically has changed, but now the unacceptable tract is not only acceptable, but it is the biggest in the whole fair share plan.

The 2022 plan was completed by David Zimmerman. Two years later, there is a new expert and the original expert's opinion is disregarded with no good reason given. Nothing has changed on the Bojczek property.

Independent of David Zimmerman and "independent" Robert A. Michaels, the fact remains that the Bojczek property is not appropriate for 7,000 new residents.

Just what is an "unacceptable" traffic situation on top of our present tract? How will a resident of this tract drive to get onto Route 22 East? The "independent" report from Mountainville Avenue to Hillside Avenue in Ann Place on Lelak Avenue to Becker Road and Lynn Drive to Essex Road.

Those who completely block the Lelak Avenue and North and South Derby Road residents will avoid the "major light."

Isn't it time that the mothers with carriages and the teen-ies in wagons and on bikes with training wheels stop dogging the speedy, reckless, drivers who take short cuts through traffic?

Pine View Gardens residents can't get out of their driveways as it is now. If this project is allowed to proceed, Pine View residents will never get out.

At the first meeting there was such a big protest that we could not fit into the Municipal Building. People from all over town were concerned that the project was going to be an "unacceptable" traffic situation on top of our present tract. How will a resident of this tract drive to get onto Route 22 East? The "independent" report from Mountainville Avenue to Hillside Avenue in Ann Place on Lelak Avenue to Becker Road and Lynn Drive to Essex Road.

Test your knowledge of popular culture

The 1990s are a difficult time in which to be growing up, if today's youth can in fact be accused of making the attempt. But it is an even more difficult time in which to be an adult, and particularly a parent.

It is extremely challenging to stay abreast of, and to understand the changes taking place in society. Popular culture continues a cast of characters, which is a mix of the old, though not necessarily the familiar, and the new. Rites are constantly changing. Keeping up is no easy task.

So, to assist each of us in determining how attuned we are to the events and attitudes of the day, I offer the following cultural quiz. See how well you understand the events, people and trends which are shaping America today. This is a quiz the whole family can take, and then rank on each other based on the results. But no cheating allowed!

1. It is not permissible to make fun of which of the following:

- men
- women
- lawyers
- circusclowns

2. Ragga music was made popular by Rastafarians, who style their hair in dreadlocks and worship the deceased emperor of Ethiopia. This is:

Nothing Personal

- Who?

Answers are as follows: 1) b, but this was so easy it doesn't count. 2) d; 3) a; 4) d; 5) e; 6) b; 7) c; 8) d; 9) d; 10) because everyone should learn to swim. 10) c, but who gives a hoot? 11) c, as long as references have been checked.

So, how'd you do? Ratings are as follows:

Nine to 10 correct — Get a life, you've obviously spent too much time reading the papers.

Six to eight correct — I bet most of you in this category are under 21.

Three to five correct — Probably about right for the average, well-adjusted adult.

Zero to two correct — So, what made you crawl out from under the rock to read this newspaper?

Letters to the editor

Shakespeare was right about lawyers

To the Editor:

A bill for legal services from the recently filed law firm of Lam, Dantz, Dranco, Posinar & Kleinberg has hit our taxpayers to the tune of $6,735. This amount actually was the firm determined Springfield in a lawsuit filed by Gregory Spiegel and a John Dize of the Springfield Democratic Party, which Township Attorney Bruce Berger handled for many years.

Who will pay the bill for this unexpected expenditure? Clearly the Township of Springfield must foot the bill at this point in time, but with any of the Democrats on the Township Committee go on the record stating that the case should be decided in favor of Springfield, and that the legal fee be paid by the plaintiffs?

The plaintiffs are Gregory Spiegel and John Dize of the Springfield Democratic Party, which Township Attorney Bruce Berger handled for many years.

Ciba-Geigy announces appointments

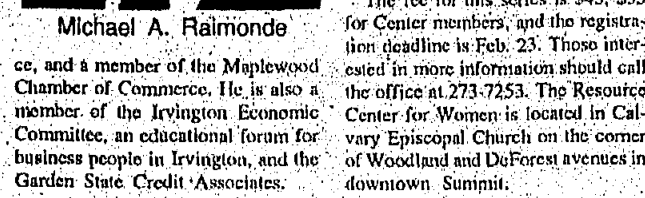

California Health Care Institute, a statewide public policy research and advocacy group representing California's leading academic medical research, biotechnology, pharmaceutical and medical device organizations, appointed David L. Gollagher, Ph.D., as president and CEO at its January board meeting. Also, moving to broaden its representation of the biopharmaceutical industry, the CHI board elected two new directors: Douglas C. Watson, president, Pharmaceuticals Division, Ciba-Geigy Corp., headquartered in Ardley, N.Y., and George A. Schangas, O.D., president, Mikes Biotechnology. Dr. Charles C. Edwards, who served as CHI's first president since the organization was founded in 1993, will continue to play an active role on CHI's board of directors. In particular, Edwards, a former FDA consultant and immediate past president of the Scripps Institution of Medicine and Science, will help direct CHI's efforts in Washington to reform the FDA. "We established CHI off to a terrific start," said C. Kirk Raab, CHI's chairman and CEO of Genentech Inc. in San Francisco. "And by recruiting David Gollagher into the institute, he did his best to ensure its future success. Dr. Gollagher's experience in academia, business and medicine connects with CHI's diverse membership. In the course of the past year, he has built a first-class organization, and management positions for Ciba-Geigy Ltd. in Switzerland and the United Kingdom before joining the U.S. Pharmaceutical Division in 1991 as a senior vice president, Planning and Administration. Currently, Watson serves as chairman of the Pharmaceuticals Management Committee and is a member of Ciba's board of directors. Schangas has been president of Mikes Biotechnology, based in Berkeley, Calif., since its inception in October 1993. Prior to that he was senior vice president of Research for Mikes Pharmaceutical Division, head of Biochemistry for Mikes, president of Mikes AG of Germany, and a principal staff scientist and vice president of Research at Mikes' sister company, Molecular Therapeutics Inc. Prior to joining Mikes, Schangas was instructor of biology at Johns Hopkins University of Massachusetts and completed a fellowship at Yale University. CHI is an organization for those in the biotechnology, medical device and pharmaceutical industries, as well as public and private research institutions, to come together to advance responsible public policies. By working closely with policy makers in Washington, D.C., and Sacramento, CHI's 85 members hope to foster an environment that encourages scientific discovery and the development of new medical technologies that benefit society.

Donor liver sought for ailing area resident

More than the discomfort, pain and fear, the heaviest burden former Roselle resident Susan Krakowicki carries with her is watching the days go by without a telephone call from her hospital in Chicago. Krakowicki suffers from late-stage hepatitis C. The call she is waiting for is one that could save her from the most deadly of the six known strains of the hepatitis virus. Her doctors diagnosed Krakowicki, 40, about three years ago. Five years after she and her husband—husband, Leo, son, Michael, and two daughters, Lisa and Susan—had moved from Roselle to Scotch Plains, Krakowicki said she had experienced years of increasingly unbearable bouts of illness and fatigue. "Many people I know were always stressed and tired" from dealing with the ins and outs of everyday life, "so I never thought my fatigue was any different." "It was diagnosed in 1991," and after the biopsy in October was positive, his gastroenterologist, Dr. William Sloan of West Orange prescribed interferon for five months, Krakowicki said. "I got lucky results and I got sicker. At that time they thought with interferon they could stop it from progressing. Now they think it is a lifelong thing." She said the diagnosis hit her hard, and since then she has been a constant for her and her family, facing the reality of the disease and the uncertain course of treatment that lies ahead. Krakowicki was the office manager for a doctor's office in Roselle Park until her illness forced her to leave a year and a half ago. It is not believed that she contracted the virus at the office, since she had only minimal exposure to blood samples there, she said. The hepatitis virus is blood-borne and is transmitted in much the same ways that AIDS is. It attacks the liver, the center of the body's immune system. Patients, as a result, often are susceptible to other contagious diseases and have to monitor their protein levels. Her doctors believe Krakowicki has had 20 years in her system for the hepatitis virus. After moving across the county, the Krakowickis have remained active in Roselle as parishioners of St. Joseph the Carpenter Church and with the Knights of Columbus, where Leo has been a member for more than 20 years. Those connections to friends have been a support emotionally and financially, she said. The Knights have set a goal of raising $30,000 for the cause through such events as a recent roast beef dinner held at a nearby Knights hall in Linden. The Roselle Council raised more than $7,000 at that event from ticket sales and donations. Another organization — one formed by family members and friends — the Friends of Susan, has also raised several thousand dollars through events such as a boat-a-thon held at Clark Lakes, and members said that more events are in the works. A friend and former co-worker of Krakowicki's, Roselle resident Elaine Grasso, got the fundraising effort going by investigating options for such things as tax-exempt status and raising the bowl-toss with her daughter, Patty, Grasso's search for help with the American Liver Foundation, located in Cedar Grove. Through Grasso's efforts, the organization has set up a tax-exempt account in Krakowicki's name from which 100 percent of donations will go to her cause. The Friends has scheduled another event in conjunction with the New Jersey Devils. Tickets are being sold to the Devils/Penguins game set for April 26 at 7:35 p.m. at the Meadowlands Arena. The $30 tickets will be sold for $25 with 40 percent of the ticket price going to the fund. Those interested can contact Glenn Fannick, who is married to Krakowicki's daughter Susan, at (908) 321-1608. "The Devils have been a great organization to work with, since they are so devoted to working with the community," said Fannick, one of the founders of the Friends. "Things were up in the air during the labor problems with the hockey league, but the Devils were eager to work with us at the time the new schedule was set." The family knows it needs to raise more money, but the exact figure is unknown. A liver transplant is the only way to cure the disease, but the procedure performed. The cost top $250,000 for the average recipient. Medication charges often exceed $2,500 a month. And the Krakowickis will also have to raise money for other expenses such as airfare to Chicago. Slightly more than 100 United States hospitals are qualified as potential donors on a national waiting list for the surgery including at least one in New York City, but Krakowicki chose Rush St. Luke's Presbyterian in Chicago because "I asked my doctor where he would go if he was in my situation and he said he would go to Rush," she said. She's very aware of the facts and figures, she said, having spent much time at home reading about transplantation and talking to others who have gone through the process. "Speaking to other people who had liver transplants, I have heard nothing but positive feedback. I have also spoken to people in need who wanted someone to talk to. There are no support groups around that I know of," she said. "People just need to talk to someone who has gone through what you have gone through. I talked on the phone for an hour to one woman who was just diagnosed. She was afraid. I have come into contact with people waiting and those who have had wants. I've talked to people who have had 10 years. That's what keeps you going, especially after the episode in September." Krakowicki has been on a national waiting list for over a year. The number of liver transplants has increased in this country from 15 in 1990 to more than 3,000 a year, but at least as many people need organs. About half of those will die waiting because of the worldwide shortage of viable organs. Two years ago her doctors placed Krakowicki on the only drug known to slow the disease, alpha interferon — distributed by Schering-Plough of Madison. It has been used with some success in slowing the progression of hepatitis C, but there is no known cure for the disease. As with many patients who have been prescribed interferon, she said, Krakowicki's condition did not improve after several months of receiving shots "at home from her doctor," Susan. Even though she has focused much attention on the goal of receiving a healthy liver via transplant, she said she is aware that transplantation will not cure the disease. It should give her many years of improved health, though, as the virus attacks the new liver. Some day she may have to go through the process again. The disease infects approximately 170,000 Americans each year, but only half will develop chronic hepatitis C, according to the Center for Disease Control and Prevention. Left untreated, the disease often leads to cirrhosis or liver cancer. Organ donation has increased in recent years, but it too has the need for transplantable organs. As the success of transplantation increases, the number of patients who would make good candidates increases as well. For more information, interested people can contact the American Liver Foundation, 1425 Pompton Ave., Cedar Grove, N.J. 07009, or phone (800) 223-0719 or (201) 256-2550. Checks sent to the association for the Krakowicki fund must have "Susan Krakowicki" printed in the lower-left-hand corner. Those interested in acquiring organ donor cards and information can call the Sharing Network at (800) SHARE-NY.

Hockey game will benefit woman

The New Jersey Devils have joined with the Friends of Susan to help raise funds for the impending transplant surgery of Scotch Plains resident Susan Krakowicki, who formerly resided in Roselle. With the rescheduling of the 1995 hockey season after the settled contract negotiations, the Devils are now held at a nearby Knights hall in Linden. The Roselle Council raised more than $7,000 at that event from ticket sales and donations. Another organization — one formed by family members and friends — the Friends of Susan, has also raised several thousand dollars through events such as a boat-a-thon held at Clark Lakes, and members said that more events are in the works. A friend and former co-worker of Krakowicki's, Roselle resident Elaine Grasso, got the fundraising effort going by investigating options for such things as tax-exempt status and raising the bowl-toss with her daughter, Patty, Grasso's search for help with the American Liver Foundation, located in Cedar Grove. Through Grasso's efforts, the organization has set up a tax-exempt account in Krakowicki's name from which 100 percent of donations will go to her cause. The Friends has scheduled another event in conjunction with the New Jersey Devils. Tickets are being sold to the Devils/Penguins game set for April 26 at 7:35 p.m. at the Meadowlands Arena in East Rutherford. The $30 tickets will be sold for $25 with 40 percent of the ticket price going to the fund. Those interested can contact Glenn Fannick, who is married to Krakowicki's daughter Susan, at (908) 321-1608. "The Devils have been a great organization to work with, since they are so devoted to working with the community," said Fannick, one of the founders of the Friends. "Things were up in the air during the labor problems with the hockey league, but the Devils were eager to work with us at the time the new schedule was set." The family knows it needs to raise more money, but the exact figure is unknown. A liver transplant is the only way to cure the disease, but the procedure performed. The cost top $250,000 for the average recipient. Medication charges often exceed $2,500 a month. And the Krakowickis will also have to raise money for other expenses such as airfare to Chicago. Slightly more than 100 United States hospitals are qualified as potential donors on a national waiting list for the surgery including at least one in New York City, but Krakowicki chose Rush St. Luke's Presbyterian in Chicago because "I asked my doctor where he would go if he was in my situation and he said he would go to Rush," she said. She's very aware of the facts and figures, she said, having spent much time at home reading about transplantation and talking to others who have gone through the process. "Speaking to other people who had liver transplants, I have heard nothing but positive feedback. I have also spoken to people in need who wanted someone to talk to. There are no support groups around that I know of," she said. "People just need to talk to someone who has gone through what you have gone through. I talked on the phone for an hour to one woman who was just diagnosed. She was afraid. I have come into contact with people waiting and those who have had

Bruder, Keleher, Jones the elite Dayton Regional indoor track standouts gear for Sunday's Meet of Champions

Jodi Bruder in 2 events

Only the best will be performing at Princeton University this Sunday. And the elite include Dayton Regional High School athletes Jodi Bruder, Mike Keleher and Rashad Jones. The trio of indoor track and field standouts were good enough to qualify for the final event of the winter season — the NJSSAA Meet of Champions that will take place Feb. 19 in Princeton.

"It's great that Dayton has two boys and a girl representing the school," Dayton coach Frank Ortiz said. "I always tell the kids that it is an honor to be good enough to make it this far."

The competition is scheduled to commence at 7 p.m. and run roughly until 9 p.m. It starts with the shot put, high jump and the mile.

"THE BOYS AND GIRLS GO AT THE SAME TIME," with the boys on one side and the girls on the other," Ortiz said. "It moves pretty smoothly."

Bruder, a junior from Springfield, and Keleher and Jones, seniors who hail from Kenilworth, qualified based on their performances at the Group 1 meet held at Princeton two weeks ago.

Bruder placed fourth in the high jump at 5.0 and fourth in the 55-meter high hurdles in 9.29 to qualify in both events. She won the county high jump at 5.0 and also captured last week's (Wednesday) Feb. 8 Mountain Valley Conference high jump event in 5.0 at the Dunn Sports Center in Elizabethtown. She was also second in the conference in the hurdles in 8.7 and the 55-meter dash. This will be her third consecutive appearance in the Meet of Champions.

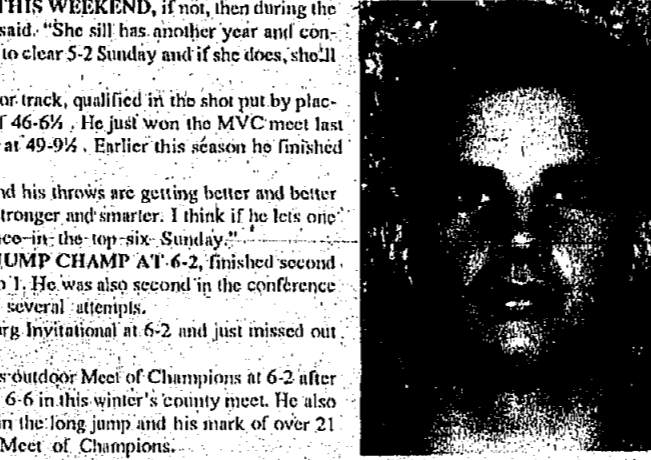

"I THINK SHE'LL CLEAR 5-2 THIS WEEKEND, if not, then during the outdoor season in the spring," Ortiz said. "She still has another year and continues to improve. I'm looking for her to clear 5-2 Sunday and if she does, she'll be in good shape."

Keleher, in his second year of indoor track, qualified in the shot put by placing fourth in Group 1 with a throw of 46-69. He was also second in the conference at 6.7 and has just missed 6.4 on several attempts.

"He was first at the East Stroudsburg Invitational at 6-2 and just missed out on 6.4," Ortiz said.

Jones, who was fifth in last spring's outdoor Meet of Champions at 6-2 after winning the Group 2 title, just missed 6.6 in this winter's trophy meet. He also won last spring's Group 2 championship in the long jump and the mark of over 21 feet earned him fifth place in the Meet of Champions.

"He's adjusted well to his first year of indoor track," Ortiz said. "He's going to have some pretty good competition Sunday and will probably have to go at least 6.4 to place in the top seven. Some in Group 4 have jumped as far as 6-10."

"Classes will include topics such as the Jewish calendar, the Sabbath and Jewish holidays, and Jewish customs and rituals concerning birth, marriage and death. Instruction in Hebrew reading also is incorporated in the course. While instruction is from the Reform Movement's perspective, Conservative and Orthodox viewpoints are included, it was reported.

"Anyone who completes the course will receive as much as Judaism as the average American who grew up in a Jewish family," said Rabbi Bruce Block, a former course instructor. "The program is unique in that it gives

UNION COUNTY NEWS

WORRAL COMMUNITY NEWSPAPERS THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 16, 1995 SECTION B

From The Editor's Notebook
By Tom Canavan
Editor in Chief

Last week, I wrote about how people who shovel snow from their property into the streets are not only violating local ordinances that prohibit the act, but are jeopardizing the safety of anyone who walks or drives in the area where the snow was piled.

I received many telephone calls about the column, most saying it's about time people were informed that it is against the law to throw snow into the streets, and one calling me stupid for even printing such a column.

That call was left anonymously on the voice mail system, so I was not given the opportunity to call back the gentleman to find out what circumstances he was referring to that forced him to shovel snow into the streets. All I know is that he is from Roselle Park.

Personally, I can't even imagine why someone would be forced to shovel snow into the streets. As long as there is property, there's a place to put the snow.

The other caller referred to the hint I left from the state Department of Transportation, responding to people's frustration about shoveling out their driveway only to have it plowed back in by Department of Public Works crews cleaning the streets.

"That hint — and it was only a hint and not a law which DPWs are required to comply with — actually targeted people living on state highways, such as Route 22. It stated that people should shovel the street area immediately adjacent to their driveway so when DPW crews are plowing, they are left with an open space to deposit the snow, instead of dropping it in front of the driveway.

If this could work for people living on state highways, it could work for people living in any of our towns. All they would need is the cooperation of the local DPW. Hey, guys, are you listening to the residents?"

One caller said, and she makes a point, that it's been snowing for thousands of years. "Don't you think we could have found a way in all that time to remove the snow without plowing in people's driveways?"

It's understandable that people would become frustrated after they have invested hours of shoveling their property, only to look out their windows when they're finished to discover a DPW plow filling in the area they worked so hard to open.

I guess as long as there is snow, there will always be that aggravation.

In addition to the calls, I received a letter Tuesday from a Roselle Park resident who may or may not be the caller who called my stupid, but this latter writer definitely shoveling snow into the street.

"Now, Mr. Canavan, I want to tell you something," he said. "You claim that it is against the law to throw snow into the street. There was snow in the street before anyone threw it there! When you have a situation in which the snow weighs like concrete, subzero temperatures are only hours away from dropping, you have to work fast. I think we have the privilege of removing the snow in any conceivable way we wish! As your cars going to actually enforce such a silly ordinance? Do you think kids 10 years old can't do it elderly ladies?"

I'll tell the elderly ladies respond to this letter if they choose. I'll welcome your comments.

I can't buy the argument, however, because you still can work fast and not throw snow into the street. By the way, the letter writer, someone who has written several times in our Roselle Park Leader, had earlier identified himself as a meteorologist. Here's someone who should know the snow is coming and can be better prepared for it.

A ship-stands docked at Port Elizabeth, which officials are hoping to boost as a major import-export region through the aid of an envisioned dredging project.

Roadblocks plague dredging plans

By Chris Galfo
Regional Editor

Gov. Christine Todd Whitman's Dredged Materials Management Team's plans for Port Newark/Elizabeth have gotten a less than warm reception from Rep. Robert Menendez, D-7.

Assemblyman Joseph Suliga, D-Union, had a few unkind words for neighboring legislator, state Senator John Marchi of Newark, regarding a recent dredging proposal.

"Dredging debate is not unusual, though. While many state and local officials who represent Elizabeth favor port dredging, disagreements such as those of Menendez-Whitman and Suliga-Marchi are the norm. Port dredging, which has been held up in large part due to environmental concerns, is something which all four of these officials have favored. But, financial aspects as well as environmental concerns have caused support of particular proposals to be frustrated.

A proposal by Whitman's Dredged Materials Management Team to excavate huge burial pits in Newark Bay to contain dredged materials from Port Newark/Elizabeth is what has raised Menendez's ire.

"The only of this proposal will spell the end of Port Newark/Elizabeth," Menendez said in response to the recommendations by the governor's Dredged Materials Management Team.

The excavation project, if approved, would cost $120 million. The management team's plan calls for a 60-acre, 60-foot deep pit in the middle of Newark Bay.

"It makes no financial sense," the congressman said after reviewing the proposal. "I don't think the panel appreciates the fiscal absurdity of these suggestions. This would be the largest underwater excavation in history."

The congressman urged Whitman to reject the proposal.

Menendez favors the disposal of some dredged materials at a confined ocean site, rather than in the middle of an active waterway. The materials would be likely to be disturbed at an appropriate ocean disposal site and cost millions less.

In the case of Marchi, environmental concerns were raised by him after he discovered the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey had proposed entombing spoils at an underwater pit 3 miles off Staten Island instead of an excavation site off Brooklyn.

Suliga charged Marchi with making an "obscure face" of the issue after he learned of the plan.

Senator Marchi's environmental safety concerns are shared by Suliga. "The project doesn't pose any threat to the public and has even been approved by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and the Army Corps of Engineers."

"The fact is that the Staten Island site happens to be an ideal location for the project and would allow for stricter monitoring of the disposed materials," said Suliga. "Any further delay threatens economic benefits for New York and New Jersey."

By further delaying the dredging projects, the two states risk the loss of potential jobs and a possible migration of the shipping industry to other states, said the assemblyman.

Deer hunt planned to cut population

By Chris Galfo
Regional Editor

Union County's Division of Parks and Recreation yesterday released details of the deer hunt it has planned next week for the Watchung Reservation.

The Deer Management Program, announced by the county's Administration Building during an 11 a.m. press conference, will begin Wednesday and continue until 30 deer have been removed from the reservation.

The program will operate during daylight hours on weekdays only, with shooting occurring most often in the early morning and early evening hours.

There had been some controversy surrounding the legality of the manner in which the hunt was to be conducted, and details of how it will be fished were not formally released until yesterday. Those are as follows:

- These will be transported to one location within the Watchung Reservation for data retrieval and evaluation;
- The County of Union will utilize this opportunity to collect scientific data on the demographics and general health of the deer population;
- All deer will be transported by the county to a U.S. Department of Agriculture-approved meat processing plant for processing;
- Any agent who successfully removed at least five deer will be given 50 pounds of deer.

Officials are hoping to reduce the number of white-tailed deer in the reservation to the spring-summer level, thereby maintaining status quo. The Watchung Reservation Deer Management Subcommittee continues to meet and develop long-range goals for deer management through a program of at least three years duration.

The county is hoping to control the deer population in the reservation and maintain a herd of healthy deer in order to preserve foliage, as well as reduce the number of deer-vehicle collisions.

"Only unless deer will be taken, where possible, a preference will be set for the taking of does rather than fawns, in order to achieve a maximum reduction of female deer," according to a statement released by the Parks and Recreation Division.

Sex offender notice given by Ruotolo

By Chris Galfo
Regional Editor

A convicted sex offender, whose chances of committing a future offense have been termed a "high risk," intends to take up residence in Elizabeth, Union County Prosecutor Andrew K. Ruotolo, Jr. announced.

The offender, Chad Randolph, was scheduled Monday to move in with a relative who resides in the city, according to Ruotolo, who last week issued a statement notifying the press of Randolph's release from prison.

Randolph, 19, was tried as a juvenile in 1992 for an offense which would have been sexual assault had Randolph been charged as an adult.

Released from state prison in Bordentown on Monday, after having served the maximum term on his sentence, Randolph will be residing at 27C Marvay Manor with a relative, Ruotolo stated.

The prosecutor's announcement came as the result of recently enacted legislation known as "Megan's Law," which requires that the community be notified when a sex offender moves nearby.

Randolph, who was 15 at the time of the offense, was convicted of sexually assaulting a 16-year-old female whom he had known and had given a ride home on April 14, 1991, according to the prosecutor. Ruotolo said that Randolph climbed over the front seat of the vehicle and intercourse the girl with a knife. When she hesitated to submit to his sexual advances, Randolph cut the victim on the finger to convince her that he had a knife. Ruotolo noted, Randolph then sexually assaulted the teen-ager, said the prosecutor.

"Chad Randolph took advantage of the trust which the victim placed in him in accepting his offer for a ride home. Members of the public should be aware of this fact in dealing with him in the future," the prosecutor stated.

Ruotolo indicated that he designated Randolph should be designated a Tier 3 offender, indicating a "high risk" of committing another sex offense, due to the circumstances of the offense as well as a review of Randolph's background and, what Ruotolo characterized as "a poor institutional record."

Randolph had been involved in assorted scandals while in prison, a spokesman said.

Under the law, there are three levels of notification to be provided, with Tier 3 being the most widespread. In Tier 3 situations, the prosecutor, in consultation with local law enforcement personnel, will be responsible for providing community notification. Guidelines of the law call for such methods of notification as community meetings, speeches in schools and to religious congregations, and door-to-door visits in the community.

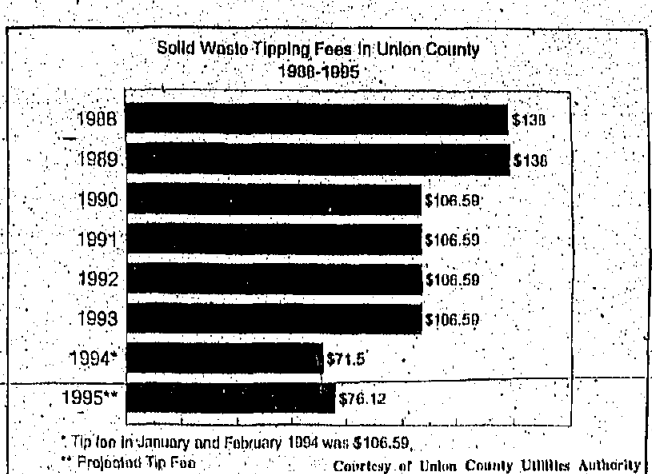

All three levels, Tier 1 through Tier 3, require that information such as the offender's name, a description and photograph, address, place of employment and his license plate be provided to the community at large.

Although Randolph was sentenced as a juvenile and the right to confidentiality would normally, First Assistant Union County Prosecutor Michael Lapolla said a state attorney general opinion indicates that Megan's Law "supersedes all rights to confidentiality."

Ruotolo said that members of his staff had shared information pertaining to Randolph's juvenile history and his institutional records with members of the Elizabeth Police Department during a coordination meeting last week. "The Elizabeth Police Department will assist in coordinating the schools and to religious congregations, and door-to-door visits in the community."

"The fact is that the Staten Island site happens to be an ideal location for the project and would allow for stricter monitoring of the disposed materials," said Suliga. "Any further delay threatens economic benefits for New York and New Jersey."

By further delaying the dredging projects, the two states risk the loss of potential jobs and a possible migration of the shipping industry to other states, said the assemblyman.

End to trash burning predicted by citizens

By Jake Ultek
Staff Writer

The proposed increase in the county's garbage disposal rate may ultimately mean the demise of incineration, say the Concerned Citizens of Union County.

The Union County Utilities Authority, operator of the Resource Recovery Facility, announced plans last month to raise tipping fees by 6.4 percent. UCIA officials explained the increase — from $71.50 to $76.12 per ton — was needed to offset the cost of fuel oil, which has increased in price by 10 percent.

Members of the prosecutor's staff are reviewing the records of other sex offenders in order to determine their status in accordance with guidelines published by the state's attorney general.

Residency of Randolph is met with uncertainty

By Sean P. Carr
Staff Writer

Chad Randolph is out of jail and the community has been notified. The problem is, he doesn't live there anymore.

The Union County Prosecutor's Office released a statement last week naming Randolph, 19, as a Tier 3 sex offender under "Megan's Law." It identified him as living in the Marvay Manor housing project.

However, Elizabeth Housing Authority Executive Director Joseph Manfredi said the authority has forbidden Randolph from living in the complex. "He will not be returning to Marvay Manor," Manfredi said.

"We have the right to determine who can live there and who cannot live there," he said.

Manfredi said the prosecutor's office may have released that address because Randolph's mother resides there and he may return to visit, Union County First Assistant Prosecutor Michael Lapolla said he does not know if Randolph is residing at Marvay Manor, but noted it was the address the prosecutor's office had been given. "If he's not living there, then he is in violation of the law," Lapolla said.

Elizabeth Mayor J. Christian Bollwage said if Randolph is living in the city, he will ask the prosecutor to hold an educational forum with the City Council and public to explain the law and discuss the community impact of Randolph's release.

Bollwage, who supports Megan's Law, said, "We, as a society, must be able to deal with a known criminal element that is taking up residence in our neighborhoods. And it must not be done in a manner that entails vigilantism."

Keyboard entertaining is his forte

By Ima Smith
Lifestyle Editor.
Ever since he was 3 years old, Ted O'Connell of Springfield had the urge to entertain his relatives.

Ted O'Connell

"I do this full-time, you know," said O'Connell. "I will be playing at the Chestnut Tavern until Memorial Day. I also work at Mario's on Chestnut Street. That was formerly Affinity's and after that the Grand Caprice."

I took vocal training from the Anthony School Music in Elizabeth with a good French vocal instructor named Mr. Bartinique. That was back in 1963 or 1964. He taught me how to sing when my voice began changing. O'Connell said with admiration. "He got me through those few years when my voice changed and I couldn't sing in the house anymore."

Youngster to play

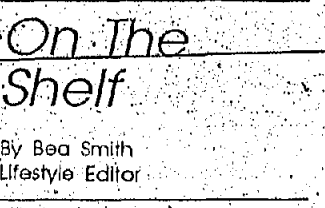

Ted Jr.

"Even though I always got a son, Ted Jr., 13, who likes to be called T.J. He attends the Toms River Intermediate School and he loves music, loves to sing and loves the theater. Actually, he enjoys watching his dad perform, but he's not interested in playing."

Elderly sleuth solves last murder mystery

This column, originally meant to be a regular book review of James R. McCahery's second mystery novel, "Grave Unearthed," has turned into a tribute to the author from Union, who died on Feb. 6.

James R. McCahery

McCahery, whose first novel, "Grave Unearthed," a paper back original, was a literary award, and his second mystery novel, "The Shadow," a paperback, seemed to be heading in the same direction. According to his publisher, Kensington Publishing Corp., New York, McCahery was at work on his third novel at the time of his death.

McCahery's second novel, "The Shadow," a paperback, seemed to be heading in the same direction. According to his publisher, Kensington Publishing Corp., New York, McCahery was at work on his third novel at the time of his death. In his first novel, McCahery introduced his sophisticated sleuth, a retired radio announcer, Lavinia London, who enticed herself in the author's readers as bright, intelligent and probing.

DINING REVIEW

By Sean P. Carr
Staff Writer
The Windsor Diner has all the elements you'd expect from a New Jersey diner — a wide selection of prevalent foods and family fare at reasonable prices. It offers a friendly, homey atmosphere, even in the back patio non-smoking section.

Hostess Tina Caruso discusses food choices with Colleen Nemeth, seated on rear bench, and her son, Christopher, 5, and Dot Quinn.

WINDSOR DINER

The Windsor is more than a diner. It's $6.55, and includes more than the usual range of varieties in wings, which were agreeable, and the stuffed potato skins, which I understand were quite fulfilling.

State home sales jump; top 1993's record page

Existing, single-family home sales in New Jersey increased for the fourth consecutive year, reaching their highest level, 145,400, since 1987, topping 1993's record pace, 138,300, by five percent, according to the New Jersey Association of Realtors.

The record number of home sales surpassed the Realtor organization's prediction of a 2 percent gain.

"These statistics are better than we expected," said Carl R. DeMusz, NJAR president, referring to the association's prediction of a 2 percent increase this year over last year's.

Despite the Federal Reserve's desire to curb inflation, the seven rate increases this year have not hurt home sales as much as NJAR anticipated, said DeMusz. "We are hopeful the Fed's actions will not hurt New Jersey's economy, which has a bigger impact on the sales," he said.

According to NJAR, the non-seasonally adjusted annual rate of the actual unit volume of existing single-family homes sold for the year 1994 is 145,400 — the highest level in the Garden State since 1987 when sales stood at 138,400. For the fourth quarter of 1994, the seasonally-adjusted rate is 142,000, down 8 percent from the 153,400 during the same period in 1993.

The non-seasonally adjusted rate of actual unit volume of homes sold in October, November and December is 142,600, down 9 percent over 1993's fourth quarter total of 139,500.

"Sales for the fourth quarter decreased, but those numbers are considerably stronger than we expected," said DeMusz, broker/owner of DeMusz Real Estate in Cape May. "Real estate will mimic the economy as both will cool off in 1995."

Regionally, the actual unit volume of existing home sales for 1994 increased in two sections of New Jersey and decreased in the other section — Central Jersey sales increased 8 percent, 43,000 to 46,500; sales in Southern Jersey jumped 8 percent, 36,000 to 39,000; and the Northern part of the state decreased by one quarter of one percent from 60,000 to 59,900.

For the fourth quarter of 1994, seven out of 30 NJAR local boards and associations of Realtors reporting sales figures showed increases. The most dramatic increases were as follows: Meadowlands, 17.0 percent; Hudson, 11.5 percent; and New Jersey Shore MLS, 10.6 percent.

The median sales price of an existing single-family home in New Jersey increased half one percent to $128,700 for the year 1994. However, for the fourth quarter of 1994, the median sales price dropped to $115,100 from $145,900 in 1993. The median reflects the millions, meaning half the houses sold for more and half sold for less.

NJAR is a non-profit organization serving the professional needs of more than 38,000 real estate agents in the state.

A new slate

The Summit, New Providence and Berkeley Heights Board of Realtors has elected 1995 board members as follows: President, Carolyn M. Gibson of The Mountain Agency; Vice President, Margaret Timony of Margaret Timony Agency; Treasurer, Doris Schneider of Centennial Real Estate and Geo. Christopher Brown of Prudential-Brown Fowler Co. Directors include Margaret Haggerty, Rosemary Dangler, Michael Del Duca and Mary McCann. Alice Sugrue will continue as executive officer.

Weichert recovers from fire

The office of Weichert Realtors is off to a great start in 1995 after a fire damaged the building on Oct. 15, announced Branch Manager Ron Mammanno.

"January was a great month for all of our associates. We've had busy open houses and the market is good," Mammanno said.

At a recent opening celebration in celebration of the office's recovery, Mammanno said, "The great Weichert selling and listing team is back in business and looking forward to a terrific year in 1995," he said.

The Union office is located at 1307 Springfield Ave. The phone number is (908) 687-4800.

Also, the firm's president, James M. Weichert, recently announced that Lennie O'Hanley joined the Union office as a sales associate.

O'Hanley has been a licensed real estate professional for five years. She is a member of the Greater Union County Association of Realtors.

A longtime resident of Union, O'Hanley is married and has two children. She can be reached for real estate transactions at (908) 687-4800.

According to a national report, Weichert Realtors is the largest independent real estate company in the country.

Homebuyer's help is seminar's focus

Weichert Realtors' Union office will offer a Homebuyers Seminar today from 7 to 9 p.m.

Topics to be covered include the tax advantages of home ownership, the variety of financing programs available and the financial costs involved with real estate transactions.

According to Ron Mammanno, manager, the seminar will provide all the information a first-time homebuyer needs to purchase that first home. The seminar also is designed to aid homeowners interested in finding out about today's real estate market and how to get the best sales price for their current home.

For reservations, call Mammanno at (908) 687-4800. The office is located at 1307 Springfield Ave.

Larger site new home for Realtor

The Murray Hill office of Burgdorf, Realtors has moved to larger quarters in the old Borough Hall on Springfield Avenue in New Providence.

"The office the firm vacated at 5 Mountain Ave. is the original site of Burgdorf, Realtors' home office when the company was founded in 1955."

"We've come a long way since 1958," said Murray Hill office Vice President and Manager Vivian DeLafra, "but some things haven't changed."

"I can and Peter Burgdorf have always put their full support behind the needs of their associates. We're like one big family that way. We receive what we need to be as successful as we can be. This is simply a case of our staff and business needs outgrowing the old building," she said. "It's sad to leave it behind, but we're extremely excited by the wonderful new location in the heart of New Providence."

The new office is located at 1243 Springfield Ave. The phone number is (908) 464-2100.

Community comes first with Barnes

Barnes Chevrolet/GEO of Summit last week hosted St. Patrick's Cub Scout Pack 6 of Cranford during a car familiarization program. Scouts, accompanied by den mothers Mary Lovis and Noreen Ryan, along with Tamia Shilbush, toured Barnes Chevrolet, 36-42 River Road. They were told how cars are serviced and cared for, including how the oil filter battery is checked.

'95 Hyundai Accent now available at Maxon

Buyers in the market for an affordable new car, take heart. The all-new Hyundai Accent, which is currently arriving at dealerships across the country, fits that description — and then some. Not only is the Accent affordable, starting at $8,079 MSRP, it offers an impressive array of safety features and technology not normally found in the subcompact segment, such as a standard dual air bags, sophisticated multi-link suspension, a low maintenance engine design and optional full four-channel anti-lock brakes and four-speed electronic automatic transmission.

The 1995 Hyundai Accent

Other important features incorporated in the Accent's design are 5-mpg bumpers, front and rear "crumple zones" designed to absorb the energy of an impact and reduce the force exerted on the occupants, as well as side impact protection that meets 1997 federal standards today. Accent is available in a wide range of color choices including, Noble White, Barcelona Red, Montego Green, Indigo Pearl, Marlborough Red, Cabronne, Madras Green, and Black.

The Hyundai Accent is built by Hyundai Motor Company, an affiliate of the Hyundai Group of Seoul, Korea — one of the world's largest and most technologically advanced industrial concerns. The Accent is distributed in the United States by Hyundai Motor America of Fountain Valley, Calif., through a nationwide network of approximately 500 dealers.

Brake failure Is feared by drivers

A national survey reveals that the fear of a brake failure is one of the most common causes for traffic accidents. Brake failure is a major safety concern, and it is avoidable.

The Car Care Council points out that preventive maintenance is the obvious way to avoid mechanical trouble. If you haven't had your brakes checked in the last 18 months or 15,000 miles, it's time to visit your technician. And if your daily routine includes lots of stop-and-go driving, or if you use a trailer, your braking system should have an annual inspection.

What happens if your brakes reach the danger zone between checks? This is when it pays to be alert to the sound and the feel of your car. Rarely will a brake system malfunction without some type of warning. Listen for squeaking or grinding noises. Be aware of the brake pedal. Do you have to pump it to stop the car? Does the pedal go to the floor when you're trying to stop? Brake problems also can cause your car to pull to one side when slowing down or stopping.

Recent survey reports indicate as many as one out of three vehicles on the road need some kind of brake maintenance. It's yours out of them? To protect your wallet as well as your life, have your brakes checked regularly by a qualified technician. And, in between times, pay attention to the noises your car makes, the feel of the brake pedal, and the way your car handles. With this added attention your brakes should give you the performance you need to feel safe and secure on the road.

For more information on the braking system, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to: The Car Care Council, Dept. B, 434 Grande Lake Drive, Port Clinton, OH 44862.
