Bedouins New at 1934 Chicago Fair

A Tunisian village, reproducing the color and atmosphere of Northern Africa, will be one of the novel features of the coming summer's Century of Progress Exposition at Chicago, opening June 1. Fierce Bedouins, Arab Sheiks, North African craftsmen demonstrating their arts and handicraft, and native merchants displaying their wares will lend a picturesque aspect to the village. Street bazaars, a mosque, an Arab theater, and towers and buildings reproducing North African architecture will be features.

Frozen Boots!

LITTLE AMERICA, ANTARCTICA, Feb. 12 (via Mickey Radio)—Believe it or not, we are still hauling supplies from the scattered caches on the ice into Little America and, according to my boss, Commander Nobile, we shall be at it for a total of three weeks or more. I am actually living in a little tent out by Pressure Camp and I'm looking forward to getting into one of those warm snow-buried wooden huts in Little America that isn't in danger of being blown away by the wind.

Speaking of wind, we've got plenty of it and they tell me this is only a beginner. We are reaching the end of our summer season down here and the boys tell me it is nice and balmy. I wouldn't know that. The thermometer says fifteen degrees below zero and a blinding wind sends the cold right through our veins.

There are 51 of us working on the ice and already we are watching each other's faces for signs of frostbite. If we see a small white dot appear on another fellow's nose we run up to him and help him to rub it with snow to restore the circulation. Frostbite is no fun under our circumstances and Dr. Shirey has been busy fighting it with us, but now he is gone. Illness forced him to quit the Expedition and he is on his way back to New Zealand on the Jacob Ruppert. We'll miss him. We understand the research ship, Discovery II, is bringing us another doctor who will be transferred to the Bear at Oakland and brought here to spend the next year or so with us on the ice. Then the Bear will have to run out of here to New Zealand before the Ross Sea freezes again, so we'll be left all alone for twelve months. I wonder—about a lot of things!

In addition to my job of segregating the many types of fuel and oil for the various airplanes, tractors and snowmobiles, as they require it, I am now helping in the distribution of parts for all these machines. Gosh, I didn't know there was so much work in the world! The only water we have is heated snow, so even the sketchy washing of hands and face and shaving are priceless luxuries. Bathing is out of the question. Later, when we get indoors we'll clean ourselves with cold cream. I never realized what a wonderful song that was, "Gee, How I Hate To Get Up In The Morning." It is a miserable feeling crawling out of a warm sleeping bag into a temperature of ten below zero and finding your boots frozen solid so you have to beat them against the tent pole to soften them up before you can put them on and thus get your feet in out of the weather. No yawning or stretching. Once awake and out of your nest and you have to move fast.

At Carbonna, the cook, is having a picnic trying to feed us properly. Working under tremendous difficulties, with only a single three-burner gasoline stove to prepare five meals every 24 hours for 51 men, he is performing miracles. But we must eat fast. The food turns stone cold in two or three minutes and freezes solid in ten. Out on the trail we have thermos bottles of hot cocoa. You can bet I am very careful to keep that stove supplied with the proper gasoline.

We are working day and night at top speed to get our supplies to Little America before the bay ice and barrier ice foot break off. There is a considerable crisis of this kind now at Pressure Ridge but, with luck, we'll beat it.

I'm delighted at the radio news that these disconnected, hurried little yards of mine are proving interesting and are running to hundreds of newspapers and that my club is growing so fast. They tell me that high school teachers in history, science and geography are enrolling their entire classes and studying the stories with the working maps every week. That's swell! The more the merrier. We welcome as members, without any cost whatever, all people interested in aviation, adventure and exploration who send in a self-addressed stamped envelope to C. A. Abell, Jr., president, Little America Aviation and Exploration Club, Hotel Lexington, 4th Street and Lexington Avenue, New York, N. Y. and the club staff will send them all a membership card and a big map of the South Polar region.

After the Great Earthquake in India

Monchyr, a city of 35,000 inhabitants, was reduced to a pile of debris in the quake that shook central India recently. Throughout the 100 square miles affected by the disaster a death toll of from 5,000 to 10,000 was recorded, and countless thousands were injured. Monchyr, a thriving community and center of the cigarette industry, was almost completely wiped out. This is a photograph of a section of the city.

Rats Help Science Prevent Baby's Rickets

WHAT'S the good of a rat? Science, at last, has found an answer to this question which people have asked for centuries. It has found a real use for these noxious and despised little animals.

Rats, it seems, have eating habits much like human beings, and thousands of them are being used in laboratories all over the country to study the health values of many of the foods we eat.

One of the great discoveries made with the aid of rats was the substance known as "Vitamin D" which was found in cod-liver oil. This substance was proved to be needed for building healthy bones and sound teeth. Children, deprived of it, develop a disease characterized by poor bone development and called "rickets."

Vitamin D is now extracted from cod-liver oil and added to milk, bread, and other foods so that children may get this essential vitamin in an agreeable form. Rats are used to test such foods to make sure they contain enough of the vitamin to ward off rickets.

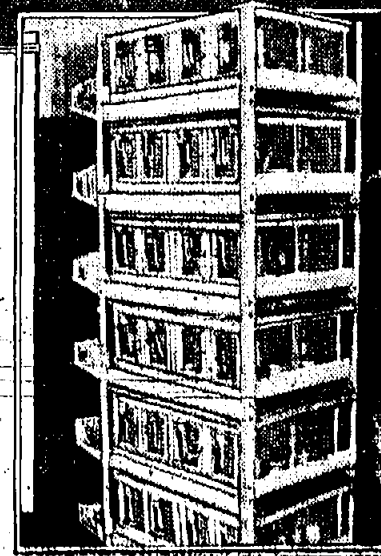

This is the way the test is made. Young rats, as soon as they can eat solid food are placed on a diet known to be free from vitamin D, for several weeks. This special diet prevents their bones from hardening—in other words, they get the rickets.

Then they are placed in individual cages and fed on a diet containing varying amounts of a food supposed to contain vitamin D. Their bone development is now watched very carefully. X-ray examinations, among others, being used. Presence of vitamin D in the food is indicated by signs of healing of the bones, and the amount of the vitamin is estimated by the extent of the healing.

Living animals have to be used in this way to determine the presence of vitamin D in foods, because ordinary chemical methods fail to detect it.

The "Ratz-Karleton Hotel" is no joke. It is the modern way of housing scores of rats used by scientists for testing the efficacy of foods containing vitamin D needed by children to prevent rickets.

How Workers in the C. W. A. Get First Aid Instruction

A TYPICAL corps of CWA first aid workers receiving instruction in various branches of the state received the training. Upon completion of the course, the men returned to their regular CWA jobs, equipped to handle accident cases that might arise in the ranks of their fellow workers. This picture shows one county corps getting some pointers on the art of applying splints and bandages. From telephone company headquarters who cooperated with CWA safety officials in all parts of the state.
