Committee keeps coach — for now

By Kevin Singer
Managing Editor

After hearing an emotional plea from residents concerning volunteer soccer coach Jeff Baron, who had been relieved of his position from the Recreation Department, the Township Committee voted to temporarily reinstate him.

Baron, who had coached soccer through the Recreation Department for four years, appeared before the committee on Tuesday to appeal the Recreation Department's decision, based on the fact that his job description and as he began behind his duties, were not clearly outlined. He presented petitions to the committee signed by children who he coached, as well as their parents. This was followed by vocal support from numerous parents.

Based on this show of support, and the fact that the only opposition to Baron's job performance was in the form of a letter sent to Commissioner Roy Hirschfeld, a motion to reinstate Baron was made by Committee member Judy Blitzer. However, that motion failed to be seconded by either Mayor Greg Clark or committee member Herbert Slato or Hirschfeld, Recreation Department's decision, was not overturned.

The Hirschfeld, who earlier had admitted to deciding, with Acting Recreation Director Theresa Horvack, signed by children who he coached, as well as their parents. This was followed by vocal support from numerous parents.

Triple wetdown

Firefighters welcome additional equipment

By Elaine Dilipert
Staff Writer

On Saturday, the Fire Department will hold a triple wetdown to christen three new pieces of equipment.

The department is hoping the towns will show up in force to help celebrate, and they have scheduled games and events for residents to enjoy.

A wetdown is a traditional event that fire departments hold when they receive a new piece of fire-fighting equipment. The Fire Department will have three trucks at the wetdown to welcome them into the department. There will be a 1985 E-One 110 foot aerial ladder truck which was recently refurbished, an 1995 E-One rescue truck, and an 1995 E-One pump truck.

"We really want the towns to come out and help us celebrate. We have a lot of events planned and we hope that the community will be able to come out and have a good time," said Capt. Wayne Mastello.

The department is holding the wetdown at Farcher's Grove at 1135 Springfield Road in Union from noon to 5 p.m. There will be refreshments and lots of games for kids and adults to participate in as well as the ceremony for the new equipment. Games for the kids will begin at noon and go until 2 p.m., and there will be a lot of prizes to be won so the department hopes that a lot of kids attend. The ceremony for the new equipment will take place at 1 p.m., and will include brief speeches by Chief Bill Greas and Mayor Greg Clark. At 3 p.m., there will be a competition for the firefighters which will include fire departments which are part of the emergency response team.

The department will also have mugs and T-shirts for sale as well as refreshments. "We want people to understand that they can come out and enjoy the day with us and see the new equipment. We are planning to have a great time and we just hope that the community realizes that the entire town is invited and that it is not just an event for firemen," said Mastello.

Anyone who would like further details about the event or directions to Farcher's Grove can contact Mastello at 912-2269.

Dayton High to honor graduates

By Kevin Singer
Managing Editor

Marla Kendler is looking for a few good people.

As part of her efforts to honor graduates of the school's 50th anniversary, Kendler, a teacher at the school, along with Principal Charles Senon, is seeking to establish a hall of fame to honor graduates of the school who have achieved success.

"The purpose of a hall of fame is to highlight past graduates and students of Jonathan Dayton," Kendler stated. "But she isn't necessarily looking for those who are famous or financially successful."

"We are looking to honor those who have made a significant contribution to humanity in the various fields of endeavor, improved the quality of life for others, or achieved recognition in their career," she added.

Kendler described the selection for the hall of fame, which was approved at the last Board of Education meeting, as a community process.

"I am asking the public to complete a form suggesting nominees whom they feel are worthy of consideration," continued Kendler. "We will have a meeting at the end of October with a committee to select a list of nominees, and from that list we will get in touch with them and have them complete a questionnaire."

The nomination process is already underway, and by the time the hall of fame opens in January, Kendler hopes to have between 12 and 18 nominees.

"We will highlight the hall of fame with a grand opening and luncheon," she said.

An application to nominate individuals can be obtained through Kendler or Senon, who can be reached at (908) 376-6000.

"It is the families of the public to nominate those they feel are deserving of recognition," added Kendler.

Tin Can Teddy teaches youngsters about recycling

By Elaine Dilipert
Staff Writer

Kindergartners at Walton School were treated to a visit from Tin Can Teddy on Tuesday as part of a Union County Utilities Authority program to promote recycling among younger school students throughout the county.

"We have reached almost every school in Union County, kindergarten through grade three, but since there is a new kindergarten each year we continue to put on the program at various schools," said Marian Switkowski, district recycling coordinator for the UCUA.

The assembly which is geared toward younger students helps kids to become familiar with the concept of recycling. "It is an assembly show with our mascot Tin Can Teddy. We want the kids to come away with three words: reduce, reuse, and recycle, and do it in an entertaining manner. So we put on a little skit that we have developed over the years and we have an actor in the Tin Can Teddy costume," said Switkowski.

The UCUA created the recycling education curriculum for kindergarten through third grade to help teachers reinforce the goals of recycling and reducing the amount of garbage in the area. A study performed by the Governor's Emergency Solid Waste Task Force recommended that a 60 percent recycling goal be attained in the state. The UCUA said that the best way to accomplish this goal is through education. It is their goal to make sure that children begin to think of recycling and reducing waste as a way of life not just as an option.

At the end of the presentation by the UCUA, all of the students at the assembly were sworn in as deputy rangers in the fight to make recycling an everyday occurrence in the county and given deputy rangers' badges.

"I thought the program was wonderful. It was geared right on their level and the kids really enjoyed it. Tin Can Teddy was a big hit," said Kelly Gardner of the PTA.

The PTA was especially happy to have the presentation at the school because it helped to reinforce the concept of recycling. "It is in nicely because our PTA kicked off its recycling program in the school at the beginning of this year, so we were able to tie it in with the UCUA presentation. Up until this point we had not been recycling in the school so we made a big push to get it going off the ground," said Gardner.

"It was the goal of the PTA to involve the kids with the schools recycling efforts. The kids are responsible for as far as helping the teachers to sort items and find out what is recyclable and they help to take the containers to our main container and help empty them. We also sent them home with the paper informing them of what we were doing in the school and the different programs so that they could accomplish this goal is through education. Two other musicians holding the banjoist by his ankles in the upside down, who slowly picked the familiar opening notes of the Delmore's tune, then roared into Duelling Banjos. Seventeen years later, banjoist Andrew Roblin's musicianship and intense dedication to his instrument on the strength of his good-time family music and skill on five folk instruments, Roblin has performed at festivals, music camps, and in venues from Virginia to Buffalo, New York. Roblin, accompanied by multi-instrumentalist Scott Eager, will perform at Trillium Nature and Science Center's 15th Annual Harvest Festival on Sunday.

Artists share their inspiration and good fortune

By Jacquie McCarthy Associate Editor
The Children's Specialized Hospital in Mountaintop has displayed the works of many local artists over the years. Works in many different mediums bedeck the halls of the East Wing, bringing cheer to visitors strolling the halls, and providing needed funds to the hospital through a donation of a portion of the sale of each piece.

Three New Jersey artists are currently taking advantage of this wonderful opportunity at the Children's Specialized Hospital. Deborah Majeski of Northvale Station, Alison Hooper of Westfield and Jerry Winick of West Paterson have all been lucky enough to realize the dream of becoming artists in their own right, and are sharing their good fortune with others.

Deborah Majeski had been aware that the hospital had a gallery at it. She had approached the hospital with the thought of donating some photographs to "cheer the children up, that is better yet!" said the parents still photographer. A recent graduate of Middlesex County College with a degree in photography, Majeski had approached her education in the "creative" manner she approached the hospital gallery. She bought some cameras, then took some courses just to understand the medium and ended up mesmerizing.

Majeski's encounters with the subjects of her photos are just as spontaneous as her work. "I just see them, and it's not like I say to myself, 'I'm gonna shoot such-and-such house. It's a gift.' The artist receives some inspiration from her father, a retired artist. "My father said I have a creative eye."

Although a few of Majeski's scenes are arranged, most of them happen spur of the moment, requiring the artist to be on guard for each photo opportunity. She pointed to a scene of a long road lined by beautiful trees, and said that she had to stop her car in the middle of the road to snap that one. She described an early evening relaxing on her deck at home, when her husband pointed to a tiny tree under some green leaves. Although it was a long day, Majeski got down her stomach with her camera to get the shot. "A lot of work to take creative pictures," she laughed.

A beautiful shot of a corner of a wicker couch arranged with pillows was the product of a Cape May vacation. As they sat on the couch, she caught a shot of a lovely grove of trees with a branch of amber leaves falling across, and another of a mirror-shaped circular flower in the back. "It struck my fancy, so I took it," said Majeski. Ducks in a pond, lined up in perfect synchronicity, seemed to play to Majeski's camera.

The artist thinks little plays a role in her timing, with her passion for the medium factoring in heavily. Whatever the reason, there is no question that the scenes her camera reveals are just waiting for an appreciative eye to display them.

Alison Hooper of Westfield describes herself in her artist biography as a "versatile artist." This statement only begins to scratch the surface of her many talents, which include color still-life photography, black and white landscapes, and abstract acrylic painting.

Part of Hooper's well-rounded approach to art is a result of her education — she is a graduate of Ohio Wesleyan University with a Bachelor of Fine Arts and recently completed a Master's Degree in Art from Kean College. She shares her wide-range of artistic expertise with her students, as an elementary school art teacher at the John P. Faber School in Danellen.

"I'm kind of a jack of all trades," she laughed as we looked at her exhibit. "I find that for my teaching background, I need to know so many things, so many different media."

Hooper recalled being interested in art as a child, an interest nurtured in her family, whom Hooper reports is "very artistic." Her inspiration for her colored still-life photos comes from her mother, an antique dealer specializing in items from the 1930-40s. "I have plenty of subject matter to grab." Using antique dolls, toys, shoes, handbags, and kitchen items, Hooper arranges intimate scenes created by her and dried flowers to create an American theme.

One of the scenes features Hooper's own doll, rescued from a yard sale when Hooper was a young girl. "Now she's worth several hundred dollars, so I'm glad I hung onto her! She's special to me."

Hooper's black and white photos include striking landscapes from hiking trips to Arizona and Colorado. "Poofy clouds, wonderful textures," she commented on these scenes. These landscapes translated into Hooper's abstract series, which use deep textures and vivid colors to depict "Summertime," "Horizon" and "Abstract."

Finally, the artist found beautiful images practically in her own backyard, exhibited in this black and white scene from Brightwood Park in her hometown of Westfield. Additionally, a "lambyard section" of the "recovered" lawn for over a month will later be arranged from old bottles, glass, and other household items.

"The Horsestraps," a pencil drawing by Jerry Winick of West Paterson, on display at Children's Specialized Hospital in Mountaintop.

Carousel horses photographed by Deborah Majeski of Northvale Station, on display at Children's Specialized Hospital.

"First snow," from a series of works by Alison Hooper of Westfield, on display at Children's Specialized Hospital in Mountaintop.

Winick finds himself standing alone in the field of pencil drawing. "I think I've been in shows where I've been participating with 500 artists, and I'm the only one who does this work in pencil. And I've been doing it over 40 years; I started when I was a young boy."

Winick describes himself a self-taught, having had no formal schooling in the medium. He began drawing at age 10, stopped for some years, then picked it up again. Only a full-time artist for the past five years, Winick quipped, "I've always worked for a living." He is married, has two sons, and now I'm involved in art every where, I teach it, I sell my own work. He is framing, everything to do with art. It is doubtful that the artist will ever put this pencil down again. "I can't wait to sit down at the drawing board, that's the greatest joy to me in the world. It's creating."

Winick has a permanent exhibit at the Lena DiGangi Gallery in West Paterson and participates in many juried art shows and solo exhibitions. He teaches pencil drawing at the Lena DiGangi Gallery and at adult night schools in northern New Jersey.

Denzel finds that moonlighting is not as 'Easy' as it seems

By Jim Hoffa
When you find a job that truly excites you, and which provides you with a new challenge, the odds are good that you won't see the "moonlighting" as a "side job" or something equally trivial.

It is hard to capture in words the success of a performance which really does make one laugh and cry.

"Waiting for MacArthur," a new play at the New Jersey Women's Theatre Company, is such a work. Without exaggeration, the show is an epitome of theater. It is best, and would be the best of many New York companies.

The play tells the story of a young woman who is the jaded wife of a man who she would become. Douglas, nurse on Corvidor in the weeks before he fell to the Japanese.

The story is told through the letters which she sent home to her mother. Rosalie, her former English teacher and her mother.

In her letter Annie Lou can speak the truth to only one of her correspondents, her former teacher, Margaret Green. In her other letters she seeks to keep a light tone to entertain her friend Rosalie, and tries to protect her mother, played excellently by Mary Scraggs, from the truth of her situation.

MacDougal's words and Douglas's performance are complimented by a equally strong performance of Judith Gaulty as Annie Lou's former English teacher and child correspondent Margaret. She shows the strength of those on the home front as they tried to

The Union County Arts Center, formerly the Railway Theater, is nationally landmarked. Vintage vaudeville movie-house, is seeking old photos of the theater from its early years, especially from its opening in 1928 to the '50s.

The Arts Center would like to supplement its pictorial archive with whatever additional photos and other memorabilia people may have collected over the years and are willing to give. Especially those that show the theater during its heyday, during its restoration of the building's facade, are photos that show the stock-type ticket-booth that has been in use for only a short time.

If anyone has in their possession historic photos or other materials which they do not necessarily wish to part, the Arts Center would be content merely to borrow them long enough to have reproductions made for its archive. It will handle the originals with great care and return them to the lenders after copying.

The number to call at the Arts Center is 499-0441 on weekdays between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m.

$15 for all performances and $12.50 for students and seniors. There will be a free symposium held after the September 29 performance entitled "WACS, WASPs, and War Stories" with guest speaker Dr. Barbara R. Tomblin, author of "G.I. Nightgowns," the first full-length account of the U.S. Army Nurse Corp in World War II.

Cataracts may require surgery, but don't rush

A cataract is an entity which identifies a clouding of the lens of the eye. If we look at the eye like a camera, we find that there are two "lenses" which focus light on the "film" — the retina.

Insight into Eyesight

By Dr. Farid F. Shafiq

When the lens becomes filled with fluid, protein and pigment, it thickens and changes color. At this point, the lens is called a "cataract." This term is specific only to the second lens of the eye.

When it is time for an evaluation to perform surgery for cataract removal, the patient must describe in detail lifestyle and visual needs, symptoms and expectations. The physician in addition to discussing alternative therapies which seem promising, presents agreed that there is danger in the use of unproven, unproven, or alternative approaches when they are used to the exclusion of proven, scientific remedies.

Physicians seek to integrate alternative, traditional medicine

According to a study published in the New England Journal of Medicine, one in three patients in the United States routinely uses alternative therapies, and seven in ten such users do not discuss their practices with their physicians.

Don't be silent about your high blood pressure

Hypertension, or "high blood pressure," plays a part in some 700,000 deaths a year from stroke, heart disease, and kidney failure.

There are approximately 1.5 million cases of hypertension in this country every year. The complication rate depending on the blood pressure level is 1.2 percent. The surgery performed by even the finest surgeon is a routine. One should enter into surgery not because of an ailment, or waging of another person, but only when the benefits must outweigh the risks.

In the majority of people, the cause of high blood pressure is unknown. However, certain factors are known to be associated with its development. These include heredity, increasing age, sensitivity to salt, lack of exercise, being overweight, and heavy drinking.
