$9,000 Verdict Given By Jury To Robert Laing

MOUNTAINSIDE—Borough Clerk Robert A. Laing of 51 Parkway, won an award of $9,000 Tuesday by a Supreme Court jury in which damages were being sought as a result of an automobile accident February 5 in North Plainfield, in which he suffered severe injuries.

Frank Skislowicz of Plainfield was allowed $2,500. Judge Frank L. Cleary ordered consolidation of his cases for trial purposes as they were both involved in the same accident.

The verdicts were against both defendants, the Sparkling Coal Co., Inc. of Brooklyn, N. Y., owner of a coal truck involved, and Mrs. Mary C. Strong, owner of the bus line between Plainfield and Millington. She resides in Millington.

Testimony concerned the crash of the coal truck and a bus, upon which the plaintiffs were passengers. Both drivers were accused of negligence.

Laing sought maximum damages of $10,000 and Skislowicz wanted $7,500. They were represented by Augustus S. Dreier of North Plainfield, borough counsel for MountainSide, King and Vogt appeared for the coal firm and Antonino and Wortendyke for the bus owner.

Pfc. Hambrock had written to his mother that his regiment was the first to enter Paris, and went on from there to Luxembourg, Belgium and Germany.

Continues Gift Of Book Yearly To Library Here

Each year at Christmas time, Mrs. Louis Wierschke, Jr. of New York City, formerly of Springfield, sends the library a children's book. This year we received "Wind in the Chimney" by Cornelia Meigs, illustrated by Louise Messeloff.

It all started several years ago when the library was first organized. Miss Janice Hastings, who was born and grew up in Springfield, read of the library's inception and it brought back many childhood memories so she decided to keep in touch with Springfield by sending a book each year. The old house at 60 Mountain avenue, where she was born is remembered by many and is still referred to as the Hastings' home.

Bernie Pyle's new book "Brave Men" reads like a rambling but accurately written series of letters. He writes to the folks back home, of his own reports of our boys in action. He tells of what the armed forces have been doing in Europe, from the invasion of Sicily through the Italian Campaign to the landing in France and the liberation of Paris.

Special Bond For Older Folk

The Treasury has a bond especially for the older people, but many of them don't know about it. The Agricultural Section of the War Finance Division points out that the current income series G-Bond paying 2 1/2 per cent interest per annum every six months and maturing in 12 years.

"Any person who needs regular income from interest on their money should consider the G-Series. No income is more certain than the Treasury check which is mailed every 6 months to owners of G Bonds. For a current income Government Bond maturing in 12 years, 2 1/2 per cent—a high rate of interest, the Treasury points out.

The G Bond is the ideal investment for the farmer past 50 who might be retiring in less than 10 years. Farmers should buy in G Bonds in Social Security. Few of them have an annuity of any kind. In old age they must live off the income of their property and investments.

Current income is not the only G Bond feature that appeals to the older investor. Like the popular E Bonds the G Series has fixed redemption value. They can be cashed any time after 6 months from issue. Counting interest already received, this cash redemption value is always more than cost. In the event of owner's death the estate can redeem G Bonds at full cost price without any deduction for interest already received. This makes G Bonds ideal for an estate.

Asks Saving of Xmas Wrapping In Scrap Drives

Through the presidents of more than 100 local Chambers of Commerce in the State, State Chairman DeForest Director, William A. Wachenfeld appealed to merchants to place in their Christmas advertising a plea to salvage Christmas wrappings.

In letters to each of the presidents of the local Chambers, Wachenfeld asked them to urge their members, particularly those in the retail business to mention the need for saving waste paper and especially the vast amount of Christmas wrappings that will be used this year.

"Retail merchants," Wachenfeld said, "are keenly aware of the paper shortage because many of them have had difficulty in obtaining the boxes and wrapping paper for their Christmas needs. The shortage continues extremely critical."

He pointed out that more than 700,000 items used by the Armed Forces require paper packaging or paper in some form. This need must be met, he said, in order that adequate supplies of ammunition, food, blood plasma and similar items reach the fighting men on the far-flung battle fronts in time.

"Through placing a plea in their advertising to patrons to save Christmas wrappings for scrapages," Wachenfeld told the Chambers of Commerce, "the merchants will be contributing immeasurably to the war effort and it will reportedly bring home to our citizens the need for paper."

If you do, and who doesn't remember, now is the time to show that you mean what you said by buying that extra bond to bomb Tokyo."

"How about it? Let's make it a banner week and likewise help Springfield substantially in reaching its quota."

Your Garden This Week

By FRED D. OSMAV
Union County Agricultural Agent

Many gardeners have been asking what they can grow over winter in coldframes. The answer is that the climate in the mid-Atlantic States is such that very little will grow in coldframes. It is well to remember, too, that a cold box is a storage medium rather than a growing one. It may be used to protect tender plant materials from severe cold, yet keep them in a dormant condition and so prevent excessive growth. If this growth took place, the plants would almost certainly suffer from a cold snap.

The hardness of a plant depends to a large extent on its growing conditions. When it is dormant, the concentration of its cell sap is greater than when the plant is in active growth. This concentrated sap serves as an anti-freeze material. When the sap is diluted, even the hardest of plants will kill quickly at freezing temperatures.

Half-hardy plants placed in a coldframe will not freeze as severely as they would outdoors. In a frame it is possible to winter half-hardy chrysanthemums, tender hydrangeas, English daisies, forget-me-nots, and several other familiar plants that will not stand extremes in temperature.

A coldframe is merely a box resting on a soil base and covered with glass sash. The tighter the box is built and the closer its sash fits, the more effective the results. If you have a coldframe, this is the time to fill it with any chrysanthemums which stand a chance of perishing if they are left in the open.

If the glass is left on the frame,

Lettuce, cabbage, and onion plants can be wintered to good advantage in a coldframe. It is too late to sow seeds of these plants in a frame now, but if plants can be obtained from some grower who has sown the seed earlier in the fall, there is still time to put them out.

Details for building hot beds and coldframes are contained in bulletin F 1743 free on request to County Agricultural Agent, Court House, Elizabeth 4, N. J.

It will hold throughout the night and slowly by some of the heat units collected during sunny days. It is better, however, to cover the glass on cold nights and on dull days with pieces of old carpet, or something similar, and if this is done it is often possible to keep frost out of the frame and to maintain the temperature just above freezing. Your frame needs an airing on bright, sunny days, however. Raise the sash slightly during the warm part of the day, now and then, to permit ventilation and to keep the temperature fairly even.

If a frame is given protection at night and on cold, cloudy days, the temperature should never go lower than 10 or 15 degrees above zero. This temperature permits wintering camellias, gerberas—if their crowns are well covered—and many other garden favorites. A coldframe is also an ideal place for wintering delphiniums, gaulthias, hollyhocks, and any of the leafy plants that are apt to die out over winter.

Some nurserymen root their evergreens in sand within a closed frame. And gardeners who enjoy experimenting with propagation will find it interesting to plant cuttings in a box of sand, placing the box in a coldframe. The frame or box should be well watered, but only during the warm part of the day. In the spring the cuttings which are rooted can be planted outdoors.

Details for building hot beds and coldframes are contained in bulletin F 1743 free on request to County Agricultural Agent, Court House, Elizabeth 4, N. J.

Assembly and composed of representatives of eighteen members of the organization, these states to be elected by the General Assembly for three years.

A Security Council, composed of representatives of the United States, Great Britain, the Soviet Union, China, and eventually France, and six nonpermanent members, elected by the General Assembly for two years; in permanent session.

A Military Staff Committee, operating under the Security Council and composed of the Chiefs of Staff of the permanent members of the Security Council or their representatives, with other states participating when necessary.

An International Court of Justice.

A Secretariat, headed by a Secretary General as chief administrative officer elected by the General Assembly.

To Maintain Peace

The member states would obligate themselves to settle international disputes which threaten peace by negotiations between the parties, by mediation, conciliation, arbitration, or by reference to the International Court of Justice. The Security Council could at any time recommend procedures or methods of adjustment.

If these methods fail the parties would be required to refer the dispute to the Security Council, which would have authority to take diplomatic, economic, or other measures and, if necessary, to employ, with the assistance of the Military Staff Committee, armed forces to maintain or restore international peace.

These armed forces, including national air-force contingents, would be provided by the member states by special agreements among themselves and approved by the Security Council.

To Promote General Stability and Welfare

The General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council, assisted by expert-commissioners, would consider and recommend solutions of international economic and humanitarian problems, including the promotion of human rights and fundamental freedoms. They would recommend coordination of the policies and activities of specialized international organizations and agencies which may be brought into relationship with the general organization.

Meet Mr. Ridner of Overlook Often Called "Charlie"

From Bulletin No. 11 of Overlook Hospital the following excerpt is taken:

Introduction—Most Mr. Ridner: "We wonder how many in the hospital know him? Not many, we venture. But—Meet Charlie! How many know him? Everyone, we venture to say."

Again and again and again, it seems, that loud speaker says: "Greeting Charlie!" Now you know who we mean.

Since January 1, 1929, almost 16 years ago, Charlie has been with Overlook.

Charlie may not cover shoes and cabbage, but he certainly has some other items. Electric light bulbs, locks, keys, sterilizers, motors, food trucks, and "Why can't I have a short butt here," and "how about some paint there," and "the faucet leaks" and "the radiator's cold" and "the diathermy machine has a short" and Aviation Radioman second class James Francis Burns, son of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Burns of 222 Rankin avenue, Garwood, has been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross for "heroism and extraordinary achievement," by Vice Admiral R. A. Mitscher, U.S.N., commander of the First Carrier Task Force in the Pacific Fleet, acting in the name of the President of the United States. Petty Officer Burns is a 1940 graduate of Regional High School.

The citation reads as follows: "For distinguishing himself by heroism and extraordinary achievement while participating in an aerial flight against enemy carrier forces on October 24, 1944, as a rear seat gunner. While on a search mission he and his pilot discovered an enemy force consisting of at least three aircraft carriers and other enemy warships, and successfully reported them, which message was of utmost importance. Following this they climbed for altitude and made an one-plane bombing attack upon the enemy force in the face of air opposition and extremely intense anti-aircraft fire. On bailout from the dive they were jumped by six enemy fighters and as they approached a cloud in which they were seeking cover he shot down an enemy fighter plane which was attempting to make a run on them. His courage and skill were at all times inspiring in keeping with the highest traditions of the United States Naval Service."

Before entering the service, Petty Officer Burns was employed as a clerk by the General Aniline Company, Grasselli. He entered the service on August 13, 1942.

Mr. and Mrs. William Barry of 6 North avenue, west, Cranford, formerly of Garwood, announce the engagement of their daughter, Eleanor Virginia, to Arnold H. West, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. G. West of 115 Maple avenue, Roselle Park.

Miss Barry is a graduate of Regional High School, class of '41 and is in training at All Soul's Hospital Nursing School, Morristown.

Mr. West, a graduate of Holy Trinity High School, Westfield, is employed in an official capacity by the Western Electric Company at its Haverhill, Mass., plant.

Victory Pledge of An American
I am an American. I and my sons have a big stake in victory. While my sons are fighting for freedom, I will work hard here at home that food and weapons in abundance will ever fight on the side of America.

I will do my part to keep our country financially and economically strong. All income from my work, above the need for necessary expenses, will be invested in War Bonds to buy the equipment that my sons—the sons of all Americans—will use to speed the victory. In making this investment in victory, I am also helping to build the financial reserve for peace and against the day when my sons will come marching home.

When that happy day comes I and my sons will build a better and stronger America in a world where liberty and justice have been made safe for all. My thinking—my money—my time will stay in this war until the finish.

The supply of Christmas trees in 1944 will probably be ample to satisfy holiday needs of Americans, according to data given the Office of War Information by the War Production Board, Department of Agriculture and Office of Defense Transportation. At the same time, however, buyers are warned against "over-zealous buying" as that might create an artificial shortage followed by a waste of trees. In 1943 consumer anxiety about the family tree, which began with slow deliveries to retailers, led to high prices followed by a glut of trees near Christmas time. Many surplus trees sold for practically nothing on Christmas Eve and a sizable leftover had to be destroyed. The 1944 supply should be about that of last year.

American communities have a stake in the fact that the Federal Housing Administration has acted to speed the making of insured home loans to veterans by private institutions under the terms of the G. I. Bill of Rights. The FHA is now accepting at its field offices from private lending agencies applications for the insurance of principal loans supplemented by loans under Section 505 of the G. I. Bill. These are cases where the Veterans Administration guarantees an equity loan not to exceed $2,000, and where the principal loan, which must comply with FHA regulations, is insured by FHA. The federal agency seeks all possible protection of veterans in what may be the most important single financial transaction in their life. Of interest to American families everywhere is the fact that the Army must recruit 10,000 nurses immediately in order to care for wounded and sick soldiers, both at home and overseas. In addition, 1,000 nurses are needed by the Veterans Administration for its services.

and airplane tires which the war uses up at an appalling rate. The upshot of this situation is the unrelaxed dependence upon civilian life users to conserve and conserve. The shifts to synthetic rubber mean, the board explained some sacrifice in quantity and quality, but such is an essential price to pay to conserve natural rubber.

The need for cleaning and checking over the working parts of passenger car engines in anticipation of winter weather is stressed by the Office of Defense Transportation as a personal program of conservation for every motorist. "Winterizing" of engines should include filling with winter grade engine oil, cleaning of ignition distributor cap, adjustment of spark plugs, radiator protection with anti-freeze solutions and regular testing of storage battery each two weeks. Objective: to make the family car last "all winters."

If your service man isn't receiving the SUN each week, free, send in his correct mailing address.

The Office of Price Administration, however, took steps to increase future supplies of non-rationed footwear by officially classifying that pigskin leather as being used for non-rationed shoes. This type of footwear is largely a wartime development. Ultimately the new shoes will be mainly available in infants', children's, misses' and women's sizes. OPA cautioned that the shoes with pigskin uppers will not be available in quantity for some time as very little raw material is at present being tanned into leather.

The OPA assured consumers that advance rations of fuel oil will be granted to them while they are having control heating equipment reauthorized to burn oil under the provisions that recently made rations available to East Coast and Middle West consumers who cooperated in the original conversion program.

The OPA has set ceiling prices on two types of Army shoes for men, which the Treasury Procurement Division proposes to sell for civilian use. Retail ceiling will be $6.50 a pair on both types, one of which is leather soled with leather tap over the sole, and the other a leather-soled shoe with outside rubber tap. Both types are russet tan with straight tips and bellows tongue.

The overall rubber problem remains far from solved and Allied crude rubber stocks are now at the lowest since the start of the war, the Combined Raw Materials Board reports. This statement makes a distinction between the successful synthetic rubber program and the natural rubber supply. It is natural rubber that is being used faster than it can be obtained and it is natural rubber that is needed in heavy truck tires.

YOUR CHILD TODAY

By MARION F. McDOWELL, Extension Specialist in Child Development, N.J. Col. Agriculture

One morning a short time ago a little girl of almost three invited me to look at her playthings. It was Monday and she had put up her ironing board, taken out a small, red-handled iron, tucked her Teddy bear snugly into the clothes-basket, and was ready for the day's work.

When I had exclaimed properly over these possessions, she trotted into an adjoining room and came rolling out on her trolley—a nice big one, with pedals. Pedals prevent foot distortions, by the way, and any riding equipment for youngsters should have them.

The little girl had illustrated a child's enjoyment of housekeeping toys with which the activities of grown-ups can be imitated. She had shown, too, the need for playthings that promote the use of the large muscles of the body.

If I could have stayed longer, I am sure my small friend would have shown me a book, or crayons, or modeling clay, or big beads to string. These are playthings that encourage quietness after periods of activity, and also provide opportunity to invent and create. A child enjoys materials that lend themselves to the making of things.

Just the other day the mother of a 19-months-old boy told me how he had carefully laid several milk-bottles end-to-end and said "train." She thought he enjoyed this chance to create a train more than playing with the handsome toy train that was on the shelf in his own room. Probably the toy train, pictures of trains, and the real train that he had seen all contributed to his fun with the milk bottles.

Among the outdoor playthings that children of three enjoy are legs to roll, boards with cleats on the ends ready to be placed against a box and thus provide an incline for small feet to run up and down on, or to make into a bridge.

Other housekeeping toys are dolls, of course—and there are more of them than ever this year, nice big-doll beds, and doll carriages. If you can't buy a carriage, get Dad to fix up a smooth wooden box with wheels or casters, and fit it out with a pillow and covers.

Other toys for quiet play are simple-wooden puzzles, with few pieces, soap bubble pipes, a postcard collection, mounted pictures of trees and flowers, of animals, and of automobiles and planes. If you provide these types of toys to quiet play at intervals, his contentment and enjoyment are assured.

TEAM WORK

Whom does your representative represent? This is a fair and timely question, moreover, not as silly as it sounds. He is supposed to represent you and a few thousand other people in your county and nearby counties, but does he do it? If so, how does he go about it? How does he know what the people who elect him think about questions he must help decide?

Of course congressmen all have plenty of people to tell them what to do. Whenever a congressman is appointed to an important committee, he can be sure of one thing: a line will form to the left outside his door; people waiting to tell him which side of his bread is buttered, show him very startling statistics, about sewer-works in his ears and shed tears on his desk.

Welcome Callers

Such lines are made up of miscellaneous people, very much like lines that form in cafeterias or at ticket-office windows; usually nobody is there you know or really want to see. But when the unusual occurs; when somebody from back home falls in line at a congressman's door, he gets admitted to the representative's own private office. Why? The congressman wants to see him.

Representatives are elected and sent to Washington to represent the people back home. I know several of them and, all told, I have known a great many. Every one I ever knew wanted sincerely to do that very thing. They were smart men but there was not a mind reader in the bunch. They couldn't sit in Washington and have a very good idea what the electors expected of them.

The Right Approach

In a few words, the average congressman gets plenty of advice offered to him and very little of it comes from the right place. In rare instances when somebody writes or visits him from back home the message represents one man's hasty, perhaps unbalanced, judgment; or sometimes when they come in big bunches they plainly reflect a frame-up—written by one man, signed by many.

People who know how to walk in crowded streets and build their homes in layers, sometimes make facetious references to Arkansas but we are doing something about congress down here—Just before Thanksgiving a group of sixty important men of Batesville and throughout held a meeting to consider some national legislation soon to be considered by their representative. At the end of the

Preview to a Brave New World

THIS YOUNG BRIDE and her soldier husband have their own private meaning for "H-hour." To them it stands for the day when they are reunited and can make their dream of a home of their own come true . . . a home already planned in miniature.

In the meantime, while his address is c/o Postmaster, she is making sure that his return will find her as lovely as when he last saw her. Water plays an important part in her beauty routine—she depends on it to keep her complexion fresh and smooth, her hair shining, the sparkle of health in her eyes.

A salute to our gallant war brides! . . . Let's do all we can to make their dreams come true soon.

meeting they mailed him their advice accompanied by a list of those present.

Not An Accident
The gathering was no kind of a coincidence. Somebody called the meeting and made sure that it was conducted in an orderly fashion. Arrangements were made to have some impartial, expert opinion on hand to answer questions, explain technical terms if necessary and speed up deliberations. The matter under discussion was something soon to come up before the committee of which their congressman is a member.

I would like to commend this method to public spirited and patriotic citizens everywhere. It is easy enough for men who don't even know their representative's name to lean against a gate-post (or a lamp-post) and revile congress. On the other hand, helping out a congressman whom you know wants to do the right thing is loyalty, teamwork and citizenship of the first order.

Scores of 951, 995 and 947, the best record thus far of the season, spelled defeat for Jack and Joan's, who couldn't keep up with the bus team. Luke's 200 and a 201 game for Hamilton featured the middle game, in which Somerset rolled its best total.

Hall and Pubs strengthened its hold on third place by taking two out of three against Mountainside Inn. War Prisoners Aid

The election of Sergeant Jagath Royan as Man of Confidence of State IV D 22, in Germany, constituted an unusual tribute to Christianity. For this is a camp of East Indians, mostly Moslems.

Hindus and Sikhs—less than 1 per cent are of the Christian faith. Yet they chose the Hindu as their representative.

Sergeant Royan was converted at a Scandinavian mission in Madras, India, where he also joined the Y.M.C.A. Now, in this prison camp, he has organized a course of instruction preparatory to baptism—during one of the sporadic visits of a Christian clergyman. Recently, two of his compatriots were thus baptized by a French chaplain, after several months of instruction by the sergeant, who summed up the event thus simply: "We were only 17, and now we are 19 Christians."

Except for the sergeant's fervor there is no practical reason why anyone there should become a Christian. For War Prisoners Aid of the Y.M.C.A., participating service of the National War Fund, provides promoters of every faith with their own religious materials, without discrimination. Yet the results achieved by this modern Indian apostle caused a recent visitor to his tiny group to declare: "This is by far the most living Church found in a war prison camp!"

REGIONAL OUTCLASSES UNION

Opener Easy For Bulldogs, 33-18 In Court Opener

Regional's basketball team got off to an auspicious start at Home Tuesday afternoon by outclassing Union High's eagerly, 33-18. It spelled revenge for the Bulldogs who lost twice to the Union Farmers last year, once by 20 points and the second time by a single point.

Regional's zone defense kept the visitors out of scoring range most of the game, and Union was able to make only one field goal in each of the last two periods.

For the new basketball coach, Walter Hohn, the locals presented a well-balanced attack and defense. Bill Detrick, who just finished a successful football record as Regional's captain on the gridiron, continued as center for the courtsters. He chalked up 15 points, mostly on fancy shots from the pivot.

Dick Palzer dropped four field goals for eight points, to take runner-up honors for the locals. Union's Billy Buob topped the visitors with nine points.

Palzer and Detrick are the only veterans from last year's varsity. Lost as first stringers were Herb Callahan, Charles Wilde, Ray Burns, Jumbo Gwatney and Raymond.

Among the newcomers to the varsity is Bernie Treadway, who moved to this area from West Virginia. Gene Sacco, Bob Bell, vein, Gene Thorpe, Wesley Gill and Walter Street will make up the balance of the first string squad.

Boy Scout Activities

On Friday evening the Springfield Boy Scout Troop No. 70 journeyed to Union and participated in the District "K" rally of all Springfield and Union Troops.

The Scouts of Troop 70 turned in a grand performance and finished second, scoring 29 points, as against 33 points for the winners, Troop No. 68 of Union, who have made it a habit during the past four years of taking top honors. Out of seven events, Troop 70 took first place in three, including compass relay and Morse signaling. Besides this, they earned second in semaphore signaling, and a fourth in fire-by-friction.

Every member of the troop is deserving of praise for their part in bringing this honor to Springfield.

Tonight Troop 70 is host to parents and friends at the annual "Parents' Night" at James Cahill School. An inter-tribal rally and patrol stands will comprise the bulk of the program.

The Committee of Boy Scout Troop No. 68 held a meeting on Monday night when they discussed the activities and progress of the troop. Progress of the troop during the month of November has shown a very encouraging improvement. Scoutmaster Richard Egan and his assistant, Robert Briggs, are assisted by Roy Zeigler, John Spauld, William Kraus and Walter Charles.

During this month of November the boys were made up into teams for competition in activities such as fire-by-friction, compassing, signaling and others.

On Friday evening, Troop No. 68 also attended the Springfield Union Boy Scout rally and came away with fourth place honors.

The annual cake sale will be held during Boy Scout week in February. This sale is for the purpose of raising funds for the troop.

"Parents' Night" will be announced in the near future. A program of interest is being planned by the Scout leaders.

A Board of Review from the Union County Boy Scouts Committee will visit the Springfield Scouts on December 13 at 7:30 P. M. in the James Cahill School. The Board will review them on the work that they have passed, enabling them to advance in their Scout Classification.

Words of thanks were given to Scout Robert Sed and Scout Roger Medlin, who covered their territory during the last Scrap Drive and saved much time for the collectors by grouping all salvage.

War-time Food Conservation

By MARY W. ARMSTRONG
Home Demonstration Agent

Good news for civilians! The War Food Administration has allocated 80 per cent of this year's apple crop to civilians. This is a pleasant prospect in contrast with last year when the crop was short and the demand was heavy. This year's civilian supply includes quantities of all important apple products—canned and frozen apples, apple butter and jelly, apple cider and apple vinegar. Only dried apples are missing from the list, for large quantities of these are being shipped to the armed forces overseas. Few homemakers will find this much of a deprivation, however. Cold storage has furnished fresh apples for markets most of the year, and continuing freezing preservation has provided supplies of processed apples.

Homemakers who plan to keep an extra supply of apples on hand should bear in mind the fact that apples should be kept in a cool, moist place free from strong odors. Apples absorb odors from such things as onions, celery, meats, or kerosene. It is well to keep as many as possible in the refrigerator for extra good, crisp apples may soon become soft and unattractive if put in a warm place.

It is good food conservation to get the full nutritive value from any food, and in apples, the flesh is the most nutritious part. The seeds are rich in vitamins than the rest of the fruit. For instance, apple seeds made with the skins of apples as well as the flesh, is not only richer in food value, but is more colorful and appetizing. When apples turn brown from exposure to air, some of the valuable vitamin C is lost. It is well, therefore, when preparing fruit salad or fruit cup to slice the citrus fruit first, and pour the citrus juice over the cut apples to prevent this discoloration and loss of nutritive value.

The coming holidays offer an excellent opportunity to make use of the plentiful supply of apples. Besides the traditional use of a red, shiny "apple" on the foot of the Christmas stocking, apples offer possibilities of numerous festive holiday desserts and confections. Christmas apples, as red as Santa's cap, and Honey Apples, will appeal to grown-ups as well as to the young folks.

Christmas Apples:
4 apples
1 lb. red cinnamon candies
1 c. sugar
1 c. water
Dissolve sugar and candies. Peel and core apples and place in a shallow pan which can be covered. Pour syrup over them and cook slowly, keeping them covered. Bake often. Serves four.

Honey Apples:
1 T. plain gelatin
1 c. water
1 c. canned applesauce
1 c. honey
2 T. orange juice
1 c. chopped nuts
Soak gelatin in cold water. Cook applesauce and honey together until very thick, stirring constantly. Take from fire, add softened

The Literary First Nighter

Alden Hatch's "General Ike"

To attempt the biography of a man during his lifetime is beset with obvious dangers. The task is especially difficult when the work is published at the very moment when that individual is engaged in the supreme adventure by whose outcome he is destined to be judged in the pages of history. With full recognition of the outstanding military talents that have enabled General Eisenhower to bring the Western European offensive to the threshold of culmination, acute critics declare the controlling factor in the result to be the extent to which his plans have been keyed to operations on other fronts, notably such pressure as will be necessarily engendered by the Russian offensive in East Prussia.

Still this is no ex-grinding campaign biography, and in so doing that we consider what manner of man is guiding our destinies at this critical juncture. As against the difficulties of appraising a contemporary, the biographer has the advantages of firsthand observation and the opportunity to confer with persons most likely to shed light on the subject. Mr. Hatch has done this to an exceptional degree and in that sense his work may be characterized as being both authorized and authentic. The General's family, education, training and military career are truthfully reported. The author's conclusion regarding Eisenhower's appointment to the Supreme Command is summarized in this language: "The people of this country had absolute confidence in him, which was reinforced by their genuine affection inspired by his simple, friendly personality and their tremendous pride in the fact that he was so completely American."

It is mentioned that Joseph Stalin, "who should know a good general when he saw one," was most insistent in pressing for Eisenhower's appointment at Moscow and Teheran. Needless to say, he was not selected merely because he was simple, modest,

ON TO TOKYO!

Let's all get behind the greatest march in history—the march to Tokyo—and victory!

On countless invasion fronts, thousands of your fighting men are taking up the battle cry: "On to Tokyo!" We've got to back them up with what it takes for complete victory. Remember, the supply lines in the Pacific are long and your fighting men will need more material than was required for the entire European invasion to crush the Jap foe.

Let's Echo that cry with BONDS!

Our boys won't quit until they've reached their goal. Let's not stop buying Bonds until we've reached ours! In this 6th War Loan Drive, the Nation's goal is $14,000,000,000—our individual job is to buy at least an extra $100 Bond—another and then another—let's keep on going—let's keep on buying—let's keep on saying it with Bonds—

Mark Twain's "Life on the Mississippi" (Heritage, 418 pp.)

The lapse of thirty years since we first read this classic has not served to lessen its interest or charm. It still stands forth in almost solitary grandeur as the epic of the steamboat pilot, projected against a background of picturesque narrative that is authentically American. Few small boys, reading of the arduous curriculum leading to a mastery of each rock and shoal in the Father of Waters, have not formed the ambition to attain that lordly calling, and few adults can fail to feel the same spell.

This edition includes an addendum some thirty pages of previously-suppressed passages, now made available through the courtesy of Bernard DeVoto and the Morgan Library, which is the repository of the holograph manuscript. There is nothing in these pages which can be remotely characterized as offensive. Indeed they frequently reveal Mark Twain at his incisive best. In discussing the hazards of fog, he observes that "trusting in Providence is a very good thing, but a chart and compass are worth six of it, any time." He defends Mrs. Trollope's reflections on the American scene, declaring, "She was hotly hated for her prejudices, but they seem to have been simply the prejudices of a humane spirit against inhumanities; of an honest nature against humbug; of a clear-headed heart against grossness; of a right heart against unright speech and deed"—a viewpoint which very well describes Mark Twain himself.

The illustrations, some in color by Thomas Hart Benton, effectively capture the spirit of the book and constitute a pleasurable embellishment of a work that must always rank high in the lusty lore of our frontier.

Orrin E. Dunlap's "Radio's 100 Men of Science" (Harper, 314 pp.)

Within the space of a century the world has moved successively through the steam age, the electrical age and the radio age. We are now said to be on the threshold of the electronic age. Mr. Dunlap tells us that in the infinitesimal electron he found the great promise of radio's future; that the electron is to radio what a second is to time and what time is to the future; and that "it has been called the cornerstone of a billion-dollar war-time industry traveling on a meteoric path brilliant with prospects." If this is so, and few will dispute it, we may well reflect on the men whose genius and industry have contributed to so significant a scientific trend.

Mr. Dunlap apparently delights in round numbers and declares the 100 "Ten of radio are Faraday, Henry, Maxwell, Hertz, Marconi, Poynting, Fleming, De Forest, Armstrong and Zworykin. Some may wonder at the failure to include such titans as Rutherford, Tesla and Steinmetz. On the other hand, to reach an even hundred the author is constrained to mention a number of youthful unknowns who, whatever their promise, might be embarrassed to find themselves in so distinguished a galaxy.

The individual sketches, averaging about three pages, are crisp, interesting and informative. They are followed by many new anecdotes and add much to the knowledge of the general reader on this somewhat technical subject.

ARMAND K. FIDAIRE.

William Gilmore Beymer's "12:20 P. M." (Whitney House, 273 pp.)

As Hitler moves towards an inevitable doom, there is bound to be increasing speculation concerning his end. Indeed, quite recently it has been suggested in many quarters that he is already no longer among the living. Such a situation makes Mr. Beymer's novel most timely. He envisages the Fuehrer's decline and demise in a manner that is much in keeping with the life and career of the immortal dictator.

It seems that one Halvar Rynning, a simple physician of South Dakota, taking to heart the conviction that so many woes of mankind are due to one malevolent man, voices the notion that all persons should offer a daily prayer—for his destruction. The idea takes hold and before long millions around the world pause at 12:20 p. m. for a quarter of a minute to mull over that prayer. Since by reason of time differences no hour can pass without 12:20 p. m. occurring in some time zone, the ritual is to that extent endless. The author, writing in the first person, is a newspaper man who receives the assignment of interviewing Rynning. After partaking of his subject's hospitality, he witnesses Rynning's murder by a crazed Indian. At this point interest in Rynning yields to the electrifying report that Hitler has died, under unknown circumstances and within a few days the author finds himself in Lisbon, commissioned to unearth the inside story.

Despite Gestapo surveillance, our newswriter, through a combination of luck and daring, meets with a recently expatriated henchman of Hitler and bribes him into disclosing what has happened. The major portion of the book is devoted to this account. It is revealed that, notwithstanding the efforts of the High Command to keep the development from their chief, Hitler becomes aware that virtually all mankind pauses in each day's occupations to whisper a prayer for his annihilation. Understandably enough, the movement preys on his disordered mind. The very thought of 12:20 p. m. becomes appalling to him. He smashes thin pieces with frantic futility. Like a character from Poe or Dostoevsky, he trembles and broods as he senses impending disaster. The other Nazi chieftains—Goering, Goebbels, Himmler, Ley, Von Ribbentrop—are far from sympathetic, but surround him like jackals and await his end. Indeed, they are not a little inclined to accelerate the finish. In depicting this unsavory group, with their individual ambitions and weaknesses, the author is at his best. In the recesses of his guarded resentment, Hitler lies in bed, racked with fever, dispirited, emaciated, his five physicians powerless to protect him even from Goering's vitriolic gibes. A priest is summoned to administer the last rites and thus Hitler rather dramatically meets his death. Most soothsayers, we venture, would forecast a more violent finale to so archvillainous a life.

The story is dramatic and is competently told. Due attention is given to descriptive touches of the shifting locale—South Dakota, Lisbon and Berchtesgaden. The author, arguing, though not too politely, for the efficacy of prayer, scores when he contends that "wishing will make it so," although most of us find greater solace in the realization that the wishing is accomplished by the might of Eisenhower et al.

"Death and the Escort," by Lieut. Ernest Vetter, U.S.N.R. (Prentice Hall Co.—$3)

This is a first-hand account of many phases of the war with Japan, with special emphasis on the activities of the PT boats, those tiny wasplike craft whose torpedoes and other guns enable them to spell destruction to the largest warships afloat. The reader is taken on a tour of many points of interest in the Pacific and given interesting descriptive data concerning the war as it is waged at sea and in swamp and jungle. We are told that naval exigency often forbids our vessels to pay attention to men adrift in lifeboats; that the increase of naval firepower has considerably reduced the effectiveness of airplanes against battleships; and that sniping, generally regarded as little more than the equivalent of guerrilla activity, is a highly developed specialty, calling for the exercise of consummate skill and bravery. The book clearly delineates a handful of outstanding characters and their feats—are miniature epics of gallantry, relieved by plentiful touches of humor. The account is presented in an informal, conversational style, devoid of any literary pretense and exhibiting occasional lapses in grammar. The excellent typography and format make the book most readable, but these are characteristics that come as no surprise to persons accustomed to using the many Prentice Hall works in the tax and legal fields.

EDITH B. HANFORD

"Drawing Faces and Expressions," by Victor Perard (Pitman)

This 64-page manual is the work of a competent craftsman. Several hundred excellent pencil drawings guide the novice through the rudiments of portraiture. Little is taken for granted. Emphasis is on proportion and preliminary outline rather than detail. Due attention is given to bold, deft execution. With reasonable practice this elementary treatise should steer the aspiring student, young or old, through the fundamentals of one of the most rewarding aspects of drawing. We venture also that there are few professional artists who cannot study these pages with profit.
