Bob Multhaup Throws Hat In Education Race

Robert H. Multhaup of 25 Lyons Place became the first to file for election to the Springfield Board of Education last week.

Multhaup secured the required signatures on his petition and will be on the ballot for one of the three places up for election in February. The deadline for filing is this Friday, Jan. 2.

Multhaup is the chief design engineer of the M. W. Kellag Co. of New York City. He is a graduate of the University of Iowa and has secured his engineers license in N. Y.

He has been active locally in recreation projects, particularly Cub Scouts, little league baseball and is currently coach of the Recreation Commission's basketball team, the Texans. He is a member of the Board of Trustees of the Summit Aft Association.

His wife is the artist Merrel Multhaup who has exhibited extensively in the area. The Multhaups have two boys, Ricky 12, and Bobby 8.

The only other resident who is known to be running for Board of Education is Milton Kappstatter. He hasn't filed yet.

A. B. Anderson, secretary of the Board of Education announced Monday that he would have someone in the Board's offices at the Caldwell school all day Friday, Jan. 2. Ordinarily this would be a vacation week for the Board. But Anderson says someone will be on hand to accept applications and petitions on Friday.

Regional Will Lose $86,543 In State Aid

Taxpayers in Springfield face the prospect of reducing $86,543 in state aid for the Union County Regional High School for 1959-60 according to a news story from Trenton last week.

The attorney general's office ruled last week that the local sharing of basic school costs in these districts must be calculated on the basis of four mills for every dollar of equalized tax valuation next year, instead of three mills.

The State Education Department said Union County Regional would lose $86,543 in state aid under the ruling and can expect only $120,551 from the state for 1959-60.

Runs 7 Schools

Union County Regional operates Jonathan Dayton-High School in Springfield and Arthur L. Johnson High School, Clark and is building a third regional high school in Berkeley Heights.

Besides Springfield, Clark and Berkeley Heights, the regional school system includes Garwood and Kendallwood.

Aided Regional Systems

Law was designed to stimulate the formation of regional school districts.

The basic point determined by Cook's opinion is that 1954-55 was the first year the law was in effect and all districts in operation at that time must bear their share of basic school costs by one-third.

State aid is figured on a foundation program of $200 for every pupil. The local fair share is calculated and the state puts up the balance. Each district receives at least $50 a pupil. If costs run above $200 a pupil, the district must make up the difference.

LEADS TYPOGRAPHICAL CHAPTER J. Leo Moran, well known local resident, has been elected chairman of the Newark News Chapter of the Typographical Union. Moran, who has been a member of the Newark News chapter for 28 years, defeated Nick Restaino, 126 to 84.

RED BALL UP—hundreds of Springfield youngsters, some with new Xmas skates, others sharpening last years', came out in force at the new skating rink on Meisel Avenue the other day, and from all reports, the skating was the "greatest."

New Auditors To Be Named By Township

New and modern business methods will be introduced in the operation of Springfield's official business, according to the Democrats who take over control this Thursday, January 1.

Their first step, this same source reveals, will be the naming of the Joseph J. Seaman Company of Perth Amboy as the official auditors for the Township of Springfield. This firm will replace the Fred J. Stefany organization.

Community Church Watch Night Set

The Community Free Church of Springfield will hold their first Watch Night Service on Dec. 31, Wednesday, at 9 p.m.

Pastor Carl Hovelsen will bring what he describes as an "unusual" message.

There will be games and a social time prior to the Watch Night Service which will start at 11:00 p.m.

The Social Activities and Worship Service will be held at 24 Shelley Road, and all are invited to attend.

Presbyterian Parish Wing Opens Sunday

The new addition to the Parish House of the Presbyterian Church will be used by the Sunday School for the first time on January 4, according to plans announced by Herbert Kern, General Superintendent.

A brochure will be sent to all church families this week outlining the placement of the various departments and the full utilization of all space.

This addition, erected by Dean Widmer, general contractor, was built by the members of the church to meet the needs of an expanded community. The new facilities include three floors of Sunday School space, an enlarged and centrally located cloak-room and enlarged and remodeled church kitchen.

In addition to the building itself, an enlarged parking area has been provided with a new exit to Main Street. This lot has been provided as a safety factor for all attending services in the Parish House. Parents bringing children or attending services themselves are asked to use this off street parking to eliminate any traffic congestion about the Parish House.

Once the young people are located in the new building, a general open house is planned for all the members and friends of the church in the community. Further notification of this observance will be given later by the Christian Education Committee.

SCRAP DRIVE SUNDAY

The scrap paper drive will be held January 4th with the local American Legion volunteers doing the job as usual.

All bundles of paper should be securely tied and placed at the curb in time for the collection starting at 10:30 a.m.

Lease On Post Office Expires End Of August

The lease on the small quarters now occupied by the Springfield Post Office has only until August 31, 1959, but nothing official has been done by the Post Office Department for moving or getting larger space.

Postmaster A. V. Del Vecchio has already announced that the local post office needs a great deal more room. Both business and the number of personnel have more than doubled since the present lease was made on the Morris avenue quarters.

Even though the current lease has only about eight more months to run, Postmaster Del Vecchio says the Regional Real Estate Managers Office of the Post Office Department plans to seek and find larger quarters for the local operation. If nothing is done by the time the present lease expires, the Postmaster says the usual operation is to procure a leased extension on the present quarters until the new building is available.

William Brown, field representative of the Post Office Department's Regional Real Estate Managers Office, is located in Newark and announcement from him is expected soon. The procedure is to advertise for new post office quarters.

Postmaster Del Vecchio says the local operation will need more than double space. He has been assured that any new quarters would be aimed at future expansion. Springfield's needs are not very far up on the priority list in the post office department but some definite action is expected very shortly.

"Our situation here," said Del Vecchio, "is urgent because we are so cramped for room. We have been assured that the Regional Real Estate Office of the Post Office Department has given consideration to Springfield's needs."

Democrats Ready To Take Control At Thursday's Organization Meeting

Raymond Forbes Retires From Township Committee

For the first time in the past nine years—after Thursday's organization meeting—the name of Raymond W. Forbes will be missing from the lists of those participating in Township affairs.

For six years he served on the Regional Board of Education, two as president; and the past 3 years as member of the Township Committee. Mr. Forbes declined to submit his name for re-election in the general election last November—and his term as member of the governing body ends this week.

The Forbes have been residents of Springfield for 20 years and live at 169 South Springfield avenue. They have a married daughter, Lynn, who is now Mrs. J. Schoenhardt and resides in Troy; a son, Raymond, Jr., who completed a tour of duty with the Air Force last week; and another daughter, Gretchen, 13.

While Mr. Forbes is not in the public picture after January 1, it is the opinion of most of his friends that this does not mean retirement from political wars altogether. It is expected that he will maintain his interest in the Republican organization and remain as one of the leaders in the campaigns to bring control back to the G.O.P.

Mr. Forbes says "no" with emphasis when asked if he intends to run again for any office but he doesn't plan to go too far away from the local political scene.

"Ray Forbes has been too great a vote getter, says one of his many boosters, to go into retirement."

Mr. Forbes has been giving a great deal of his time to the Overlook Hospital where he is a member of the Board of Trustees. With Township affairs taking no more of his time, he intends to devote much of his energies to the Overlook new building fund drive here in Springfield.

Illness Keeps Mayor Binder From Meeting On January 1

Mayor Albert G. Binder will turn over his title as chief executive of Springfield at Thursday's organization meeting and finish the remainder of his term on the governing body as a Township Committeeman.

His designation as Mayor will be lost to him because of a change in the control of the Township Committee which will be in the hands of the Democrats for the first time in over 100 years. And he won't be on hand to witness the change in control because of illness.

Mayor Binder has guided Springfield through its most active period of growth and is responsible for a great many progressive projects. Illness has interfered with Mayor Binder's activities in the last few months and being relieved from the strenuous duties as the Township's chief executive may help him on the road to recovery.

After a series of operations at Overlook Hospital recently, Mayor Binder is now home recuperating but, according to his physicians, it will be several months before he will be able to attend meetings of the Township Committee.

Mayor Binder and Township Committeeman Eugene E. Donnell, remain as the two Republican members of Springfield's governing body. Both, experienced in municipal administration, will now be in minority on the Township Committee.

Democrats May Get Control of Planning Board

The report that Francis J. Keane is to be named a member of the Springfield Planning Board to replace John A. Hopping may also give control of this important branch of the Township government to the Democrats.

In addition to Keane, who is one of the leaders in the Democratic organization of Springfield, the Planning Board automatically gives membership to the Mayor and one other member of the Township Committee.

This would replace Mayor Albert G. Binder and Township Committeeman Raymond W. Forbes with two Democrats and, those who have taken the trouble of exploring the situation, believe that control will then be in the hands of the new majority group.

The new Township Committee, under Democratic control, seeks to have the Planning Board play a more active role in the future development of both industrial and residential Springfield. A Master Plan has been one of the first items on the Democrats' agenda and new statutes to ease the tax load for home owners were (Continued on Page 6.)

Santa Finds Some Of His Mail Belongs To Uncle Sam

A local goodwill gesture almost turned into a Federal case this week.

The Chamber of Commerce tried to do the kids a good turn by putting a mail box in front of the bank for letters to Santa Claus. And it was a good turn, because youngsters filled the box with requests to St. Nick.

The trouble was that their parents went right ahead and also filled the box with mail only they posted the official U. S. kind.

That's the kind which is a Federal offense to tamper with. It is also the kind which must get to its destination in a hurry.

So the Chamber has conducted a round the clock relay service to get the official letters from the Santa box, to the government's box. Thus, neither rain, nor sleet, nor Santa Claus has stopped the U. S. mail.

Also the letters to Santa have reached the old man and (hopefully) been answered.

For example, four Springfield youngsters addressed the following note to Santa:

Dear Santa Claus;
We have been good children most of the time except we sometimes—scream tease each other disobey our mommy & daddy are rude and fresh have poor table manners
However, Santa, we know that we have been naughty too often and we are going to work harder to be good. All next year. We hope you will forgive us and bring us on your sled . . .
sleds, globe, constellation for Chris, Pete, rattle for Tommy, doll for Martha, games, color pencil for Cary, building things, blackboard.
Thank You,
Cary, Chris, Martha, Tommy.

Alfred Rutz Signs Record Union Pact

Alfred Rutz

Alfred Rutz of 32 Battle Hill Avenue lead the union he heads to a new three-year contract with CIBA last week.

Rutz, president of Local Nine, International Chemical Workers, P. of L. - C. I. O., gained a seven cents-an-hour wage increase for each of the next three years (1959-1961) and other benefits.

Rutz signed the contract in behalf of the union on Friday, Dec. 19. He is a chemical operator who has been with the Summit firm since 1942 with time out in the US Army Medical Corps from 1943 to 1945. He and his wife are the parents of five children.

This is the first three-year contract negotiated by the Company and the 370-member Union. The signing marked the 19th successive 1959, two thirds during 1960 complete premium on single contract without a work stoppage.

Terms of the contract which will extend to other hourly paid employees of the company also include payment by the company of one-third the cost of Blue Cross-Blue Shield family contracts during 1959, two third during 1960 and the entire cost during 1961. The Company already pays the complete premium on single contracts.

Other provisions were an improved seniority clause and full pay for absence in the event of the death of members of the immediate family, relatives and close friends.

Many new names will be added to Springfield's official family when the Democrats take over control of the Township Committee at the organization meeting to be held this Thursday, January 1.

It will mark the first time in the history of Springfield that the Democrats will "run the show" which was made possible by the election of Howard Flammer and Dan Lucy over the two Republican candidates, Isaac Freedman and Frederick A. Handville, in last month's general election. They join present Township Committeeman Vincent J. Bonadies in the Democratic control.

The organization meeting is scheduled for noon on Thursday with the swearing-in ceremonies of the newly elected members of the Township Committee first in the order of events.

While no public announcement has been made by the Democrats on the assignment of the various working committees and appointments to replace present officials in the Township, reports from various sources indicate that the following program is to be carried out when Flammer and Lucy join Bonadies Thursday.

BONADIES TO BE MAYOR

The present lone Democrat, Bonadies, will be named the new mayor to replace the present chairman, Albert G. Binder.

Mayor Binder will remain as a member of the Township Committee but he has just returned home from another operation at Overlook Hospital and it is unlikely that his doctors will permit him to attend or participate in Township affairs for many months.

Bonadies, it is expected, will then name personnel of the various Township working committees and designate the chairman of each.

The very important Department of Finance will probably find Mr. Lucy as chairman because of his training and experience in banking replacing Township Committeeman Eugene F. Donnelly. Other committee members of this department are not known at this writing.

Flammer, according to these same authentic news sources, will be named to head the Department of Public Works which is another very important assignment. Committeeman-elect Flammer is also expected to be named president of the Board of Health to replace the present head, Frederick A. Handville.

No names have been mentioned for other departments nor have all the offices in the Township been placed under the various assigned department titles.

NAME WEINBERG ATTORNEY

One very definite appointment, although this is still unofficial, is the naming of Irwin Weinberg, Chairman of the Springfield County Democratic Committee, as Township Attorney to replace the present incumbent, Max Sherman.

Mr. Weinberg has been one of the sparkplugs of the local Democratic organization and his being named to this important legal job in Springfield is expected to meet with favor throughout the Township.

Mr. Weinberg has been a practicing attorney for many years and has made a particular study of municipal government.

OTHER APPOINTMENTS

While the following is not official, it is expected that these will be named as soon as the organization of the new Democratic controlled Township Committee is completed:

Benedict A. Harter, a resident of Meisel avenue, is to be named Town Treasurer, replacing the present incumbent, Francis E. Sammond.

Michael Genovese as Magistrate-Court Clerk. Edward J. Ryder is to be renamed to the Local Assessment Commission and one year terms will be given to Ed Olesky and Elmer E. Andrew. These two will replace members of that commission Leonard Gerber and Wilfred Batalie.

Earl Lawit and Frank Buel will be named to the Board of Adjustment, taking the places of present members Kenneth Bandomer and Christensen.

Dr. B. H. Josephson is to be appointed Physician Member of the Board of Health, replacing Dr. Arnold N. Constadt.

Mrs. Theresa Doherty to a five year term reappointment to the Recreation Commission.

Francis J. Keane will be appointed to the Township Planning Board in place of John A. Hopping.

Edward Cardinal to be reappointed to the Shade Tree Commission.

Mrs. Helen Skousen to the Board of Library Trustees.

Mrs. Ruth Hillard as member of the Local Assistance Board.

Present Township Engineer Alfred H. Swenson to be retained.

Building Inspector Wilbert J. Binder to be renamed to that post.

Joseph J. Seaman Company to be named Township Auditor in place of Frederick J. Stefany organization.

According to this same authentic source there will be no other changes in the administrative family at the Township Hall. The tax office is expected to remain as is with Wilbur W. Layng and his staff intact.

Township Clerk Mrs. Eleonore Worthington and Charles H. Huff, tax collector, are under tenure and no changes are expected in either of these two offices.

The Ingersoll left San Diego last June, and immediately upon arrival in Yokosuka, Japan, was ordered to patrol duty with fast carrier attack forces around the troubled areas of Formosa. Visits were made to Buckner Bay, Okinawa and Subic Bay, Philippines. Surveys show that blind beggars often take in $5 to $6 an hour. YOUR LIBRARY

The end of the year always brings with it a certain stock-taking. Admirers of Peppy's Diary will recall how he counted his money and goods, and estimated his gains and losses in the social world each January first.

In 1958 the Free Public Library of Springfield has spent its first full year in the larger and redecorated building. (1957 was not a complete year because the opening was in April.) Next week we will have figures to show how much the library has gained, but this week we might take stock of the less exact, but no less important, gains.

The first thing which comes to the mind is service given cheerfully and daily by a large group of ladies who volunteer their services. These women gave an afternoon, or a morning, or an evening to the library each week. In a few cases, volunteers who cannot come every week have arranged themselves in pairs and come on alternate weeks. These ladies, who work at the main desk charging and discharging books, free members of the regular staff to help with reference questions or to do the great amount of clerical work made necessary by the rapidly expanding book collection of the Springfield Library.

While appraising our personnel, there are others who need to be mentioned. The nine high school girls working after school, who take thousands of steps to find magazines, to return books to shelves, and to straighten disorderly shelves. They contribute a great deal to the efficient operation of the library.

Another gain has been a gain in the experience and standing of the staff members. Until two years ago, only one member, the director, was rated as professional. Mrs. Mary Manuel was awarded her professional certificate in 1957; but in 1958 Mrs. Antoinette Simmons and Mrs. Palma Hohn, although only working part time, were given professional certificates by the State Education Department in Trenton. Thus, the professional staff has now increased to four.

The Children's Department is now under the direction of Mrs. Helen Keller, who has had many years of experience working in libraries with young people. She is carrying on the plans of selecting and sending books to all of the Springfield schools for use in class rooms. This is a large job in itself, but Mrs. Keller also has found time to continue the popular story hours for pre-school children which Mrs. Porter had held the first half of the year. Over one hundred children are registered, and it is a problem to divide them into sections so that all get a fair share of stories. The Story-Hours will be resumed in the spring. In the winter it is not fair to make a schedule for small children who often cannot come because of severe weather.

Another gain which may not seem apparent at first is the increased cooperation of the public in returning books. (If the public only knew how gratified the librarians are to have them bring in their cards and books promptly, and answer notices, there would never be delinquents.) Three years ago the annual message contained a plea for readers to make a New Year's Resolution to return books on time. Although we have more books circulating than we had three years ago, we have less overdue among adults. (The improvement in the Children's Section has not been apparent so far.) One thing which seems to have helped is reminders sent to holders of books from the pay collection and of seven-day books. Even though this means a great deal of clerical work, and uses many postals, it keeps recent and popular books moving. It likewise saves readers from running up immense fines.

For all these reasons the Library in Springfield feels that it can look back on a successful year. On December 31, when the year's figures are totaled, many other gains will be listed. This week all the members of the Library Staff wish to take this opportunity to wish the reader's a Happy and Prosperous New Year. We hope to serve you all through next year.

See this week's schedule in box.

Janet Biddelman Engaged to Wed

Biddelman of Mapes Avenue, Springfield, announced the engagement of their daughter Janet Maiva to Airman second class Barry Kahn, USAF, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Kahn of Homestead Park, Newark. Don Lenny is the general manager of the Springfield Channel Lumber Co., and president of the Springfield Chamber of Commerce.

D. Eppinger Sings At Radio City

Donald Eppinger, son of Mr. and Mrs. Eppinger of 35 Kipling Avenue, Springfield, a member of the Columbus Boychoir of the Boychoir School at Princeton, New Jersey, is currently singing with the group at Radio City Music Hall, Rockefeller Center, New York City, in its celebrated Christmas stage show.

In the famed pageant of "The Nativity," the boys sing the traditional carols as the story of the first Christmas unfolds on stage. In the second part of the show, a gala New Yuletide revue, "Cheers," the boys appear in several scenes and sing a variety of songs from their wide repertoire.

Being at Radio City Music Hall during its Christmas show is a great treat for the lads from Princeton.

Later, at a Christmas party at Mrs. Summerson's home Santa Claus visited and distributed gifts to the neighborhood children.

Happy birthday to Jeffrey Carter, son of Mr. & Mrs. W. Carter of 22 Lynn Drive. Jeffrey was eight years old on December 24th. Don't fail to help him celebrate at his party with his two sisters, Leslie and Adrienne. Also helping to make the occasion a very happy one were Larry and Bob Budish, Lawrence and Gary Jay, Michael Altin, Jeffrey Ross and David Margulies.

SUNNING SPORTS
by VICTOR GOLDBERG

As Springfield Regional began their Christmas Vacation the hoopsters found themselves with a 1-4 record. Their last loss was to once-defeated St. Mary's by a 50-39 score.

This was Regional's first away game and was marked, as were Regional's previous games, with sloppy ball-handling and generally loose play. Springfield had a chance until the beginning of the second half as St. Mary's reeled off five consecutive baskets without a missed shot.

Bill Benner was Regional's high scorer with twelve points while Howie Rudominer, the sophomore jump shot artist, had nine. Joe De Bella paced all scorers as he scored 18 points for the victors.

Springfield had their best foul shooting percentage of the year against St. Mary's making 7 of 11 for 64 per cent. By coincidence the total was also the least fouls they have shot this season. St. Mary's made 16 of 29 for 55 per cent. St. Mary's drew 20 fouls to 10 for Regional. This is where the game was decided.

St. Mary's earned themselves a new nickname in this game. Henceforth they shall be called the "Flyers". The reason for this was their habit of constantly falling on their derrieres in an effort to influence the officials in their calls, especially on blocking-charging calls. The worst thing about this is that it worked. Had their acting not been so successful, the results of the game might have been reversed.

It can safely be stated that had Brooks Atkinson been one of the officials the Flyers tactics would have had far less success and the Bulldog's would have a 2-3 mark.

Regional's next game is against once defeated Westfield at Westfield on January 2, 1959 (yes 1959). Considering the small size of the game was conflicting with the St. Mary's gym and the fact that Sophomore Dance the attendance at that game was fairly good. But the Westfield gymnasium is much larger. Let's at least give a good representation of Springfield partisans.

Best Wishes 1959

A child asks questions Faith can answer

"Why did my dog die?"

He's your son, and he expects you to give him the answers—not just the everyday answers to everyday problems, but the big answers to the big problems. Like why his dog had to die.

All right. What will you tell him? How will you prepare him to face his life squarely—with confidence? Only by helping him find Faith—Faith in something greater than himself. And you yourself must have that Faith if you expect to help him find it. Begin this week to find the Faith for your life. Worship with all the family at your church or synagogue.

PRIMER FOR AMERICANS

COPYRIGHT 1958
SIGURD S. LARSON

You live in the United States of America. You are an American.

Real Americans like their country. They are proud of it. They think it is a good place to live. And they want to keep it good—to keep it getting better and better all the time.

Why is America the way it is? What makes it a good place to live? The answer is simply this:

Throughout our history most Americans have believed that every person has certain rights and duties and responsibilities.

Americans have believed that there are certain things that people should do, and other things they should not do.

They have also believed in certain things that people are, and are not.

These things that people believe are called principles. This book is an attempt to state the Principles of America in simple, primer fashion so that you can understand them, learn them, and remember them.

This is important. It was because earlier Americans believed in these principles and guided their lives by them, that America has grown to be the good place it is.

If all of us learn and remember these principles—if we also guide our lives by them—then we can help to keep America growing better, and better, and better.

And if we follow these Principles of America, we can help make the world a better place to live in, too.

The Principles of America are these . . .

1. Each Person is of Importance and Value as an Individual.

This is the cornerstone . . . the foundation of all our other beliefs in a person's right to live his own life, to speak for himself, to choose and change his leaders.

From it comes our hatred of those "isms" under which the individual has no value or importance as a person, but is only one of many unimportant people who have to live the way their leaders tell them to.

Coming directly from that first principle are two other principles that are also part of the foundation of Americanism.

2. We Believe that All Men should Enjoy Personal Freedom.

3. We Believe that All Men are Created Equal.

It is worth noting that the Declaration of Independence expressed the belief that "all men are created equal." It did not state or imply a belief that men develop equally or have equal ability, or that they should ever be forced to an exact equality of thought, speech or material possessions.

That would be equality without freedom. Americans have always believed the two should go together.

From the days of the Declaration of Independence and the writing of the Constitution, Americans have known that even though Life, Liberty, and other unalienable rights are granted to man by his Creator, they require some protection by man himself.

So, in our Constitution, and in other laws of our land, there are set down principles to protect the rights and freedoms and equality of individuals. And these principles play an important part in keeping America a good place in which to live.

4. The Right to Freedom of Speech.

This includes freedom of the press, of radio, of motion pictures, of every means by which man may express his thoughts on any subject.

5. The Right to Freedom of Assembly.

As we believe in the right of individual action, so we believe that individuals should be free to act together for the benefit of all. This is Democracy.

6. The Right to Freedom of Worship.

Not only is the individual free to worship as he will, but religions themselves are free and equal . . . regardless of their size or their beliefs.

7. The Right to Security of Person and Property.

Not just one, but three Amendments to the Constitution (4th, 5th and 14th) protect against illegal search and seizure, or loss of life, liberty, or property, without "due process of law."

8. The Right to Equal Protection before the Law.

As individuals are equally important, so laws must apply equally to all, without special privileges for any particular individuals or groups.

9. The Right to Freedom from Slavery.

This includes "the right to quit," for no individual may be forced to work for another.

10. The Right to Petition the Government.

The legally guaranteed right of the individual to "petition the government for redress of grievances" is evidence of the American belief that government is the servant, not the master, of the people.

11. The Right to Vote for people of your choice.

This is the individual's most potent weapon in the protection of his rights and freedoms . . . a weapon that to be effective must be constantly and wisely used.

The Principles of America hold that every man has . . .

12. The Right to a Good Education.

13. The Right to Live where he pleases.

14. The Right to Work where he wants to.

15. The Right to Join and Belong to an Organization.

16. The Right to Own Property.

17. The Right to Start his Own Business.

18. The Right to Manage his Own Affairs.

19. The Right to Make a Profit or to Fail, depending on his Own Ability.

There are other, similar rights of individual action which are Principles of America, but all of these individual rights may be combined in these two broad principles . . .

20. Every Man is entitled to Freedom and Equality of Opportunity.

21. Every Man may Earn his Living When, Where, and How he wants to.

There are also Limiting Principles . . .

Principles of individual freedom sometimes clash with those of individual equality. Therefore our rights as individuals must be limited, and those limitations are themselves principles.

22. The Rights of any Individual shall not Interfere with the Equal Rights of Other Individuals.

Your right to swing your arms stops where the other fellow's nose starts.

23. The Rights of any Individual shall not Interfere with the Welfare of the People as a Whole.

Freedom of speech does not give the individual the right to shout "fire" in a crowded theatre.

24. Every Individual owes Obedience to the Laws under which he Lives.

The individual has the right to talk against a law, to work and vote to change that law, but NOT to disobey that law.

Principles that are Patterns of Behavior . . .

Many of our principles of individual freedom and equality are guaranteed to us by law.

But we have other beliefs, other general rules of action and conduct that have grown to the status of principles. They have stood the test of time. They have worked. They have become a basic part of the way we live and of the way we look at things.

These principles, too, are foundations of Americanism. They are as true, if not more true, today than they were in 1850 or in 1750.

If America stays free, they will still hold true in 2050.

25. Every Man shall be Judged by his Own Record.

A man's family background, his race or his religion, is not as important as what that man himself can do, for Americans believe a man must stand on his own feet.

26. Every Man is Free to Achieve as much as he can.

We believe that where any boy may become President, where any man may achieve greatness, there is the greatest incentive for every man to do his best.

27. To Achieve anything, a Man should be Willing to Work.

Americans have always known that "you don't get something for nothing," that to get anything takes a willingness to work and to work hard.

28. Achievement also Depends upon the Ability to do a Good Job.

Add to "willingness to work" the ability to produce results and the combination is the basis for most individual achievement in our country.

29. Every Man has the Right to a Fair Share of the Results of his Work and his Ability.

Because of this belief, America has not only produced more goods, but they have been more fairly and more widely shared by more people than in any other country.

30. Security is the Ability of a Man to Provide for himself.

The only true security for any individual is the opportunity, the ability, and the determination to work and plan and save for his own present and future. Self-reliance is vital to individual independence and personal freedom. No man can be "proud and free" who depends on others for his security.

31. When an Individual cannot Provide his own Security, the Responsibility should be Assumed by Others.

We believe that no one should starve, or be without adequate clothing and shelter, so those who have more than their basic needs share the responsibility of providing the essentials of security for those who need help.

Printed as a Public Service by

SPRINGFIELD SUN

32. Every Individual must Deal Fairly with other Individuals.

Honesty, fairness, and personal integrity are virtues that help free and independent individuals get along with each other without losing their independence.

33. Fair and Free Competition is a Good Thing.

Americans have always believed that competition among individuals or groups encourages greater effort which in turn brings greater benefits to all.

34. Cooperation among Individuals is Vitaly Important.

PRESIDENT EISENHOWER has said: "The freedom to compete vigorously accompanied by a readiness to cooperate wholeheartedly for the performance of community and national functions, together make our system the most productive on earth."

Principles of Individual Responsibility . . .

Freedom for individuals carries with it an equal responsibility to use that freedom wisely. Therefore, if we wish to remain free, we must faithfully fulfill our responsibilities as free men.

35. The Individual is Responsible for himself and his Family.

He must protect them and provide for their present and future well-being.

36. The Individual has Responsibilities to the Groups of which he is a Part.

He must give of his best to his community, his church, his employer, his union, and to every group in which individuals cooperate for their mutual benefit.

37. The Individual has Responsibilities to his Country.

He must be an active citizen, interesting himself in local, state, and national government, voting wisely, thinking and speaking and acting to preserve and strengthen freedom, equality and opportunity for every individual.

38. The Individual has Responsibilities to the World.

Man's horizons have expanded. What happens in the world affects him, and his actions can affect the world. Today, therefore, each man has a responsibility to act—and to encourage his country to act—so that freedom and cooperation will be encouraged among the people and the nations of the world.

For America's Future

Most of us are still confident of ourselves and of our country. We do not claim perfection. But we have faith in our ability to move forward, to improve, to grow, to provide more and more individuals with more and more of everything they want and need in life . . .

If we, the people of the United States, want to have more material benefits, we must believe in and follow these two principles:

39. The only way we can Have More is to Produce More, and

40. As we Produce More, we must make it possible for More and More People to Enjoy that which we Produce.

If we, the people of the United States, want to have a better life, spiritually as well as materially . . .

41. We must stand firmly for our Beliefs, our Rights, our Principles.

WALT WHITMAN, writing nearly 100 years ago, put it this way:

"There is no week, nor day, nor hour when tyranny may not enter upon this country if the people lose their supreme confidence in themselves . . ."

There are those who would chip away our confidence so that their special brand of tyranny might creep into America. They must not succeed. So, let us ask of every plan, or act, or idea . . .

Is it With or Against the Principles of America?

What's Ahead?

This is a wooden Indian looking ahead into 1959, and the first week in January you might think he could see just as well as the next man. But we have consulted experts in many lines—business, government, science, radio and television, theater, music and sports—and their findings already add up to a dim exciting preview of the final year of the Fabulous Fifties.

John Brimer

John Brimer is the author of "Designs for Outdoor Living," which Doubleday and Co. will publish this spring. He is also an artist and a lecturer and a traveller. An expert on garden care, Mr. Brimer is a regular contributor to major magazines. He illustrates his articles with his own drawings, as he has done in this issue, where he tells how to build a greenhouse at home.

Robert Hillier

Suburbia today is put into sharp relief by Robert Hillier's tender memories of an easy-going, horse-drawn "Suburbia the Day Before Yesterday." Mr. Hillier is a novelist and a modern poet, but not one of those who deal in beautiful sounds that make no sense. In prose or poetry, his writing is characterized by the clear, lyric expression that has won him a loving public and many awards, including the Pulitzer-Prize for poetry.

Curling

A sport as popular with Canadians as baseball is with Americans, curling is catching on as a favorite form of exercise in many country clubs along our northern border. The game is played entirely by amateurs—there's no such thing as a "pro curler"—and businessmen are beginning to consider seriously including it in plant-sponsored recreation programs as a supplement to their bowling and softball leagues.

Melanie De Proft

Melanie De Proft, Food-Editor of Suburbia Today, is director of the "Culinary Arts Institute" which is composed of 18 college-trained home economists. Miss De Proft and the Institute's staff spend every working day planning meals, marketing, cooking, and testing, and their cookbooks have sold millions of copies. "Kabobs With a California Flourish," and all our food pages to come, will be the product of the Institute's resources and experience.

Laura Jean Allen

"I'm interested in people more than anything," says Laura Jean Allen, our January cover artist. One glance at her delightful rendering of a familiar scene shows you what she means: there are 23 (count them) people in the painting. Born in New Jersey, she received her early training at the art-school of the Philadelphia Museum. Shortly after, she arrived in New York City, where people have been interesting her ever since.

WHAT IS SUBURBIA TODAY?

Suburbia today is a way of life for 50,000,000 people. In another ten years, they say, it will be 70,000,000. Historians see the explosion to the suburbs as part of a revolution that has been going on in mid-century America, tending to enrich life for great numbers of people. Financiers see the suburban boom as a vast outlet for goods and human services, from the bulldozer at the foundation to the flat of petunias and the charcoal grill ninety days later—and that, of course, is only the beginning!

Already, novels and movies have come out of the country-wide migration from the cities, and new expressions have settled firmly into the language—"split-level," "shopping center," "freeway," "town planning."

Suburbia Today—this magazine—is a side effect of the migration. Suburban newspapers, growing with their neighborhoods, wanted a supplement of their own. Here it is, coming to you once a month at first, more often later on. Where your paper brings you the vital home news in the making, Suburbia Today will literally supplement with news of suburbia, country-wide.

What makes a day rewarding in spite of commuting and the price of eggs? How is it possible to bring the cost of building down? Are the teen-agers finding anything to approve of? How are PTAs solving the teacher shortage? What are people looking at, listening to, and laughing at? What are the new ideas for living—the sparks of imagination that light up house and home?

We know where to go for the answers. To YOU, in Sewickley and Santa Monica, in Whitefish Bay and Brookline. And we hope you will come to us with your ideas and findings and—we're ready—your criticisms. Call us a communications center... an intelligence service... a reporter whose beat is pleasant places. Our aim is to explore suburbia today.

WHAT'S AHEAD IN 1959?

4,000,000 Babies... News from Outer Space
 ... Cooking on Glass... Low-cost Air Transport
 ... Here Are the Previews

WHAT'S ahead in 1959? We have asked the statisticians and the pollsters, who are sometimes wrong; also the astrologers and clairvoyants, whose prophecies are sometimes borne-out-by events. We have asked engineers and naturalists, astronomers and showmen. They gave us twenty answers—a first rough sketch for the Shape-of-Things to Come.

Four million babies plus are expected by the Bureau of the Census in 1959. There will be more boys than girls, too. "The excess of boy babies," says the census taker, "is a persistent pattern."

The seventeen-year locusts are due to turn up in Arkansas, Iowa and Nebraska next summer. There are seventeen broods of them in the United States, and nowhere else but the U.S. The entomologists have them numbered and mapped and each year one brood turns up on schedule in the area expected, then goes underground for another seventeen years. Arkansas, et al., will be free after this until 1976.

Winter will be milder than usual, according to the Old Farmer's Almanac. ("We do pretty well predicting," says Editor Robb-Sagendorph.) There will be rough storms, however, in the first weeks of January and February. Easter as usual will fall on the first Sunday after the first full moon after the vernal equinox, and this year that will be March 29th. Spring will be close to normal. Summer of '59 will be far more enjoyable than last year. "Don't count on anything very good," the Old Farmer warns, "except the first few weeks of October in the fall of '59." But that is some time off.

Preview of entertainment for the long winter evenings: The concerts of the New York Philharmonic with Barbirolli, Bernstein and Mikropoulos, will continue to be heard, coast to coast, every Saturday night. TV will blaze with spectaculars—Agatha Christie's "Ten Little Indians," "Our Hearts Were Young and Gay," an encore of Hallmark's famous "Green Pastures," a series of Young People's Concerts conducted by Leonard Bernstein. Along with playing Cowboys and Indians again this year, the studios will also be using their great resources for documentaries, new programs of science and education, and more music than ever. Two Metropolitan premieres will be broadcast—Alban Berg's "Wozzeck," and "Macbeth." Also "Bois Godunov" in English and the usual great classical repertoire.

Six hard-fought, stirring lives will be explored in new books coming out between now and spring—Samuel Eliot Morison's "John Paul Jones," Matthew Josephson's "Thomas Edison," "The Grand Duchess Anastasia," James Thurber's "The Years With Ross," about the man who was the first editor of "The New Yorker," "From Jennie with Love," the reminiscences of Jennie Grossinger who built one of America's famous resorts, Grossinger's in the Catskills; and Helen Traubel's autobiography, "St. Louis Woman." For the inquisitive (and you wouldn't be reading this page unless you were)

"We're looking for people who like to draw"

BY JON WHITCOMB

DO YOU LIKE to draw or paint? If you do—America's 12 Most Famous Artists are looking for you. We'd like to help you find out if you have talent worth developing.

Here's why we make this offer. About ten years ago, my colleagues and I realized that too many people were missing wonderful careers in art... either because they hesitated to think they had talent... or because they couldn't get top-drawer professional art training without leaving home or giving up their jobs.

My colleagues and I decided to do something about this. Taking time off from our busy art careers, we pooled the extensive knowledge of art, the professional know-how, and the priceless trade secrets which we ourselves were able to learn only through long, successful experience.

We organized this knowledge into a remarkable series of lessons covering every aspect of drawing and painting. Then, to illustrate these written lessons, we made over 5,000 special drawings... with each of the famous artists graphically demonstrating the particular art techniques for which he is best known.

Finally, we perfected what we sincerely believe is the most personal and effective method ever developed to give art students constructive criticism.

In short, we created a complete practical training course in Commercial Art and Illustration that people everywhere could take right in their own homes and in their spare time. This original course proved so successful that two equally practical professional courses were later created—the Famous Artists Course in Fine Arts Painting and the Famous Artists Course in Professional Cartooning.

Our training has helped thousands win the creative fulfillment and financial rewards of part-time or full-time art careers. Here are just a few:

Don Smith lives in New Orleans. Three years ago Don knew nothing about art—even doubted he had talent. Today, he is an illustrator with a leading advertising agency—and has a future as big as he wants to make it.

Lillian Ashby of Toronto writes: "I'm losing count but I believe I have painted 57 and sold 41 pictures since beginning your wonderful Course."

Father of 3 Wins New Career. Stanley Bowen, a father of three children, was trapped in a dull, low-paying job. By studying with us, he was able to throw over his old job to become an illustrator for a fast-growing art studio... at a fat increase in pay!

Gertrude Vander Poel had never drawn a thing until she started studying with us. Now a swank New York gallery exhibits her paintings for sale.

A West Virginia salesgirl studied with us, got a job as an artist, later became advertising manager of the best store in Charleston.

Earns Seven Times as Much

Eric Ericson used to be a clerk in an auto parts department. Thanks to our training, he is now an advertising illustrator at seven times his former salary.

Harriet Kuznievski was bored with an "ordinary" job when she sent for our talent test. Convinced she had the makings of an artist, she enrolled with us. Soon, she landed a job as a fashion artist. Today, she does high-style illustration in New York.

Profitable Hobby at 72

A great-grandmother in Newark, Ohio, studied painting with us in her spare time. Recently—at her first local "one company... this time as a well-paid commercial artist.

John Whitaker of Memphis, Tenn., was an airline clerk when he began studying with us. Two years later, he won a national cartooning contest. Today he draws a popular comic strip enjoyed by millions.

Mother Boosts Family Income

Elizabeth Merriam—busy New York mother—adds to her family's income, designing greeting cards and illustrating children's books.

Harold I. Hopkinson of Wyoming sold $1,000 worth of paintings during summer vacation and was commissioned to do a mural for the new Mormon Temple in Los Angeles.

John Buskett was a gas company pipefitter when he enrolled with us. He still works for the same company—but as an artist in the advertising department! At much higher pay.

Donald Kern—a Miles City, Montana cowboy—studied art with us. Now he paints portraits, sells them for $250 each, and gets all the business he can handle.

Where Are Tomorrow's Artists?

We're not surprised by the success of our students. Opportunities open to trained artists today are endless. We continually get calls from art buyers all over the U. S. They ask us for practical, well-trained students—not geniuses—who can step into full-time or part-time jobs.

We're convinced that other men and women are missing an exciting career in art simply because they hesitate to think that they have talent. These are the people we want to find and train for success in art.

Free Famous Artists Talent Test

How about you? Wouldn't you like to find out if you have talent worth training for a full-time or part-time art career? Just send for our remarkable revealing 12-page talent test. Thousands formerly paid $1 for this test. But now our School offers it free and will grade and analyze it for you free. If you show art talent through this test, you'll be eligible for professional training by our School... in your own home and in your spare time. There's no obligation. Simply mail the coupon today.

FAREWELL "THE CHILDREN"

They Go Back To College Now, Leaving Behind Them Opportunity For Quiet Thought

By LEWIS NICHOLS

That other generation has gone back to college now. Silent are the jazz records which played from dawn to dawn, and still or almost still is the telephone. In some ways this is good, for elderly nerves and blood pressure are not what they used to be, long ago. In at least one other way this is bad. To get at the matter at once, that other generation on departing delivered a lecture. It was long, it perhaps rambled, but what it may have lacked in oratory it made up in earnestness of feeling and intensity of expression. That other generation, in short, asked that it no longer be referred to as "the children" and that the gang be not publicly discussed as "that age group."

So be it. Both expressions are here with put away, like the ornaments for the Christmas tree—to await some other year, and another generation. They have been used so long that it is a little hard to put them away, but clearly it must be done. It is necessary to say "over and over again, "that other generation," and not even when reminiscing with old people to mention "the children."

Going-Away Dinner

The lecture began under circumstances which were amiable enough. It was at dinner of the night before that other generation departed. For one there was a tiny touch of crabmeat, that being the traditional request, and for the other there was fried chicken. The meal seemed to be going along with just the right degree of sentimentality, and nothing was said about how restful the house would be without jazz for breakfast. Suddenly, having finished the crabmeat, that one launched on a diatribe. Certain words and phrases were repeated "burninating," "channing me," "before my friends," "grown up," and repeatedly, "you don't realize." Since this seemed mainly to be directed at the cook, the considerate figure at the other end of the table smiled serenely. This sort of thing would be good for her. Then the focus of the attack shifted, and in another direction came such expressions as "silly rules," "being in by," "allowance," and, again, "you don't realize."

Fault Lies Elsewhere

That was several days ago now, but in the silence of the jazzless house there has been ample opportunity for thought. At first this took the line of least resistance, as well as the easiest way. The considerate figure had warned the cook time and again that the people now known as that other generation no longer were in kindergarten, nor first grade. Being of a perceptive nature, he had seen them wince at the thoughtlessly spoken "the children" or "that age group," especially before boys. Being of the type which remains always young in spirit, and thus able to understand another point of view, he had understood their mild protests. Once he had even gone so far as to discuss the psychological aspects of the matter. Did the cook persist in believing them still "children" only because to do otherwise would make her seem older herself? For this he was rewarded with a stare that would have cut diamonds. He dropped the matter, being hungry at the time.

Sage Bows Out

As noted, there has been opportunity for much quiet thought since that going-away dinner, and the gentle, pacific figure at the far end of the table has decided upon a course of action. Naturally, he never again will speak of "the children," and will always think of them as that other generation. Further, since no family can get along on the dubious principle of divided authority, he will turn over what little he has held. Such matters as allowances and the hour for being home will be discussed henceforth with the cook. She says often that she runs the house, working her fingers to the bone, and this detail clearly should be a part of running the house. The type which remains always young in spirit does not enjoy being picked upon, being shunted at dinner into an even more advanced age group than he deserves. Hereafter, a child's—no, not that, but another generation's—best friend will be his mother. Officially, 59?

Peter Drucker's "Landmarks of Tomorrow" will be out soon; his publishers call it "an unexpectedly cheerful preview" of the next period in history by the well-known management consultant. Movies of '59 will include Edna Ferber's "Ice Palace," to be shot in Alaska; Han Suyin's "The Mountain is Young," to be filmed in Nepal; and "North From Rome," based on Helen MacInnes' story, which will be made in Italy.

An ultrasonic dishwasher is on the way. The dishwasher is vibrated by an electronic source and as the vibration collapses it "rips" all traces of food off the dishes. A painless dental drill has been developed—and not a moment too soon—on the same principle. A glass stove will tour the country. The cooking surface is pyroceram, a ceramic glass originally developed for the nose cones of rockets. Engineered for the tough conditions of outer space, pyroceram neither cracks nor stains, and sheds any sign of cooking use at the touch of a damp cloth.

AT&T will go into production with their Home Intercom, the home telephone system in which you can talk locally or long-distance and also switch over, as need arises, to talk to Grandma up in her room, or through a speaker to the Fuller Brush man at the front door. (Still no solution for those times when you are basking in the hot tub and the telephone rings. But perhaps another year...)

Skirts are going up by day—16 inches, 17 inches, up and up. For some reason which the economists do not understand, this is a sign of good times; after the depression of the early twenties, skirts rose and rose with the stock market, and toward the end of World War II they were going up again. In the evening, however, they're often going to be long and graceful.

Jet airliners will make it possible to have breakfast in London and lunch in New York. Fishermen will get to the trout streams of the Andes as easily as to the woods of Maine. There will be more group vacations, where associates combine to charter a plane to go overseas, cutting their travel expenses by half.

At home in suburbia, planners see more "leapfrog" developments jumping beyond present limits to meet the demand for more houses and more living space around the big cities. And more communities will be getting together to pool their experience and resources for a regional attack on common problems. Builders expect increased acceptance of the idea of prefabrication as a means of cutting down building costs. There will be emphasis on recreation centers for young and old together—skating rinks and bowling alleys and picnic parks, giving a chance for family outings where neighbor can meet neighbor.

Einstein's theory of time and space will be checked by a new satellite which will be launched this year carrying an atomic clock. This is one of a series of seven satellites which will be sent out in 1959 by NASA (National Aeronautics and Space Administration); possibly one of them will carry a man around the earth.

According to the astrologers, Jupiter will be in Scorpio for most of 1959, "favorably aspecting many planets in the chart of the United States." They predict one of the most prosperous years we have seen in a long time, and they find prospects for 1959 especially encouraging for anyone whose birthday falls between November 13th and November 23rd.

Finally, here is the forecast of a noted clairvoyant: "There will be progress and prosperity. Above all, 1959 will bring the world nearer to peace. Strange objects will appear in the skies. They will frighten some people, but their appearance will be in many ways a godsend for they will open up new avenues never heard of or seen before. Severe earthquakes on the Chinese mainland and on the West Coast. Tidal waves to the south. Look for extraordinary developments in the scientific field, especially with regard to a new serum. Winter will be excessively cold and stormy." Note the contrary forecast from the Old Farmer, above. Time will tell. Happy New Year!

Jamestown's Bride of the Year

BEFORE STAUFFER. Janice Peterson weighed 187. All her earlier attempts to reduce had failed! She felt her problem hopeless until she read about Stauffer Home Reducing Plan—and tried it.

AFTER STAUFFER. Janice is a trim 134, size 13. She lost 53 pounds. The Stauffer Home Plan also firming and toned muscle tissue, improved her posture. Janice is still losing to reach 125.

Jamestown, North Dakota, had always known Janice Peterson as a pleasant, good-humored girl. Although she was well liked and had many friends, Janice seldom had a date. The reason: she was far overweight, weighing 187 pounds.

Then one night at a party, Janice met Chuck Kinney. She knew from the start this was the man she wanted to marry. Now she was more determined than ever to slim down. She had tried before—reducing fads, rigid diets and violent exercises. Weight came off—but in the wrong places. And then she would gain it all back again.

Fortunately, Janice read in a magazine how a great many people in Fort Morgan, Colorado trimmed down with the Stauffer Home Reducing Plan. She decided, "If they can do it, I can, too!" So she tried this plan of effortless exercise and calorie reduction. Almost right away she started getting results. Inches and pounds began to melt away.

A few months later, Janice unexpectedly met Chuck again. What he saw was a pleasant surprise—a completely new and different Janice, now slender and graceful. For Chuck it was love at second sight.

And so they were married. Jamestown people agree Janice is the happiest bride of the year. And Janice says, "It wouldn't have happened, if it hadn't been for Stauffer."

The Stauffer Home Plan holds the promise of new-found happiness for every woman of every age who is overweight. For more information, look for Stauffer Home Plan in your telephone book, or mail the coupon below.

JANUARY IN SUBURBIA...

ANYWHERE IN THE NORTHEAST—The head of the house will just have to wait a while before his car is freed from that pile-up of slush. Many a paternal back will ache from shoveling this month, and tempers may become a bit brittle, but the comforting thought remains that the same snow that stalls the auto is beautiful snow for the children: for sliding and frolicking and building stout black-eyed snowmen.

... is all things, but not to all men. In the St. Louis area it is skating at the Steinberg Rink in Forest Park... in the country around Fort Worth they are golfing at Rivercrest Country Club and "shack" fishing in Possum Kingdom Lake... in Hollywood, Florida, this is the month for dog racing... in the Catskills snow bunnies huddle about the fire of a ski lodge, hot toddies in hand... later that afternoon, in Redwood City, California, the home-coming businessman is readying his outboard for a spin on the bay.

Here is a photo report on some of the winter pastimes and adventures that vary the daily routine of suburbia. To be sure, Monday to Friday, there is the 3:05, or the car pool, and the kids must meet the school bus, but January in suburbia still adds up to a lot of fun!

IN REDWOOD CITY, California, January is usually friendly. Here a far-from-tired businessman enjoys a brisk spin before dinner in family outboard with co-owner.

MONDAY TO FRIDAY—The morning train brings rich men and poor men and middle-income men into the city where streets are kept clean and electricity never fails and the heat stays on—but their hearts will lift when five o'clock comes round, and it's time to head home to suburbia.

OUTSIDE MILWAUKEE—There's hunting still in January. In Horizon Marsh, about fifty miles from the breweries, they go after white-tailed deer with bow and arrow during a special limited season.

SKIING WEEK-END—Powdered snow and fast slopes—see above!—and the office-workers get back Monday with well-worn muscles and a windburn, to wait for the next weekend when they can do it all-over.

OUTSIDE LOS ANGELES—Railbirds show up early at Santa Anita race track to watch exercise boys put thoroughbreds through workouts.

DENVER STOCK SHOW—People from Aurora, Englewood, Arvada and Cherry Hills will flock into Denver this month to see cattle go up and men come down in stock show.

BY ARTURO AND JANEANN GONZÁLEZ

Curler strikes a classic pose as his stone slides "down ice."

"SOOP MON"

About 33 yards of ice separate the shooter from his target—the bull's-eye.

MANY a husband who would refuse to wield a broom around the house will sweep himself into exhaustion participating in one of the nation's fastest-growing winter sports—curling. More than likely, however, his wife will forgive this contradiction for she—and the kids as well—are probably curling enthusiasts themselves.

At country clubs outside of Boston, New York, Detroit, Chicago, Milwaukee, Seattle and elsewhere along our Canadian border, thousands of commuters are donning gray flannel suits and housewives their aprons to don curling tartans whenever free moments allow. At the first U. S. Men's National Curling Championship held in Chicago in 1957, 20,000 fans poured through the turnstiles to see teams from all over the northern U. S. lifting their brooms in the sport's traditional gesture for "good shot!"

Extremely popular in Canada and Europe also, curling has a terminology as distinctive as its rules. It is played on a 138 x 14 sheet (strip) of ice with a house (bull's-eye) at each end. Two rinks (four-man teams) compete for about two hours in ten ends (innings) to compile the best score. Each player, during each end, slides two stones (45 pounds of highly-polished granite resembling a cross between a teakettle and a loaf of French bread) towards the center of the bull's-eye. The skip (team quarterback) stations himself at the bull's-eye instructing each player as to where he wants the shot placed. To speed the shot along and make it curl (curve) properly into place, the remaining two team members, swinging brooms, sweep (sweep) along in front of it.

But Why "Soop" Anyway?

There is considerable argument over the reason for sweeping. Some loyally maintain that the motion warms the ice and hastens the stone's progress. Others say it helps form a vacuum which sucks the stone along. Still others claim the brooms sweep aside dust which would impede the stone. There are even those bon vivants who say that they don't know why they sweep but do it for the wild zest it adds to the game.

As in shuffleboard or horseshoes, the object of curling is to nudge your opponents' stones out of the bull's-eye while keeping yours inside the scoring circle, points being accumulated by stones closest to the center. The highest possible score in an end is 8-0, comparable to a golfer's hole-in-one or baseball's no-hitter. A game of precision, not strength or speed, curling suits any age group. Rinks of 65-year-oldsters can take over the college-age set with little difficulty most of the time.

New Twist: Winner Buys

The close of the match is traditionally the eleventh end—when the winning team stands the losing team a round of drinks at the bar. Stacking the brooms is the term for this. No other betting is allowed or ever practiced.

Sure to be at the bar with plenty of free suggestions are the "plate glass skips," advice-giving kibitzers who watch the matches from the glassed-in spectators' section behind each sheet of ice. "I've never met a plate glass skip who's lost a match in his life," one perspiring curler complained not so long ago.

Curling's origin is debatable. It may have started on the frozen canals of the Netherlands, although the Scots (who have been playing the game since the early 1500's) can take full credit for its development in current form. The Scottish Grand Caledonian Curling Club, formed in 1838, replaced the "Grand" with "Royal" in 1842 after a visit of Queen Victoria and the prince consort to Scotland when they saw the game played on the polished floor of the drawing room in the Palace of St. James. According to the Encyclopaedia Britannica, "Curlers [of that day at least] claim to be a united brotherhood within which peers and peasant are equal on the ice." To the same end the laws of the club are framed with due regard to economy, not forgetting conviviality in the matter of "beef and greens," the curler's traditional dish, washed down with whiskey. A formal freemasonry exists among curlers, who must be initiated into the mysteries and instructed in the grip, password and ceremony being liable at any moment to be examined in these mysteries and fined for lapses of memory.

Rules Are Uniform

The Royal Caledonian is recognized as the "mother club," responsible for regulating the sport all over the world, changing rules and granting all qualified curling groups recognized status. The Club recognizes two associations in the U. S.: the Grand National Curling Club of America (14 affiliated clubs) in the East and the Mid-West Curling Association with headquarters in Chicago (43 affiliated groups). [R. W. Keyes, Secretary of the Grand National (146 Proctor Boulevard, Utica, New York) and John F. Bloomer, Secretary of the Mid-West group (P. O. So is Glenn Harris, publisher of the North American Curling News (1125 Tower Avenue, Superior, Wisconsin).]

No Curling Widows Here!

A typically curling-crazy American country club is the St. Andrews Golf Club at Hastings-on-Hudson, New York. Its three sheets of ice are the scene of almost constant curling activity from November through March. Every weekday, housewives by the dozen pour into the club parking lot out of their station wagons and onto the ice, resplendent in their slacks, kilts and tartan caps. Comes the evening and they are replaced by their husbands who dash home from the office, shed their business suits for colorful plaids and race over to the club for two-and-a-half hours of deadly concentration, sweeping and good-fellowship. Four separate male groups—St. Andrews, New York Caledonian, Ardsley and Mahopac—occupy the ice on successive nights during the week. Over the week-end these various clubs engage one-another in intramural competition and on Sunday evening there is "mixed curling" between husbands and wives.

As if this schedule weren't full enough, almost every week-end there are bonspiels (tournaments) hosted by various clubs. The "week-end" for many of these bonspiels actually begins on Wednesday or Thursday and lasts through Sunday night. "I come close to losing my job every curling season," one New York executive confessed recently, describing the subterfuges he uses on his boss to mesh business trips with his schedule of bonspiels at Farmington, Connecticut, Boston and Winchester, Massachusetts, Nashua, New Hampshire, and Schenectady, Lake Placid and Utica, New York, on successive week-ends.

The allure of these bonspiels is not solely curling, of course. The host club usually sponsors a lavish round of cocktail parties and buffet suppers which make the week-end gayer for anyone with the income and the constitution to stand both the social and athletic sides of the affair.

Boon To Country Clubs

Several circumstances contribute to curling's growing popularity. Financial deficits along the country club circuit have been perhaps the biggest factor. Today's club makes money during the summer season, when revenues from the swimming pool, tennis courts and green fees keep it solvent. The budget is strained in winter, however, when club traffic slows to a trickle. The club's alternatives are usually to keep the bar and restaurant open (and lose money) or close down almost entirely (and lose the help, who wanders off to new jobs). The sport answers these problems by providing a winter activity which attracts traffic and revenue to the club and also pumps new trade into both the bar and the dining room.

Curling has developed as a sport for the whole family, too. One of the most hotly-contested events at the Chicago Curling Club is the annual Family Bonspiel held during the Christmas holidays between rinks composed of a mother, father and two of their children. ("If you don't have two, borrow one," the rule book reads.)

Combining the vigor of wholesome athletics with an extraordinary amount of good-fellowship, curling is perhaps the most attractive craze in winter sports to come along. Its partisans are mushrooming and if you live north of the Mason-Dixon line, the chances are pretty good that cries of "Soop, mon, soop!" may well be heard in your neighborhood before too many winters have passed.

Modern version of the sport has changed little since its birth long ago in the Scottish Highlands.

Arturo and Janeann Gonzales, then sweep curling aficionados, rolled many a stone toward the bull's-eye before their story was iced.

"She was standing beside a gaslight globe, and every time she nodded, the cock's feather caught fire, flared up, and went out again. I watched, fascinated, as inch by inch it was consumed."

who condescended to their Northern neighbors, though they had no success whatever in trying to impress my Boston grandmother, my belligerent aunt, and my humorous mother. In nearly every front-hall of these fiery exiles, among the coats of arms and family portraits, there was a framed motto LEST WE FORGET flanked by Confederate flags. The Civil War was no farther in the past than World War I is today; everybody's grandfather had been in it, and my own father, as a small boy, had been at Grant's headquarters in Holly Springs during the siege of Vicksburg. Apparently the officers took their families with them to the front.

Walnut Street's Señoritas

Walking down Walnut Street of nearly sixty years ago, I can see every house and its inhabitants just as they were. Some things puzzle me. How was it that stately old Mrs. Richardson had two funny little monkey-faced Spanish nieces named Miss Emelita and Miss Mercedes Savage? They were lively little creatures who chattered to each other in Spanish and addressed the rest of the world in a torrent of broken English. They were always dressed in black. They wore high combs at the back of their heads and veils that suggested, though they were not, mantillas. Spaniards though they were, they attended Grace Episcopal Church with their aunt.

Half the community went to Grace and half to Christ Church. It was a question of Low and High Church. If you were very High, you went two miles north to St. Mark's; if you were even Higher than that, you went in to New York to St. Mary the Virgin's. Everybody seemed to be an Episcopalian except for my father's sister Mary, who was married to a Scotchman, a Presbyterian, of almost unbelievable austerity. My mother would say, "I'm going over to pay a call on poor Mammie Clarke. It's time she had a whiff of brimstone." For a short time, too, we had some Calvinistic neighbors for whose sake we pulled the curtains when we played cards on Sunday.

On the whole, religion was not the impediment to a happy childhood that so many of my contemporaries seemed to have found it. Dr. Mann, the rector of Grace Church, who later became Bishop of Massachusetts, was a frequent visitor to the Holy Land, and every Sunday morning had something to say about its antiquities. "If it weren't for Mrs. Hathaway's hats," my mother said, "I couldn't sit through the rector's geography of Palestine." When Dr. Mann left Grace Church to become a bishop, the congregation presented a pair of stained glass windows in his honor that were placed in the chancel. One of them had the Greek letter Alpha worked into the design, the other Omega. Since Dr. Mann's first name was Alexander, some of the parishioners complained that the committee had gone too far in introducing his initials into the window.

To return to old Mrs. Richardson, I owe her the memory of some high-sounding rhetoric that so impressed me at the age of nine that I can still recall it verbatim. Only one other phrase from those days rivals it. That was the inscription on an imposing burial vault near our lot in the cemetery. My sister and I used to speak it hollowly into the vault to hear the echo come back to us: "Author, Scholar, Poet, and Friend." (I wonder who he was?) Mrs. Richardson's phrase also had to do with death. In those days people did not write notes of condolence. They simply sent a calling card with "Sympathy and condolence" written on it—a most sensible custom, in my opinion. But when my grandmother died, Mrs. Richardson went further. On her card she inscribed, in her beautiful pointed writing, "She lies in a sublime peace, gracious in life, but triumphant in death." Heavens! The whole excitement of mortality seemed to sound in those glorious words that rumbled through my head along with the organ music at Grace Church, as, making my first appearance as a choirboy, I paced up the aisle at my grandmother's funeral.

The Southwells

Two houses down from Mrs. Richardson's lived the Southwell family, a widowed mother, two maiden daughters, Julia and Ella, and, across the street, a married daughter with her family. The Southwells were terrified by thunderstorms. Sometimes they moved chairs into closets and shut themselves in for the duration, sometimes they sat under the dining room-table and held hands. They were even more terrified by the passage of time and refused to acknowledge it. Miss Ella was my mother's dear friend, and often came to Sunday night supper. She dressed like "Disgusting!" shouted old Mr. Meeker as Miss Amy-Brown bicycled down Walnut Street in her bloomers.

Suburbia Today, January 1959

SUBURBIA THE DAY BEFORE YESTERDAY...

The suburb where I was born and spent my childhood is today a wilderness of towering apartments. At the beginning of the century it was a leafy Victorian town with big houses surrounded by lawns and wonderful back yards with fruit trees, grape arbors, and shadowy places where the grass grew high. I do not remember many large gardens. It was before the days of garden clubs, and people seemed content with rose-bushes hardy enough to flourish without much care and a flower bed or two. Pests, such as Japanese beetles, were unknown, and the chestnut blight had not yet attacked those magnificent trees. The shade trees were mostly big elms and maples, and those near the curb were protected by wire cages so that the tradesmen's horses would not nibble off the bark.

All the stores delivered purchases, so there was a constant procession of horse-drawn wagons stopping before the house—in the early morning before we were up, the milkman; in the middle of the morning, the iceman, proverbial bear of the servants in the kitchen; then the butcher, the grocer, the fish man, the vegetable man, and the fruit man. While they carried their packages to the back door, they anchored their horses with a heavy iron frustum on a long strap attached to the horse's bit. Then there were, of course, the strays, such as the ragman's cart with a line of cowbells strung between two sticks that jangled his coming. He also gave vent to a melancholy cry, which became the inspiration of a popular song.

Any rags, any bones, any bottles today?
It's the same old song in the same old way.

In summer there was the hokey-pokey man, hokey-pokey being a villainous-colored ice cream that sold for a penny. I was never allowed to have any, for I was supposed to be delicate. Perhaps I was, for I had rheumatic fever one winter and asthma the next, but I regarded the many restrictions set on me as a needless tyranny.

Horse-Drawn House Calls

The finest steeds belonged to the livery stable. They pulled the hired victorias in which the ladies rode from house to house of a fine afternoon to pay calls or just "drop a card" on a friend. Few families kept their own carriages. The community seems to have been largely composed of people who had lost money and moved to the suburbs in order to maintain a little state on a maimed income. No one was a native; everybody had come from somewhere else. There were expatriates from many seaboard cities, and, strangely enough, there was a sizable contingent of first families of the South who had been dispossessed by the Civil War. I suppose one came at first, then summoned another, and so on until they formed a colony in this town that had a reputation for respectability and good air. There was a flourishing "Southern Society," which met in their different houses with the purpose, I suppose, of recalling more spacious days.

As the grandson of a Union general, I was warned to guard my tongue in these households, but I need not have worried. The Southerners were arrogant folk a young girl, and I can see her little withered face still above a mass of pink ruffles. "Ella," my mother said to her once, "you dress too young. It is not becoming." Poor Miss Ella burst into tears. All the Southwells considered any mention of age as a breach of etiquette, and if someone said that such-and-such an event must have been ten years ago, "Oh surely not that long, oh my no, don't speak of such a thing!" they would say. Months after the old lady's death, my belligerent aunt asked Miss Julia how old her mother had been at the time. "Why goodness, I haven't the faintest idea!" said Miss Julia. "What a question! She certainly was not old."

I have often wondered if the pul-dates on their tombstones. Females outnumbered the males of the town by five to one. They wore long dresses that swept the ground; Widows, of whom there were many, looked like galleons sailing down the street; they were wholly in black and wore crepe veils descending from jet bonnets to their knees. Once a widow, always a widow. My grandmother wore such a costume on the street for the last twenty years of her life. Women's hats, which rode high on mattresses of hair, provided a note of fantasy in winter nodding with ostrich plumes and in summer bright with improbable flowers and bows of ribbon. My mother once had a hat with a long, iridescent cock's feather protruding at the back. One evening she was engaged in a lively conversation that involved much nodding of her head for emphasis. She was standing beside a gaslight globe, and every time she nodded the cock's feather caught fire, flared up, and went out again. I watched, fascinated, as inch by inch it was consumed. There was something, too, called a feather boa; a long and ample scarf made of feathers dyed in various colors. In a high wind, some of the feathers would become detached and swirl in the wake of the wearer like a snowstorm.

My Friend Peyton

The most memorable family to me was the Campbell family. The only child born when his mother was in her forties, was a son, Peyton Randolph Campbell. He was a year older than I and was my closest friend from the time I was five until eighteen years later when he was killed in France during World War I. His father was twenty years older than his mother. He was a Scotchman who, during the Civil War, had owned and commanded a swift paddle-wheel steamer that ran the Federal blockade to aid the South. He looked exactly like the Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria, whose face was as familiar to us as pictures of Elizabeth II are to the present generation. Mrs. Campbell-Rosalie, her first name was, which I thought particularly beautiful, was one of the Virginia aristocrats, and had the usual EAST WE FORGET in her hall, together with several portraits, one of which was an object of especial adoration, a young woman from about 1850, who was spoken of as "our beloved" and occasionally had a silent toast drunk to her in sherry before dinner. I have never known what her relationship was. Randolph and I were building a tree house in a huge chestnut nearby, and his father had given us a hacksaw to work with. I once asked the name of the young lady in the portrait and was told, or so I thought, that she was a Miss Hacksaw. I think it must have been Hacksall, or something of the sort, but at the time I accepted Hacksaw, and the word still brings before me a simpering young girl with a rose in her hand, a lovely complexion, and shining black hair parted in the middle—the epitome of the ante-bellum world.

We Had Our Mysteries, Too

Tragedy was not absent from Walnut Street. Three houses down from my grandmother's was a mansion of mystery, a great square house with a mansard roof. It was set far back from the street, among shadowing trees, and surrounded by a wild growth of weeds. Mrs. McCandless lived there. Years before my birth, she had been famous for her hospitality, especially her "musicales." As distinguished from a musical evening, a "musicale" was a formal party where the talent was imported rather than domestic. After the concert a light supper was served and people could resume the conversations that had been interrupted by the music. By my time, Mrs. McCandless had become a recluse. One day, some three or four years before I was born, dreadful news started from headlines of the New York papers. Mrs. McCandless had been arrested in a New York department store for shoplifting. What had actually happened? Mrs. McCandless was a wealthy widow of impeccable background. One theory was that the lace on her sleeve had caught up whatever it was she was supposed to have stolen; another, that she had absent-mindedly walked out of the store with something she had every intention of paying for. No one—or very few—believed that she was a kleptomaniac. "Such a thing," said my grandmother, "shall never be said under my roof." Yet why was she arrested in a store where she was, doubtless, known? Whatever the truth of the matter, the incident crushed Mrs. McCandless. She shut herself up in her great house and was never seen again. People saw the servants come and go, but I doubt that anyone would have been bold enough to question them. Her cousin, who acted as her companion, frequently walked to Main Street but never stopped to talk to anyone. The tall shutters on the front and sides of the house were kept closed, the lawn was abandoned to the weeds. Whenever I passed the place, I felt that I should hold my breath and tip toe by. Reading Great Expectations, I had the thrill of knowing that someone akin to Miss Havisham lived right down the street.

The fish man, iceman, butcher, vegetable man, fruit man—there was a constant procession of horse-drawn wagons stopping before the house.

There were a few bolder spirits among the ladies; for example, Miss Amy Brown bicycling down Walnut Street in bloomers and evoking some laughter from passersby and a loud "Disgusting!" from old Mr. Meeker, who stood on the curb shaking his head at her. Then there was Dr. Phelps. The mere thought of a woman being a physician was considered most unwomanly, and she had no patients, as far as I know. Although she attended Grace Church regularly, clad in dusty brown velvet, she was thought to be a crank, for she had a notion—again how unseemly that women should vote. Woman suffrage was an immoral kind of idea, as Miss Ella Southwell declared. My mother laughed and replied that although, heaven knows, she certainly had no desire to vote, she had no objection to other women doing it. "It won't make any difference except to double the foolishness."

Slowly, the Era Ended

In 1909, when I went away to school, never to return for any length of time, the customs and conventions of Walnut Street were still intact, defended ever more fiercely against change. But one by one the Victorians died, and their grandchildren married and moved away. By the time of the first World War, the town was sliding belatedly, like a crumbling sand castle, into the twentieth century. Once it started to go, it went quickly, and the air was loud with the groan of old timbers being torn down and the slap of mortar on brick as apartment houses supplanted them. On a block where, half a century ago, fifty individuals lived, a thousand people live today. There is just one house left on Walnut Street that survives from my childhood and is still inhabited by the same family. When my grandmother's house was torn down twenty-five years ago, I asked my sister, who lives not far away; to buy for me from the wreckers a wonderful stained glass window of a phoenix arising from the flames that had cast a spell over my earliest years. But wreckers work faster than she knew, and when she got there, nothing was left but the cellar, which seemed small for so large a house and so many ghosts.

You Can Build Your Own GREENHOUSE

NOW you can build a greenhouse yourself—for less than half the cost of a prefabricated one—in any shape or form which best harmonizes with the lines of your house (sketches, right). You may attach it to the house, utilizing your present heating equipment or sink it partly into the soil, thus taking advantage of the earth's warmth and the sun's heat. At night, an insulating reed blanket is rolled down to retain the daytime heat in this "walk-in cold frame." It can also be built freestanding (photo, below), with its own heating system to enable you to grow orchids and other plants which demand higher temperatures. Plastic Is The Answer The advent of a new, practically shatterproof, weatherable plastic has made all of this possible. Professional growers have found that not only does this polyester plastic pare down original building costs—due to its light weight only an inexpensive wood frame is required—but that it stands up to wind and weather remarkably well. No special tools are required to build the greenhouse, although a heavy stapler will speed the application of the plastic to the framework. The manufacturer advocates the use of 2" x 2"s for all corner posts, door posts and end rafters; 2" x 2" rafters and studs spaced every 20" on center between 2" x 4" every 8" to 10" of length for studs and rafters; and a 2" x 2" crossbar halfway down rafter spans of 8' or more. Two-inch trellis strips secure the plastic and make it weather tight. Any strong wood, such as pine, redwood or cypress may be used for all supports. These durable woods, if treated with preservatives, will last indefinitely, even in the high humidity of the greenhouse.

Cost Is Low How much would a small greenhouse cost? Price varies, of course, with the size, and with the area in which the house is built. In New York's high-cost area, the 8' x 14' lean-to shown above would cost about $170, including cinder blocks and aluminum louvered ventilator. What size should the house be? Allowing 30" for aisle, with 30" each for plant benches, the minimum width would be about 8' outside measurement. Figure the length in multiples of the 42" width, if possible, to eliminate waste.

Be Sure To Ventilate It is important to make provisions for the escape of heat and excessive humidity on days of hot sunlight to avoid injury to plants. An aluminum louver with an inside door which is closed in cold weather (one used for house gables is a perfect answer) or a large kitchen exhaust fan attached to a thermostat are ideal. In snowy areas, be sure the roof pitch is high enough to allow snow to slide off and not pile up, causing the structure to collapse. You may want to apply chicken wire to the frame under the plastic to give added support.

Kabobs with a California flourish...

MELANIE DE PROFT / Food Editor

Ask anyone up and down the line from Burbank to Burlingame—broiling does wonderful things to canned peaches. They come out hot and sweet and shining, the final touch, literally, on a skewer of tender broiling beef. Kabob with peaches takes ten minutes to cook with it goes a specially chilled, aromatic tomato-juice cocktail, a casserole heaped with spicy-raisin rice, and a loaf of herb-buttered French bread. Here is a welcome change after the high living of the holidays—good broiled beef and rice with the flourish, thanks to those peaches, of a dinner at the Palace.

BEEF KABOBS WITH PEACHES

To Prepare: 35 MIN. To Marinate: 2 HRS.
To Broil: 7-10 MIN.
1½ lbs. boneless sirloin steak, cut in 1½-in. cubes
1 No. 2½ can peach halves, drained (reserve ½ cup sirup)
½ cup salad oil
¼ cup soy sauce
2 tablespoons lemon juice
2 tablespoons instant minced onion or ½ cup finely chopped onion
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon ground ginger
Few grains black pepper
1 clove garlic, crushed
12 cooked small whole onions
2 green peppers, cut in 2-in. squares
1. Six 8-in. skewers will be needed.
2. Mix together in a large shallow bowl the ½ cup peach sirup and all ingredients except onions and green pepper. Add steak cubes; turn until pieces are coated. Set in refrigerator for at least 2 hrs., turning pieces several times.

3. Remove meat from marinade with slotted spoon and drain. Arrange meat pieces on the skewers alternately with onions and green pepper. Put kabob pieces close together for rare meat, separate them slightly for well-done meat.
4. Arrange kabobs on broiler rack, brush with marinade, and put in broiler with tops of kabobs about 3 in. from source of heat. Broil 7 to 10 min., turning kabobs several times and brushing frequently with reserved marinade.
5. Test for doneness by cutting a slit in meat and noting internal color of meat. During last 3 min. of cooking, put a peach half on the end of each skewer, brush with marinade, and finish broiling.

KRAFT DELUXE MARGARINE

SOMETHING FRESH IN THE AIR

Ever Hear of Pomander Balls? Fussie-Mussies? Burning Bush?

They're Perfumes for the House.

Made of Cloves and Orange, Verbena and Lavender.

Sweet perfumes work immediately upon the spirits for their refreshing," herbalist Ralph Austin observed in 1655. He might have gone on to say that sweet perfumes can work on houses too for their refreshing, especially now in the dead of winter, when rooms, like their inhabitants, need a pick-me-up. The best perfumes for the house are homemade, of garden herbs and the simplest materials. The fragrance of natural materials is subtle, and in perfuming a house, subtlety is indicated. A "sultry" atmosphere may be alluring on the person, but it is too much for one hundred and thirty square feet of living space. Another advantage of the herb fragrances is that they stay fresh till they disappear; they never are stale.

Cloves and oranges are two of the simple natural materials that are wonderfully effective for refreshing the spirits of the house. By themselves neither are particularly impressive, but combined they turn into pomander balls and give off a sweet enticing air that enlivens a room like a bunch of fresh flowers. An expert gardener and housewife gives this recipe for pomander balls, with comment:

Use A Firm Orange

"You start with a firm orange—preferably a Valencia orange—and a quarter of a pound of good cloves. I like to buy the cloves loose so I can be sure they have the heads on the stems. In addition you need a skewer or any sharp-pointed instrument—an ice pick does nicely—and I also believe in buying an ounce or two of powdered orris or calamus root at the drugstore and an ounce of some essential oil. This is not strictly necessary, but it adds a flourish as the oils are the true essences of aromatic plant materials. Oil of cloves will do, and oil of orange or oil of lemon is even better. Get the best quality or none at all. You only use a few drops so you can afford to be extravagant. Now . . . pour your orrisroot into some shallow container like a box top or a tray, and pour the cloves out into another where they will be easy to pick up. Rub your orange lightly with the essential oil and roll it in the powdered orrisroot (this acts as a fixative to hold and blend the fragrance). The orange is now ready to be spiced and made into a pomander ball. Make a hole in it with your skewer, sink a clove deep in the hole, so only the little starry head shows on the surface, and continue till the orange is studded with cloves. It is like cloving a ham before you bake it, but when you have finished cloving an orange for a pomander ball the surface should be solid with cloves."

"At this point some people put the pomander away to dry for a couple of weeks in a brown paper bag, but it can be put out in the air immediately. The spicy cloves draw out the cool sweetness of the orange when you walk into a room where there is a bowl of pomanders there is a "top note," as the perfumers say, of surprise and delight.

"Sometimes people come in and say, 'What is it that smells so good?'" says the pomander-maker quoted above. "And there are others who don't consciously notice the fragrance, but they will have an extra sense of well-being anyway, because there is an extra pleasantness in the air."

A Generous Bowlful

"Pomanders are much more effective if you make a generous bowlful, about a dozen of them. They seem to reinforce each other. I have had one big bowl on a side table in my hall for five years now and they're still delicious. And they're decorative too—clove-brown oranges, ranged with shiny green-brown magnolia leaves around them. As they dry they get hard as rocks, but they're still fragrant."

Potpourri To Order

Best known of the herb perfumes for the house is potpourri, also best when it is homemade of the simple materials. Once it was necessary to have a flourishing garden to get these fragrances and the charm they bring with them into the house. You needed well-grown roses and a bed of sweet herbs, and the roses had to be picked the first thing in the morning and dried on screens in a sunny attic (who has one?), and it was a long painstaking process before you could lift the top from a jar of potpourri for a happy reminder of last summer's roses.

But like so many other operations, making potpourri is easier now than it used to be. If you haven't the garden and the attic and the technique for drying

Winter Holiday 25 Miles From Home

BY ELLEN SHAW

Christmas Was Over ...
Highland Park Was Dark and Chilly ...
They Needed to Remove, Relax, Revive ...
And They Did, 25 Miles From Home

WE have a fine life in Highland Park, twenty-five miles north of Chicago's Loop. Our favorite sons are eight and ten. We enjoy being with our children, and gardening and reading and listening over and over again to Muench and Mitropoulos, and also to Pat Boone, on our Hi-Fi. We take our turn with the local library board and the scouts and the Community Chest, and over the week-ends we often go out to dinner or have people in. We are both miserable bridge players, but otherwise mellowed suburbanites. We manage to keep busy, as they say, and that's the way we like it. But sometimes Bart, my commuter husband, and I need a change of pace. We have noticed, about the time when winter settles down in earnest, how the day-to-day sameness, the perpetual whiffles, begin to get wearing. For many years we rode out our slump, rather grimly, but this year I'm looking forward to it. We know what to do now.

It all started one Monday night last January. Sleet was rattling on the windows, six pairs of galoshes and four paws had tracked little pools of ice-water onto the newly waxed half floor, and Bart had come home—in pitch-darkness, of course—looking, I can only say, seedy. Seedy, but to my surprise he sounded cheerful.

"I made a plan, coming out tonight," he said. "We're going to have a holiday—right away—and it's going to be first-class, de luxe, all the way. A bit of France, England, music, theater, the best hotels."

"Bart," I broke in, "you can't be thinking of Europe at a time like this."
"Not quite Europe, but you know," he said, "I think it will be almost better. Not so much effort, and we can be as extravagant as we like without going broke. I'm thinking of—going—Chicago. A week-end in the city—three whole days, and doing anything and everything we want to. Sleeping late and being lazy. And I think Ed and Alice ought to come with us—you remember what good travellers they are."

And with that he was on the telephone—talking to the friends we had gone to Mexico with the summer before. Listening from my end I could hear the plans unfolding.

"I'll ask Miss Cole to reserve our suites tomorrow. Two of them, yes. We won't do anything by halves this trip. . . . And you'll tend to the theater tickets, O.K.? . . . The girls can bring the luggage in when they come to the symphony on Friday, and they can arrange for the social life. Maybe we can promote John and Sally for lunch on Sunday. . . . What made me think of it? The instinct of self-preservation!"

All week, the plans grew and grew. We got out evening clothes and our best street clothes for daytime sight-seeing. We arranged a small party at the hotel in our own honor for Saturday afternoon, and John and Sally, once alerted, requested the pleasure of our company for Sunday lunch. The suites were reserved, and Ed got the tickets for Saturday night.

Friday finally came. In the morning I packed the children's things and drove them out to their grandmother's, and because she is a very unusual woman, she also took Rover, our stout spaniel who never stirs if he can help it. Promptly at quarter to twelve, Alice and I locked our front doors behind us, and drove off in the station wagon comfortably loaded with both families' best luggage. It was a beautiful day, especially as we got off our own quiet, snowy roads and into the sweep of traffic along Lake Shore-Drive. We pulled up at the best hotel, turned car and luggage over to a doorman in plum-colored livery, and went to meet Sally and another city friend at Riccardo's, which is a rather arty version of the European indoor-outdoor cafe. In true Italian style we took two hours over vermouth and antipasto and hot cheese pie, and then we went on to Orchestra Hall to hear the famous French pianists, Robert and Gaby Casadesus in a program of Ravel and Poulenc.

Afterward, still swept by the cascading final chords of the "Concerto for the Left Hand" we strolled back through the glittering, amethyst twilight to the hotel. As luck would have it, we got there just as our husbands came in, bearing sentimental orchids for each of us. At seven-thirty there was a champagne send-off in the Shaw suite, and bathed, napped, dressed to the nines and befloored, we stepped out on our husbands' arms like a pair of honeymoon queens to the Empire Room at the Palmer House. There, la gloire de France blazes in cuisine, décor and elegant service. Edith Piaf yelled out her wonderful songs of the Paris streets, and by the time we got to the coffee and brandy we were in a collective struggle to wrest our own French out of cold storage. Vocabulary was weak, but accents were, as the French themselves say, "all there is" of more, and we couldn't have felt better in Paris.

Saturday we slept late, undisturbed by the tramp of tiny feet, but on waking we felt we had been away a long time and after breakfast—rolled into the sitting room on a table covered in white damask—we put in a thirty-cent "long-distance" call to Grandma. We spoke to her and the boys, like all stay-at-homes they inquired, politely but perfunctorily about our adventures and then went into lengthy detail about their own affairs.

On a trip, time expands deliciously. Our party separated for the afternoon, and Bart and I wandered about window-shopping. We picked up some Swedish hand-woven towels for Grandma, two dynamo flashlights for the boys, and a small green turtle to keep Rover company and were back at the hotel in time for early tea and hot buttered scones in our sitting room, while outside the snow started swirling onto the windowpanes.

Our reception for ourselves was a brilliant affair, and as the door closed after the last rare-treat guest, "the staff" appeared to clear up the ash trays and smoked salmon and we proceeded tranquilly to our stage-side box at the Schubert. We were in our seats to hear the orchestra strike up the overture for the most glowing musical ever, "My Fair Lady," and how we rejoiced. In Henry Higgins before his gramophone, and Eliza Doolittle at Ascot! We went out whistling "The Street Where You Live" and proceeded to the Pump Room at the Ambassador East for late dinner and dancing. The place is patterned after the famous restaurant of the same name in Bath, England; you find yourself in a warm, white-satin ballroom where a dance orchestra plays alluringly and scarlet-coated young men in knee breeches wield flaming skewers of fragrant, black, roasting meat. Indeed, we "could have danced all night."

I could go on and on about our winter holiday but no trip can last forever. We went to church Sunday morning and walked along in the peaceful noonday crowd to Sally's luncheon party. Good food, good company and relaxation—it was a lovely party. I still remember the anemones and yellow freesias she had in the hall to greet us. In the afternoon we headed for the Art Institute where we concentrated on a new collection, the early Van Gogh brush drawings of Holland.

By four-thirty we had started for home. Pulling up at Grandma's we found one snow mag—one snow fort and one snow rabbit on the front lawn, and everybody doing much better than might have been expected.

"I feel as if I had been gone three weeks," Bart said that night.
"For my part, as I said before, I am looking forward to this winter's slump, and another holiday, de luxe, twenty-five miles from home."

Kitchen With A Heart

By James McConnaughey

Our "Operation Functional" began one night when my wife found me banging cupboard doors in the kitchen and muttering imprecations on the habits of our absent cook, Carrie. Carrie is a wonderful person, but not terribly systematic, to put it kindly.

"No wonder I can never find anything here. There are 16 cupboard doors and 10 drawers for things to be hidden in and behind!"

"You have to put things someplace," she pointed out mildly.

"But you don't have to make a guessing game of it. This kitchen is so unfunctional it had to be designed by an architect who never cooked!"

My wife and I are writers and newspaper publishers, and I'm the cook in the family simply because I like cooking and she doesn't. Naturally, I'm only a part-time cook, on Carrie's nights out and on special occasions.

The house was not old, and its kitchen was a standard, 1938 model, by which I mean it had the usual appliances, linoleum-covered counters with cupboards above and below, and a butler's pantry. The refrigerator was in its own alcove, the stove across a doorway from it, and the sink on the opposite side. The table and chairs in the middle of the room had to be skirted on every trip from sink to stove, or refrigerator to sink.

As I looked at it that night, it was an exasperating kitchen.

Not everybody, I realized, had the problem of re-orienting themselves in their own kitchens every Thursday and Sunday night. But a valid point seemed to be: wouldn't a "Carrie-proof" kitchen (as I was beginning to think of it) be a better and more functional kitchen, regardless of whether it was owned or operated part time or full time?

Before anything could be done about the kitchen, the first problem was to determine what was unfunctional about it.

The list was fairly easy to draw up. It included almost everything. The refrigerator, stove and sink were absurdly placed for efficiency, but it would be a simple matter to bring them into better relationship with each other.

That left the rest of the kitchen to deal with. Here, the problem seemed to be that nothing had been engineered to the primary function of a kitchen, which is to provide for the preparation of food.

The storage area was simply so many feet of shelving, above and below counters, stretching around the room. This space was supposed to accommodate such diverse objects as a sack of potatoes, a waffle iron and a box of raisins.

The shelves under the counter, being as deep as the counter, were nothing but a gross misuse of space. How is it in your kitchen? Do you have to stoop, squat and squint to discover what's behind the soup pot in the dark corner on the bottom shelf?

Here is the heart of the kitchen with staples and pots and pans and utensils and work area in one compact unit of space. Note appliances, bright in their corner, ready to use.

The new storage cupboard runs the full width of the room. Doors are fibre-glass panels made to slide on nylon rollers. Inside lights suffuse the surface with a soft glow.

Why, then, should a kitchen be cursed with inconvenient, under-the-counter cupboards?

Why, for that matter, cupboards above the counter? Their projecting edges were no problem if you were making a peanut-butter sandwich, but ours, at least, always got in my way when I was using one of the taller appliances, such as a food blender or the mixer with the meat grinding attachment.

Looking for new ideas, I went through innumerable model homes, scores of magazines, and a paperback book of the 100 best kitchens of the year. Most of the kitchens were beautiful, some even spectacular. But except in minor details, all of them were essentially 1938 models. By that I mean while tremendous strides had been made in beautifying kitchens over the past 20 years, the engineering of kitchens had progressed very little, to my way of thinking.

Use and Beauty

It was apparent that most people were attracted more to a beautiful kitchen than a functional one.

This is understandable. With the accent on "family living" these days, many new homes attempt to bring the kitchen area into the living area, and an eye-pleasing kitchen is therefore of prime importance. But separate beauty and functionality mutually exclusive?

About this time, a basic functional design was beginning to take shape in my mind, suggested by the elimination of cupboards above and below work surfaces.

Why not use one entire wall for a floor-to-ceiling storage cabinet, with full-length doors, so that all shelves were instantly visible?

That would leave the adjoining wall—for an unimpeded, straight-line work-flow surface that would include the sink and extend to the stove. By unimpeded, I meant nothing above it and nothing on it, such as canisters, breadboxes, gadgets and the like.

Into the storage wall would go all kitchen china, mixing bowls, salad bowls, utensils, all canned goods, and all dry, or "cupboard" foods.

Appliance Center

There was one other feature that I deemed essential to a genuinely efficient kitchen: an appliance center where the most frequently used mechanical aids, always stood ready to plug in and use. Why should they be brought out from some hidden nook each time they were needed, and then have to be put away again?

By casual shopping I found a kitchen designer I knew I could work with, and explained what I had in mind. The designer, Philip Robinson, was not only a cook himself, but a man with imagination and vision.

Over many lunches, we tossed ideas back and forth. The shelves in the storage wall, for instance, would have to be adjustable, and of varying depths, so as to minimize the storing of things behind things. The under-the-counter area could be utilized by pull-out bins for flour and sugar, pull-out stainless baskets for apples, potatoes and onions, and a lined breadbox drawer. All of these are standard cabinet units, supplied in many life-time finishes.

Work-Flow Line

The storage wall would end at the counter, and in this corner would go the appliance center, with a shelf above for the little used appliances, and a shelf above that could be used for cookbooks.

The work-flow line was now shaping up so that the cook, standing at the juncture of the storage wall and the counter, would have within reach, without moving a step, all major appliances, all non-refrigerated foods, and all utensils except skillet. (These would go in the wide, deep drawer of the electric range.)

We next took up the all-important problems of materials. There were some wonderful new ones since 1938 in the plastics and vinyl fields, and they all deserved a careful appraisal.

For the two surfaces which offered the widest range of choice—the storage wall doors and the work-top—we chose one new material and one old one.

Working Surfaces

I do not happen to like plastic for working surfaces. Plastic is fine for table tops, serving areas and so forth, but not for chopping vegetables, trimming meat or even shaping hamburger patties. Edge-grain maple, to my mind, is more versatile, therefore more functional. But it, too, has its limitations. It is not an ideal surface for receiving hot pans and skillets. Since our counter-top was to be one continuous slab of laminated maple, this problem was solved by laying a sheet of stainless steel at the stove end. The maple counter, incidentally, eliminates the need for two accessories: the chopping block and the breadboard.

For the storage wall doors, we chose fibre-glass panels set in gold-anodized aluminum frames (to match the gold-toned maple leaves embedded in the plastic). Sliding on nylon rollers, these were lightweight—maintenance-free—and visually attractive. Robbie added a nice touch by lighting them from within, so that a soft glow diffuses this wall of the room at night.

About the time our plans were complete, Robbie went to Pittsburgh to attend a two-week seminar on kitchen design sponsored by Westinghouse. He threw the plan into the discussion hopper. The result was enthusiastic approval, and the prediction that this would be the trend of future kitchen engineering.

A couple of weeks after it was finished and in operation I asked Carrie what she thought of the "Carrie-proof" kitchen.

"It's the best kitchen I ever worked in," she said in an awed voice.

It isn't the perfect kitchen, and it is not spectacularly beautiful, as kitchens are measured these days. But it works!

And is there anything wrong with a kitchen looking like what it honestly is, a place to prepare food?

A New Approach to Children and Their Art
—and Five Unusual Views of Everyday Suburbia

Art is for everybody—not just the experts. And especially art is for children. These are the conclusions of Dr. Charles D. Gaitskell who has taught art for 25 years and watched generations of children wriggling with excitement and breathing hard as they discovered the magic they could make with a sheet of white paper and a box of colored chalk. In his new book, “Children and Their Art” (Harcourt, Brace and Co.), Dr. Gaitskell has written a practical and imaginative guide for parents and teachers on modern methods of introducing children to art. Whether the children are gifted or not, he says, they enjoy the experience of working with shape and line and color, and they benefit. The little child goes about his work in art with a fine free abandon. He tries anything once, often regardless of consequences. To him, practically every experience in art is a new one—and he revels in the excitement of working on unfamiliar ground.

He needs guidance in the beginning, as he starts to use his material, but not the old rigid guidance that taught that there was one way, and one way only, to see and draw a cat. “Today,” says Dr. Gaitskell, “the ideals of art education have become almost identical with those of democracy itself, to the extent that each is founded on belief in freedom of thought.” Today, instead of setting up adult choices for children to copy, teachers encourage them to work from life, from their own interest and experience. And here taste begins—as children learn what it means to get an idea on paper, or bring it out of clay. Art experience, Dr. Gaitskell believes, is also one means of developing a good citizen. Why? The whole personality is engaged, he points out, for child or adult, when an idea is expressed by means of art. “Any activity which engages the individual so deeply may exert a broad and lasting influence on the whole personality."

The children's paintings shown here reflect the new approach. Their themes are taken straight from five and ten years of busy life—Playing Ball, The Family Pet, Ma and Pa and Susy Under Their Own Tree (and never mind if those three haven't any torsos—they have everything else).

When children are allowed to work their own way, Dr. Gaitskell observes, they often discover devices that resemble the techniques of well-known painters. The flat painting of children, for instance, finds its sophisticated echo in modern painters like Braque who have developed a style of their own by keeping their surfaces flat. Very often children draw a series of legs to show someone is running fast, using a "space-time" formula that can also be found in the work of cubists they have never heard of. And their sense of tone values has given conviction to many a scene where the sky is purple and the house is orange, to the admiration of older painters.

"Not what you see, but what IS," one critic remarked, as he got the full impact of these works. No, not what you see—no perspective, no light and shade, not a quail for anatomy, but without these tools. Dr. Gaitskell's artists manage to show us clearly what IS—what fun it is to play ball, how important a wise, old family cat is, the inspiration there is in a free, familiar neighborhood for a painter of seven and a half.

The paintings reproduced on these pages are titled, "Playing Ball," "The Tom Cat," "Trees at Christmas," "The Family," and "My New-Staying-Outfit." "The Tom Cat" and "The Family" come from Pictures and Patterns Made Easy by Children by K. A. Fountain. The Studio Publications, London, and New York. The others are from Children and Their Art.

Amazing Bridge Invention!

Charles H. Goren

now introduces his revolutionary new way to improve your bridge game—automatically!

HOW WOULD YOU like to be the best bridge player in your circle of friends... a sought-after partner... the authority others turn to when they need advice? It's easier than you think, with the help of this remarkable new invention—called GOREN'S NEW WAY TO BETTER BRIDGE. It's the greatest innovation in Contract Bridge since its inventor pioneered Point Count Bidding. As you'll see, it's not a book, not a course, but an entirely new METHOD of learning the finer points of both bidding and playing. And it's guaranteed to help you play more skillfully, more confidently, and with higher scores!

Guaranteed to make you a better player within 24 bridge hands—or pay nothing!

LIKE all good ideas, GOREN'S NEW WAY TO BETTER BRIDGE is simple. It's based on one of the oldest and most successful education theories ever developed: experience is the best teacher.

With this new invention, GOREN'S bridge experiences become yours. He has selected 24 of his most significant bridge hands. Each one is a challenge requiring some real thinking. And he has invented a way for you to play the very same hands!

You Improve While You Play

Here's how it works: A deck of specially-coded playing cards is dealt out according to the marks on the backs; so that each player gets one of 24 predetermined bridge hands. No one knows what the other's hand is! You proceed as you would ordinarily, you bid the hand and then you open the manual to see what bid GOREN would have made—and why! At this point, the comments on the actual play of the hand are on another page and cannot be seen.

You then start playing. Make your own decisions and your own mistakes. When the hand is over—or during its course if you prefer—you open the manual for a complete play-by-play commentary by Charles Goren.

Like 24 Private Lessons by the World's Greatest Bridge Expert

You play each hand with three friends—just as you ordinarily would (or if you prefer you may even play "solitaire"). The only difference is that you have a bridge expert—in this case the world's No. 1 expert—looking over your shoulder. Through the advice in the 108-page manual, he explains strategies and rules, the reasons for various plays and bids. He gives you specific advice about specific bids and plays.

You do not bother about learning abstract theories or hard-to-remember rules. By actually bidding and playing each hand—and then having it thoroughly reviewed and explained by Goren—you cannot help absorbing a tremendous amount of expert and practical "know-how." Your game will improve automatically.

The 24 hands have been carefully chosen to introduce you to strategies of Contract Bridge and to cover a variety of challenging situations. If you play different positions at different times, you will have 96 individual hands that you can play. And each one will give you experience that might otherwise require years of ordinary playing.

Books

Man's desire to understand himself is the theme of several recent books. Blaine Winter is the central figure in one of these, THE SECOND CHANCE by Almet Jenks. He leads a very conventional, successful existence, but is obsessed by the idea that the pattern of his life has been purely accidental. Then he gets a second chance and frees himself of this obsession. Strongly recommended for the serious reader. (Lippincott, $5.95)

The inmates of a county home for the aged getting ready for their annual fair are the subject of John Updike's first novel, THE POORHOUSE FAIR. Marvelous character sketches by a perceptive writer. (Knopf, $3.50)

DOCTOR ZHIVAGO, the much-publicized Nobel Prize candidate by Boris Pasternak is a lyrical narrative in the Russian tradition. Dealing with a poetic army doctor in World War I and the Revolution, it probes the capacity of man's mind and spirit to rise above politics and totalitarian government. (Pantheon, $5)

Marvin E. Kalb in EASTERN EXPOSURE recounts his trip to Russia in 1956 during the post-Stalin "thaw." Able to speak the language, Mr. Kalb had wonderful chances to learn the people's political philosophy. Very informative. (Farrar, Straus & Cudahy, $4.50)

IN-MOQUILLIAN MAN AND MYTH Jeanne Modigliani attempts to correct the romantic legends and myths about her father. She presents him as a vigorous, wholesome artist. Remarkable reproductions throughout. (Oceon Press, $7.50)

FROM MUD TO IMMORTALITY is the culmination of 36 years of experience with ceramics by Henry Varnley Poor. Containing complete instructions for the amateur, it also includes useful information for professionals. (Prentice Hall, $7.50)

WILD TIGERS & TAME FLEAS, written and illustrated by Bill Ballantine, covers animals from pigs to camels, and men who have chosen careers in circus and show business. Recommended for the whole family. (Kinschard, $3.00)

DOCTOR ON A BICYCLE by George S. King, M.D. is the lively memoir of a general practitioner whose life spans the first half of this century. Damon Runyon-like characters sprink the book. (Kinschard, $3.95)

Among the tops-in-cartoons: IT'S ALL IN THE FAMILY by Stanley & Janice Berenstein pokes fun at a household run by three small children. Marvelously funny. (Dutton, $2.95)

P. L. Giovannetti in his REWARE OF THE DOG caricatures "man's best friend" with keen observation and clever captions both in French and English. (Macmillan, $3.50)

Among the new paperbackbacks: THE STRAIGHT AND NARROW PATH by Honor Tracy depicts life in Ireland among good-humored villagers and a local priest. Comically told. (Modern Library, 90¢)

THE WOMAN OF ROME by Alberto Moravia—An artist's model has the courage to fight her way out of a sordid life. (Signet, 90¢)

HOAXES by Curtis D. MacDougal—Some of history's well-known frauds and hoaxes are explained and mostly debunked. (Dover, $1.75)

THE WAPSHOT CHRONICLE by John Cleaver—Story of a family whose sons all leave for the big city to become fortune hunters. (Bantam, 50¢)

LAUGHTER IN THE DARK by Vladimir Nabokov—A scheming young girl leads a married man to his doom. Clever ending. (Berkley, 35¢) The author's most recent book is the best-selling LOLITA.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, shown above holding one of her grandsons, is the subject of three current best-sellers. In her autobiography, ON MY OWN, she expresses her views and philosophy with warmth and sincerity. (Harper, $4) Alfred Steinberg's MRS. R: THE LIFE OF ELEANOR ROOSEVELT is filled with vignettes of her lively household. (Putnam, $4) The third, from which the photo was taken, is a dramatic pictorial life story compiled by Richard Harrell and Ralph G. Martin. ELEANOR ROOSEVELT: HER LIFE IN PICTURES. (Duell, Sloan & Pearce, $4.95)

Records

Van Cliburn's new RCA recording of the TOCHAIKOVSKY CONCERTO NO. 4 continues to be the nation's choice. Also in this vein—celebrated Leon Fleischer has recorded the BRAHMS CONCERTO NO. 1 for Epic. This work exhibits the virtuosity of the young artist combined with the solid musical support of Szell and the Cleveland Orchestra.

Bruno Walter and the New York Philharmonic have at last accomplished the enormous task of recording MAHLER'S RESURRECTION SYMPHONY. This gigantic musical and vocal document is treated in a bold, sweeping style, yet always with the studied seriousness demanded by the composer. (Columbia)

SHOSTAKOVICH'S SYMPHONY NO. 11 is now accepted by most musicians as an important work. Enough so that Stokowski and his Houston Orchestra have made a cutting with Capitol. This exciting symphonic drama musically describes the battles and courage of the Russian Revolution.

A selection of four BETHOVEN OVERTURES, superbly performed by van Beinum and the London Philharmonic Orchestra is on a new Richmond 198 series. A rich, full-bodied recording.

Brubeck Quartet, exponents of modern jazz, were on a good-will tour last year. From their notebook comic JAZZ IMPRESSIONS OF EURASIA, an improvised work showing that jazz can easily be adapted to anything that takes a beat. (Columbia)

Peggy Lee, darling of the slow and easy set, has a new album, THINGS ARE SWINGING. Female counterpart of Sinatra, Peggy is gaining fans hungry for new discs. (Capitol)

THELONIOUS MONK ON ELLINGTON is a jazz classic. The Monk is accompanied by Oscar Pettiford on the bass and Kenny Clark on the drums—which speaks for this sparkling combo. (Riverside)

THE IMMORTAL AL JOLSON, one of show business' beloved entertainers, returns with previously unissued songs both familiar and new from his Kraft Music program. They are as fresh and vigorous as when first heard over the air. (Decca)

CLAUDE ON A CLOUD is bound to get you in a dreamy mood. Strings, woodwinds and Claude Thornhill at the keyboard bring fresh renditions of old favorites. For quiet stay-at-home evenings. (Decca)

BELOFONTE SINGS THE BLUES—Harry is as usual intimate and compelling. More sophisticated than most blues singers, he also has more polish. (Victor)

In the stampede for the stereo market, all the major companies, as well as the minor ones, are getting into the act. London has recently released several operas which lend themselves beautifully to the 3-D principles. TWO G & S: THE PIRATES OF PENZANCE and THE HINKADO are ably performed by the famous D'Oyly Carte Company. Verdi's IL TROVATORE and Puccini's LA GIACCONDA are both sung by top casts headed by Joel Monaco and Tebaldi. Victor also has released an impressive list. Of interest for the musician is an eloquent recording of BARTOK'S CONCERTO FOR ORCHESTRA conducted by Erte Neiner. Stereo depth and balance are excellent. The pop world is not neglected either. Columbia has several stereo albums called NEWPORT 1955, with many top jazz artists—including Duke Ellington, Mahalia Jackson.

Movies

THE INN OF THE SIXTH HAPPINESS casts Ingrid Bergman as a thwarted English servant girl of the 30's determined to get to China. She encounters many stirring adventures: an involvement in the war, a romance with Eurasian officer, (Curt Jurgens), winning the friendship of the Mandarin (Robert Donat) and rescuing a small army of homeless children. Absorbing story, beautifully acted.

THE BUCCANER is from the story of Jean Lafitte, the famous pirate leader who came to help the Americans in the war of 1812. Charles Boyer, Charlton Heston and Yul Brynner as Lafitte) together with hundreds of extras make this a thrilling, action-packed film.

THE HORSE'S MOUTH—Alec Guinness is magnificent as the eccentric, lovable painter Guiley Jimson, who finds huge, blank walls hard to resist. His painting is not appreciated, but undaunted Jimson tackles the walls with paint and brush, in the meantime spilling provocative remarks colored with humor.

AUNTIE MAME is as hilarious as ever with Rosalind Russell duplicating her Broadway success about the madcap adventures of an unpredictable lady and her nephew.

SEPARATE TABLES—An intimate glimpse into the private lives of a group of lonely people gathered in a seaside inn. Excellently acted by Deborah Kerr, David Niven and Rita Hayworth.

BELL, BOOK AND CANDLE is a charming fantasy about witches and warlocks set against a New England background. Kim Novak and James Stewart contribute much to this entertaining film.
