COUNTY HIKING CLUB HAS 25 MEMBERS

Walks Range From Two Miles, For Novices To All-Day Hikes Through Reservation

Not even the rationing of shoes is expected to decrease the interest in hiking throughout the Watchung Reservation and other wooded areas of the Union County Park System, according to W. J. Tracy, chairman and secretary, who reports that his outdoor activity in the county seems to have been least affected by present world conditions.

ent is slightly more than two miles, which seems to be enough of a trip for novices, while more experienced walkers look upon that journey as a mere "appetizer" for longer trips down through the Blue Brook Valley, past the Hemlock Grove, the former "Deserted Village" and Soly's Pond to the southwestern end of the reservation which is bounded by Diamond Hill road, New Providence and Scotch Plains.

Another well-traveled trail is the one which leads from the main park drive from Mountainside, past Prospect Grove picnic area, to the Observation Tower on the First Watchung Mountain. Clear days find this route particularly well-traveled by those who seem to think that "distance lends enchantment to the scene" and therefore climb to the tower's topmost platform, nearly 600 feet above sea level, to view the surrounding countryside as well as the skyscrapers of New York City and the various bridges crossing the Hudson River and the Kill von Kull.

Although the park commission's supply of a pictorial map of the Watchung Reservation is nearly exhausted, a few copies are still available to hikers who request them. To add to the pleasure of those planning trips to the reservation, the park commission also offers mimeographed literature on the "History of the Deserted Village," "Geology of the Watchung Reservation," "Migration of Birds," and "Seasonal Distribution of Birds." Requests should be sent to The Union County Park Commission, Administration Building, Watchung Park, Elizabeth.
