SUMMIT -- About 100 members and supporters of the Summit Education Association gathered outside the Summit Board of Education building at Jefferson School. They met last Thursday to protest "unrealistic" expectations for contracts currently being negotiated with school officials.

The school board and the teachers are at an impasse following eight months of negotiation and are now awaiting intervention by a state-appointed mediator from the Public Employment Relations Commission, who may help solve the problem.

In February, the Summit Board of Education began negotiations with the Summit Education Association to replace contracts that expired Aug. 31.

Murder trial begins

By Jackeline Leon Staff Writer

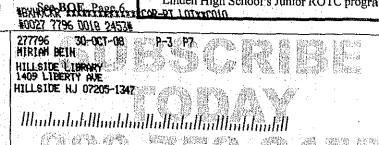

UNION - A trial began this week for the two men accused of murdering a Vauxhall man in 2006, an incident that shocked the community.

Paul Capers was murdered at his home shortly before midnight on July 3, 2006. Police determined the 70-year-old had been fatally shot in the chest during a botched robbery.

An investigation between the Union Police Department and the county Prosecutor's Office led to the arrests of Vauxhall area residents Michael Knighton, 38, and Franklin Prather Jr, 39, three days later. Prather Jr. was the son of Caper's friend, Franklin Prather Sr. Both men were charged with robbery and murder. According to published reports, Prather Jr. had confessed to authorities he had been involved in drug-dealing and had provided Knighton with the murder weapon.

Capers was recognized as a local political figure, who had been involved with the Vauxhall Civic Association and owned a local paving company,

Assistant Prosecutor Caroline Lawlor, who is involved with the trial, could not immediately be reached for comment.

Fire captain axed

By Joseph M. D'Alise Staff Writer

SPRINGFIELD — Fire Department Capt. Michael Bilotti has been fired from his post, following several hearings to determine the validity of his General Educational Development diploma from high school.

In a unanimous vote on Oct. 14, the Township Committee agreed with hearing officer Robert Czech's recommendation to terminate Bilotti.

"I find Michael Bilotti violated the statutory requirements...as it regards to having a valid high school diploma and by submitting the false diploma, did not satisfy the requirements of good moral character under the statute," Czech said in his hearing report. "The copy of the diploma submitted in 1994, along with his application, was a knowing misrepresentation."

The 14-year fire department employee had been suspended from his $85,000 job since May.

According to township officials, Bilotti has 10 days from the time he was notified of Czech's recommendation to file for an appeal.

His attorney, James Addis of Galantucci & Patuto based in Hackensack, said the former fire captain has not decided whether to appeal the committee's decision, but he pleaded for some leniency.

"I asked the committee to consider putting Bilotti on a leave of absence so that he can get his GED," Addis said. "He's a dedicated firefighter who only wants to be a firefighter. He has devoted time and effort to this township for...years."

But Mayor Bart Fraenkel suggested officials made the right decision, considering Bilotti violated a state statute. "Given the results, we had no choice but to comply with the statute, requiring a firefighter to have a valid GED," he said.

Township officials must wait the required 10 days to see if there is an appeal filed before moving forward to find a replacement for Bilotti.

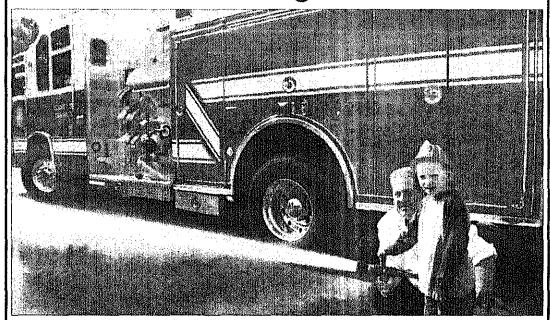

The Union County Prosecutor's Office launched an investigation into the Bilotti matter in March. The probe stemmed from allegations grades from the last firefighters' entrance exam were altered to help Bilotti's nephew and former fire chief Wayne Masiello's son get a spot on the paid division of the fire department.

During the investigation, Bilotti's personal file was searched by officials from the Union County Prosecutor's Office and what appeared to be a photocopy of his GED was found with the name of a state education commissioner who did not hold the post at the time the degree was issued.

Bilotti and his attorney continue to contend the original diploma was destroyed in a house fire and they do not know where the diploma in the personal file came from.

Officials tackle KU parking woes

Staff Writer

HILLSIDE - Township officials are taking steps to resolve parking problems on Irvington Avenue and Wilder Street, where Kean University students have been parking their vehicles, leaving little or no space for the streets' residents.

"There was an overflow from the parking lot and students were parking on both sides of the street," Councilmember Edward Brewer explained about the roads bordering the university's East Campus.

The council is now working to revise the existing ordinance to authorize permit parking for residents along certain tracts of the street. Permit parking for residents will be available on Wilder Street between Irvington Avenue and Westminster Avenue, and on Irvparking will be enforced Mondays through Fridays but not on the weekends, according to police and township officials.

Brewer said the council unanimously approved the ordinance on had their driveways blocked, and first reading and expects the second and final reading to take place at the next meeting on Oct. 28.

Police chief Robert Quinlan said the HPD began receiving complaints this semester, when the university's East Campus reopened after being closed for renovations for two years.

Quinlan said the school already supplies adequate parking, complete with a shuttle bus to the East Campus, a service many students do not care to take advantage of.

More than 300 parking spaces were created at the beginning of the ington Avenue between North semester and the student parking Avenue and Wilder Street. Permit fee was eliminated, Kean spokesman Stephen Hudik noted.

"Students continue to park on the streets," Quinlan said, who noted they find it more convenient..

"But, residents of that area have traffic has increased on the street," Ouinlan added

According to the revised ordinance, non-resident drivers that park anywhere on the street will receive a $50 fine for the first offense and a $100 fine for subsequent offenses. A vehicle parked for more than eight hours after being issued a summons will be towed at the owner's expense.

Hudik said the university is supportive of the town's efforts.

Kean University President Dawood Farahi could not be reached for comment.

Romerovski site plan to be revealed

Staff Writer

ROSELLE PARK - It's on the hotly contested election nears an end: what will happen to the Romerovski site?

A finalized development plan for the Romerovski site is expected to be unveiled Tuesday.

According to court documents, borough officials had made anagreement with the property's owner, Israel Braunstein, in 2006 to seek developers together because Braunstein had been having difficulties locating a buyer for the textile recycling site.

The borough hired Heyer and Greul Associates as redevelopment months, several possibilities were examined, including building senior housing, a shopping complex or bringing in new businesses.

Meanwhile, the Virginia-based Avalon Bay Communities Inc., was also working in conjunction with Braunstein to create a development plan since the summer of 2006.

Talks continued between all parties involved with the plan until tensions developed between borough officials and Avalon Bay regarding the development process.

On Jan. 31, 2007, Avalon Bay representative Ron Ladell filed a lawsuit against the borough. According Mayor Joseph Delorio, the lawsuit was filed, "fulfilling his (Ladell's) prophecy to 'tie up' the rial@thelocalsource.com.

Romerovski site to his advantage, at least temporarily."

Litigation is ongoing and cureveryone's minds in the borough as rently a gag order is in place that prohibits any borough official from speaking on the matter.

> The development plan for the Romerovski site drafted by Avalon Bay earlier this year conflicts with the plan created by the borough.

> The real estate company is seeking to create a luxury rental community named "Avalon Roselle Park" on the property with a maximum of 278 units of studio, one, two and three bedroom apartments. The rent for these apartments is expected to range between $1,200 to $2,500 per month.

If the plan is approved, the propconsultants in March 2006. For erty would feature recreational amenities and structured parking.

But the borough's redevelopment plan involved the creation of a maximum of 215 housing units, with an average size of 900-squarefeet. The Avalon Bay proposal includes building units with an average size of 950-square-feet.

Avalon Bay's proposal for the height of the buildings are expected to be up to 69 feet, which exceeds the borough's limit of 50 feet for the site.

Although borough officials had voiced an interest in creating retail space on the site, the Avalon Bay proposal does not include retail.

BOE, SEA conflicted

continue to receive their full salaries, health insurance, tuition reimbursement and all other benefits outlined in their most recent agreement with the board.

Dan Miller, who has worked as a social studies teacher at Summit Middle School for 19 years and now serves as president of the SEA, said salary and health benefits are at the center of this conflict. "They're asking for...dramatic changes in our cost-sharing," he said. "It would not be in line with any of the recent settlements in the county. We would prefer not to have any change in healthcare."

According to Miller, during the negotiation process, settlements in outside districts can not be brought to the table or discussed with the public.

When called for comment, Superintendent Nathan Parker would not discuss the details of the package, but pointed to a prepared statement posted on the Board of Education's Web site.

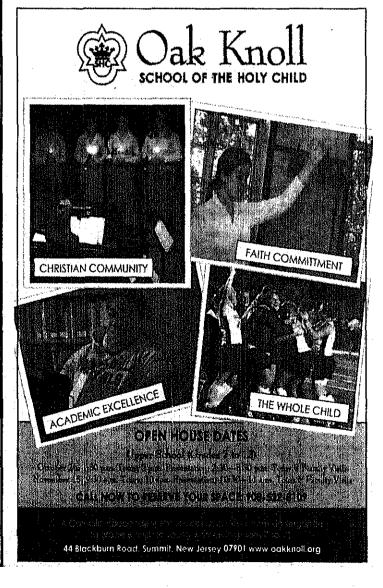

In the statement, Parker said, "The Board presented what it believes to be fair proposals in salary and adjustments in the health benefit programs as part of a package that is commensurate with the fiscal and budgetary constraints imposed by the state."

"The board is seeking a balanced settlement that meets the needs of the children, the staff and the school district, without having a negative impact on programs, class size and current levels of staff," Parker also noted in the statement.

Adam Fern, girls track team coach at Summit High School, said teachers have not allowed the contractual problems to have an impact on their jobs. "We don't want to fight this in the classroom," Fern said.

But he noted if an agreement is not made soon, teachers may stop performing work they are not paid for, a tactic employed in similar standoffs in other towns. Such duties involve arriving at school early and overseeing various activities. Though this would likely have a negative effect in the district, school officials said it could be more than a month before a mediator is available to address the problem.

According to Miller, if an agreement is not reached with the help of the mediator, which is not a binding or legal process, a fact finder, will be hired. The fact finder's determination will not be binding either. If the fact finding process does not result in a new contract or terms both sides agree upon, they will be forced to participate in around-the-clock negotiations until an agreement is reached. Both parties said they hope this final step is not necessary.

CLARK - Students at Saint Agnes School are prepping to argue for the fun of it.

A mock debate that will be held at the school Tuesday was coordinated by eighth-grade social studies teacher Jane Burns, who organized a similar event four years ago. "It was such a big success" she said about her reason for offering the program again.

Burns said a panel of judges, will present questions to two debate teams - Republicans and Democrats - each consisting of eight students chosen by Burns.

Linden home hit with stray bullets; six teens arrested

By John O'Reilly Staff Writer

LINDEN - A Roselle teen is accused of firing three bullets into an East Price Street home while the owners were in their beds and fleeing police who spotted him in a vehicle near the crime scene, according to Linden police Capt. Raymond Tyra.

Four friends that went along for the ride with the youth and the driver of vehicle were also nabbed.

The residents, a 47-year-old man and 53-year-old woman, dove to the floor and laid there until the shots ceased. Neither was hurt, according to authorities,

Free pre-K for tots

By John O'Reilly Staff Writer

ROSELLE — Three- and four-year-olds will be eligible to attend preschool for free next year in the borough, thanks to a new state initiative.

Piggybacking on the success of free pre-K in Abbott school districts—the poorest districts that receive state funding for programs and supplies—New Jersey legislators will fully fund pre-school programs in non-Abbot districts across the state. Areas with more than 40 percent of eligible students can offer the program to the entire district, regardless of a student's financial situation—Roselle has a 58 percent rate.

The initiative was signed into law in January as part of Gov. Jon Corzine's school funding plan. About $330,000 will be put toward the program in order to fund pre-school in Roselle. Statewide, the increase will support an additional 30,000 students next year, bringing the total up to 70,000, according to 20th District spokesperson Erin Caragher.

As a part of the new initiative, any student in the state who is eligible for a free or reduce-priced lunch is also eligible for the free schooling, regardless of where they live.

Roselle School District consultant Jack Perner said the initiative is great news for the borough."Now, when kids enter pre-K [and beyond], they will be well prepared. I foresee a tremendous turnaround in their academic achievement," he said.

In the free program, the state mandates there be 15 students to a class, with a teacher and teaching assistant in each one, according to Perner.

The "educational center" must be 950-square-feet and will be equipped for Internet. Students will also all receive free lunch and breakfast and have a master teacher, nurse and family worker available.

While district officials are still in the planning phases — preparing to implement the program by the 2009-10 school year — they admit not all eligible students will be able to take part in the program at first.

Perner said that in the first year, 20 percent of the estimated 400 preschool-aged children in the borough may take part. He has a preliminary goal of a 90 percent involvement in four years. "We anticipate there will be more demand than space this year. But, based on what happens, it is conceivable expansion may be accelerated in the second year," he said.

District officials said they are excited to offer the early educational opportunities at no additional cost to taxpayers. "It's great, because we get to work with an approved, research-based curriculum," said Roselle superintendent Elnardo Webster.

He added school and borough officials are discussing co-building a new early childhood center, which could eventually house the entire pre-K program. A forum was held for the public to discuss the free pre-school program on Monday at Leonard V. Moore Middle School. Speakers included Webster, Senator Raymond Lesniak, Assemblyman Joseph Cryan, Cynthia C. Rice, an analyst for the Association for Children of New Jersey, and Ellen Wolock, state Department of Education's pre-school director.

Linden JROTC celebrates Navy

"It is...a different culture," said Naval Commander William Murphy, head of the program in Lin-

"If [a student] is going to come in and wear a uniform and give up the time required to do this and excel, they are a little bit different," the 20-year Navy veteran explained. Students meet in lieu of gym class each day to drill and study, but also take part in volunteer projects on weekends and after school.

Two JROTC leaders, seniors Joseph Failla and Christopher Minowski, agree their organization is far from any other type of high school activity.

"It's a whole different breed. They teach you discipline here, character, how to be a leader," said Failla, who noted the ROTC participates in many community events, such as walk-a-thons for the local food bank and presentations on holidays like Martin Luther King Day.

Both plan to attend college and hope to join the Marines after getting a degree. They are applying to Virginia Military Institute, among other schools,

It isn't all fun and games, however, in the ROTC. The cadets say at times drilling and competitions, which Linden historically excels at, can take a toll.

They are in competitions almost every weekend. In the past they have won and regularly place in national JROTC contests.

"They put us through a lot of stress," said Minowski. "At the time it builds up and you get nervous and angry, a lot of emotions come out. But at the end of day, instruction is there to support you. It's all worth it."

The JROTC began in 1980 at the school. During the early years they barely had the 100 members required to stay afloat, but have grown since. The current crew consists of about 285 members from grades 9 through 12.

Army veteran Jeff Kennedy, head of Linden's American Legion Post 102, said he is touched when he attends ROTC events and sees the obstacles and achievements the youngsters overcome. "It's very heartwarming to see the discipline and the leadership qualities they are showing today. It makes you feel good," Kennedy said.

He added that several students who have enlisted still keep in touch with him. "They seem to have a purpose," Kennedy said about what he sees in ROTC cadets, but not in the entire student body.

That purpose is not military recruitment, according to Murphy. He stressed the program focuses on four things: higher education, leadership development, citizenship and community service.

He hopes each graduate comes away from the program with an enhanced resume for college, a willingness to assist the community and an awareness of the tradition of the military and patriotism of Linden, "We want students to respect what the country is about and respect the idea of democracy," Murphy said.

Judge against Union Center plan

In a press release issued Friday, the governing body blasted residents who opposed the revitalizing plan,

"The committee made a strategic investment in pursuing the redevelopment of Union Center for the future of this township," Mayor Cliff People Jr. said. "A limited number of landlords/property owners may have won this case, but all of the residents of Union

According to township officials, some businesses have left the Stuyvesant Avenue area due to a lack of foot traffic and parking options, which they say could have been remedied by the proposed plan.

"In these horrible economic times, developments like these could very well have stimulated a redevelopment rush in and around Union Center," township attorney Daniel Antonelli said.

If the project had moved forward, the ground floor level would have featured retail stores and the upper levels would have had townhome-style apartments with parking in the rear.

Township officials noted the matter had nothing to do with eminent domain and had in fact passed a resolution against eminent domain in December,

"This is on blight distinction, it has nothing to do with eminent domain," township spokesperson Geri Durso said.

She explained the center has the highest vacancy rate in 15 years and the proposed plan was meant to address that issue. "Justice prevailed," CUU member and owner of Metta Realty on Stuyvesant Avenue Fran Metta said.

According to Metta, property owners were concerned they were being excluded from the planning efforts."I do think the center needs help, but I think we should all participate and make it a township effort," she said.

Committee member Anthony Terrezza said cooperation with the property owners is essential and is being sought by township officials who now hope to hold a forum where members of the community can share their ideas.

"We implore these landlords, many who live outside of the Township of Union and outside the State of New Jersey, to sit down with us to find a solution that will give our residents what they want and deserve," Terrezza said.

considerable amount of time licking and cleaning themselves, and therefore tend to swallow a lot of hair. Hairballs, or "fur balls," are quantities of hair that accumulate in the cat's stomach or small intestine. Normally most of the hair that is swallowed is expelled through the cat's digestive system in the stool. Problems occur when hair that does not get excreted gathers in the cat's stomach or intestine to form a dense ball or mat that cannot be passed. The ball is then vomited. The signs of hairballs in cats are related to the digestive system and include vomiting, loss of appetite, or constipation. Hairballs are actually one of the most common reasons that cats vomit.

The hygiene of cats is often overlooked; however it is definitely part of your cat's overall health. At T.L.C. Right the wrong with a real review

The Springfield Fire Department captain accused of providing a fake General Education Diploma in order to land a spot on the squad has been axed from his position, putting an end to a lengthy and controversial hearing process.

On Oct. 14, the entire Township Committee sided with hearing officer Robert Czechs' findings: Bilotti's GED is a fake and his "moral character" is lacking.

But what does this all mean for the unlucky person who may have been in line for the position at the department when the now former captain, Michael Bilotti, was appointed 14 years ago? Probably nothing.

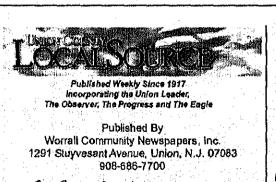

What officials can do to right the wrong, beyond canning the alleged liar, would be insignificant at this point.

What can be offered to the unfortunate person who may have lost out on Bilotti's gig, which grew to be very lucrative — he earned $85,000 during his last full year on the department — is a sign of change.

There should be a full review of the Fire Department. Surely officials who couldn't recognize — or were too busy to care about — the presumed fake-out in the first place may have let a few other job candidates with phony resumes slip through the cracks over the years. A recent scandal surrounding the legitimacy of the test result from the last firefighter's entrance exam proves fire officials are still letting the same type of mistakes be made.

Two volunteers firefighter, Connor Hamilton and Dino D'Angelo came forward in February, after taking their fire entrance exam, alleging their scores were downgraded to make room for retired Fire Chief Wayne Masiello's son, Adam, and Bilotti's son, Jeremy, at the top of the list of candidates eligible for a job on the squad.

An internal investigation needs to be launched into the hiring practices, among others at the department. The probe should be lead by an outside agency, followed by a clear plan to punish offenders and remedy any problems that are found. It's as simple as this: with unqualified employees, either those without the needed education or those without the know-how to perform the job — according to a test — the public is not being fully protected.

CELEBRATING HISTORY — Students from Livingston Elementary School wave to the crowd as the school's contingent march down Morris Avenue during Union's bicentennial parade last week.

The taste of an 'old-time' event

The complexity of the rules were very modern, but Mountainside's First Annual Pie Baking Contest had the taste of an old time community event.

Sponsored by the local Historical Preservation Committee, 18 entrants — note these are bakers not cooks — put their pies through the paces last Sunday,

The complex point system used by the three judgers dealt with questions like "does the crust taste doughy or salty," and "is the filling evenly cooked?" Maybe the most obvious was "would you want to take this pie home?"

The Judges knew their pies. They included Frank Geiger an owner of the former local Cider Mill, Elena Bantey from Deerfield School in Mountainside and this corner's favorite: Effie Jones, the owner of Pies by Design in Cranford, which has added an inch to my waistline this year alone.

Each judge painstakingly went through the tasting of the pies of the 18 entrants. There was water drinking in between, and a clean fork and dish provided for each testing. The pies could be "one- or two-crusted." A complete list of ingredients, quantities and preparations printed on an 8 ½ x 11-inch sheet of paper had to be submitted in advance.

All the testing took a little more than an hour. Unlike Dancing with the Stars, the winners' calculations took some more time as the afternoon sun on the cool autumn day tion.

Left Out

By Frank Capece

at the historic Hetfield house faded.

It was very nice that Anjali Mehrotra's apple pecan crumb won the blue ribbon. For the contestants and the 30 or so observers, something else was going on that was also pretty sweet.

While waiting, a relatively new resident named Linda spoke about her prior homes in New York State, South Jersey and the fondness for the local flavor that had her settle with her family in Mountainside.

We often forget the luxury that our kids can safely walk to school and play in their town. Young Art Mezo, who would later win third place, spoke to his parents about the things teenagers speak about with their parents. This baker-to-be is only in the eighth grade.

The observers popped in occasionally to the warmth of the house of Deacon Andrew Hatfield, which was built in 1760. The Historic Restoration Committee sold cider and pies to raise funds. The discussion ran the gambit from national politics, to the size of local lots, to the needs of the borough. It's so nice to listen to dialogue where the goal is the exchange of information.

As we suffer the talking heads on cable, e-mail communications, and text messages, last Sunday a bunch of people in Mountainside did something unique — they exercised their sense of community.

They are not alone. Down the hill in Cranford, an invitation has gone out for the Nov. 8 rededication of the township flagpole and the dedication of the Victorian fountain.

The history of the battered flagpole from World War I and a forgotten Victoria fountain in the township had been detailed.

This story has such a happy ending. The local green thumb garden club purchased and donated the fountain to the town.

The club members went to Pennsylvania, brought back and preserved the fountain. Local Commissioner Martha Garcia, herself a Korean War veteran, kept the issue front and center, and along with local businessman Paul LaCorte, helped raised the funds for renovations.

Come the dedication, Mayor Robert Puhak will undoubtedly go to some lengths to praise everyone involved.

For each of the participants, the real joy comes in the future each time they pass the new renovation and can remember they helped to mark a portion of their community. Talk about some old time flavor.

'Independent' thinkers

As mayor of the City of Linden, I am endorsing Independent council candidates Elaine Lubas for the 8th Ward, Diane Wilverding for 6th Ward and Bruce Howe for the 10th Ward.

These three individuals will best represent the city of Linden and their perspective wards.

Their loyalty is to the taxpayer, not any political party. Each candidate will think for themselves and do what they feel is right for their constituents. They will not be influenced by me or self interest groups

These are the type of individuals that should represent the city of Linden. I will be proud to serve with all three when they are elected and sworn in as coun-

Support the charter study

On Election Day, Union voters will vote on a ballot question as to whether or not a charter study commission should be established to determine the best form of government for Union and also vote for five candidates for such commission.

While the Township Committee adopted the ordinance to place this question on the ballot, I believe it was their hasty, desperate attempt to thwart efforts of a local citizens action group that circulated a petition to place a change-of-government question on the ballot. That group's petition was rejected for insufficient signatures, after Township Clerk Eileen Cryan Birch, rejected hundreds of signatures for various reasons.

This matter went to litigation, but dismissal, due to exhaustion of the citizens group's funds, is still pending. This may be another stall tactic on the part of the township, as I believe that the charter study cannot commence while litigation is pending.

Such charter study will only be as fair and unbiased as its commission members and voters should consider the following:

- The Renahan Report, resulting in Township Administrator Frank Bradley's designation as Appropriate Authority over the Division of Police, was alleged to have been manipulated, because of Mr. Bradley's personal connection with Mr. Renahan.
- · A few years ago, several residents concerned about tear-downs and overdevelopment in residential neighborhoods, pleaded with the Township to place greater restrictions on new construction in RA zones. The Township's Housing Trend Analysis found no tear-down trend, and its Master Plan Re-examination Report recommended no changes to the land development ordinances in residential districts. Yet, the township voted in August of 2007 to raise the maximum height of new construction in residential zones from 27 to 32 feet.
- · On Oct. 16, Superior Court Judge Walter Barisonek ruled against the township in a suit brought by property owners with businesses in Union Center, who feared the township would take their land by eminent domain because of the area's designation as blighted and in need of redevelopment.

In my opinion, the only way to achieve an unbiased and fair charter study is to elect Floyd Patterson, Linda Lewis, Paul Verzosa, Roxanne Ciampi, and Charles Donnelly, I believe they are experienced, responsible citizens who are committed to a study that will serve the best interests of Union and its residents.

Something to be proud of

As a lifelong resident of Union, all I can say is wow

Union's bicentennial parade on Oct. 12 was something to be proud of. Kudos to Committeewoman Brenda Restivo, chairperson, Kathleen Holmes and the entire committee. I can't imagine the job it was to stage all the participants. Almost two hours long, it was a slice of our town, present and past. Police, fire and emergency units, students from every school, community organizations, bands, antique cars, even a gondola. You name it and it was in the parade.

Most impressive was the attitude of everyone, both spectators and marchers. Everyone smiled, waved, recognized their friends along the way, took photos and had a great time. I remember watching the sesquicentennial parade in 1958. I don't remember much about that one, but this one I'll remember for sure. (I'm) proud to be a Unionite.

Steve Gran is running for re-election to the Springfield Township Committee and has decided to run as an Independent. This was a decision that was reached by Steve after months of soul searching because he. like many others in our community have grown tired of the political rhetoric and bureaucratic red tape that has prevailed in Springfield for decades.

During his three years in office, Steve has worked with members of the (Township Council) achieve numerous accomplishments which have benefited tax payers in Springfield. He's an independent thinker who tenaciously stands up for what he believes in and does not bow to the pressure of others with differing political views and agendas.

Since he was elected in 2006, he has been one of the most tireless advocates for open and transparent government for instance: prior to the ruling from the NJ Supreme Court allowing any individual to video tape any public meeting, Steve tried on three separate occasions to get Township Council meetings televised only to be voted down each time. It wasn't until he found a volunteer in town who, when he had the time, has televised our meetings and made them public.

In conjunction with Ms. Manes, was inspirational in increasing the capital budget for road maintenance, enabling us to fix the infrastructure of our town that has been neglected for decades.

Recognizing that Springfield has a significant senior citizen population, Steve was responsible along with Beth Manes, for increasing the senior citizen budget for the first time in many years; and after many years of debate, the majority of the Township Council is finally on the same page and working together to move forward with a viable and successful plan to improve and beautify our downtown area.

As taxpayers in Springfield, we appreciate Steve Grau's leadership in this area and think it's important to maintain the current cohesion on the Township Committee in an effort to see many of the positive initiatives the Township Committee is in the midst of and that Steve is personally involved with come to fruition.

The Insurance Corner - October 23, 2008 Halloween - Safety

In our last article, we provided you with a few suggestions on how to protect your "Trick or Treater". In this article, we will cover some things that you can do to insure that visiting Trick or Treaters are safe.

- Make sure that your house is adequately lit. Replace any burnt out light bulbs. Be sure to turn the porch light on.
- Use flashlights to illuminate pumpkins/jack-o-lanterns instead of candles.
- Remove all obstacles from the front lawn, walkway and porch that may cause a child to trip (e.g., bicycles, hoses, toys, potted plants, etc...).
- Sweep and remove any wet leaves and/or tree branches from sidewalks, walkways and steps.
- Cut down and remove any loose branches from property.
- Keep pets in doors and make sure that they can not get loose.
- Insure that the treats that you are handing out have not been tampered with (e.g., old worn or torn wrappers, wrappers removed or partially removed, etc...)

Please keep in mind that these are just a few suggestions that can be used to help protect your teenager and should not be considered an all inclusive list.

I agree that there is no more troubling decision than Mr. Aschenbach's opposition to COAH certification. This failure has exposed our town to lawsuits that have cost us tens of thousands of dollars in fees already. Now we have an alarming proposal to rezone part of Birchwood as residential with more than 400 units. Cranford's ability to self-govern is jeopardized by the failure of past leaders to make tough decisions and to think ahead. Mr. Aschenbach's refusal to support COAH certification is indefensible and is a cautionary tale for voters as they enter the voting booth this November.

Continue positive change

To the Editor

I, Pete Bartus, am proud to endorse Diane Wilverding for Linden's 6th Ward council seat.

She is a Linden native residing in her family home in the 6th Ward. Over the years, she has witnessed the changes in Linden, from the tax burden shifting from industry to homeowners, with council's pattern of spending not reflecting the change. Nepotism in government has cost Linden residents dearly.

Diane is running as an independent to represent the taxpayer's interests. She is not influenced by party politics and her slogan, "People Over Party," clearly states her position. Diane's election will give the 6th Ward a voice to continue the positive changes in city government.

Actions speak louder

To the Editor:

I was encouraged to hear that the Cranford Democrats were running a new candidate this year instead of the same ones over and over. My excitement was short lived when I learned it was George McDonough's business partner, Kevin Illing. I was more disappointed to learn that Mr. Illing is using the same old tactics as his predecessors.

Illing sits on the Planning Board and the Master Plan Subcommittee. I regularly attend Planning Board meetings to observe the process. Mr. Illing had pushed for dense redevelopment downtown, advocating for an increase that would allow four stories across all of downtown Cranford. But once he started his campaign, he quickly became silent and in campaign pieces, and now public statements, he denies those statements. But we need leaders that we can trust.

Mr. Illing also pushed for rezoning the controversial Birchwood property from office to residential, with dense cluster housing. Fortunately, other Planning Board members voted against his efforts for dense housing at Birchwood Avenue and downtown. Now Mr. Illing is singing a different tune during campaign time. But actions speak louder than words. And the message is clear. I sat through hours of Planning Board meetings. I've seen the real Kevin Illing. This is not a leader that will protect our small town interests. This is someone with ties that trace back to the county political machine and an appetite for increased density that benefit well connected developers.

Taxing the rich

To the Editor:

At election time, we again hear calls to change the tax code to make the rich pay their fair share.

In evaluating these calls, one should consider the following facts: during the Kennedy administration the top income tax rate dropped from 90 percent to 70 percent, from 70 percent to 35 percent during the Reagan administration, and from 35 percent to 30 percent during the current administration.

Throughout this time, the revenue raised for the federal government by taxes, as a percentage of GDP, has remained a steady 19 percent. During the Kennedy administration however, the high-income people paid only a small portion of the total tax collected. Currently, the top 1 percent of earners shoulder 40 percent of the total tax burden. The top 5 percent shoulder 60 percent. The bottom 46 percent pay no income tax at all. As tax rates go down, the incentive for wealthy people to avoid taxes goes down with it. Conversely, as tax rates rise, the incentive to avoid taxes rises also.

The lesson: if you want the rich to pay less and the poor and middle class to pay more, vote for Obama.

John DeSocio Summit

Vote intelligently Nov. 4

To the Editor:

The election for the next President of the United States of America will take place on Nov. 8. The important issues at stake rise above empty and meaningless slogans such as "change."

Each citizen should open his/her mind and do a thorough investigation of all candidates, both Republican and Democrat and examine each position on the real issues as enumerated below: terrorism and national defense; border control and illegal immigration; eliminate federal income tax with implementation of a Fair Tax (Consumption Tax) or Flat Tax, 15 percent to 20 percent; the economy — loss of jobs, housing and foreclosures, globalization, free markets, outsourcing of jobs, off-shoring corporate headquarters to avoid paying federal tax, corporate greed, NAFTA, China threat, imbalance of trade, deficit spending and balancing the federal budget; oil dependency and drilling in ANWR, Alaska and off the coast of California, and drilling for oil in various states to eliminate dependency on foreign oil.

In conclusion, the candidates principles, moral compass, integrity, credibility and not pandering to the audience at hand are the real issues and we, as citizens, must do our homework if we are to elect the best candidate for president.

Urban J. Weiss Linden

Vote for change

To the Editor

It is time for the people of Linden to focus on the real issues instead of trivial issues when it comes time to cast your vote.

Remember, Santa Claus and the Easter Bunny do not pay your taxes. A trimmed tree or fixed sidewalk — which you still have to pay for unless it's a city tree — is not a valid reason to vote for (Michelle) Yamakaitis

The real issues lie with what happens on Council. They vote for your tax increase. They have voted to give hefty raises to city employees, free benefits, and Christmas bonuses. Although they say they are going to make cuts, they have done absolutely nothing since the budget passed. Yamakaitis has voted for these increases, which have been passed on to you, the tax-payer. In response to a letter printed on Oct. 2 by Dorothy Ford, I believe Ms. Ford should cease telling lies and misleading the good people of the 8th Ward.

As for Ms. Yamakaitis being the first to decline the benefits package, her decision was made only after she found out that Elaine Lubas was her opponent in the upcoming election. She indeed did take monies in lieu of benefits as set forth herein: In 2006, she took $1,666 and in 2007, she took $2,900. This information is available to everyone under the Open Public Records Act and can be obtained at the city clerk's office. I have seen the official document. Citizens, your concern should be yourself and your taxes. It all starts with council and with Yamakaitis voting for more increases. Let's put a stop to this now by voting Elaine Lubas as councilwoman of our 8th Ward.

County opens new DNA lab

By Joseph M. D'Alise Staff Writer

The Union County Prosecutor's Office celebrated the official opening of its Forensic Laboratory, located inside the Ralph G. Froehlich Public Safety Building in Westfield Oct. 14.

The lab has recently been accredited in the area of controlled substances and biology by the American Society of Crime Laboratory Directors/Laboratory Accreditation Board, which according to Union County Prosecutor Theodore Romankow, is the foremost accrediting agency in the world. This accredited lab will allow the county to more efficiently analyze DNA evidence gathered from crime scenes.

Union County is now the first county-run laboratory in New Jersey to receive DNA certification, powerful science we can definifrom ASCLD/LAB and the second lab in the state, along with the State Police Forensic Laboratory in Cape May.

Romankow began his initiative to have the laboratory receive national accreditation when he took the job as prosecutor in 2002. The DNA analysis will complement the existing serological analysis -- the study of blood serum -- that has been conducted by the county since 1978.

The entire accreditation process took three years, accord-Richard Frank. to ASCLD/LAB staff inspector.

"We inspected the lab's management, operations, personnel, procedures and quality assurance," Frank said, explaining the

According to Romankow, in addition to conducting DNA testing for active criminal cases, the lab will also look into a number of unsolved cases -- some that are decades old - where biological evidence exists, in hopes of creating new leads.

"DNA investigations are the modern day fingerprint for law enforcement and by using this tively link suspects to crimes," Romankow said. "It's a boon for the criminal justice system and should be a deterrent to criminals.

County sees jump in voter registration

ELECTION 2008

By Jackeline Leon Staff Writer

Late Friday morning, another pile of completed, new voter registration forms were brought into the county's Board of Elections room. and employees who have been working overtime are not getting a break anytime soon.

"Just now we got about 1,100," Board of Elections Administrator Dennis Kobitz said, "We've been getting 1,200 to 1,500 a day."

In the month of September, a total of 11,000 new voter registrations were processed.

Kobitz, who has worked in the board of elections for 25 years, said he's never seen such a big surge in registrations.

They're working a minimum of 13 hours with most of them working 14 to 15 hours," Kobitz said. "No lunch, no dinner."

The employees have been working under a deadline. The cut-off date for voters to register was Oct. 14 and all the new registrations needed to be processed by Oct. 19.

Kobitz explained that the last time Board of Elections employees needed to work overtime was back in 1984 — the first year voters could register by mail.

Kobitz said the booming registration numbers may have something to do with the historic presidential race between Sen. Barack Obama, a Democrat and Sen. John McCain, a Republican.

There is just a lot of interest in the presidential race, which is much more in the news than any other race," Kobitz said.

In Rahway, the city clerk's office has seen an increase of voters in three demographic areas: new residents, young voters, and African-Americans, according to Deputy Clerk Jeffrey J. Jotz.

He said that overall, there has been a significant increase in new voters registering in Rahway.

'Green' efforts a topic at UC forum

Staff Writer

While the nation was watching the last of the Presidential Debates between Sens. John McCain and Barack Obama on Oct. 15, approximately 100 residents of Union County gathered in the Cranford Municipul Building as the Union County League of Women Voters hosted a Union County Freeholder candidate forum.

Union County Freeholder incumbents Democrats Angel Estrada of Elizabeth, Rick Proctor of Rahway and Nancy Ward of Linden shared the stage with Republican hopefuls Michael Yakubov of Roselle Park, John Russitano of Westfield and Joseph Franchino of Berkeley Heights. The six freeholder candidates were given an opportunity to answer several prepared questions as well as make public their campaign platforms.

Some issues that were raised during the forum involved "going green" in Union County, recreation, transportation and gang violence,

The first question revolved around "green," environmentally-friendly plans for the county. All the candidates agreed that sustainability is important in the county and going green is a important trend to follow, but certain candidates felt it is an unnecessary expense at the moment.

"We can't spend any more money in the county on this. It should be up to individual towns to be responsible." Russitano said, adding that towns should be encouraging residents to walk rather than drive as a costsaving measure. Ward agreed that with an economic crisis looming, the county must be frugal, but also expressed that going green is important.

"We need to spend money wisely," Ward said. She suggested giving more grants to schools and letting students come up with new, eco-friend-

Recreation is another topic that the candidates seem to agree is important in the county. Yakubov expressed concern in the alarming numbers of childhood obesity in the county and throughout the nation.

"We have many public parks in the county," he said. "We need to allow and encourage our kids to get off the couch and go outside."

Ward pointed out the fact the the current Freeholder Board has made some significant strides in recreation in the past, including the building of skate parks in Linden and Elizabeth.

Russitano, who spent most of the forum advocating less spending and lowering tax increases, believes the one area more money should be spent is on maintaining the county roads.

'We need more lighting and police presence," Russitano said. We need to pave these roads and not just let them go.'

Estrada disagreed, stating the county roads are maintained regularly and are not in bad shape. "Ten percent of the county's 170 miles of roads are paved yearly." Estrada said.

Franchino agreed that working with the towns is the right approach to road maintenance. He also made it known in his opening remarks that the county as a whole is not fully represented, and certain sections seem to be ignored. He feels that reorganizing the Freeholder Board into districts may solve that issue. During the forum, Ward said eliminating gang violence in the county has become a priority. Estrada feels this problem will take several years to fully solve.

For anyone to believe gangs can be eliminated in one year is not the case. The Prosecutor's Task Force is currently addressing the issue in all of Union County, not just in Elizabeth and Rahway," Estrada said.

$33 million bond earmarked for infrastructure improvements

By Jackeline Leon Staff Writer

Union County freeholders have improvements to county infrastructure and safety with half of the funds earmarked for the historic county courthouse.

 According to a press release issued by the county last week, the total amount includes $750,000 in state grants.

The remainder of the ordinance is from authorized debt of 31.1 million and 1.5 million from the operating budget as a down payment against the authorization of debt," Union County Chief Financial Officer Lawrence Caroselli said. "What this ordinance does is authorize projects to allow departments to begin their work."

He explained that the debt may not be issued for a few years and that the typical term of the bonds to see traffic signal replacements, are 10 to 12 years.

"We really can't provide an estidecided to spend $33.4 million on mated impact on taxpayers at this time since we won't be issuing the debt until later years," he added.

The ordinance was approved Oct. 9 during a meeting of the freeholder board.

According to New Jersey fire safety laws, the courthouse requires that an additional stairwell be built next to the 80-year-old courthouse tower on Broad Street in downtown Elizabeth.

In addition, $3 million has been set aside to upgrade public facilities in accordance with fire safety laws and the Americans with Disabilities Act and county parks which have been in operation since the 1920s, will receive $4.4 million for additional lighting and restoration.

County roads should also expect taxes or project revenue.

and the Vocational Technical School located in Scotch Plains will receive $800,000 for campuswide upgrades.

Talent flows freely in CDC's 'Urinetown

Staff Writer

It was difficult to know who had more fun during a production of "Urinetown, the Musical," this past Sunday afternoon at the Cranford Dramatic Club Theater - the audience or the cast.

It seems that the audience got caught up in the cast's ideosyncracies and musical nonsense and laughed its way through two misguided acts. As Bobby Wolfe, the narrator, who also plays Officer Lockstock - his partner, by the way, is Officer Barrel, played by Kevin Kessler - asks at the beginning of this most unusual stage musical, "What is Urinetown?" the audience also seems to ponder the question while enjoying the entertainment.

Actually, it is a satire-comedy, with underlying and chilling predictions of what can happen to the human race when natural resources, such as a water shortage, takes place in this world.

This outrageous musical play pay to use public toilets. As a result, he wrote "Urinetown, the Musical," and some of the lyrics in cooperation with Mark Hollmann who wrote the music and some of the

For something different, something special and a reason to ponder about what can happen to the world when everything dries up and there are no more resources, a theater goer should hurry and visit "Urinetown, the Musical" in Cranford. It will be there until Oct. 25.

Celebrating fall, history in Summit

Staff Writer

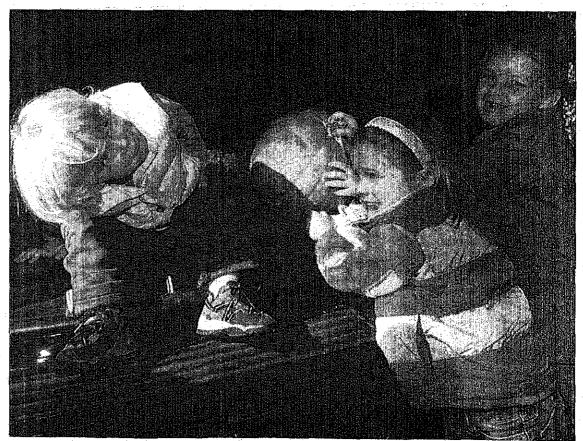

SUMMIT - Once again, as the leaves began to change colors and children began preparing for Halloween, Reeves-Reed Arboretum in Summit invited the community to visit its gardens and help observe autumn during its annual Celebrate Fall event.

This year, the event, which took place on Oct. 19, featured the popular pumpkin carving contest for children, as well as face painting, games, honey tasting, scavenger hunts, and the opportunity to roam the 13-acre historic estate and gardens.

'We look forward to this event every year," said Beth Karp, the facility's development director. "We are lucky we got a beautiful day today. It gives up an opportunity to show off our beautiful gardens."

The arboretum also offered photographer Bruce Lorenz for family photos and artist Jenny McNutt, who spoke about her artwork titled, "Why I Call My Baby Honey," which was created to celebrate the coming of a new family of honeybees to the arboretum. It has been on display since June. According to Executive Director Mary Beth Cooney, the festivities also coincided with Union County's "Four Centuries in a Weekend" event. Molly Watson was hired to visit the arboretum and preform turn-of-the-century songs in authentic garb from the early 1900s

The arboretum is listed on both the National and New Jersey Historic Registries. According to Cooney, in 1974 the grounds were preserved by the owners, local residents and the city of Summit. The non-profit arboretum protects and maintains its grounds, which include century-old buildings, five and a half acres of formal gardens and a mile-long trail through its hardwood forest.

Jack Winsatt, 3, and his sisters Reagan, 4, and Hadley, 8, work together to retrieve the pumpkin they planned to Carve during the 'Celebrate Fall' event at the Reeves-Reed Arboretum in Summit last week.

Stepping Out is a weekly calendar designed to guide our readers to the many arts and entertainment events in the Union County area. The calendar is open to all groups and organizations in the Union County area. To place your free listing, send information to: Worrall Community Newspapers, 1291 Stuyvesant Ave., P.O. 'Dream' is filled with adventure and livelier imaginations, may find "Katrina's Dream" a gem of a book.

It's the type of book that folks over the age of 9 or 10 can pick up, begin reading and excitedly forget to put down until finishing it. It contains, after all, only 67 pages - and every one of them, an exciting adventure.

Xhane Matai of Union may easily have been a devout fan of "The Wizard of Oz," because the theme of her book is reminiscent of the fabled musical film story, which had been adapted from L. Frank Baum's Matai, herself, could have dreamed up some of her delightful and frightening characters, which she originated on her pages, probably, with the smokey cloud of "The Wizard of Oz" hovering over her, as she developed her literary creation.

All the same, "Katrina's Dream," is a sheer, delightful fantasy, with a touch of "Alice in Wonderland," sprinkled about and could easily be devoured in one sitting. It tells a simple story of 10-year-old Katrina, who lost her twin, Sabrina, to a fatal illness, and still talks to her through an old, discarded mirror.

One night, during her own illness, Katrina and her dog, Samson, are suddenly absorbed into a pink fog on the other side of the mirror. It is there that she finds Sabrina, and the twins and their dog take off on one scary adventure after another to find the right path to home.

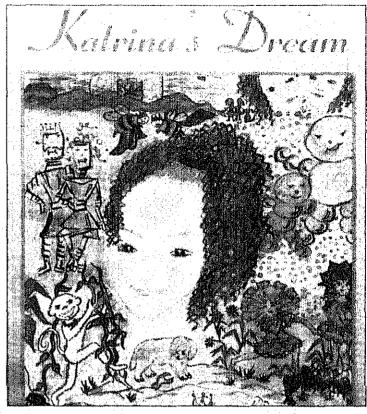

With a diamond crystal in hand and just as Dorothy's ruby slippers in "The Wizard of Oz," magic emanates from the diamond crystal - they are on a quest seeking the white swan on Crystal Island, that books set aside for a children's book will help them find their way home. case, route taken by Dorothy and her dog, Toto, but they travel through intriguing and frightening sites. They encounter bubble people, mud people, eskimouses, countless bees, ruled by the Queen Bee and the King Bee, fish people, giant people - all of whom, after scaring the wits out of the trio, find ways to guide them to Crystal Island.

Much more can be discovered in 'Katrina's Dream" to uphold one's own fantasies.

It is excitingly and interestingly written by the book's new imaginative author, Xhane Matai, who should continue to bring additional fantasy stories to whet a youngster's appetite.

Certainly, "Katrina's Dream," which is a dream of a book, should be read by young people - it wouldn't hurt adults to glance at it once in a while - it's well worth it. And undoubtedly, it will find its way on the shelf of a new section of 'Katrina's Dream,' written by Union resident Xhane Matai, teaches children not to fear death and to cope with the loss of a loved one.

Union author's book tells children: Don't be afraid

By Bea Smith Staff Writer

It was the last thing on her mind to write a book. After all, Xhane Matai of Union spent her life busily raising children, taking care of her sisters, one of whom had been very ill, watching over her grandchildren, working as a nurse's aide and working as a waitress in a family business in Roselle Park.

Still, Matai had an undeveloped talent for writing. Her high school essays were recognized by teachers with an A-plus mark. She worried about the reaction of the children when there was a death in her family and wanted to reassure them that "when someone dies, they are in a better place. And for the children not to be afraid.'

Then one day, less than a year ago, her 8-year-old great-niece, Kafrina Husenaj, "inspired me to write 'Katrina's Dream.' It was a book about a 10-year-old girl, who had lost her identical twin, Sabrina, to an illness. She is reunited with her in a dream, and the dream takes them through many unusual adventures. And this wonderful niece of mine, who is very mischievous and dog named Samson, just as my Katrina in my book, inspired me to write this book."

Matai explained that "I wanted to make this book as fun as possible. I wanted to make this original. and I wanted both children and adults -- especially children -- to understand the underlying theme and to enjoy the book and its fantasies."

Even though it may remind a reader of the movie, "The Wizard of Oz," or the books, "Alice in Wonderland" or "Gulliver's Trav-

Matai also credits her sister, Ziz Husenai, who had been very ill, but "is much better now, with inspiring me to write the book. Even though I was older than her, she had taken care of me when I was a child."

Matai's refugee family was born in Albania, "and they moved to Italy because of communism. I was born in Italy, and then we came to England, where I went to school," she said, "I used to make up stories, and write them in school, and people loved them. But then we came to the United States, and I got married very young and had four children. I was hoping to have identical twins, but that didn't happen. So, years later, I wrote about identical

Local health departments will offer flu shot clinics

Health departments throughout Union County will offer influenza vaccinations in the coming weeks. Following is a list of the flu shot clinics that are scheduled:

• In Union, flu shots will be available on Nov. 24 at the First Baptist Church located at 5 Hilton Ave. in the Vauxhall section of the township, from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. No prior registration is necessary.

The shots are available to township of Union residents ages 18 and older and proof of residence is required.

There is no charge for seniors with Medicare Part B, Medicare cards and identification must be provided. There is a fee for those without Medicare Part B.

• The Cranford Board of Health has scheduled the annual influenza immunization clinic for Oct. 30, from 3:30 to 6:30 p.m., in the Cranford Recreation Center, 220 Walnut

Ave., Cranford

Residents who are Medicare eligible are required to bring their Medicare cards to the clinic since the township of Cranford has been designated as a Medicare provider. There will be a charge for the flu shots this year for non-Medicare residents.

The flu immunization is recommended for those persons over 65 years old, those with chronic heart or lung problems, kidney disease, cystic fibrosis, diabetes, anemia, or severe asthma. In addition, people with immunological disorders or certain types of cancer that lowers the body's normal resistance to infection are also urged to receive the immunization. Also, minor children 9 years or older can be immunized with parent or guardian present.

This year's flu shot contains the following flu strains: A/ Brisbane/59/2007(H1N1); A /Uruguay/716/2007-like strain (H3N2) and B/Florida/04/2006. These are the types of flu which have been circulating in the past year or thought to be most likely to occur in the United States this winter.

Those who are ill and have a fever should delay vaccination until the fever and other temporary symptoms have subsided.

In order to aid in the administration of the vaccine and the orderly running of this clinic, residents are encouraged to wear loose-fitting clothing. For information, contact the Cranford Health Department at 908-709-7238.

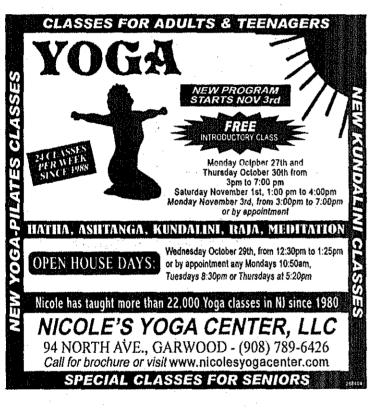

• The Linden Board of Health is currently registering Linden residents for the annual Influenza Immunization Program.

While no definite clinic dates have been set, you can register to receive a flu shot by calling the Linden Board of Health Office at 908-474-8409 between 10 a.m. and 5 p.m. Once registered, you will be notified of the clinic time and date.

Influenza, also know as the flu, is a viral infection which is spread from person to person.

Symptoms of influenza include fever, headache, sore throat, body aches and a severe and often prolonged cough. Health Officer Nancy Koblis encourage all Linden residents age 60 and older and all Linden residents with chronic illnesses to be vaccinated.

What's the value of Assisted Living at Winchester Gardens?

Our Values.

When seniors and their families choose Assisted Living and the other special programs at Winchester Gardens, they become part of a larger community of extraordinary charm, purpose and vibrancy. But that's only the beginning.

The level of service and quality of care at this Continuing Care Retirement Community is what sets us apart from ordinary, "cookie cutter" assisted living communities. We value the wellness of the people who live here—keeping them healthy and returning them to good health after an illness. With nurses on duty 24/7, virtually any care you might need is offered here on our campus.

At Winchester Gardens, we fervently believe everyone deserves to enjoy and embrace life to the fullest. Life is, indeed, what we value most. If you agree, please give us a call today.

Beth and David Rivera

Gates and Rivera are wed

Beth Eve Gates, daughter of the late Donna L, and Lawrence H. Gates and David Rivera, son of Angela and Eleuterio Rivera were married May 25 in Summit, Rabbi Stuart Berman officiated the ceremony.

The bride was given in marriage by Helen Krantzow, a close family friend who was "like a second mother to the bride."

The bride's matron of honor was Betsy Dooley of Lancaster, Pa. and the maid of honor was Jennifer Philippi of Milford, Conn. The bridesmaid was Raquel A. Rivera of Linden, the daughter of the groom.

The best man was David Joe Clayton of Linden, the nephew of the groom. The ushers were Cassiano Almeida of Carteret, the nephew-in-law of the groom, and David J. Rivera of Clinton, the son of the groom.

A reception was held at The Grand Summit Hotel in Summit. The couple spent their honeymoon in San Juan, Puerto Rico. They reside in West Orange.

The bride earned her bachelor's degree from Brandeis University, Waltham, Mass. She is a senior program director for Precept Medical Communications, a subsidiary of Young & Rubicam, Berkeley Heights.

The groom attended Kean University, Union. He is an enterprise sales account manager for Mimeo.com, New York, N.Y.

The Antique Center of Red Bank

West Front St., & Bridge Ave. Red Bank • 732-842-4336

For those people interested in antiques, it can be argued that there is no better place on earth to be than central New Jersey, conveniently located in such a way that many of the county's largest antique centers are all within and easy morning's drive. One such locations is the beautiful town of Red Bank, New Jersey. In the ldyllic water front community you will find countless shops, restaurants and cafe's to relax in and explore. The main draw, however, remains to be the abundance of truly special antique shops both large and small. This is a treasure hunter's paradise.

The centerpiece of the Red Bank antique market is aptly named "The Antique Center of Red Bank". Housed in what seems to be an enormous two story red barn, this continues to be the focal point of much attention for day-trippers visiting the area. In business now for over 43 years, this is the place to be if you want that certain something that's not to be found in any strip mall. In fact, you would have to go to garage sales from sun up to sun down for the next twenty years before you could begin to have the same sort of selection that they have there, Can't find what you're looking for? The long time owner, Guy Johnson, can usually be found behind the counter and he is happy to assist any and all people in need. His ability and knowledge of the current antique market is amazing. It is obvious that he really enjoys his job. In fact, his success has also given him two more antique markets that are both just right across the street.

While many people, have gone through a phase of antique hunting in online auction sites, nothing will ever replace the joy and satisfaction of holding a treasured antique or collectible in your hands. The thriving antique markets of Red Bank are proof of this. We highly recommend spending an afternoon here, but remember to bring some extra money because you will surely find something that you can't live without, even if you plan on "just looking".

SENIOR SPOTLIGHT

Borough hosts 'monster' bash

By John O'Reilly Staff Writer

ROSELLE - Bustling inside Grace Wilday Middle School Oct. 17, students were anxiously waiting for classes to end.

All the fun was taking place at the Anthony Amalfe Community Center down the street, however, as the children's grandmas and grandpas were carousing with ghouls, goblins and fairies.

The 50 or so senior tricksters were treated to a Halloween bash last Friday, courtesy of the borough's Senior Advisory Committee.

The attendees were welcomed into the soirce by an unusual doorman — a 6-foot-tall skeleton wearing a rainbow-colored wig. Inside, partygoers could skip past "Madame LaBaba" as she told fortunes, grab a quick cookie or snack and mingle with a giant Hershey's Kiss, an astronaut, Groucho Marx, or even a walking Lipton tea bag.

Aside from games like "pin the tail on the donkey," bingo and other favorites, the main event was a costume contest, which was eventually won by a mobile slot machine. Winner Nancy Cassidy said her entire slot machine costume was homemade, including the blinking hat that topped

"My favorite holiday is Halloween. You get dressed up and get to be creative," Cassidy said.

Cassidy pointed out that she still dresses up every year, and has won numerous contests for her creative designs. She wouldn't divulge some of her top-secret costumes, but she did note one past favorite: an Indian on a horse. Like quite a few other partygoers, Cassidy said she goes to more Halloween parties and dances now than when she was a child.

"I had more fun as a grown up going out than before," she said.

Another old pro when it comes to Halloween costumes is Patricia Fields, 63 — also known as the giant Hershey's Kiss. A former teacher, she remembers dressing up for her classes every year. Now retired, she still loves to go out with her four grandchildren. But going out these days can be a bit spooky for trick-or-treating, she said.

Some of Fields' favorite Halloween memories were "when you could really go from home to home and not be afraid to get anything people gave you. That was, of course, in the good old days," she recalled.

As for herself, Fields said she was thrilled that the Senior Advisory Committee hosted a Halloween party and was impressed by some of the creative costumes. Fields considered it a "blessing" that she was able to make it to the party.

This was the first annual Halloween party hosted by Roselle's Senior Advisory Committee. Created in early 2007, the committee is comprised of 14 senior citizens who advise Mayor Garrett Smith and the Borough Council on issues regarding seniors. The council also works with the community center to run events they would like to see, such as line dancing, roller skating and dramatic productions. Councilwoman and committee liaison Samantha Dow said working to provide adequate recreational activities for senior citizens is more important now than ever with the baby boomer generation reaching retirement age.

"I think seniors need it. It allows them to interact in a fun relaxed setting and shows this town really cares,"she said.

The key is to allow seniors to customize events to their own interests, not to just tell them what to do, Dow said.

"They're all so creative," she said, noting the high turnout and gaggle of costumes. "They have such an energy."

Grace Church will observe Reformation

Grace Lutheran Church, 2222 Vauxhall Road, Union, will observe ref-

Reformation began on Oct. 31, 1517, the day on which Martin Luther, nailed his so-called 95 theses on the church doors in Wittenberg, Germany, detailing the reforms he thought were needed in the church at the time based upon his reading of the Bible.

Unintentionally, Luther's reform effort ultimately led to the formation of the Lutheran church. Following the reforms of this movement, the Lutheran church has always stood firmly on the Biblical truths that mankind is saved by God's grace through faith in Jesus as one's "personal Lord and Savior."

Appropriately, the sermon for this festival service, delivered by the the Rev. Donald L. Brand, pastor of Grace Lutheran Church, will be titled, "This Blood's for You." Everyone in worship on this day will receive a free magnet of Luther's seal, Grace Lutheran worships on Sunday mornings at 8 and 10:30 a.m., with the 10:30 a.m. worship service interpreted for the deaf, as Sta Matthew's Lutheran Church for the Deaf worships with Grace.

As always, the members of Grace Lutheran Church in Union have extended an invitation to the members of the community to join them in worship and fellowship activities.

For information about the church and its services or programs, contact the church office at 908-686-3965, the TTY line at 908-851-2004 or email the church at gracelu4u@yahoo.com. The church's Web site is www.gracelutherannj.org.

THIS IS H.S. FOOTBALL

By JR Parachini Sports Editor-

After finishing 0-10 for the first time last year, the Hillside football team has a chance to be just 48 minutes away from playing for the school's second playoff championship and first since 1985.

Hillside is 5-1 after a posting an impressive 27-6 Mountain Valley Conference-Mountain Division win last Friday night at Governor Livingston.

The Comets - back in North 2, Group 2 this year after spending the past three seasons in Central Jersey, Group 2 - have elinched their first playoff season since last qualifying in N2, G2 in 2003.

One more win would clinch a first winning season since posting a 6-4 mark in 2003.

More importantly, if Hillside beats Group 1 Robbinsville (2-4) this weekend and then Group 3 Iselin Kennedy (1-5) next weekend - the games will be tough, with both on the road - the Cornets might not only be the top seed in North 2, Group 2, but they might get a first round bye because it appears that eight teams might not qualify in the section this year.

That would mean that Hillside would host Roselle on the playoff cutoff date - which is a game that will not count toward playoff positioning for Hillside since it will be the Comets' ninth - and then get a week off before hosting a sectional semifinal game.

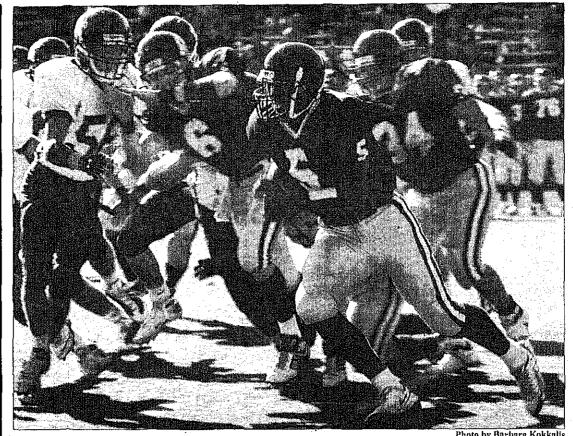

Hillside also does not play on Thanksgiving this year after competing against Brearley on the holiday from 2000-2007. That would mean that after the Roselle game, Hillside could get a week off and then just be a home semifinal victory away from playing for the North 2, Group 2 title.

Hillside won its only playoff title in 1985 when it won N2, G2. The Comets first reached that section's championship game first in 1983.

The Comets just missed reaching the N2, G2 final in 2000, falling at home to Pequannock in the semifinals. Hillside won its first playoff game since 1985 that year.

Also, West Essex was moved to North 1, Group 2 this year. During the past seven seasons from 2001-2007, West Essex reached the N2, G2 championship game six times and won it five times.

Not only has Hillside really turned things around this year, but there's a great chance the Cornets could be playing for a state title one year after not winning a single game.

Junior running back Dwaine Dabney (No. 5 with ball) scored four touchdowns to help lift Summit past Chatham 28-6 last Saturday at Tatlock Field. Other Summit players include Joe Jaskolski (No. 6) and Kevin McNany (No. 34).

Wins 4th straight and qualifies for playoffs

By JR Parachini Sports Editor

SUMMIT - If you attended Summit's football Hilltoppers performed against neighboring rival Chatham, you might have asked this question: How did Summit go two straight years without winning a conference game?

Suprisingly - to many - it did happen. Two and three years after playing at home in back-to-back North 2, Group 2 semifinal contests, the Hilltoppers went 1-9 in 2005 - beating only Harrison in a sectional consolation game - and then 0-10 for the first time

Something was wrong.

In came John Liberato - who had success as a head coach at Hanover Park and was a highly thought of assistant at New Providence - to shake things up.

Summit won three games last year, including its first two conference wins in three years. Liberato set McNany, from his linebacker position, was all over the field and produced many of Summit's tackles.

"We worked hard all week for this game and we got game last Saturday at Tatlock Field and saw how the a lot of tackles for losses," McNany said. "We did great."

After Chatham senior Kyle Hagens returned the opening kickoff 65 yards to the Summit 17 - Hilltopper kicker Alex Melendez did well to tackle him -Summit's defense rose to the occasion by not letting the Cougars reach the end zone.

Chatham had to settle for the first of two field goals by senior Pat Butler, which were the only points Summit allowed the Cougars to score on the day.

'They had a big kickoff and we just kept playing," McNany said. "Not allowing them to score a touchdown really set the momentum of the game. We just This year: 57-12 (.826) kept playing hard."

Chatham didn't get to enjoy its 3-0 lead that long. Dabney took the ensuing Cougar kickoff, found a hole to burst through right away and then sprinted down the JR'S UNION COUNTY TOP 10 left sideline for six points. The first of four Melendez 1. #### Springfield Roadrunners improve to 5-0

The Springfield Roadrunners 13-and-under boys' soccer team defeated the Long Valley Timberwolves 5-0 Sunday at Dayton High School to improve to 5-0.

Austin Lopes scored in the first half and Asmar Johnson, Jason Barreira, Nile Gregory and Tyler Citrin in the second. Andrew Maldonado earned an assist on Lopes' goal. Goalkeeper Danny Micolta played well and made three saves for his second consecutive shutout.

Also playing well for Springfield were Johnny Chumbiauca, Patrick Zahn, Kevin Shulca, Stephano Gonzaga, Arrington Joyner-Corniffe, Noah Guber, Roy Bahar, Tristen Fekete, Eric Pereira and Kevin Casteblanco.

The Roadrunners are at the Hopatcong Spiders this Sunday at 3 p.m. in the "Shake at the Lake."

Springfield Warriors blank foe for 2nd win

The Springfield Warriors improved to 2-1-3 after defeating second place Lenape Valley 2-0 Sunday at Ruby Field in Springfield.

Joseph McDonough scored his second goal of the season and Ariel Gohar his first. Ethan Levy and Anthony Machado combined for the shutout in goal. Also playing well for Springfield were Bryant Wang, Mat Nelson, Alex Sirotkin, Gabriel Calandri, Melanie Schickler, Sean Martin, Jake Zeiman and Matthew Hammer.

The Warriors will next play Chatham this Sunday at 3 p.m. at Ruby.

second field goal.

In a scenario you don't see quite often at all, Chatham returned the opening kickoff 65 yards that set up a field goal, then Summit returned the next kickoff for a touchdown and then Chatham returned the next kickoff for a touchdown, but it was called back. Despite that, the Cougars still managed to drive down the field and get another field goal.

So, with only a minute to go in the first quarter and Summit still without an offensive play - and the Hilltoppers used two of their first-half timeouts already -Summit had a 7-6 edge.

At this point, Summit's defense was in bend, but not break mold. It improved as the game went along and did not allow a single point in the second, third and fourth quarters.

Liberato gave a lot of credit to assistant coaches Mike Judge and Jim Dietz for their fine work with the defense. McNany's performance paved the way.

"Kevin was outstanding on defense," Liberato said. "He had the job of making sure they didn't run sive execution, but we're getting better."

the ball on us." times for 146 yards, which is a 3.8 average.

"Our defensive front did a great job of keeping the or get to where he needs to be," Liberato said. "He was reading real fast and playing downhill the way a linebacker is supposed to play."

Meanwhile, Dabney closed Summit's first possession with the first of his three rushing touchdowns. The Hilltoppers did well to increase their lead to 14-6 after a sevenplay, 71-yard drive that took up almost two minutes.

Dabney scored again in the second quarter and once more in the fourth.

"Dwaine is one of those backs that the more times he touches the ball, the better he's getting," Liberato said.

Rea carried eight times for 64 yards and caught two

'You can't say enough about Matt Rea," Liberato said. "Matt Rea is a playmaker. When that kid puts his hands on the ball, he's a playmaker. He's not a big (5-6, 150) kid, but he's got a huge heart. He's someone that I trust and someone that I believe in."

Jaskolski carried five times for 33 yards and completed six of 11 passes for 81. Those are the numbers.

What they don't show is his poise under center and his ability to drop back and hit a receiver in stride, in the number- including junior split end Shawn Hillas twice.

"Joe's doing a great job," Liberato said. "He understands the offense more and more and more as him and and just go over what we need to do. We go through pre-practice and I let him look at the game plan and I out there on the field.

"If he's taking a little bit of ownership with some of the playcalling, it's going to work a little bit better. He's getting more comfortable and more confident and he understands my thinking now and the way I attack."

With Summit, sometimes you don't know who is under center or who is going to take the ball and run with it or pass it.

Liberato used multiple names to describe his offensive scheme.

"It's a mixture of a shotgun, Wing-T, single wing out smiling. and power I," Liberato said.

football downhill. The best part about it is the defense band together in front of one of the goalposts. has to stay balanced.

"Because you got Rea coming back, you got of them," Liberato said. (Thomas) Baker coming back and then we can pass off it. It puts defenses in a bind.

"We've been working on this for about two years Still, Chatham was able to move the ball from its now, since we got here. We went to it a little bit last own 21 to the Summit 17 before having to settle for a year and we called it the flex. We wound up saying, let's have two quarterbacks back there and who's going to know if they are two quarterbacks or two running backs and then have our wing guys. Who knows who's the pass receiver or who's the runner or who's the blocker? We're using everyone equally.

"How about we call it the fun gun, because we're having a lot of fun with it?

Chatham head coach Don Dayon described it as one tough offense to get a hold of.

"Is Dabney running with it, or is Jaskolski keeping it? Sometimes you don't know and that makes it tough to defend," Dayon said.

Summit went no huddle right away on offense to try to offset Chatham coming at them from all different directions.

"Joe did a great job of making the checks on the line of scrimmage and you just take what the defense gives you," Liberato said. "We weren't at that point the first two games or maybe even the first three games of the year, but we're getting there.

"We're not where we want to be as far as the offen-

Summit's fourth straight win for the first time in Chatham was contained on the ground, carrying 38 five years improved its record to 4-2. Chatham fell to 1-5 and lost to Summit for the first time since 2004.

The Hilltoppers clinched their first playoff season linemen off the linebackers so that Kevin could screen since going 9-1-1 in 2003. They will now attempt to post their first winning campaign since that same 2003 season.

"For five years they've been killing us and (Kyle) McDonough is a fine running back," McNany said.

McDonough, a junior, led all Chatham running backs with 64 yards on 14 attempts.

"For the last time to play them, stuffing McDonough was great," McNany said. "It was a great feeling."

Summit started 0-2, but the second setback was a not-so-bad 21-0 loss to Hills Division leader Mendham at its place. The score was 0-0 at the half.

"We knew Mendham was a great team and they're top in the conference, but we thought our defense could play with them," McNany said, "We just realized that we could play with anyone in the conference."

Summit will be back in the playoffs in North 2, Group 2 for the first time since 2003. Two more games still count toward playoff positioning, with the first one at Morris Hills (3-3) Saturday at 1:30 p.m. in Rockaway.

Then the Hilltoppers will return home to face Hanover Park (4-2) on Nov. 1.

"We always talked about if we could win one game against Chatham," McNany said, "To win it and get into the playoffs at the same time just feels great."

Dayon, a 1991 Brearley Regional of Kenilworth graduate in his sixth season as the head coach of the I meet. We'll meet once a week for a length of time Cougars, guided Chatham to the 2005 North 2, Group 2 final and the 2007 semifinals.

This will not be a playoff season for the Cougars, let him make suggestions because he's the one who is who are now preparing for home game this Saturday against 0-6 Parsippany.

"I've got to give Summit a ton of credit," Dayon said. "They played real well in that first half. We had a ton of opportunities and we didn't take advantage.

"They get a kick return for a touchdown and I still think ours was a touchdown, but it gets called back. We still drive, we don't score. We had to settle for two field goals as opposed to putting the ball in the end zone. It really changed the momentum of the game."

WESTFIELD - Not only did Westfield junior Lacy Cummings prove to be the best gymnast in Union County once again, she stole the show.

At last Friday night's Union County Interscholastic Athletic Conference Gymnastics Championships, Cummings repeated as the All-Around champion after winning three of the four events.

She also helped Westfield capture a third consecutive team championship, ensuring that the Blue Devils will host the event for a third straight year in 2009.

Westfield won this time with 110.525 points. Last year the Blue Devils won at home with 109.425 and in 2006 won at Union with 105.6.

Cummings, a junior, placed first in the vault, uneven parallel bars and balance beam and tied for second in the floor exercise. Her highest score was a 9.650 to win the vault, while her lowest score was a 9,100 to win the uneven parallel bars.

On the beam, Cummings jumped up and did a the beam. She did this twice in a fashion that the out there and did well and got a real high score. judges had no choice but to give her the highest score of 9,600.

"One of my best friends and gymnasts Jenna Rodrigues hurt herself, so I knew I had to step it up," said Cummings, whose All-Around score of 37.650 was better than last year's winning total of 36.850. favorite events."

"I went out there and did what I've been trying to do for the past year and it just happened," Cummings Cummings said. said of her success on beam.

Cummings also said it was her best score on beam this'season.

According to the back of the event's program, the balance beam is four inches wide, 16 feet long and four feet high. A routine consists of dance, balance, flexibility, leaps, acrobatics and tumbling. The routine must be between 60 and 90 seconds long.

"I've been doing really bad on beam until this meet, basically, falling all over the place," Cummings said. "I finally got it together."

Cummings never approached a score of 9.0 on beam, so this was a good night for her in the event.

"I really stepped it up," Cummings said.

Teammate Tina Chabrier placed first in the floor exercise with an impressive 9.425 score.

The uneven parallel bars event is a bar routine that consists of various circling movements, kips, handstands and frequent bar changes. Multiple hand changes and fluidity of movement is required. Form breaks are the major cause of deductions.

"On parallel bars I got a higher score than normal," complete flip in the air and landed cleanly back on Cummings said. "Vault is my favorite event and I went

RC and Johnson harriers impress

Also seek to star at UC meet

By JR Parachini Sports Editor

The Roselle Catholic and Johnson cross country programs have been making a habit lately of being very successful in the Mountain Valley

Both RC teams captured Valley Division crowns, while Johnson's girls' team repeated as Mountain Division champion in last week's competition at Warinanco Park in Elizabeth.

The Lions and Crusaders will also be seeking continued success at next week's Union County meet at Warinanco, scheduled for Oct. 29. The girls' race has a starting time of 3:30 p.m. and the boys' race 4:30 p.m.

Johnson's girls' team won the MVC-Mountain Division title for the first time last year and then went on to win the Union County meet also for the first time.

Leading the way last week for the Crusaders - who were 10 points better than second-place Cranford at 31-41 - was sophomore Sara Vagie, who at this time last year was playing soccer. She finished first in a personal record time of 19:20.8.

The Mountain Division and Valley Division runners ran in the same race. "She was trying to stay as close to the girl from Roselle Catholic (Valley Division winner Ines Simoes, who finished in 18:58.9) as she could," fifth-year Johnson coach Cindy Calnen said. "I was very pleased with how she did."

Johnson had four girls in the top 10, including senior Cathy Goncalves second in 19:27.0, junior Kathleen Mulligan sixth in 20:19.8 and senior Darianna Fraser 10th in 21:31.5.

"I was pleased with our performance," Calnen said, "It was our goal to defend our title. A lot of individual goals were met, so I was pleased with that as well as our team success."

Vagie came out for track last spring and did quite well, which spurred her on to make the switch from soccer to cross country this fall.

"I know she was a good soccer player her freshman year, playing in the midfield," Calner said. "When she came out for track she was successful, so she decided to continue that success in cross country."

Sara's older sister, Stephanie, was Johnson's No. 2 runner last year. She is now a member of the women's cross country team at Rowan University in Glassboro.

Goncalves won the MVC-Mountain Division race last year in 20:18. Johnson's Union County meet victory last year was obtained on a tiebreaker criteria.

Johnson tied Scotch Plains in the team standings with 104 points, but won the tiebreaker because its sixth runner - sophomore Megan Brattole - had a better time than that of the sixth runner from Scotch Plains - Chana Biner.

Brattole finished 52nd in 23:12.75. Biner placed 60th in 23:42.08.

"I wanted to PR (get a personal record) and I wanted to push up to my 5-Union 95.825. 6-Union Catholic 73.550. 7-Elizabeth friend Michelle (Avena who finished 38th in 22:25.26), who was in front of me," Brattole said last year. "I wanted to stay with her, I wanted her in

"I wanted to pass every green person I saw, every New Providence runner, every Summit person. I just wanted to get out there and run my hardest and I wanted it to hurt. I wanted to hurt so bad that I knew at the end of the race that, no matter what happened, that I couldn't have done anything else."

Calnen would love to repeat in the UC meet, but with a little more breathing room this time.

"We're, obviously, hoping for another win, but this one straight out," Calnen said. "The kids are more competitive now and want more than just Winning the conference and county titles last year was a ground breaking experience. Now it's time to move on and see what we can do in the sectionals and the states."

Johnson finished a perfect 6-0 in regular season competition, beating Mountain Division teams Governor Livingston, Cranford, Union Catholic, Roselle, Hillside and Rahway.

RC captured its first MVC girls' title since 1996. Simoes, a sophome from Newark, led the way.

"It was Ines' personal best and she was out there running by herself from the half-mile mark on," RC coach Paul Irwin said.

"She made a move a half mile into the race and pushed the rest of the way."

junior Tara Sandlin third in 21:04.0, junior Catie Cohen fifth in 21:07.0 and junior Briana Smith 10th in

"Catie also had a personal best and Brianna was close to one," Irwin said. "Brianna and Jessica Fonseca were sick leading up, so we were nervous. The girls ended up running real well."

Irwin mentioned Johnson, Summit, Westfield and Scotch Plains as the top teams in the county.

"We're looking to be among the top five teams," Irwin said. "It's a FIFTH CONSECUTIVE TIME strong county on the girls' side."

RC fashioned a 7-0 record in complete for the Lions.

Roselle Catholic roster: Ines Simoes, sophomore from Newark. Catie Cohen, junior from Union. Briana Smith, junior from Union. Jessica Fonseca, freshman from Union. Gabby Mesaros, senior from Linden. Samantha Castrelos, junior from Union.

Andy Jonathan placed 10th in 19:14.0.

Travis Boscia, a senior from Union, was RC's top finisher in last year's UC meet at Warinanco, finishing eighth in 17:02.

Nicastro was next, in 10th place at 17:09.

RC was fifth with 121 points, with Westfield first at 65, Summit second at 66, Scotch Plains third at 90 and Governor Livingston fourth at 94.

"Our first four guys should be up there and will carry us," Irwin said. "We need a fifth guy to step up and ed and paid for it at the end of have a good time. If that happens, we should be a top three team."

Irwin said that Summit and Westfield are strong again. RC completed its dual meet season with an unblemished 6-0 mark.

GL, Johnson grid teams seek road wins vs. Group 3s

By JR Parachini Sports Editor

The Governor Livingston and Johnson football games against Group 3 opponents. GL (3-2) is at Rahway (4-1) Saturday at 1 p.m.

Johnson (4-2) will face Iselin Kennedy (1-5) tomorrow night at 7 at Woodbridge.

The Highlanders have lost two straight after a 3-0 teams seek to bounce back this weekend with road start. A win would be huge for them qualifying in North 2, Group 2. Rahway is trying to make it in North 2, Group 3 and Johnson in Central Jersey, Group 2.

New businesses set up shop in Cranford

By Paul Greulich Staff Writer

CRANFORD - Several businesses are finding new homes in downtown Cranford this fall, demonstrating the town's ongoing broader economic climate.

One recent addition to the downtown will be the Italian Pantry Bistro, which opened Oct. 13 at 13 Eastman St.

Husband and wife owners Frank and Lisa Rizzo are Cranford residents who plan to offer patrons fine dining in a casual atmosphere.

"The best way to describe it is food that has an Italian influence," explained Lisa Rizzo. "It's all fresh and seasonal."

Frank Rizzo will work as the chef. Rizzo visited family in Italy each year during his childhood and will capture the welcoming, familiar atmosphere.

Lisa Rizzo said the township of Cranford was an appealing site for their business because of the convenient location and the healthy downtown environment.

Local credit union obtains '5-Star' rating

Bauerfinancial Inc., headquartered in Coral Gables, Fla., has announced that County Educators Federal Credit Union of Roselle Park has earned its highest 5-Star Superior rating for financial strength and stability

Well-run financial institutions, such as County Educators Federal Credit Union, "have risen above the calamity that has befallen so many others," it was reported. Also, reportedly, the 5-Star Superior rating is based on the overall financial picture of the credit union and indicates that County Educators Federal Credit Union is one of the strongest in the nation.

"It gives me great pleasure to announced that there are still financial institutions, like County Educators Federal Credit Union that continue to build a sense of a security in this insecure world," said Karen L. Dorway, president of Bauerfinancial. "County Educators Federal Credit Union's members have the privilege of belonging to a well-run, common sense credit union. They can sleep soundly in the knowledge that they belong to one of the strongest credit unions in the country."

County Educators Federal Credit Union was established in 1935 and has been serving the financial needs of its members for 73 years. It currently operates through three offices in Lebanon, Roselle Park and Somerville and can be found on the Internet at www.countyedfcu.org.

Bauerfinancial Inc. is the nation's leading independent bank and credit union rating and research firm, and has been reporting on and analyzing the performance of United States banks and credit unions since 1983. No institution pays for its rating, nor can they elude it. Consumers can obtain star-ratings by visiting www.bauerfinancial.com.

Businesses Heal Thyself and Save

By Karen Miller

"I can't afford to be sick" is no longer a joke.

As the cost of health insurance and health care continues to skyrocket, companies are finding new ways to continue to provide these important benefits for their employees while still containing costs.

Wellness services, Incentives for a healthy lifestyle, and on-site medical clinics staffed by a doctor, nurse or nurse practitioner are becoming increasingly popular ways to contain health care costs while improving employee health, attendance and productivity.

The latest trend in fighting health care costs for businesses includes both on-site and dedicated in-hospital medical care and guidance. Above, Dr. Robert Beswick, Medical Director of Occupational Medicine at Trinitas Hospital, examines a patient who suffered an injured ankle.

"We've seen phenomenal growth in the area of corporate health programs," sald Jim Smith, manager of Atlantic Corporate Health. The company's corporate program has doubled in size in the last 24-30 months; they now serve about 40 locations in northern New Jersey, ranging from Fortune 500 companies to county government and mid-sized

The services for which each company contracts with Atlantic Corporate Health are unique to its needs and can range from full-time onsite staffing of a medical clinic to wellness and health education classes. or special services such as administering flu shots or blood pressure screenings. Many companies do not have the budget for a full-time staff person, but still use Atlantic Corporate Health's services for "lunch and learn" programs on a variety of wellness issues, or periodic screenings and evaluations, Smith explained.

"The mission of Atlantic (Corporate) Health is to improve health care in our community," he said. "On-site clinics offer convenient, easy access to health services."

While in the past on-site employee medical clinics were often targeted to treatment of workplace accidents or dealing with minor illnesses, today's employee clinics often offer a much greater range of services.

"Companies are realizing that when an employee leaves work to treat an illness, productivity is lost," Smith said.

If employees can have their healthcare needs taken care of on-site, the company gains in several ways. Not only is less time lost on the job. but often the cost of treatment is less than it would be if the employee was treated by an outside physician. In addition, people are more likely to use an on-site clinic for preventive medicine, taking care of health problems before they become great enough that the employee must take time off from work.

Trinitas Hospital in Elizabeth offers a variety of services aimed at workplace healthcare. The hospital has developed programs specifically for outside employers while also placing an emphasis on providing on-site wellness services, health screenings and health safety for its own employees, according to Glenn Nacion, vice president of human resources for Trinitas.

The hospital began a workplace health and safety initiative in 2006 and already has seen the benefits of this type of program. Workers' compensation claims have dropped dramatically in the last two years.

"We have saved over $1 million in workers' compensation insurance since 2006," Nacion said. Claims dropped from 40 in 2006 to 31 in 2007, and the number of sick days decreased from 1,813 in 2006 to 935 in 2007. Nacion expects the trend to continue when the final figures come in for 2008.

Wellness programs are not just about saving the employer money, however. They also have been shown to increase employee morale and their sense of well being, leading to "happier and more productive employees," Nacion said.

Trinitas is home to the Occupational Medicine Center, which focuses on the care of patients who have been injured on the job. The center also provides pre-employment screenings

"Gateway to Growth"

The Gift

Bý John L. Picard

You can see a lot just by looking. - Yogi Berra

Everyone we meet has the potential to offer us a unique gift. My father-in-law, among the many gifts he gave me, showed me how to truly cherish the moment. He had the ability to sense a pivotal life event and, without stopping or missing a beat, could acknowledge it as it was occurring. He called these times "memory days." I often remember him stopping briefly in some activity with his granddaughter, grinning as he recognized the power of the moment, telling us all: "This was a memory day" and going right back to play with her.

The gift of focus — Recognizing and being "present in the moment" is all too rare, as we rush through our lives; relationships and business dealings. We have all felt this sense of richer experience—praying in a church or temple, hearing our child laugh on a beach, or being part of a business relationship that is critically important. These moments of joy, opportunity and power occur often but can be missed because our minds are already somewhere else.

A growing field of study — Medicine and psychology have recently popularized a technique called mindfulness. This is simply the practice of being present in your current activity. The work of Herbert Benson and Jon Kabat-Zinn have shown us the power of getting into "your zone" and achieving a level of connection with ourselves, with others and with the moment, that is fundamentally different from anything we are taught in schools.

Bringing yourself to the situation — There is nothing more fundamental to your success than your ability to bring all of you to the opportunity at hand. In our gadget-driven business world, we each need to ensure that the whole of our presence is brought to each selling, communications and, most importantly, listening opportunity.

Nine quick suggestions to be "mindful" in business and marketing:

- Pay attention Concentrate on what is happening at the moment. Don't judge, simply observe.
- 2. Use all your senses Sight, touch, smell, taste and hearing.

- Reach out and into the other person Look at and think about the customer's needs, business objectives and style of working and communicating.
- 4. See them in context Notice where you are and its impact on the dialogue. Understand the environment, the timing and the broader context of the corporate culture, the part of the country or the industry.
- 5. Look below the surface Observe and connect across the hidden dimensions of the relationship and dialogue. Balance the surface needs with the intangibles.
- 6. Listen to what is said and unsaid in the conversation How many times has a pause or a raised eyebrow told you more than the words?
- 7. Be flexible to the unfolding of new opportunity When we raise our awareness, we gain new information that requires us to adapt in the moment.
- Feel and don't ignore what your emotions are telling you Don't be afraid of trusting your intuition and gut about the situation.
- Wake up Decide here and now that in this meeting you are going to wake up and bring everything you have to the opportunity.

Like those moments in prayer or at the beach, you have the opportunity to gain real and tangible benefits from being mindful. When you are "in the moment," you will: Find new solutions for customers (sometimes out of thin air), build more successful relationships (based on a trust you just can't buy) and feel more rewarded in surprising ways. People will sense the difference in you and will react positively, reinforcing your success. In the end, these powerful techniques will turn more of your business days into memory days.

Where Have You Gone... My Buffalo Nickels?

into the Unclaimed Property Trust Fund are transferred to the state's General Revenue Fund

For any number of reasons, property owners often overlook assets or do not know they exist. Typically, owners have forgotten about that college fund they started years ago, or have died. Often their heirs are unaware the assets were collecting interest or collecting dust in a bank vault. After a defined period of inactivity, by law banks turn over these assets to the state.

The practice of escheatment is not limited to New Jersey.

"The process is pretty consistent at all banks," said Brian Ziemba, regional vice president of Commerce Bank. "It's required by law. In New Jersey and Connecticut, it's a three-year window; in Pennsylvania and New York, it's five years."

Once banks verify that the last recorded activity falls within the parameters of state law, they notify the account holder at their last know address that the account has been dormant and that it will be turned over to the state according to the provisions of the law, Ziemba explained.

"If the owner or an heir responds by phone or letter, we can then help them mitigate the funds, or refer them to the state to recoup those funds or actual property," he said.

"Generally, what we hear from consumers is that they have a dormant account they've discovered," said Marshall McKnight, a spokesman for the New Jersey Department of Banking and Insurance. "For example, it was a small savings account in a bank that got bought by another bank that merged into a bigger bank and merged again into a much bigger bank."

New Jersey amended its escheatment statutes in 2003 to reduce the dormant time period from 10 years to three. Not surprisingly, there was a dramatic spike in the value of assets collected that year, increasing to $294 million. The 2003 law also required that 75 percent of all funds escheated to the state and deposited into the Unclaimed Property Trust Fund be transferred to the state's General Revenue Fund.

According to Torn Vincz, a spokesman for the New Jersey Division of Taxation, New Jersey typically averages about $85 million in unclaimed assets collected each year. That money is held in the state's Unclaimed Property Trust Fund, and interest earned is turned over to the state's General Revenue Fund. If a rightful owner claims an asset, the principal is returned, along with interest.

The key word there being "If."

Nationwide, state governments collected $5.1 billion in abandoned assets in 2006, up from $3.6 billion in 2003, according to a recent article authored by Arkadi Kuhlmann, president and CEO of the online bank ING Direct USA. There are more than $35 billion of escheated properties in state custody, and less than a third of that amount will be returned to the rightful owners, Kuhlmann sald.

New Jersey sells off tangible assets, primarily from safe deposit boxes, if no claims are put in on those assets after five years. This month the state held a sealed bid auction at the Atlantique City 2008 Fall Festival in Atlantic City that featured 200 lots of unclaimed property, including: an Art Deco Cartier wristwatch, a 2.55-carat platinum and diamond ring carrying a minimum bid of $4,000, a 19th century Tiffany & Co. sterling flatware set, an 1889 Russian gold coin and uncirculated Buffalo nickels.

For those who have lost track of assets, or are just curious, there are a number of ways to determine whether they are the rightful owners of any unclaimed funds or assets. Representatives of the state Division of Taxation equipped with laptops regularly attend expos, fairs, trade shows and ballgames throughout New Jersey and encourage residents to find out whether there are any unclaimed funds that are rightfully theirs. It takes just a few seconds to enter a name and tap into the database to see whether there is a match.

The Division of Taxation website also offers a link to an authorized website, MissingMoney.com, that helps facilitate the return of unclaimed property to its rightful owner, both in New jersey and other states.

Atlantic Corporate Health

Showing the Wealth of Wellness to Businesses

He's out sick...We're two employees short today...Can you hold?

Today businesses large and small are improving their products and services while honing their efficiencies through  $21^{\rm s}$  century work models and technology – saving money, increasing profits and gaining an edge on their competition.

Yet despite these advances in product and process, businesses still feel a drag on success due to employee absenteeism, reduced productivity and skyrocketing health care costs.

Cutting-edge companies are increasingly taking greater control of employee health and health care costs by applying the same business principals to this important segment of operations as they do elsewhere – assessment, design and management.

Atlantic Corporate Health is the expert hundreds of New Jersey businesses have turned to for tailored proactive employee wellness programs to help keep their workforce healthy, reduce lost time while improving productivity, and manage health care administration and compliance. Atlantic Corporate Health has designed and implemented employee health programs for businesses and government bodies covering more than 50,000 employees.

Program components include:

- · On-Site Medical Services Including assessment, management and administration.
- · Employee Physicals and Testing -- For new and current employees.
- Health Education and Screenings Covering nutrition, stress management, weight control and more, and including early detection screening.
- · On-Site Flu Vaccination Clinics Only $25 per vaccination.
- · Smoking Cessation Group treatment, including medicine and behavior modification.
- Work Injury Program Dedicated work injury attention, affiliated with the Morristown Memorial Hospital Emergency Department
- Travel Medicine Preparing employees for healthy international travel.
- Employee Assistance Program Helping employees cope before problems impact performance.
- Premiere Executive Health Program Including 24-hour physician access.

Because Atlantic Corporate Health brings these services directly to businesses, they are convenient for employees, increasing the likelihood of participation and effectiveness.

The pinch of employee health care costs has turned into a death grip for businesses of all sizes. U.S. businesses spend between $300 and $400 per year treating hypertension, heart disease, depression or arthritis, according to the Journal of Occupational and Environmental Medicine. A report cited by the American Heart Association states that overweight employees annually cost their employer an additional $450 to $2,500 in medical expenses and absences. And companies annually lose an average of $3,865 in medical and lost productivity costs per smoker.

"Employers are fighting back, and they're winning," said Jim Smith, manager of Atlantic Corporate Health. "They are applying the same strategic planning to their health care management as they do to product development or sales. By incorporating wellness programs into the workplace, employers are being proactive — assessing, planning and implementing to improve."

Wellness programs have a median return on investment of more than $3 for every $1 spent, according to the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services. For example, every employee who gets a flu shot saves a company $60 per year, as stated by the New England Journal of Medicine.

Flu shot vaccination clinics are just one of the services offered by Atlantic Corporate Health, which include on-site medical services that entail customized medical, health, safety and preventive services such as health care management and early identification of health problems. On-site personnel may include board-certified physicians, registered nurses and/or nurse practitioners, health educators and registered dieticians.

"All companies are different," Smith said. "They have varying operations and work requirements, different types of employees – field, warehouse or office employees – with different behavior patterns, and health care needs unique to them. That is why custom-tailored wellness programs are so effective in helping companies contain health care costs, reduce absenteelsm, improve productivity and strengthen their bottom line."

and annual employee physicals to local employers, said Nacion.

Employers pay for the screenings, which can be tailored to the specific needs of each company. Some companies are required to have their employees tested yearly for exposure to lead or other chemicals. Others use the center's services for preemployment screenings for drug and alcohol use.

The value of pre-employment drug screenings far outweighs the cost to the employer, according to Nacion.

"Studies show that even one employee with a drug or alcohol problem can cost an employer thousands of dollars in lost work time, mistakes or accidents," he said.

There are added advantages to both employer and employee in Trinitas' Occupational Medicine Center. If an on-the-job accident occurs and a patient is brought to the emergency room at Trinitas, the Occupational Medical Center staff is close at hand to provide "a greater scope and breadth of expertise," as well as continuity in follow-up

"Having the center on-site means that procedures such as X-rays don't have to be repeated; it is both a cost savings and (is) healthier for the patient," he said.

Horizon Blue Cross/Blue Shield of New Jersey launched a new workplace wellness program, "Journey to Health," in July.

While the program was initially designed for Horizon employees, many of the components also will be offered to the insurer's corporate clients, as well. The five-year initiative includes awareness, education and behavior change components, according to Cynthia Tobia, director of compensation, benefits and human resources information systems for Horizon.

The program began with "an assessment of the overall health of the organization to use (as) a baseline," she explained. All employees were encouraged to take an online health survey. Health screenings for blood pressure, diabetes and other common preventable health issues also were offered to employees at each of the company's New Jersey sites.

Convincing employees to take part in the program was a concern, Tobia said, so incentives in the form of gift cards were given to all participants. The incentives increased with the amount of overall group participation. Each employee who participated in the survey received a $50 gift card, with the dollar value of the cards increasing as total employee participation grew. Final participation was 68 percent, Tobia said.

The program did not stop with screenings and surveys. Employees also have been offered seminars on a variety of topics ranging from stress management to smoking cessation to dieting.

To help employees develop healthier eating habits, changes have been made in the company's cafeterlas, including adding more healthy meal options, and placing healthier foods at eye level while items such as candy bars have been relocated to a less prominent spot.

Results have been mixed, Tobia said. Some of the programs have attracted more participants than others; a seminar on portion control attracted only a few hundred participants company-wide. In response, the company changed the program format to make it more attractive to employees.

"Let's face it, people don't really want to use their lunch hour, their free time, to hear about how they should restrict their diet," she said.

Tobia said she is pleased overall with the success of the initiative, and credits support from the company's CEO, William Marino, and the board of directors in making the program a success to date. Marino launched the program with a company-wide video presentation.

The program demonstrates the company's support and emphasis on the health of its employees, according to Tobia.

"After all, 50 percent of health problems are impacted by our behavior," she said. "That means that our lifestyles really do play an important part in whether or not we are healthy."

The Canterbury Sales™

The Tale of the Skeptical Prospect and Aristotle's Great Souled Man

By Andy Gole

Recently, I was invited to give a sales seminar to a group of inner city entrepreneurs. The group leader cautioned me to avoid the "corporate speak" of previous presenters, to talk "to the group, not over their head."

I had a dilemma - without interacting with the group, should I change my standard seminar for business owners? As I considered the question, I was reminded of the story of the skeptical prospect...

Some years ago, a sales consultant was invited to visit a skeptical prospect, to discuss training a team of eight salespeople. The consultant had worked for more than a year to realize this appointment. He had first identified the prospect by tracking the "help wanted" ads for salespeople where this company was advertising. Then he contacted and told the business owner, "You don't need a salesperson; you need a new selling system."

This is a tough sale - it isn't transactional, it's systemic change,

At first, the owner wasn't interested. But the consultant persisted, and eventually, a year later, he had an appointment.

After two solid meetings, both parties agreed there was a fit and started working on an agreement. The prospect conducted substantial due diligence - checking 10 of the consultant's references, both owners and salespeople who he had trained. (When was the last time you checked 10 references or someone checked 10 of your references?) The consultant was subjected to the due diligence version of a doctor's fluoroscope.

But the prospect still wasn't satisfied, as the consultant had no experience in their space, or business sector. These were the real McCoy of skeptics. The negotiation continued over two months, with several "false starts."

Finally, one fateful day, the prospect's president again articulated his skepticism. "I know your system works for all these other clients, but how do I know it will work in my unique space?"

The consultant reflected on this skepticism and was reminded of Aristotle's great souled man. In the Nicomachean Ethics, Aristotle presents the "great souled man" as the epitome of human accomplishment - to be so respected by everyone that you command their serious attention when you speak.

The consultant told the skeptic his selling system always worked - in all spaces, at all times, for all people. At its core, the system was based on earning the right to be treated like Aristotle's great souled man. The reason sales teams appreciate the selling system is they want to be respected. It's a fundamental human need.

Some selling systems have contempt for the prospect. This leads ultimately to selfcontempt. No salesperson can be nourished on a diet of self-contempt.

But a diet of mutual respect will fuel a salesperson's soul for a lifetime.

The consultant could never be sure if this discussion "put it over the top," but they closed the deal that day. And 18 months later, the client's sales were up more than 50 percent.

As I thought about my experience with the skeptical client, I knew what I had to do in addressing the group of entrepreneurs. My selling system is universal, so I had to present the same seminar I would give to any group.

And they loved it! They especially like the stories I told about achieving respect.

The moral of the story is: When you sell, earn the right to respect and then insist that you be treated respectfully!

Andy Gole has taught selling skills for 13 years. He started three businesses and has made approximately 4,000 sales calls, selling both B2B and B2C. He invented a selling process, Urgency Based Selling™, with which he can typically help companies double their closing or conversion ratio. ## Trinitas Hospital Launches Occupational Medicine Center

Offers full range of workplace exams and medical programs

A new, freestanding service for employers — Occupational Medicine at Trinitas Hospital — is now available for the care of occupational injuries and illnesses. Located on the main campus of Trinitas Hospital, the center conducts pre-placement, annual and DOT/ICC exams and medical surveillance programs designed to meet the particular needs of companies and organizations for their workforces.

Among the center's many services are drug and alcohol testing with services of a certified Medical Review Officer (MRO) available on site. Also offered are pharmacy services, radiology, laboratory, physical and occupational therapy services, vision screening, hearing conservation services, pulmonary function testing and immunizations. Ergonomics and back injury prevention are key components of a work-conditioning program that is offered to help reduce the risk of recurrent injuries and improve job performance.

Explained Glenn Nacion, vice president of human resources at Trinitas Hospital, "Occupational Medicine at Trinitas Hospital offers full, 24-hour bilingual support to area employers for all of their employee health needs."

"Our staff is fully versed in providing excellent episodic and preventive occupational health care for companies in Union County and surrounding areas," noted medical director Robert Beswick MD, MPH. Dr. Beswick is Board Certified in occupational medicine and internal medicine, and has more than two decades of experience in the development and implementation of high quality occupational medicine programs throughout the state.

Inside Views

There is Reason to Fear

The days are getting shorter. The nights are getting longer and more dangerous.

And the City of Elizabeth has become a war zone.

In 2006 Elizabeth had the 24th highest homicide rate in the country for cities between 100,000 and 250,000, even though by population Jim Coyle it is on the low end of this category of medium size cities.

Though the national comparison data for 2007 is not yet available, Elizabeth's murder rate increased by more than 20 percent in 2007 with 16 homicides in the city. Given that the national trend was down in 2007, Elizabeth's rank can be expected to jump substantially.

Even more troubling than the murder rate is the few number of murders that are solved in Elizabeth. In 2007 nine of the 16 killings remain unsolved, more than 50 percent. So far this year, eight of the 11 murders remain unsolved. That's nearly 75 percent. This means that if you kill someone, you have only a one-in-four-chance of getting arrested, let alone convicted

Unfortunately I could not find statistics that allow for a comparison of rates of unsolved murders. However, it stands to reason to expect that a 75 percent unsolved murder rate ranks Elizabeth in the very top of any city in the country. This is not a distinction to be proud

Gang violence is at the root of the killings in Elizabeth. Everyone knows this. There are drive-by shootings. There are gang initiation killings. There are revenge killings. There are accidents, perhaps the saddest of all.

Everyone knows that there is a serious gang problem in Elizabeth. However, one person will not admit it. Unfortunately, that person is the mayor of Elizabeth, Chris Bollwage, and what he says carries a lot of weight in this city.

You have to feel sorry for the Elizabeth police department. When their city is in official denial of the very existence of gangs, it is hard for them to mount an effective defense against gang violence. For instance, the Elizabeth police do not even have a gang unit and they do not collect gang statistics or intelligence. It is no wonder that they have such a hard time solving gang killings when they do not even admit that there are gangs.

When you have a breakdown like this, It becomes incumbent on the county prosecutor to Intervene. Ted Romankow, the county prosecutor, has tried, unsuccessfully, to provide help. Mayor Boliwage has rebuffed him at every turn.

Recently the prosecutor suggested forming a countywide homicide task force that would incorporate resources from multiple police forces to help solve all these murders. That offer, too, was rebuffed, with Mayor Bollwage decrying the interference. So emphatic was the mayor that he sent multiple carloads of uniformed police to Scotch Plains in an obvious attempt to intimidate the prosecutor into staying out of Elizabeth.

One hopes these tactics, so similar to those applied by the gangs themselves, will not work. If he has to, the prosecutor does have the authority to take control of all or part of the Elizabeth police department. If this is what it takes to put an end to gang slayings, so be it.

Each year about this time I sit down with my staff and discuss their personal safety. Our office is only a half-block from the Elizabeth police station, but the area becomes so dangerous after dark that I require everyone to be gone before dark. This is a sad statement on the state of the city.

Where the Chamber Stands...

New Sheriff in Town?

In a recent comic strip, a pollster asks a resident of the Kingdom of Id what he thinks about ethics in government. The resident answers, "Sounds like a heck of an idea."

A heck of an idea is brewing in New Jersey - a proposal by Governor Jon Corzine to launch "bold actions" to reform ethics in government.

While most state residents generally hail the idea of tougher ethics guidelines and laws in politics, those closest to the issue - politicians and the web of political organizations and media pundits who orbit this arena – have chosen to look beyond the action and instead focus on the motive.

The governor has proposed measures to tighten ethics in politics, including pay-toplay - the practice of making political contributions in exchange for state contracts - of which state residents have had enough. While members of his party have publicly endorsed the plan, how they feel about it privately is speculative and, in fact, irrelevant. They're on board.

Republicans, on the other hand, have sidestepped discussing the value of Corzine's ideas and instead have attacked his motives and timing.

They say the proposal is a response to a confidential poli the administration conducted of state citizens that showed they would overwhelmingly support the governor fighting corruption, as reported by the Star Ledger. They say Corzine is afraid of running for reelection against U.S. Attorney Chris Christie, the champion of countercorruption in New Jersey who indicts crooks like he's picking Jersey tomatoes.

All of which raises one huge question for the average New Jerseyan - who cares?

When his barn is burning, does the farmer question the motive of his neighbor bringing water to fight the flames?

Granted, critics of Corzine's motives may have some sound footing on which to stand. The fact that the Governor's pollster chose to use the words "...fighting the ethical crisis" (as reported by the Star Ledger) concedes there is one. In addition, only earlier this year Democratic leadership introduced legislation that would have repealed laws that had been passed to restrict pay-for-play options. And certainly no one doubts that Christie would be a worthy opponent for Corzine.

So maybe the governor's proposals are as much political survival as holy crusade.

But again, so what?

How does that make government ethics reform not a good thing?

Political observers, commentators and columnists all have weighed in, analyzing inside strategies and behind-the-scenes agendas. It is not dissimilar to the panels of talking heads that attempt to tell Americans what they just saw or falled to see during a presidential debate, and what deep meanings they should take from this misstep or that nuance. These insiders fail to see they are so close to the action that they care about details most of the nation pushes aside.

When Chris Christie indicts a corrupt politician, one suspects few residents worry that he took heat earlier this year for turning a lucrative contract over to his former mentor, John Ashcroft. For the average New Jersey resident, ethics reform is as close to a non-partisan issue as there can be this side of lowering taxes.

And if a little competition among the boys spurs it on, so much the better.

One can only Imagine Jon Corzine and Chris Christie standing at opposite ends of a dirt street in an old western town, six-shooters hung low on their hips and snaris turning their lips as townsfolk watch from the side. Corzine is wearing a shiny new star, perhaps recently having abandoned the old gang of outlaws now surrounding the town. Chistie's star is well worn, although perhaps a little tarnished.

They are not gunning for each other, of course, at least not with bullets, it is the outlaws they intend to bring down. Perhaps some newsmen from back east are on hand, cynically taking pot shots at both men, questioning their motives or loyalties.

At that moment, however, the townsfolk do not care. They only want to hear Corzine and Christie say one thing to each other: "I can put more bad guys in jail than

But there we go back into the funny papers.

Insight

Reflections on the Most Severe Economic Crisis in Our Lifetimes

By Dr. Susan Hume

The ink is barely dry on the Congressional bailout to fix the ailing financial system and to begin transferring underwater mortgage securities from banks to a government-run program. The aim is to restore confidence to banking and get the credit flowing back for consumers and businesses at manageable levels.

The credit markets have been locked-up, with little lending occurring in any category, whether for corporate commercial paper, cross-country bank markets, commercial lines of credit, consumer car leasing or housing. Congress was reluctant to pass the bill, as there was widespread public distrust for Wall Street. But it is clear that the problem affects all Americans.

The reaction of the global stock markets has been negative across all industries. The U.S. Dow, Japanese Nikkei, FTSE London and Euro Indices, as well as Brazil, China, India and Russian markets, are all down between 35 and 66 percent from last year's highs. In crisis, the global markets are highly interrelated and not independent as some would claim.

In addition to signaling that the economy is in recession, global fear and irrational behavior underlie these negative reactions. Investors big and small have been withdrawing monles and causing bank runs not seen since the Depression. No one wants to be the last one out the door and be left holding all the bad apples.

The current crisis began as an asset bubble from overinvestment in real estate. While the causes are complex, the banks and investment banks were encouraged by changes in the Community Redevelopment Act, in coordination with Fanny Mae and Freddie Mac, to accelerate lending to those consumers who had no down payments or income streams to make the loan payments. All parties assumed that housing prices would always rise, a hurtful assumption for lending against an asset that can drop with oversupply or weak demand.

Further propelling the growth was the assumption by investment banks that investors would always buy these bundles of mortgages. Adding more fuel to the fire was increased competition in banking, negligence by rating agencies and fraud by mortgagees and brokers.

This is not a new story. In the Depression the housing bust reflected no equity investment by the homeowner. We saw an asset bubble during the 1970s when banks overlent to Latin America. Again, overlending happened in the 1980s in both the lapanese and U.S. real estate markets.

Too much concentration in one activity should have been addressed earlier by regulators, auditors and board of directors. But again, as in prior bubbles, this did not happen.

Locally, New Jersey is the 12th largest state in terms of mortgage defaults and is highly dependent on employment and tax receipts from financial services. We are most certainly in a recession and the underlying question is how severe will it be. Given the global shutdown of the lending markets and the lack of spending by consumers and businesses, we are facing a global recession over the next year.

However, while national unemployment is about 6 percent and expected to rise, it should rise nowhere near the Depression's 25 percent. Stock price declines have been severe but in all cases except the Depression, severe stock market drops have recovered a year later to reach new highs. Given the drop in oil prices, inflation should not be a problem.

Patience is the word with which to work out this longer-term problem as mortgage sales are packaged to longer-term investors. Estimates are that about $50 billion will be sold to investors each month. Expect direct investments by the Federal Reserve to boast bank capital to get lending flowing again and restore confidence to the marketplace. Further expect a more coordinated global solution to calm the panic, as the real estate bubble is not unique to the U.S.

Bombadil LLC

An Urgency to Self

Andy Gole once told an accounting firm their sales presentation could stand improvement. They ended up hiring him.

So began the story of Urgency Based Selling™ and Bombadil LLC.

At the time Gole was a veteran salesman and entrepreneur running his own consumer products company and sales agency. His new accounting firm, GB&T, had invited him to review a proprietary software product. Impressed by Gole's candor and concepts, the firm asked him to attend a sales call and were even more impressed when Gole stepped in and helped close the deal.

It was an epiphany of sorts, as it led Gole to begin leveraging off his experience in sales and business management and start a sales consulting firm.

Actually, epiphany might be too strong a word. Evolution is more accurate,

"I saw there was this gap in sales consulting," Gole said. "I started doing things differently, but i didn't know I was doing them differently. It was trial by fire and I kept on experimenting with different methods until I found a system that worked."

That system became Urgency Based Selling, with which he typically coaches clients to double their closing ratio, according to Gole. Most recently Gole used Urgency Based Selling to help medical and pharmaceutical publisher intellisphere increase sales by 55 percent in their first year working with him.

"All firms are prospects for sales consulting, but only a small segment looks for it," said Gole, who founded Bombadll in 2004. "These firms are sales driven, systems driven, risk taking, sufficiently dissatisfied with results and willing to let go."

Firms and sales teams struggling with performance must be prepared to let go of entrenched processes and cultures, breaking familiar molds to learn new processes, Gole said. Urgency Based Selling is an 18-step sales system that comprises best practices developed during 25 years of selling and more than 4,000 sales calls. Gole tailors the process to fit each client's needs and sales sector.

There are three fatal flaws in selling, according to Gole: (1) assuming a prospect comes to a conversation with a serious intent; (2) assuming the prospect believes what he or she is being told; and (3) assuming the prospect knows how to make a decision. While these seem to be given premises, Gole asserts they are not and notes that other sales training systems also overlook them.

"Selling too often involves filling orders for people who are predisposed to buy from you," he said.

The key to Urgency Based Selling is to go beyond this safe relationship and expand the selling audience. Gole has a proven track record of teaching sales teams to do that.

"Are you having a serious conversation with the prospect?" Gole asks. "Are you convincing a skeptical audience? And are you helping the prospect make a decision?"

Gole began learning about urgency early in his career when selling decorative containers for a Georgia-based company as an independent commissioned sales agent.

"The pioneering work (on the system) was done in the field selling an inferior product to hostile customers," he said. "I never would have had the incentive to innovate and try new methods if I wasn't in that cauldron. I developed a consultative selling system, which in itself is not unique, but refined it into a unique sales process and management system that ultimately was replicable."

Replicating his success for clients requires a very strong commitment from senior management, a sales team that is both willing to take a stand and is cognitive – Urgency Based Selling requires analytical thinking, according to Gole – and at least two to three months of training for two hours per week.

"It's a radical paradigm shift for most people," Gole explained. "If a salesperson is very successful and satisfied with her performance, I believe you should leave her alone. My system is geared toward people who want to build up their business and companies that want to go beyond the low-hanging fruit."

Intellisphere wanted just that. The company's advertising sales were down 6 percent when they began discussions with Gole. But they were concerned with his lack of experience selling advertising and working in the pharmaceutical sector.

"Gole had powerful ideas," said Herbert Marek, intellisphere president and chief operating officer. "But to be practical, they had to be tallored to the essential details of the healthcare advertising space."

With a 55 percent increase in sales the first year and an expected additional growth of 25 percent in year two, Intellisphere embraced Gole's system and expanded his work within the company,

"We went slowly with the first assignment, with a substantial amount of monitoring," Marek said. "Now that we've had two successes, we understand what Gole can do."

Which is deliver proven results.

"Sales consulting is not a fit for every firm," Gole said. "It Involves disruption. But it is manageable. You have to have a vision, a hunger for exponential growth."

Did You Know...

You May Be Paying Too Much for Health Insurance?

By Jim Faulkner

Are you over-insured? Most likely.

Most companies have a one-size-fits-all health plan, regardless of the number of employees. As a result, all employees generally have a pretty good hospital plan, as well as a prescription plan.

But all employees are not alike and companies may be able to save money on health insurance by better defining their coverage to better fit the needs and requirements of their employee population.

Given that companies usually have a mix of younger and older employees, does everyone go into the hospital every year? Why should a business pre-pay for hospitalization with high premiums for employees who are unlikely to need the coverage? There are less expensive health plans that have a hospital co-pay that employees pay only if they go into the hospital.

Employees like the idea of paying just a co-pay and having everything else covered with no further out-of-pocket expenses. They get nervous when they see deductibles and co-insurance on their plans, and they like the lower premium rates – especially since employees now generally pay a portion of their health insurance costs.

MOOF

The key to businesses understanding their options is the Maximum-Out-Of-Pocket cost, or (MOOP), which is clearly stated in a plan. For the most part, MOOP applies to inhospital costs which can generate the largest expenses, often into thousands or hundreds of thousands of dollars.

MOOP can be kept to a minimal level through an expensive plan with small co-pays, Or MOOP can be up to $5,000 for a single employee and $10,000 for a family for services performed by doctors/hospitals within the health insurance plan network.

People generally are familiar with how deductibles on car insurance can save money. They understand the risks and make an informed decision as to what level of deductible is best for them.

Health insurance deductibles usually range from $0 to $2,500. The higher the deductible, the lower the premium. In essence, the insurance company is saying: "If you want to share the risk with me, we will give you a better deal."

Co-Insurance

The other factor in this "Let's make a deal" exchange is co-insurance.

With a high premium cost plan, the insurance company generally takes 100 percent of the risk associated with employees going into the hospital. However, plans are available where businesses share (or co-insure) the risk. These plans usually entail the insurance company paying 90 percent and the business paying 10 percent of the hospital cost after the employee's deductible, or the insurer paying 80 percent and the business paying 20 percent.

Prescription Plans

Do all employees really need a prescription plan that can cost more than $1,000 a year in premium expense for a single employee, and $2,500 for a family? Certainly employees who are on "maintenance" drugs to maintain blood pressure levels, cholesterol levels, etc., should have a prescription plan available to them. However, businesses should consider offering a second plan without a prescription drug card, one that costs less for the employee.

Does it make sense to have more than one health Insurance plan?

For both the employer and the employee, it makes a lot more sense to have the optimum set of benefits for the dollars that are spent on insurance premiums. Given increasing rates each year, businesses certainly should manage these dollars effectively. Savings and more efficient expenses could provide employees with other benefits as well as help out the bottom line that keeps the business profitable.

It makes no sense to "torch" a $1,000 bill for a prescription card for a healthy single employee who is not on maintenance drugs. On the other hand, employees who take maintenance drugs are less likely to go into the hospital.

So why not have higher deductible/co-insurance plans?

Unlike the weather, businesses can, and should, do something about health insurance costs. At the least, they should contact their licensed insurance broker to investigate possible options for saving money. An insurance broker can advise a business about what may make good $EN$E for both their employees and their business.
