..that all men are created equal"

Today American youths fight and die on foreign soil to preserve the meaning of these words. They fight willingly and fiercely, because they know and believe that freedom is man's rightful heritage. Freedom to worship in the church of their choice. Freedom to speak and to write freely. Freedom of Assembly and Freedom of Enterprise are not mere phrases to them. They know, too, that these same freedoms will make possible the rebuilding of a war-weary world.

YOUR RED CROSS

LOCAL The huge Surgical Dressings program still goes on. The National Red Cross program is 1,600,000 and a half million a month!

Somewhere in New Guinea "Dear Ladies of the Red Cross: When I was still on maneuvers in the States and my wife accompanied me from station to station, I remember now that she would frequently attend the local chapter and assist at folding dressings.

However, since I've been overseas and in the combat zone, and men by the score have come into my aid station for dressings, it wasn't long before the supply my boys had folded and prepared was exhausted.

"Sincerely, H. M. CONSTANTIN, Capt. Medical Corps." The workers at Surgical Dressings celebrated the birthday of their Chairman, Mrs. Lewis MacIntyre Tuesday.

Mrs. Charles Saffery, who is in charge of Staff Assistants managing the Red Cross Office, says that a Staff Assistant is on duty each afternoon there.

HOME SERVICE Lots of the families in this town have furnished one or more men and women to the armed forces. Probably not a very large proportion of these families knows thoroughly what services are available to them and to their sons and daughters in uniform through Red Cross Home Service.

Home Service is the tie between the soldier and the home. It includes emergency communication and welfare inquiries; home confinement reports needed by a commanding officer in deciding questions of furlough or military discharge; reports needed by a medical officer

In this country, communications can be sent by wire directly between the field director and the local Home Service worker. Overseas communications between the serviceman and his family which are handled by field directors and Home Service are cleared through one of the busiest of Red Cross offices in Washington.

The communications are for the main part, inquiries from civilians trying to trace a serviceman relative, or wanting to know about his recovery from an illness or wound, or seeking his advice in some family problem.

There is a Red Cross Field Director in each and every camp and military hospital wherever any of our men are stationed, and on every battlefield.

The field director can do the same. Sometimes chapters are requested by servicemen on leave to lend money for transportation or some other emergency. These loans are the responsibility of the field director covering the man's post or

War Prisoners Aid

American merchant seamen, prisoners in Marlag, Millag Nord, Germany, saved fish cans and tinned fish from cigarettes, melted these down and, using soap moulds, produced a perfect, miniature steam turbine engine. They asked the visiting Y. M. C. A. representative for toy soldiers and other metal objects of relatively low melting point, in order to make a modern boiler and an electric generator for use with the turbine. One man made an accurate clock entirely from wood. Toy boats of all types are popular with these American seamen, and one of them is working on a miniature steam engine for some of these. He declares: "There is a most complete variety of yachts, full-rigged ships and schooners; playing our two fine ponds."

YOUR VICTORY GARDEN

PLANTING CROPS FOR STORAGE

By FRED OSSMAN
County Agricultural Agent

It seems strange to be thinking of frosts during this hot period but those who have gardens must do so. Plants require a certain interval of time from seed sowing to harvest and in only rare cases is it possible to modify this condition. We can often select varieties that have been developed to mature in a shorter period. Some times, as in the case of snap beans, as the days become shorter, the plants will be more or less dwarfed and will bloom and start to form pods.

For those who want to produce roots of beets, carrots and turnips for storage, the best sowing should be made about July 15. Turnips, sold as large yellow turnips, should have been planted by July 1. However, seeds sown now will result in the production of smaller roots. All of these crops are resistant to cold and will continue to grow after light frosts.

What You Can Plant Now

The last sowing of snap beans, both green and yellow, should be made now in those localities where the growing season will be over about September 15. This applies to the northern half of New Jersey and to sections in the southern parts of the state where early autumn frosts may be expected. The nights then are too cool for the proper growth of such tender plants.

It is still possible at this date to make a sowing of a variety of sweet corn that will mature in 60 days. However, this will bring it into the period of the second brood of the European corn borer, so if this insect is present in your locality you will have to take control measures against it.

Get Cabbage Group Planted

Setting of plants of cabbage, Brussels sprouts, cauliflower and celery should be completed promptly. In northern New Jersey use early maturing varieties to plant at this late date. If you are raising your own plants, get them into the garden even though they are small. You can make successive sowings of looseleaf lettuce and fall radicchio between such plants. The cabbage group stand light frosts but are usually harvested before the soil freezes. Brussels sprouts, however, are left standing in the garden and will usually develop buds for harvesting well into December.

It is too early yet to make sowings of head lettuce and spinach for fall use. These plants are affected by long days and will quickly "bolt" to flower and seed heads.

Onion Thrip Serious

At this season onion thrips are apt to be serious on onions from seeds or transplanted seedlings. The onions from sets are now approaching maturity, so they will not be affected so much. If there are gray streaks on the leaves the thrips are at work. The feeding of the insects reduces the quantity of food the plant makes and stores, so the onions will be smaller. Spraying is the only effective control and the material to use is 1 1/2 teaspoonfuls of 40 per cent nicotine sulfate and six teaspoonfuls of powdered or granular soap to one gallon of water. Spray to cover the entire leaf and into the crevices formed by the leaves. Weekly spraying will keep this insect under control.
