Easiest of Vegetables For Home Canners Are Tomatoes

Pride and joy of the home canner are tomatoes, easiest of all vegetables to put up at home. Sought for their bright color, good tart flavor and high vitamin C rating, home-grown, home-canned tomatoes are more prized than ever now that the commercial pack is so scant.

No fancy equipment is needed to home-can tomatoes. If you don't have a regular water bath canner you can easily improvise one from a wash boiler or deep kettle or bucket. All that's necessary is that the container be large enough to hold several jars at a time without crowding, and deep enough to let the water boil rapidly 2 inches over the top of the jars when they are set on a low rack. This rack, which can be knocked together from a few strips of wood if no wire one is available, allows water to circulate freely all around the jars, keeps glass from overheating and cracking.

Here's the how-to-do-it on home-canned tomatoes, direct from the Government's canning expert of the Bureau of Human Nutrition and Home Economics, U. S. Department of Agriculture. Use firm, ripe tomatoes with no decayed spots. One spoiled tomato can ruin a whole batch of canned tomatoes. First skin the tomatoes. Easiest way to do this is to put them in a tray or wire basket, dip them in boiling water for about a minute, and follow with a quick dip in cold water. Then drain, peel and remove the cores.

Put the tomatoes in quarters, heat until the pieces are boiling hot through and through. Pack boiling hot into jars—adding 1 teaspoon of salt for every quart. Fill the jars with boiling hot tomato juice and process immediately in a boiling water bath. Have water boiling in the deep vessel, with low rack to hold jars of hot-packed tomatoes on the rack, leaving enough room for the water to circulate freely around and under each. Have enough boiling water to cover the jars 2 inches and keep it at this level throughout the processing. Put the cover on the boiling bath. And start counting processing time when the water comes to a rolling boil. Process hot-packed tomatoes for five minutes, whether jars are pints or quarts.

Daughter To Scotts

Mr. and Mrs. Bailey B. Scott of Cinnel Brook road, Millburn, announce the birth of a daughter, Susan at Orange Memorial Hospital, on Sunday. The couple have another daughter, Polly, Mrs. Scott, the former Jenn Butler of Chatham, is the Springfield social correspondent for the Newark News.

BETTIQUETTE SAYS

Springfield will soon have a visit from the B. B. Bank Club. One of the main objects of the club is to help the home canner. The club is the one in the town for first and second prizes. The club has been created by dividing a larger floor space with partitions of translucent glass blocks and wood strips. Easy to keep clean, the partitions can be removed with complete silence when no longer needed. On the top of the low glass partitions are set plants and pots of trailing vines to add to the pleasant atmosphere provided by the clean and lustre of the glass block. It sounds most attractive.

CONSERVATION GUIDES. The secret of feeding a family well balanced meals, when smaller quantities as well as less variety are available—is found in getting the most from every bit of food we buy. "Waste nothing" must be the motto of every household. Here are some guides for conservation which apply to everything we eat. Let things no more than needed for the family; (2) store all foods properly to prevent waste by drying or spoiling; (3) cook food to conserve their nutritive value and retain flavor; (4) plan menus so that meals are high in nutritive value and (5) use every bit of left-overs.

Here's a bright idea from a wise wartime cook for you to borrow. Try, keep, pass on! Pick a day a week, any day, say Wednesday, and make it "Wag, Dish Day" for the family. Serve them something new, different, they haven't tried before. Make a parlor game of it and they'll be game to make a go of it. (Know) It's well-nigh impossible to get variety into a menu and keep it balanced for nutrition besides when you must rely on the same foods in plenty which are available. Otherwise adventurous cooks hesitate to lose their ration points, money, time when they invest in something different the family thumbs down?

The only way to do it is to come right out in the open with it. Challenge the family there's good sportsmanship in the fastest eater if he knows it will help win the war! Make a judge of papa, a jury of the young ones. Have them eat it up, then take a vote. Like it? Want to have it again? Suggestions for improvement, please? Shall we change the sauce, the seasoning? Try it with a different base. If it doesn't pass muster, then watch out for next week's new dish special!

Now if ever is the time for families to pull together and have fun (and it's not silly, it's sense. Try it—and let this collection of new-to-you's start you off, it's a sales man when you serve them!

ODD FACTS

The word "grocer" is first found in old city records of London, spelt "grosser." It referred to merchants who brought in large "gross" quantities. The cashew nut, which comes from India, grows on the end of a fruit of apple like appearance. Sassafras was a food in use by the Indians when America was discovered. The Indian name was Sassaumans. There are two different types of artichoke, the "globe artichoke" and the "Jerusalem." The globe is grown for its large edible flower-like heads. The Jerusalem is grown for a winter vegetable but, parishes.

Playground Activities

The most interesting contest of the week in the Springfield playground was the treasure hunt. The children were allowed to go in search of the hidden treasures. These prizes were colored, red, blue and yellow, representing first, second and third awards. Children were permitted to keep the prizes they found, and a good time was had by all. First prize was won by Anna Hevrik, second, Frank Stebbins and third, Carol Leavert.

During the past two weeks the children have been preparing a nature corner. Included is a colony of working ants, a turtle, three frogs and a collection of over fifty butterflies. Winners in the valley hall through contest this week were: Girls under 12, Anna Culberley, first; Marilyn Rein, second; Jean Furber, third. Boy winners under 12 were: Frank Scritto, Emory Ecker and John Scritto, respectively.

The park commission has recently installed a 10 feet regulation horseshoe pit. The park is open until dark every night except Sunday and all athletic equipment is available.

FROM GARDEN TO SHELF
Jars Of Jersey Peaches

By MARY W. ARMSTRONG
County Home Demonstration Agent

New Jersey has been more fortunate than many of the other states in that only a small part of its peach crop was destroyed by spring frosts and winter killing this year. And since peaches grow in all sections of the state, it should be relatively easy to obtain high quality fruit to can, freeze, and dry.

Eighteen quart jars can be filled from a bushel of peaches weighing 50 pounds. The fruit should be ripe, but not soft or bruised. Imported fruit can be made into jams, jellies, and preserves, or cut into slices for canning and freezing.

After sorting the fruit and washing it, scald the peaches in boiling water for about 30 seconds. When the skins start to loosen, remove the peaches, plunge them into cold water, and then remove the skin. Work with only small quantities at one time, so that none of the fruit be given an opportunity to darken when exposed to the air.

Canned Peaches
The flavor and color of peaches is best when they are canned with sugar. Make a syrup by boiling five cups of water or peach juice with two cups of sugar. Corn syrup or honey used in the following proportions will stretch the sugar somewhat: 3/4 cups of water, 1 cup of sugar, and 1 cup of corn syrup or honey. This proportion will provide enough syrup for four quarts of fruit.

To hot-pack peaches, pre-cook the fruit in the hot syrup for five minutes and then pack the peaches into sterilized jars, adding enough syrup to fill the jars within the half-inch space. Remove bubbles of air from the jar by running a pointed knife down the side. Seal all jars partly except the soft-seal and type, which should be completely tightened and processed for 15 minutes in a hot water bath or of 15 minutes in a heat-regulated oven set at 250 degrees Fahrenheit. Uncooked peach halves may be packed into hot jars and then covered with boiling hot syrup up to one-half inch of the top of the jar, then a knife down the inside of the jar to remove bubbles, and seal according to the type of jar cover states in that both for 20 minutes (soft-seal) or 25 minutes (stiff-seal) peaches or in a heat-regulated oven set at 250 degrees F. for 20 minutes. Seal all partially sealed jars.

Frozen Peaches
Because yellow freestone peaches freeze much better than other varieties, Golden Jubilee, J. H. Hale and Elberta are the varieties recommended. Scald the fruit to remove the skins and then cut it into halves or slices. To prevent the fruit from becoming brown, cut it into the syrup in which it is to be frozen. This syrup is made of two cups of sugar and five cups of water boiled together and cooled. Pour four parts of corn syrup and 2 1/2 parts of water over the fruit.

Remove the cut fruit from the syrup and fill the moisture-vapor-proof containers within 3/4 of an inch of the top. Cover with the prepared syrup. Seal the containers and freeze immediately at minus 20 degrees Fahrenheit.

Dried Peaches
Peach halves are usually dried with their skins left on, and when properly dried the pieces of fruit should be tough and leathery. Store them in a sealed container made of glass, tin, or airtight paper. More complete directions for this process are given in a bulletin, "Food Preservation by Drying," prepared by W. C. Krieger and available at your county Extension Service office.

A book you will want to read right now is "U. S. FOREIGN POLICY by Walter Lippman." The author, who worked with President Wilson during the last Peace Conference and now presents a summary of the foreign policy views held by the United States now and in the past.

The council on books in wartime has chosen it as an "imperative" book, "imperative to the war effort and the thought of the nation." Wendell Wilkie read it and called it "the most thoughtful and provocative study of our foreign policy I have ever read." Three hundred and forty thousand copies have been printed and it is being published in London. Later there will be French and Swedish translations.

Other non-fiction in great demand are REPERCUSSIONS ON THE REVOLUTION OF 1917-1918 by Harold L.asker, THUNDER AMONG WAVE RIDERS by Eric Curtis, THIRTY SECONDS OVER TOKYO by Captain Ted Lawson, and GEORGE WASHINGTON CARVER by Buckham Hall.

The Nurse At Home

The Sickroom: Carpenter

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the ninth in a series of ten articles on Home Nursing prepared by the Public Information Service of the American Red Cross. For complete details about the standard course, inquire of your local Red Cross chapter.

Through the skill and ingenuity of the father or another boy, the patient at home may have comforts and conveniences comparable to those supplied in the hospital. Bed blocks are almost essential in prolonged illness. The patient can be handled with greater comfort and far less strain on the nurse. Solid blocks of split-foam wood, 6 to 8 inches square and 19 to 12 inches high, are best. Holes cut in the center of one side of each block provide places in which legs of bed minus casters can be fitted. Bed tables may be improvised in a number of ways.

A smooth board, 12 inches long and one from an extension table can straddle the bed and rest on the backs of chairs. Cutting the legs of an inexpensive card table or child's table to the right height, or knocking out long sides of boxes so that the table may be placed on the bed in front of the patient is another suggestion. An orange crate turned on end makes a very acceptable table beside the bed. The top may be enlarged by making a wide board over it. The partition provides handy space and paint, wallpaper or cotton print covering will add much to the attractiveness.

To protect times from the weight of bedclothes, insert a wide board between the mattress and foot of the bed, or place a clean box on its side under the covers. The box should be lined with muslin and covered for cleanliness. A rolled curtain blanket or pillow under the knees relieves muscle strain on back and legs.

Pieces of composition building-board fastened together with hinges make a good screen. Left-over wallpaper or rag magazine covers pasted over it are decorative.

If a bed-pan is not procurable, a padded board secured across one end of an oblong baking-pan will make a good substitute.

A suitcase, washboard or small straight chair placed slantwise against the head of the bed, with pillows over it makes a good back rest.

The tenth and final article of the Home Nursing Series, entitled "What the Patient Should Eat," will appear next week.
