Library Bd. Makes Plans For Addition

Trustees Cite Need of Space, Added Services

Members of the Board of Public Library Trustees today revealed_that plans are being completed for an expansion project which they believe will provide for the needs of the institution for the next ten years. The board has consulted with Fred A. Elsasser, Union architect, who originally planned the conversion of the present building from a residence to a library.

Various costs of the improvement have been studied but the board as yet has not received a detailed figure-on which it can base an estimate. Indications are it was said, that the figure will yary from $30,000 to $40,000 with the possibility that an annual appropriation of $2,000 for retirement of bonds could be spread over a period of 15 or 20 years. The board has pointed out that with the acquisition of the present library through the will of the late Sarah Bailey that it believed that dent of the Library's trustees and facilities were sufficient to accommodate the public for many years. Alteration of the building had been made possible through funds left for the nurpose of the ate Rev. William Hoppaugh.

Board members citing the postwar expansion of the township pointed out that with constant donation of books by local residents ind purchases of all types of his erature the library has reached the point where there is no display space for standard works of current demand. They asserted that at least a third of the books that the coming at the home of Mr. should be available to the public Stark, 180 Bryant avenue headline unture is expected to must be stored on reserve shelves, The from that was originally

A study section of the PTA, the Girl Scouts Couneil, the traffic study committee and other small groups can meet scout groups with the Regional in the library only by arranging themselves around tables of books and magazines or in the work room where only space for chairs can be provided.

The trustees also pointed to the quadrupling of the library's circulation in recent years. They also cited the need of providing meeting facilities for groups interested in cultural and public projects.

The board has pointed out that the arrangement of the interior of the contemplated addition wouldprovide for a meeting room in the basement to accommodate at least 50 persons: It also could be utilized for displays and exhibits. The main floor would constitute exbe pulled off and swallowed . . . for study and research. There with reading-tables-and-facilitieswould be dormer windows on the second floor to give plenty of light for children who would gather there.

Plans also provide for displays of relics of historical interest to Springfield and Union County in fireproof quarters in a wing adjacent to the library extension. Board members said this will be the "first proper accommidation for such a museum where these items may be displayed yet pro-

Directors of the Springfield Rotary Club were taken on a tour of the Free Public Library Monday evening to inspect the premises and view architect's plans for the proposed wing, needed at the over expanding building.

Led by A. B. Anderson, presi assisted by Mrs. Helen R. Smith and Mrs. Donald Wolf, trustees, Rotarians went through the three floors of the library and following a 30-minute visit, heard of the congested conditions, need for additional space and how the building has grown since its inception

In the Rotary delegation were: dent: Kenneth E. Bandomer, Ludwig Stark, Capl Helmers and Milton Keshey. The visit preceded a directors meeting held later in

Salvation Army Talk at Rotary

The slogan, "A man may be down but he's never out," has crowd in the history of the exemplified through the event-attended-Tuesday's years since the Salvation Army was formed, Major Ernest Hayes told the Springfield Rotary Club At its luncheon meeting Tuesday in the Hitchin' Post Ian, Route 29.

"We have proven that all men secking help from us are not bums, and there also seems to be an erroneous impression that most of the Salvation Army officials came from the gutter," he added.

He pointed out that his father spent 40 years in the service of Ted Munday, Ray DeBerjeois, the Salvation Army and that his Frank Rapp, Bob Ziegenfues, Ken own son was following in his footsteps. The movement was begun Calderaro, Tony Grant, Bert Jones, in 1865 by William Booth in the and managers Ed Kuffner and slums of London, and has grown Boh Zimmer ... until today there are 100 countries where the Army is functioning. A total of -28,000 officers serve games in the past four seasons, a combined membership of 3,000, also gave varsity letters to the 000. Major Haves explained that injucteen seniors and to seven junpansion room for adult literature of the Salvation Army and that the other division of the Army is handled by another staff. The main support of the social service is from the discarded clothing, paper, metals and other artieles which the Army trucks collect through the various communities. Fleadquarters are maintained in a modern building at 65 Pennington street, Newark, for about 200 men, who enjoy complete social and recreational facilities. About 75 per cent of the cases thich are accomposated at the Salvation Army, Major Hayes explained, are caused "when men lose control over alcohol" and many ill-fed and demoralized applicants seeking aid are given a "Regular equipment in need of repair or replacement should be attended to-without delay," police said. "Particular care should be given to equalizing brakes, renewing windshield wiper blades, checking lights, exhaust system and tires. Special equipment is just as important. Tire chains should be available for deep snow, defrosters to keep the outside of the windshield free of snow and ice and heaters to provide comfort and prevent numbness."

Student Forum At Jr. College

Two hundred delegates, from county high schools are gathered today at Union Junior College for the fifth annual Union County Student Forum, This year's meeting had as its theme "Towards an Enlightened Citizenry."

High school seniors selected on he basis of scholastic excellence and interest in the social studies represent their schools at panel and general sessions devoted annually to some aspect of a naional problem.

Dr. Abel A. Hanson, director of the development program at Columbia University's Teachers College, is to be the speaker at this afternoon's general meeting. A former superintendent of Elizabeth schools, he is a trustee of Union Junior College.

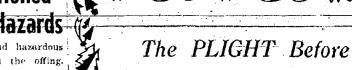

The student forum's 1949 president is Harry Montgomery, of Westfield High School. Assisting in arrangements for the forum is Miss Mildred Fox, of the Westfield High School faculty.

Grade 1 We have started to work on our play for the Christmus program that our room and Mrs. Thurber's room are going to put on. Since there are sixty-six children in the rooms, all of us cannot be in the play, for there would not be room enough on the stage. But we will all have a part in the singing of Christmas sougs before and during the play. We are going to have to work very hard to learn our lines and learn all the songs in the next three weeks. We are reading our first stiff-cover book, one just like the books grown-ups read.

Grade 1 & 2.

This week we "casted" for our Christmas play, Many of us are going to take part in the program and we have a lot-of-hard-work ahead of us if we wish to make it a success. In Second Grade we started substruction this week. We have tried hard to understand have sent down roots into the what it means. We have made moist pebbles and are sendig up epictures of the facts and now have to make them our own. Grade 2

We are fixing our room for the Christmas season. Miss Ricg brought a small white tree with colored balls and bells for the table. We have bells on the door and sometimes you can hear them when the door opens. We have many Christmas pictures around days to Christmas and it-la-coming fust.

We are glad to have Lillian Kent back in school. She was absent nearly two weeks.

John Doege's mother sent ice cream and cookles so we could have a birthday party for him: Grades 2 & 3

We are glad to welcome Elaine Marie Glannattasi to our Second Grade, She comes to us from Mill burn, New Jersey and is very good worker.

-We are having fun with our new science books. Grade 4

Our class has been studying about air in our science class. We have learned that although we cannot see taste or smell air, that air is real-Air has weight, it expands when heated, it is a mixture of several gases. We have done ome experiments.

Carl Haubold stuffed paper into a glass. He turned the glass upside down and pushed it straight down into a pan of water. He brought-it out. The paper was still dry. The air kept the water from wetting the paper.

Joyce Olscesky lighted a short candle. Then she placed a glass over it. The candle burned slower and slower. Finally it went out-This proved that fire needs oxygen in order to burn. We are going to have more experiments next week which we will tell you about. Grade 5

Santa Claus is calling all 'old toys. The Fifth Grade wants to heln Santa Claus in his workshop. We will repair and recondition toys you have outgrown or broken. A new cont of paint, a wheel, some part replaced, a new-spring or perhaps a dress on a doll will make the toy so inviting that it will thrill some child on Christ-

The toys will be given to children in a hospital or to a charitable organization for distribution. Will you help us by bringing r sending your old toys to us?

Grades 6. 7 and 8 Our, Library is a busy plac icse days. We have a hundred new hooks from the Town Library. Our-supervisors-Sue Charles, Gorda Korschel and Mary Richelo are doing a fine job. GRADE TWO Miss Smith's class very much enjoyed our primary assembly on Wednesday, November 23. Our class sang, "Oh, Here we Come a Marching." We liked what each lass did and especially enjoyed the program given by Miss Lindemeyer's class.

This week we have been planning our Christmas Party. We have many nice Christmas pictures in our room.

Our teacher made Christmas trees for our spelling test. Almost everybody got 100.

We are reading about hees in our geography book. Robert Reeve brought an empty bee hive to school. The teacher read a story of bees that Nancy Schade brought In the story there were worker bees. They go out of the hive to get nectar and pollen from flowers They have hairs on their legs which gather the pollen. The queer bee is the mother bee of all the bees in the hive. She lays the eggs There are drones in the hive too They all work together to make the hive and make the honey.

Mrs. Ryder's class made Indian pottery with clay. Then we painted and shellaced them. We have a large assortment on exhibit. Norman Argast, and Ross Adams

GRADE FIVE

We are making our arithmetic meaningful by drawing and coloring squares, circles and rectangles to show what fractions and mixed numbers mean to us.

Miss Pursel's class donated a basket of groceries for the Red Cross to give to someone for Thanksglving.

Evelyn Hughes won the spelling match between the fifth grade and the sixth given in assembly. Richard Schweitzer proved to be the best speller in the sixth grade. Joe Beebe and Harriet Morton finished-in-second and-third-place for their class. Alfred Bowman, Ruth Pringle and Ralph Melick were also winners in the fifth grade.

Grades Six, Seven and Eight. This past week on two successive days the sixth, seventh and eighth grades; boys and girls of both schools, participated in a "Playday Social." The entire program was under the supervision of Mr. Born-

The first day brought the sixth grade girls into competition with an exciting game of kickball. The James Caldwell School was victorious with a 7-5 score. After game time a social dance for the sixth graders was held in the gym The dances and refreshments were enjoyed by over fifty boys and

On the following day the seventh and eighth grade girls held their contests. The seventh graders of Raymond Chisholm won the kickball game, 15-7, while the eighth graders of James Caldwell won the soccer game, 2-1. As on the day previous dancing and refreshments followed for the one hundred who attended the games. Hostesses for the dances vere the girls of their respective grades in the Raymond-Chisholm School.

In history this week and last week we have been giving committee reports on the territorial growth of the U.S., Louisiana Torritory, Oregon, Texas, Florida, Mexican Cession, Gadsden Purchase and Alaska, Each committee also showed a film pack on the topic they discussed. Mrs. Jakobsen is very pleased with our progress in this kind of work, and so are we. Come in and see the displays we have for our unit in

PTA President at Regional Reviews N.J. Congress Meet

"I will quickly gloss over the story of the train that wasn't there but, as a word to the wise, never dopend on a connection from Philadelphia to Atlantic City when there's a coal strike. You, too, may find yourself at your destination at 1:45 in a chartered bus instead of 12:00 when the train was scheduled to be there. The added joy of a flat tire on the cab to the hotel, of course, cannot be blamed on a coal shortage.

"Wednesday afternoon, the conference was divided into a series of work shops. I chose two which I thought might be of greatest interest to our children. The first was conducted by Mrs. Frank Hayden of Long Branch on 'High School Service.'

"The second was by Dr A. M. Bean, chairman of education of the State of New Jersey. He was, in my opinion, one of the outstanding speakers of the Conference.

speakers of the Conference.

"His subject was, 'School ducation.'
He spoke of the great need for the parents of high school children, in cooperation with the children and their teachers, to work out the child's problem together. He emphasized that the enthusiasm for this type of cooperation, which is often high in the child's early school years, is very much inclined to dwindle by the time the child reaches high school age when this cooperation may be-most needed. He spoke forcefully on the need for finding out what makes our high school fall short of fitting youth for their future. He suggested a program of inviting leading business men, industrialists and professional men to express their constructive thoughts on what might be lacking in the child's education and for the parents, teachers and children to cooperate in amending such deficiencies as might be revealed. Wednesday evening was devoted to a general assembly including the introduction of past presidents of the New Jersey Congress of Parents and Teachers which, incidentally, is in its forcy-ninth year.

"Without mentioning the excellent meals and accommodations at the Hotel Ambassador, newly converted from a Navy recouperation center to public use, we came to Thursday."

"Thursday's activities started at $\frac{\text{s}}{\text{a}} \text{.m.} (the life of a delegate is not all

"Since part of our P.T.A. budget includes sending your president and one vice-president (this year the vice-president was Mrs. Von Ohlen of Kenilworth) to the New Jersey Congress of Parents and Teachers, I feel that I should give you the benefit of some of the inspiring information that we gathered on this trip while it is still somewhat new. The SPRING-FIELD SUN has kindly consented to carry this open letter and we will endeavor to let all parents and teachers know-of this.

"The Convention took place Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, October 28, 27 and 28.

"A welcome interlude of choral music by the Pleasantville High School chorus (Mr. Benjamin Censullo, director) was then presented.

One of the inspired highlights of the Congress followed. This was an address given by Dr. Koma Gans, professor of education of Columbia University. The subject, 'education Worthy of Children and Youth.' Dr. Gans is regarded by many as one of the leading educators of our time. Under penalty of boring some of the readers of this letter, I should like to give a rather full outline of Dr. Gans' talk. 'Dr. Gans said our objective should be to raise children to be true democrats, without-snobbery and free from race projudice. A child starts life with a strong sense of justice and fairness and is a wholesome individual. He has an eagerness—— In fact, a greed for learning as well as a tremendous sense of independence and responsibility. This excellent raw material is so often ruined by us. Dr. Gans offered this notice, namely, to let children should be encouraged at an early age to dress themselves, pour their own milk, answer the 'phone etc. etc. and thus proceed, step by-step, to-become full grown personalities who eventually will assume, in stride, marriage, support of themselves and other adult responsibilities. No school is as important as a home but a good school helps to build a true person. A school program should be just and sensitive to individual needs— It should never be vindicative. Good feaching is a challenge. It is easential that a child's engerness to learn should not be blunted by beredom. The child should be given vital material to feed his enthusiasm.

"Dr. Gans offered several pertinent bits of advice to parents. Sho stated that parents should not leason a child's dignity. A parent should endeavor to be worthy of a child's high opinionand, in turn, have respect for youth. Adults are not measure so high and so even. It is of more vital importance that children keep their self respect and develop their personalities than they got high marks in algerbra.

"Dr. Gans offered several pertinent bits of advice to parents. Should not expect youth to measure ob high and so oven. It is of more vital importanc fact. We are misled and misinformed. We are not pouring money into a Bottomless pit. We are making an investment in peace. It is a practical immonstration of how to make 'one World' work.

At this point of the proceedings here was a musical interlude of violinmusic, followed by a talk, "Quarter for Hoadquarters" by Mrs. "William Fittle. This was a plea for a building to be erected in Washington, D. C., as an adquarters for the National P.T.A. It would be the first building in the world to be devoted to parent educa-

Christmas Toys Represent 'World in Miniature'

Toy Makers Take Their Cue from Grown Up World

By JOHN COAD

This le the time of year when the average parent, no doubt, longs for his lost youth. For with Christmas only 17 days away, suburban stores are filled with the current crop of toys produced by the nation's 2,000 odd toy manufacturers.

As technological progress has made its ever speeding advance in the everyday, adult world, producers of "the world in miniature" have been quick to adapt and apply many of the grown-up techniques and materials to their scaled down replicas.

There was a time-and well within the memory of all those now too old to receive an electric train or doll themselves for Christmas-when a toy auto bore only a vague resemblance to its lifesized counterpart, or a doll was an inanimate object which gave little response to a hug and was liable to fracture its skull if handled roughly.

The toys this year are a sharp reminder that we are living in "post-war world" and the era of electronics, plastics and remote control push buttons seems to have invaded the field of children's toys fully as much is_it has taken hold of the grown-up world.

These were some of our observations last week after visiting toy departments in suburban senger cars around the tracks. Our transcontinental railroads have made much of their spectacular advances in post-war luxury travel. But the electric tarin of 1949 is fully so spectacular as its life-sized brother.

REMOTE CONTROL

The junior engineer this year, and he better keep dad at a safe distance, can sit behind his pushbutton control board and by remote control, stop, start, uncouple the opposite direction when it switch, load and unload his miniature train. If his train is fully equipped, it will even beich smoke from its engine as it puffs its way around the track.

Ingenious manufacturers have also devised a talking station which announces the arrival of a coming train, stops it, announces ita-departure and sends-it-on-its

One of the amazing accessories is a Sechoard Coaler operated by remote control. With the press of a button the bucket swings down to nick up its load of coal, lifts swings over then dumps the coal into a walling car.

Xmas Holiday ls a Mecca for Amateur Photoa's

As the days get shorter and the weather becomes crisper, more and more of our recreation takes place indoors. Clube resume and such festive occasions as Christmas create many opportunities for parties. Make sure this winter that these happy occasions are recorded in pictures you will often look back on frequently.

In summer, we all take lots of pictures outdoors. But when-winter comes, the old camera is too often stored away on a top shelf for another year. Perhaps the main reason for this is that too few people realize how easy and what fun it is to make pictures with indoor lighting.

The simplest-form-of-indoor lighting is the use of flood lamps. Two of these bulbs with built-in reflectors, used in ordinary living room lamps or just an extension cord with socket, will enable you to take almost any type of indoor picture.

All you have to do is set one light up beside the camera and one several feet to one-side of the camera and about halfway to the subject. Your exposure is figured by referring to the chart on the carton the lamps come in. That is all there is to using flood lamps. If you want to make action plc-

Better Schools Mean Better Business

Executive Links Healthy Economy With Education

By JANE BARTELS

Leonard E. Best, treasurer of the Best Pencil Company of Springfield, and chairman of the New Jersey Educational Planning Commission, is an carnest, enthuslastic men, who is using both these qualities to convince New Jersey citizens, and particularly New Jersey businessmen, that they have an important investment in the schools.

In a speech which he is frequently called upon to give at Rotary club luncheons and similar occasions. Best is accustomed to pointing out to local businessmen why they should look upon an active interest in the school systems as an investment as well as a civic duty. He tells them first that the fact that their own children and those of their neighbors are in the schools should make it obvious enough-that-their-interests lie there. But aside from this. from a purely economic standpoint, the schools represent a business investment because they are the source of potential employees and customers. It is certainly to the businessman's advantage to insist that his employees have the best possible education. On the consumer level, Best tells his audience, the better-educated person is likely to be earning more money, and therefore will be in a position to buy more goods and services. _Warns Listeners

Best warns his listeners that unless by their interest they see that the schools fit the needs of the community and turn out responsible intelligent citizens, they will foot an increasing tax bill for the care of juvenile delinquents and edult criminals. Although he is careful not to advocate any such project as curriculum adjustment by business, Best points out that children now in school will soon be_in a position to control business to some extent by their voting power. It therefore behooves businessmen at least to be aware of what is being taught in the Leonard Best himself is a better than average example of the civic minded businessmen type which he is trying to promote. In Springfield, he is treasurer of the Richard Rest Pencil Company, and advisory committee known as the two of his children, Richard and New Jersey Educational Plan-Beverly, are attending Summit public schools.

Aside from his interest as a parent in New Jersey's school system, the pencil business brought him into direct contact with schools and educators. Some 15 years ago before he had taken on than he was faced with the inhis now very active role as lay evitable. In order to maintain the education advisor, Best was brought up short-by-a complaint from one of his salesmen who pressive curriculum changes which claimed a kickback was necessary he proposed, will involve a major in order to sell Best pencils to lo- refinancing job. Family Life Today

By Phyllis Bradshaw Rutgers University

SOCIAL ADJUSTMENTS Are you a bit timid about entering a room crowded with strangers, or do you walk in eagerly looking forward to meeting these new peo-ple? This illustrates, to some extent, the meaning of social adjustment. It is poise, friendliness and lack of fear in social situationsthe absence of fear of people and also of doing the wrong tiling.

Everyone admires and finds interesting the friendly, unafraid person. We are eager for our children to behave in this manner, because we want them to be liked by others, and also because we wish to spare them the horror of social failure. Is it natural for some to have poise while others are shy? And what can the family do? Isn't everyone on his own in these social adjustments?

We must look to our own ways if we are interested in seeing our children fit comfortably into the world in which they are going to live. If we simply assume that they will get along socially, will find a place as a matter of course, we are very likely to be disappointed.

A child probably will make easy, pleasant contacts outside his home when his relationship with his parents is warm and happy—when he feels secure in his family life.

Parents need to live their own lives for their own sakes; this is also a necessity in order to help your children make good social adjustments. Even when a family is happy in its own relationships, the children can be shy if all the social contact has been with the family.

When parents are interested in community life and have interesting lives themselves, they are not so dependent and over-protective of their children. They will have allowed their child to have done things for himself when he reached the age where he could; in other words, they let their child grow up. In so doing, they treated him as a person, as an individual. This means his interests have been recognized and given respect - a great morale builder. We all want our children to grow into mature adulta-to have poise and social adjustment. But we must realize there are no "set of rules" for this. No special training will accomplish it. What we can do is to make the conditions under which they live happy and secure so that good adjustment will be the natural result.

Turnips, Carrots, Rutabagas Offer Vitamin Source

Turnips, rutabages and carrots have much to offer besides flavor value. All the yellow varieties furnish vitamin A and both turnips and rutabagas are good sources of vitamin C. A recent study at Cornell University, showed that rutabages_are among the 10 foods that supply 4 to 6 nutrients cheaply, the year round. So make the most of market offerings for economy, flavor and good nutrition. advises the County Home Agent.

Both turnips and rutabagas store well. Many of these are shipped in from Canada and often you see them waxed to make them keep still better. Have you wondered what the difference is? Botanists recently reported that rutabagas resulted from crossing cabbage and turnips. How can you tell a rutabaga from a turnip? Probably the best guide is size. The whooping hig fellows are most likely to be rutabagas. Allow 15 to 30 minutes to bol turnips or rutebagas. Try mashing them and adding butter and salt and pepper. Use them, too, in stew and soups. And, if you've never eaten them raw, try serving crisp sticks on relish plate. They're refreshing and good. Yellow turnips also combine well, when grated raw, with thin silces of apples and raisins in a salad. Now for the carrots. These don't keep quite as well as rutabagas. They can, however, be kept a considerable time in a cool damp place if covered with leaves, sand or paper! Fresh looking slender carrots with feathery tops are likely to be Californian, while larger carrots, already topped, may be local. Recent reports have indicated that removal of tops helps to prevent shriveling of the root or edible part. The theory is that leaves draw on roots for moisture after pulling, just as the roots are fed with the help of the leaves while-in-the-ground Buy carrots that are well shaped, firm, fresh looking, smooth and well colored.

Clean them with a stiff brush or vegetable slicer and store in the Mydrator or a moisture-proof container in the refrigerator. Cut off the green tops if you've bought that kind, to keep them from wilting. A few of the greens kept of wools, and many thin weaves in the refrigerator come in handy for garnishing many dishes in place of parsley.

"The Heiress"—Filled with Talent, Drama

It has been only upon rare occasions that we have used the adjective "guest" as applied to a film. After seeing "The Heiress." which last week opened on suburban screens, however, we are using that adjective without apologies or qualifications.

This period piece of the 1850's, based on Henry James' novel, "Washington Square," and adapted from the 1947 Broadway play, is plainly directed to appeal to the mature adult. In adapting their play for the medium of the film, Ruth and Augustus Goctz, happily, have not fallen into the temptation of using the greater flixibility of the movie camera unnecessarily. They have, rather, retained all the emphasis on dramatics so necessary to the limited legitimate stage, and then expertly used the flexible camera as an adjunct, but not replacement for basic theatrical requirements. It can only be imagined that, in this case, the legitimate play has soared to

Although Catherine is heiress to an-annual-income of some $30,000 innually, her awkwardness and plain appearance have left the Sloper drawing room barren of suitors. Her life has been dominated by her father, a successful, but egotistical, moralistic doctor who worships the memory of his beautiful wife, now-deceased, and to whom, Catherine's unrelleved homlinees is bitter reflection of his wife's beauty

Townsend, (Montgomery Clift) a polite, intelligent, handsome, but penniless young man who apparently becomes immediately infatuated with her. Although Dr. Sloper's disproving diagnosis is that the young man is more in love with Catherine's money than herself, Catherine is beyond doubt convinced that it is true affection. Although it is probably true that Morris would have made a good husband for Catherine, it is more his own avarice than her father's carning that Catherine probably would not receive her full inheritment. He returns some five years ater, penniless as ever, but by now obviously a fortune sceker, to less difficult part in "The Search." Credit, too, should go to Ralph Richardson and Miriam Hopkins for their fine portrayals of Dr. Sloper and Catherine's flightly aunt respectively, and also to producer-director William Wyler for his fine attention to detail and delicate-handling of this story. State University Builds Magnet for Nuclear Research

After nearly three years of prearation involving the construction of one of the world's largest precision magnets and its controls at a cost of more than $20,000 a corps of Rutgers University physicists has begun delving into the innermost secrets of the structure of matter.

Under a program of research which will have cost more than $280,000 at the end of the present academic year, the State's University Physics Department is seeking to uncover new knowledge about the magnetic properties of the nucleii-the cores of atoms and the molecule. This fundamental research pro-

Louisa Horton Will Have Top Role in "Taming of the Shrew"

Louis Horton China born daughter of a Marine Corps colonel, has her first chance to portray Shakespearian roles in Margaret Webster's touring company which will present "Taming of the Shrew" at the Rahway High School, Saturday, December 17.

Born in Peking, where her father was serving as a colonel with the U. S. Marine Corps, Miss Horton spent the first 10 years of her life accompany her parents to Merine and Naval bases from the Ear East to Haiti. When Colonel Horton was ordered to Washington, where Miss Horton attended Woodrow Wilson High School, the family returned to their home in Chevy Chase, Md. At 14 she saw Eva Le Gallienne n "L'Aiglon" and was so deeply impressed that she decided to become an actress. She even recalls

> Christmas card art has become subtler and more attractive during the past 30 years, keeping pace with improvements in printing processes. Gravure printing and full-color lithography have supplemented traditional engraving methods, making possible faithful reproduction of famous paintlngs by both modern artists and the Old Mosters.

The most striking development in Christmas card history, however, has been the zooming popularty of "special title" cards. They began in the early 1920's, when publishers experimented with a few sentimental "Merry Christmas" missives to Mother. This year nearly half of all Christmas card designs are, addressed speto special friends and loved ones. They include titles to your neighbors, minister, and employer, as well as all the relatives. There's even a Christmas card to your family dentist, hoping that the only "plate" needing attention on Christmas Day is one heaped with turkey:

find "Martin Kane," "Man Against Crime," and "Photocrime." All of these are roughly the same, with Paper Mill Playhouse production only individual portrayals differing. They should be liked by detective story addicts, but we don't find them particularly interesting or original.

A higher type show is "Suspense" which tries to present a more diversified program. The general plots differ weekly, one show being a murder mystery, the following show one with an O. Henry ending, and the third bordering on the supernatural. The show thus manages to keep a good balance which adds considerably to the main theme of suspense. "Lights Out," on the other hand, is strictly on the supernatural side. The shows we've viewed seem good but unconvincing. Jack La Rue, host of the show, so overstrives for effect that he becomes horrible in a different sense of the word, Here, simple instead of staged horror would add greatly to the credulity of the show.

"Starring Borls Karloff" was personal disappointment. During a guest shot on "Celebrity Time," Mr. Karloff did a five minute skit that was better than any of his half hour shows.

Christmas Concert For Young People At Mosque Theater

A musical atmosphere heralding the approach of Christmas will nark the second of the Orchestral Concerts for Young People, which the Little Orchestra Society will present in the current Griffith Music Foundation series, at the Mosque Theater, Newark, Saturday, December 10 at 11 a.m.

Scenes from the operatic fairytale, "Hansel and Gretel," with its magical music and its special anpeal for children in the Yulctide eason, will be presented with the assistance of a cast of operatic favorites. These will include Reverly Lane as Gretel, Eleanor Knapp as Hansel and Ruth Kobart of the popular Lemonade Opers in the role of the witch Christmas carols will also be sung. including an arrangement of the "Adeste Fidelis" by Morton Gould.

As in the opening concert of this series at which more than 3,000 youngsters attended, the program will again point to something vital to be listened for in orchestral muhow the human voice is at the With Jury Decision heart of all great orchestral com-The voting in the Popularity positions. To illustrate this, the humorous Coffee Cantata, with its play within a play theme, of the great Johann Sebastian Bach, will be presented by the orchestra and with Miss Lane, soprano, Norman Kelley, tenor, and Frank Rogier baritone, as vocalists. Also on the program will be selections from rams' Liebeslieder-Waltzes.

This will be the only concert in the Young People's series over the Christmas holiday period. The third concert, built around orchestral dances, is scheduled for January 21.

Often they are set out near trees and shrubs which rob the soil. It's a good plan to give a top dressing of well-rotted manure, each fall.

If you want to force some in the ouse, save some strong roots with good crowns and-plump stubby buds. Store them in peat moss or sand until about the second or third week in December. Put them up in peatmoss, sphagnum moss or sand, about ten crowns to a 6 inch pot.

Water regularly and keep the air around the pots as moist as possible. Start them off in a dark nlace and when the leaves are fully developed, bring them gradually into light. The leaves will be pale or vellow and they need to be gradually accustomed to light or the leaves will die. They should flower in about 20 days.
