Union Center is 'far from dead'

By Paul Greulich
Staff Writer

UNION — While at first glance, the sight of vacant or boarded-up shops in Union Center may plant doubts in the minds of area shoppers about the health of the local business community, efforts by optimistic business and property owners may prove that appearances can be deceptive.

A bank of boarded windows along Stuyvesant Avenue marks retail space not in the process of being decommissioned but rather renovated as property owner Seaboard Properties LLC works to prepare the building for a new life as home to the national chain, Family Dollar. This building comprises 1046 to 1060 Stuyvesant Ave.

Beneath the facade of plywood, three vacant retail spaces are being combined into one that will be filled by the single large store. The Great Wall, a Chinese Food Restaurant located in the same building, will be relocating elsewhere within the same area.

Above, storefronts in Union Center remain boarded as workers renovate the interior. Below, a store on Stuyvesant Avenue displays a 'for rent' sign.

dent Lewis Borinsky described the changes to the property as part of the company's efforts to help revitalize the downtown.

"This is our first step in bringing what will hopefully be one of many better quality tenants," Borinsky said. "It will be nice to have some sustainability in the downtown with stores that will be able to endure."

Borinsky said surrounding stores will hopefully experience a positive "spillover effect."

Family Dollar operates thousands of stores throughout the country.

"They're very enthusiastic about operating in Union Center," Borinsky said.

The new store is expected to be up and running sometime in the fall.

Township Administrator Frank Bradley said he is not aware of any structural difficulties encountered in the renovation work and noted the changes do not entail a change in use.

"What they needed to do was get approval from the building department to make changes within the building," Bradley explained.

Seaboard Properties is a property management company based in Union.

Among those still optimistic about the state of Union Center is Joe Leo, president of the SID and owner of Here's the Story, an independent bookstore on Stuyvesant Avenue. Leo, who has operated his business for 15 years, said that while the overall economy as a whole is still "in flux," new efforts by merchants to adapt, such as the project just a few stores down and across from his own, continue to be seen.

"There's definitely positive signs. There's a lot of really positive things in the works," Leo said. "This town is far from dead."

Among those strategies utilized to draw attention to local businesses is a contract between the Chamber of Commerce and TV34 that allows merchants a special place on the airwaves. The channel features informational programs that focus on a different business each month.

"It's an opportunity for them to showcase who they are and what services they bring to the community," Township Administrator

Roselle Park BOE looks to fill two vacant seats

By Paul Greulich
Staff Writer

ROSELLE PARK — The local Board of Education is working to fill two open seats following the announcement by longtime member and Board President Kenneth Iachio that he is resigning effective Aug. 31 in order to comply with a state law aimed at preventing nepotism.

A second seat was already open following the June 20 resignation of Nancy Kinloch, who moved out of town. Iachio's resignation comes as a result of regulations passed by the Department of Education in 2008 that stipulate a relative of a current employee cannot be hired in the same school district.

As Iachio explained at a recent public meeting, his niece will be taking a job at a local school. By law either he or she must abandon their place with the district to avoid a conflict of interest.

Iachio said he agrees with the policy, which is intended to combat nepotism.

"It wasn't a difficult decision," Iachio said. "But I wish I could have waited until my term expired. I don't like quitting in the middle of something."

Iachio's term would have expired in April of 2011.

Board member Alexander Balaban was less content with the law.

"They don't take into account the size of the school districts or extenuating circumstances," Balaban said. "They made the condition so restrictive it could be considered unfair in certain aspects."

According to a spokesman for the NJ School Boards Association, Mike Yaple, this regulation has a very broad definition of "relative" that includes spouses, parents, uncles, nieces, half-brothers, step-parents, stepchildren, adopted family members and civil union parents.

"It may have caused problems locally if, for instance, someone feels their pool of candidates is being limited," Yaple said. "There may be complaints but we haven't seen anything formal yet."

Yaple said a school board intending to pursue such a hiring anyway must make the case to the DOE that there are no other appropriate candidates. The county superintendent would ultimately decide if the hire in question was appropriate.

Iachio, a borough resident since 1984, joined the board in 1995. He was off the board for three years before returning in 2001.

Superintendent of Schools

Patrick Spagnoletti said Iachio will be missed.

"In the seven years I've been in Roselle Park, I haven't found a more ardent supporter of our students than Mr. Iachio," Spagnoletti said.

Iachio said he feels he is leaving the district in a better state than he found it.

"I have nothing but fond memories of the board," he said.

Iachio said the transferring of eighth grade students from the high school to the middle school as his proudest accomplishment. Iachio said he plans to remain active in the community. He serves as coach and treasurer for the local little league as well as president of the Roselle Park Dad's Club, a fundraising organization. School officials are working to fill both seats and expects to make a decision at the Sept. 7 meeting.

"At that point, we should have an idea of the volume of interest in these seats," Balaban said. "I'm hoping we'll have candidates to interview that evening. Otherwise we'll be starting the school year with a seven-member board."

By law the board has 65 days to fill an open seat. After this period, the matter is forwarded to the county superintendent.

Union toughens stance on 'illegal' students

By Paul Greulich
Staff Writer

UNION — School and township officials concerned about the problem of non-resident students in the district's schools are taking a more aggressive stance toward these violations.

The new plan, as outlined by Mayor Anthony Terrezza and Superintendent of Schools Patrick Martin, centers on a more organized enforcement and legal action from the township prosecutor.

Terrezza said stealing local services from Union taxpayers will not be tolerated.

"These kids are going to be thrown out as soon as we know it," Terrezza said. "We're going to go after the parents criminally."

Those non-domiciled students positively identified will be expelled and their parents will receive a $12,000 fine for each year their child was illegally attending the township's schools. The estimated cost to educate a child for one year in the Union School District is approximately $12,000. Individuals will be prosecuted in cases of non-payment.

People living in Union who allowed non-resident students to use their address will face the same fines, Martin said.

"Sometimes, we'll find there is a grandmother, a cousin or friend who knowingly allows the child to claim their address," Martin said.

No new personnel will be hired to enforce the residency requirements, but local and county police will give the existing investigators surveillance training. The district will also invest in surveillance cameras. Tactics used by investigators can include following children home, waiting outside residences in other towns and following vehicles. The district will also follow up on tips more aggressively.

"It's a bold step for the township but I think it's going to work," Terrezza said.

Martin was also optimistic.

"In the past there wasn't as much organized support as far as a legal remedy to this," Martin said. "I think there wasn't enough of a deterrent."

Terrezza said almost 100 such students were identified last year, and Martin noted the total number of non-resident students currently in the district could be much higher.

"There could be hundreds of these students in our schools. We don't know the exact number," Martin said.

At the Aug. 10 Township Committee meeting, town officials discussed the new strategy with the public. Residents upset by rising taxes responded favorably to the renewed efforts to combat the draining of services by out of town students.

Martin noted that town hall has always been supportive of previous efforts to curtail this problem.

"We're just stepping up the efforts," Martin said. "If this doesn't work we're going to step it up even more. But we're going to stop this practice."

State probe investigates county prosecutor offices

By Cheryl Hehl
Staff Writer

The following is the second part in a series.

The table has turned on prosecutor offices throughout the state. Now it's their turn to be investigated.

Over the next five months a commission appointed by Gov. Chris Christie in July will determine if the state should takeover prosecutor's offices in 21 counties statewide. Their charge is to delve into everything from how these offices spend tax dollars and the number of cases prosecuted, to discovering if there is overstaffing.

The governor empowered the commission to use any and all state personnel, as well as experts in the private sector to accomplish the task they have been charged with completing by Dec. 15.

When Christie signed the executive order establishing the commission, he said that prosecutors often have their own separate operating structure, resulting in "inefficiencies, administrative redundancies, caseload discrepancies and inconsistent salary compensation among county offices." But, for those working within the prosecutorial system, the answer is tied up in the legal system.

According to Union County Prosecutor's Office Communications Director John Holl, cases often take more than a year to work their way through the prosecutorial system, which can present a distorted view of the number of cases handled.

With a budget of $19.3 million in 2009 and 260 employees, the Union County Prosecutor's Office handles all issues relating to, or involved with prosecuting crimes. There are 62 assistant prosecutors working for 25 divisions, each making a salary of $58,399 to $148,793 a year, with 26 of that number earning more than $100,000. Assisting them are 68 county investigators earning $70,827 to $139,230 annually, with the average salary range approximately $95,000 a year. The chief of county investigators, Robert Buccino, who oversees all investigators, earns $160,000 each year.

In 2009 the administrative services unit, which handles records and evidence, received and secured evidence in 176 criminal cases involving 225 defendants. This office also maintains an inventory of weapons and is responsible for destroying seized weapons.

UCPO 'strikes' back against drug trafficking

By Cheryl Hehl
Staff Writer

When it comes to guns, gangs, drugs and violent crime, the Union County Prosecutor's Office has a strike force of professionals who work in and out of the state.

The primary goal of the unit that used to be called the Narcotic Strike Force is to work with local, state and federal law enforcement agencies, both in New Jersey and out of state. Their primary charge is to investigate and prosecute people involved with illegal drug trafficking.

This division of the Union County Prosecutor's Office is the oldest countywide, multi-jurisdictional narcotic strike force in the state of New Jersey, established in 1971. This unit has the largest field unit within the prosecutor's office, comprised of five full-time assistant prosecutors and detectives.

The enforcement effort in the Guns, Gangs, Drugs and Violent Crimes Task force is two-phased in that the priority of the task force is to identify and arrest mid-level and upper level drug dealers operating in the county. The second phase is assisting municipal police departments with disrupting open-air, street level drug distribution activities.

In 2009, this division conducted 30 investigations resulting in 49 arrests and substantial seizures of cocaine, heroin, marijuana, prescription legend drugs, PCP and hallucinogenic mushrooms. There were also 31 court ordered wiretaps, according to the Prosecutor's Office 2009 annual report.

In one case in 2009, for example, there was a three-month wiretapping investigation. Dubbed "Operation Red Zone," this investigation involved a significant cocaine distribution being conducted by members of the "793" set of the Bloods street gang.

According to the prosecutor's office annual report, "this was a particularly violent set of Bloods" suspected of being involved in several shooting incidents and homicides in Elizabeth.

In the end there were 13 search warrants executed, 19 arrests and the seizure of in excess of three kilograms of cocaine, 16 "bricks" of heroin, three handguns that were fully loaded, $82,000 in cash and three vehicles. And this is just one example of how guns, gangs, drugs and violent crime goes down in Union County.

Springfield Town Council takes steps to form SID

By Cheryl Hehl
Staff Writer

SPRINGFIELD — The township may not be the first to start a Special Improvement District, but thanks to those who kicked off the effort 25 years ago, there is a template available.

The governing body took the first step in the process of forming a SID last week when they voted unanimously to spend $12,000 to hire Beth Lippman of Downtown Resources, Inc. to begin planning the district.

According to Township Administrator Anthony Cancro, the township has been discussing the idea of SID for about six months.

"We have bounced all kinds of ideas around, but this is the first step in trying to market and bring foot traffic to the downtown as well as make the building improvements that are needed," he explained.

A SID generates revenue from a special assessment paid by business owners. A special assessment is essentially a levy or tax on business owners that benefits from the project. The money raised from the special assessment is then used to make improvements in the business district. But SID services are a supplement to, not a replacement for, municipal services.

Cranford was the first municipality in the state to consider a SID when the downtown began to look rundown in the early 1980's. By 1985, according to the Edward J. Bloustein School of Planning and Public Policy, Cranford was convinced revitalization would pay off, launching a five-year plan for the central business district.

While the effort was not easy initially because business owners were wary of paying a special assessment tax on top of regular taxes, eventually they signed on and a SID was established. Currently, there are 69 SIDs in 53 communities in New Jersey and seven in Union county. In addition to Cranford, the municipalities of Summit, Linden, Elizabeth, Rahway, Union and Westfield have viable and successful SIDs.

Cancro agreed that Springfield is at the early stages of forming a SID, and there are miles to go. For example, the boundaries of the proposed SID have yet to be determined.

"We have Route 22, Morris Avenue and the downtown area to consider in all of this," he said, explaining this is a process and each step of the process has to be taken carefully.

"We have to create a committee of businesses who will decide what they want, figure out what that will cost and then factor in an assessment," Cancro said.

The ultimate goal, he said, is drawing more businesses to Springfield and making improvements to the already established businesses.

"Beth Lippman is the catalyst in all this, with her help and experience we can begin the process the right way," the administrator said. While he admits $12,000 is a lot of money to spend for her services, Cancro and the governing body believe it will be worth every penny spent.

Lippman will plan the district, which would be overseen by an advisory board. In Cranford, that board is the called the Downtown Management Corporation, which administers the SID.

Early on, Cranford brought aboard a downtown manager to market the downtown and plan events to draw foot traffic to the main shopping district.

Cranford may have a 25-year track record with a SID, but not all of it has been easy. In 1999 the township decided to tackle a major downtown redevelopment project that generated several lawsuits and divided the governing body along party lines. Today, the downtown has a 4.8 percent vacancy rate and the district is doing well. Neighboring Westfield has a 5 percent vacancy rate.

With 169 first floor retail spaces, there are only eight vacancies, according to a representative in the Cranford DMC office.

Cancro said the bottom line is that the township forms the SID through an ordinance, but from that point on, their only involvement in the process is to approve the annual budget.

H1N1 virus has 'run its course'

Officials say swine flu pandemic is over, but flu shots are still important

By Cheryl Hehl
Staff Writer

UNION — The H1N1 virus, or swine flu, appears to have run its course. But Union Health Officer John Ferraioli said this does not mean residents should skip their seasonal flu shot.

Last week the World Health Organization officially put an end to the 2009-2010 H1N1 swine flu pandemic, announcing the virulent influenza of last year had "largely run its course." At last tally, 18,449 people died from H1N1 or "swine flu" worldwide, according to WHO.

Ferraioli said those who did not receive an H1N1 shot last year should not panic because the H1N1 virus is one of three viruses that will be included in the seasonal flu shot this fall. Not that he is overly concerned about the possibility another outbreak similar to the one in the spring of 2009.

"We have not had any outbreaks of H1N1 and actually, there have only been sporadic requests over the last six months for the shot," the township health officer said.

Ferraioli did suggest that if residents requested the H1N1 immunization, his office would either arrange for the shot or direct residents to where they can get it. While he has not received calls so far from concerned parents requesting a shot for their college-bound students, he is prepared for those calls.

"Most colleges are set up to provide the H1N1 shot and the seasonal flu shot," Ferraioli said.

Parents can also call the college to inquire if the shot is available or if a student should get it prior to leaving.

According to WHO director Gen. Margaret Chan, the world is now in the post-pandemic phase of the illness, but that does not mean the virus has gone away. However, based on experience with past pandemics, Chan expects the H1N1 virus to assume the same characteristics as seasonal flu viruses and continue to circulate for several years to come.

For Ferraioli, this was welcome news because last year at this time, the headlines were not as encouraging. He, along with other health officers in Union County and throughout the state, were preparing to launch an immunization effort on a scale that was unprecedented in New Jersey.

Earlier in the spring of 2009, outbreaks of H1N1 in the schools raised concern among state and federal health officials, as well as local health officers whose offices fielded mounting daily calls from worried parents. Ferraioli said he wasted no time setting up a command center of teams and laid out a plan of action for the township.

"We realized in the very beginning that children, young adults and pregnant women were at greater risk of getting the H1N1 virus, so we set up a task force that could handle the massive number of immunizations that would be needed," the health officer explained.

Ferraioli said the Union Health Department immunized 7,000-8,000 people against the H1N1 virus during the pandemic period. That includes immunizations in Kenilworth also, he said, because the township health department oversees borough health services.

Although many municipalities did not use all the vaccine sent by the state, that was not the case in Union. Not only did he use the allotted number of doses provided by the state, but he also had to tap into the county reserve at one point.

Ferraioli credits the schools for working with him to ensure the most vulnerable of both communities served by the township health department were immunized. Armed with a $149,000 grant from the state, the health officer was able to initiate a full-scale immunization effort that included all the schools in both Union and Kenilworth.

"We actually held 47 clinics, four of which were community wide," he said, adding that this effort would never have succeeded without the cooperation of the schools.

The schools, Ferraioli said, sent fliers home with students, along with consent forms and general information about the H1N1 vaccine.

"This worked out very well so we were able to go into the schools, immunize students and provide the protection required during this pandemic," Ferraioli added. The health officer also oversaw immunizations at all parochial, private and nursery schools.

"With so many children and adults getting the shot, that interfered with the virus getting out of control in both communities," Ferraioli said.

The health officer said the pandemic was an excellent learning experience for all health departments because it put their feet to the fire.

"We now know we can handle pandemic of this size, and that can only help us in the future," he said.

Police departments to crack down on drunk drivers

Police departments throughout the state including Cranford, Roselle Park and Linden will be cracking down on drunk drivers as part of the summer 2010 "Over the Limit, Under Arrest" campaign between Friday and Sept. 6.

The local departments recently received a $4,400 grant each from the New Jersey Division of Highway Traffic Safety for overtime enforcement during this two-week campaign.

A concentrated national effort, the campaign helps to raise awareness about the dangers of drinking and driving through high-visibility enforcement and public education tools, including posters, banners and mobile video displays signs.

The Roselle Park Police Department will be cracking down on drunk drivers between Saturday and Aug. 27.

Roselle Park Police Chief Paul W. Morrison stated that in addition to the DWI check points there will also be mobile patrols, which will be designated to target drunk drivers on the roadways throughout the borough.

Launched nationally in 1999, the program works to combat drunk driving during some of the busiest travel times of the year, including the summer months.

"There is simply no excuse to drink and drive," said Pam Fischer, director of the Division of Highway Traffic Safety. "Even one drink can impair your judgement and reaction time, creating a potentially dangerous situation not only for yourself, but everyone on the road."

Last year in New Jersey, 185 people were killed as a result of alcohol-related crashes. That number represents 31 percent of the 583 traffic fatalities reported in the state in 2009. In addition, 67 of those alcohol-related fatalities occurred during the summer travel season.

The Cranford and Linden police departments will be joining other law enforcement agencies throughout the state participating in the Over the Limit, Under Arrest 2010 crackdown. Police offer the following advice:

- If you plan to drink, choose a designated driver before going out.
- Take mass transit, a taxi, or ask a sober friend to drive you home.
- Spend the night where the activity is held.
- Report impaired drivers to law enforcement. In New Jersey, drivers may dial #77 to report a drunk driver or aggressive driver.
- Always buckle up, every ride. It's your best defense against an impaired driver.
- If you're intoxicated and traveling on foot, the safest way to get home is to take a cab or have a sober friend drive you to your doorstep.

Roselle Library will close for three days

Roselle Public Library will be closed to the public for three days in the coming months, as part of a response to funding cuts at both the state and local level. The library's furlough days are different from those set by the borough of Roselle.

The closed days will be: Nov. 24, the day before Thanksgiving; Dec. 23, the day before the Christmas holidays and April 21, the day before Good Friday, when the library is normally closed. All three days were selected based on a review of circulation statistics, which indicated that these days would inconvenience the public the least.

The furlough days were negotiated as part of an agreement with Local 32 of the Office and Professional Employees International Union. In addition to the days, staff voted to postpone a contractual increase for six months. Also, one part-time staff member was laid off, and a second had a reduction in hours.

Anthony Esposito, president of the Roselle Public Library Board of Trustees, said "All of us at the library recognize that, as part of local government, we need to tighten our belt and cut back on expenses. We are grateful that we were able to reach an accommodation with Local 32 that preserves our services to the public and positions us to continue improvements when the economy gets better."

Library Director Keith McCoy pointed out that while the budget cuts also impacted the materials budget and operating costs, the library's hours would not be cut.

The Roselle library is located at the corner of Chestnut Street and West Fourth Avenue. The library is open four evenings during the week, including Fridays. For information, call the library at 908-245-5809, or visit www.lmxac.org/roselle.

PBA welcomes Arc of Union County branch to Springfield

By Paul Greulich
Staff Writer

SPRINGFIELD — A new branch of the Arc of Union County in Springfield has received a warm welcome from the local PBA, which last week donated a basketball hoop to the organization's new facility on Fadem Road.

The Arc, a non-profit organization dedicated to promoting care and support for people with developmental disabilities and their families, has long maintained its county headquarters in Springfield. The new building, which just became operational three months ago, is adjacent to it.

Director of Behavioral Support and Services Yami Justiniano said the hoop will surely be put to good use, as many people cared for at the facility enjoy playing basketball.

"The donation is a wonderful show of support from the community," Justiniano said. "This is a wonderful opportunity to get our individuals outside to play a sport they enjoy."

PBA Vice President Erik Knudsen said the PBA holds a variety of fundraising events throughout the year to help finance purchases such as this.

"We're happy to donate it," Knudsen said. "Our association is based on donations. We try to keep it in town."

The project began just months ago when a parent of one of the individuals using the program noted the building had no basketball hoop and set about contacting the PBA to see if there was interest in providing one. The hoop, which was obtained for $150 and assembled and delivered by Springfield DPW workers, can be adjusted from eight to 10 feet tall.

Affiliated with both the New Jersey and National Arc, The Arc of Union County operates 30 buildings throughout the county, including camps, day programs and schools. Debbie Dreher, director of community relations for the Arc of Union County, said leasing and preparing the new building allowed the organization to consolidate three programs in Cranford and Scotch Plains into one new location next to the Arc's main office. This process required some work but helped increase the ease and efficiency of the operations, she said. The Springfield behavioral day program serves 31 individuals. The program teaches self-help and vocational skills that can increase the independence of people living with these disabilities.

"The hope is that one day some will be able to handle going to a work center," Justiniano said.

State investigates prosecutors

Task Force unit. This unit investigates all homicide cases, police shootings, suspicious deaths and murder-suicides. In 2009 there were 12 homicides in Union County. Of these 12 cases, there were eight shootings, two stabbings, two cases of blunt force trauma and one homicide-suicide. In addition there were 39 motor vehicle accidents resulting in 42 deaths and another 22 suspicious deaths for other reasons.

Nine trials resulted from these cases. The Pre-disposition Conference Unit reviews the majority of cases in Union county involving second, third and fourth degree criminal charges. The goal of this unit, according to the prosecutor's office 2009 annual report, is to resolve as many cases as possible prior to grand jury action.

In 2009, more than 5,700 cases were reviewed by the unit, which is overseen by five experienced assistant prosecutors. Cases are disposed of through the plea negotiation process, administrative dismissals, admission to the pre-trial intervention program, drug court program or sent back to municipal court. Three assistant prosecutors are responsible for presenting cases to a grand jury. In 2009, cases involving 1,596 defendants were presented to a grand jury, resulting in 1,590 defendants being indicted.

However, prior to grand jury action, 1,556 defendants pleaded guilty. Interestingly, approximately 1,525 defendant cases were downgraded or administratively dismissed in 2009 by the grand jury unit.

When and if cases move to trial, there are 10 assistant prosecutors, assigned in teams of two to five criminal courts. As a result of pre-trial conferences, in 2009, 75 percent of all indicted defendants entered pleas of guilty.

Of the 58 cases going on to trial in 2009, those handled by the trial team included burglary, robbery, aggravated assault, unlawful possession of weapons, eluding law enforcement, receiving stolen property and drug offenses.

Other units, such as the Auto Theft Task Force, address the problem of "the extremely high rates of car theft in Union County," according to the prosecutor's office annual report. Since 1991, when the task force was formed, more than 7,500 stolen vehicles have been recovered by this unit, resulting in 3,800 arrests. In 2009, the task force recovered 348 stolen vehicles and made 38 arrests.

Three assistant prosecutors and two investigators are assigned to the sex crimes unit, which in 2009, screened 182 sexual assault cases from 21 municipalities. Complaints were issued in 45 of those cases and 18 defendants were indicted for first or second degree sexual assault. Three jury trials resulted from those indictments.

The domestic violence unit has two full time assistant prosecutors who handled 242 restraining order violation cases in 2009. Of these cases, there were 44 probation violations and 167 separate cases involving domestic violence and weapons.

Next week: Union County LocalSource will examine how the Union County Prosecutor's Office compares to the 20 other offices in the state.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

The time to plan begins now

Last week, word came from the state treasurer that municipalities and school districts should not expect increases in state aid during the next budget year. This news was not well-received by the school districts and educators. The inflationary costs of items such as textbooks and energy will affect the services educators provide and, likely, the taxes that must be raised.

School district officials cried "Foul!" earlier this year when then-new Gov. Chris Christie suddenly pulled state aid from school districts which had what he called "excess" surpluses. He followed that by proposing a reduction in state aid equal to 5 percent of each district's budget.

For some school districts, that meant the elimination of aid for the 2011 fiscal year, which began July 1. Municipalities did not fare much better. They lost approximately $450 million in state aid for the 2011 fiscal year.

It would be easy to cry, "Woe is us!" as officials in some districts and municipalities have begun to do. But we believe the budget process could go more smoothly as officials now have an good estimate of their aid for next year.

If municipal and school property taxes are not increased, level state funding could mean reductions in services or per-sonnel due to inflation. But now is the time to make that determination, not in the few weeks before a budget must be pre-sented to the public.

Residents and property owners also have complained about a lack of communication between local officials and the people. This early budget-preparation process would be a good time to improve those relations. Our suggestion: provide this year's proposed budget online or in print. Ask residents and property owners for budget-reduction suggestions. Some may be off-the-wall, but many could have merit.

Officials in our municipalities and school districts have been given information that, while not official at this time, gives them an approximate expectation of state aid for the 2012 fiscal year and municipal officials should have this mes-sage in the back of their minds.

School officials have eight months before budgets must be presented. That is ample time to adjust assets, staffing, servic-es and other expenses.

Now is the time to plan.

WELCOME TO WASHINGTON — Rep. Leonard Lance, R-7, met recently with the Bendoroth family of Cranford in his Capitol Hill office. As part of their visit to Washington, the Bendoroth family met with Lance and also took a tour of the United States Capitol Building. Lance regularly meets with New Jersey families visiting Washington, D.C. Pictured are Lance, center, with members of the Bendoroth Family including Tricia, Patrick, 7, Casey, 7, Chris Jr., 9 and Chris.

Basically just doing as expected

Rep. Leonard Lance, congressman for the 7th District, which runs through the heart of Union County, voted the party line last week in opposing a $268 million infusion of last minute Federal Aid, to prevent teacher layoffs in the state.

The sponsor of the legislation, Sen. Frank Launtenberg said, "This measure is a win for New Jersey's children, economy and public schools. This funding will assist local school districts that are stretched beyond their limits."

Lance, a member of the Republican minority in the House of Representatives took a different stance. He called it, "fiscally irresponsible" adding, "these federal bailouts exacerbate state and local funding problems by spurring drastic budget shortfalls once the federal funds run out and enabling states to avoid the tough budgetary choices necessary to live within their financial means."

It was at this point, with the ability to bring an estimated 56 teachers back in his district alone, that Leonard Lance got to experience the joy of the minority.

Lance was able to gain cover from the aggressive tea party activists in his district, none to happy with his moderate voting record.

Lance still gets the comfort of knowing that the teachers will be back at work and he won't really share in the criticism of his no vote.

Lance's opponent, Ed Potosnak, ran out to Hillsborough charging

Left Out

By Frank Capece

that Lance "sided yet again with radical Republicans and voted to put more workers on the unemployment rolls and cut the vital education programs and services that move America from the classroom to the workforce." His remarks got barely a notice.

Lance ignored the Potosnak attack, while holding town meetings in Summit and Roselle Park. He left his light work to his chief of staff Todd Mitchell, who said of Potosnak, "We'll be happy to talk about what his majority has done to kill jobs around the country."

This time around Lance got the benefits without having to carry heavy water. As one prominent Democrat in the county quipped after reading the Wall Street Journal predictions of Democratic Congressional losses in the fall, "Poor Leonard, he may actually have to take the consequences for his votes next year."

Knights of Columbus 4054

The members of the Union Township Knights of Columbus gathered last Saturday at St. Michael's Church on Kelly Street to pay homage to the anniversary ending of World War II 65 years ago.

They walked often with canes.

The women seemed partial to summer white which, to a lady, was immaculate. The 100 or so who took part in the church mass are members of the so called "greatest generation."

Thanks to the effective efforts of the Knights Lodge 4504 there were even actual newspapers provided of the end of the conflicts in the church. After the communion ceremony, these real life heroes posed for a picture. They understand the matter of their dwindling numbers which are victims to a greater force than axis powers — that of age. The Knights deserve an "A" for a moving ceremony. As was said about the veterans, they gave those of us who came later wonderful opportunities — we could really not ask for more.

It's good to be in Union County

Up north in the state, they are gearing up for spraying the first adult mosquito control initiative. They blame it on the early summer rains and the high humidity.

Speaking last week with Sebastian D'Elia, the public information spokesman for the County, we appear to be in better shape. While our public works guys have been doing their job, the hot, dry weather seems to have destroyed the spawning grounds for bloodsucker mosquitoes who also bring a danger of West Nile virus. We actually appear to be in good shape at this point.

An attorney, Frank Capece is a resident of Cranford.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Can you hear me now?

To the Editor:

On several occasions I have attempted to watch, and hear, the Rahway City Council meetings on television. It seems that even with the volume at its highest I am unable to hear what is going on.

I find it hard to believe that in this day and age of super sensitive microphones we can't hear the audio. Are they unaware of this problem or is this deliberate?

Thomas Cusmano
Rahway

A successful event

To the Editor:

I want to take this opportunity to publicly thank the many people who contributed to the success of the Kenilworth Public Library's first summer reading club LibraryFest.

Platinum sponsors for this event included the Friends of the Kenilworth Public Library and the Pat Malfetti Memorial Fund. General sponsors included: Mary Pat Amorski, Jim Capasso Jr., Susan Galves, John Genega, Eileen LoBianco, Lucille Lucadema, the Ortega Family and Carol Pappas. Special thanks also goes to the Wyss family for procuring a donation of soft drinks from the Pepsi Beverage Company.

Those families who attended LibraryFest recognized that an event of this magnitude could not be carried out without the assistance of a large group of ready, willing and able volunteers. Our very capable team of helpers included Donna Astone, Laura Astone, Jim Capasso, Dolores Graham, Debbie Grispart, Christine Grispart, Mary Ellen Harris, Rita Iannarelli, Emma Lucadema, Karen Lucadema, Ken Lucadema, Lucille Lucadema, Barbara Morison, Carol Pappas, Dottie Soltys and Anne Stelzer.

However, what the families who attended LibraryFest may not have noticed were the behind the scenes efforts on the part of members of the library staff that were necessary to make LibraryFest the success that it was. Virtually every member of the library staff was involved, whether it was with taking registrations, answering questions, or actually being there to help out on the evening of LibraryFest. Special "shout outs" go to Kathleen Czarniecki, senior library assistant, for designing and preparing 240 LibraryFest "tickets" and to library maintenance worker Tony Cocuzza for making sure that the library bore no traces of the yummy ice cream and cotton candy that were a featured part of the event. Finally, it is important to acknowledge the outstanding work that Robin Koerner, coordinator of Children's Services put into making LibraryFest the success that it was. That "Miss Robin" puts her heart and soul into all the children's programming is clearly evident and the library is fortunate indeed to have her on our "team."

Lastly, I want to thank the parents and children who make coming to the Kenilworth Public Library part of their regular routine. It is a documented fact that children who read or are read to during the summer months return to school in a position of strength relative to their classmates for whom books were not a regular part of their summer vacation experience. The entire community benefits when the children who are our readers today grow into our leaders of tomorrow.

Dale Spindel
Kenilworth Public Library Director

The positive and negative

To the Editor:

Cranford's Township Committee has just finished a long and grueling budget process. The budget that was passed is an unusually important one, and Cranford's residents should be aware of its overall content.

From the perspective of the present, the budget had one major plus and two major minuses. The plus was that the township was able to avoid laying off any municipal employees.

The first minus was that in order to evade the state mandated 4 percent cap on spending increases, the committee employed a gimmick — namely separating the Rahway Valley sewerage fee from Cranford's property tax. Up until now, the sewerage fee has been part of the municipal taxes, which meant that this sewerage fee could be deducted on our income taxes. Separating the sewerage fee from the municipal tax allowed the Township Committee to get around the 4 percent spending cap, but the separation also lost residents the ability to claim the fee as a deduction against their income tax. In addition, homeowners are now going to have to write a second check every quarter for their sewerage.

The second major minus is that the increase of the combined tax bill — property tax and sewerage fee — comes to 9.4 percent. This is an extraordinarily high amount when the state was calling for increases of no more than 4 percent, the economy is still in bad shape and taxpayers are struggling with already high property taxes.

Looking to the future, the situation is even worse. First, economic forecasts for 2011 are not good, with growth expected to be small to minuscule; meaning that we are likely to face the same fiscal problems next year that we did this one. Second, it looks like the state cap on spending will be decreased from the existing 4 percent to 2 percent. Third, the gimmick that we used this year to technically meet, but substantively evade, the spending cap will not be available next year.

In short, Cranford's fiscal structural problems were not addressed in this year's budget. Instead, they were put off until next year. Unfortunately, thanks to the smaller budget cap, these structural problems will be even worse in 2011.

'New breed' Republicans

To the Editor:

Just two days after we had to wade through Roseanne Santorelli-Barone's propaganda piece about how unemployment was a "whopping" 35 percent, the government figures for July were 9.5 percent higher.

She quoted the treasonous Heritage Foundation. The HF has consistently pimped the right wing Republican tirade to cut taxes and let the supply side take care of the deficit. Pure Bernie Madoff School of Economics. The HF has constantly lived in the dream world that the "private sector" can solve all our ills. That is the same private sector that wants absolutely "no" regulations of any type constricting the "freedom" of doing your own thing. Note how "freedom" is two words — everything "free" as long as someone else is "dumb" enough to pay for it. This is the new breed Republicans for you.

Then she has the gall to pillory our good President Barack Obama for not straightening out the entire mess in 500 days.

The Cheney/Bush years were particularly bad as big oil Cheney continues to try to destroy energy-efficient, home-fueled, environmentally (friendly) Amtrak and rail transit to satisfy his big oil buddies. The US Department of Transportation has constantly reported that road users pay 7 cents of their infrastructure needs while rail freight shippers pay 99½ cents, Amtrak passengers pay 75 cents and NJ Transit riders pay 55 cents. Put another way, real estate taxes would drop 20 percent if the abysmally low gas tax was increased. Yes, gas costs a lot in Europe because the drivers actually pay for the roads they use. And Europe and everywhere else including Saudi Arabia has a world class rail transit system, so if you don't have a car, you are not stranded as you are here.

Tips to reduce mosquito habitats

The Kenilworth Health Officer is advising residents to protect themselves from mosquitoes by reducing mosquito habitats around their homes. Under the right environmental conditions, certain species of mosquitoes can develop and emerge as adults in as little as one week. More importantly, some species of adult mosquitoes can carry and transmit diseases such as West Nile virus, eastern equine encephalitis and St. Louis encephalitis.

Due to the recent rainfall and flooding, there may be more mosquito-breeding habitats. Small amounts of stagnant water provide an ideal location for mosquitoes to lay their eggs. Residents play an important role in mosquito control by eliminating habitats where mosquitoes breed by following these tips:

- Cleaning roof gutters at least annually.
- Remove any unnecessary containers from the property such as flower pots/trays, tires, toys, boats and buckets.

- Drain and rinse birdbaths twice a week.
- Aerate and/or stock ornamental ponds with fish.
- Configure tarps to drain any incidental rainwater.
- Close pools when not in use. Pool covers can collect rainwater and provide a habitat for mosquitoes.

In addition, residents should:

- Avoid mosquito-infested areas at dusk and dawn, when mosquitoes are most active.
- Wear protective clothing such as long pants and long sleeve shirts when outdoors.
- Wear insect repellent, preferably one that contains DEET, Picaridin or oil of lemon eucalyptus. Always follow label directions.
- Make sure that doors and windows have tight-fitting screens. Repair or replace screens that have tears or holes.

For information contact the Kenilworth Health Department at 908-276-2740 or go to boardofhealth@kenilworthnj.org.

Two RP police officers injured during arrest

Shanae Spivey, 31, of Roselle Park was arrested on Aug. 12 at 9:48 a.m. on Chestnut street after police responded to a report of a woman walking up and down the street singing and dancing.

Officers located this individual, identified as Spivey, inside a liquor store drinking from a bottle of soda she refused to pay for. Spivey was allegedly found to be in possession of a large can of pepper spray, which police reported she grabbed at. Police informed Spivey she was under arrest and attempted to remove the can from her hand.

Spivey resisted arrest and a struggle ensued. Spivey allegedly used a large key to scratch Sgt. Peter Picarelli's left arm causing a 14-inch laceration. She also bit Picarelli on his right arm, causing puncture wounds. Patrolman Michael Smith suffered a twisted ankle in the course of the struggle.

Spivey was eventually handcuffed and transported to police headquarters. She was charged with resisting arrest, aggravated assault with a weapon, aggravated assault, two counts of possession of a weapon, unlawful possession of a weapon and aggravated assault on a law enforcement officer.

Picarelli and Smith were treated for their injuries and returned to duty.

PREVENTING CAT-ASTROPHE

New parents are advised to look at their home from a child's point of view when baby proofing; the same is true for new kitten owners. Keeping in mind that kittens are active, playful, and highly curious, take a look at Kitty's new home through the eyes of a cat. Cats love to bat at moving objects, and cords such as those found on drapes, telephones, and computer can be irresistible. However, they also pose a strangulation risk. Many common household plants are toxic yet delicious-looking to cats. Do the research, and make sure any houseplants are harmless. Pest poisons and any object small enough to ingest are potential land mines and should be put away before bringing Kitty home.

With today's modern veterinary medicine, you can expect to share your life with your cat for sixteen years or more. At TLC PET DOCTOR, we have years of experience, and we pride ourselves on our education. We invite you to come to 1326 Stuyvesant ave., Union and introduce us to your pet. We know we'll get along just fine. To schedule a check-up call 908-686-7080. We will always do our best to keep your pet healthy with the most up to date care. Our services include geriatric care, radiology, wellness and preventive medicine, and many more. We provide exotic pet and bird medicine, as well as diagnostic services offered on site.

HINT: Try spraying bitter apple, a non-toxic pet detergent, on tempting yet dangerous objects.

RVSA members face 17 percent increase

By Cheryl Hehl
Staff Writer

First, from 2005 to 2009 the Rahway Valley Sewerage Authority threw parties on the taxpayers' dime. Then, member towns collectively paid $30 million for a cogeneration plant that was called "worthless." Last month, the 14 member towns heard that rates could go up 17 percent in 2011.

The taxpayers' tab soared even higher this month when it was discovered that the auditing firm, hired to find out why the cogen plant was worthless, sent bills for more than $1 million.

Clark Mayor Sal Bonaccorso admitted he was "outraged" the first time he heard about the bills Joseph Cipolla sent to RVSA since last year. Cipolla is the independent auditor hired by RVSA to find out who was to blame for the $30 million cogen plant that is "worthless."

Bonaccorso is now hoping that when all is said and done, and the legal wrangling is over, the 14 member towns paying RVSA's tab will win back millions.

"I have to admit I was outraged when I heard the numbers and he works for us, the member towns," Bonaccorso said Monday. "I basically told Cipolla that I'm petrified of this becoming a money pit.

"We needed Cipolla to figure out what went wrong and without him we don't have the proof we need in court," added the Clark mayor, who has been fighting behind the scenes for more than a year to reign in RVSA spending.

"A million is a lot of money to pay for this guy, but in the end if we get back $30 to 35 million then it will be worth it," Bonaccorso said, referring to the fact RVSA is involved in an arbitration case against the bevy of contractors that built the cogen plant.

At RVSA's meeting last week, commissioners representing the 14 member towns authorized Cipolla's $199,000 June bill but capped

RAHWAY VALLEY SEWERAGE AUTHORITY MUNICIPAL ASSESSMENTS

UNION COUNTY MUNICIPALITY	2010 ASSESSMENTS	PROJECTED 2011 INCREASE
Township of Clark	$3.4 million	$578,000
Township of Cranford	$1.5 million	$255,000
Borough of Garwood	$602,296	$102,390
Borough of Kenilworth	$1.3 million	$226,100
Borough of Mountainside	$920,714	$156,521
City of Rahway	$2.7 million	$459,000
Borough of Roselle Park	$550,256	$93,543
Township of Springfield	$1.9 million	$323,000
Township of Westfield	$3.3 million	$595,000

The fees each participating municipality pays for the service of the Rahway Valley Sewerage Authority varies. In 2011, participating municipalities should expect a 17 percent increase in costs.

future monthly bills at $135,000.

Bills for Cipolla's firm, Cipolla & Co. of Franklin Lakes, have run consistently high since he began the investigative audit that RVSA ordered last year.

For example, in March, the month RVSA received a preliminary confidential report detailing how the cogen plant project went wrong, public records indicate Cipolla's bill came in at $199,700.

In late May, Union County LocalSource reported that Cipolla presented the preliminary confidential report to RVSA indicating the cogen plant was "worthless except for salvage value."

The eight-page report, dated March 29, provided detailed damage analysis by the certified accounting and litigation firm, pointing out that "the project was flawed from the start."

Cipolla, though, did not place the blame on RVSA. Instead, he said the engineering team, charged by RVSA with determining if the project was financially feasible, was at fault.

This team, comprised of six engineering firms, including Hatch Mott McDonald — one of the largest engineering firms in the world — was supposed to review all the design elements and potential cost savings.

The problem, Cipolla noted in the report, was that these firms have "minimal experience" with cogeneration plants and therefore "significantly overstated" the financial benefit and financial viability of the cogen facility.

Meanwhile, in July, Robert Materna, RVSA's treasurer and acting co-executive director, said surplus funds were down so low that the 14 members should get ready for at least a 17 percent hike in rates.

Materna chalked up the need for a rate increase to the cost of processing sewage and debt for the $250 million upgrade, which includes the cogen plant that has never operated.

A 17 percent increase by RVSA would impact each of the 14 members differently, depending on their sewerage use. For the nine towns in Union County, Clark would be hardest hit, adding $578,000 on top of a $3.4 million bill they have to pay this year.

Seeing the least impact from such an increase would be Roselle Park, who would see a $93,543 increase over the $585,457 they had to pay this year.

Springfield, on the other hand, who finally saw their RVSA bill go down in 2010 to $1.9 million after the $2.2 million they had to pay in 2009, would see their tab soar by $323,000.

Next month, a bill proposed by Assemblywoman Linda Stender, D-Union County, that would regulate authorities throughout the state, will go before the state legislature for approval.

Stender, who worked with mayors from several Union County municipalities on the bill, strongly believes authorities should be brought under the control of the Board of Public Utilities. She believes there will be bipartisan support for the bill because of the increasing problems towns throughout the state have had with authorities that have no oversight.

The grant will match funds to as much as $2,000, which has already been raised by 13-year old congregant Evan Horowitz of Chatham as part of his Bar Mitzvah service project. The grant money will be used to purchase audio equipment for the hearing impaired, make the building more wheelchair accessible, and help prevent sun glare for the visually sensitive. CBH is one of approximately 10 Jewish congregations to receive the grant money. For information, call 908-277-0200.

"The ability to follow along in the holy, ancient language can make the holiday experience much more meaningful," according to Cantor Steven Stern who will teach the course. "We will also learn to chant some of the most important and moving prayers of Rosh Hashanah and Yom Kippur, including the very soul-stirring Kol Nidre," Stern added. The course

'No Man's Land' not a bad place to be

By Ruth Ross
Correspondent

First, let me say that playwright Harold Pinter is not everyone's cup of tea. Indeed, his plays are filled with inscrutable characters, thorny plots and witty, often ironic, dialogue and long silences.

That said, one of his more difficult plays, "No Man's Land," now onstage at the Shakespeare Theatre of New Jersey in Madison, will have you scratching your head long after the lights finally go down. Not in a bad way, mind you, but as director Bonnie J. Monte averred in an audience "Talk Back" after Sunday's matinee performance, "No Man's Land" elicits a variety of interpretations, none of them definitive nor correct; the play is ultimately given meaning by the viewer or reader, or actor.

Running 90 minutes without an intermission, "No Man's Land" focuses on a poet, essayist and critic named Hurst who has invited Spooner, a poet he met in a pub on Hampstead Heath, to his home for a drink. The two men are in their 60s and appear to have been classmates at Oxford University. Spooner is gregarious, almost annoyingly so, as he rattles on while the more reticent Hurst looks bored. As the night unwinds, the two men continue to drink; Hurst becomes so inebriated that he falls down and crawls on his hands and knees out of the drawing room.

Thereupon enter two rather tuggish, lower classmen, Foster and Briggs, who appear to protect Hurst and "make life possible" for him.

The play's ending is rather amorphous: What will become of Hurst? Spooner? Who are these two men — their names change in the second act? What's it all about, Harold Pinter?

Monte has assembled a stellar cast to deliver Pinter's beautifully written dialogue. Edmond Genest is splendid as Hurst. Sherman Howard almost steals the show from his host; effusive, warm, charming, he's more alive but more annoying.

Derek Wilson plays Foster who immediately sets one's teeth on edge in the face of danger. Paul Mullins as Briggs/Dennison is even more intimidating; he appears to be in control of everything and everyone.

Production values match the polished production. Adam Miecielica's London drawing room/library telegraphs wealth and power. Hugh Hanson's costumes speak volumes about the characters who wear them. Hurst is nattily attired in bespoke suits, while Spooner's wrinkled, stained, ill-fitting suit telegraphs his economic situation. Foster's leather jacket is almost punk-like; Briggs' clothing is rather neutral, which doesn't let us get a handle on just who this guy is.

"No Man's Land" will be performed Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Sundays at 7:30 p.m.; Thursdays through Saturdays at 8 p.m.; and Saturdays and Sundays at 2 p.m. through Aug. 29.

Jimmy Buffet cover band plays in Clark

The Union County Summer Arts Festival concert series for 2010 concludes on Wednesday with a performance by Jimmy and the Parrots.

The Union County Board of Chosen Freeholders, led by Chairman Daniel P. Sullivan, invites the public to attend this free outdoor concert of popular music in the style of Jimmy Buffett, beginning at 7:30 p.m. at Oak Ridge Park in Clark.

Grab your beach chair or a blanket and embark on a musical trip to the islands with one of the most requested cover bands in the country.

Jimmy and the Parrots perform not only the great Buffett tunes, but also classic rock and popular songs by the likes of Paul Simon, the Beach Boys, Harry Belafonte and Bob Marley, too.

For more than nine years they've entertained music lovers in the West Indies, Jamaica, Key West and cities up and down the East Coast.

"Bring the entire family for an evening of beach party music in Oak Ridge Park," said Freeholder Chairman Sullivan. "Pack a picnic basket, bring lawn chairs or blankets to sit on, and enjoy the popular sounds of summer under the stars."

The Union County information van will be at the concert site with knowledgeable staff from the Union County Police, the Division of Emergency Management, and the Bureau of Environmental Health to answer questions and offer information about interesting activities and services available to Union County residents.

Lawn chairs, blankets and picnic baskets are encouraged. Refreshments and snacks will be available from vendors.

Lose yourself at Kean's newest theatrical production

Premiere Stages at Kean University is collaborating with Playwrights Theatre of New Jersey to produce Tammy Ryan's play, "Lost Boy Found in Whole Foods," from Sept. 2 to Sept. 19 in the Zella Fry Theatre on the Kean University campus, located at 1000 Morris Ave., Union.

In this timely new work, Gabriel, an optimistic former "lost boy" from Sudan meets Christine, a suburban mother in desperate need of attention and adventure. What begins as an unlikely friendship becomes an unbreakable bond that changes the pair and leads them to a better understanding of their place in the world.

Four-time Emmy Award Winner Kim Zimmer leads the accomplished professional cast that includes David Farrington, Jamil Mangan, Trish McCall, Warner Miller and Alexandra Rivera. John Pietrowski will direct. Best known as Reva Shayne on "Guiding Light," Zimmer is also an accomplished theatre actress, having starred off-Broadway in John Patrick Shanley's "Four Dogs and a Bone" and in numerous regional productions including "The Rainmaker," "Jake's Women," "Blood Brothers," "Dirty Blonde" and as Mama Rose in "Gypsy."

She has also appeared on "McGuyver," "Models Inc.," "Seinfeld," "Designing Women," and several films including "Body Heat."

Artistic Directors John Wooten and John Pietrowski have partnered to develop the play over the past eighteen months through a series of readings and workshops, as assisted by dramaturge Erica Nagel.

"The response has been incredible. It was clear to all involved that this was not a story that should be told, it was one that had to be told," said Wooten. The campus community agrees. The Human Rights Institute at Kean University, the Darfur Rehabilitation Project and the Kean Department of Theatre are collaborating with Premiere Stages and Playwrights Theatre to bring this important new work to the stage.

"We feel empowered to have such committed partners working with us to bring this important play to life. It is an amazing story and another example of how the arts often bring topical issues to the forefront," added Wooten.

Thanks to a generous grant from the Kean University Quality First Initiative, this production of "Lost Boy Found in Whole Foods" will include multiple community events featuring scholars and leaders in the field of Human Rights advocacy before and after select performances.

A special opening night pre-show reception for donors will be on Sept. 3 in Kean University's new Human Rights Institute and a champagne toast with the cast follows the performance. To purchase tickets for this exciting evening, call 908-737-4092.

"This production marks an expansion of our ongoing partnership with Premiere Stages," said

John Pietrowski of Playwrights Theatre.

All performances take place in the Zella Fry Theatre on the Kean University campus. Premiere Stages offers affordable prices, air-conditioned facilities and free parking close to the theatre. Call for a list of sign-interpreted, audio-described or open-captioned performances. Assistive listening devices and large print programs are available at all times. Publications are available with advanced notice in alternate formats.

ART SHOWS

The VISUAL ARTS CENTER OF NEW JERSEY is partnering with PAPER MILL PLAYHOUSE on a year long exhibition series in the theater's RENEE FOOSANER ART GALLERY. The Visual Arts Center of New Jersey will provide an exhibition for each of Paper Mill's five main-stage productions, each in a different medium. The gallery is open one hour prior to performances and during intermission.

SUMMIT FREE PUBLIC LIBRARY AND THE VISUAL ARTS CENTER OF NEW JERSEY announce an exhibition of botanical illustrations and photographs by award-winning artist JUDITH SCILIA in THE GALLERY at the Summit library through Sept. 30. Her life-size illustrations of flowering plants are impeccably rendered in colored pencil giving her audience an intimate, detailed view of each specimen. The exhibit is open to the public during regular library hours. The Summit library is located at 75 Maple St., and is open Monday through Wednesday from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. and Thursday through Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. For information, go to www.summitlibrary.org or call 908-273-0350.

On the first Thursday of each month, the city of Rahway will host an ARTS DISTRICT OPEN HOUSE in the downtown area between The Arts Guild on Irving Street and Seminary Avenue, and Elm Street at Irving Street from 6 to 9 p.m. These First Thursday events include visual arts exhibits, live music, crafts, play readings, free dance lessons and other arts activities at several locations in the area.

Cranford resident KERRIE WANDLASS will be the featured artist during the month of August at the Gallery on the Boulevard, located at Kenilworth Public Library, 548 Blvd. Influenced by impressionists such as Cezanne and Prendergast, Wandlass' interest lies in shape, color and outline rather than in the effects of light and shadow on an object. In her pieces on display, viewers are encouraged to look for the dark, bold outlines that enhance the relationships and connectivity between the forms. Artwork on display at The Gallery on the Boulevard will be available for purchase directly through the artist. For information regarding The Gallery on the Boulevard, contact Library Director Dale Spindel at 908-276-2451 or dale@lmxac.org.

BOOKS

AYN RAND'S MAGNUM OPUS "ATLAS SHRUGGED" was published in 1957, but its status as a bestseller is seeing another boost since last year's resurgence. "Atlas Shrugged" is now on the shelves of 1,100 Target stores, demonstrating impressive marketability for a 53-year-old novel. A segment of a recent Glenn Beck program dedicated to the novel has seen the book leap up the Amazon bestseller list. It is currently ranked in the top 20. "Atlas Shrugged" is a compelling mystery, but it is also a story with a profound and original philosophy that provides answers to the problems we're facing in our world right now.

The book discussion group of KENILWORTH PUBLIC LIBRARY will meet at 7:15 p.m. on Tuesday, to discuss "UNLESS," a novel by the Pulitzer Prize winning novelist Carol Shields. Participation in the book discussion group is free and open to all adult members of the general public, including people who live in communities other than Kenilworth, and new members are always welcome. Copies of "Unless" will be available for checkout. Because space is limited, pre-registration is required and can be done at the library or by calling 908-276-2451.

Two teams won their 1st county titles last season

Cranford and Johnson squads excelled

By JR Parachini
Sports Editor

Nobody knows what's going to happen two months from now when teams will be battling for county supremacy.

Who knows what teams will be there?

As it turned out last year in soccer and field hockey, two of the three Union County Tournament championships were captured by teams that never won the crown before.

On its way to posting its best season ever, the Cranford boys' soccer team reached its first county championship game in seven years. Behind a goal from the county's leading scorer – senior Pat Hartnett – and a fine game in net by senior goalkeeper Scott Boyer, the Cougars defeated Westfield 1-0 in the championship game at Johnson, denying the Blue Devils a first county crown since 1996.

As satisfying as that victory was for Cranford, it was the ultimate championship for the Johnson field hockey team as it not only defeated arch rival Oak Knoll for the first time in four years, but defeated the Royals for the very first time in the UCT championship game.

The sixth time turned out to be the charm for the Crusaders as they defeated Oak Knoll 3-2 in the final at Cranford. Oak Knoll defeated Johnson in the five previous UCT finals, which were the first five Johnson appeared in.

Oak Knoll ended up winning eight of the 10 UCT titles in the 2000s.

The Cranford girls' soccer team had won a county championship before, winning for the first time in 2000 en route to an undefeated season that saw it claim a share of the Group 3 state championship and the The Star-Ledger trophy as the state's final No. 1 team.

However, that didn't take away from the Cougars winning the county crown again for the first time in nine years.

Cranford edged top-seeded and undefeated Westfield in penalty kicks for a 1-0 win in the semifinals at Johnson and then knocked off four-time defending champion Scotch Plains 1-0 in the final at Johnson to celebrate its championship.

The Cranford boys' and girls' soccer teams managed to win county crowns in the same season for the first time.

Fall season nearing for defending UCT champs

In the spring, the Cranford baseball and softball teams managed to win county crowns in the same season for the second time and first time since 2007 – giving Cranford four county championship teams for the 2009-2010 school year.

The Cranford boys' soccer team has come a long way under head coach Mike Curci, now in his sixth year at the helm of the Cougars. His first team in 2005 won four games, his second squad in 2006 nine and his next two in 2007 and 2008 won 15 each season and captured the program's first two championships – which were the Mountain Valley Conference-Mountain Division crowns.

Then came last year.

The Cougars won their first 16 matches and were ranked as one of the best teams in the state. Cranford and Plainfield then battled to a 0-0 tie in Plainfield.

After two more wins, Cranford and Scotch Plains tied 1-1 at Cranford.

The Cougars then won four more games, including the county championship, before falling to Millburn 1-0 at home in the North 2, Group 3 semifinals.

An outstanding 22-1-2 record included a first county championship and a third straight Mountain Division title, with Cranford capturing the first Union County Conference-Mountain Division crown.

As a result, the Cougars moved up to the UCC's Watchung Division for this season.

Cranford outscored 25 opponents 73-8, with Boyer netting 16 shutouts complete and the team 17 overall.

Cranford allowed only single goals in eight of its 25 games, never allowing more than one in any of its matches the entire season, which is remarkable.

Two of the eight goals yielded were on penalty kicks.

Hartnett led Union County in scoring with 27 goals and three assists, while fellow seniors Nick Pace and Alex Rocha were second and third in team scoring. Pace had eight goals and 18 assists and Rocha seven goal and four assists.

Juniors from last season included Connor DeMars with six goals and four assists, Eric Walano with one goal and three assists and Ray El-Khoury with three goals and six assists.

Cranford went 7-0 in the Mountain Division last year and was 25-2 in Mountain Division play the past three seasons.

Hartnett had game-winning goals in four consecutive tournament games – vs. Union in UCT semis, vs. Carteret in states, vs. Somerville in states and vs. Westfield in UCT final.

Boyer finished with 54 varsity wins for his career.

The program's previous record for wins in a season was 16.

Cranford went 15-6 in 2007, 15-4-1 in 2008 and 22-1-2 in 2009 for a 52-11-3 (.825) mark over its last three seasons.

The Johnson field hockey team was ecstatic after winning its first sectional championship in 2008 when it captured the North 2, Group 2 title on its home field with a 3-1 win over Summit in the final.

Then came last year's first UCT title.

Sparked by senior Jess Rusin, who netted 28 goals and assisted on 21 others, the Crusaders posted another fine season at 14-5. A six-game winning streak was snapped at Voorhees 1-0 in the North 2, Group 2 quarterfinals.

Rusin is now playing at Quinnipiac.

In the UCT championship-game win over Oak Knoll, senior Megan Fiasconaro and sophomore Nicole Imbriaco scored in the first half to give Johnson a 2-0 lead.

Rusin then scored in the second half to make it 3-2 before Oak Knoll came back with goals from Sarah Butterfield and Seton Hartnett to make it a one-goal game.

Sophomore goaltender Becky Brattole was outstanding in net for Johnson, making 12 saves to earn the victory.

In addition to a fine 138-53-14 (.723) record in 10 seasons at the helm, head coach Katrina Dobbins has now guided Johnson to its first sectional and county championships.

Johnson's win over Oak Knoll in last year's UCT final was its first over the Royals since Halloween of 2005.

That was a regular season win that helped Johnson tie Oak Knoll for the Mountain Valley Conference championship that season.

Oak Knoll was 15-0 and No. 2 in the state when Johnson defeated the Royals in last year's UCT final.

Oak Knoll finished 18-3 after falling at home to Shore Regional 2-1 in the North 2, Group 2 final.

This year's UCT semifinals are scheduled to take place at Johnson on Oct. 16 at 5 and 7 p.m.

The championship game, once again, will take place at Cranford's Memorial Field on Oct. 23 at a time still to be determined.

The Cranford girls' soccer team lost to Westfield 6-0 the first time the teams played last year.

More determined than ever to make up for one of only three losses on the season, the Cougars not only prevented Westfield from scoring when the teams played again in the UCT semifinals, but Cranford denied the Blue Devils from coming away with a victory as well.

Although Westfield finished 21-1-2, captured North 2, Group 4 for the first time since 2002, reached the Group 4 state championship game and finished No. 1 in Union County and No. 3 in the state by The Star-Ledger, it was Cranford that won the county championship with four shutouts in four games.

Cranford's 16-3-2 season included UCT shutouts over Kent Place 4-0, Union 3-0, Westfield 1-0 (4-3 PKs) and Scotch Plains 1-0.

When former Pottstown, Pa. all-america and Seton Hall standout Jen Michewicz took over as head coach in 2008, the Cougars managed a .500 record at 9-9-1.

Last year's squad made the jump from middle-of-the-pack to right to the top.

When Cranford took on Westfield in the UCT semifinals, the Blue Devils were No. 1 in the state at 15-0. After scoreless first half, second half, first overtime and second overtime periods, the game went to a penalty kick shootout.

After the required first five rounds, the shootout was tied at 3-3. Cranford goalie Lauren Grandal then saved Westfield's sixth shot.

Senior Taylor D'Antico followed with the game-winning goal to put Cranford in the final for the first time since 2004.

D'Antico scored the game-winning goal against four-time defending champion Scotch Plains, netting a penalty kick in the first half for a 1-0 triumph.

Before this past softball season, D'Antico signed a letter-of-intent to play soccer at Coastal Carolina. She also starred at third base for Cranford's softball team.

Senior midfielder Jen Folger, Julianne Salerno, Michelle Gargiulo, Sara Gugliucci, Sarah Dowzycki, Victoria LaBrutto, Natalie Englese, Jamie Webb and Mallorri Niro were also key players for the Cougars, who reached the UCT semifinals for the fifth time in the past seven years.

Scotch Plains, coached by Kevin Ewing, will be seeking to reach the UCT championship game for the sixth consecutive season this fall.

Football practice begins with new decade in fold

Three new coaches in county this season

By JR Parachini
Sports Editor

A new decade of high school football in Union County will dawn when official practice commences Monday, Aug. 16 for teams that open the first weekend of the season.

Let the dog days of August practice begin — and hopefully go by real quick and safely for all of the players involved.

All but one Union County team — that being Roselle — will open the first weekend of the season, which is Sept. 10-11.

Roselle has its game-scrimmage scheduled at Columbia on Sept. 3 and then has its bye week the first week of the season before opening at home against New Providence on Sept. 17.

Roselle is one of three teams with a new head coach.

Twenty years ago Roselle was a defending state champion and headed for a second straight appearance in a sectional final.

The Rams were one of the more formidable football teams in Union County back then during the middle of Lou Grasso Sr.'s 25-season tenure as head coach.

With only one winning season and one playoff campaign since 1998, the Rams have failed to put it all together for some time now.

Lou Grasso Jr. — who was officially hired to replace Kenneth Wiggins as the head coach on May 24 — will attempt to put the Rams back in contention.

This is his first head coaching position.

"I want to get back to the tradition of what we had here as far as being one of the better teams in the county," said Grasso Jr., a physical education teacher at Roselle for 11 years now.

His father Lou Sr. is also a physical education teacher at Roselle and guided the Rams to their only playoff championship in 1989 when Roselle captured North 2, Group 2. Lou Sr. also led the Rams to the 1981 North 2, Group 1 and 1990 North 2, Group 2 finals.

"I'm optimistic," Grasso Jr. said. "I think we have a lot of athletes here and things are looking up."

Roselle went 5-4 in 2008 to post its first winning season since an 8-3 finish in 1998 included reaching the North 2, Group 2 semifinals. However, a 1-4 start hurt any chances of qualifying for the Central Jersey, Group 2 playoffs. Roselle won its last four games to post a winning season.

Last year's squad went 5-5 with a 10-7 double overtime loss at New Providence proving costly as the Rams failed again to qualify in CJ, G2.

Roselle last made the state playoffs in 2000, falling in the North 2, Group 2 quarterfinals en route to a 4-6 finish.

"The team was young last year," Grasso said. "We have guys with good potential that are ready to be put to work."

Wiggins' three-season record at Roselle was 13-16 (.448), including a 3-7 finish his first year at the helm in 2007. Wiggins coached under Grasso Sr. and his successor — former Roselle player Chris Satterfield.

Wiggins was an ROTC Instructor at Roselle for nine years, but was replaced in that position after last football season, according to Roselle Athletic Director Joe Pisauro.

"He didn't have a job in the building anymore," Pisauro said. "He didn't have tenure, so his job wasn't guaranteed. With the football coach, you need a guy to be around."

Satterfield's three-season record at the helm was 10-20 (.333), including a 4-6 season in 2004 and 3-7 seasons in 2005 and 2007.

Grasso Sr. was the head coach from 1979-2003.

"From my father I learned how to run a team and how to get a team to buy into what you're doing," Grasso Jr. said.

Grasso Jr. spent the last two seasons as the offensive coordinator at Union under head coach Brian Sheridan. Grasso Jr. and Sheridan were roommates at Rutgers, where they both played linebacker.

"Brian is such a hard worker," Grasso Jr. said. "I see how the kids respond to him. He has a passion to coach and to build a program with enthusiasm."

"That's what we're all in it for."

Before Union, Grasso Jr. coached quarterbacks, outside linebackers and was a special teams coordinator on John Quinn's staff at New Brunswick.

"Coach Quinn taught me how to prepare and the day-to-day operations of a program," Grasso Jr. said.

Quinn is also a new head coach in Union County this year as he is taking over the reigns at Elizabeth.

The other new head coach in Union County this year is also a former Union assistant, that being Bill Nyers, who is taking over at Plainfield. Nyers coached under Marc Crisafi at Union, with Crisafi replacing Jim Benedict as the head coach this season at Watchung Hills. Benedict is an assistant coach on Bill Tracy's staff at Ridge. Crisafi coached at Johnson the past three years under head coaches Gus Kalikas and Nick Gregorio.

Out of Rutgers, Grasso Jr. became an assistant coach on his father's staff at Roselle in 1997 and spent seven years there, three as offensive coordinator.

Grasso Jr. is a 1993 Colonia graduate who played fullback and linebacker for Pat Barbato.

"I've always wanted to be a head coach, I was already in the building, I know a lot of the kids, so I threw my hat in to see what could happen," Grasso Jr. said. "It seemed like a good fit."

Offensively, Grasso Jr. will opt for a Multiple-I scheme and, defensively, an attacking 4-4 that will vary during the season.

"I want to be able to establish a program 12 months out of the year," Grasso Jr. said.

Quinn has coached three teams to state championships, including Roxbury to one in 1998 and New Brunswick to titles in 2003 and 2006. He coached at Cranford and was then on Lou Rettino's staff at Union up until the time that Rettino passed away in March of 1996.

Chet Parlavocchio was the head coach at Elizabeth from 2006-2009, leading the Minutemen to their seventh North 2, Group 4 crown in 2006. It was an 11-1 season that ended with a 10-game winning streak and a win over defending champion Phillipsburg in the North 2, Group 4 final.

Elizabeth then went 6-4 in 2007 and 7-3 in 2008, falling in the North 2, Group 4 quarterfinals both seasons. The Minutemen went 1-9 last year, which was their first sub-.500 campaign since 1980.

Parlavocchio's four-season record at the helm was 25-17 (.595).

Nyers, 43, was the offensive coordinator at Kean the last five years and before his brief coaching stint as an assistant at Union was the head coach at Woodbridge for nine years.

He guided the Barrons to the 1997 Central Jersey, Group 4 championship, which is the program's last state title.

He succeeds Reggie Robinson, a Plainfield graduate, as the head coach. Robinson's three-year record was 9-21 (.300), including a playoff appearance in North 2, Group 4 in 2008.

Plainfield dropped down to North 2, Group 3 this year for the first time.

The Mid-State 39 Conference was realigned this year and broken down into six divisions as opposed to seven last year. All of the Union County teams are in the East divisions, with the exception of Scotch Plains, which is situated in the West B Division.

Dayton back Anthony Cioffi, with ball, is one of the top sophomores in Union County. He started as a freshman last year and helped spark the Bulldogs to an 8-2 record and their first state playoff appearance since 1988.

Another grid year nearing full swing

Scotch Plains is in the West B along with Delaware Valley, North Plainfield, Voorhees, Warren Hills and Somerville. Of those five schools, the only one that Scotch Plains played last season was Warren Hills, with the Warren County school eking out a close 12-6 win at Scotch Plains en route to a 5-5 season that included it making the North 2, Group 3 playoffs.

"We don't know a whole lot yet about these teams we're going to be playing, so that will be a challenge for our staff to properly evaluate them," Scotch Plains head coach Steve Ciccotelli said.

Unlike last year, everyone will play everyone within their divisions. Immaculata joined Union, Elizabeth, Westfield, Linden, Plainfield and Watchung Hills in the East A Division.

Brearley had the best record of any team in the county for the decade of the 2000s, with a mark of 79-27 (.745). Head coach Scott Miller enters his ninth season at the helm with a record of 70-16 (.814).

Brearley and New Providence have made the playoffs the last eight years, with GL right behind at six.

Summit begins the season with the county's longest winning streak at 12 games.

Roselle is now the team that has the longest playoff drought, with the Rams last qualifying in 2000. Roselle Park last made the state playoffs in 2001. Twelve of the 17 public football-playing schools in the county have made the playoffs either last year or the year before.

Roselle and Roselle Park and Westfield and Plainfield will continue playing each other on Thanksgiving. Also playing on the holiday again are Linden vs. Union, Rahway vs. Johnson and New Providence vs. Governor Livingston.

B. For multifamily units, the owner or manager is responsible for the following:

1. The property owner/management is responsible for ensuring that a recycling system is established and that it is operated in compliance with the requirements of this municipal ordinance. The property owner/management is responsible for setting up and maintaining the recycling system. The property owner/management is responsible for receiving and responding to Warnings, Notices of Violation, and Penalty Assessments and for correcting violations. The property owner/management will be expected to correct violations promptly and to make necessary direct contacts with residents.

2. Drop-off centers for source-separated recyclable materials, if in use, must be established and maintained so that they are conveniently accessible to residents. Curbside collection may be made available in place of, or in conjunction with, these drop-off centers. The recycling system must provide for all designated recyclables in the residential waste stream. The recycling system may utilize separate containers for each recyclable material or it may provide for commingled materials to be placed in one container provided the recycling hauler can take the materials commingled. Containers must be clearly marked and the area neatly maintained. Container capacity must be adequate to hold the amount of materials generated between pick-ups. It must be clear to an inspector that the system is being serviced.

3. The recycling area or the bins or containers placed therein shall be designed so as to provide protection against adverse environmental conditions which might render the collected materials unmarketable. Any bins or containers which are used for the collection of recyclable paper or cardboard shall be equipped with a lid or otherwise covered so as to keep the paper or cardboard dry.

4. It must be clear that the system is being used properly by employees and tenants. There must not be garbage in the recycling containers or recyclables in the garbage containers. The property owner/management is responsible for resolving problems which may arise from the improper use of containers and for training employees and tenants to properly understand and use the recycling system.

5. Notification and collection rules shall be issued by the management to new tenants when they arrive and to all residents every three (3) months. Copies of these notices, or other proof of distribution of the notices, must be sent to the municipal recycling coordinator at the time of each mailing or distribution.

6. The property owner/management is responsible for arranging to have recyclables picked up and for resolving any problems with the transporter of recyclables.

7. The property owner/management must arrange to obtain documentation in order to report the tonnages of materials recycled at least once per year or else he/she must arrange to have the collector provide that documentation directly to the municipality. Deadline to report the previous year's annual tonnage is March 1st. Arrangements with recycling companies or with haulers handling recyclables should include provisions for obtaining this information. Documentation must be maintained by the management. When the municipality provides recyclables collection service, reporting and proof are not needed.

8. Single/Dual Stream Recycling: Multi-family locations may opt to collect their recyclables in a single stream or dual stream (fiber, commingled) provided the Material Recovery Facility (MRF) that receives the material has certified that they have the ability to separate and maximize the capture rate of the designated recyclables. The UCUA Division of Solid Waste Management will compile and maintain an updated list of those facilities.

22-1.5 Commercial & Institutional Establishment Compliance Requirements
A. The owner/operator (or in case of construction, the contractor), is responsible for ensuring that a recycling system is established and that it is operated in compliance with the requirements of this municipal ordinance. The owner/operator/contractor is responsible for setting up and maintaining the recycling system. The owner/operator/contractor is responsible for receiving and responding to Warnings, Notices of Violation, and Penalty Assessments and for correcting violations promptly.

B. The recycling system must be established and maintained so that it is conveniently accessible to users. The recycling system must provide for all designated recyclables in the commercial/institutional waste stream. The recycling system may utilize separate containers for each recyclable material or it may provide for two or more materials to be placed in one container provided the recycling hauler can take the materials commingled. Containers must be clearly marked and the area neatly maintained. Container capacity must be adequate to hold the amount of materials generated between pick-ups. It must be clear to the inspector that the system is being serviced.

C. The owner/operator/contractor must ensure that the system is being used properly by employees, customers or tenants. There must not be garbage in the recycling containers or recyclables in the garbage containers. The owner/operator/contractor is responsible for resolving problems which may arise from the improper use of containers and for instructing employees, tenants, and customers to understand and use the recycling system.

D. If patrons, customers or employees are involved in the waste disposal process (i.e. fast food stores or company cafeteria), the recycling system must allow for this and include notice to customers as to their responsibilities.

E. The owner/operator/contractor is responsible for arranging for recyclables to be removed from the premises and for assuring that they go into the recyclables market. The owner/operator/contractor may make arrangements to deliver the recyclables to the municipal collection system (curbside collection) if permitted by the municipality. Otherwise, the owner/operator/contractor is responsible for arranging to have recyclables picked up and for resolving any problems with the transporter of recyclables.

F. The owner/operator/contractor must arrange to obtain documentation in order to report the tonnages of materials recycled at least once per year or else he/she must arrange to have the collector provide that documentation directly to the municipality. Deadline to report the previous year's annual tonnage is March 1st.

G. Single/Dual Stream Recycling: Commercial and Institutional establishments may opt to collect their recyclables in a single stream or dual stream (fiber, commingled) provided the Material Recovery Facility (MRF) that receives the material has certified that they have the ability to separate out and maximize the capture rate of the mandated recyclables. The UCUA Division of Solid Waste Management will compile and maintain an updated list of those facilities.

H. Recycling Containers: Commercial and Institutional establishments that have outdoor garbage containers for their customers must also have outdoor recycling containers. There must be sufficient recycling containers for any mandated recyclables in the commercial/institutional waste stream.

I. All schools must provide written notice at the beginning of each school year, to all students, teachers, and other staff on the recycling requirements. The notice must contain a contact number to call if they observe any problems associated with recycling or if recycling is not properly occurring.

J. Single stream recycling of mixed classes of construction recyclables: Construction/Demolition sites may opt to collect all recyclables in one container provided there are no other materials (including garbage) in that container. To qualify for this provision, recyclables must go to a Transfer Station/MRF that is properly permitted by the New Jersey Department of Environmental Protection and has certified that they have the ability to separate out and maximize the capture rate of the mandated materials. The specific materials that may be commingled together will be determined by the provisions in the receiving Transfer Station/MRF's permit. Continued from page 35

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Prudential launches new mobile platform

Prudential New Jersey Properties has launched a new mobile platform. This new website feature assists home buyers searching for properties while using mobile devices.

The platform — accessible using iPhone, Blackberry, Android phones, iPod touch, and iPad — also allows the company's sales associates to post full listings of properties in a mobile format.

The mobile platform's features and benefits include mobile device optimized property search, agents/offices and agent pages; proximity searching, which allows users with GPS navigation to find homes and offices near their current locations in real-time; and "Your Account" functionality, which synchronizes the account with the full website. "Your Account" also allows users to add properties and notes on the go with a mobile device, which become "favorites."

The complete integration of the mobile platform and <http://www.prudentialnewjersey.com> enables the website to redirect mobile users to the mobile platform and allows users to move back-and-forth between the two.

The mobile Web site can be found at <http://m.prudentialnewjersey.com>.

Fraudulent FEMA aid

Union County homeowners, renters and business owners who have registered for disaster assistance through the U.S. Department of Homeland Security's Federal Emergency Management Agency should beware of fraudulent individuals attempting to charge for an inspection.

Inspectors contracted by FEMA are contacting New Jersey residents applying for disaster assistance following storms and flooding.

The FEMA inspection is free. These inspectors have approved FEMA identification badges that include the inspector's name and photo, and the name of the company under contract with FEMA.

The inspection generally takes 30 to 40 minutes, during which the inspector will assess disaster-related damage for both real and personal property and may take photos of the interior and exterior of the damaged dwelling.

Practicing Tai Chi may help with Parkinson's

Experts at the Atlantic Neuroscience Institute at Overlook Hospital plan to study the effects of Tai Chi on patients diagnosed with Parkinson's Disease, in the hopes that the martial art can help them return to a better quality of life.

Starting in September, Dr. Roger Kurlan, Medical Director of the Movement Disorders Program at Overlook Hospital in Summit, the principal investigator for the study, will examine whether practicing Tai Chi improves mobility, reduces falls and lessens depression among Parkinson's patients.

Parkinson's Disease, is a neurological disorder that occurs when nerve cells in the brain that create dopamine, which send signals that control movement, break down. Investigators for the study chose to use Tai Chi because the practice relies heavily on balance in movement, a common problem for patients with Parkinson's Disease.

The Tai Chi classes for the study will be offered at no charge once a week for 16 weeks through Sept. 15 at The Connection, a non-profit facility located at 79 Maple St., Summit that offers a wide range of adult fitness programs.

Classes are available to adults 18 and older who have Parkinson's disease and no previous experience with Tai Chi. For information or to participate in the study, call 908-522-6168 or 908-598-7991.

What's the difference between ADHD and ADD?

The terms ADHD and ADD are often used interchangeably. Though similar, there are some subtle differences which set these conditions apart from each other.

ADD is actually a subset of ADHD, or Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder. ADHD is the umbrella term most medical professionals use for the condition. Just as the term "autism" is used to cover a number of behaviors and symptoms because it is easier than calling each by an individual name, such is the case with ADHD.

Generally, the term ADD is used when individuals do not display hyperactivity behaviors. There are some other major differences in the types of ADHD. Recognizing symptoms can help doctors and parents achieve a more refined diagnosis.

1. ADHD, Predominantly Inattentive Type: This is the form of the disease most commonly referred to as ADD. Symptoms include inability to sustain attention, making careless mistakes due to distractions, and avoiding tasks that require concentration.

2. ADHD, Predominantly Hyperactive-Impulsive Type: Symptoms of this particular condition include excessive talking, fidgeting, restlessness, interrupting others, and being constantly in motion.

3. ADHD, Combined Type: In these cases, individuals have a combination of symptoms.

Those with the type of ADHD classified as ADD may be misunderstood and originally considered shy. They also may experience co-

Those with ADHD often have difficulty throughout school and at work. However, with proper treatment, symptoms can be managed.

existing emotional conditions, such as depression or anxiety. They may have trouble making friends, but experience close emotional bonds with friends they do make.

On the other hand, individuals with ADHD are often diagnosed earlier because hyperactivity is easily recognizable. They may attract a lot of attention and friends, but have difficulty maintaining relationships.

Some symptoms are shared by all kinds of ADHD, including: Lack of organizational skills, easily misplacing items, difficulty in school, low self-esteem, poor social skills, and relationship problems.

Depending on symptoms, doctors and therapists will develop a plan to enable ADHD patients to better focus and be more successful in daily activities.

When's the right time for children to start school?

Many parents feel early enrollment in school is a good first step for children's academic careers. But some experts warn that too much, too soon may not be the way to lay the ground work of a successful academic career. Some believe that waiting until a child is age 6 for formal education provides the best opportunity for learning advantages.

According to a British study published in The Cambridge Primary Review in October 2008, the consensus was that formal schooling should be delayed until children reach 6. The findings offered that trying to teach literacy and math at a young age is counterproductive.

If children younger than 6 are in school programs, they should continue to learn through play-based initiatives.

An early start in school isn't necessarily a good start. Children may show the maturity and the social readiness to attend school, but they may not have the capacity to grasp concepts outside of their play-based way of learning. Forcing information on a child who is not ready could set him or her up for aversion to school.

What's more, there's no evidence that early schooling produces a more educated child in the long run. Many countries in Europe start school later than Britain or the United States. Finland, for example, begins formal training at age 7. When studied, children who started school at the age of 6 or 7 often overtook English pupils in tests of reading before the start of secondary education.

Parents who have little choice but to enroll children in daycare/pre-school programs because they work should look for curriculums that feature the following:

- Emphasis on play-based learning, with more time geared to kids being kids than sitting behind a desk.
- Access to a computer, since so much of students' lives involve computer literacy.
- Opportunities to go outside and play when weather permits.
- Interaction with books so parents can read with their children and spend time together.
- Limited focus on grades and performance. Does a 3-year-old child really need a report card?
- Activities that involve the family so Mom and Dad are participating in their child's education.
- Small class sizes, optimizing the teacher-to-student ratio.
- A relaxed atmosphere with the time and space to explore physical and social environments.

Some children are naturally more advanced than others and may benefit from earlier, more structured schooling. However, the vast majority will do fine during their academic career if they begin formal education at age 6. That doesn't mean that children can't attend school at 5. The programs should just be less structured and more play-based.

Some experts warn that too much, too soon may not be the way to lay the ground work of a successful academic career. Some believe that waiting until a child is age 6 for formal education provides the best opportunity for learning advantages.

Better food, better schools at lower cost

"American consumers are paying high prices for low-quality food, and so are our public schools," said Jane Hersey, director of the non-profit Feingold Association of the United States. Hersey is one of many thousands of parents who use the low-additive Feingold diet to resolve their child's ADHD symptoms.

"We learned how to shop smarter and find the foods our families love," she maintained. "You don't have to give up the convenience of processed foods, just buy the brand that is free of additives like food dyes."

The Feingold Association researches food and compiles books listing thousands of acceptable brands, including mixes, frozen foods, snacks, and even desserts and candies.

Many schools in the United States serve an astonishing stew of synthetic chemicals, most of them made from petroleum, that have been shown to trigger behavior, learning and health problems. Not only are these factory foods overpriced, but they are responsible for many of the troubling symptoms that are so expensive for schools to address. Back in 1979-1983, when the New York City school system removed additives like food dyes and artificial flavors, they found that test scores of all the students rose from the 39th to the 55th percentile on the California Achievement Test.

What's more, the number of children who were two or more years behind grade level plummeted from more than 12 percent to less than 5 percent. This translates to a huge saving in the cost of remedial services.

Schools can continue to use processed foods if they want, but simply switch to those versions that don't have the Red 40, Yellow 5 and other petrochemicals. They don't need to buy meat dishes that are loaded with high fructose corn syrup and MSG. In fact, the low-cost government commodity foods are a better alternative for any school, and a few items made from scratch can save even more money.

The Feingold Association applauds all of the initiatives that are being taken to bring healthy foods to schools, and offers options that can be adopted by any school. But while many find the issue to be complicated, Hersey maintains that it really is quite simple.

"If you turn the clock back to the 1950s school children were not plagued with ADHD, bi-polar disorders, diabetes, chronic asthma, depression, violent behaviors, chronic ear infections, and all of the developmental problems we are seeing today. While there may be many contributing factors, one that stands out is the drastic change in the food children eat today. And one of the simplest and most effective solutions is to feed children food ... real food. If our school cafeterias today looked more like the school cafeterias of a generation or two ago, then our classrooms today would be far different as well." For details on fixing school food, see www.School-Lunch.org.

Pros and cons of school uniforms

Should the day ever arrive when school uniforms are mandatory, that day would mark the end of a long-running debate. Parents on both sides of the debate make valid points as to the advantages and disadvantages of school uniforms. Parents undecided about the issue should consider the following pros and cons before making a decision of their own.

Pro: School uniforms will save parents money. The premise here points to parents spending lots of money each year on school clothes for children, money that would be saved if every school required uniforms.

Con: Those opposed to school uniforms note that those uniforms are expensive and don't offer the versatility of normal wardrobes because they cannot be worn outside of school.

Pro: School uniforms help children establish themselves on merit rather than money and wardrobe. Here, proponents of school uniforms argue that, too often, at schools without uniforms, a student's social status and popularity is based on his or her clothing. Uniforms, the theory suggests, will encourage kids to establish their reputations more on merit and personal character instead of what clothes they can or can't afford.

Con: Those against school uniforms argue that school uniforms actually deter and discourage students from expressing their individuality. Choosing their own clothing, however, allows them to express themselves.

Tips to go from dorm room drab to college fab

Four white walls, a closet and, if you're lucky, a desk ... welcome to your new home, college students. As dreary as a dorm room can seem, a few simple steps can easily transform that drab dorm room into a space you'll want to come home to in a few easy steps.

Bed Bath & Beyond suggests a few tips to help college students and their parents get started.

"You don't need to be an interior designer or worry about breaking the bank," commented Catherine Gentile of Bed Bath & Beyond. "Focus on a few key areas to bring your personality and affordable style to decorate this blank canvas."

- Don't "Bare" with it. Bare walls and floors don't increase the cozy factor. Start with an area rug to add a focal point in the room while providing the creature comforts of home to bare feet. Next, consider your walls. Choose wall art that doesn't require mounting with a hammer and nails — a no-no in most dormitories. Consider a set of three dry-erase "wall pops" that peel and stick and can be moved to change them up on a whim.

- Make your bed really, really comfy. Layer in the comfort to take the standard issue dorm bed to the next level! Since you won't know where your mattress has been, encase it in an entomologist lab-tested and recommended Allergy Luxe bed bug mattress protector to keep the bed bugs at bay. Then smooth out the lumps and bumps with a mattress topper of your choice, be it feather, fiber or foam.

- Bedding is the biggest decor bang for the buck. When searching for bedding, first find out if your new bed is twin extra long, a slightly longer twin bed size which is commonly found in dorm rooms. Since the bed is typically the biggest decor piece in the room, it's the easiest way to make a statement. This year, affordable

With a little help, college students can transform their dorm room from drab to fab in a few easy steps.

fashion bedding options abound from flirty floral designs to bold bright colors for girls, to masculine stripes and plaids or solid reversible sets for guys. Nautica takes the popular cotton jersey knit a step further in their "Glen Cove" set that includes a jersey knit comforter.

A place for everything ... everything in its place

When trying to figure out how to fit all of your worldly possessions into a small space, remember these simple tips:

- Stack it. Add colorful totes on top of shelves to keep things neat and organized while also adding a pop of color throughout your space.

- Stow it. Look for pieces that multi-task like a storage ottoman that provides storage and seating space and even has a lid that when turned upside down doubles as a table or lap desk.

- Hang it. Make your closet work for you. First, use the same type of hanger to create uniformity. Select a set of Razor thin hangers that are made from eco-friendly recycled ABS plastic, and have an ultra slim design to save space. Then use a double hang closet rod that you can adjust horizontally and vertically to find the right fit for what you need. Simply hang on your existing closet rod and, voila, you now have twice the space. Then use the additional space to create shelving. Use gearbox organizers and choose a 6 shelf for clothing or 10 shelf for shoes and accessories.

- Hide it. Start under the bed by attaching a set of bed lifts to the bottom of your bedposts to gain up to 7 precious inches of storage space. Use underbed bags to store items you don't need to access all the time, including off-season clothing, extra bedding and shoes.

College students and their parents can visit their local Bed Bath & Beyond store or www.bedbathbeyond.com to help turn that drab dorm room into a delightful domicile.

Workplace Illiteracy Hangs Over Economy Like Writing on the Wall

By Rod Hirsch

Once the world's undeniable beacon of economic vitality, upward mobility and prosperity, the outlook for the American economy today is being dimmed by workplace illiteracy.

It is a mounting problem that has begun to fray the edges of the manufacturing, high-tech and services infrastructure that has served as the benchmark for other economies for generations.

A workforce that struggles to read, write, comprehend and communicate with coworkers, vendors and customers threatens to stagnate growth while increasing the likelihood that the U.S. economy will slip to second-rate status in the competitive global marketplace, according to business and academic leaders.

Though overshadowed by the lingering effects of the banking meltdown, the worldwide economic slump and double-digit unemployment, workplace illiteracy is contributing to the dumbing down of America's well-oiled economic engine, posing a daunting challenge for industry, government and educators.

The connotative definition of illiteracy is the inability to speak or write. The workplace definition is multi-layered – an inability to comprehend, execute or function, impediments to getting the job done in a timely and acceptable manner.

Shirley Hollie-Davis, associate dean at the Center for Workforce Development, Union County College (UCC), offers a simplistic definition of workplace illiteracy.

"It's the inability or lack of ability to read and write and do mathematical operations that are not rudimentary," she explained. "You might understand that green is go and red is stop but in the workplace you must be able to read the words stop or go."

There are 92,000 workers employed at thousands of companies of all sizes throughout Union County, according to the Union County Partnership for Progress. Seventeen percent did not graduate high school; 32 percent have a high school diploma only; 20 percent spent some time in college without graduating; 8 percent have associates' degrees; 17 percent have a bachelor's degree; and 6 percent have a master's degree or better.

The increasing swirl of high-tech equipment and reliance on computers and cyberspace has heightened the demand for skilled, educated workers with multi-dimensional skill sets and the ability to work both independently and as part of a team.

The traditional three Rs – reading, writing and 'rithmetic – are not enough in today's job market. Also required are "soft skills," according to Jennifer Cleary, senior project manager at the John Heldrich Center for Workplace Development, Rutgers University. Employers place high value on employees who are multi-talented and able to multi-task, she explained.

Union County Workforce Education Levels

Nearly 40 percent of New Jersey adults have literacy levels below what is required for the labor market, according to the New Jersey Literacy Volunteers.

"In general there is more of an expectation that people who have strengths in a specialized, technical area must excel in those soft skills," she said. "Pharmaceuticals ideally are looking for people who have a Ph.D. and MBA and who have business skills and marketing sales skills, as well. In (Information Technology) it is no longer acceptable to just be the nerdy guy in the back room.

By Rod Hirsch

Calvin Sierra once tried to teach his Spanish-speaking machinists at Imperial Weld Ring in Elizabeth how to speak English. Sierra brought in an instructor two hours each week to conduct an English class.

The effort failed and today Sierra is learning Spanish.

"It didn't work too well," he said. "They just go back to what they're comfortable with."

The men all speak Spanish fluently but little English and, according to Sierra, have little interest in doing so. Sierra is forced to rely on one or two trusted employees to act as interpreters with the dozen or so men who operate the machines, most of whom he says came to this country from Central America.

Needing to train his workers to operate new computer-assisted machinery, Sierra – whose ancestors immigrated to the United States from Spain in the 19th century – is teaching himself Spanish with the help of a popular language learning software package.

"Americans have been arrogant for a long time," he said. "Now maybe it's time to change."

Sierra's role-reversal underlines how much things have changed. His parents opened the small machine shop in 1959, with many of their first employees Cuban refugees who assimilated a lot better

The Time Management Crisis in Business Development

By Andy Gole

Where does the sales team need help? Ask salespeople and company executives alike, they typically respond: time management.

We can improve salesperson time management with the fundamental distinction between safe and serious conversations, between safe and serious access to prospects.

Selling occurs through conversations. In a safe conversation, the salesperson will never get a stick of business. The prospect is in the conversation for a different reason – generally to get a third price, to check the incumbent supplier. In a serious conversation, the prospect has an urgent need and is willing to discuss it.

We want to be in serious conversations to maximize the use of our selling time. We measure the prospect's seriousness by their behavior, by their commitment to the process. We call these behaviors payments in kind. Examples include checking our references, visiting our facility, introducing us to key decision-makers. Where we don't have a one-call close, we look for this evidence that the prospect is serious and reasonably engaged in getting to know us.

Are you engaged primarily in safe or serious conversations?

Most companies recognize a serious conversation based on past experience. The bigger challenge is converting a safe conversation to a serious conversation. This is an essential business development task, driven by material difference.

A material difference is a difference strong enough to motivate a change in behavior. In business development, we use material difference to: (1) convert a safe conversation to a serious conversation and then (2) show the prospect we are a strong fit for their needs by matching our material difference to their urgent needs.

Strong time management allocates time to first discover and validate the material difference then make strong material difference statements to qualify serious prospects

Many selling organizations become serious too late in the sales process, during the final stages of negotiation, wasting precious time. Effective time management means we use material difference from the outset to:

- Qualify opportunity
- Convert safe opportunities to serious opportunities
- Earn the right to payments in kind
- Condense the selling cycle

The reason we can convert safe conversation to serious conversation is that most prospects have huge problems but won't tell us their problems until we show material difference – earn the right to a serious conversation.

Salesperson time management is actually the smaller time issue in business development. The bigger time problem is how prospects, and particularly top executives, manage their time.

Many executives manage their time in blocks, allocated on past experience. This leaves precious little time for exploring and implementing innovative ideas. Executives are so focused on the short-term they don't seek out, sense or exploit opportunity – the basis for breakthroughs.

This problem is compounded by top management cost reduction initiatives, piling more work on the organization to minimize overhead, forcing the organization to focus on existing critical issues. It becomes impossible for most managers to see the forest for the trees.

In this regard time is the final frontier. The greatest material difference we can offer a prospect is creating time for them, putting time back in their lives. We need to convince prospects to create an exception from their "block time management" process, earning the right to their time for exploring innovation through our material difference.

than today's immigrants because they came from a different background and some held professional jobs in Cuba.

Things have changed since then. There has been an influx of Spanish-speaking immigrants into New Jersey over several generations; increasingly, national and state statistics show many lack high school education and have few options when it comes to higher-paying jobs.

"Employers can't get anyone else to fill those minimum-wage jobs," said Jennifer Cleary, senior project manager at the John Heldrich Center for Workforce Development at Rutgers University.

She said Spanish-speaking immigrants recently arriving in New Jersey are being recruited to fill warehouse jobs at an expansive warehousing and distribution center off the New Jersey Turnpike.

"They're trucking them in with vans from Elizabeth and Newark," she said. "They're going to the train stations and handing out fliers to those taking their first steps on American soil because they realize these jobs are difficult and pay is low and there are not many willing to do that work."

There are parallels between workplace illiteracy and an upward spike in immigration, research shows.

During the 1980s, net international migration accounted for only 21 percent of the nation's population growth, rising to 31 percent in the 1990s, according to the U.S. Census Bureau. The Census Bureau projects that between 2000 and 2015 net international migration is likely to account for more than half the nation's population growth. Between 2000 and 2005, the U.S. population grew by about 15 million; 6.3 million were immigrants, or 42 percent. (The U.S. Census does not differentiate between legal and illegal immigrants.)

According to a study by the Policy Evaluation and Research Center at Educational Testing Service (ETS) in Princeton, those immigrants had a major impact on the labor market. The study estimates that between 2000 and 2005 new immigrants accounted for two-thirds of the nation's labor force growth and nearly 86 percent of the country's net employment growth.

Nearly two-thirds of immigrants during that period lacked a high school diploma; only 6 percent held a four-year college degree; and nearly 8 out of 10 new immigrants lacking a high school diploma reported that they could not speak English at all or not well, according to the ETS study.

That trend is reflected in Union County, according to The Union County Economic and Workforce Competitiveness Project, a study prepared in 2008 by the Heldrich Center.

"The county has a higher percentage of foreign-born residents compared to the state and these residents have lower educational attainment levels than the foreign-born population statewide and native-born county residents," according to the study. Also noted:

- Between 2004-06 Union County had a higher average percentage of residents who had earned less than a high school diploma than the state as a whole, 16.6 percent vs. 13.8 percent;
- The percentage of Union County residents who reported speaking English "less than very well" increased from an average of 14.7 percent in 2001-03 to 18.3 percent in 2004-06 while rates remained essentially stable statewide during the same period.

"It's not like it was when people came over on steamships from Italy or Ireland or Poland and sailed by the Statue of Liberty," said Shirley Hollie-Davis, associate dean of the Center for Workforce Development at Union County College. "Those individuals really had to establish themselves as Americans, not like today. There are resources, bilingual classes, cable television. Today's immigrants have chosen to be centric to their culture but are also assimilating into this culture."

Workplace Illiteracy Hangs Over Economy (Continued from page 1)

You need to have presentation skills and speaking ability to tailor the information to the audience.

"Telecom companies back in the '70s used to let their engineers play and come up with things. Now as competition has increased and business has gone global there is no room for playing. From the minute I get an idea and write it on a napkin I need to call in the marketing people, explain what the value of this is. There is increasingly a need for new skill sets, a broadening of everyone's skill sets. There is less room for specialists, although their skills are still needed," Cleary said.

A comprehensive study of workplace dynamics published by the Policy Evaluation and Research Center at Educational Testing Service (ETS) in Princeton concludes:

"Higher levels of skill and education are important not only for gaining access to better jobs, but also for negotiating our bureaucratic society and its complex legal, health care and retirement systems and for accessing and comprehending the seemingly limitless amount of information that comes our way...As the likelihood of long-term employment declines and as greater numbers of individuals will be required to assume more responsibility for managing various aspects of their lives, including career planning, health care and retirement, higher levels of skills will be required for full participation in our society."

Statistics from a multitude of sources offer a troubling juxtaposition of the realities and demands of the 21st century workplace:

- A report compiled by the American Association of State Colleges & Universities shows that the number of Americans obtaining college degrees is on the decline; Americans aged 25-34 have less education than their parents' generation.
- One million New Jersey adults over the age of 25 do not have a high school diploma, according to the Literacy Volunteers of New Jersey.

- In Union County, 17 percent of residents have less than a high school education; for those who are foreign-born that number increases to 28 percent, according to the Heldrich Center.
- Nearly 40 percent of New Jersey adults have literacy levels below what is required for the labor market, according to the New Jersey Literacy Volunteers.
- Between 2000-2005, two-thirds of the nation's civilian labor force growth and 86 percent of its employment growth was generated by new immigrant arrivals, according to the U.S. Census Bureau.

The ETS report warns, "Unless we are willing to make substantial changes, the next generation of Americans, on average, will be less literate and have a harder time sustaining existing standards of living."

Cleary and Hollie-Davis agree that education is the key.

"We need lots more hands-on education," Cleary offered.

"We do need to be able to compete and the ability to compete needs to be nurtured and harvested in our school systems," Hollie-Davis said. "If we don't then we are going to be in trouble."

The Union County Center for Economic and Workforce Development and other outreach programs are working to help increase literacy, serving between 4,000 and 8,000 clients annually, depending on the availability of grants and government funding for programs, according to Hollie-Davis.

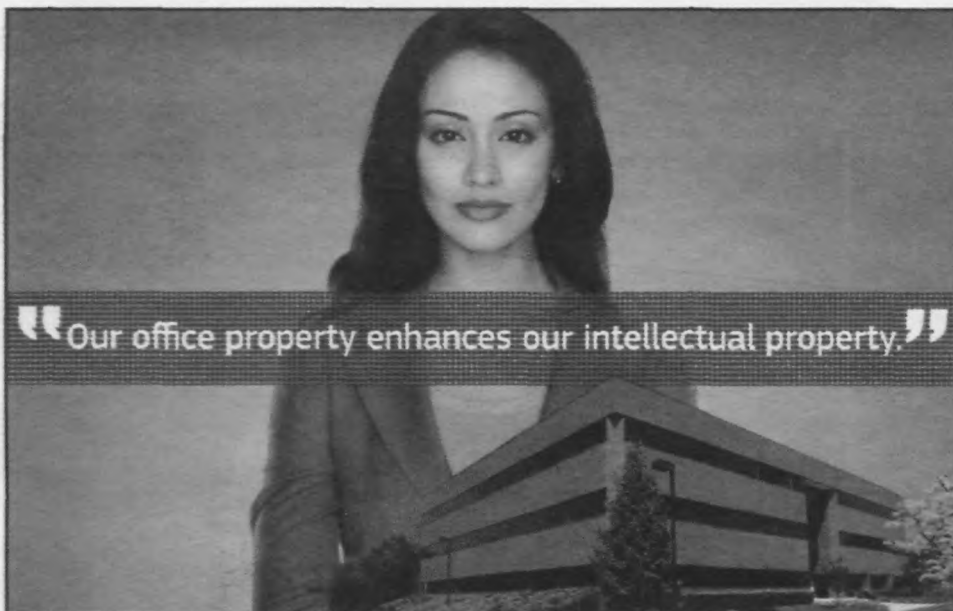

"People who are not English speakers are more aware of developing their skills, they are more aware of the importance of getting along and they make the effort," she said. "We have basic skills and ESL (English as Second Language) courses and I don't have any issue in recruiting for those classes. These people wish to improve their English proficiency. The future of the country hinges on how well everyone is educated."

The workforce development program offers 12-20 hours-per-week programs at UCC's Elizabeth and Plainfield campuses.

"Technology programs; computer training; we've partnered with different nonprofits helping to close the digital divide," Hollie-Davis said. "We offer free computer classes to people throughout the county. We provide access to state-of-the-art technology to include ESL and basic skills, GED (General Educational Development) preparation and GED testing services and occupational training."

Merck, the worldwide pharmaceutical company with a campus in Rahway, is looking to nurture future Ph.D.s in its own backyard. Merck founded the Merck Institute for Science Education in 1993 with the mandate to improve student performance and participation in science. Working with several school districts in Union County, the institute has designed its own curriculum, trains teachers and sponsors specialized classes during the course of the school year.

"It's something we are deeply committed to," explained Ron Rogers, a company spokesman. "We're trying to provide resources and the tools to increase scientific literacy among kids."

"Our office property enhances our intellectual property."

Did You Know... The Myths Vs. Reality of Temporary Work?

Although job creation remains sluggish, one bright spot is the temporary staffing industry. The U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics has reported steady growth in this sector for months, suggesting that more employers are using temporary professionals to help them meet rising workload demands.

However, some professionals fail to consider the option of interim work, largely because of persistent myths about what it does or does not entail.

Myth: Temporary work is low-level work – The fastest growth in temporary employment is occurring in professional and technical occupations, as both businesses and professionals from all backgrounds and skill levels have come to realize the benefits of having greater flexibility. This is the case in the accounting and finance fields.

Professionals have embraced the consulting lifestyle because they can secure challenging, diverse assignments and receive competitive compensation while still maintaining some control over when, where and how much they work. Companies have found they gain access to highly skilled finance professionals who can supply specialized expertise for both immediate and long-term projects.

Myth: Working as an "interim" professional will hurt my prospects of getting hired on a permanent basis – Quite the contrary is true. Many businesses view interim hiring as a way to evaluate individuals for full-time positions. With organizations still reeling from the effects of the recession – including widespread layoffs – employers are understandably cautious about premature hiring. Yet they realize they cannot participate in a recovery if they're understaffed.

To bridge gaps, they're bringing in the most accomplished interim professionals they can find, and many firms are evaluating the skills and cultural fit of these individuals with an eye toward making them full-time employees if business conditions improve.

Myth: Temporary work is short term, sporadic and low-paying – Although project consulting frequently offers the option of working fewer hours than a full-time role might require, professionals with sought-after skills usually find they can work as much as they want. In fact, according to the American Staffing Association (ASA), 79 percent of temporary and contract employees work full time – virtually the same percentage as the rest of the workforce.

In addition, temporary assignments can last from a few days to more than a year. The ASA estimates the average tenure for temporary and contract employees at three to four months. Extended assignments are even more likely in the current environment, as more employers wait for signs of a sustained recovery before adding full-time staff.

Regarding wages, many temporary positions pay on par with salaried ones, and individuals with the most sought-after skills often command a premium. To attract the most highly skilled professionals, staffing firms offer competitive wages and benefits, which often include access to healthcare insurance, vacation and holiday pay and even retirement plans.

Myth: You can't include temporary work on a resume – As the temporary industry has grown and expanded, interim assignments have come to be viewed more as high-level consulting projects than so-called "temp work." Hiring managers understand that project work provides valuable experience that can enhance a candidate's abilities.

Myth: You can't develop new skills working for a temporary staffing company – Accounting and finance professionals who work on a temporary basis often are involved in projects that are as interesting and challenging as those they might encounter in full-time positions. In addition, a staffing firm specializing in accounting and finance positions will stay abreast of the latest industry developments and offer complimentary training opportunities to help project professionals continually upgrade their skills and even earn accreditations.

By distinguishing between the myths and realities of interim work, employees can make an informed decision on whether working as a project professional might be an option that makes sense in the current environment.

Utah Leads the Way

You have to feel sorry for those poor saps in Arizona. There they are seeing all kinds of problems from illegal immigration. Crime is up. Demand for government services like education and health is up. There ought to be a law against it!

Suddenly it dawned on the people of Arizona that there is a law prohibiting people from entering the country without a valid visa. So let's enforce that law, they said, and passed SB1070, requiring law enforcement officials to enforce the federal law.

For doing what they thought was both right and good, the residents of the Arizona have been branded pariahs. What they forgot was to do what was smart.

Now the people of Utah – and I never thought I would be saying this – are doing what is smart. They are separating the issue of the need for foreign workers from the issue of immigration. Though we have always treated these two issues as one, they are, in fact, very different.

Utah's plan is to make work permits readily available to foreign workers. The state could thus screen, tax and track the workers. Only people coming to work would receive the permit; families would be left at home. The permit would be for a defined period and would allow workers to return home for visits with their families.

It's a pretty good idea. And it comes from the most Republican state in the country.

Alas, I don't expect the Utah plan to go very far. After all, how can a state supersede the authority of the United States government and issue its own work permits? It is an elegant solution, and a smart one, but by itself it is unlikely to go anywhere.

It may, however, change the debate. It is time that we stopped talking about immigration reform and started talking about work visas. This will be hard. We are, after all, a nation of immigrants and we have this idea that everyone else in the world is just dying to raise their kids as Americans.

Truth be told, if you have some money there are a lot of places around the world that are very nice to live in. With money you can get your kids a decent education and healthcare.

Most people come to the U.S. to make money to send home and plan to go back. At first they think their stay is temporary. Then, because they know they won't get back in if they go for a visit, they just stay and eventually become immigrants. Work permits would allow them to be the short-term workers that they want to be.

But what if we just solve the problem by doing without all these workers? Won't this also solve unemployment in our country? If it weren't for all these illegals, couldn't we put our own unemployed back to work?

How many of you mow your own lawn? When was the last time you painted your own house? Which of you would encourage your children to spend their summers doing back-breaking work on a farm? I actually sent my son to Colorado several years ago to spend the summer working on our family sod farm. He still hasn't forgiven me for the experience.

The work performed by people who are in this country illegally is critical to our economy. No one else is going to do the work they do. So if we need them, isn't the Utah solution the more sensible option?

There is an old rule that says if the majority of people are going to do something whether or not it is legal, it is both sensible and more efficient to make it legal, tax it and make money off it rather than spend money fighting it. I take my hat off to Utah for seeing this.

An Educated Consumer is Our Best Future

Unanimity in Trenton is rare. Outside support for motherhood and apple pie, consensus of opinion in New Jersey government is as common as hair on a billiard ball.

Yet every member of the New Jersey Legislature recently agreed on passage of a bill that would make permanent and statewide the pilot Interdistrict Public School Choice Program, which allows students to attend school in districts other than where they live. Even the New Jersey Education Association has remained neutral on the bill.

It seems that educating a child is right up there with mom and pie a-la-mode.

Since 2000-2001 the School Choice Program has allowed students from any town to attend schools in 15 state-approved districts, including Kenilworth in Union County. Currently about 900 non-resident students attend schools in one of these districts, according to the Star Ledger. While students from any district are able to opt into the program, geographic proximity limits participation.

If the approved bill becomes law, any school district will be able to participate and students statewide will have the option of attending school out of district.

The Legislature deserves an A+ for supporting the measure and now it awaits Gov. Chris Christie's signature. He should sign it – for the good of the kids and, equally important, for the good of the state.

Because choice is good.

Whether choosing a clothes store, restaurant or barbershop, consumers have the great advantage of choice. The ability of customers to take their business elsewhere ensures healthy competition among product and service providers while allowing consumers to evaluate and select which of those providers best fit their needs.

The Interdistrict Public School Choice Program allows a few students and their parents the same power of choice – essentially to shop around for the product and service that best fit their needs. Widening that option to all students statewide can only have a beneficial impact on the state's education process.

New Jersey has a strong public school system, by many standards and evaluations. SAT math and verbal scores are increasing while writing scores are staying level, and New Jersey scores are consistent with national averages.

Yet that is not the full score. Per-pupil spending in New Jersey increased 7.9 percent last year and many residents and government officials questioned whether taxpayers got their money's worth. More than 1,500 New Jersey students are waiting for tutors, according to Literacy Volunteers of New Jersey – clearly they feel they need help they are not getting in the classroom.

Equally troublesome, last year the New Jersey Business and Industry Association (NJBIA) reported that 81 percent of polled employers said the availability of skilled employees was the most important issue for their business yet only half of those polled were satisfied with the job the state was doing to address this concern. NJBIA also reported that only one-third of employers were satisfied with high school graduates' readiness for entry-level jobs while less than one-third were satisfied with many of the core competencies required in the workplace, such as verbal communication skills, math and science skills, critical thinking skills and written communication skills.

In other words, while New Jersey's students may be scoring well in class, they often are not testing well in the workplace.

Businesses frequently cite the quality New Jersey's workforce as a reason they open, relocate or stay in the state. Protecting that resource must be paramount for state leaders and educators. Allowing students statewide to shop around for the best education will help achieve that.

When high school students enter their junior year they and their parents frequently begin the college shopping process – evaluating colleges and universities based on the quality of the product, their price range and the students' qualifications and needs. The quality of primary and secondary education those students received often goes far toward defining those qualifications and needs.

Likewise, the quality and pay of the jobs non-college-bound students will find after high school graduation also often are dictated by the standard of education they received in high school and elementary school.

So why should students and their parents not be able to start that shopping process earlier, when it potentially has the greatest impact on their futures?

Their parents would not tolerate being told where they had to shop, dine or have their hair cut. A child's education is much more important.

Unskilled Workers Lead to Unfilled Jobs and Expectations

By Domenic Giandomenico

The poor jobs report released for the month of July offered yet another bleak reminder that our economy is not quite out of the woods, with our current unemployment rate stuck at 9.5 percent. The tragedy is that it doesn't have to be like this.

According to Obama administration officials, there are about 3 million jobs that employers are unable to fill due to a vast shortage of workers with skills. Anecdotally, as I travel across the country speaking with business leaders, I can corroborate those claims, if not suggest that number should be higher.

To put that number into perspective, if we were to successfully train Americans to take those jobs, our unemployment rate would shrink instantly by 2 percent – still high, but far better than the situation in which we currently find ourselves.

It is indicative of the state of our education and workforce training systems that we have hardworking Americans out of work needlessly. These unfilled jobs range from middle-skilled jobs – such as energy line workers and health care laboratory technicians – to high-skilled engineering and researching jobs. They are all well-paying, family-sustaining occupations, and they are vital to the growth of our nation's economy.

Employers like Intel have been forced to move their operations overseas, to places like China and Germany, because we have squandered the precious advantage we had in education. Intel's chief executive officer, Paul Otellini, said recently, "As a citizen, I hate it. As a global employer, I have the luxury of hiring the best engineers anywhere on earth. If I can't get them out of M.I.T., I'll get them out of Tsing Hua" – Beijing's version of M.I.T.

Many people point to the emerging "green jobs" as a potential savior to our nation. Unfortunately, we've seen even some American manufacturers shift their production of things such as solar panels to Germany.

Typically when jobs get outsourced people speculate that it's due to taxes or cheaper labor costs. In the case of Germany, however, the average German manufacturing employees make approximately 25 percent more than their American counterparts, and the two nations have nearly identical effective corporate tax rates. Add the costs associated with conducting a multinational operation and the rising costs of fuel for distributing the products and you'd be hard pressed to find a less cost efficient way to do business.

The key difference between the two nations is that Germany significantly outperforms the United States on international education benchmarks. When you're trying to produce such sophisticated equipment, that difference can make a substantial impact on the capacity of the labor pool to fill those jobs.

Germany's current unemployment rate is around 7.5 percent – or exactly what ours would be if we didn't have 3 million unfilled jobs due to skills shortage. While there are many factors that contribute to employment rates, the numbers seem less than coincidental.

The American skills gap only projects to get worse over the coming years. A June report issued by the Georgetown Center on Education and the Workforce indicates that by 2018 nearly two-thirds of our available jobs will require some form of education beyond high school – ranging anywhere from a certificate program to a graduate degree. The same report predicts that we will fall short of those needs by at least 7.7 million people.

It is this stark reality that President Obama had in mind when he recently said, "Education is an economic issue, if not the economic issue of our time."

Companies around the world are increasingly making access to an adequate talent pipeline their top factor in deciding where to build or expand their facilities. We must make it a priority to provide not only a world-class education to each and every one of our children, but also to ensure that our adult workers are given the tools necessary to compete globally.

Anything less and we risk our status as world economic leaders.

Insight In Social Media, Be Careful What You Wish For

By Richard Telofski

In the business news, you've read that companies are inviting their customers into social media so they can "get closer" to them. On the surface, this seems like a wise undertaking. But as the saying goes, "Be careful what you wish for."

Many news articles paint a rosy business picture of opportunity of social media. But fewer draw a picture of the nasty business threats lying in wait in the free-wheeling, relatively liability-free, virtual crowd that is social media.

Yes. It's a crowd.

When your company organizes people on the social web, be it in Facebook, Twitter, MySpace or wherever, you form a crowd, with all the potential for crowd behavior that implies. Assembling a crowd in social media allows people to say what they want, when they want, how they want, and stretch the truth as far as they want about your business.

And it gets worse. Consider that this "semantic threat" to your business is even greater because there are many people out there on the "anti-social web" who just don't like companies.

That anti-company sentiment exists should come as no surprise to you. Indeed, no in-depth studies are needed to back up this assertion; let me support it introspectively.

How many of you highly adore the company that provides your electricity, or the makers of your food or the shoes you put on your kid's feet? My guess is that few of you answered "me." Perhaps the only question here is the level of anti-company sentiment each of us holds, and hides, inside.

Given an instinctive dislike of large, "red tape"-based organizations, it seems highly probable that, at any time, the folks your company has assembled in social media can get a "little too close," turn and semantically bite you on your corporate backside.

Bad, yes, but it doesn't stop here. There are professionals in social media waiting to leverage this ambient anti-company sentiment in the groups you have organized. Who are they?

They are activists that target business.

In recent years, environmental and social activists have swarmed into social media to present their "cases" against companies – maybe your company or its suppliers or customers – to a waiting and, at least somewhat, sympathetic anti-company audience.

When your company organizes people on public social networks such as Facebook or MySpace, you supply anti-corporate activists with a ready and waiting group of people whose social media voices can be whipped into a fervent semantic crowd action and turned viciously against you.

A prime example of such an activist crowd action occurred earlier this year when Greenpeace turned the Nestlé Facebook fan page, with nearly 100,000 Nestlé fans, to that activist's advantage in an ongoing dispute. Little like this had occurred before and the incident, because of its irony and the extreme social media crowd behavior that resulted, was featured in the national and international news. The elevation of the incident out of social media and into the mainstream press inflicted further public relations pain on a company who was not "careful what they wished for."

Can activist semantical co-optation occur even if your company does not organize customers on a given social media site? Of course, it can. Your company can be a target for activist action at any time, on or off the social web. But why carelessly make it easier for them?

Before your company engages in social media, carefully weigh both sides of the social media equation and prepare and plan for this semantical threat, making it more difficult for the co-optation of your customers.

By planning ahead to deal with this threat, and others that lie within social media, you can find that you can "be careful what you wish for."
