Koechlein of 170 South Springfield avenue, one of the organizers.

Koochlein said that both men and women still are needed to man the ambulance. He pointed out that posters and nut and candy cups in service to the community is the sole interest of the group and added that participation in the squad's activities...will have no political connotation.

Objective of the unit will be to provide a first ald and rescue squad which can render 24-hou service to the township on a sevenday basis, he said. He pointed out that there are more than 300 similar groups operating in New Jersey as independent units.

Kocchlein sald that at present due to restrictions of manpower -and-budgetary appropriations, the facilities of the ambulance which can be extended to the aid of community residents are limited. However, as time passes a greater degree of service can be anticipated, he asserted. He said the first aid squad, however, will be able to provide full-ambulance service at

The increase, if granted, would mean an increase of approximately twenty-five cents per month on he bill of the average user of electricity, according to Edwin H. Werner, Jersey Central president. The company furnishes electrical power to residents of Springfield. a portion of Union, and to Millburn, New Providence Township, New Providence Borough, Passaic Township and Warren Township

Company officials, commenting today on the action of the PUC. pointed out that the setting of April 1 as the date when the revised schedule, if granted, would go into effect was mandatory. Suspension of the listed date generally is automatic procedure on the part of the PUC, it was said. The State agency has notified the company that the hearing will be held on Tuesday, April 12. Belief was expressed that the session probably will be concluded in one or two dava, unleas a consi amount of testimony is presented by opposing interests. Utility company officials today said they have not heard of any municipal officials who plan to contest the application. They pointed out that the action was delayed as long as possible. In his statement announcing the company's action Werner said that the increase actually will add less than one cent a day to the home user's electric bill. He said there will be slight increases in rates for commercial, industrial and municipal wholesale users as well as for seasonal customers. He said that although the company's electric revenues have increased 24 per cent since 1945, electric operating expenses, maintenance exclusive of taxes and depreciation rose 69 per cent. Company officials in listing the increase in operating costs cited taxes, labor and-materials as the items which have been primarily responsible for the board's application for higher rates. They said it was said. During the past year the company used 500,000 tons of oil.

Werner, in explaining the company's action, pointed out that it would be the first electric rate increase, assuming it is granted, in the history of the company. He said that the company's record is one of continuous reductions. He asserted that during 1946 and 1947 customers had a total annual savings of $1,725,000. He said the new rates would restore $675,000 to the company's gross annual electric revenues.

The company also has filed a couest for increase in gas rates where it supplies that commodity.

Editor, SUN: One of the Important factors contributing to a successful fund campaign is seeing to it that the public is informed as to the facts about the services made possible by its donations.

The Springfield chapter of the Red Cross was able to accomplish this only through the fine cooperation of the editions of the Springfield Sun. Your help in allowing us to tell our story through the medium of your newspaper, aware of the fact that I was not and backing our cause with sincerity was invaluable.

We heartly thank you for this cooperation and faith. K. H. Norris Jr.,

"Substance" is the subject for Sunday, March 13. Golden Text: "Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." (Hob. 11:1) Sermon: Passages from the King Jemes version of the Bible

"For we are saved by hope: but rope that is seen is not hope; for what a man seeth, why doth he yet hope for? But if we hope for that we see not, then do we with atience wait for it." (Rom. 8:24,25) Correlative passages from "Scionce and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy

"Substance is that which is eternal and incapable of discord and decay. . . . Spirit is the only substance, the invisible and indivisible infinite God. Things spiritual and cternal are substantial. Things material and temporal are insubstantial," (pp. 468, 335).

Only about a third (34%) consider it more success-

When a crosssection of New Jersey residents were ask

"Generally speaking do

life today is more successful or less successful than it was in your parents' generation?' The response was: Less successful today More auccessful

About the same No opinion It will be noted that the "loss auccessful" group outnumbers by a slight margin the combined "more successful" and: "about the same" groups. (48% to 46%.) That many New Jersey residents have some miegivings about the success of current family life was revealed in the New Jersey Poll findings as reported on November 18, 1948. At that time seven out of every ten people in the state placed the responsibility for juvenile delinquency squarely at the parents' door.

A higher proportion of collegetrained people believe that family life is "less successful" today On the other hand people with only grade school educations are not so critical-of today's home life.

The difference in attitude according to degree-of-education can be seen in the following table:

Manual workers throughout the state (craftsmen, machine operators, policemen, waltresses, laborers, etc.) report far more satisfaction with family life today than

State Serves Local Business In Foreign Trade

Aid to New Jersey business con-cerns and industries interested in foreign trade is extended through special services in the State Department of Conservation and Economic Development, according to an announcement by Com-missioner Charles R. Erdmin, Jr Most recent data being made avail able by the Department is a state ment on "How to Do Business-Under the Marshall Plan," . the Commissioner added.

The Department also has information prepared by the Economi-Cooperation Administration providing the names of foreign ers and the goods purchased. The material is provided to New Jer sey businessmen who request I as an aid to carrying on trade in foreign markets.

Commissioner Ediman explains that under the Marshall Plan, the Economic Cooperation Adminis tration is calling for an expenditure of $6,100,000,000 in the Interest of the 16 participating countries during the first 15 months. To date about one-half of the six billion has been expended, but not all of this amount has been in the United States. Some buying is done from Canada, some from South American countries and a considerable amount from many other countries: Latest figures from the E.C.A. show about 53 per cent of the-amount expended-so-far has been used for purchases in the United States.

According to competent author-Ities, exports from the United States for 1948 will show a decline from the previous year of about 15 to 20 per cent. The decline would have been at least as great as 33 per cent without the impact of E.C.A. purchases, it is believed. Although the New Jersey Department of Conservation and Economic Development is prepared to supply heretofore unpublicized data, actual contacts for foreign sales or purchases must be made through the regular export trade channels. Information on procedure, names of firms engaged in import-export trade, commodities handled and other pertinent data is available from the New Jersey Council Department of Conservation and Economic Development, State House, Tren-

They Don't Always Ask For Numbers

By JOHN COAD

Miss Dorothy McGovern of Linden is one of 39 telephone operators at Bell Telephone's Elizabeth information bureau who makes a living answering questions. Last week we stepped up to her glass encased booth and started asking questions about questions.

Obligingly she plugged in an extra headset and handed them to us. These we clamped over our ears and for a short time eaves dropped on the receiving end of information please.

Immediately the switchboard buzzed Miss McGovern. "Information," said the voice with a smile. "Operator could you give me

"Right now things are a little A red light began to blink above bit slow," Miss McGovern noted, "but during rush hours, in the mornings between nine and two and in the late afternoons between five and seven, we answer up to 60 questions an hour."

Most of the questions asked, or course, are for routine telephone numbers. Often though according to-Miss-McGovern, subscribers apparently also consider information and current billings at the local theaters.

This perhaps is a happy standard of selection for Mrs. Elleen Meyerhoff, also of Linden, operator at information for three years observed, that "I'l seems as if the public's most common falling is to give incorrect spellings of names. We have to figure out all. the possible combinations. When we finally do hit upon the correct pelling they-generally say, "That's just Shat I said at first!" Despite an occasional headache Mrs. Meyerhoff likes her work because, she says, "each call is something different."

Once, she recalled, someone shoned to ask if it were true that New Jersey had the best highways in the nation. It wasn't until she got home that she discovered it had been her father's version of a practical joke.

Business men are most impatient with delays, she thinks; housewives the most understanding "because they have more time suppose."

But all in all she enjoys helping people, in particular those who sound as if they really need assistance. For instance she remembored the distressed mother who recently called for help. Her twoyear-old son had fallen into-abackyard pond and had very nearly_drowned...Information phoned for an ambulance which arrived in time to save the child Another call required attention "I'd like the number of the People call up asking for the number of Smith on Mulberry avenue, no initials or anything, all the time not realizing that there may be two or three Smiths on that street."

The phone books used by infornation operators are not identica. to those used by subscribers Mr. Mallett explained. Names are isted alphabetically by counties rather than by towns. Again the switchboard de-superintendents are paid $5930 or no one knowing-about what it better, with their salaries somewhat dependent upon their training and the size of their staffs. The average superintendent has a staff of about sixty-five. Their salaries, the Review notes, compare unfavorably with those re ceived by such other professional workers as scientists, civil gineers, and physicians.

As a result of rising costs of living, the study shows, the New Jersey superintendent last year received an average salary which, in terms of real purchasing power, was $1,313 below_his_1939-40 aver-

Maplewood Architect Despite the recent trend toward modern home architecture, traditional design, in simplified form atill holds a definite place in the scheme of things.

During past years we have heard much about a wonderful lot of new ideas for homes, but unfortunately except in the larger, more costly houses, have we been able to keep up with the imaginations of magazine feature writers.

There are, however, a number of general considerations in planning any home through which even a small home may take advant ges of modern improvements. The home should be planned so that rooms have possible dual roles, and future expansion should be considered as well as convenience and over-all utility.

Architecturally traditional, it fits neatly and without conflict between its neighbors. The neighborhood of this particular homein Short Hills, was of such a nature! that it did not warrant any drastic

Although only a six room home. the space above the garage was left unfinished and is large enough to be madesinto another room if ever needed.

In a small home the noise problem is likely to be acute. This care be solved in large degree by isolating the bedrooms from the work areas. The muster bedroom in this home was placed some distance away from the area of the greatest noise, the kitchen, with bathroom and stairway, acting as a noise

- Sometimes hallways may be waste space. Particularly might this seem true in a small home. In this instance however, the small entrance way acts as a traffic director, making it possible to go from one room to another without passing through intervening

In small homes storage space is a vital necessity to eliminate a lot of dust catching clutter. In this respect ample provision was made here, with 11 closets plus a storage space off a second floor bedroom.

Flash Is Fine For Sunlight On Cloudy Days

By B. T. Holden

Gray, sunless winter days are not very conducive to pictures with sparkle and snap. While there is plenty of light to make an exposure, the absence of highlights and shadows often results in drab, muddy pictures.

The answer is a simple one. Let bld would be forcing to game. His a flash lamp be your sunlight. This is common practice with press photographers who use flash outdoors in daylight just as frequently as they do indoors or at night.

> The great advantage of flash over sunlight is that you can control the amount of light very exactly by your choice of flash lamp and its distance from the subject. Also you can control the angle of light without regard to where the sun would actually be at a certain time of day: Obviously, for realism you will aim your light down on the subject as the sun would fall and not try any low angle Illumination.

> ·To compute proper exposure you should first estimate the necessary shutter speed and diaphragm setting for a picture taken without flash. Then use your flash guide table in reverse to figure how far away the lamp should be for that exposure. But the flash is your dominant key light so you want it a bit brighter than the natural daylight. So you subject one-quarter to one-half

Bring New England Cooking-to Suburbs

A bit of New England has taken root in the suburbs; The New Hampshire House (formerly the Merrill House) tucked on a small parcel of Jersey soll between the junction of Springfield and Kent Place boulevard, Summit.

This bit of New England first planted its roots in Summit some six months ago when two New Englanders, John Simonds and Hugh Ryder (a New Hampshirlte by adoption) decided to take a crack at establishing their own restaurant business.

No ordinary eating place, the New Hampshire House has little gilt or embroidery and absolutely no chrome. But the bill of fare fairly smacks of New England cooking. A-typical menu for instance, includes Broiled Filet of Sole, Chicken Ples with flaky crusts that almost melt at a glance, braised breast of lamb, New England stews, and with every dinner and with compliments of the house, golden corn fritters with maple syrup.

Baker and Engineer Too for one who enjoys simple hearty extras there are deep dish apple pies and always catmeal bread, all we are given to understand, baked under the watchful, scientific eye of Hugh Ryder, copartner and custodian of the baking ovens. Ryder incidentally holds an associate degree in industrial engineering from Yale University and during the war was a time study engineer.

An indication of the mark the Hampshire House has achieved in its short six months existence is that Duncan Hines recently assured the two owners that their establishment which they like to describe as half-way between a restaurant and tea room, will appear in the next issue of his famed gastronomic guide, 'Adventures in Good Eating."

While one side of the partnership entered the kitchen, so to speak, through the portals of science, the other half John Simonds, first came in contact with in a New England business colcollege Simonds helped meet expenses by working in local restaurants. And he got to like the business so well, he said, that when he was offered a position in Florida he forsook business college permanently for cullnary art.

Ryder and Simonds first met each other in 1935 while both were employed at Robbins Nest, the famed New Hampshire hostlery. Simonds was the chef, Ryder the baker. As their friendship grew they-talked-about some day owning their own business. But it wasn't until after the most recent unpleasantness that they got around to doing anything about Recalled from Industry Shortly following Simonds' discharge from the Navy, where he pent four years as commiss steward of a P. T. squadron, Fred Warring's Shawnee Inn, Pennsylvania offered him a position. "I immediately sent for Hugh,"

"We talked further about our plans for a business then I went to Janie-Davies-in-New York as food supervisor. After a short time the two of us came to Summit and here we are." The day before the two partners were to open, all was in order, that is until only two of the many waitresses they had hired showed up.

"I had everything ready, even their uniforms were bought," recalled Simonds. By happy coincidence a stocky.

elderly, Bermudian, Ernest Jeylens appeared at the door. "I have had experience as a head waiter," Ernest told Simonds. "If you need walters I can

JOHN SIMONDS (standing) and Hugh Ryder, co-owners of the New Hampshire House, fixing up the fixings for a dinner with a New England flavor. Their tasty products have influenced a lot of people including Duncan Hines who recently assured them that their eating that would establish good-house place would appear in the next issue of his gastronomic guide, "Adventures in Good Eating." -The President's earlier criticism of the 81st Congress, meanwhile, brought numerous defense statements in both houses, largely on the grounds that committees had been engaged in the time-consuming task of holding hearings and preparing bills for action. It was clear that the record of completed work was small: From January 8 through February 28, according to the Congressional Record, only a dozen bills had been enacted into law-compared with 4,719 measures of one kind or another Intro-

Women Can Cut Home Fire Toll By Three-Fourths

If women in the home would learn the rudiments of fire safey, they would prevent nearly threefourths of all building fires in the United States, according to figures of the National Board of Fire Underwriters.

Quoting from a recent survey made of urban areas, the National Board said that 70 per cent of all building fires during one year broke

Women who spend most of their time at home can protect it against fire with very little extra effort, the authorities declared, and suggested program for Spring Clean-Up keeping habits for year-round safe-
