By FANNIE HURST

JAMES G. MORRELL was a graduate of two American universities and a French one. He had a Bachelor of Arts degree, a Master of Arts degree, and a Doctor of Laws degree.

When he was twenty-five, his patrimony consisted solely of his magnificent education and what natural talents were so generously his.

For the first time in his carefully designed life, the young Morrell dared to admit to himself that he despised the profession of law that had been mapped out for him as the son of his wealthy father.

That is how, during the next five years in the Bohemian quarters in practically every large city and Newport of the world, James Morrell was to become a familiar one.

For the first time in his carefully cultivated, extremely sophisticated young lifetime, James Morrell was happy. A vagabond, a misfit, New scenes, new people, new situations, no struggle for existence became a game which could be so simple.

It was in the Bohemia that is New York's, some five and a half years after the death of his father, that young Morrell walked into a situation that was to deter his footsteps from their willy-willy wanderings.

"Oh, look mamma, there's one of those ministers' golf courses."

At the end of the second year, with their romance being in ruins about them, James no longer able to withstand the importunities of a wife who was with child, accepted a position of apprentice in a Pittsburgh law office, which had been obtained for him by his coal merchant father-in-law.

There was something of a chained wild beast about Morrell. He endured his success in much the same way he endured his environment, his wife, and even his child.

It could almost be said of James Morrell that he did not turn a hand, considering the magnitude of his so-called achievements. He had an eye for the law, and a tongue that could, on the proper occasion, grow eloquent, but so had other men of less success.

When she was thirty, Rachel Taylor, who loved the life of creature things, creature comforts, and creature magnificence, saw herself slowly climbing toward the very pinnacles of such attainments.

They used to say laughingly of Rachel Taylor Morrell that she had more than once referred to her husband as the future President of the United States.

Two months subsequent to this event, the cities of Pittsburgh and New York awakened one day to headlines announcing the mysterious disappearance of James Morrell.

It was whispered about among those "in the know" that it had cost Mrs. James Morrell a king's ransom to thus stump out the conspicuous happening of her husband's disappearance.

After one conference with her husband, Rachel Taylor Morrell, who had a good head on her, realized the futility of attempting to bait or lure or threaten her husband back into his proper setting.

She was watching the passengers of an ocean liner as they opened their bags for inspection.

At the mouth of the Amazon and north of it Brazil is very damp. But once you quit the Amazon delta, and get well on your way down the sloping coast toward the great shoulder of northeast Brazil, the climate changes to a parched and sunburnt land with little sand, dunes, and bare, fatigued shores of snow, and you placed a few camels under the lonely canopy of coconut trees—which you often 60 feet high—you would get as good a desert picture as any from Magdad to Cairo.

What Brazil Is Like

Scene at a Coffee Warehouse in Santos, Brazil.

BRAZIL is so huge—it is a quarter of a million square miles larger than the United States—and made up of so many diverse regions that the average visitor can do little more than acquaint himself with a limited area.

The first familiar feature of Brazil that the air traveler sees is the Amazon. At its mouth the big river, 350 miles wide between its capes, colors the sea and dilutes its salt for 50 miles offshore.

The rise of the river near Para in flood times is often 50 feet. Then vast areas of forest are completely inundated. Snow in the Andes begins to melt in August, but this delta does not feel the rise till six months later.

Looking at maps, one observes the Amazon delta does not run out to sea on land bridges, as do the Nile, the Ganges and the Mississippi. It carries prodigious loads of mud, and geologists say its delta is extended 300 miles past its present mouth.

Rush of the Amazon Bore. And the Para, of the south coast, of the delta, you notice, is higher and drier than the coast of Brazilian Guiana, north of the Amazon delta.

Just a Customs Incident. "What have you to declare?" the customs officer asked of the timid little woman.

POULTRY CHICKEN FLOCK ON EVERY FARM

Not Expensive Because of Excellent Food Produced.

The farm poultry flock is not expensive and because of the excellent food it produces, should be found on every farm.

During a part of the year, a flock of from 50 to 100 hens will furnish for much of their food, says Dr. B. F. Knapp, head of the poultry department at the North Carolina State college.

Doctor Knapp says that every person should eat at least two eggs every day. This means that two cases of 30 dozen eggs each is needed for each person in the state each year.

Then, too, says Doctor Knapp, pullets must be raised each year to replace about one-half of the mature hens. Five eggs to set will be needed for each pullet in the breeding pens.

Balanced Rations for Laying Hens Favored. Feeding dry mash is generally considered one of the essential practices in balancing rations for laying hens.

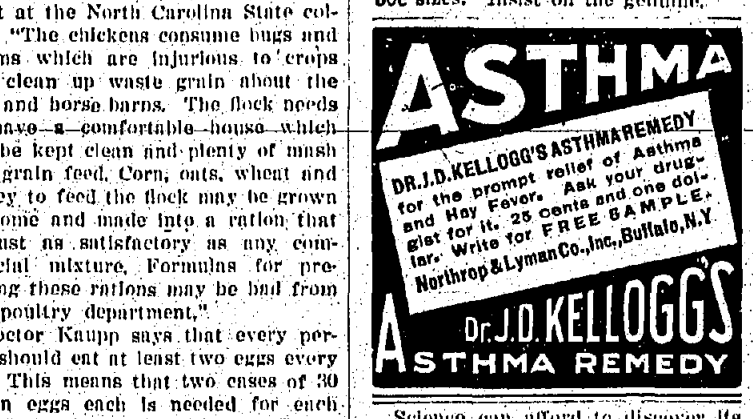

Green Feed Problem. Alfalfa, red clover or soy bean hay of proper quality solves the green-feed problem.

Use of Cockerels. In the general-purpose breeds, mate one male to every ten to twelve females; in the egg-breeds, mate one male to every fifteen to twenty females.

Using Cod Liver Oil. Cod liver oil is an important item in winter rations for poultry because it helps to maintain egg production.

LIGHTS OF NEW YORK

By WALTER TRUMBULL

Police Commissioner Edward P. Mulrooney is a rather quiet man, but when he is in the mood, one of the most interesting talkers I know. He has a keen, observing mind, a thorough understanding of police problems and the relation between the force and the public, a tremendous knowledge of human nature, and a grand sense of humor. Why shouldn't he have a name such as Mulrooney? The policing of a city such as New York calls for a commissioner with strength and judgment, and Mulrooney has both. I imagine he can be pretty firm and cold on occasion; but you can't talk to the man long without hearing the beat of the warm Irish heart in him. You may suspect that I like Mulrooney, and I do. Maybe it is because we both are old-fashioned enough to like big league baseball better than midget golf and agree that the big Frenchman, Larry Lalola, was the most graceful player we ever saw.

"Who would have supposed," says Commissioner Mulrooney, "that you ever would see a Tom Thum golf course on Fifth street? It makes you think that Manhattan real estate may not be so valuable after all. But they are keeping these courses open a little late. I think an ordinance will be passed to close them at 1 a. m. That's late enough for any golfer to get home. These places are getting to need a little regulation."

"I said that Mulrooney had a sense of humor. He also has a sense of drama. He can tell you stories that would keep you listening for hours, and he always holds his suspense and drops his curtain on the big thrills. I asked him whether good detective work—he once was head of the detective bureau—was not mainly perseverance, courage and common sense. He said a fine detective must have more than that, one of his greatest qualifications being the ability to put himself in the other man's place and, from that angle, figure his line of thought. He illustrated his point.

"We got word," said Mulrooney, "that an embezzler, who was badly wanted, was heading for New York on a railroad with his terminal in New Jersey. That meant he would have to come in on a train ferry, so we covered them all. These were the days of horses; it was before taxicabs had come in. We had received such short notice that by the time the detective who went to the Twenty-third street ferry got there, the boat he wanted to meet was in and the passengers gone. He knew all the backmen, but that wasn't going to get him anything. They were a tough lot and it was not in their code to help a cop. Still he asked them if they had driven anywhere a man such as he described. No, they had seen no such man. What with handling bags and the confusion of a boat crowd, they had not time to take note of people they drove.

"It was then," continued Mulrooney, "that the man showed real qualities as a detective. 'I'm sorry,' he exclaimed, 'I certainly did want to get that fellow. It's a shame he got away.' 'What did he do?' asked one of the backmen. 'The detective knew that if he explained the man made off with a lot of dough the backmen would wish him all the luck in the world, so he used a bit of imagination.

"The detective skink," said the backman. "Now that I come to think of it,

Eclipse Furnishes New Moon Data

Naufoi Island.—The discovery of a new wave length in the spectra of the sun's corona and further information on the movements of the moon were announced recently by American scientists as the fruits of their observation of the solar eclipse here. Spectrographs obtained by Dr. S. A. Mitchell, scientific head of the American naval observatory expedition, caught manifestations of the hitherto unknown wave length, which showed itself at 6770 angstrom units. An angstrom unit is one-hundred-millionth of a centimeter. The data is expected to be useful in computing movement of the moon and in forecasting future eclipses. Coronal disturbances on both the east and west edges of the sun were recorded. These appeared to have had their origin in eruptive prominences. The detail shown in the spectrographic lines of the coronium (chief constituent gas of the corona) did not resemble that exhibited by the prominences. Changes in coronal forms shown by the successive spectra indicated violent motions in the inner corona. These disturbances could be traced to as far as 100,000 miles beyond the sun's surface, and, as far as is known, never have been observed before. Development of photographic plates today indicated the expedition had been successful beyond expectations. A shortage of fresh water delayed developing. This became a difficult job when fresh water had to be brought ashore from the U. S. S. Tanager and protected from lava dust blown in by trade winds. Photographs of exceptional beauty and detail were obtained, especially nine plates from the sixty-three-foot tower camera and three from the sixty-five-foot horizontal camera, constructed as an afterthought from scrap material and a spare lens. Beautiful coronal streamers, with especially interesting strawberry-shaped domes, were conspicuous on plates of all cameras. The data indicates the totality was of 13.5 seconds' duration. Successful photographs of the flash spectrum were obtained both at the beginning and end of totality.

HAVING YOUR FORTUNE TOLD

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

Very few of us are satisfied with the present. We should like to see ahead. To know what is going to happen to us next week or next year, or ten years from now. Are we going to be rich, or prominent, or influential? Are we going to be loved and honored and honored to be our lot, or in failure and insignificance and poverty and absence waiting for us just at the turn of the road? It is our keen interest in these things which makes us eager to know what the cards or the clairvoyant or tea grounds have to tell of our coming fortune. Now I have no faith in phrenology or palmistry or the physiognomist who pretends that by looking you over he can predict just when you will marry and whom and tell whether you'll make good as a machinist or a manufacturer. My better judgment tells me that these people are all fakes, who know no more about the future than I do, and not so much about my own past, at least—but to me they are nevertheless interesting. I like to hear what they have to say and to try to discover why they say it. I don't believe it. I don't bank on it, but it gives me a pleasant sensation to be told about the delightful things I may expect in the near future.

There was a phrenologist came to town when I was a small boy. For twenty-five cents he agreed to tell me what nature had in mind for me when I was created. He looked me over, ran his hand over the irregularities of my cranium and proceeded to picture a great future for me. Law, as I now recall, was the profession in which I was destined to shine, because he detected, in me great powers of speech. Oratory, small-brained, holding an audience breathless was to be my forte. I knew, and I have no doubt he did also, that I had no particular talent as a public speaker and that if I ever lectured at all it would be with much agony of mind and body, but nevertheless I enjoyed the words he uttered. There is nothing that dispels depression so quickly as to have some one look you over, or hold your hand and from the scars and callouses, and wrinkles which decorate its surface, discover the fact that there is really something to you, that fortune, and success, and a great and glorious future are waiting for you if you will only hitch up your belt or suspenders. If you are wearing suspenders at the time, and push right ahead to what you are entitled to. These tellers are wonderful encouragers; they pat you on the back; they picture for you a successful future, and a little patting on the back seldom does a man any harm.

As I said before, I know it is all a fake, that any man with any lot of sense will give no credence to what the fortune teller says, but just the same whenever I see a sign announcing, "Your future foretold," I can scarcely resist the temptation to go in and see what the faker will say.

Mohicans Take "Warpath" of Whites

Norwich, Conn.—The last of the Mohicans are on the warpath. They have farred forth to fight what they term encroachment of the white man on their hallowed precincts, and they have armed themselves with the legal weapons of their pale faced brethren instead of with the more destructive instruments of their aboriginal forebears.

The Mohicans, or rather their descendants, have brought suit in Superior court against the state of Connecticut, its attorney general, the city and town of Norwich and others, demanding $1,000,000 for the alleged desecration of a small Indian burial ground near here, in which the body of the great sachem, Chief Uncas, supposedly is buried.

Elveth R. Gray and others, who describe themselves as heirs of the great Uncas, charge the defendants with preventing them from continuing to use the burial ground as a cemetery, that monuments there have been destroyed or removed, and that the so-called reservation has been cut up into building lots.

All told there are not more than 100 descendants of the tribe about which James Fenimore Cooper wrote such fantastic and romantic tales. Some of these are full-blooded, virtually all being white mixed. They live on what they call "the reservation," a small plot of land at Mohegan, on the west bank of the Thames river four miles from here. In reality, it is not a reservation, for it is not under federal or state supervision.

The burial ground involved in the suit is a 10 acre plot. It is studded with several gravestones, one of which marks the supposed last resting place of Uncas. The noted chief's grave is marked by an obelisk monument about seven feet high. Across the face of one side is the inscription "Uncas."

The obelisk has an interesting history. Its base was laid in 1833 in the presence of President Andrew Jackson and a few members of his cabinet, who journeyed by stage-coach to Norwich especially for the occasion. Then, it seemed, the Norwichtites forgot about finishing the memorial until the fall of 1840, when the money to complete it was collected at a Harrison-Tyler campaign meeting.

Finally, on July 4, 1842, the obelisk was raised over the base.

Sheep were first brought to America by the Spaniards under Coronado.

Old Shipyard Passes
One of the oldest shipyards in Europe, the Cantiera Navale Odero della Pace in Genoa, Italy, is soon to be scrapped. It was established in 1407 and in it were built the famous war galleys which were used by the republic against the Turkish corsairs. When Italy was overrun by the French, a number of fighting ships were constructed here for Napoleon. Genoa has grown around the shipyard, which is now in the center of an industrial district. New houses will be erected on the site.

OBITUARY

GEORGE C. KESSLER

Funeral services were held Monday afternoon for George C. Kessler, 72, postmaster of Millburn for years, who died Thanksgiving afternoon at his home, in Bonwell terrace, of a heart attack after having holiday dinner with his family. Mr. Kessler suffered a severe heart attack last August. Interment was in St. Stephen's Cemetery in Millburn.

He was born in Summit, having married in 1888 to Henrietta Bodwell and had since lived in his home in Bonwell terrace, named after his wife's family. He was a member of Continental Lodge No. 2 and A. M., and charter member of Success Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., both of Millburn.

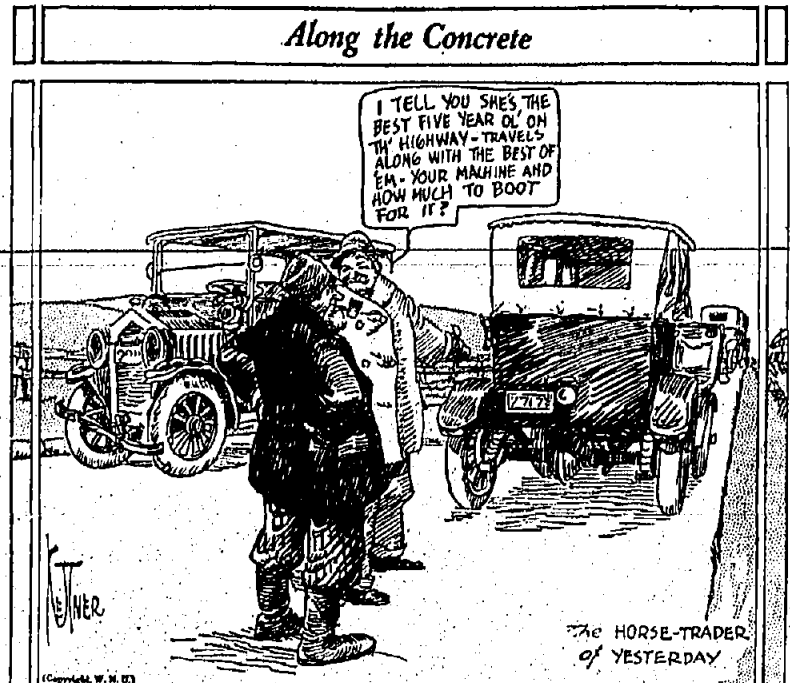

Besides his wife and daughter, Mrs. F. Heller of the same address, he is survived by five sisters, the Misses Katherine, Elizabeth and Emma Kessler of 57 Short Hills avenue, this township; Mrs. Bertha McChesney of Berkeley Heights, and Mrs. Marcus Bookman of Plainfield, and two grandsons.

MRS. ABRAHAM RUBIN

Funeral services for Mrs. Catherine M. Rubin, wife of Abraham Rubin, of Mountain avenue, were held Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock at Haberle and Barth funeral home, 371 Clinton avenue, Irvington. The Rev. O. E. Irvine officiated. Interment was in the Clinton Avenue Cemetery.

Mrs. Rubin, who was sixty-two years old, died Wednesday of last week after a year's illness.

Besides her husband she is survived by three sons, Police Captain Abraham Rubin of Irvington, Leon and Emil Rubin of Springfield; three daughters, Mrs. Eleanor Leist of Irvington, Mrs. Florence Scheider of Plainfield and Mrs. Katherine Zollmer of Rutherford; and three brothers, August and George Paaf of Newark and Albert Paaf of New York.

Long Line of "Caesars"

in Annals of Old Rome
Caesar was the surname of a renowned branch of a line of Roman patrician gentes with the forename Julia. They claimed descent from the sons of Aeneas, the mythical Tulus. Sextus Julius Caesar, a praetor in 208 B. C., is the earliest by that name to be mentioned in history. No direct male descendant was left to bear the name of the great Julius Caesar. Octavian, whom he had adopted and who later became the Emperor Augustus, took the name. The name passed, also through adoption, from Augustus to his immediate successors, Tiberius and Caligula. The use of the name was continued by Claudius and Nero, although they were not Julia. When Nero was killed, the use of Caesar as a family name was discontinued and it became the title of the reigning emperor. The title Caesar was used later to designate especially the heir presumptive, although it continued to remain part of the imperial title. It is from the title Caesar that those of the former Russian czars and German knisers were derived.

THE OLD BRIDGE

PERHAPS THE MOUTHS OF THE local policemen are watering for a Christmas turkey, now that a shooting contest for that prize has been assured... to be simpler, we are referring to the high pistol target scores turned in by the "copers" during the past week, in which an average increase for the department over weekly averages last month shows a figure twenty points, quite a jump... as it stands Patrolman Thompson shot a 96 Wednesday, Stiles a 90, not to forget Sarge with an 87, Selander 88 and so on down the line... however, when the handicaps are allotted (and one should despise that job) the patrolmen will say it was an accident that they shot so well... prospects of an early county park development are encouraged to a great extent with a report on Wednesday that the Chemical Works—old factory near Meisel avenue, has been sold to the park commission, and that the courts approved of the action taken... the company was in the hands of a receiver and legal consent was necessary... the sale also means that the Township will be able to collect several years' back taxes which were due... a slight scarlet fever epidemic which has reached a total of eight cases within the past month, was reported to the Board of Health by Inspector Dr. Henry P. Dengler this week to be well in hand... he assures parents however that care should be taken to keep children in healthy condition and to be on the alert at any danger signal... Christmas is now only two weeks distant from next Thursday... it's getting close, and might we ask if shoppers are buying early... and as motorists also are acquainted, or should be, the first of January is only a week later... as all licensees are void after that date they should be secured now to avoid a later rush which always results in a great inconvenience... reports from the local registration agent, Richard T. Bunnell, indicate that this year's mark of up-plateaus already filed exceeds last year's figures by twenty per cent to date for the same period... some motorists, apparently, are being educated in that "get-your-license-early" habit

A Rile
Little Roger, spending a holiday on his grandfather's farm, was permitted to beguile the hours of a wet day by turning over the leaves of the family Bible. Suddenly he looked up from the faded pages and quaint pictures and called out: "See what I've found, grandpa!" In his hand he held a leaf, old and dry, and after a few moments' reflection he added: "Do you think it belonged to Adam and Eve, grandpa?"

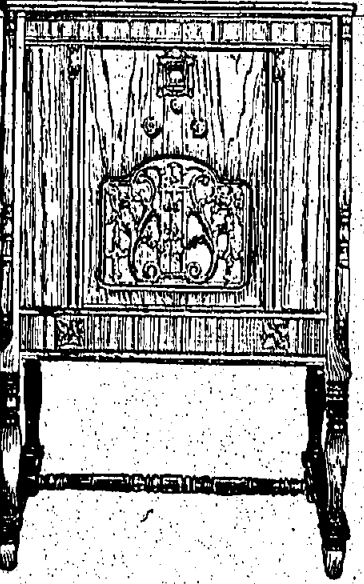

O. K. With Mother
One day, while entertaining a guest, Edwin's mother was called to the phone. Edwin promptly disappeared from the room to return with an expensive looking box of chocolates. After giving several to the guests, Edwin selected some for himself. "Are you sure your mother knows we're eating this candy?" the guest asked. "Sure!" said Edwin. "Didn't you see her frown and shake her head when I came through the hall with it?"

Well, What Did You Say?
We note the utterances of four persons of different degrees of education and greatness as they gazed into the Grand canyon: Theodore Roosevelt—God Almighty made the Grand canyon. Man cannot ever make the words to describe it. An Author—It bankrupts the English language. Girl from New Jersey—Golly, what a gully. Cowboy—It shore is a — of a hole—Vancouver Province.

Word has come from Wichita, Kansas, that a fearless newspaper man is leading an organization which has for its purpose the disregard of a modern sacred principle "Thou Shalt Shave." We have always known that the Middle West has been the center of most of our liberal movements. Now we are convinced of this fact. Recently another member of what we consider the chosen profession inaugurated a movement to wear pajamas out in the open during the warm weather. The fad, if we remember correctly, was taken up by several daring college youths and other eccentrics, but died a natural death. We hope that such a demise does not affect the radical and if we must say it, liberal movement of our brethren from the Jayhawk State. It does not take much reasoning to convince us that shaving should be cast into the limbo of forgotten memories. Fortunately this paper does not carry tonorial or shaving cream advertising. Thus we feel secure in the knowledge that we shall not be censured by the advertising department for overstepping the bonds of discretion. Seriously though, (as if we could ever be serious), our forefathers were proud of their burnisides and their Van Dykes which are now derogatively termed "soup-strainers" "cherry lip" and other scornful epithets. Your fathers and mine did not have to worry about having the gas-heater lit for hot water and replenishing an ever dwindling supply of razor blades. Or of meeting strong feminine competition along the tonsorial line. Or of scratching our strong manly features in a hurry to make the 8:15. Or bearing the smart of a too-close shave. Sociologists inform us that the fas- lion never had a rational basis. The other savants assure us that shaving is a sanitary measure. The Gentleman With the Keen Blade rather verulously urges us to shave every day. The man who wets the advertising copy for shaving cream tells us that we would humbly every morning in the bathroom if we used their brand of stock. But every ounce of assertiveness in our apinal make-up frets against this irritable custom. Do not misunderstand us however. We are not extremists and do not care to ape the men of the House of David. They mixed religion with shaving and we do not care to step on the toe of any one's faith. Nevertheless we are interested in what will come out of Kansas, advertising men, barbers, scornful neighbors, and indignant women-folk to the contrary.

It's Preventable

HEALTH authorities of New York City are pointing out that an increase in the number of diphtheria cases this winter is commensurate with a falling off in the number of inoculations against the disease. This should be a warning to other communities to do everything possible to educate parents in the importance of the toxin-antitoxin treatment as a diphtheria preventative. Parents in town should be very grateful for the opportunity offered by authorities here to have infants and children inoculated as stated periods.

ON THE FUTILITY OF BEING IN EARNEST

Psychologists, the press intones us, have proven to their satisfaction that intelligent babies can be just as intelligent if not more so than their happy-go-lucky, smiling, care-free brothers in swaddling clothes. In short, infants at least, cannot be measured in terms of this so-called gray matter by their emotional expressions. Nevertheless, we are convinced proponents of this "Cheer Up and Smile" philosophy. Not a vicious grin, mind you. Not simply an excuse to show off one's new brand of dentifrice. Not a forced expression resembling the cartoonist's version of Theodore Roosevelt, but a wide-open, happy glowing of the lines of one's face which should start from the big toe and gradually work itself up one's leg, stomach, nose-bridge and jugular vein until it finds complete expression in this mask which we term a face. Gladness, in itself, is no ideal to be striven after. Of course, the Bible tells us of Jestnik Phileas, but we believe he jested in order to cover up his confusion. He was no true philosopher.

JAMES CALDWELL School Notes RAYMOND CHISHOLM

THE PILGRIMS Long, long ago there were some people. They lived in England. The King wanted them to go to his church.

8A CLASS NEWS The Curtis Publishing Company launched a magazine campaign Thursday, November 13, in the Junior High School.

THANKSGIVING One Thanksgiving Day we were all sitting at the table. We had company. We had turkey and everything.

A SCIENCE ROOM EXHIBITION. There is a display of interesting specimens in the Science room. Among the articles shown are monkey nuts from Honolulu; sea urchin shells, odd pieces of coral from the bed of the Pacific.

VISIT ON HOLIDAY. Many children in our class went away for Thanksgiving. Some of them went to visit their aunts. Others spent the day at Grandma's.

THE FIRST WINTER The Pilgrims landed at Plymouth Rock. They had a terrible winter. They traveled many miles. The next winter a Thanksgiving feast was held.

TURKEY'S THANKSGIVING. Said Mr. Gobbler to his wife one day. We'll not have a very joyful Thanksgiving. I'll eat!

A SNOWBALL FIGHT. One morning when Tom woke up the ground was covered with snow. He dressed as quickly as he could and went over to Harry's house.

State Boundaries Long Matter of Disputation. For a great many years the boundary between the colony of New York and Massachusetts was in dispute.

My Greatest Thrill in Sport

An Interview With W. L. (Young) Stribling
Aspiring Heavyweight Fighter.

JUST a few years ago there was a schoolboy in Atlanta, Ga., laboring over problems in algebra, translating Latin and other studies. On the scales he pulls 150 pounds. His muscles are like whiplashes under restraint. In ordinary clothing he looks like the every-day schoolboy.

But in the ring of the squared circle stands the same boy, erect, body perfectly erect, every muscle taut. Muscles perfectly taut, power in every set and pose. He is called to battle. Speed, lightning footwork, jab. A left that shoots in and out so quick that it lands and is away again almost before it is seen. A right with real power. And head-work that is phenomenal.

That is W. L. (Young) Stribling, a heavyweight fighter who has to his credit among many others a newspaper verdict over Mike McFigue, the champion of his class. He it was who was sought out at a prep football game.

But he would not talk. He was too busy. He was a cheer leader. He was doing his jumps, arm flails and all the other wild things cheer leaders do. He said wait. And after the game he talked of his greatest thrill.

"I suppose I ought to say that my victory over Mike McFigue was the greatest, though I could not have the title. For I might say the Berlebach battle, or some of the many others. I might even go to the basketball games I have helped to win. But I will tell you the truth.

"My greatest thrill was when I fought my modest fight—made in every way, for I did a foolhardy thing. But, Mister, what a fine time I had! I even feel thrills chasing up and down my spine now when I talk about it. Go! It was great!

"The thrill came in a fight with a boy far from a champion. He was a glorious fighter, though. But let's get to the encounter. I am supposed to be clever. I ought always to box. I ought never to lose my temper. I should rarely slug.

"But this time I forgot the things I should do and the things I should not. I was mad—so mad that I just fought. FIGHT! FIGHT!

"Hed Herring was my opponent. We were scheduled to go ten rounds. But at the going in the first round Hed came tearing out of his corner for me and smacked his fist landed with a thud on my nose.

"I saw red. I was so mad that I forgot everything but that punch on the nose. And I slugged. That suited Hedding, and we both slugged. From my corner came instructions to box, but I just slugged.

"Round after round we stood practically toe to toe and lambasted one another with everything we had. I was in great shape and in the seventh Hed began to weaken.

"From then on I never let up, but he was game and he was not to be put out. But I liked him.

"And if I live to be a champion, I do not believe I will ever have a greater thrill, for that hitting was a mad boy's hitting, and I gloried in it."

Winter Driving Cause of Motorists' Trials

The automobile engine should have plenty of power, especially during the cold, winter months. A few motorists, when their engines begin to lose power, start experimenting with different kinds of fuels, little realizing that the trouble is loss of compression, which is a loss of power. There are many causes of this trouble which are difficult to remedy, writes Fred Kingsbury in the Cleveland News.

The first thing is to test the compression of each cylinder. If it varies from another the next job is to locate the cause. There may be a leak in the piston rings, or there may be a leaking valve, or a weak spark plug, or a cracked cylinder head gasket. Of course a cylinder may be scored, but that is another problem.

Tighten Cylinder Head Gasket.
The cylinder head gasket must be kept tight. This tightening must be done evenly all around, taking up a little on each and with all are tight.

Sometimes the piston rings are turned so that all openings are in line. A poor grade of oil will prevent a tight compression seal. Be sure to use the finest oil obtainable and the grade prescribed by the manufacturer of your car.

If a cylinder is worn oval there is no remedy except that of reboring. Sometimes kerrosin will help to free the piston rings of carbon. This should be used, however, when the motorist is ready to drain the crankcase, as dilution of the oil is likely to result.

Tighten Spark Plugs.
Make sure that the spark plugs are tight and that a gasket of good copper and asbestos is provided. A cracked porcelain will allow compression to escape.

If your engine is fitted with priming cups be sure they are tight and stay closed.

During the compression stroke the valves should be closed. If there is a broken or weak spring, or even faulty adjustment, the closing operation will be prevented and there will be no compression.

If the timing is incorrect, a loss of compression will be noticeable in all cylinders in the engine.

Keep the engine free of carbon and be sure the time and tappet adjustments are correct.

Professionals Make Big Money Out of Miniature

Some one suggested a while back that miniature golf would soon engulf the heyday of the professional golfers, but it appears that the professionals have made miniature golf an asset. Walter Hagen and Horton Smith have been giving exhibitions of putting and pitching on corner lots, receiving $125 for a show lasting three and one-half hours, and $50 for an hour's entertainment.

Most of the other leading professionals are taking to the miniature courses, finding a new source of revenue there.

Police to Use Radio

A police wireless system is planned for Washington, D. C. Receiving sets are to be installed in sixteen automobiles, six sets are to be held for emergency use, and six sets will be placed in police headquarters outside the District of Columbia.

Young Gridder Out-Talked Old-Time Coach, Bob Zuppke

a corky bunch. They think they can take the varsity over the distance. They have in their line a big fellow named Gorgonsion, who is quite a talker. He is always talking the boys out of everything but their shirts. After the frosh varsity game, early in the season, Zuppke was operating his var-

Why Oil Filter Must Be Serviced

Motorists should not neglect the oil filter on their car. Clean oil means longer engine life and smoother performance. The oil filter removes dirt, carbon and other foreign matter from the oil. The removal of this foreign matter decreases wear on the moving parts of the engine thus assisting in prolonging its life. It is important that the filter cartridge be removed after 10,000 miles of driving, as after this mileage it becomes filled with the foreign matter taken from the oil and ceases to function at highest efficiency. If the cartridge is not renewed at this mileage the whole purpose of the filter is defeated.

Pedestrian on Crosswalks Have Right of Way in Los Angeles

Pedestrians on marked crosswalks at highway intersections not controlled by traffic signals have the right of way over motorists, according to traffic ordinances in most cities.

In the Los Angeles traffic ordinance this is specifically provided in sections stating that:

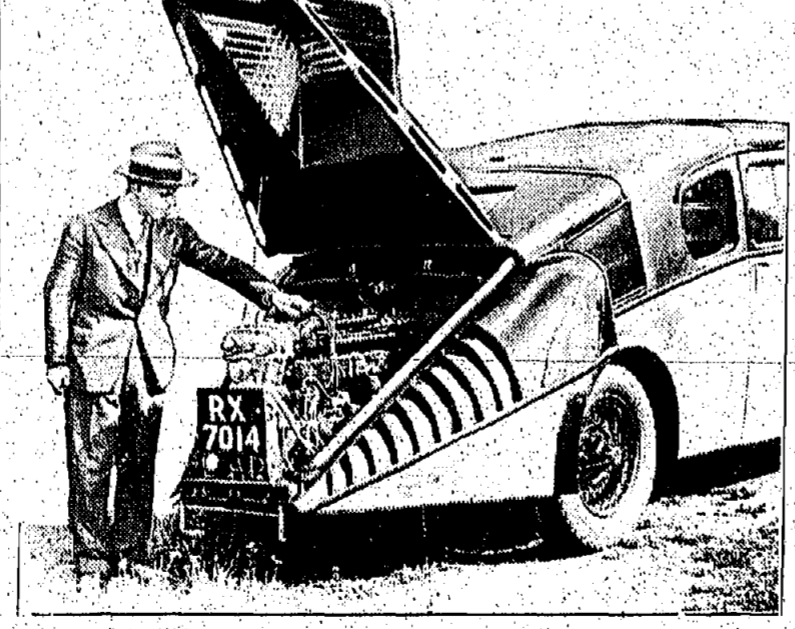

"It shall be unlawful for the operator of any vehicle to drive into any crosswalk outside of the central traffic district, which is marked as provided in Section 11 of this ordinance, while there is in such crosswalk upon the half of the roadway upon which such vehicle is traveling any pedestrian engaged in crossing the roadway until such pedestrian shall have passed beyond the path of said vehicle, when the pedestrian shall indicate his intention to cross by a timely and continuous warning by holding up his hand, palm out, toward approaching traffic."

Radios on 2,512,000 Farms

American farms now have 2,512,000 radios, while in all of England, or all of Germany, there are only 2,500,000 sets. France has only 1,250,000 sets. Japan has 500,000 and Argentina 530,000.

New Auto Embodies Airship Features

A revolutionary new automobile, shaped like an airship and capable of greater speed as a sedan seating seven than as a stripped chassis, was recently demonstrated in London by its inventor, Sir Dennis Burney, designer and builder of the giant English airship R-100. In appearance the "Burney Streamline," as the new car is called, suggests the airship with low front, sloping windshield, crescent curved top and long, tapering end extending far beyond the rear wheels. Another innovation is the engine at the rear, which eliminates noise, heat and fumes while driving. Sir Dennis asserts that if the car could reach 180 miles an hour it would actually rise in the air, owing to its streamlining. It is a straight eight, of 22 horse power and is capable of 80 miles an hour. Smooth riding is assured by having each wheel independently sprung.

INTERESTING BITS OF VARIOUS SPORTS PICKED UP EVERYWHERE

Why don't all those heavyweight boxers just forgive and forget?

Thirty-four players have hit 400 or better in four or more world series games.

Elephant Barrios, French heavyweight, stands six feet and a half and weighs 210 pounds.

The Northwestern football squad seemed strong enough this fall to keep the opposition at a distance without snafus.

The St. Louis Browns are the only baseball club in either major league that has not won a pennant.

According to scouts, in the big leagues there are fewer good young baseball players in the United States today than ever before.

There seems to be a growing opinion among amateur football players that the amateur football player also is worthy of his hire.

Rogelio McNamara, "Iron man" of bicycle racing, always tends to his own eyes, replacing tires and making repairs and adjustments.

Miss Stella Walsh now holds nine world's records in women's track and field sports. She recently returned from a triumphant tour of Europe.

One factory is turning out 8,700 radio sets a day, and still that's not enough to take care of all the football fans who cannot get into the stadiums.

Football used to be considered a dangerous game, but now the fatalities have been transferred from the gridiron to the fan traffic bound for the games.

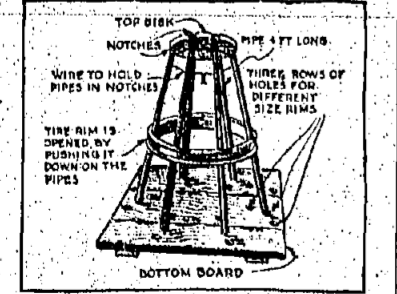

Two women are suing the Cleveland Baseball club for injuries suffered when a foul tipped ball bounced into the grand stand. They are asking for $20,000.

Jess Haines has been with the Cardinals ten years, having cost $10,000 when bought from Kansas City. That was the most money the Cards ever paid for a player.

Next baseball winter to be adopted by clubs in the major leagues will rule No. 22 on the 1st governing or-
