Demos maintain control of Union County

By Cheryl Hehl
Staff Writer

There were no surprises this year in the Freeholder race with the Democrats easily maintaining control of the board as they have since 1998.

Although the official vote tally may not be in for weeks, Democrat incumbents Alexander Mirabella and Mohamed Jalloh along with newcomer Bruce Bergen easily won the election by a wide margin, ushering in another year of Democrat control.

Mirabella, 48, of Fanwood, who currently chairs the board and is serving his fifth consecutive term, was the top vote getter with 96,069, or 21.83 percent of the vote. Bergen, 57, came in next, garnering 91,209 or 20.72 percent voter favor. Jalloh, 32, of Roselle, finishing up his first term on the board, came in third with 89,704 or 20.38 percent of the votes.

Their Republican challengers trailed way behind. Stephen Zozlovich received 55,281 votes or 12.56 percent, while Diane Barabas took 54,572 votes, or 12.40 percent votes and Chris Nowak 53,233 or 12.09 percent.

Despite outcry from taxpayers and watchdog groups alike throughout the year, voters threw their support behind the Democratic stronghold, giving the board the nod once again.

Wednesday Bergen said that even though he has been in politics since 1978, many of those years as a party chairman in Springfield waiting for results to come in, it was not quite the same this year.

"It's different being a candidate," Bergen admitted with a chuckle, adding it was an exciting night, especially because the results were delayed.

The ongoing power problems in the county as a result of Superstorm Sandy also impacted where the Democrats waited out the final tallying of votes. Bergen said while party members from all 21 municipalities usually gather at L'Affair in Union, this year their headquarters was at Costa's in Roselle Park.

As a newcomer on the board, Bergen was not daunted at all. In fact, he maintained the same platform that he spoke about right before the election.

"Like I said previously, I want to continue with what the board has been doing, with the primary focus on streamlining the budget," the newly elected candidate said.

Picking up the pieces Union County residents share in a mutual hope of a speedy recovery

By Cheryl Hehl
Staff Writer

Although many Union County residents had their power return this week, many others have not been as lucky. For those still struggling without heat or electricity, the only thought as the sun goes down on another day is how to get through the long night without heat.

In hard hit Rahway, where winds in excess of 70 miles per hour tore 100-year-old oak trees from the ground and tossed them like toys across power lines, residents tried to comprehend the damage to their town while expressing both frustration over their plight.

For Harry Towns, who lives with his wife in Rahway Plaza apartments, a high rise complex, each new day is another opportunity to take to the streets to find out information. On this day, more than a week since Sandy hit the city with a vengeance, Towns made his way to the Rahway Office of Emergency Management on Cherry Street, where he hoped to hear when power might be restored to his building.

"We live in an all electric building, so we can't even boil pots of water to get some heat," the resident explained, mentioning that his daughter and his 2-year old granddaughter also moved in because they had no heat either.

Although Towns said he had hoped to be able to glean some new information about power restoration at the OEM office, a police officer told him all notifications were posted on the window and they had no updates about power

On Nov. 3, firefighters responded to 216 Astoria Place in Union. The home caught fire, leaving fire area students and their parents homeless

Families left homeless as fires proliferate

By Paul Gruelich
 Staff Writer

UNION — The local community is coming together to aid two families who lost their home to a fire last week. The accidental blaze destroyed a two-family house in the Vauxhall section of town, leaving seven people — including five local high school students — homeless.

School Superintendent Patrick Martin said he understands the response so far has been strong from local parents, staff members and students. Many people have come forward in support of a clothing drive organized by the school district.

Martin said although he does not personally know the students impacted by the fire, he has spoken to one of the mothers, and said she was “very grateful and appreciative” for the support of the community.

“There’s just been an outpouring of support,” Martin said. “I am very proud and honored to be with a school district that reaches out this way.”

The students are three ninth graders, a tenth grader, and an eleventh grader.

Anyone interested in helping these residents can bring donations of clothing and other items to the Township Administrator's office in Town Hall. Clothing sizes needed are boy's shirt size-Large, boy's pants size 32 - 32, girls' blouses sizes Medium and Large, girls' pants sizes 5 -6, 8 - 9, 9 - 10, and 14, girls' shoe sizes 9 1/2 and 13, socks, underwear, etc.

More details are available on the town and school websites.

According to Fire Chief Frederic Fretz, on Nov. 3, firefighters responded to 216 Astoria Place. The call came in at 3:45 p.m. and they had the fire under control by 4:19 p.m. A male occupant received minor burns when his clothes caught fire, but refused medical attention.

“The fire damaged the second floor of the two-family house,” Fretz said.

The house is now uninhabitable and the people are still staying at the shelter that has been opened at the Senior Citizen Center on Bonnel Court. Fretz said they are in contact with workers from the Red Cross.

The Fire Department reported that the fire appears to have been accidental, resulting from improper use of the stove.

“They were trying to use the stove to heat the house because there was no power,” Fretz said.

Unfortunately, the fire at Astoria Place is not an unusual case. The Fire Department has battled an unusually high number of fires, most linked in some way to the effects of Hurricane Sandy, which left large portions of the township without power.

While many calls have stemmed from electrical fires related to downed wires, Fretz said citizens' efforts to cope with the steadily dropping temperatures have led to numerous life-threatening mishaps, including one recent incident involving people burning duraflame logs in a metal can inside their home.

On Sunday morning, firefighters responded to a blaze caused by the improper use of a portable generator, which was positioned too close to a wooden fence. The hot exhaust from the generator set the fence on fire, and the blaze spread to a car and from there to a garage.

“This is really just caused by people trying to keep warm,” Fretz said.

Fire officials urged residents to be careful with use of light and heat, and to make sure generators are positioned a safe distance from buildings. Fretz said DPW and Police are also working very hard to get things back to normal in town.

“We’re making good progress every day,” Fretz said.

Family of seven takes shelter in Cranford

By Cheryl Hehl
Staff Writer

For one Union family, losing power the night Sandy hit meant there was no other choice but to leave their Forest Drive home in the middle of the night to seek a safe place to ride out the storm, with five children under the age of five, including a newborn.

Although this family initially was concerned they would not find a shelter that would take five children, they eventually were guided to the Cranford Community Center, a regional shelter for families displaced by Sandy.

There, they were welcomed with open arms by the New Jersey Department of Health and Senior Services and the Salvation Army, joining some 61 other people who also needed a place to stay.

But while the center has bent over backwards to make their life as normal as possible, even providing the family with their own private room, Chastity Santana and partner Francisco Rojas, while so grateful, readily admitted they would rather be in their own home.

Like most people without power after the devastating storm, the couple have tried not to become frustrated by the lack of information coming their way regarding power restoration on their street. But it is hard when there are five small children involved, Santana said.

For Ian, 5, Aaron, 4, Ariana, not quite 3, and Andres, 19 months, the center has become one big playground where they made new friends to play with during the day. Newborn baby girl Aarya, Santana said, is too young to know anything has changed, but keeping her on a schedule has been difficult, if not impossible.

"My kids need to be home in their own house. They are so little and this is such a change for them," she added, admitting she is beginning to wonder if anyone is listening.

"I have called PSE&G, and do you know what the woman told me? She said she is 50-years-old and had three kids and no power. That doesn't help me. I just want to know what their plan is, when they will get to our street so we can go home and put our children in their own beds at night," the 37-year-old mother said, adding that more than a week after the storm she still cannot get answers from anyone at PSE&G, the townhall or anyone at the state level.

Although feisty and admittedly ready to step to the plate to do

Widespread damage plunges Springfield into darkness

By Paul Greulich
Staff Writer

The people of Springfield are recovering from widespread damage and loss of power after the East Coast was battered by the torrential winds of Hurricane Sandy last week.

Township Administrator Anthony Cancro reported almost 100 trees down, with 50 to 60 homes significantly damaged by trees or wind. The town was completely without power for several days. By Monday power had only been restored to 50 percent of the town, and the Chisholm Recreation Center was set to remain open as a shelter as temperatures began dropping into the 30s at night.

As of 10 a.m. Tuesday morning, Jersey Central Power and Light reported 39 percent of 7,413 Springfield customers were without power. PSE&G reported another five customers out of seven without power.

While town hall was officially closed throughout last week, department heads and elected officials were mobilized at the emergency operations center at fire department headquarters.

"The employees of the township have worked around the clock with their elected officials to do everything in their control to bring normalcy back to Springfield," Cancro said.

Dubbed "Frankenstorm" by the media, this rare storm was spawned of an incestuous Atlantic tryst between Hurricane Sandy and a wayward nor'easter. The foul spawn of their union combined the elements of a tropical cyclone with a winter storm, and took a heavy toll for people along the East Coast.

A state of emergency was declared in New Jersey, and most municipal, county and school facilities were closed for at least part of last week.

Cancro said advance warning of the storm proved useful, giving residents plenty Shattered

Above: a massive tree in Rahway River Park is felled by the destructive winds from super-storm Sandy, which ripped through the Northeast last week. Many residents are still recovering. Left: Travel has been severely hampered at times, and those lucky enough to have gas in their vehicles routinely find new routes to get where they are going, often encountering closed roads due to down wires and trees. But a little extra travel time would be the least worrisome event for most residents of New Jersey.

In the 'rough'

At the Colonia Country Club that borders Rahway on Route 27, a well placed sign makes light of the disaster that devastated much of New Jersey, including Union County. Millions of homeowners were left without power and heat in the Northeast, coastal flooding destroyed much of the Jersey shore, lower Manhattan has been a wash with stormwater, and trees are still down all over the state. Utility crews from across the nation have rushed to the area to help out, but as of Wednesday morning, thousands were still left in the dark with temperatures plummeting in the overnight hours. There were the lucky few who escaped the serious fury of Hurricane Sandy, and many residents reached out and helped those around them who were much less fortunate.

LINE DANCING — A gas line begins in Rahway and snakes its way into neighboring Woodbridge. Many residents in Union County and New Jersey have waited hours for gas. Gov. Chris Christie has enforced an even/odd gas rationing system, which in some areas has seemed to limit to length of lines, but not the need for more gas supply.

YOUNG ADULTS' SKIN CANCER EPICEMIC

It is often said that young adults sometimes act as if they are going to live forever. That is, they tend to grossly underestimate risks that older adults generally come to know are dangerous to life and limb.

This may help explain why teens and young adults continue to ignore repeated warnings about the dangers of indoor tanning. In any case, a recent U.S. study shows that skin cancer is rising among young adults at an alarming rate.

Between 1970 and 2009, the rate of melanoma among women increase eight-fold and quadrupled among men. This is an even higher tare of incidence than the National Cancer Institute had reported.

Indoor tanning raises the risk of melanoma by 75%.

At my practice, we are dedicated to providing the highest quality of medical skin care possible. With compassion and respect, we can treat even the most challenging skin problem, utilizing the most recent advances in dermalogic therapy. To schedule an appointment call 908-925-8877. Evening and Saturday appointments are available. Our office is conveniently located at 822 North Wood Ave., Linden. New patients are always welcome.

P.S. During the period covered by the study mentioned above, death rates from melanoma fell, which may be attributed to early intervention. Come in for a skin cancer screening..

Observing Veterans Day

Veterans Day will be observed on Sunday, Nov. 11. This federal holiday is set aside to honor all veterans of the American armed services. Locally, and in ceremonies across the United States, the holiday is celebrated with parades; services at community war memorials; and visits by veterans to local schools where they speak about their experiences in uniform and sometimes are serenaded by elementary school children. And from the words spoken by mayors and the Veterans Day posters composed by second-graders, we hear two common themes: "Sacrifice" and "Thank you."

The holiday has been observed in one form or another since 1919, and for a brief time, from 1971 to 1977, it was held not on Nov. 11, but on the fourth Monday of October. This move was in accordance with the Uniform Monday Act which mandated that four federal holidays — Washington's Birthday, Memorial Day, Columbus Day, and Veterans Day — should always appear on a Monday. The was done to provide federal workers with a three-day holiday. But the importance of the date Nov. 11, the date in 1918 when the armistice ending major hostilities of World War I was signed, transcends any benefits provided by a three-day weekend. The holiday was returned in 1978 to its traditional spot on the calendar where it has remained since.

Although all veterans are honored on Veterans Day, most of the attention is given to those who served during wartime. From the doughboys of World War I to the GIs of World War II to the grunts of the Vietnam War, we look to the sacrifice and bravery of those members of the armed services when we think of our veterans. Sure, they don't win wars all by themselves. Crucial help came from the women who worked in the factories during those wars, the politicians who assembled the winning alliances and even the children who held scrap drives and sold war bonds. But it was the veterans who left their homes, cut short their educations and quit their jobs to do the fighting. They lived in military barracks and learned the skills of combat and then were shipped overseas, sometimes for years on end, to fight in the trenches of France or on the beaches of Normandy or in the jungles of Southeast Asia. Many of them never came home, or they arrived home with injuries that remain with them still. They did all this because they were patriotic Americans and their country needed them. Sometimes the most dangerous journeys of our lives are triggered by the simple values we hold dear.

Our veterans made sacrifices that most of us can only imagine. We join with other Americans on this Veteran's Day to say "Thank you" to the brave men and women who have served in our armed forces. In their honor, fly your American flag this Sunday.

Heroes and villains of superstorm Sandy

Cranford Officer Spencer Durkin pulled up in his black and white to the Exxon station on the corner of Centennial and South Avenue early on Sunday morning. He had already had the routine down. After stepping out, he calmed the harried motorists sensing gas pumping was going to begin.

The next task of placing the yellow tape around the station entrances was a skill he had refined through practice.

He actually looked with disdain at a previous poor taping job. So began another day of explaining the complexities of odd/even service, estimating when pumping might begin and directing traffic. Around town, the station owners highly praised the police effort.

Durkin even let down his guard a bit, giving a grin when told the story about a stubborn motorist. As a precious tanker arrived from Baltimore to fill the tanks, a driver refused to stop blocking the entrance. The next driver in line knocked on the window and questioned, "are you just being temporarily arrogant or are you from Westfield?"

BY FRANK CAPECE

Durkin showed real compassion when a friend, a first responder, described finding dead bodies in Staten Island while on duty.

Down the road in Garwood, the police have the kind of story that becomes legend. While directing traffic into the Hess station, a driver said, "Oh I didn't want gas, I just thought this was the right hand turn lane."

A few nights earlier the friendly owner of Villa Stefana in Clark patiently served the mob of customers, took payment, and even cooked some food. When a large, fairly-dumb customer loudly complained over the lack of food, the patrons in unison turned to tell the dumb fellow just how dumb he really was.

In Hillside, Mayor Joe Menza spent his weekend going door-to-door in the community that seemed to be one of the hardest hit in the county. By early this week the lack of power in his town didn't seem to be getting better.

My friend Michael, the claims adjuster from Union, knows his job is just beginning.

He often reminds of his special disdain for lawyers. He expresses amazement that insured people sometimes think that being especially nice or nasty actually helps their cause.

Over the years, he has offered me some helpful hints. Taking photos of the damage is really helpful. After the photos he doesn't object to remedial work taking place. He also advises to make a request for emergency funds which some companies provide.

Maybe his best advice is to actually study and know your policy in terms of wind and flood damage. He likes to tell that often adjusters from the Midwest and South don't like to work in the Northeast. As one adjuster told him, "those people in Jersey and New York just talk too fast."

POWERLESS — At the Pathmark in Rahway, many shelves were low on basic needs last week in the wake of superstorm Sandy, and entire aisles were off limits as major supermarkets, along with many residents, struggled with power outages.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

A debt of gratitude owed, a continued recovery ahead

To The Editor:

The last two weeks have been trying times. Beginning with the preparations to deal with Hurricane Sandy, through the storm itself and then with the aftermath, there is much to be proud of in Union County. Amid the sadness and destruction we have seen acts of kindness and heroism. Neighbors have reconnected in the face of tragedy and throughout the county people have come together to help each other.

I especially want to single out the police departments and other first responders who put in long hours and set aside their own needs for the service of others. Of course this is why they join public service but it shines brightest during difficult situations. Throughout the course of the storm and subsequent cleanup and evaluations I have been buoyed by the unwavering dedication of officers, firefighters, EMTs, and other first responders. We all owe them a debt of gratitude.

Unfortunately, during and immediately after the storm, there were individuals that attempted to loot and burglarize closed businesses or engage in other criminal activity. The local police departments were able to respond and investigate. Anyone with additional information about such activities is urged to anonymously call Union County Crime Stoppers at 908-654-TIPS. Calls are eligible for a cash reward of up to $5,000.

Finally, there are other criminals that will seek to exploit tragedy. Often after serious events that cause property damage law enforcement sees a rise in home improvement scams. If someone comes to you offering to do work at a low cost and quick, it is likely too good to be true. The state department of Consumer Affairs has additional information at www.njconsumeraffairs.gov/disaster/floodtipsflyer_1.pdf. Additionally, my office is available to help and may be contacted at 908-527-4500 or ucpo@ucnj.org.

Due to Superstorm Sandy, many voters were sent to new locations, or were able to vote using the internet, inundated clerks across the state with absentee ballots.

Storm batters election process

By Paul Greulich
Staff Writer

The Democratic process had to surmount a few stumbling blocks this year as residents affected by Superstorm Sandy were allowed use of alternative locations or methods to ensure everyone who was registered to vote could participate in the election.

Union County Spokesman Sebastian D'Elia said the storm presented "huge problems" with the election process, including a lack of power in normal polling locations that forced some municipalities to relocate their voting stations. This was the case in Berkeley Heights, Clark, Cranford, Scotch Plains, Springfield, Summit and Westfield.

Residents also made use of in-person early voting, which involved visiting their Clerk's office to complete paper ballots and drop them in a secure container there.

However, with many New Jersey residents displaced from their homes and a gas shortage limiting travel capabilities, the State of New Jersey Division of Elections turned to electronic methods.

Voters were authorized to download absentee ballots from their county clerk's website and return them via email or fax. After verifying the applicants were registered to vote in Union County, the clerk's office sent ballots back by email or fax, whichever the voter had chosen. County clerks are required to respond to each application individually.

These programs are typically available for use only to voters overseas or enlisted in the military, and expanding them to including thousands of more voters than usual resulted in challenges for county clerks already working in high gear.

Union County Clerk Rajoppi said her office was only notified of the changes in voting procedure on Sunday night.

"And we did not get the protocol for even doing this until Monday night," Rajoppi said.

Rajoppi reported receiving about 20,000 absentee ballots this election cycle, which is much more than normal. In the past, the most absentee ballots received during a presidential election year was about 12,000, she said.

"On Sunday at my Westfield office alone, my staff and I processed over 1,100 absentees," Rajoppi said.

The receipt of some 2,000 electronic ballot applications overloaded Rajoppi's staff. On Tuesday, Rajoppi conferred with her fellow clerks around the state and found them all similarly swamped. A grim consensus was reached and communicated to the state.

"None of us would be able to respond to the very high volume by 8 p.m. that night," Rajoppi said.

At this point the state agreed to extend the deadline for electronic voting until Friday, Nov. 9, at 8 p.m., although ballot applications still had to be filed by Tuesday afternoon.

On Wednesday morning, Rajoppi said county officials were continuing to process electronic applications.

Rajoppi said another problem is that it does not appear to have been made clear to voters that these processes were only available to residents who have been forced to relocate outside of the county by Hurricane Sandy. Many ineligible voters have attempted to take advantage of the electronic voting system, she said.

The widespread use of these unconventional methods has stirred concern about the viability of large-scale email voting, particularly in some other counties where servers broke down, preventing some applications from going through.

Rajoppi said there have not been any concerns expressed to her office about the accuracy of electronic voting, and D'Elia would not address the topic directly.

"Our job is to implement the directive sent to us by the governor," D'Elia said.

Dems. maintain control

"I think the major concern is always balancing services to residents along with cost," Bergen said, noting that "residents are entitled to a certain amount of services and they should receive them."

Wednesday Bergen said he still believes shared services among towns could go a long way to helping the situation, especially with the county paving the way.

Union County voters also made it clear how they felt about the two state questions on the ballot.

The question of whether state universities and colleges see hundreds of millions in funds borrowed by the state to pay for various improvements at educational institutions was approved by 61.56 percent, or 50,104 votes, compared to the 31,289, or 38.44 percent of voters who did not want the measure passed.

The bonding will provide state grants of $300 million for public research universities, $247.5 million for state universities and $52.5 million for private institutions with an endowment of $1 million or less.

Another $500 million will go to 19 community colleges around the state.

The other ballot question, whether judges should pay more towards their health and pension benefits, received overwhelming support from voters, with 62,442, or 80.77 percent agreeing, and just 14,868 or 19.23 percent not agreeing.

Gov. Chris Christie and other legislators strongly supported this measure, maintaining if state employees had to pay more towards their benefits, so should supreme and superior court judges. In fact, the legislature passed the law 28-0, and the assembly followed suit at 62-3.

A Rutgers-Eagleton poll taken in October indicated that 70 percent of voters favored the change.

Party power shifts for some

By Paul Greulich
Staff Writer

Local voters ushered in Democrat majorities in Cranford and Springfield this year. The two flood-prone, similarly-sized townships are both run by township committees that regularly changing hands from Democrat to Republican control.

In Cranford, Democrat Thomas Hannen Jr. swung the balance of power in favor of his party by defeating Scott Mease with 5,327 votes to 4,648. In January the committee will have a 3-2 Democrat majority.

In Springfield, Democrats appear to have gained a 3-2 majority on the Township Committee, but the margins of victory were narrow and candidates remained wary of the impact of the many absentee ballots and electronic votes continuing to be processed.

Republican incumbents Marc Krauss and Jerry Fernandez endured a hard-fought race against Democrats Margaret Bandrowski and David Barnett. Unofficial tallies indicate a narrow, split ticket decision, with Fernandez leading with 2,935 votes, followed by Barnett with 2,852. Bandrowski received 2,825 and Krauss trailed with 2,812.

On Wednesday Fernandez was reserved, noting the results were not yet certified.

"Until it's official, I'm not going to concede nor celebrate," Fernandez said.

Fernandez said Superstorm Sandy may have played a role in tipping the scales against the Republicans in a close race. For the last 10 days, both incumbents were "very active" in the community.

"We had to put the campaign on hold, and that might have hurt us a little in terms of votes," Fernandez said. "But we wouldn't have changed what we did in any way."

This year's election also saw the defeat of a ballot question concerning a potential change in government. The question asked whether voters favored forming a Charter Study Commission to examine possibly changing the township's form of government. It failed by a narrow margin, with 1,945 votes in favor and 1,958 against. But again, all results are unofficial at press time.

During debates, candidates clashed over the subject of the township's form of government and the possibility of changing it. Barnett and Bandrowski firmly opposed any changes to the township's charter, while Krauss and Fernandez supported putting the matter to a vote.

"It was up to the voters," Fernandez said. "The people have spoken on that issue. Whatever it is, it is what it is."

However, he noted the narrow margin of the question's defeat and said a future tally may bring a different outcome.

All results are unofficial until certified by the county clerk.

Residents weary from long road to recovery restoration. Obviously disappointed, Towns respectfully thanked the officer and tried to express optimism about the situation, but admitted that being without heat or hot water was beginning to wear on his family.

"It's real bad," he added, "but we will hang in there. What else can we do?" Towns said.

Omar Campbell, availing himself of the charging station set up outside the OEM office, huddled down in his coat, hoping to ward off the cold while his cell phone charged. Admitting his spirits have yet to get down, Barnes explained that his family had banded together in one house to wait out the power outage.

"We are in a two family on East Stearns Street," he said, adding that initially his grandmother was distressed about the storm and power loss, but with the entire family all together, the stress of the situation had lessened.

"We actually are all sleeping in the living room, which is warmer," he said, explaining that boiling pots of water on the stove did generate enough heat to quell the cold.

"We're keeping our spirits up," Campbell added, smiling despite the biting chill in the air. "Everyday we have hope the power will go back on."

Meanwhile at town hall, a few residents sat in the administrator's office, hoping to talk to Mayor Rick Proctor about the fact that they were receiving little information about the situation they were in as a result of the storm damage.

"I live in a three-floor apartment building on Grand Avenue and its all electric. There are elderly people in our building who have no way to keep warm," said the woman, who declined giving her name. "I'm here for the elderly, they need help."

Another woman, who also admitted she was angry about receiving no information, said trees were down all over her area on the east side of Rahway.

"There is no communication, we have no power, how can we go on the computer to get the information the city is putting out?" she said, adding that "someone should be putting out flyers or going through the city on a bullhorn."

In back of Roosevelt school at Pierpont and Bryant streets, Public Service Electric and Gas employee Jason Giroud stood guard as a tree cutting crew from South Carolina attempted to untangle toppled oak trees from mangled telephone poles that came down during the storm.

Giroud, who grew up one street over, explained that while he no longer lives in the city, when a storm of this magnitude occurs, "it's all hands on deck."

Actually an environmental analyst, the former city resident noted that regardless whether a PSE&G employee is an engineer, secretary or vice president, everyone is called to duty.

"Because I previously lived in Rahway, they sent me here to oversee this crew and make sure everything goes okay," Giroud said, adding that while growing up in Rahway, there never was a storm that leveled such destruction of trees and power lines.

"We have crews coming from Missouri, Florida, all over the country," he said, mentioning that the South Carolina company working on this site, Lewis Tree Service, brought six trucks with them when they drove through the night to reach New Jersey.

Giroud also pointed out that while many people may believe the power lines are dead, many are not.

"These lines are very dangerous because there are live lines among all these trees," he said.

Michelle Sutton, whose home is at the intersection of Pierpont and Forbes streets, explained that she had been walking throughout her neighborhood everyday to see if any progress was being made. Not daunted by the twisted wires that remained entangled in the row of oak trees, she thanked Giroud and said she had hope power would be back on soon.

"We are using lots of blankets and boiling water on the stove," she said.

"I believe in God and the fight is not ours," Sutton added.

Over in Linden in the Tremley Point section, spirits were not as high. According to Mayor Rich Gerbounka, this area was hit by a 13-foot tidal surge from nearby Arthur Kill which left many homes uninhabitable. One resident, who stood in front of a home that leaned to one side precariously, sighed and confessed that he did not know what to do next.

"What do you do?" he asked, adding that the shock of water filling his home and destroying everything in it was almost more than one could comprehend.

"I've lived here a long, long time and I have never seen anything like this happen," he said. His neighbor, he said, had to be taken to the hospital the night of the storm.

"I guess it just was too much for her to handle," he added, imploring that his name or the street not be in the newspaper.

"We don't want people coming down here to look or looters taking advantage of this situation. We have been through enough," he said.

Gerbounka was saddened by the loss in the Tremley Point area, expressing concern for residents and the fact so much heavy industry had suffered damage.

"We had boats on South Wood Avenue the night of the storm. That's how deep the water was that night," the mayor said, shaking his head in disbelief.

Several blocks away, a woman struggled to haul soggy carpeting from her home, waving away any interruption, saying "sorry, sorry, I just have to keep working. If I stop I will cry and there is no time for crying now."

Shelter from the storm: Young family lives at Cranford center

what it takes to get power in their home, Santana confessed that she is not always so strong. Late at night, when all the children are fast asleep, the mother gives in to the emotion that she keeps so well under control during the day.

"The other night at 2 a.m. I went into the main room and I just broke down crying," she said, but added that she and Rojas stay strong in front of their little ones.

"To them this is an adventure, but it's not home. It's not where they are used to being everyday," she said, sadness edging her voice for just a few seconds.

Despite the dire circumstances this family has found themselves in, Santana and Rojas head out every morning, the children in tow.

On some days they do laundry, which piles up quickly with five little ones. But regardless where they go, each outing involves driving over to Forest Drive to see what, if anything, has transpired since the previous day. Rojas' said he and Santana both hope that when they round the corner they will see PSE&G trucks working to bring their home back online, but everyday the huge trees remain untouched.

Santana, who has been on maternity leave, and Rojas both work for Verizon, but because of the storm, the 31-year-old father has been on leave.

"I was supposed to go back to work Nov. 1, but they have extended it until Nov. 12," Santana said, adding that she is concerned power will not be back on by then.

Leading their four younger children out the door of the center, Rojas carried the car seat containing newborn Aarya while Santana chases their four energetic children, who stop in their tracks at the sound of their mother's voice.

The young mother smiles with pride when asked how well behaved her children have been during this crisis, but confessed that her children are not perfect.

"Oh they have to go into time out, trust me, but they are good kids," she said laughing. Moments later, Santana takes off, running after 19-month-old Andres, who is moving at a rapid clip towards the parking lot. The others follow, laughing and looking back at their parents, their rosy cheeks and big smiles not betraying that their lives have been turned upside down.

"We just want someone to help us get back into our home," Santana shouts back as she scoops up a giggling Andres in her arms and hugs him to her tightly.

"No one should have to go through this," the mother said, "just tell us something, anything, so we are not waiting and not knowing."

Uprooted in Union County

While some areas were hit harder than others, virtually no place was left unscathed by superstorm Sandy's destructive winds. In Roselle Park, police tape seals off a street as a large tree blocks the road and damages power lines. Many families had to relocate from their homes due to tree limbs and power lines, but also to seek warmth. Many neighbors less affected reached out to those around them, but still other had to seek warmth and care in local shelters provided by the county and municipalities.

of time to prepare over the weekend. Emergency management personnel held meetings while residents stocked up on food, water, and essential medications.

"Everything we could do was done. Once the storm hit we started having meetings immediately to find out what the priorities were," Cancro said.

In anticipation of flooding, mandatory evacuations were ordered in parts of communities along the Rahway River such as Cranford, Rahway and Springfield. However, no flooding was reported. Water proved far less of an issue than wind, which reached speeds of 80 mph, taking a heavy toll on trees, utility poles and buildings.

Springfield Mayor Ziad Shehady did not return calls for comment.

Springfield Township Committee member David Amlin said the ground may have been better able to absorb the 3-5 inches of rain that were initially predicted than during past storms, like Hurricane Irene.

"This year we have relatively low water tables because we had a relatively dry summer, so the concern of flooding was not as great," Amlin said.

The Westfield Health Department, which contracts with Springfield as well as many other Union County towns, reported a heavy volume of calls from local residents. Health Officer Megan Avallone said citizens questioned health officials on subjects ranging from how to apply for FEMA assistance to whether the drinking water was safe. Many senior citizens contacted the health department inquiring as to how to replenish their supplies of

While the storm no doubt reminded many residents of memorable disasters last year such as the October snowstorm which occurred one year to the day, and Tropical Storm Irene, Avallone said Hurricane Sandy has been significantly worse in terms of widespread damage.

"We were able to refer people to what pharmacies were still open and would honor their prescriptions," Avallone said.

The Chisholm Community Center was opened as a shelter to provide residents with food, water, and a charging station. On Saturday about six individuals spent the night there.

"Most people were there for the heat," Avallone said.

The Westfield Health Department covers nine Union County Municipalities — Fanwood, Garwood, Mountainside, New Providence, Roselle Park, Springfield, Summit, Westfield, and Cranford. Avallone said based on her observations, Westfield, Mountainside and New Providence seemed to suffer the most damage from the storm.

Avallone said she has seen a strong effort put forth on the part of DPW crews in the towns she covers.

"In all the towns the cleanup efforts have really been phenomenal," Avallone said.

Cancro said local businesses appear to have suffered little physical damage, but are experiencing "economic hardship" caused by staying closed so long.

"The big thing we're heard is: 'When can we get power back so we can open up again?'" Cancro said on Monday.

The township government is also going to be feeling the financial impact of the storm as a result of expenses related to overtime pay, equipment, and gasoline.

"We're going to be putting in an emergency appropriation request for approximately $250,000," Cancro said.

While the storm no doubt reminded many residents of memorable disasters last year such as the October snowstorm which occurred one year to the day, and Tropical Storm Irene, Avallone said Hurricane Sandy has been significantly worse in terms of widespread damage.

Avallone explained that during Tropical Storm Irene, the worst damage was mostly confined to Springfield and Cranford.

"With Irene the damage was more localized," Avallone said. "But with this storm we're just seeing devastation everywhere, across the board."

GOT GAS? — Residents old enough to remember the presidency of Jimmy Carter might be familiar with the even/odd gas rationing system put in place over the weekend by Gov. Chris Christie. There are no such restrictions on red gas cans, and in northern New Jersey, residents would be hard pressed to find gas without waiting in line for hours.

ARTS & LEISURE

'Swan Lake' at Cranford theater is 'absolutely stunning'

By Bea Smith
Staff Writer

When London's Royal Opera House, in all its glory, flashed on the screen Sunday afternoon at the Cranford Theater in connection with the astounding production of the Ballet in Cinema's "Swan Lake," a ballet aficionado did not envy the hundreds of well-dressed people seated in five tiers of balconies and in the theater proper.

And the reason was because even though the Royal Ballet's spectacular performance in four acts was filmed live from the London stage on Oct. 23 of this year, the giant screen at the Cranford Theater offered more — much more — to the New Jersey audience than to the British theatergoers. In the first place, a ballet fan could imagine how she or he, practically seated in the first row, could be rewarded with such enormous close ups of faces and bodies and witness the appropriate steps and movements, nearly in one's lap. In addition, with this particular Ballet in Cinema presentation, the Cranford audience was presented with a true study in the world of ballet — such as working with the choreographer, or in rehearsals, with sweat running down the male dancers' chests and the ballerinas, so exhausted that they would sit in a corner, gasping, near tears.

Nevertheless, the show must go on, and the smiling faces during the performance and particularly at the climax of the ballet, as the principals and the others took innumerable bows, one would never know how much human energy and power really go into the making of a complete ballet. Particularly the absolutely stunning "Swan Lake."

Swayed and enchanted by the exquisite, spellbinding music of Pyotr Il'yich Tchaikovsky, who actually wrote the score in a year and completed it April, 1876, "Swan Lake" also boasts of exciting choreography by Marius Petipa and Lev Ivanov, with additional choreography by Frederick Ashton and David Bintley. This Anthony Dowell production, with impressively colorful designs by Yolanda Sonnabend, bright and dark lighting designs by Mark Henderson, was brilliantly conducted by Boris Gruzin.

The story's background appears to have had Russian influences before it was brought to the London stage. Among many magical moments, in exceptional pantomime, it captivates the audience with a tale of Prince Siegfried, who, on his 21st birthday, celebrated at a ball at the castle, must choose a bride, among those lovely ladies, who are in attendance. However, he falls in love with the Swan Queen Odette, who has had a spell forced upon her to spend half of her life as a swan. And if Odette marries the prince, she will be free from the curse. Unfortunately, the count has a daughter, Odile, a black swan, who resembles Odette, and through his trickery, attempts to have Odile pretend that she is the white swan, turned into a beautiful woman.

Throughout all four acts of the beautiful presentation of "Swan Lake," the ballerinas and the male dancers are exceptional as they fly around the stage. Of particular beauty is the coordination of the many wonderfully talented bal-

SANDY WAS HERE — Above: A tree rests on power lines in Fanwood. Middle: Residents throughout the state have been experiencing long lines for gasoline, much like this one on the Rahway/Woodbridge border of Route 35. Bottom: Firewood is very plentiful all across Union County, as homeowners do their best to clear properties and restore normalcy to their everyday lives.

'Swan Lake' delights in Cranford

lerinas, who portray the swans at the lake, and actually, mezzmarize the audience.

However, it is Zenaida Yanowsky, an exceptionally fine ballet artist, whose inspirational performances as both Odette and Odile, captivate an audience as she reaches the very heights of perfection. She is absolutely extraordinary. Nehemiah Kish, as the handsome Prince Siegfried, has an enormous, emotional appeal, and his dancing equals the many male ballet talents. Gary Avis as Von Rothbart, the evil sorcerer, is magnificently frightening — so much so, that when he appeared at the end of the performance for a bow, the London audience wildly screamed its "boos." And that was right after that same audience applauded the other principals endlessly.

The Cranford Theater can take pride in offering such a theatrical ballet gem as "Swan Lake," complete in four acts and two intermissions on its large screen. Because every aspect of this production is magnificent. Unquestionably, it's as good as it gets! And in ballet, truly, there's nothing better.

You may face a decision that gives you pause from an ethical or humanitarian standpoint, Capricorn. Give it some thought before deciding what to do.

AQUARIUS, Jan. 21 to Feb. 18.

PISCES, Feb. 19 to March 20.

Pisces, your innovative approach could certainly work in your favor this week. Don't be afraid to apply this approach to your finances.

SUDOKU

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

THIS IS H.S. FOOTBALL

By JR Parachini
Sports Editor

For those who already got their power back - God Bless! I am both thankful for you and very envious.

As of Monday, mine is not back and JCP&L has no clue when it will be back.

As far as Union County football is concerned, everyone had a bye week last weekend.

However, football was probably the last thing on the minds of Union County residents who are still coping with the devastation that Hurricane Sandy brought to their lives.

As of press time on Monday, I could only hope that all 12 games - which include all 17 Union County football playing schools - that were postponed last weekend will be played this weekend.

Now this weekend will be the final go-round before the playoffs begin.

The NJSIAA pushed the playoffs back a week, with the quarterfinals now scheduled to be played at the higher seeds Nov. 16 and 17 and the semifinals at the higher seeds Nov. 30 and Dec. 1.

In between, Thanksgiving games will take place the night before on Nov. 21, the day of on Nov. 22 and some games will be scheduled for Nov. 23 and 24.

The state championship games will now take place exactly a week after the semifinals on Dec. 8 and 9.

Then basketball and wrestling seasons will commence the very next weekend on Dec. 14.

Elizabeth and Summit - both 8-0 and the only remaining undefeated teams in Union County - were defeated in state championship games last year.

Elizabeth lost the North 2, Group 4 final to Piscataway 41-34 at Rutgers.

The Minutemen are the favorite to capture the first North 2, Group 5 section.

Summit lost the North 2, Group 2 final to Madison 47-7 at Kean. The Hilltoppers are the favorite in North 2, Group 3, which is a section they captured twice in the playoff era, first in 1976 and second in 1980.

First the lights went out on Opening Night - Friday, Sept. 7 - when games - like this one at Union's Cooke Memorial Field - were halted because of thunder and lightning. That left football referees and school officials scrambling to find the right times to continue games. Now, after Hurricane Sandy, 12 games involving all 17 Union County football playing schools were postponed last weekend. It may turn out that all 12 will not be made up this weekend before the playoffs will now begin a week later next weekend.

Football games could still be in jeopardy for this weekend

Effects of Hurricane Sandy continue to swell

By JR Parachini
Sports Editor

Last year we had Hurricane Irene hit the area in late August, right before football game-scrimmages were still played on their original dates, re-scheduled or never played at all.

Then two months later we were hit with a freak, rare, late-October snowstorm on the last Saturday of the month, one that caused - in many cases - even more damage than Hurricane Irene.

Now this.

Hurricane Sandy - and possibly a nor'easter from this Wednesday to boot.

Hurricane Sandy, basically, flipped New Jersey, New York and parts of Connecticut like pancakes and then slammed those states down harder than a Darryl Dawkins dunk through the hoop.

From a high school football vantage point in Union County, all 12 games involving all 17 football playing schools were postponed last weekend.

They may not all be made up this weekend either if kids in certain school districts have the entire week off from school because of the lasting effects of Hurricane Sandy.

Union is supposed to play its eighth regular season game at Hunterdon Central Friday night. The game was originally supposed to be played last Friday night.

However, if Union has no school this entire week - and as of press time on Monday UHS was already closed through Wednesday - then there will be no Union-Hunterdon Central game.

That means that - in Union's case - the Farmers will have had two weekends off - not normal weekends by any stretch - before playing a N2, G5 quarterfinal.

State playoff competitions forced to be rescheduled

That may be the case for other Union County schools as well. That was to be determined as this week transpired.

The NJSIAA pushed the playoffs back a week, with the quarterfinals now scheduled to be played at the higher seeds Nov. 16 and 17 and the semifinals at the higher seeds Nov. 30 and Dec. 1.

In between, Thanksgiving games will take place the night before on Nov. 21, the day of on Nov. 22 and some games will be scheduled for Nov. 23 and 24.

The state championship games will now take place exactly a week after the semifinals on Dec. 8 and 9.

This weekend's schedule - not including days and times - includes:

- Union at Hunterdon Central
- Bridgewater-Raritan at Linden
- North Plainfield at Cranford
- Johnson at Delaware Valley
- Manville vs. Dayton at Union's Cooke Memorial Field
- Bound Brook at Brearley
- Hillside at Summit
- Roselle at Rahway
- Elizabeth at Plainfield
- Westfield at Scotch Plains
- Roselle Park at New Providence
- Bernards at Gov. Livingston

Going into what will again be the final weekend of games before the playoffs commence, as many as 10 Union County teams qualified for the playoffs.

They include:

* Elizabeth and Union in the first North 2, Group 5 section.

* Scotch Plains in North 2, Group 4 for the first time.

* Summit, defending champion Cranford and Rahway in North 2, Group 3. Summit last won this section in 1980, Rahway in 1984 and Cranford qualified for the playoffs in consecutive years for the first time since making the grade in 2002, 2003 and 2004.

* New Providence, Roselle Park and Dayton in North 2, Group 1. New Providence won the section in 2010 for the first time since 1989, Roselle Park qualified for the first time since 2001 and Dayton made it for the third time in four years. The Bulldogs - along with GL and Plainfield - have never won a playoff title.

Dayton is the only Union County school that will enter the playoffs with a record under .500. Teams did not need to have records of .500 or better to qualify this year.

* Johnson in Central Jersey, Group 2. The Crusaders reached the final in 2008. Johnson captured North 2, Group 2 in 1995 and 2002.

No Union County school has ever won a sectional title in Central Jersey, Group 1 or Central Jersey, Group 2 since re-classification began in 2003.

NOTES: Last year's county champions - Plainfield on the boys' side for the first time since 1979 and Governor Livingston on the girls' side for the first time ever, will continue to be among the top teams in their respective Watchung Divisions. The high school basketball season in New Jersey will tip off the night of Friday, Dec. 14.

There's a chance - because of the effects of Hurricane Sandy - that Union (5-2) may not play its eighth regular season game at Hunterdon Central Friday night. That would mean the Farmers would have two weekends off before playing their first North 2, Group 5 playoff game.
