UNION - Union High School officials use the same word to describe Cadet Lt. Colonel Orlando Sonza: leader.

Like many of his classmates, the Union High School senior is preparing for college. But days filled with classes sandwiched between longer naps and evenings drenched in parties are not what he is thinking about, rather it is marches, salutes and drill sergeants.

Sonza, the battalion commander of Union High's Junior Reserve Officers' Training Corps program, was accepted to the West Point Military Academy in West Point, N.Y., in November.

"Attending West Point has always been a dream of mine, since a young age," said Sonza, whose grandfather was in the Navy.

The fact that the nation is currently at war does not frighten Sonza, rather it encourages him. "I serve my country in a time when it really needs it," he said.

wrestling to the top 'Mad Dawg'

By Joseph M. D'Alise Staff Writer

SPRINGFIELD — By day, he leads an ordinary life. When night falls, he transforms into a high-flying, body-slamming wrestler striving to be the World Wrestling Entertainment's next superstar.

"Mad Dawg" Mike Jenkins of Springfield graduated from New Providence High School, where he played football and, of course, wrestled. He continued his football career at Villanova University. Mad Dawg has been training at the Independent Wrestling Federation in West Paterson for the past two years. He said wrestling has become the biggest part of his life.

Q: When did you realize you wanted to be a professional wrestler?

A: It's something I've always wanted to do, since a young age. I grew up a huge wrestling fan, following guys like Rowdy Piper and Rick Flare. Back in the day, the only way to break into the business would be to carry a wrestlers bags for a year, then hopefully get your big break. It's a lot tougher now. I'm lucky to be involved with IWF, one of the best training facilities in the country.

Q: What does it take to make it in the business?

A: Wrestling is something everyone thinks they can do, but it really does require a lot of athletic ability. Only the elite can make it. It's like other sport. It's just as difficult as the National Football League or Major League Baseball, It's something you have in you or you don't.

Q: Have you ever been involved in a national event.

A: I was scheduled for a Smack-Down event last year, but ended up not wrestling. In this business you can get a call up to four hours before an event.

Q: Can you describe you character or moves?

A: I do a lot of high-flying moves. I'm crazy in the ring.

I'll do a little barking and yelling, maybe even some biting. It's wild and crazy; I'm nuts. I've been known to called the "Running Bulldog." It's a good outlet for me.

Q: I think every wrestling fan has asked themselves this question at some point. Is it real? Are the matches predetermined?

A: I always wrestle to win. I've had plenty of concussions and injures. The pain is real. I'm always hurt.

'Mad Dawg' Mike Jenkins

Q: What is you ultimate goal in this business?

A: I'm happy where I'm at right head butt, but my finishing move is now. I aspire to be as good as the guys I grew up watching, and given that opportunity, it's something that would be hard to pass on. The things I've done in the last two years, I never thought I'd do. I'm having fun with it,

Rahway Essex Street Park funding increased $175K

By John O'Reilly Staff Writer

RAHWAY — The Essex Street Park project is getting a boost.

The City Council voted to increase funding Dec. 8 to the public, already standing. The $1,225,000 to support construction changes.

The governing body had approved up to $1,050,000 for the project, which included a $500,000 Green Acres state loan acquired in March. The rest of the project has been funded through county bonds.

The amended ordinance approving the change was passed unanimous on second reading.

Construction began on the park, located behind the Town Hall com-

'Wonderful' donation helps KPL recoup loss from theft

KENILWORTH — It was like something out of the holiday film "It's a Wonderful Life," said Kenilworth Library Director Dale Spin-

On Dec. 15, township police Sergeant Timothy Dowd and Robert Schielke of the PBA Silver Card Association showed up at the library unexpectedly and presented Spindel with an oversized check worth $500 to set a fundraising effort that had been derailed back on track. "We were totally shocked and thrilled," Spindel said, indicating that due to this donation, the fundraising efforts have restarted.

Approximately $450 in coins, collected in a five-gallon jug near the front check-out desk in the library on Boulevard, were taken during the early afternoon hours of Nov. 13.

dren's Room in the library began three years ago.

"We expect improvements to begin sometime in early 2009," Spindel said.

Dowd explained the Silver Card Association; a non-profit, charitable group associated with the local PBA, was alerted to the theft several weeks ago through an article published in Union County Local

"I was floored and made the call immediately," Schielke said, who serves on the Board of Directors for Silver Card Association. The decision was unanimously approved by the board.

Every year, Silver Card Association hosts a fundraising dinner at Garlic Rose Bistro in Cranford, Last year the association raised $15,000, from which the donation to the Spindel at 908-276-2451.

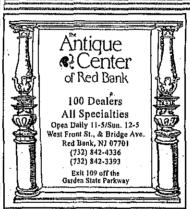

The collection to update the Chil- library was taken. The association felt helping the library in their time of need was the responsible thing to do. "I think Dale thought she was getting arrested when we came in," Dowd joked.

The library is an important part of everyone's life in the community," Dowd added about his desire to help the library replenish their funds.

Once Spindel realized she had not broken the law, she was touched. 'I've always considered myself fortunate to be working in a community that is as nice as Kenilworth. When something like this happens, it just reinforces my appreciation," Spindel added.

The library is trying to raise at least $2,000 to purchase climbing equipment for the Children's Room. To make a donation, visit the library at 548 Kenilworth Boulevard or call

The Antique Center of Red Bank

West Front St., & Bridge Ave. Red Bank • 732-842-4336

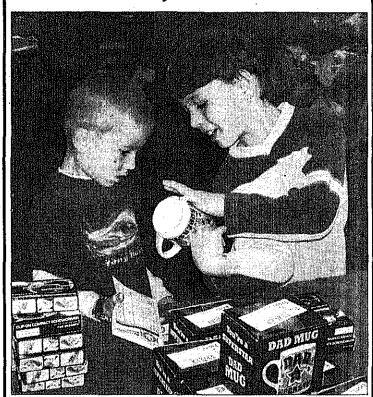

For those people interested in antiques, it can be argued that there is no better place on earth to be than central New Jersey, conveniently located in such a way that many of the county's largest antique centers are all within and easy morning's drive. One such locations is the beautiful town of Red Bank, New Jersey. In the idyllic water front community you will find countless shops, restaurants and cafe's to relax in and explore. The main draw, however, remains to be the abundance of truly special antique shops both large and small. This is a treasure hunter's paradise.

The centerpiece of the Red Bank antique market is aptly named "The Antique Center of Red Bank". Housed in what seems to be an enormous two story red barn, this continues to be the focal point of much attention for day-trippers visiting the area. In business now for over 43 years, this is the place to be if you want that certain something that's not to be found in any strip mall. In fact, you would have to go to garage sales from sun up to sun down for the next twenty years before you could begin to have the same sort of selection that they have there.

Can't find what you're looking for? The long time owner, Guy Johnson, can usually be found behind the counter and he is happy to assist any and all people in need. His ability and knowledge of the current antique market is amazing. It is obvious that he really enjoys his job. In fact, his success has also given him two more antique markets that are both just right across the

While many people, have gone through a phase of antique hunting in sites, nothing will ever replace the joy and satisfaction of holding a treasured antique or collectible in your hands. The thriving antique markets of Red Bank are proof of this. Lounge loses license

Action prompted by complaints

HILLSIDE - A local bar considered a nuisance by many residents won't be serving alcohol when the new year rolls around.

The owner(s) of Carli's Lounge, located at 1555 Summit Ave., accepted a 35-day suspension of the bar's liquor license at an Alcohol Beverage Control Board hearing held last week.

Hillside Police leveled a complaint against the lounge after receiving numerous complaints from residents. "Those charges stem from several incidents," said Hillside police Lt. Vincent Ricciar-

The penalty, which will last from Jan. 1 at 3:01 a.m. until 11:59 p.m. on Feb. 4, was the result of complaints police received of disorderly patrons, late night noise and uncooperative employees, like one incident in April, when an employee refused to aid police investigating a disturbance at the bar.

According to Ricciardi, when police attempted to investigate complaints at the bar, they were not provided a list of employees or a copy of the liquor license, both of which should be readily available.

State law requires bar or tavern employees to have clean records and that they report any crimes or disturbances to police immediately, said Hillside police chief Robert Ouinlan.

A number of other Hillside bars had their liquor licenses suspended this year, police reports show.

In November, five other establishments were suspended as the result of charges stemming from a police sting targeting underaged drinking.

Suspended bars included Regional Bar & Restaurant, 30-day suspension; Long Avenue Liquors & Tavern, 30 days; Mayfair Liquors, seven days; Tanky's Tayern, seven days, and New Blue Ribbon Restaurant & Catering, 45 days.

Also in November, the Half Time Sports Bar on Bloy and Leo streets had it's license suspended for 15 days due to a fight in June. It was not their first offense, police said.

How are we doing?

The editorial staff of Union County Local Source has its sights on making the newspaper better and bolder in 2009, with the help of our loyal readers, of course.

Some may have found the transition from their former community newspapers — The Progress, Union Leader, The Observer or The Eagle — to a regional product difficult. We've heard your concerns, along with a lot of positive feedback as well.

We're always in the process of improving upon the newspaper, whether it is planning exciting new content, such as the "What a Character" section celebrating community members, or perfecting the old, such as creating "School Zone," "Senior Spotlight" and "Health" sections, making the information much easier for loyal readers to locate.

In 2009, the Union County Local Source, now six months old, will keep developing.

But we'd like to be sure were planning the right content based on what you, the reader, would like to see from us.

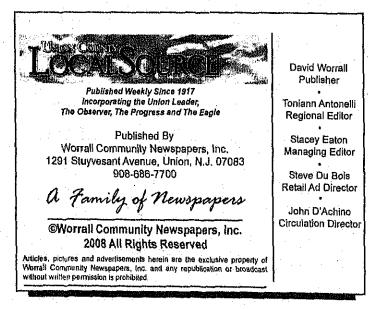

Give us your feedback. Got an idea on how we can improve our content? What do you think of the design? Any thoughts on what you'd like to see more or less of? Got a story idea we may have missed? What types of stories would you like to read? Whatever your thoughts, if you've got opinions, we're listening. So go ahead, jot down a few ideas and pass them along to us at editorial@thelocalsource.com.

Thank you for the continued support.

Merry Christmas

Tomorrow is Dec. 25, and tonight, children across the nation and throughout the world will be nestled all snug in their beds, perhaps not with visions of sugar-plums dancing in their heads, but certainly with dreams of piles of presents under their Christmas tree. Times may be difficult, especially with the foundering economy and growing recession, but this holiday above all others is one of hope. And watching our children race downstairs to tear open the presents can bring joy to even the hardest of hearts.

Christmas celebrates the birth of Jesus Christ to Mary in the city of Bethlehem, where she was traveling with her husband, Joseph.In the two millennia since his birth, much has been added to the holiday we now know as Christmas. Whatever has been added to the birth of Jesus in no way detracts from the story. However Christ's birthday is celebrated, it is not unique to any one country. This is the birth of the only son of God, the father of all humanity. This inclusiveness helps unite the world on this holiday. This is Jesus Christ, born to save us all. Rejoice. Merry Christmas.

'Hunkering down' in hard times

By the third conversation with Hugo Pfaltz Jr., I was comfortable enough to ask if he considered himself a blue blood.

After all, there are his sizeable real estate holdings in Summit, two terms served in the State Legislature with Tom Kean Sr., the Ivy League education, the dizzying array of charitable endeavors, the impeccable dress suits. He quipped, "What's a blue blood? Aren't we all blue bloods?"

The real goal all along was to scope out the views of the respected Summit lawyer and charitable benefactor on the economic woes we face. Pfaltz has vivid childhood memories of the depression. He describes life in Newark after his family moved in with his grandfather during the bad days. He readily agrees when I lay out the premise that by 1937-38 the country was actually spinning backwards after some gains by the New Deal. He also agrees that the end of the depression only came with the start of World War II.

As to the current economic status, Pfaltz refers to it being time to "hunker down" in terms of spending and saving. The term may have been picked up in his time in the his career, he has served as editor of the New Jersey Law Journal. He 1929. is considered an expert in the areas of trusts and estates.

His has an open, polite, engaging style. On tough times, he questions "How many of us have more suits, more shoes than we really can use." He recalls the view of his father in the 30's when the goal was to have a house, a car, a radio, a refrigerator and a suit with two pairs of pants.

The subtly of Pfaltz is hammered home when he starts speaking about the positive aspects of people who lived within their means and did not jump into the credit frenzy of the past decade.

His voice gets stronger when he speaks about his charitable efforts. His leadership on a range that runs from participation on a hospital board, education functions and environmental efforts is amazing. Summit Old Guard on another passion — developing a walking path from Summit to Roselle Park.

The elder statesman's role allows him to even praise Democrats like Union County Clerk Joanne Rajoppi for her efficiency.

A large statue of appreciation for his efforts on behalf of the Vietnam War Veteran's Memorial also maintains a prominent position.

Pfaltz is not optimistic in the short term. He points out that consumers aren't buying. He is not alone in this position. It may be that the real danger is something unheard of to the younger generation-deflation. The danger is a collapse in consumer spending after Christmas means everything from income to home prices will continue to shrink. A 'strong leader'

To the Editor:

It was a pleasure to see the majority of citizens supported through the leadership of Chris Drew on the Zoning Board, as the motion was made to deny approval of the cell tower at the Cranford Swim Club.

Mr. Drew pledged during the recent campaign he would strive to maintain and enhance our small town character.

He kept his intention to that campaign promise by standing up to Verizon and voicing his opposition to the proposed change in use of the subject property.

My gratitude is extended to the entire Zoning Board membership who voted in favor of Chris Drew's motion.

This episode was a lesson of the importance of having discerning, strong leaders like Chris Drew on our town boards. Cranford needs citizens who are strongwilled and capable of making tough decisions that represent a consensus for the good for the town and our environment.

On behalf of the Walton Playground Fund, I want to thank all of the Walton students, parents, teachers and staff members that made our Buck-a-Book month such a huge success again this year.

Throughout November Walton's nearly 600 students read an amazing 13,173 books! Thanks to the following sponsors who helped make Buck-a-Book a success.

We celebrated the end of Buck-a-Book month with two well-attended concerts by children's musician Kenny Woods on Dec. 5. For the fourth year in a row, the generous support of our presenting sponsor, Autoland, allowed all proceeds from ticket sales to go directly to the Playground Fund. We truly couldn't do it without them. All together, Buck-a-Book and the concerts raised almost $14,000:

While we appreciate the publicity from the article in last week's newspaper titled "Book report: Initiative brings second playground to Walton," I'd like to make clear that we're not through with fundraising yet. At this point, although we are getting closer to being able to break ground on Phase II of the playground - which will be in the back of the school, not adjacent to Phase I as suggested in the article — this spring, we are still about $25,000 short of our goal.

With the continued support of the community and smoke. generous sponsors like these, we hope to fill that gap in the new year. Anyone interested in donating to the Walton Playground Fund can contact me care of the Walton School or at schick1027@aol.com.

Stay tuned in early 2009 for our Comedy Night and Cabin Fever Game Day. Thanks again to the whole community for your continued support.

Time to forgive and forget

To the Editor:

Recently a copy of Union County LocalSource came into my possession. On it's cover is the old Bayway Refinery.

If you ever noticed, the refinery would wait until the winds were blowing towards Elizabeth before the smokestacks were lit and churning out the billows of smoke. But that's not why I write.

I betcha that the Iraqi journalist would've never threw his shoes at President Bush if they were Jimmy Choo "Premier" slingback snakeskin pumps at $840, or a pair of Diora Maya straw-heel pumps for a mere $1,120. Never would he have tossed a pair of Christian Louboutin pedal sandals that fetch $995. But maybe a pair of Prada stitch buckle dress shoes at $445, because it's only "chump" change.

Though in all fairness, and in keeping with the season at hand, I would suggest for the president to pardon the man.

And in all fairness, I have to do the same. For I do owe quite a few apologies, especially to the public relations department at the Bayway Refinery.

My Lord Jesus has shown me to forgive all, even

A cold snap following two days of wintery weather that dumped snow, ice and freezing rain on Union County and made driving conditions hazardous.

The snow had only been falling for a few hours Friday morning, but by early afternoon, reports of roadway accidents were flooding local police stations across the county as drivers struggle to rediscover some of the finer points of operating their vehicles in adverse conditions.

In Union, almost a dozen accidents occurred Friday morning alone. No injuries were reported.

Union Police Lt. Sean Henry said the accidents were not isolated to one particular area and urged people not to travel until the roads were cleared. Smaller towns with less dense roads saw fewer accidents, but the risks remained as the snow continued to fall, according to law enforcement officials.

Summit YMCA welcomes new director

(Continued from Page 12) In May, Clinton, the Springfield YMCA's former child care, camp director and executive director, moved to the Summit branch, the largest of four branches in the area, also including a location in Berkeley Heights and the Learning Circle in Summit.

Clinton feels the difference between her new job and the last is a larger membership base. Her biggest fear: the economy may begin to hinder donations for the Strong Kids Campaign.

"We need to...focus on

According to the Summit Area YMCA's Vice President of Financiai Development, Lucinda Mercer, the Strong Kids Campaign runs from February through April, although the YMCA accepts donations year round. "Most of the donations we receive...come from individual donors and members of the Y," Mercer said.

In 2008, the campaign raised $430,000 and was used to assist more than 525 individuals and about 300 families.

The 2009 goal is $500,000, according to Mercer.

Campaign veteran, Peter Loeser of Maplewood is looking forward to his third year volunteering for the Strong Kids Campaign.

"As a father of two, I find it rewarding to help children succeed," Loeser said.

Clinton looks forward to her new position, as well as getting to know and help a new, larger group of members and volunteers.

"It's great to think that you can help shape children's future or possibly even create a future for them," Clinton said.

'Kitchen' offers tasteful interpretation of love, business

The kitchen, large or small, can have different meanings to different

To Roslyn Curry of Union writer, musician and actress, it is the basis for a novel and the title of her latest book, "The Kitchen." In her book, Curry's interpretation of the kitchen is a unique site in a highly successful business and the concurrent ultimate, personal relationship between the proprietors and their employees.

According to her book, the author surrounds herself, in the first person - as a waitress - with a disparate conglomeration of types of people, who depend on the company's kitchen for their livelihood. From a family member of the owner of the business, to the top chef, to his assistants, to the cooks and to the waiters and waitresses, the kitchen appears to be the most important part of the building.

Curry begins her book with a history of Ionia and Claudia Bein's real estate company, Ion Industries. It originated in the small town of Klocos, where the Beins already began luring their clients to their dinner tables for attractive and ultradelicious, culinary preparations. And as they created towns into Hosting Villages, which served quality foods to world leaders and rich diplomats, they became even more prosperous.

Eventually, they brought their business to New York City, and the Beins family thrived on the reputation of their unique kitchen. They continued to cater to the personal dining desires of international rovalty, the creme de la creme of flourishing business executives and world leaders. Their incomparable memis in their penthouse and executive dining halls became known throughout the world.

Claudia Bein had once confided in her children many years ago that "what enters the belly, enters the

Within "The Kitchen," Curry offers small revelations about the Beins, the children of the Beins, and those employees, whose worlds have revolved around their invaluable jobs in the company's kitchen. She considered Ion Industries as "the greatest company one could work for in a lifetime," and the work practices "ensured longevity" of the workers; a "blue-collar world with white-collar attributes."

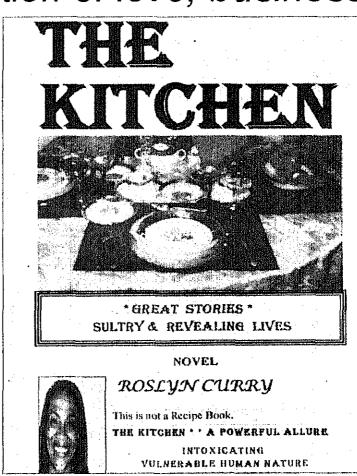

The drama of the lives of the many employees, uncovered throughout the book, sometimes read like soap operas. The aspirations, innovations, marriages, love affairs, are too numerous to mention. But they make for interesting reading.

Curry self-published "The Kitchen," and she is donating the the proceeds of the book's sales to her personal fundraiser, The Random Act of Kindness Foundation.

Although the print in the body of the book appears to have come from a computer, rather than a printing press, it does not deviate from a reader's curiosity. It is well written, and the author is to be commended.

"The Kitchen" will certainly find a place on the shelf of this reviewer's bookcase.

Sometimes people who no longer want the rabbits just let them go, mistakenly figuring that rabbits can make it on their own out in the wild, since native wild rabbits do. Unfortunately, these domesticated pets face terrible fates in these situations. If a predator does not kill them, they succumb to starvation or

With Christmas coming up, the idea of getting a new pet for a loved one, or perhaps for your self becomes more likely! At T.L.C. PET DOCTOR, we urge you to seriously consider what pet would be right for the potential receiver of the gift. Animal ownership can be a wonderful experience for the new pet owner, and if thought is given to the situation it can also be a safe and happy experience for the pet. Come to 1326 Stuyvesant Ave., Union or call 908.686.7080 to schedule a pet consultation today. We provide exotic pet and bird medicine, as well as diagnostic cérvices offered on site.

P.S. Many people cannot determine the sex of their rubbits when they acquire them.

The Union girls' basketball team was to open its season at Scotch Plains yesterday against an 0-1 Raiders squad. The Farmers' next scheduled home game is Jan. 10 at 1 p.m. vs. non-conference foe J.P. Stevens of North Edison.

Union girls' basketball has the talent to be successful

Farmers perform with great deal of heart

By JR Parachini Sports Editor

Despite losing high profile players Charmaine Union girls' basketball team still proved to be a highly-competitive unit.

Don't let the 4-16 finish fool you.

"Last year was one of the most rewarding years I've ever had in coaching," said Union head coach Justin Meyer, a Bloomfield graduate who is in his seventh season at the helm of the Farmers.

Union defeated a team from Washington in Florida for its first win and then downed Kearny, Newark East Side and Union Catholic.

The Farmers lost to a 7-6 Scotch Plains team 38-36 on the road and fell at home to Linden 37-29 after leading 17-5 after the first quarter and 19-18 at the half.

The first time Union played Kearny it lost 61-37 on the road in its season-opener.

Union then downed the Kardinals 53-38 at home one month later.

Union lost at home to Scotch Plains 58-29 in its second game of the year before almost knocking off the Raiders on the road six weeks later.

Linden and Scotch Plains reached the Union County Tournament semifinals.

"The kids went out there and played their hearts out," Meyer said.

"They never gave up and fought for everything. That showed a lot of character on their part."

After being snowed out Friday at home against Kearny in its scheduled season-opener, Union was to play at Scotch Plains yesterday afternoon.

Union's next scheduled home game is Jan. 10 at 1 p.m. vs. J.P. Stevens of North Edison.

Meyer hopes to have returning starter and team captain Ashley Foster back right before the Jan. 10 non-conference contest. The 5-5 senior 2 guard broke like she belongs. She knows what's expected of her." her pinky during pre-season practice.

"The east comes off Jan. 7, so, hopefully, she will miss no more than six games," Meyer said.

Union is next scheduled to participate in the Tay and Tatiana Javis to Bloomfield Tech, last year's Freehold Tournament over the holidays and then play Shabazz and Irvington back-to-back on the road on Jan. 6 and 8.

> Union's other four starters include junior point guard Kyarah Fousee (5-3), senior guard Rina Barotae (5-6) at the 3, freshman forward Jamiyah Bethune (5-10) at the 4 and senior center Synthea Reed (6-0) at the 5.

> Senior Danielle Aliparo (5-3) starts at the 2 guard in place of Foster.

Other team captains along with Foster are Foushee

Bethune is the lone freshman on the varsity roster.

"We're expecting big things from Jamiyah," Meyer said. "She's a hard worker and a good kid."

Union's last scrimmage was against Johnson, which has been one of the top teams in Union County the past several seasons and the Mountain Valley Conference-Mountain Division champion the last two. The Farmers also hosted Bloomfield.

"We played pretty well in the pre-season," Meyer said. "The kids have stepped up."

Foushee, Foster and Reed are returning starters, with Angela Nascondiglio - now a student at Penn State - and 1. Silas 2008 graduates.

"Our low post game is strong as we'll try to get the ball to Synthea and Jamiyah," Meyer said.

"Defensively, our communication has been great and we've been playing much more aggressively. We've really improved there."

Reed progressed last season as a player who could fill up the hoop and grab a big rebound, averaging 11.2 points and 7.3 boards.

"Maturity-wise, Synthea has made great progress," Meyer said. "She has much more confidence and feels See UP NEXT, Page 24

Johnson girls' basketball is sparked by Trani effort

Fish and Huey fill the hoop for Rahway

By JR Parachini Sports Editor

CLARK - Just as fast as the snow began to accumulate Friday morning was the start the Johnson girls' basketball team got out to against visiting Rahway Saturday afternoon.

You could say it was a sweet 43-31 victory for the Crusaders since Johnson got out to a 16-1 start, never looked back, and was paced by a game-high 16-point effort from junior forward Gina Trani.

'We're just trying to settle in and get comfortable because we're a really young team," said Trani, who is only one of three returning Johnson players who saw significant time last year, including sophomore center Kate Matthews and senior guard Monica Slodowski.

Trani scored six of her points in the first quarter to help stake the Crusaders out to an 18-6 lead after the first eight minutes. Johnson led 8-0 before Rahway scored, with four different players scoring baskets.

Seven Johnson players scored in the first quarter, which made first-year head coach Tom Chmiel happy.

"We spread the ball around, which was good, but we want to be able to get the ball inside more," said Chmiel, who was hired just two weeks before the start

Chmiel, who takes over the coaching reigns from Chris Raguseo, spent the last 16 seasons as the head coach at Colonia.

This was the Mountain Valley Conference-Mountain Division season-opener for both, with each team getting snowed out Friday night. Johnson was supposed to host Hillside, while Rahway was scheduled to play at Governor Livingston. Those games will be made up later in the season.

Johnson has won the Mountain Division championship the past two seasons and is coming off a 17-5 campaign in which it reached the Union County Tournament quarterfinals as the third seed and the Central Jersey, Group 2 semifinals as the top seed.

Rahway is coming off a 1-18 season that was not helped by Rayven Johnson transferring to Bloomfield Tech.

While Johnson lost starters Sondra Parin, Jordanna Trani, Kathleen Sullivan, Brittany Murray and Marissa DiCosmo to graduation, Rahway has all five starters back, including senior guard Brittany Casares, senior guard-forward Al-Nisha Fish, junior forward Asia Huey, senior guard Siobhan Ford and junior center Kiara Tate.

Fish paced the Indians with 13 points, making nine free throws. Huey also finished in double digits in scoring, totaling 10.

'We have to learn to finish better in the first half of games," said Rahway head coach Jo-Ann Zweibel, who is now in her 15th year total as the head coach after coming back for a second stint beginning in 2004.

To Rahway's credit, the Indians outscored Johnson 30-27 after falling behind 16-1 in the first quarter.

NOTES: Last year in conference play, Johnson defeated Rahway 48-20 at home and then 39-14 on the road.

Rahway's lone win last year, in its 10th game, was a 43-31 conference home triumph over Roselle. Fish scored 14, Tate 10 and Huey eight.

Cyber Crime Draws Cyber Cops

By Rod Hirsch

The long arm of the law has gone cyber. As the 21st century criminal has moved into realms and dimensions never before dreamed of by yesterday's cop on the beat, law enforcement agencies are in hot pursuit.

The vast reach of the internet continues to shrink the world – there are more than 200 million internet users in the United States alone – increasing the likelihood that you or someone you know will become a victim of cyber crime.

The pervasive nature of crime committed with the use of computers runs the gamut from loss of "proprietary corporate information to the loss of life and more commonly includes the theft of sensitive personal information – social security, bank account or driver's license numbers or the contents of a personal file.

No less hurtful or compromising is the loss of innocence and trust.

The Internet has provided millions of criminals worldwide with a platform to seek vengeance or riches at the expense of unsuspecting victims. From predators exchanging child porn to scammers stealing identities, cyber crime does not discriminate, reaching into button-down corporate board rooms and the chat rooms of naive teens around the clock and around the world. Cyber criminals are as likely to strike from a basement apartment in Elizabeth or Scotch Plains as a walk-up loft in London, Amsterdam or Montreal.

As cyber crime becomes more pervasive and more sophisticated, local law enforcement agencies are adapting and responding, according to Sgt. Michael Hoose, who heads the Union County Prosecutor's Office High-Tech Task Force, one of the first in New Jersey.

It is difficult to profile the cyber criminal, according to Hoose. He lists jilted lovers, disgruntled employees, jealous parents, thieves, con men, child molesters and other perverts, malcontents, miscreants and devious cyber junkies as the most common.

The high tech crime unit, created in 1999, has handled several thousand cases over the last few years, everything from identity theft and child pornography cases to homicide investigations, insurance fraud and human trafficking, according to John Holl, public information officer for the Union County Prosecutor's Office.

"Computers have not only changed the every-day lives of citizens, but also the way criminals operate," said Union County Prosecutor Theodore Romankow. "As such, we have implemented a number of initiatives in recent years to monitor and apprehend people who use technology to commit crimes."

"When you think about it, there are no boundaries for computer crimes, they're pretty much involved in every facet of criminal investigations today," said State Police Det. Sgt. Stan Field, who heads the Cyber Crimes unit.

"More and more, we do work with the counties and local police departments," Field said. "There are more police departments better trained and equipped to handle this than there were four or five years ago. What we're starting to see is that when a crime comes in, the local departments are more apt to work it instead of calling for help."

Field and Hoose agree that child pornography and stalkers on the Internet are the most troubling.

"We're brought up and taught not to talk to strangers, and these kids don't understand or don't care," Hoose said. "They go on these social networks, MySpace, FaceBook, and they let them in their house everyday."

The unregulated nature of the Internet does little to discourage such activity.

"There are criminals out there who launch viruses, but there are anti-virus products we can install and firewalls to help protect against attacks," said Sara Peters, senior editor of the Computer Security Institute in New York City. "The trouble right now is that there are malicious people who can use legitimate functionalities like FaceBook, MySpace or Google, common components of our every day lives, in really bad ways.

"People can open themselves up for trouble without knowing that they are doing so. That's becoming a major concern; how do you protect against something that is legal without making it impossible for good people to use the functionality the way they are intended to be used?"

Hoose, who presents a "Be Cyber Safe" class on cyber crime for schools, civic organizations and business groups in Union County, delivers a consistent message.

"Parents are not paying attention to what their kids are doing online," he said. "Don't let them have a computer in their bedrooms – put it in the family room where you can keep an eye on what they're doing."

In October, the Union County Prosecutor's Office arrested a Fanwood businessman and a Plainfield pastor, in separate, unrelated cases involving invasion of privacy, child endangerment and sexual assault on minors. Both cases involved contacts on the computer between the two men charged and their alleged victims, according to Hoose.

A third case still unfolding involves a Linden resident, a teacher at an unnamed Union County school who had attended one of the "Be Cyber Safe" presentations, according to Hoose. The teacher engaged in an

A burglary at a local deli, the theft of credit card information from a department store database, cyber terrorists or a bomb scare at a government building. The reports are so commonplace that planning for them has become standard strategy for businesses and organizations of all sizes and industries. Security is essential in today's world.

"When my grandfather started this business security meant walking around a building and shaking the doors," said David Britton, chief technical officer and part of the third generation at Supreme Security Systems in Union, which has been in the security business since 1929.

There has been a rapid expansion in the last few years in the technology available for securing businesses and homes, according to Britton. That means better security at a less expensive price.

Recently a new client said to me, "We are expecting a recession next year, times will be tough."

Why do markets decline? Due to the product life cycle.

Products and services come to the end of their useful life. Innovative products take over Every business leader is challenged with managing the product life cycle -- knowing where they are in that cycle and how to extend it. Classic champion brands like Coca-Cola have extended the life cycle over 100 years through non-stop innovation. Often small businesses have more limited life cycles of three-to-seven years.

How long are your life cycles?

How long should they be?

From a cash flow perspective, leadership's fundamental task is extending the current life cycles to prepare the way for and finance new business life cycles. Life cycle management allows leaders to "time pace" change, to catalyze the necessary innovation.

In a recession, many more businesses face the "declining market" scenario. Are you prepared? You probably pare costs to the minimum and perhaps "buy business" by cutting prices.

What else should you be doing?

Having worked on more than a dozen declining life cycles, I have developed a tool kit for doing battle in brutal markets. One tool kit component is: repositioning your capabilities to more hospitable business environments – to a "blue ocean" of uncontested demand.

Coca-Cola performed a myriad of repositionings in extending its life cycle. In just one arena, distribution, Coca-Cola repositioned from the drug store to the supermarket and other retailers, to outdoor vending machines and to office vending machines.

Another classic declining market strategy is acquiring more market share. This can be achieved by finer market segmentation, or product/service differentiation: targeting your offer to the newly defined segments. Product/service differentiation consumes cash and time. So does price-cutting to acquire market share, when it does not help us move down the experience curve.

What if you have neither substantial cash resources nor time?

There is a low cash/quick implementation repositioning strategy to build market share. Many, if not most, firms overlook it: repositioning by buyer decision-making needs. This entails a sales process change – what salespeople say, how they interact with prospects.

Most selling processes are geared to meeting the needs of "low hanging fruit" – prospects that are predisposed to buy. These methods appeal to only 1-15 percent of prospects, depending on the business.

These selling methods neglect the cornucopia of opportunity that exists by meeting deeper decisionmaking needs of prospects, which include:

- 1) Earning the right to be in a serious discussion with prospects (versus being a shopping exercise);
- 2) Addressing the needs of the skeptical decision-maker;
- 3) Helping new prospects make an unfamiliar decision.

Applying these tactics to a declining market – print advertising – helped my client increase sales more than 50 percent when the market demand declined 5 percent.

Imagine the impact of increasing your closing ratio from 10 percent to 40 percent or more. Everything else held equal, you will see "boom times," not recession, provided your product is not obsolete.

Segmenting prospects by decision-making needs is always a viable strategy – especially valuable in cash-constrained recessionary times.

Businesses Find Safety in 21st Century Security

"Video cameras now have analytics built in and there are access control systems that make it possible for the owner of a business to monitor that business from his own home," he said. A basic four-camera system runs about $3,500, Britton estimated, "considerably more technology for considerably less money" than a similar system 10 years ago.

New technology also has made it possible to efficiently protect remote locations. Copper theft has become a significant problem at remote cell phone tower locations, according to Britton. New cameras and motion sensors can instantly deliver information of a potential theft to a remote monitoring station.

"The new systems can tell the difference between a deer, a dog and a human, significantly reducing the number of false alarms that are turned in to law enforcement," he explained. Verified alarms receive higher priority and faster response from law enforcement.

The economy also plays a factor in the security industry, according to Anthony Marino of Alert Detection Technologies in Kenilworth.

"What often happens is that when the economy is bad people cut back on security, particularly systems that require monthly monitoring fees," says Marino. "But now is the time when people need to make sure that they have protection."

Recent terrorist attacks on hotels and restaurants in Mumbai, India, and several shopping mall shootings in the United States have reminded businesses they also need to be alert for other types of security problems beyond theft and burglary.

"High-rise and large capacity buildings are at risk today more than at any time in our history," according to Keith Flannigan, the executive director of an investigative and crisis management agency specializing in counter terrorism, communication and information security. A member of the American Society of Industrial Security, the largest security association in the world, he has performed investigative services for former President Jimmy Carter and Fortune 500 companies and counter-measures internationally.

Ensuring that a facility is secure takes time, money and effort on the part of everyone in a company, from the CEO down, and many business people are reluctant to spend the money to properly secure their facility, according to Flannigan.

"The biggest problem I have seen in my career of implementing security and safety programs has always been having the corporate executive approve the funds," Flannigan said. "No amount of money can be spent to prevent a problem that will come close to what you will spend afterward to clean up after one."

Veronica Jenkins, a certified identity theft risk-management specialist and a representative for Prepaid Legal Services, Inc., which offers credit identification theft services, agrees.

"Business owners need to be aware that there are legal requirements that they must meet to protect their customers and clients from identity theft," she said.

Many business owners unnecessarily retain old information on employees and customers, including social security numbers, credit card information, driver's license information and bank routing numbers, according to Jenkins.

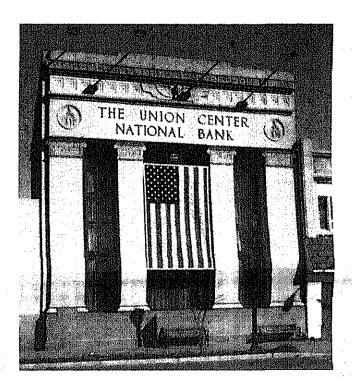

"The first thing I tell people is, if you don't need the information, don't keep it,"

Laptop computers and flash drives are particularly vulnerable to theft. Businesses should not keep sensitive information on these devices unless absolutely necessary, Jenkins advices. If they do keep sensitive information stored on a laptop or flash drive, they should make sure it is encrypted. In addition, laptops can now "phone home" if they are stolen and the hard drive can be remotely wiped clean.

While security cameras, encryption codes and other high tech devices are an important part of security in the 21st century, Jenkins believes the most important element is still the human one.

"So many people will buy the security camera or set up the encryption code and then never use it," she said. "Having the security devices isn't good enough. We have to use them – every time."

Cyber Crime Draws Cyber Cops

"intense" e-mail exchange with a student and after a period of time, the teacher sent "inappropriate" photos to the student and was subsequently arrested, the sergeant said.

The Federal Trade Commission received 11,284 fraud complaints and 6,394 identity theft complaints in New Jersey in 2006, the latest year for which statistics are available, ranking 14th in the nation in the latter category.

The top five fraud complaints in New Jersey were: shop-at-home/catalog sales; Internet services and computer complaints; prizes/sweepstakes and lotteries; Internet auctions; and foreign money offers.

According to the 2007 Internet Crime Report, the Internet Crime Complaint Center (IC3) received 206,884 complaints of crimes perpetrated over the Internet during 2007. Of the complaints received by IC3, more than 90,000 were referred to law enforcement agencies around the nation, amounting to nearly $240 million in reported losses. This represents a $40 million increase in reported losses from complaints referred to law enforcement in 2006.

"The Internet presents a wealth of opportunity for would-be criminals to prey on unsuspecting victims, and this report shows how extensive these types of crime have become," said FBI Cyber Division assistant director James Finch. "What this report does not show (is) how often this type of activity goes unreported. Filing a complaint through IC3 is the best way to alert law enforcement authorities of Internet crime."

Consumerfraudreporting.org, an online clearinghouse of cyber crime information, lists the top 10 categories of computer-related criminal activity affecting consumers and businesses. These include: lottery scams; internet auction frauds; confidence – Nigerian advance fee frauds; phishing and pharming for identity theft; passive residual income scams; check frauds; work-at-home scams; matrix/multi-level marketing and pyramid schemes; property investment schemes; and 900 phone number scams

The annual Computer Crime and Security Survey conducted by the Computer Security Institute helps businesses and corporations increase their security awareness and helps determine the scope of computer crime in the United States.

The 2007 survey shows an increase in cyber crime for the first time in five years and a corresponding increase in losses for the 494 companies included in the survey, ranging from multi-billion dollar global corporations to companies employing less than 100 workers.

Some of the key findings of the survey include:

- The average annual loss shot up to $350,424 from $168,000 the previous year. Not since the 2004 report have average losses been this high;
- Financial fraud overtook virus attacks as the source of the greatest financial losses.
 If separate categories concerned with the loss of customer and proprietary data are lumped together, that combined category would be the second-worst cause of financial loss:
- Insider abuse of network access or e-mail (such as trafficking in pornography or pirated software) edged out virus incidents as the most prevalent security problem, with 59 and 52 percent of respondents reporting each, respectively;
- The percentage of organizations reporting computer intrusions to law enforcement increased to 29 percent as compared to 25 percent in last year's report.

Did You Know...

You Can Achieve Cost Savings through Property Tax Appeals?

By Frank Ferrugia

The subprime mortgage disaster and the implosion of the real estate market are by now well documented. There has been perhaps no better time in recent memory to consider filing a property tax appeal in order to reduce the tax burden on properties that may be losing market value.

Property taxes constitute a significant expense for both residential and commercial owners of real property. Minimization of this burden, by way of a tax appeal, can greatly influence the sale or development of real estate. By taking advantage of this unique opportunity, owners of real property and lessees responsible for property taxes can greatly reduce their expenses associated with the ownership and development of buildings and land.

A real property tax is a tax on the value of land and improvements, Real property is valued, for taxation purposes, at its fair market value. This value is one that a willing buyer would pay a willing seller, both with adequate knowledge, in an arms-length transaction in the open market. Municipal assessors formulate assessments based on this value as of the relevant assessment dates.

Methods of Valuation

There are three general methods of valuing real property: the sale approach, the cost approach and the income approach. Use of these three approaches to value depends on the type of property being valued.

The Sale Approach

The sale approach, or market approach, seeks to determine value by comparing sales of properties similar to the subject property. Of course, the probative value of this method depends on the availability of sales of properties that are truly comparable to the subject property.

Accordingly, adjustments are made to account for differences in the properties compared.

This method is predominant in the valuation of residential properties and other properties for which comparable sales are available. To the extent that comparable sales are available, this method will be most probative of fair market value.

The Cost Approach

The cost approach, or replacement cost approach, seeks to determine value based on what it would cost to recreate or replace the subject land and improvements. Various market indexes and references may be utilized to estimate the cost to recreate the subject improvements. Such costs are then reduced to take into account depreciation and obsolescence. Actual construction cost figures may also be utilized, and such figures can be trended to apply to specific valuation dates.

Because land is unique, the land component must still be valued under the market approach discussed above. This land value is then added to the cost determination to reach the fair market value under the cost approach. The cost approach to valuation is utilized where the subject property is specially designed for a specific purpose, for which no market readily exists. Such "special purpose property" includes power plants, refineries and specialized manufacturing plants.

The Income Approach

The income approach, or income capitalization method, is used to value incomeproducing property. This approach views the subject property as an investment from which a stream of income is the desired result.

First gross income is established, and this figure is reduced by a vacancy and loss allowance to arrive at a net income for the property. This figure is further reduced by expenses to produce net operating income. Net operating income is then capitalized by the appropriate rate to produce the property's true value, that is, the present value of the stream of income desired.

The income capitalization method is appropriate for the valuation of apartment buildings, hotels and other commercial property.

The Appeals Process

in New Jersey, appeals of real property tax assessments must be filed on or before April 1 of the current tax year, or within 45 days of the issuance of a Notice of Change in Assessment. This is done by filing a petition of appeal with the County Board of Taxation of the county in which the property is located. If the real property's assessed value is greater than $750,000, the taxpayer may file an appeal directly to the Tax Court.

Taxpayers who are unhappy with their results at the County Board level may file an appeal to the Tax Court within 45 days of the County Board judgment. Appeals from Tax Court judgments may be brought to the Superior Court, Appellate Division. Such appeals must be filed within 45 days from the Tax Court judgment.

in accordance with New Jersey law, owners of income-producing property are required, upon written request, to provide municipal assessors with income information and title papers. Assessors utilize information obtained through these Chapter 91 requests in valuing real property. Failure to provide this information within the time prescribed bars the taxpayer from filing an appeal. In such instances, the taxpayer will only be entitled to a reasonableness hearing with respect to the property assessment.

Locking in Your Reduction - The Freeze Act

New Jersey legislation provides for the Freeze Act, which offers additional relief to taxpayers successful in appealing tax assessments. The Freeze Act provides that final judgments of the Tax Court are binding upon the taxing district for the assessment year, and for two years succeeding the judgment year.

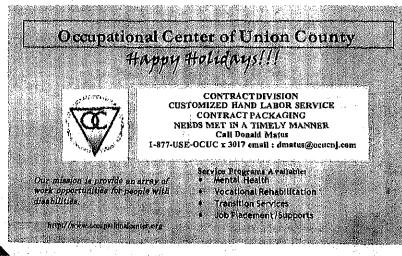

The Freeze Act will not apply where there has been a change in value after the assessment date. The Freeze Act also will not apply where the property has been the subject of an addition qualifying as an added assessment, a condominium or cooperative conversion, a subdivision or a zoning change.

The binding effect of the Freeze Act will also terminate with the tax year immediately preceding the year in which a program for complete municipal revaluation has been put into effect. With the added benefits provided by the Freeze Act, taxpayers appealing their assessments may enjoy up to three years of relief.

In the right case, a property tax appeal offers an opportunity to achieve substantial savings. Potential appeals should be reviewed and evaluated carefully to ascertain that an appeal is appropriate.

Clients and cases handled by the law firm McCarter & English reflect the depth and diversity of property owners who can seek property tax appeal. Inside Views

The Chickens Have Come Home to Roost

Almost all of us have some kind of insurance or another, it can be car insurance or health insurance. Homeowners, workman's comp and life insurance are common. There are a myriad of types of insurance.

Now if you pay your premium you expect to get coverage when you file a claim. And if you find that the administrators of the insurance flavour claim money to pay something else, like their gambling debts, you'll be pretty mad. In fact, there are laws against misappropriating funds that have been put into the care of a trustee, and usually people who do this are liable to go to jail.

Except for the jall part, this is exactly what has happened with New Jersey's Unemployment Insurance Trust Fund. This fund was set up to provide income for people when they lose their job. It is not charity, it is insurance, and employers and employees both make contributions

Now that the economy is turning south and unemployment is skyrocketing, the need for the Unemployment Trust Fund has never been greater. Unfortunately its resources have never been more meager, it isn't that we haven't been paying our premiums; rather it is the governor and the Legislature who have been diverting our money for their own ends.

Over the last few years, more than $4 billion has been diverted from the Unemployment Trust Fund. This has been over the vocal objections of the Gateway Regional Chamber of Commerce and every other business group in the state.

Businesses and their employees pay about $2 billion into the fund each year. In 2004, the fund was carrying a balance of $3 billion, before it was raided. A couple of months ago, the fund balance had fallen to $161 million. Last month, claims were $169 million, up almost 25 percent from November 2007.

Right now, the Unemployment Trust Fund is barely self-sustaining. With claims expected to climb each month well into 2009, the only thing that will save it is a big increase in unemployment taxes. Nearly $400 million, or a 20 percent increase in the total collections, will be necessary.

But, as the labor force contracts, because businesses close their doors or cut their workforce, the increased burden will fall on fewer people. So, whether we like it or not, we are looking at a major tax increase, all because the government diverted the surplus.

The money was taken from the fund to pay for the state's charity care program. While stealing from Peter (the unemployed) to pay Paul (the uninsured) may have seemed like a good idea, the fact is that being unemployed and uninsured tend to go hand in hand: the more people who lose their jobs, the more people who lose their insurance.

For years the Gateway Chamber has argued that the state's charity care program needs its own funding source. Charity Care is an important government policy. No one should be denied care because they don't have insurance.

However, if we as a state make this decision, we should also be cognizant that someone has to bear the cost, and that should not be the people who have just lost their jobs. The Legislature in its usual fashion has done what is expedient, not what is right.

Unfortunately government is not held to the same standard as business. Those in government make laws, but then do not apply them to themselves. If they did, a whole bunch of blackguards would be looking at jail time.

Where the Chamber Stands...

This Well is Dry

New Jersey's coffers are echoing like a stray penny turning in an empty dryer drum. Our pockets are turned inside out and the gold leafing on the state house dome is looking pretty tempting right about now.

In short, New Jersey is all but broke.

The Corzine administration has reported that the state budget shortfall is projected for $1.2 billion and could reach $5 billion for fiscal year 2010. October tax revenue came in $211 million lower than the administration's projections; corporate business taxes were off by nearly 16 percent and income taxes by 14 percent from projected levels, according to the Star Ledger.

For the fiscal year starting in July, Corzine has said, "All things are on the table."

That willingness to consider all options — from renegotiating vender contracts to reviewing state collective bargaining agreements — is both necessary and prudent. The New Jersey constitution requires the governor to submit to the state Legislature a balanced budget. Projected revenue and spending must match.

Past administrations have achieved this by borrowing from Peter to pay Paul, through slight of hand and by raising taxes, particularly on the business community. This last option is one that should not be on the table.

The Corzine administration has worked hard to rebuild New Jersey's tattered reputation as being one of the least business-friendly states in the nation. New Jersey's business environment had become so hostile that businesses have been leaving the state in droves for years. High commercial property taxes and burdensome fees and regulations have long made neighboring states attractive options for businesses of all sizes. Recent passage of paid time off was one more punch to the gut of a business community already gasping for air.

New Jersey has lost more than 14,000 private-sector jobs and today ranks near the bottom in the nation in rate of job creation, the New Jersey Business and Industry Association (NJBIA) recently reported. (A Rutgers study found New Jersey was 41st in the nation in its rate of private-sector employment growth in 2006 and 2007, NJBIA said.)

The association's 2009 Business Outlook Survey also revealed a gloomy outlook for the immediate future. The report showed that hiring plans of New Jersey employers for the coming year are at an 18-year low, with only 17 percent of respondents saying they plan to expand hiring in 2009. Only 12 percent identified New Jersey as a good place to expand operation, a 25-year low.

This is not entirely New Jersey's fault. The economic downturn is national and global and nearly 70 percent of the survey respondents report their industries are either in or entering a recession. That is beyond the control of Governor Corzine or anyone else in Tranton

In those areas the governor and Legislature can control they have made great strides in helping the state's business community regain its footing. Most recently, for example, the Legislature passed and Governor Corzine signed legislation to allow for the deduction of corporate business taxes over a longer period of years, similar to other states, giving New Jersey another carrot for retaining businesses that might otherwise consider relocating.

Other bills being considered as part of the governor's stimulus plan include legislation to loosen credit for small and medium-sized businesses; simplify business taxes; and help create jobs.

This is a trend that must continue if New Jersey is to weather the storm and remain economically strong. New Jersey government leaders must resist the temptation to tax the business community as a way of avoiding other sacrifices that might seem more politically dangerous.

State labor leaders will claim betrayal if approached to help shoulder the load. Educators will decry delays in capital investments in schools as an abandonment of our youth. Commuters will attempt to roadblock curtailments in transportation, hikers will march against reductions in services at state parks and art lovers will draw the curtain at cuts in endowments. All will raily for their personal causes and demand cuts come from elsewhere.

Elsewhere cannot be New Jersey's old faithful -- businesses with their supposed deep pockets and ability to take one for the team.

New Jersey's business community continues to contribute tax revenue to the state and employ vast numbers of residents, helping them pay their mortgages, buy goods and services and send their children to college. As the economy has worsened and margins have thinned, New Jersey's businesses have tightened their belts, worked longer hours and looked for innovative approaches for drawing customers.

They have not gone to Washington or Trenton seeking a bailout. They only ask not to be the bailout one more time.

Assemblywoman Annette Quijano (D-20)

Securing New Jersey's Economic Future

I was honored to be sworn into the New Jersey Legislature on September 25, 2008, as Assemblywoman for New Jersey's 20th legislative district and proud when my role as the first Latina representative for the 20th legislative district was solidified on November 4, 2008, (Election Day) when I received 70 percent of the vote.

Yet in today's challenging economic environment, there is no time to waste in pursuing the interests of the state's residents and business community.

"As the daughter of small business owners myself, I understand the importance of creating a favorable environment for all businesses in New Jersey and will continue to advocate for expanded workforce training, favorable tax incentives for businesses, and investments in our infrastructure."

Shortly after joining the Assembly I was appointed to the Labor and Telecommunications and Utilities committees. I have wasted no time assimilating to the Legislature and have already sponsored a variety of bills geared toward securing a strong economic recovery for the Garden State.

To help small businesses, I cosponsored legislation to broaden the exemption eligibility for small businesses under the Urban Enterprise Zone sales tax rebate program for businesses with less than $3,000,000 annual gross receipts to businesses with less than $7,000,000 annual gross receipts.

January 29 & 30 - 72nd State Chamber Annual Wolk to Washington

To help families in the community avoid the nightmare of foreclosure and to help stabilize local housing markets, I co-sponsored the "New Jersey Homeownership Protection Act" – legislation that will fund counseling and intervention services, provide emergency loans, and restructure subprime loans for families in risk of Sustained economic growth is a top priority for New Jersey and its business community and residents alike. It is important that we in the Legislature partner with the New Jersey Department of Labor and Workforce Development and non-governmental agencies throughout the region to expand job training opportunities in the community. Currently, I am working with the New Jersey State AFL-CIO and local unions in the region to establish Automotive/Diesel Mechanics and Stage Technician Apprenticeship linkage programs at schools in Elizabeth and Roselle.

As the daughter of small business owners myself, I understand the importance of creating a favorable environment for all businesses in New Jersey and will continue to advocate for expanded workforce training, favorable tax incentives for businesses, and investments in our infrastructure.

My short tenure in the Legislature has certainly been busy and there is much more I plan to do. I am excited to partner with the business community to improve the quality of life in New Jersey.

Yillani Bus Company

Dee Villani 908-862-3333

Villani Bus Company began operations in 1920. The business was started by Frank Villani. His son, Diodato, has been President since 1950.

The first Villani bus was a converted truck providing a "Jitney Service." For a nickel workers had a ride to work instead of walking. As the word of mouth spread about the service and family atmosphere, demand for the service grew and so did Villani Bus Company.

VBC is respected for safe and reliable transportation and operates at a high standard that thrives to be ethical, friendly and hardworking. The Villani family is humble and feels fortunate to provide great service to the community. Most important, they are proud of how they treat their employees, clients and the general public.

Remember - if you need a bus, call us!
