2 Community Pools Built in Livingston

Cost Taxpayers Nothing

Now that Springfield is considering building a municipal pool it might prove useful for local residents to know how other communities have accomplished the same feat at little cost. Livingston, a close neighbor, now has two community pools which cost the taxpayer nothing.

In 1955 a private association known as the Livingston Community Pool Association, decided the town could well use a pool. They solicited enough subscriptions to assure them of the required revenue and hired a private contractor to build the pool in Memorial Park. In 1957 the Association turned over the pool to Livingston free and clear. In fact there was some money left over from operating costs which the town used to purchase benches for pool use.

So the pool would not be a part of the tax picture the town government asked for and received legislation to operate the pool as a utility. People using pool facilities would pay a nominal fee; this money went towards operating expenses.

In 1958 the town government expended monies for general improvements; such as completion of the bathhouse, extended concrete aprons for more space plus a parking lot. Approximately $65,000 was spent. In the same year the fee charged per family was $25.

The second pool was authorized in 1959 with a $80,000 bond issue. "No tax monies were used; it was strictly swimming pool monies," stressed Robert Hart, Livingston Township Manager. This pool was placed in operation on July 24, 1960. With a second pool put into use the per-family fee was upped to $30.

"No problems arose as to usable land. Sites chosen were part of the park school system," stated Mr. Hart.

The income from the sale of memberships is in excess of $75,000 which provides for both operating costs and amortization of debt. To maintain both pools about $35,000 is needed; for one pool between $17-18,000 is needed. The combined membership totals 11,000 with a town population near the 24,000 mark.

The first pool built has a design capacity of 900 people; the second 1000.

Facilities provided include shuffleboard, picnic and sand areas and refreshment stands. The pools are open from 1 to 8 pm daily and Sunday, and on Saturdays and holidays the hours are 10 am to 8 pm.

Dividends Top Million At Crestmont

Over a million dollars in dividends will be paid to savers at Crestmont Savings and Loan Association of Maplewood and Springfield for the year 1961, according to Loren F. Gardiner, president. This seven-figure amount represents the highest yearly dividend distribution in the 19-year history of the association. The current dividend rate, also the highest paid by Crestmont, is 3 3/4 per cent per annum.

Mr. Gardiner bases his estimate on current trends in savings and earnings at Crestmont. Savings at the end of June were almost $32 million as compared with less than $30 million at the end of last year, representing an increase of over 7 per cent.

Insurance Rating Upgraded

Springfield Township Committee enthusiastically received a letter at its Tuesday night meeting upgrading the municipality's fire insurance rating to a "C" classification. The communication, addressed to Committeeman Russel W. Sibole, was sent by the Fire Insurance Rating Organization of New Jersey, Newark.

Future insurance premiums will be governed by the new rating, it was emphasized by the Township Committee.

No November Referendum

The question of a municipal swimming pool appearing on this November's ballot was eliminated when Mayor Vincent J. Bonadies announced at the Township Committee meeting Tuesday night the first step to be taken would be the establishment of a citizens committee. He urged citizens who are qualified to serve on such a committee to volunteer at the next Township Committee meeting August 22 in Township Hall.

Mayor Bonadies said that although there has been a warm reception to the proposal, the Township Committee in conference felt that there is need for exploring the ramifications for a pool and a number of steps to be taken such as its financing and location. The governing body feels at this time that a citizens committee should be appointed to completely investigate the matter and report its findings no later than the first of the year so that any budgetary requirements could be made at that time, he explained. In view of the appointment of this committee he continued, the governing body feels that a referendum would not be timely in November but should be put off until a later date.

Volunteers who have the time to serve and are qualified in the field of finance, construction or real estate were urged to come forth at the August 22 meeting.

A swimming pool survey has been submitted to the Township Committee by Candeb, Fleissig and Associates, Newark planning consultants, as a part of a master plan that concerns is studying for the township. The survey lists possible sites and other recommendations for construction.

An ordinance amending an ordinance for the establishment of a traffic light at the Hillside Avenue and South Springfield Avenue intersection was introduced on first reading. The amendment will provide approximately $1,700 in additional funds required for the installation, which will total $11,500. Final reading will be August 22.

Two bids for the construction of a shelter house at the Irwin Street playground were rejected because they were about $8,000 to $10,000 over the amount the Engineering Department and Recreation Commission had anticipated for the work. Bids were $15,500 by Dean Widmer of Springfield and $19,316 by S and J Polawka Inc. of Livingston. Recommendation by the Board of Adjustment for a variance to permit Joseph Gallini to use 37 Maple Avenue as a two-family dwelling was approved. A resolution was approved authorizing that requests for tax exemptions by property owners over 65 years of age with a gross income of less than $5,000 yearly be applied to 1962 taxes.

Request of Fire Chief Ormond W. Meeker for a fire hydrant at the northeast corner of Pippisessa Way and Far Hills Rd. was granted.

Committeeman Daniel M. Lucy recommended that Township Attorney Irwin Weinberg be authorized to investigate the possibility of obtaining right-of-way in preparation for the installation of sidewalks in Milltown Rd. between Cottler Ave. and Laurel Dr., when it was reported 13 children walk to school in this area. The sidewalks request had been made by the Board of Education.

Committeeman William Balentine did not attend the meeting.

Attends Pru Management Conference

Earl C. Rothlein, 19 Warner Avenue, Springfield, will attend the third session of the Prudential Insurance Co.'s fourth annual advanced management program to be held at Princeton University beginning this Sunday, August 13.

Bonadies Heads Retarded Children Campaign Drive

The Honorable Vincent Bonadies, Mayor of Springfield, has been appointed general Campaign Chairman for the 1961 Campaign to be conducted by the Union County Unit, New Jersey Association For Retarded Children during the month of November. It was announced today by Mrs. Felix Helpap, President, 19 Ridgeway Avenue, Hillside.

The fund drive, held in conjunction with National's Retarded Children's week, seeks to raise $20,000 for the purpose of continuing and expanding essential services for the mentally retarded children and adults of Union County and to help support research into the causes and prevention of Retardation.

Mr. Bonadies is also President of Bond Electronic Corporation, Springfield and a Committeeman at-large for the Boy Scout Council of Union County. Formerly he has served as a member of the board of directors Red Cross Chapter of Springfield; President of U.N.I.C.O., Exalted Ruler of the Springfield Elks, Lodge 2,004; and has chaired the fund drive campaigns of Heart and Red Cross in Springfield.

The Mayor is a graduate of the Newark College of Engineering and has been an instructor at Temple University and St. Joseph College, both in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

In accepting the Chairmanship, Mr. Bonadies said, "There are approximately 5,000,000 persons in the United States who are mentally retarded. This figure does not include those who merely learn slowly. It means those whose top learning capacity is less than normal. Over 30 babies out of 1,000 born in the United States, or a total of 120,000 babies are destined to be born retarded this year.

"The future of our country," continued the Mayor, "depends very strongly on a vigorous healthy upbringing for our children. These children who are

Old Freezer Is Menace To Children

The Springfield Police cars are now bearing a bumper banner requesting all persons to "Save A Child's Life. Remove Doors from Abandoned Refrigerators."

This campaign is a prime project of the Refrigeration Service Engineers Society and a local member, A. H. Bouvier, of 38 Morris Avenue, Springfield, secured both Mayor Vincent Bonadies and Police Chief Wilbur Selander's cooperation in promoting publicity in the township and bring to light the menace an abandoned refrigerator or freezer can be to children.

Since 1950, when accurate records were begun, 191 children have died in these death traps. Federal legislation has been enacted which makes it mandatory to provide easy access to all new refrigerators. However, the majority of abandoned equipment is old and only opens from the outside. It is therefore vital that any freezer or refrigerator placed where available to children have the door removed, the lock incapacitated or the door firmly wired shut and placed facing a wall.

The Refrigeration Service Engineers Society will gladly incapacitate any such equipment.

Census Planned On Employment

Information to be used in compiling national figures on employment and unemployment will be collected locally during the week of August 14 in the Current Population Survey, it was announced today by Director Jack W. Travers, Jr. of the U. S. Census Bureau's regional office at New York, New York. Current Population Survey information will be collected from a number of local families.

The information collected from local families will be combined with the collected in 332 other areas of the country to provide the national estimates. Approximately 35,000 households are selected at random under the Census Bureau's scientific sampling program to provide a representative cross-section of all classes of the population, and all types of areas in the country—large cities, small towns, rural areas, and so forth.

Facts on employment and unemployment collected locally are forwarded to Census Bureau headquarters in Washington to be processed by the Bureau's electronic computer, known as Univac, to provide the national estimates. The national report covering the information collected during the week of August 14 will be issued in Washington early in September.

retarded are just as much involved in the country's future as those who are not. With this in mind, we must regard the retardate as an individual for whom opportunities for good health and education should be provided. Retarded children are the responsibility of the community in which they live," concluded Mr. Bonadies.

Mrs. Helpap also announced, "The 1961 Fund Campaign of the Union County Unit, New Jersey Association For Retarded Children will be conducted in the following communities: Berkeley Heights, Clark, Garwood, Kenilworth, Mountainside, Rahway, Scotch Plains, Springfield, Union and Winfield."

The contest is open to all single female residents of Union County regardless of age. The applicants to the crown are asked to send a picture with name, address, and age printed on the reverse side to Union County Democratic Club, 1154 Irving Avenue, Rahway.

Robert C. Kadri, president of the club, appointed Savage at a recent meeting of the dinner-dance committee headed by Mayor Vincent J. Bonadies of Springfield, where further plans for the upcoming dance were discussed.

Seltzer Wins Trophy For Forensic Talents

Robert V. Seltzer of 32 Sherwood Road, Springfield, N. J., who will be a senior this year at Jonathan Dayton High School, won the National Forensic League trophy for outstanding student in the debate division of the 14th annual Colorado High School Speech Institute at the University of Colorado.

Robert is the second member of his family to win the same national award. His brother, George, won the trophy at the institute in 1959.

During Robert's attendance in the four-week program on the U. of C. campus in June and July, he received intensive training in theory and techniques of discussion, debate, and extemporaneous speaking.

The subject for 1961-62 national high school debate—"What should be the role of the federal government in education?"—was used extensively in both debate and extemporaneous practice.

Fifty-eight youngsters from 20 states participated in the 1961 University of Colorado speech institute. Special work was offered in dramatics or debate, plus voice training through public speaking or oral interpretation.

ON THE MALL AT SHORT HILLS

Mrs. Meyner Officiates At Gala Bonwit Opening

TRIUMPHANT WINNERS—Displaying the remnants of their eating skills are Paul Del Vecchio, 11 High Point Drive, Springfield, first place winner; Jack Gaegan, 99 Wmets Avenue, Springfield, second place; and Judy Wnek, 118 Irwin Street, Springfield, third place. These kids are just three of the many who participated in a watermelon eating contest at Irwin Playground in Springfield. (Dick Schwartz)

Bonwit Teller's gala opening at The Mall at Short Hills began at 10 this morning when Mrs. Robert B. Meyner, wife of New Jersey's governor, cut the heavy garland of violets that roped off the store, on Morris Turnpike. Edgar W. Wherry, president of Bonwit Teller, then signalled the doors to be opened, and a stream of waiting customers immediately poured into the store.

They were greeted by a slight unusual in retailing—a store with the look of a sumptuous home. Specially woven, decorative murals, decorative paintings, unusual objects d'art, magnificent antiques, great chandeliers and handsome sconces welcomed them. In addition, arrangements of artificial violets—the state flower of New Jersey and the flower symbol of Bonwit Teller—were everywhere, creating a gala party atmosphere.

In the children's department, an art show by the elementary school children of Millburn and Short Hills, was on exhibit, made up of more than 50 watercolors, crayons, sketches and collages. Represented are works by first to sixth graders from the Glenwood, Hartshorn, Short Hills, South Mountain, Washington and Wyoming schools. The exhibit will be on display till after Labor Day.

Throughout the store, models presented new fall fashions, showing a cross-section of dresses, coats, suits, sports- and at-home wear in a wide variety of price and style groups. Informal modelling will continue through Saturday, August 12.

Outside the store stood the charming violet-garlanded pony cart which has attracted so much attention during its travels this week through the centers of Millburn, Short Hills, Springfield, Summit, Chatham and Madison heralding Bonwit's opening. Children can be photographed with the pony, without charge, from 11 A.M. to 4 P.M. today through Saturday, August 12. Polaroid snapshots will be given immediately to the children.

Among those attending the preview party were Assemblywoman Mildred Barry-Hughes; William B. Gero, Mayor of Millburn Township; town councilmen from Millburn and surrounding communities; members of the Boards of Education of Millburn Township and nearby areas; presidents of Women's Clubs, Junior Leagues, Leagues of Women Voters, Parent Teacher Associations and other key service, civic, educational and philanthropic organizations. The company's eighth store, Bonwit Teller at The Mall at Short Hills, comprises three selling levels totalling 68,000 square feet.

BEAUTY CONTESTANT—Miss Joanne Liss, 17 Tucker Place, Springfield, was one of the 58 entrants in the Prudential Insurance Company Athletic Association's third "Miss Excursion Day" beauty contest. The contest was held at Asbury Park's Convention Hall last Friday. Joanne, who was graduated from Jonathan Dayton Regional High School in 1960, is a member of Prudential's group pension administration division.

Stouffer's Opens

Stouffer's new restaurant at The Mall in Short Hills opens today when the "Bow Ceremony" will be performed by Mrs. Margery Stouffer Biggar, daughter of Vernon Stouffer, president and chief executive officer of the 37-year-old Stouffer Corporation.

The "Bow Ceremony" has become a tradition at Stouffer Restaurant openings, deriving from the special bow worn by Stouffer Girls on their waitress uniforms throughout the country. Originally it symbolized the Stouffer Girl's reputation for fine service. Today, it also symbolizes Stouffer's becoming a part of a new community.

The new Stouffer's will serve meals for which it has become world famous. The menu will change daily, drawing from the company's file of over 4,500 original recipes.

The restaurant will serve luncheon to the public immediately following the opening ceremony at 11:30 a.m. Dinner will be served from 4:30 p.m.

When Wash'n WEAR Shirts Prematurely "Age"

... they're probably ready for a rejuvenation at Pan American.

If your wash and wear shirts have lost their fresh appearance and are wilting too fast, they're showing the effects of home laundering... which can't always remove all the dirt and do the type of job that a professional shirt laundry can.

Our special washing machines are far too expensive for the home. They put the shirts through a specific series of washing cycles and carefully control the temperature of the water and the soap content. A special wash 'n' wear bleach, not available to the housewife, is used on white shirts. The result is a cleaner shirt, free from stubborn dirt and soap residue. Expert pressers put the "touch of the master" to your shirt.

So if you're tired of wearing "fatigued" shirts, start sending them to Pan American.

Report to the People

From Florence Dwyer, 6th District, New Jersey

Capitol Hill has kept both eyes on the twists and turns of the dangerous world situation this past week. In doing so, Congress has acted quickly to bolster our country's military and political position. At the same time, a greater awareness is developing here that we must begin concentrating on the things that count—the projects and objectives which will determine our strength and staying power in the long and difficult struggle ahead. As rich and powerful as our country undoubtedly is, there are limits to our resources and to the capacity of the Government to raise and spend money for purposes which, while desirable, perhaps, are not at all essential. The feeling is growing that we must begin to concentrate on the things that count—the projects and objectives which will determine our strength and staying power in the long and mental threat to our way of life. This involved nothing less than the preservation of liberty, here and throughout the free world. Liberty has always had its foes, always been under attack by power-mad tyrants and those who fear human freedom. But today's tyranny is a new, more efficient and powerful machine, headquartered in Moscow, which has spread its poison farther and more deeply than any in the previous history of mankind. The demands upon the American people, whose nerves and judgment and unflinching sense of high purpose the outcome of this struggle depends are such that all lesser concerns must shrink in size and significance. Just to skim over the events of the past week which have gripped the minds of official Washington will indicate the extent of our involvement. Both Washington and Moscow, for example, pursued the daily war of nerves over Berlin, emphasizing new military preparations while holding the door open to possible future negotiations. The tragic French-Tunisian battle over Bizerte further weakened the effectiveness of France as a NATO ally and created new turmoil in the Mediterranean. The continuing of new nations. The communist government of Cuba continued its harassment of the United States and the hijacking of American commercial aircraft, which must be presumed to have originated in Havana, has led the U.S. to seek redress through the United Nations and to consider seriously a total economic embargo against Cuba.

our country's interests. The House by a vote of 403 to 2 authorized the President's order to active duty members and units of the Ready Reserve of the Armed Forces—Soon after, the House unanimously, 406 to 0 authorized $3.5 billion in additional appropriations for aircraft, missiles, naval vessels and conventional forces.

Bank Exhibits African Art

The First Federal Savings and Loan Association is exhibiting a group of water color paintings obtained from the Congo district around Leopoldville. These free-hand paintings are brilliantly colored and depict hunting, fishing, and tribal ceremonial scenes.

The native African artists hand mix their own tempera colors and through a unique style create unusually authentic reproductions of wild life and native customs in the Congo area.

The paintings were brought from Africa recently by Richard Nelson of Darien, Connecticut who had been working there for an American oil company.

The public is invited to stop in and view the collection.

YOUR WEEKLY SERIAL

DESIGNED TO ENTERTAIN OUR READERS

To Mother, With Love

Harvey J. Goldenberg

It was just after Malvin returned home from his twenty-seventh weekly visit to his mother's grave that he definitely decided he could no longer live without her and was going to kill himself. He had toyed with the idea before, but each time he had rejected it, feeling he'd give life another chance. He felt he had given life enough time to change for the happier; how he was going to give death its opportunity.

The thought of being with his mother again was so exciting to Malvin that he realized he had to restrain himself emotionally so as not to aggravate his heart murmur. He put his soft, plump hand over his left breast to make sure that his heart wasn't beating too rapidly. He wasn't going to take any chance of anything coming between him and his death plans.

Malvin sat at the large red mahogany dining table in the dining room, trying to think of a method to do away with himself that would not cast aspersions on the family name, Burr. His mother had married a Burr, and he had to protect the name in reverence to her. "It has to be subtle," he said to himself as he doodled spirals on the shiny table surface with his finger. "How can I do it?" he asked. Suddenly the solution came to him, seeming almost independent of his thoughts. "My heart!" he said in a tone of surprised realization, beginning to laugh at the obviousness of what he now considered. He knew what he was going to do; he was going to exert himself and die of some malfunctioning of his heart.

He walked into the plushly carpeted long living room and tried to pick up each piece of furniture as he passed it. First was the three-tiered circular solid mahogany table with antique figurines on the two lower tiers and a magnificent Grecian Vase crowning the third. The two Ming jars dancing figures on the second shelf were his mother's favorites, so he took great care not to break anything as he lifted the table and put it down again. No heart attack, no pain. He was disappointed. "Maybe it wasn't heavy enough," he thought as he walked over to a huge overstuffed brown brocade chair. With all the strength he had, he lifted it. No sooner did he get it a fraction of an inch from the ground than he let go. "My God!" he said aloud. "Is this thing heavy! You can kill yourself lifting it." Next he tried to lift the eight-foot gold colored velvet couch with silk tassels fringing its base. He couldn't lift the sofa, no less push it, or even get the fringe to sway. Over and over he tried, but his effort did no good. He breathed heavily as sweat poured down his flushed face. He took a step back from the sofa and with all the power he could muster, he kicked it. Missing the soft part and hitting the frame, he hurt his foot and hobbled around the room in agony, cursing the sofa that had given him so much trouble.

Out of breath from his exertion, he sat back on the couch and his one hundred and sixty-seven pounds sinking into the fluffy cushion, thought of his problem. Scratching the back of his neck, he felt a small bump. "I hope it isn't cancer," he said, the corners of his mouth turning down, his early twenty-ish forehead wrinkling with his new found worry. He got up and walked to the mirror which hung over the fake facade fireplace. The blemish was only a slight irritation. He was relieved.

Malvin sat down again, this time with his stocky body lying across the reclining chair especially designed for his comfort. He thought of running up and down the three-flight stairway that led from the grand central hallway to the stuffy, musty smelling attic. But he rejected the idea when he considered what might happen to him. He was afraid that he would have an attack on the stairs and would bruise himself as he rolled down the carpeted stairway. "I can't do that," he said as he unconsciously doodled spirals with his finger against the smooth green fabric covering the chair's arm. "I have to do something else. But what?" He looked at the golden white spots on the high, greying ceiling that appeared as reflections from the three lighted lamps in the room, and then sat up straight, his back touching the buttoned tufting of the chair. "I've got it!" he said, staring at the green wall. "I'll take up tennis."

The next morning he arose early. With a tennis racket in one hand and a can of balls in the other, he walked down to the handball court on his property which was hidden amid a grove of blossomless apple trees that when in full bloom shaded the court from the summer sun. He threw the ball into the air and swung wildly at it.

After seven straight tries and misses, he finally hit the ball with the base of the racket. The ball fell to the ground in front of him, rolled a few feet, and stopped. Malvin tried again and again. It took him thirteen tries before he was able to hit the ball squarely. When he did, he hit the ball with such power that he was not able to volley it. Instead, he had to chase the ball as it rolled through the freshly thawed, late March ground that surrounded the mock tennis court. Breathlessly, he chased two more balls, then sat down to rest from his exhaustion. "I must be doing something wrong," he said to himself. "But what? I don't understand it. I don't understand this. I'm tired. I'm breathing heavily. Maybe I didn't exert myself enough. Yes, that's what it is. I'll rest today. Tomorrow's plenty of time. Yes, I'll try again tomorrow. It's got to work."

When he got back to his house, Malvin called his doctor to check on his appointment. It was a check-up he had had every month while his mother was alive. She had insisted upon it. Because she was dead, he felt that that was no reason to start disobeying her wishes.

He went to his room by the elevator his mother had had installed when she had first learned of his ailment. In his rectangular blue bedroom, two of the four windows were open, and the cool air that blew through them crossed the floor-length white curtains across the top of the black walnut desk in front of the windows. One of the curtains was draped across the face of his mother's picture which lay on the desk. He removed the veil that covered his mother's face, then closed the windows.

He took off his brown trousers and heavy, tan wool sweater with a large rolled collar that he'd worn to play tennis in, showered, and put on his black worsted suit and vest, both trimmed with fur-like, thick pile black velvet that he was going to wear for his appointment.

"Is Westchester County trying to kill its entire population?" he wondered seriously, his black Imperial hardtop bumping over the ruts in the road as he drove it toward the Henry Hudson Parkway and New York City. "The last snow was cleared away over three weeks ago; there's no excuse for the road to be in this condition. If you were here, Mother, you would have done something about this, wouldn't you have? Nothing is the same without you, Mother. Can't you see how much I need you?" he whispered, the tears rushing to his eyes. "Everyone needs you, Mother. I'm so alone without you, Mother, but I won't be alone much longer," he thought, breathing deeply and wiping away his tears with the corners of his neatly folded white silk handkerchief. "I'll be with you soon," he said reassuringly as he returned onto the Parkway. The cement highway, though rough in spots, was smooth compared to the road he'd just come off. As he casually sped along, he noticed hundreds of leafless trees pressed singly against the cloudless, robin's egg blue sky. "Are they as lonely as I?" he wondered. "No, nothing could be," he said, and being more pleased than ever with his plan to die, he smiled. Next, as he drove south on the West Side Highway, he saw a freighter carrying a load of velvety looking black dirt, sluggishly going down the Hudson River, steel blue, almost metallic in color from the sky's reflection. Smiling again, he opened the window to his left to let the cool air blow into his face and rdden his cheeks. At the Fifty-ninth Street exit, he turned toward Park Avenue and north to Park and Sixty-fifth. He parked his car and put a dime into the weather-worn silver meter that stood officially by the curb to collect the parking tax. He walked across the quadruple lane, two-way street, the directions separated by a tree island covered with grass from spring to autumn. Once on the other side, he headed for the building with the royal blue canopy that jutted out over the side walk, and walked into the lobby through a glass door which a doorman, dressed in the same color as the awning, was holding open for him.
